Senate passes Salmon Falls bill

WASHINGTON — The $46 million Salmon Falls Project gained the endorsement of the U. S. Senate today, according to Senators Frank Church and Len

B. Jordan. The bill now faces action by the House of Representatives. The legislation would authorize the construction of the Milner pumping station above the existing Milner Dam, would allow construction of the major Milner-Salmon Falls canal and the Hollister pumping plant, along with other distribution works. The Salmon Falls Division of the Upper Snake River Reclamation Project would insure a full supply of water for 64,000 acres of land in two adjacent units on the south side of the Snake River where 49,000 acres of the project area are presently irrigated with an inadequate water supply. The project would also provide for fish and wildlife development with water delivery to ponds in non-irrigable lands throughout the project distribution system and wasteways.

Sen. Church, in voicing his gratification that the bill has passed the Senate, said "This legislation would provide a means of relief to an area which has suffered from an inadequate water supply throughout the decades it has been under agricultural development.

"Without the Salmon Falls Project, the irrigators in the Milner-Cottonwood area are faced with a very uncertain future," Sen. Church continued.

"The alternatives for the farmers in the area would be to deplete the groundwater by withdrawing it faster than it can be recharged, or by walking away and leaving their farms and investments," Church added.

Libert appointed T.F. postmaster

LLOYD E. LIBERT

TWIN FALLS — Lloyd E. Libert, officer-in-charge at the Twin Falls Post Office, has been appointed postmaster by the U. S. Postal Service, which takes over operation of the U. S. mails on Thursday.

Libert has been officer-in-charge at the Twin Falls Post Office since the resignation of Fred Sanger in August, 1970.

The new postmaster began his postal career in 1948 at the Twin Falls Post Office as a clerk. He was named foreman of mails in 1962, and was promoted to the position of assistant postmaster in 1968.

He welcomed the appointment as postmaster for several reasons, Libert said today. In addition to the promotion to a lifetime position at higher pay, he said he can begin to fill several vacancies, particularly the now-vacant assistant postmaster's position. While he held the title of officer in charge, he was also in effect assistant postmaster and could not fill the post.

This left the entire office shorthanded — a factor that is instrumental in prohibiting the open house for the local office that is scheduled by many post offices on Thursday, in honor of the inauguration of the U. S. Postal Service.

Libert has been called to San Francisco, to attend inaugural ceremonies there, and said today he cannot plan an open house here.

Commemorative envelopes will be available, as announced previously, but new orders from the headquarters of the Postal Service in Washington, D. C., say that the envelopes will be limited to one per customer.

The commemorative posters will not be sold in Twin Falls, but orders will be taken for mail delivery, Libert said. The posters depict stamp series honoring highlights in American history.

The new eight-cent stamps honoring the Postal Service will also be placed on sale on Thursday, and stamp collectors can acquire a commemorative envelope with a postmarked stamp by paying the eight cents for the stamp.

Headed home

STRAIN of experiences in Desolation Canyon on Green River is reflected in face of Boy Scout from Troop 442, Albuquerque, N. M., as he sits on bus ready to begin trip home. One scout drowned attempting to save a friend after party's raft was upended in rapids on Green River Thursday. Party was rescued Sunday after attempting to hike out. Scouts were flown to Price, Utah, aboard Air Force helicopter. Related story, Page 8. (UPI)

Moratorium OK'd

WASHINGTON — Senators Frank Church and Len B. Jordan said today they were encouraged by unanimous Senate passage of their legislation to impose a seven-year moratorium on construction of any new dams on the Middle Snake River.

The legislation now goes to the House of Representatives for further action, and both Senators urged the House to give its agreement to the measure in order to forestall the possibility of the Federal Power Commission licensing a dam on the Middle Snake in the near future.

Jordan told the Senate "This bill is designed purely and simply to open the options for the development of the future water supply in the Snake River border states have had an opportunity to complete state water plans and devise acceptable engineering plans to meet future requirements for water for communities, industry, farms and fish and wildlife."

The Idaho Republican terms the legislation "a conservation action." He said "If enacted, this bill can forestall licensing of a large hydroelectric development on the Middle Snake. Enactment also will maintain option for water resource planning for a large two-state semi-arid area."

Church commented on the bill's passage that the bill has the endorsement of Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, the entire Senate Interior Committee and the Nixon administration.

Ellsworth admits leak

BOSTON (UPI)—Dr. Daniel Ellsberg surrendered to federal authorities today and admitted he was the source for a New York Times series on top secret Pentagon documents on the Vietnam War.

Ellsberg, his arm around his wife and accompanied by his two lawyers, came out of hiding to surrender to U.S. Attorney Herbert F. Travers shortly before 10 a.m. EDT.

As he entered Travers' office, Ellsberg was formally placed under arrest by FBI agents. A spokesman said he would be arraigned before a federal magistrate.

Ellsberg was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Peter W.

Princi and released in $50,000 bond without surety—meaning he did not have to post bail. The government had asked for $100,000 bond with surety.

Princi continued the case to July 15 for a hearing on removal of Ellsberg to California to answer federal charges.

Lawrence P. Cohen, assistant U.S. attorney, said the charges "generally deal with espionage, in particular, unauthorized possession and retention of documents vital to the national defense."

He was mobbed by newsmen and spectators as he arrived outside the Post Office Building, which houses the federal courts and Travers' 12th floor office.

Court bans parochial school aid

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court barred states today from earmarking public funds for secular education in parochial schools.

The precedent-setting decision came in cases from Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

Rhode Island had a plan to supplement parochial teachers' salaries.

Pennsylvania was using part of the admission tax on horse racing and harness racing to reimburse private elementary and secondary schools for the cost of textbooks and instructional materials for teachers' salaries.

Later part of the cigarette tax was added.

The court said both statutes were unconstitutional under the religion clauses of the First Amendment because their cumulative effect involved excessive entanglement between government and religion.

In a separate opinion, the court ruled that federal construction grants to church-related colleges did not violate the separation of church and state required by the Constitution. The court did strike down the portion of the federal law providing for a 20-year limitation on religious use of the facilities constructed with federal money.

Billions of dollars in college construction funds to institutions with close links to religious dominations were at stake in the test case, started by 15 Connecticut taxpayers.

The 5-4 decision was the first constitutional test in the Supreme Court of the 1963 Higher Education Facilities Act. It returned the case to a special three-judge federal panel in New Haven, which upheld the law March 19, 1970.

Boxer's claims upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court overturned today the government's conviction of former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali on charges of defying the draft.

The court's decision upheld Ali's claim that he should have been granted military-exempt status because of his adherence to the Black Muslim faith.

In reversing the conviction of Ali, formerly known as Cassius Clay, the court declared:

"The (Justice) Department was simply wrong as a matter of law in advising that the petitioner's beliefs were not religiously based and were not sincerely held."

The court said that Ali's objection to military duty was based upon "religious training and belief", the test for draft exempt status as a conscientious objector.

The Supreme Court cited the government's own concession that "there is no dispute that petitioner's professed beliefs were founded on basic tenets of the Muslim religion, as he understood them, and derived in substantial part from his devotion to Allah as the supreme being."

"This concession is clearly correct," the Supreme Court said.

The ruling, reversing Ali's conviction and the five-year prison sentence and $10,000 fine imposed by a lower court, means he can continue his ring career with a fight against Jimmy Ellis scheduled next month.

Sato government retains control

TOKYO (UPI)—Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's Conservative government retained control of the Upper House of the Diet (Parliament) in election returns today despite surprising gains for the Socialists in rural areas.

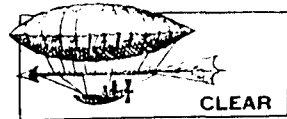

Under attack were government policies of freezing rice prices and reducing planting acreage. Sato said at the mountain resort of Karuizawa that his party had not done as well as expected.

Sato's Liberal Democratic

Party carried Okinawa, however, where the Socialists and Communists had hoped to score a victory by making an issue of U.S. military bases.

The 252-member Upper House, called the House of Councillors, has little actual power but Sunday's election was considered a preview for the Lower House elections in the fall of 1972.

With 104 of the 126 contested seats decided, Sato's Liberal Democrats had won 56, the Socialists 32 and four other parties had divided 16 others.

Suspect wounded

NEW YORK (UPI)—Joseph Colombo Sr., reputed underworld leader was shot in the head and critically wounded in an exchange of gunfire with a black man today in front of the speakers platform for an Italian-American Unity Day ceremony.

The black man, who was not immediately identified, was killed.

Solons confer on draft

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Congressional conferees were trying to meet today to work out differences in bills extending for another two years the military draft that expires Wednesday.

If a law is not passed by the deadline, President Nixon's power to conscript men into the armed services would be curtailed. But Selective Service officials said they would have no trouble filling the draft quota for the year unless the extension legislation were delayed for several months.

The biggest stumbling block in the reconciliation of the bills passed by the House and Senate was in the Senate version, which included an amendment requiring the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam, conditioned on the release of all American war prisoners, within nine months.

The amendment's sponsor, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, said there would be "extended debate"—the Senate's euphemism for a filibuster—if it is stricken by the conferees.

History house

THE FIRST MUSEUM of the Cassia County Historical Society will be housed in this building at the Cassia County Fairgrounds which has seen service as a canning kitchen and headquarters for the Burley Bowmen.

Museum site chosen

BURLEY — Directors of the Cassia County Historical Society have selected a museum site here.

The old canning kitchen in Burley was chosen over sites in Oakley and Albion. The building, at the southeast corner of the county fairgrounds, can be obtained at no cost upon agreement with the Cassia County Fair Board.

Other sites considered were the old D. L. Evans Bank in Albion and the former Speckman Hardware in Oakley. If the Albion site were selected the historical society would have to construct a building to store records of the bank. Cost of the building would be about $2,500.

Cost of obtaining the hardware store in Oakley would be $10,000, with 29 per cent of the cost to be paid down, a spokesman for the board said.

The decision to establish the museum at the Burley site was unanimous after discussion of the three sites. Directors pointed out that as time passes and finances are available, museums should be established in Oakley and Albion because both are rich in history.

Red artillerymen shell 5 bases

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops shelled five allied bases below the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) today but ignored Fire Base Fuller which has been recaptured by South Vietnamese infantrymen, military spokesmen said.

The bases that were shelled included the last two U.S. outposts along the DMZ. U.S. spokesmen said artillery base Alpha 4 was hit by 20 rounds of 120 mortar fire with casualties undetermined and the U.S. base Charlie 2 received about 25 rounds of the 122mm rocket fire and suffered light casualties.

South Vietnamese spokesmen in Saigon reported rocket and mortar attacks against the government bases Charlie 1, Alpha 1 and Camp Carroll but said there were no casualties.

Withdrawal of 3,200 more GIs last week reduced U.S. strength in Vietnam to 241,700 men from a peak of 543,000 in April, 1969, the U.S. command reported.

South Korean units reported killing 52 Communists in weekend fighting along South Vietnam's central coast while suffering one killed and three wounded.

U.S. B2 bombers made three raids on suspected Communist positions around Fire Base Fuller, five miles below the DMZ, in a 24-hour period ending at noon today, the U.S. command reported.

A 160-man company of South Vietnamese infantrymen scaled 1,600-foot Dong Ha mountain Sunday night to retake the base, but spokesmen said they would stay only "temporarily". There was no fighting in the area today, the spokesmen said.

Saigon spokesmen said government troops found the bodies of 44 Communist soldiers in the jungles near Fuller Sunday and today. The spokesmen said 496 Communists were killed in the area in the past nine days, while government losses were put at 29 dead and 135 wounded.

A Communist force overran Fuller early Thursday after a four-day battle for the base that effectively controls the major approaches to a number of American and South Vietnamese bases to the south. The South Vietnamese retook Fuller within 24 hours, but made no effort to hold it.

North Vietnamese commandos crept back into the base Friday night and raised a huge Viet Cong flag atop Dong Ha Mountain, but South Vietnamese artillery shot it away

7 passengers survive crash

EUREKA, Calif. (UPI)—A twin-engine plane carrying real estate salesmen from a seacoast development in northern California clipped a sewage treatment plant on takeoff and smashed into a huge rock in the Pacific Ocean surf Sunday night, killing 16 of the 23 aboard.

The plane was taking off from a private airstrip at the planned Shelter Cove recreational community 200 miles north of San Francisco. All seven survivors were hospitalized and expected to recover.

Tom Wallace, a teenager from nearby Garberville, paddled out into the pounding surf and brought back two survivors on his surfboard. Site of the crash was about 300 feet off shore in rock-strewn surf below a perpendicular cliff which made immediate rescue extremely hazardous.

"I could hear people yelling for help," said William Pass, who witnessed the crash. "The plane had broken into pieces when it hit the rock and people were clinging to them."

"There were a lot of fishing boats in the area and a large crowd gathered on the beach but they couldn't do anything the way the surf was pounding."

Pass said he and his wife were on the deck of their home overlooking the airstrip when the DC3 owned by Shelter Cove Seapark Ltd. of Los Angeles was taking off into a north wind.

"It never left the ground," said Pass. "It clipped the top of the sewage treatment plant and went head-on into that big rock not very far off. The plane broke up."

Gem flood danger off Seen...

Undated Idaho Rain Conditions By United Press International
Most of the flood danger was over in southwest Idaho today after 24 hours of continuous rain during the weekend made small creeks to the Snake River rise considerably and present runoff problems.

The Boise Valley received the worst end of the rainstorm; with the Gem County area along the Payette River receiving the worst flood scare.

Gem County Sheriff Donald Rekow said Sunday evening the Payette River created early Sunday morning at 20,540 cubic feet per second, and then went down to 19,400 cfs by evening. A series of 14 readings were taken during the night.

Rekow said, "the river is subsiding. I don't believe we are going to have any problems as long as it does not rain" too much more.

"Our main flooding conditions in Gem County are for farmlands. There is no danger to any towns around Emmett. Officials in Payette were quite concerned about the city this morning because engineers said if the river didn't start subsiding, they would have to start evacuating. But things are fine now," he said.

Rekow said the tiny farming community of Letha, nine miles west of Emmett, was having no major flooding problems. He said because the Payette river remained stable throughout the night, the roads were free from possible runoff.

He added the Montour area, 15 miles northeast of Emmett, was slightly flooded, but the town was in no danger.

Rekow said, "As long as we hold our breath, everything is fine."

Officials of the Boise project Board of Control said if rain did not continue for a lengthy period it was anticipated the rest of the storage space and the Boise River could handle Boise Valley's runoff.

Heavy rains forced Idaho Power Co. to increase Hells Canyon Dam Flows, and officials warned additional increases might have been necessary because of a lack of upstream reservoir storage space. The flow from the dam was hiked from 48,000 cubic feet per second to 52,000 cfs.

The National Weather Service said Sunday evening most rivers were on their down and rain in southwest Idaho had largely stopped. Officials predicted widely scattered showers or no showers for the period.

Cooler temperatures were also forecast which should slow down snow pack melts in the mountain areas of southwest Idaho, according to Weather Service officials.

Thrift store moves

TWIN FALLS — The Salvation Army Thrift Store is moving again — but this time for good, into a location the Twin Falls unit will own outright in about 10 years, according to Maj. George Driver, commander in Twin Falls.

The store has been located next to the school administration offices for more than a year, after moving from the store that was demolished to make way for the new Pedersen's outlet.

The present location, however, is too small for the needs of the Salvation Army, Driver said. The new location, in the building formerly occupied by the Eastside Market at the corner of Main Avenue East and Sixth Street East, will be purchased over a 10-year period by the Salvation Army.

The lease on the present store expires Wednesday, and with a new client ready to move in, the Army has been asked to be out of the old store on time. Maj. Driver and a number of volunteer students have been working long hours painting and fixing-up their new store, he said Friday. Unless something unforeseen occurs, the deadline will be met.

GEORGE DRIVER, commander of the Salvation Army unit in Twin Falls, wields a paintbrush along with his volunteers, including Charles Blessing, in preparing the new Thrift Store location for business. A number of other volunteers, including Glenn Bridwell, Karl Blessing, Stephen Wilding and Mike Dimick, worked on the preparations during the week to help Driver meet the fast-approaching deadline for moving.

Rupert park developing

RUPERT — The development of the Big Valley Recreational Park in Rupert is now in its second year.

This $150,000 project was started last year on the 11 acre park located across from the new East Minico Junior High School, according to Mayor Wendell Johnson.

Mayor Johnson said the City of Rupert is cooperating with the Idaho Bureau of Parks on a 50-50 basis on this park project. So far this year the park site has been graded, water, sewer and sprinkling systems installed, and grass seeded. Sometime this year a building will be constructed around the well and pump, he said.

This park which is expected to be completed in 1975, will have four baseball diamonds surrounding the bleachers and restroom facilities. "From the bleachers the spectators will be able to watch anyone of four games in progress at that time," he said.

Next year the city plans to construct curb and gutter in areas requiring it and to pave the streets and parking lots that will be in and around the park. It will also install screening around the trees, restrooms in the center area and install backstops behind homeplate for all four baseball diamonds.

In 1973, the city will put in the lighting. This project will cost about $35,000, the mayor said. Then, in the last year of the project, fences, bleachers and picnic facilities will be added.

During 1970 two local improvement districts were improved in Rupert. LID No. 13 — $24,339.56 — provided for the sewer line in the Grandview Addition and the LID No. 14 — $12,659 — provided for the irrigation facilities in that area. There were 40 homes served in these LIDs.

This spring a low pressure water system was provided for residents in the Grandview Addition. This system was connected to the canal and provides irrigation water for the subdivision.

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI)— Support for legalization of marijuana has doubled among America's teen-agers in the last two years, according to a nationwide poll of high school pupils by Purdue University Opinion Panel. The rise in support for legalized pot was from 18 to 35 per cent. The shift is considered significant by social scientists who conducted the poll.

New-old store opens

PEDERSEN'S, the "new-old" business in the newest building on the downtown mall, is open for business. Edward F. (Ted) Pedersen, owner of State Hardware, moved into his new store late last week under his new firm name. The new outlet, at the corner of Main Avenue East and Third Street East, is highlighted by his big-game trophies, with the Kodiak bear greeting all shoppers just inside the main door. A new ski shop will feature skis and skiing equipment brought directly from Japanese manufacturers. Other lines of merchandise will range from bicycles and lawn mowers to motorcycles and wallpaper.

Library needs takers

RICHFIELD — Elementary school children are urged to join the summer reading program at the Richfield Library which will continue until the end of August. Only 14 children have joined the program. "Mission Possible."

Children qualify for a private eye by reading five books, and can progress to a super sleuth by reading 30 books. In between phases to be reached are titled detective for 10 books, secret agent, 15 books, and master detective, 20 books.

Mrs. Ken Dixon, librarian, announces many new books include teen agers romance and adventure stories, children's books, fiction and non-fiction and reference books on flowers, shrubs, rocks and minerals, tree identification, ghost towns, antiques, and geographic dictionary.

The new books were purchased through the recent grant received amounting to approximately $290 for the Richfield Library.

Lincoln raises $940

SHOSHONE — A total of $940 was contributed in the Lincoln County Easter Seal drive, reports Mrs. Frank Stearns, county chairman. A major part of the amount came from the Burmah club's sale of special quilts.

Over the years the club has contributed over $2,500 for the Easter Seal program.

This year the Girl Scouts of Richfield, directed by Mrs. Howard DeWitt and the Camp Fire Girls of Shoshone, led by Mrs. Gilbert Pierson, assisted in soliciting funds.

The money is largely spent to assist in the school in Twin Falls and for help in speech and hearing of handicapped children.

COMMENT

Right To Print

Christian Science Monitor

The biggest issue of the day is the issue between the Government of the United States and two American newspapers, the New York Times and the Washington Post, over what they should or should not be able to print about the origins of the Vietnam war. The matter comes in several parts.

LEGAL

The publishers and editors of newspapers in the United States, as in any free country, are subject to law. If they commit crimes, they can be arrested, tried, and punished.

It is the present contention of the government that they have injured the national security by having in their possession, and making public, documents which belong to the government and should not be out of government possession. There are two legal issues here: possession of the property of others, and damage to the state by improper use of that property. These two matters are now sub judice.

CONSTITUTIONAL

History is categorical on the essential relationship between a free press and a free people. All authoritarian governments control what the people may be told through newspapers, magazines, radio, etc. In free societies there is no censorship.

The truth in this matter was identified and articulated before the American Revolution by Sir William Blackstone, as follows:

The liberty of the press is indeed essential to the nature of a free state; but this consists in laying no previous restraints upon publications, and not in freedom from censure for criminal matter when published. Every free man has an undoubted right to lay what sentiments he pleases before the public: to forbid this is to destroy the freedom of the press; but if he publishes what is improper, mischievous, or illegal, he must take the consequences.

The New York Times and the Washington Post were exercising their right to publish what they deemed to be in the public interest in what they have done. They stand ready to accept the legal consequences. Any newspaper in a free society should do the same.

POLITICAL

The Nixon administration is treading warily in this matter. And well it might. The Pentagon papers are damaging to the war record of the previous administration. They document considerably the thesis that Lyndon Johnson was less than candid with the American people about the Vietnam war. He, and his reputation, are the losers from this publication. Republican Senator Barry Goldwater is the main gainer. It seems reasonably clear from the documents that he was the victim in the 1964 campaign of a political "snow job."

The Nixon administration is an incidental beneficiary. In part at least the publication puts the Vietnam war again on Lyndon Johnson's back. This could explain why the government did not move to shut off publication until after the New York Times had published three installments.

So we can assume that the Nixon administration is going to test the law, which it should do, but be most careful not to engage in legal persecution of the two newspapers involved, which would be politically foolish as well as constitutionally disastrous.

NATIONAL SECURITY

It is alleged that the national security has been damaged.

Codes which were long since changed, have been compromised. This means that foreign governments may now more easily decode other American documents of the 1964 to 1965 period. So far as we can learn this is a minor, not a major, matter.

Other governments have been embarrassed. Canada, for example, is distressed at the disclosure of the extent to which its ambassadors have acted as messengers for Washington. Canada, we think, soon will get over its embarrassment.

The more candid governments are with their people, the better for all concerned. The New York Times and the Washington Post have underlined this fact of public life.

Sleepy Driver

Idaho State Journal

"Never on weekends" might be a motto worth observing. The reason is simple. Nearly half the auto deaths and injuries in this country occurred on weekends in 1970.

During 1970, 55,200 people lost their lives in traffic accidents and another 5,100,000 were injured. Even though these figures are tragic, the number of those killed on our highways decreased by 1,300 from 1969.

Although there are many reasons why so many people are killed or injured on our highways every year, the fact that most deaths and injuries occur on weekends, and on weekdays between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. suggests again that alcohol may be a serious contributor to the overall problem.

Another reason for the high rate of accidents during night time hours is the tired driver. Remember that last long trip you took, trying to cover maximum distance in minimum time? Did you or did you not get sleepy? How many times did you shake your head before pulling in for a coffee or quick nap?

Excessive speeds accounted for 17,700 deaths. Perhaps some limits are not realistic, given modern highways and today's automobiles. But the fact is that we must become a slower population, not faster, if we are to cut down on our injuries and fatalities.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK

Hanoi's P.O.W. Game

WASHINGTON — The skill and audacity with which the Vietnamese Communists manipulate American public opinion on the emotion-charged prisoner-of-war issue is illustrated by a diplomatic cable transmitted back to Hanoi June 11 by the North Vietnamese negotiating team in Paris. That cable contained the official Communist transcript of an interview in Paris three days earlier between Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese negotiator, and Chalmers M. Roberts of the Washington Post. The transcript quoted Xuan Thuy as saying that "if the United States sets a reasonable deadline for the complete withdrawal of troops, we could DISCUSS the settlement of the prisoner of war question" — precisely the Hanoi line.

In truth, however, that is not what the Communist negotiator said at all. Roberts, a respected diplomatic correspondent, reported Xuan Thuy as telling him, "If a reasonable date is set, the question of prisoners may be settled." In response to another question, he amended that to "WILL be settled."

The discrepancy reveals the P.O.W. game played by the Hanoi politburo. The soft line actually given in the interview with Roberts is intended to convince Americans that the P.O.W.'s will come home just as soon as President Nixon sets a troop withdrawal deadline. The altered transcript cabled to Hanoi reiterated the hard line that is the Vietnamese reality: Hanoi promises nothing whatever in return for a troop withdrawal deadline.

This audacious game has worked, feeding demands in the United States for quick withdrawal. Two antiwar Democrats, Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana and Rep. Robert Leggett of California, returned from talks with the Communists in Paris indicating that the Americans were to blame for the negotiations deadlock. Clark Clifford, former Secretary of Defense, has predicted release of the prisoners 30 days after agreement to withdraw. In a climate further soured by the Pentagon papers, many Americans believe the worst of their own country's leaders while exercising complete gullibility about Communist promises.

When not talking to American politicians and journalists, the Communists revert in formal Paris sessions to the hard line of their official statements. Based on those statements, there is every reason to believe that the Communists plan to use the P.O.W.'s as hostages to steadily up the ante in fulfilling all goals in Vietnam.

The basic position is point one of the South Vietnamese Communist eight-point "elaboration" of last Sept. 17. It not only links prisoner releases with a fixed date for U.S. troop withdrawals but also talks about taking all U.S. weapons and war materials from South Vietnamese troops and dismantling U.S. bases in Vietnam. Thus, the troop withdrawal deadline accomplishes nothing.

Consistently, the official Communist line in Paris has been that such a deadline set by Mr. Nixon would win him merely the right to DISCUSS prisoner releases. Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, chief South Vietnamese Communist negotiator, deviated from this only once. On April 15, an article by her in the French newspaper Le Monde suggested that Mr. Nixon need only fix a deadline "for GIs and American prisoners to be rapidly and safely returned."

But on the very day that article appeared, Mme. Binh was her usual intractable self at the negotiations session. Prisoners would return home, she said, only after the war had "come to an end" — that is, after a political settlement along Communist lines.

Myles Ambrose

WASHINGTON — If there is to be a hero in President Nixon's new "national emergency" campaign against drug addiction, his name could well turn out to be Myles Joseph Ambrose, a New York Irishman with the physique of a defensive tackle and the burning impatience of a Zola.

Ambrose is the U. S. Commissioner of Customs. As such he runs — bulldozes might be a better word — the nation's first line of defense in the war against the multi-billion-dollar narcotics racket. For there could be no narcotics racket if there were no narcotics smugglers.

The figures tell the story: Ninety per cent of the marijuana used in this country comes from abroad, 85 per cent of it from Mexico. And 100 per cent of the opium, cocaine and heroin is brought in from overseas. As Ambrose is fond of saying to anyone who will listen, "Stop the smuggling and you've got the problem licked."

It is no accident that Nixon's request for $155-million additional to combat drug addiction contains an extra $18-million for the Bureau of Customs and $1-million to help other nations train law enforcement officers. The 44-year-old commissioner, youngest in the bureau's history, has been campaigning for more money for his shop since he took over two years ago. He wangled enough dollars to hire 400 more inspectors and 350 more investigators, and to finance installation of a computerized communications center at headquarters here which links the bureau with its 34 investigative officers around the country by telecopiers.

"Hell, it's only a start," says Ambrose. "But at least a Customs inspector no longer has to stick a suspect's name in his hat and hope he remembers it."

Ambrose takes a dim view of the operation of the bureau pre-Richard Nixon. "I don't want to cast any aspersions," he says, "but for a long time our inspectors construed their duty as facilitating passenger travel."

"We're still polite, but everybody has to realize that the drug problem is a national emergency," he says. "Getting Aunt Libby through customs has got to take second place to catching smugglers. We're playing catch-up football."

No one knows how much dope is smuggled into the U. S., but it amounts to at least $1-billion worth, and Ambrose worries that it may be closer to twice that amount. An angry man, Myles Ambrose is particularly outraged by the smuggling operations of so-called respectable individuals who hobnob with members of the Beautiful People crowd in Monte Carlo, Deauville, New York and Washington, spending millions earned in the dope traffic.

So far, the Customs Bureau has been unable to produce admissible evidence against these big-time traffickers in slow death, but, in police language, Ambrose and his men "know" who they are. "We will get them," says Ambrose, "and there'll be some surprises for newspaper readers."

Meanwhile, Ambrose admits he has made traveling a touch less convenient for Americans. He has retained the accelerated routine that cuts the average inspection time from 45 minutes to 15 minutes, but passengers no longer can count on it. There are more "blitz" inspections of all luggage on certain airline flights, and more travelers with seemingly impeccable credentials are discovering that they are suspect.

"We're going to use any approach we can to stop narcotics smuggling," says Ambrose. "A great many of the offenders arrested in the last year were youthful amateurs — persons in the 20- to 25-year age group with no previous criminal records. That tells us something about what is happening to this country, and it is why we've increased enforcement to the maximum extent."

It is also why Myles Joseph Ambrose is not exactly a pin-up boy with Americans who travel regularly abroad. But if his campaign succeeds even in cutting dope smuggling by 50 per cent, those long waits at customs counters will suddenly seem insignificant.

BRUCE BLOSSAT

The Papers

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The now celebrated Pentagon papers seem to be making their most sweeping impact with evidence Lyndon Johnson planned the bombing of North Vietnam while promising in the 1964 election campaign not to widen the war. But oddly enough, this word has been in public print for five years.

The New York Times describes as a "major disclosure" the evidence that a "general consensus" among top Johnson officials had been reached Sept. 7, 1964, on the probable need to mount air attacks against North Vietnam in 1965.

This evidence from the Pentagon's secret study is being put beside Johnson's 1964 campaign utterances as new proof of his "massive deception" in concealing his real Vietnam intentions from the American voters.

Only weeks after the Sept. 7, 1964, strategy meeting which produced the reported "consensus" for bombing, LBJ said on the hustings:

"We don't want our American boys to do the fighting for Asian boys."

Well, if what the Times now prints is a "major disclosure," then everybody — statesmen, diplomats, politicians, press and public — has been asleep at the switch. If they were going to be stunned, as they say they are today, they should have been stunned in the fall of 1965.

At that time, Newsweek magazine's then White House correspondent, Charles Roberts, reached print with a book called "LBJ's Inner Circle." Its opening chapter is a case history of presidential decision-making in a crisis.

And the crisis was the Feb. 6, 1965, Viet Cong assault on a U. S. installation at Pleiku in central South Vietnam, which killed eight and wounded more than 100. Johnson's decision was for retaliatory air strikes Feb. 7 against North Vietnam. Writes Roberts on page 20 of his book:

"His action that night (Feb. 6) — the order that sent U. S. bombers roaring over a remote North Vietnamese village named Dong Hoi — was far from impulsive. As a matter of fact, he had made the momentous decision to bomb North Vietnam nearly four months earlier."

"That decision was made, it can now be revealed, in October, 1964, at the height of the presidential campaign. President Johnson, who had sought unsuccessfully to keep Vietnam out of the campaign, decided then that South Vietnam — and the United States — were losing that frustrating 10-year-old war."

Note that the Pentagon study talks of "consensus" among senior Johnson officials at a Sept. 7 meeting, while Roberts speaks of October.

But note also that the study does not say specifically that on Sept. 7 "the President decided to bomb." It says his advisers reached that judgment. So Roberts' report — straight from Johnson's mouth — is much harder news. It speaks of the President's own decision.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

About Sleeping

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor refuses to give me any sleeping medicine. He says it would make me stagger like a drunk.

Is there some way I can go to sleep without taking any medication? I am epileptic (I was shot in the head) but have the epilepsy under control.

I can't go to church, for when I sit still I go to sleep. Any suggestions? — K. E. G.

If you can sleep in church, you can sleep in bed, once you teach yourself to do so.

I gather that your doctor is giving you some relaxants for your epilepsy, and doesn't want to give you any more for exactly the reason he told you.

These "can't sleep" problems like yours are usually (not always) primarily psychological, and a matter of habit. If it were physical, how could you fall asleep in church?

For one thing, though, avoid anything containing caffeine after supper — avoid coffee, tea, cola drinks. But a warm or hot drink of milk or one of the non-caffeine cereal drinks at bedtime usually helps.

When you get to bed, practice relaxing all the muscles of your body, starting with your feet. On a cool night, be sure to have enough covers to keep you warm.

Some soft music helps most people — use one of those clock-controlled radios that will turn off the music for you about an hour or two after you retire. (I'd recommend against hard rock music or sports events. Stick to soft music.)

Reading is a very effective way to go to sleep — so long as you choose something solid to read. Something that keeps you thinking. Makes you work. Whodunits or other entertaining stories that keep you wondering what's going to happen in the next chapter are not good to go to sleep with. But when you are reading "heavy" stuff, pretty soon the book drops out of your hands. That's your cue to turn out the light and go to sleep at once.

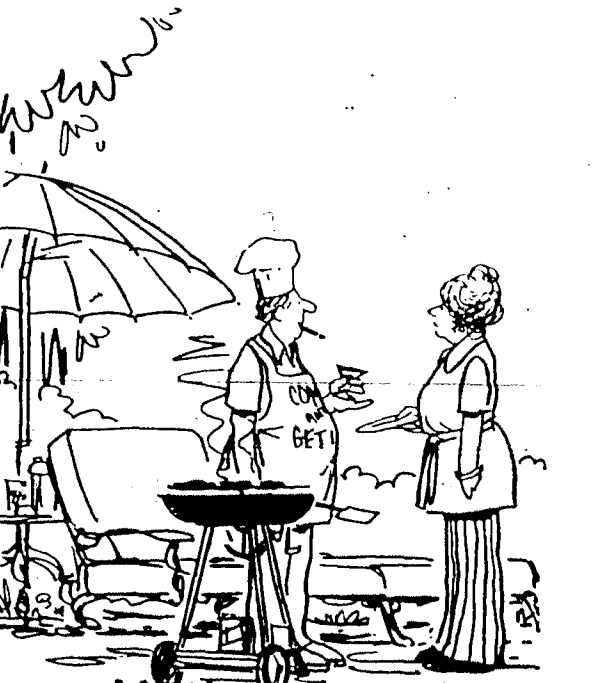

But above all don't take today's or tomorrow's problems to bed with you. You start trying to solve 'em, and you get yourself more and more waked up.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it dangerous to take a bath with a transistor radio sitting on the side of the tub? My friend says it is dangerous if it falls in. — J. L.

Voltage is extremely low, so the risk in having it fall in the tub is just that it will be very bad for the radio.

Radios or appliances that plug into a regular outlet, however, are indeed dangerous in the bathroom, especially when you are in the tub, or in contact with something (such as a cold water pipe) that is connected directly with the ground. Put your radio on the bathroom floor. Better yet, leave it outside.

T.F. driver charged

TWIN FALLS — A 28-year-old Twin Falls driver is facing charges of driving while intoxicated as a result of a Saturday morning accident in which his vehicle collided with a parked automobile, a propane gas tank and the front of the Berger store.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers said Frank Durwood Smith, 28, escaped with cuts and bruises when his 1962 sedan left U.S. Highway 93 at 4:22 a.m. Saturday near Berger. He was traveling north, officers said, when the vehicle went out of control, crossed into the opposite lane of traffic, left the road and traveled 100 feet, jumped a small ditch, went another 36 feet, hitting a road sign, traveled 104 feet and crashed into a picnic table, then went 42 feet to strike the propane tank and collided with a parked car owned by Delbert Mothershead, Hansen. The Smith vehicle then continued on 25 feet before striking the front corner of the Berger store. Officers said damage to the store was undetermined but it appeared the building was moved about three inches from the main foundation. Merchandise from many of the shelves was scattered about the store and a large freezer was moved about 18 inches by the impact. Officers said Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gamble, owners of the store, were asleep in their apartment at the rear of the building at the time. They were not injured. Smith was treated at Magic Valley Memorial hospital for minor injuries and released.

'Record' hearing set

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — A hearing in U.S. district court July 5 will decide whether or not the St. Louis Post-Dispatch will be further enjoined from printing accounts of excerpts from a secret Defense Department history of United States involvement in Indochina. Judge James H. Meredith issued a temporary restraining order Saturday stopping the paper's planned publication of more excerpts in its Sunday edition and set the July 5 hearing date. David Lipman, assistant managing editor of the Post-Dispatch, said of the restraining order, "we are abiding by it." The paper halted publication of its first edition Saturday minutes before it went to press to insert a bulletin reporting that the order had been issued.

Rabbi held as inciter of protest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rabbi Meir Kahane, leading 300 members and sympathizers of the Jewish Defense League, was arrested twice over the weekend for demonstrating against Russian "tyranny" toward Soviet Jews. The suburban Maryland apartment of a Soviet diplomat was stoned Sunday for the second time in four days in an incident linked to the demonstrations by purported members of the JDL. Kahane was wearing self-imposed handcuffs and shouting, "The Soviet Union is a tyranny — the Soviet Union stinks" when he and 37 others were arrested Sunday. Kahane was among 15 persons arrested Friday.

THIS ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of the projected student housing project to be built north of the College of Southern Idaho provides a perspective view of a corner of the two-story structure. The exterior will be finished in an attractive all-weather

Masonite or similar composition. The units will be heated electrically. The architectural firm of Bush Wilson Architects, Boise, has been retained for the designs.

Student housing will be stacked

By LEE TREMAINE
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The projected student-housing development north of the College of Southern Idaho, announced last week by Sierra Life Insurance Co. of Twin Falls, will feature a unique technique in which housing units are stacked like cordwood after construction.

Lyle Frazier, production manager for Regal Homes of Kimberly, prime contractors for the project, said his factory will turn out complete housing units assembly-line fashion, complete with plumbing and wiring, as the firm does now for its growing number of customers.

The structures are built from the ground up with the understanding that they will be transported to the site on specially built trucks, Frazier said. The structure under the floor and the flooring itself is strongly braced and counter-braced to insure the strongest possible structure.

Specifications call for the basic structure to be strong enough to be supported only at the four corners without sag in the middle — even up to a 12-by-96-foot unit, Frazier said.

The housing units are built in an unusual manner — flat on a raised platform, using precisely measured "jigs" for flooring and walls. Even the walls, complete with windows, glass and outside siding, are put together inside Regal's plant, lying flat on the forming platform.

When the base and walls are complete, the walls are hoisted by a crane for attaching to the base. The base itself is built on a series of rollers, and is moved forward by hand as the construction continues.

Thus, Frazier pointed out, a flooring framework starts the process for an individual dwelling unit. As it is completed, it moves forward and the walls are built in the same area. When the walls are complete, they are rigidly attached to the flooring, and the whole unit moves forward again for roof work and interior framing.

All framing of interior walls and all basic work on the structure is completed inside Regal's factory, which completes about 2½ units a week at the present pace of construction.

When the structural work is complete, Regal moves the units outside to a "finishing assembly," where interior finishing of walls and floors is completed and the final touches are put on each unit before shipping.

For the Greater Idaho housing project, Regal will tool up for exclusive production of the specialized housing units to be placed on the 80-acre site north of the college. As each unit is completed, it will be trucked to the site and put in place.

Present plans call for production to be under way by the middle of July, after Neilsen-Miller, the on-site contractor, prepares the ground. The sponsorship to have housing for more than 100 students ready by the time classes open in September.

The two-story housing units will be composed of individual Regal structures, with six students in each unit and 10 units, for 60 students, in each long single two-story "dormitory." The units for the second story will be built for hoisting, with large steel rods inserted during construction in the framework.

Frazier said the hoisting rods will be inserted through roof beams and will extend down through doorways at the corners of the units to reach completely under the flooring. Large steel plates held by the rods will serve to transfer the weight to the beams underlying the floor structure, so there will be no damage to the housing unit.

When the housing unit is put in place, the steel hoisting rods will be removed, Frazier said. The two-story dwelling units will be sealed together when finished, giving a finished appearance to the structure. An all-weather Masonite siding is contemplated for the exteriors.

The housing units will be clustered together in groups housing about 700 students. Each housing complex will be landscaped with shade trees and grass, and, as presently planned, with a swimming pool for each complex.

Agnew admits interest in China

AGANA, Guam (UPI)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said today he would like to visit Communist China despite that nation's "basically hostile" attitude to the United States.

Agnew, opening a 10-nation world tour, landed in Guam for an overnight stay before flying on to Seoul to represent President Nixon at the inauguration of President Park Chung-hee July 1. He left early Sunday from California and stopped briefly in Honolulu.

The vice president said "I certainly would enjoy visiting Mainland China." As his plane winged towards Guam, he told journalists he had a "great curiosity" about China.

Despite his "basically hostile" attitude, Agnew said "to visit and to confer... would be quite a privilege."

This is Agnew's third journey abroad as vice president and will take him to Singapore, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Ethiopia, Kenya, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Spain, Morocco and Portugal in addition to South Korea.

In South Korea he was prepared to discuss the question of ROK troop withdrawals from South Vietnam. South Korea has announced it wants to pull out one division—about 15,000 men—of its 48,000 troops force before the end of the year.

Agnew told reporters that the objectives of his diplomatic mission on behalf of President Nixon was "really quite general."

"Principally, the objective is to touch base in a diplomatic sense and to take some confidential messages from the President to the chiefs of state of those countries—nothing of any tremendous moment but just a continuing effort to maintain the best possible liaison with those chiefs of state."

Agnew will spend four days in Korea mixing the ceremonial aspects of the inauguration and some sensitive discussion with top Korean leaders on a variety of issues.

He might also meet with delegations from other nations attending the inaugural.

The vice president said he expected to see Park but added he was looking forward principally to meeting the new South Korean Prime Minister Kim Chong Pil.

Ball OK's 'papers' on war

WASHINGTON (UPI)—George W. Ball, undersecretary of state in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, said Sunday he thought publication of secret papers on the Vietnam War "was healthy in a way."

"I think getting things out in the open is the way to do things in the United States," Ball said. And he said that in his opinion reports on the documents by the New York Times, the Washington Post and other newspapers presented "very little danger" to the nation's security.

Ball also said he thought any impression that President Lyndon B. Johnson committed a public deception about the conduct of the war was "entirely wrong."

Ball, who opposed escalation of the war while he was No. 2 man at the State Department, said the government should adopt a new policy on declassification of documents—within "say five years" after they are prepared.

"The rules that exist today are not very logical," he said. Ball appeared on the CBS television interview Face the Nation.

RECIPROCALLICENSE

BRUSSELS (UPI)—Holders of U.S. drivers licenses now can obtain a Belgian license without taking a test. The agreement making the American driving test valid in Belgium is reciprocal.

Cosmonauts gain weight

MOSCOW (UPI)—The best-fed Soviet cosmonauts think they have gained a pound or two during their record 22 days in orbit.

The three crewmen aboard the Salyut orbital station still miss home cooking although their menu is the most varied of any Soviet space mission and includes solid food like beef-steak for the first time.

"We have no scales—they would be useless anyway," Soyuz 11 Commander Georgi Dobrovolsky told ground control Sunday. "But we think we haven't lost weight and maybe gained some. We'll see when we're back home."

Loss of body weight during prolonged space flight has been a common complaint of Soviet cosmonauts. Dobrovolsky, Vladislav Volkov and Viktor Patsayev tried to avert the problem with four meals a day—served hot.

The cosmonauts today marked their 22nd day in space. They boarded Salyut June 7 after rocketing aloft a day earlier aboard Soyuz 11. Soyuz officials have not said when they will return to earth.

THIS UPI NEWSMAP pinpoints the cities that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will visit on his 10-nation diplomatic mission. Agnew left the Marine Air Station at El Toro, Calif., Sunday on the first leg of his trip. He stopped overnight on Guam before flying to Seoul to attend the inauguration of Korean President Chung Hee Park on Thursday. (UPI)

Heroic Boy Scout drowns after saving young friend

GREEN RIVER, Utah (UPI)—A troop of 25 Boy Scouts from New Mexico was rescued Sunday from the banks of Utah's rugged Green River three days after a boating mishap in which a heroic 13-year-old scout drowned.

The dead youth was identified as Peter McCarthy of Troop 442 in Albuquerque. Carbon County Sheriff Albert Passic said

McCarthy saved an 11-year-old companion from drowning before he lost consciousness and drifted down the river.

The main body of scouts and their four adult leaders were stranded on the river bank in an isolated section of Carbon County about 2 p.m. Thursday. Their four-man inflatable rafts hit trees washed across the river, dumping one-fourth of the troop into the rapidly flowing water.

All were wearing life preservers at the time of the accident, according to Scoutmaster John J. Ungbarsky of Albuquerque.

McCarthy reportedly grabbed 11-year-old Jim Bernardoni, who had lost his preserver, and the two floated away from the main group "several miles" downstream, said Sheriff Passic.

"Eventually, they floated close to shore and little Jimmy was able to grab onto a log," Passic added. "But the current was too swift for him to keep a hold of the McCarthy boy, and Pete continued downstream with his head under water."

Meanwhile, three other boys also were separated from their group and washed 25 miles downstream before swimming to shore. One of the youths, as yet unidentified, remained where they had landed, and the other two began a trek downstream, hoping to reach community of Green River, approximately 30 miles away.

The Bernardoni youth, who landed on the opposite side of the river from the other three, also started downstream.

The main group of 25 scouts, the scoutmaster, two fathers and a bus driver were able to group together at an area known as Rock Creek. They salvaged some supplies from their wrecked rafts which were supplemented on Friday by a commercial boating firm that came onto the accident site.

The remoteness of the river caused a long delay by the boaters in getting help

Murder link cited

YUBA CITY, Calif. (UPI)—Mexican authorities were reported Sunday investigating a possible link between the savage slayings of 25 men here and murders in Guadalajara.

The Sacramento Bee said Sutter County authorities asked for Mexican aid after finding five bullet tickets to a Guadalajara stadium in the home of Juan V. Corona, 37, the farm labor contractor who pleaded innocent to 10 of the Yuba City slayings.

The Bee had reported in its Saturday edition that Sutter County officials were looking for a possible second suspect in the murder of the 25 middle-aged men whose hacked bodies were found in graves along the Feather River.

The Corona family home in Autlan, Mexico, is about 125 miles southeast of Guadalajara and he has visited there repeatedly.

The newspaper said Mexican authorities were "very interested" in trying to establish a possible link between the Yuba City slayings and the disappearance of men in Guadalajara during the last two years.

A Sutter County source said Guadalajara police have indicated a body found near a reservoir had slash marks similar to those on the Yuba City bodies, the Bee said.

The paper said the date on the tickets corresponded to the fourth entry in a ledger taken as evidence from Corona's home. Of the 34 names on the ledger, seven have been identified as murder victims.

Sutter County District Attorney G. Dave Teja said he was "not concerned about what was happening down there."

Teja also said he knew of "no evidence" to support the newspaper's story of a second suspect in the case.

Runaways' fate worse than what they flee

NEW YORK (UPI) — "Hi! You probably know I'm in another hospital. I feel like they're just shoving me from one hosp. to another. I really wish I could go home. I don't blame them for not trusting me but I wish I could have one more chance to prove myself ..."

That was the beginning of a letter from a 15-year-old girl to the Rev. Richard J. Harvey, assistant pastor of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church in New York City's Greenwich Village. She had run away from her suburban home twice and the second time Pastor Harvey had tracked her down and helped return her to her parents.

The letter was written from a psychiatric hospital.

"She knows she'd run away again," Pastor Harvey said and he told the girl's story — of running away, of becoming involved with a pimp, and prostitution, and drugs.

The girl in some ways is typical of today's runaway teenager — that is, she is female, 15 years old, and from a middle class family. That is the way

Capt. Joseph Lynch, head of the New York City Police Department's Missing Persons Unit, describes the typical runaway. Some case histories have happier endings, he said. Some end in death.

UPI interviewed experts on the problem of runaways — policemen, private investigators and clergymen — in an effort to learn who runs away, why, and what happens to them.

The law defines runaways as persons under 18 years old and says they may be returned to their parents, even if they are unwilling. Once a young person reaches 18, he may leave home and cannot be forced to return. One thing no one can provide is an accurate figure on the number of runaway teen-agers in this country each year. The estimates run as high as one million. But police in the two cities that have been most attractive to runaways in recent years — San Francisco with its Haight-Ashbury section, and New York with its East Village — agree that in these areas runaways are declining.

"The number of runaways reported to us had been going up at about 4 per cent a year," Capt. Lyn said. "Three or four years ago it jumped to 7 per cent. Now it's back to 4 per cent, and that rise could just reflect the increase in population. We don't get as many requests from out-of-town police jurisdictions as we used to, either."

An indication that the number of runaways has not decreased nationally — only that the runaways now choose different destinations — came from Edward H. Goldfader, executive vice president of Tracers Company of America, a firm of private investigators very active in locating runaways.

"We operate all over the country," he said, "and lately it seems there are more runaways to less populated areas. These things go in cycles and there's a snowballing effect. One goes and others follow."

"Colorado is one of the new places to go, and so is the area around Magnolia, Mass. It relates to their aspirations, and now they want to do the Thoreau thing, they want the areas that are unspoiled."

While communes and back-to-nature movements may be diverting some of the runaways, the bulk of them come to big cities.

"Surprisingly, the average runaway is only gone 72 hours," Capt. Lynch said. "Many go back before then, particularly the younger ones. The older they are and the more money they have, the longer they stay away."

He said the peak months for runaways are May and September — partly because of the weather and partly because May is final exam month, September back-to-school month.

Not all the reasons for running away are so trivial. Police Det. Thomas Rynne, who dressed hippie-style as part of the "Mod Squad" the New York police operated during the hippie hey-day in the East Village, told a story in tones of shock seldom heard from experienced officers.

"We picked up this girl about 2 a.m. — a runaway. She gave us one name and another — they do that, they like to give us a hard time, having us calling people in different cities. It can go on for two or three hours, as if you were questioning a homicide suspect."

Almost as an afterthought Taylor said, "I hope they don't mind seeing me again."

'It relates to their aspirations ... they want the areas that are unspoiled ...'

He said many youngsters, after brief and disillusioning stovers in major cities, head for communes established from Vermont to Hawaii.

"One colony on the island of Maui (in the Hawaiian chain) is primarily comprised of kids from western Pennsylvania. The word gets back. How does the grapevine work? I can't even imagine. By osmosis, it seems."

stand more than 15 or 20 minutes in the surroundings they fall into — the dirt, the filth."

Those who stay away often try to support themselves by panhandling. Some who become involved with drugs begin peddling them. Some of the boys steal; some of the girls become prostitutes.

It was the thought of the people ready to prey on young runaways for profit, among other things, that inspired Dr. Fred Eckhardt, pastor of St. John's, the Rev. Harvey's church, to begin his "rescue" operation. Teen-age volunteers from St. John's consult a church bulletin board with descriptions and photos of runaways, then spread out in the evenings to comb the streets for the missing youngsters in the hope they can be reached before they are hurt.

"She had been gone like five weeks, she was filthy dirty, and he wanted us to hold her until the next afternoon. She was 12 years old!"

The first thing that the runaway in a place such as the East Village finds is squalor — often horribly neglected tenement apartments overrun with cockroaches, rats and vermin.

"The thing that baffles us," Capt. Lynch said, "is that young girls who leave home and clean surroundings can

One case he specifically referred to involved charges against five men and eight women accused of subjecting four runaway girls to rape and torture to force them into joining a prostitution ring.

The D.A.'s warning was echoed by Jeremiah P. McAward, head of McAward Associates, a private investigation agency which has been called in by anxious parents to locate their children. He said:

"The runaway children often are naive, idealistic — they have very little knowledge of what life is about. If you're nice to people they'll be nice to you. It's just not true. People prey on these kids, wait for them to show up."

He said usually the runaways — even the ones who don't voluntarily return home — become disillusioned, even frightened, by their surroundings.

He told of one girl, 14, whose family moved to New York and who made new — and unfortunate — friends here. She ran away after a series of disputes with her family about her dates with a 19-year-old boy she had picked up in Central Park near the Bethesda Fountain, a meeting place for hippies, "street people" and more conventionally rebellious youth.

The girl — called McAward — "stinking bounty hunter" the first time he found her. She ran away again and the second time she seemed resigned to being found, possibly glad. She said only, "oh, it's you again." She went home — and so did the heroin habit she had acquired from an addict boyfriend with whom she had been living.

"You look at them on the streets or in the places where they congregate — there isn't a smile in the carload," McAward said.

There are two possible solutions that might cut down on the runaway problem. One is prevention. Pastor Eckhardt has been working along that line with his church's "Operation Eye Opener" program, which brings busloads of youngsters to New York for weekends to see first hand, under supervised conditions, the squalor of the East Village slum that so beckons from a distance.

The other must be done by parents — attempting to communicate with their youngsters. The lack of parent-child communication was mentioned by almost everyone UPI interviewed in connection with runaways, but it is most forcefully presented in a letter received here from a runaway who returned home. Signing herself only, "teenage girl from Phoenix," she wrote:

Aussie Taylor returns to weekly TV series

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Australia's Rod Taylor returns to a weekly television series next season filled with Aussie confidence that his show will be a hit despite fearful odds.

CBS is throwing Taylor and Dennis Cole opposite the top-rated "Flip Wilson Show."

"So we're going up against Flip," Taylor said with a casual wave of his hand. "He's sitting on the top of the heap, isn't he? Well, I like the idea of taking on the champ. And I think I can whip him."

An ex-amateur fighter in Sydney, Taylor is a bearcat with his fists, which is just as well. The title of his new adventure series is "Bearcats." He and Cole play a pair of fun-loving soldiers of fortune in the Southwest just before the outbreak of World War I. They bounce around the chaparral and cacti in — what else — a Stut Bearcat.

If the format sounds familiar — "Maverick," "Allas Smith and Jones," et al — it also rings a bell with the Australian. An alarm bell.

"We have to laugh at ourselves in this series or people will laugh at us in a nasty way," he said.

"The series must be authentic in every way, costumes, automobiles, speech, mannerisms and stories. The character I play has just returned from the Philippines during the Spanish-American war. He meets the Dennis Cole character and they decide to trouble-shoot for a blank check."

Among the adventures will be rum-running, smuggling Chinese into the United States and Mexican border incidents.

"The guys who run television will figure home viewers won't tune in just to see a movie star. So they'll be looking for new faces who won't cost them a bundle."

Almost as an afterthought Taylor said, "I hope they don't mind seeing me again."

Old-time scribes liked trout

By JIM HUMBIRD
Idaho Fish-Game Department.
BOISE — No group of fishes in the world has turned on so many English-speaking scribes and painters as trout have done. Literature and paintings about these fishes pre-date even the printing press, with poets singing their praises, artists painting them, and prose writers penning words by the thousands.
Why trout inspire such adulation is easy to say. They are handsome, often brightly colored, live best in cool, clean waters of tree-shaded streams where solitude and recreation can be found. Often wary, when finally hooked they battle for their lives with spectacular leaps and runs, lending brief periods of great excitement to the serenity of fishing.
Idaho species of trout, both native and introduced, are cutthroat, brown, golden, rainbow (including Kamloops), with Dolly Varden, brook and mackinaw (actually charrs) sometimes included. The most popular species are rainbow and its sea-going variant, the steelhead, and the introduced giant, Kamloops rainbow trout of Lake Pend Oreille. To a lesser extent, the brook and brown trout are eagerly sought in waters where they are found.

Many beginner anglers refer to all of these species as "trout," sometimes including coho and kokanee salmon for good measure. They often are found in the same waters and many of their spawning characteristics are similar. Whitefish are widespread in mountain streams; but grayling, introduced in some of the Selway lakes a few years ago, are rare.
With the exception of mackinaw (which in Priest Lake sometimes becomes a giant of over 50 pounds) all trout usually seek small tributary streams as spawning grounds, although some of them use spring areas in lakes. Females prepare the nests, called "redds," in gravel and males fertilize eggs as they are deposited. The eggs are covered with gravel. Hatching occurs in six to eight weeks, depending on water temperatures. Steelhead are river spawners, but seek out gravel shoals in headwater streams.

The young of all species except mackinaw stay in the gravel for two to four weeks and all species are fed by the yolk sack which remains attached to the belly of the tiny fish. After the yolk has been absorbed, the young fish, or fry, swim up through the gravel and start to feed on microscopic plant and animal organisms.
As they grow larger they eat more aquatic and land insects. Bigger fish feed on fresh water shrimp, smaller fish, crayfish and snails. Kamloops rainbow trout eggs are incubated at the Clark Fork fish hatchery and reared to yearlings prior to release in Lake Pend Oreille. The largest trout ever caught in Idaho was a Kamloops boated by Wes Hamlet at Pend Oreille Lake in 1947. It weighed 37 pounds.

The trout species which lends itself best to hatchery rearing is the rainbow. This species has been moved about so often by fishery biologists and even farmers that its original narrow range in the west has been extended over much of the United States, as well as South America, Italy, Denmark, Australia and other countries.
Idaho's state hatchery production for the 1970 fish year (October 1969-September 30, 1970) was 1,107,255 pounds of fish. This does not include 490,231 pounds of salmon and steelhead produced at some of the hatcheries during the same period.
Fisheries management personnel have learned much about hatchery fish production, about such aspects as nutrition, disease, rearing temperatures, and natural and artificial spawning. The rainbow trout in particular is well adapted for hatchery propagation.
So far the largest rainbow trout (not including Kamloops and steelhead) ever legally caught and verified in Idaho weighed 19 pounds. It was caught by R. M. Williams, Hayden Lake, 1947.

Other state records include steelhead, 29 pounds, 8 ounces, North Fork Clearwater; cutthroat, 18 pounds, 15 ounces, caught by Roger Grunig, Montpelier, in Bear Lake, 1970; cutthroat-rainbow (hybrid), 23 pounds, 4 ounces, caught by Phil Adderly, Blackfoot Reservoir, 1957; brook, 6 pounds, 10 ounces, caught by Donald Kotschevar, Deep Creek Reservoir, 1958; brown, 25 pounds, 12 ounces, caught by Jim McMurtrey, Ririe, at Palisades Reservoir, 1969; Dolly Varden, 32 pounds, caught by Nelson Higgins, Pend Oreille Lake, 1949, and golden, 5 pounds, 2 ounces, caught by George Wolverton, White Sands Lake, 1958.
Natural trout food covers a variety of creatures, including mayfly, caddisfly nymphs, stoneflies and their larvae, small mollusks, crustaceans, and other fish.

Tactical nuclear weapons loom major SALT pact barrier

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon recently announced with considerable fanfare—including an unusual noon television appearance—that the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed to a formula that could produce a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT).

Since his May 20 announcement, most of the public discussion has centered on the relative priority to be given offensive and defensive nuclear missiles in the next round of SALT talks.

which they are, compared to the 5 million ton strategic warheads packed by minute-man missiles or B52 bombers.

Another reason for public concern may be the description of some "tactical nukes" as land mines and artillery shells intended only for "battlefield" use.

In contrast, one of America's most articulate writers on the subject, Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, believes tactical nuclear weapons are the most dangerous weapons ever invented. He calls them "the percussion cap for a full nuclear exchange."

Lapp, a physicist who worked on the original A-bomb, believes it is nonsense to accept the military view that a limited war could be fought with tactical nuclear weapons without escalating to an all-out nuclear exchange between the major powers.

Many civilian experts agree.

Congress never has specifically authorized deploying these weapons. Congressional committees have not even been able to get full information on the diplomatic aspects of their presence in some countries.

A special Senate foreign relations subcommittee investigating U.S. commitments overseas last year was refused information on secret agreements involved in the deployment of the weapons in Europe.

There has been almost no mention of tactical atomic weapons, yet the hard fact is that one of the chief threats to the success of the talks is how to define a tactical nuclear weapon.

The United States has at least 12,000 such weapons scattered around Europe and Asia and aboard U.S. ships.

The Soviet Union, with no hope of using similar limited-range weapons against the United States, has taken the position that there is no difference between tactical and strategic nuclear weapons as long as they can reach her territory.

Americans for the most part have tended to take a rather casual view of the matter, partly because of ignorance of the fact that many strategic atomic weapons carry the equal of 1 million tons of TNT—50 times more than the A-bombs which wiped out Hiroshima and Nagasaki in World War II.

U.S. military experts also speak disparagingly of such weapons as relatively small—

Phosphates

NEW YORK (UPI)—In the face of national clamor over the alleged role of phosphates in eutrophication, sanitation officials in Indianapolis have demonstrated an efficient and economical means of solving the problem: Take phosphates out of municipal sewage.

A two-month experiment in the midwestern city showed the phosphate content of sewage effluent from local treatment plants could be cut about 90 per cent by precipitation with ferrous chloride and polymers. The average annual cost of the additional sewage treatment would cost local residents only about $1.51 per family.

Teen-ager less gangling off screen than on 'Smith Family'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Ronny Howard, the gangling teen-ager of "The Smith Family," is the same performer who captured viewers' hearts with his portrayal of Opie, the lovable little kid on "The Andy Griffith Show."

Off screen he's less gangling than on camera.

A working actor since age four, Ronny is red haired, 17 years old, freckled, five-foot eight-inches tall and an A-minus student at a public high school in the San Fernando valley.

Ronny lives at home with his parents, Jean and Rance Howard, and his younger brother, Clint, who co-starred in the "Gentle Ben" series.

The home is a three-bedroom, comfortable abode in the suburb of Toluca Lake and includes a sewing room for Mrs. Howard, who was once an actress. Mr. Howard is a writer and actor.

Ronny's great pride is a small, foreign automobile which he drives to school and to the studio to work.

Young Ronny plans to continue his education at the University of Southern California next year in the cinema arts.

As he has through primary and high school, Ronny would like to keep his acting career afloat along with his studies. In his 13-year career as an actor he's encountered was eight months.

Ronny is curiously naive for his age and surroundings. Curious because fat paychecks, celebrity and the aura of Hollywood have left him an unsophisticated, unspoiled young man.

His idea of a good time is playing basketball on his high school's B squad. After school he coaches a basketball team for 10-to-12-year-olds (including his brother) in nearby Burbank.

Most of his acting earnings are banked for the day when he goes to college.

He credits acting for his high school marks: "I study hard because as an actor I'm disciplined and know that I have to be prepared in classroom just as I have to be on the set. No matter what, I always get my homework done—all of it."

Ronny doesn't have a steady girl. And doesn't appear anxious to acquire one. He dates a variety of teen-agers, all unacquainted with the glamor of show business.

On Friday or Saturday night he's content to squire his date to a movie and then go for a hamburger at a hangout close to home.

Inevitably Ronny wears blue jeans and T-shirt, both to school and around the house. The exception is on working days when he wears a wardrobe more in keeping with the public conception of what a cop's offspring would wear to school.

Ronny reports to CBS Studio Center at 8 a.m. when the show is in the works and usually is free at 4:30 or 5 in the evening.

Most of the episodes are shot from June through September, a happy happenstance for young Howard.

Hero asked simple rite

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—War hero-movie actor Audie Murphy, who was buried with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery, wanted a simple burial in an ordinary grave with no Army tributes.

In Murphy's will, filed for probate Friday, he asked for a "simple, plain and ordinary burial," at a private cemetery, and the exclusion of "any and all public officials or military personnel."

Murphy, the most decorated American soldier of World War II, was killed in a plane crash May 28.

Murphy's estate was listed as worth more than $10,000. His will asked that half go to his widow, Pamela, and half to their two sons, Terry, 19, and James 17.

Districts face health problems

By MIKE ROBERTSON
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Public health problems and their control will be the responsibility of health districts that will have the power to make and enforce strict rules and regulations beginning Thursday.

That day, a new law goes into effect, creating seven mandatory public health districts in Idaho. The measure greatly expands the power of the local district to enforce standards and draft health guidelines at a local level.

The Idaho Legislature, hoping for more effective local health standards, shifted much of the power for enforcement from the state to local level.

The local districts are authorized to go far beyond state requirements on public health standards if needed. Public health services will now be provided in all of Idaho's 44 counties. Twenty-one counties currently without local public health services will be included. Each district must provide a number of basic services including public health nursing, environmental protection and health education.

It will be the responsibility of the district to determine the health needs of citizens within its jurisdiction. Existing programs then can be expanded to ensure comprehensive public health services for all residents. Under the law, the district board of health has the power to administer and enforce all state health laws, regulations and standards and other tasks delegated to it by the state board of health.

The board can establish, amend and enforce health laws, rules and regulations necessary in the district. These must be approved by the Idaho Board of Health. The rules can vary from district to district, but must be "as or more restrictive" than those of the state board of health.

Dr. Wayne Carte, medical director for the South Central Idaho District Health Board, said this district plans to adopt state rules and regulations. He said if problems in this area are not specifically covered rules and regulations can be made to fit local situations.

Dr. Carte said a few services will still be maintained at a state level. These include the crippled children's service, the TB laboratory and money for immunizations. He said the state receives federal grants for immunizations and reappropriates the money to the districts. The state will still maintain its engineers or health inspectors.

At the district level, the services provided before the new law will continue to be offered and expanded. Dr. Carte said public health nurse, school health and education and immunization programs have been quite successful in the past. He said from 70 to 85 per cent of the children in school are immunized each year.

In determining the health needs of the district's communities, Dr. Carte said, he will work in cooperation with the local medical society, the Department of Public Assistance, hospitals, schools and the local news media to get a composite picture. From these sources a working knowledge of what is needed can be compiled, he said.

If a problem needs attention, he said, an evaluation must be made by the department. Funds to solve the problem are needed next. Dr. Carte said 65 per cent of the funds comes from the district, and the state provides 35 per cent.

He said most of the district's money comes from tax levies, grants or requests. He said House Bill 444, provides the district money through the counties which may levy up to two mills for health department funds.

Dr. Carte said one of the biggest concerns at present is sanitary landfills. He said the department is going to try to eliminate all dumps that are not landfills. Burning will be eliminated and landfills will be placed so they won't contaminate water or harbor insects and rodents.

Air samples are taken daily for a particulate matter count in cooperation with the state health department labs. Dr. Carte said the counts will help the health department keep better tabs on air pollution.

He said liquid waste has been one of the big problems in the Magic Valley with the potato industry. He added that most are now using a dry peel process, so the amount of water contamination has dropped.

Dr. Carte said that, the department's policy concerning a problem depends upon the severity of the problem.

"Any time it is felt that a situation is a major health hazard, the operation will be shut down immediately," Dr. Carte said. He said an operation will not be shut down if a health hazard can be corrected in a reasonable amount of time.

As medical director for the district, Dr. Carte answers to the board of directors.

"I'm supposed to find out what is needed and tell the board of directors what should be done," he said. He added before the new law was passed, health districts were formed county by county and were rather loosely knit. The directors were responsible to the state.

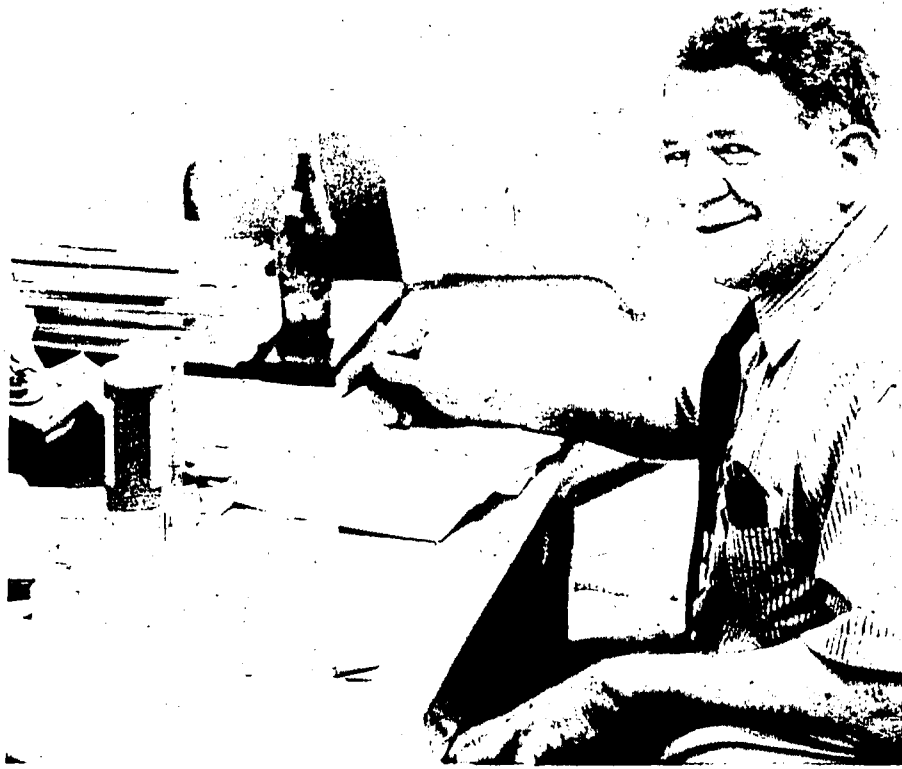

Dr. Carte said that when a problem is attacked, three things are considered. First is the severity of the problem, whether it can be corrected, improved or operations stopped. Next, the personnel needed to work on the program must be obtained. Most important is the financial aid to be used. The finance planning must go through the board of directors and the budget committee.

The district will usually go through the state procurement offices for personnel. He said the inspector's work is primarily inspection and rejection.

Inspection is under the supervision of the department environmentalists. They inspect and enforce the rules and regulations concerning eating places and food establishments, meat and meat products, milk, solid waste, septic tanks, and swimming pools.

Preparations for the health boards to assume their duties have been in progress for more than a year. In District Five, which includes Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding, Twin Falls and Minidoka counties, the board is represented by each county. The representative is appointed by the commissioners in each county. The budget committee for the district is composed of the county commission chairmen.

Decentralization of health services will enable most problems to be handled on a local basis, Dr. Carte said.

Health chief

DISTRICT FIVE MEDICAL DIRECTOR, Dr. Wayne Carte, hopes to establish several new health services including family planning and mental health programs.

Each solution to the problems of an area will be tailored to fit that area, not superimposed from the state level.

The board of health appoints the director who must be an M.D. if possible. If an M.D. is not available, the director can be an administrator, working with medical counsel from a doctor.

Under the law, the district boards can enter into contracts with other agencies for providing or obtaining services, to accept, receive and utilize gifts, grants or funds and to authorize expenditure from the trust account. Dr. Carte said even though inspection of the district's work is made, the department answers many personal complaints. He said the health department handles these by city or county codes if not covered under health regulations.

Several social health problems are being attacked by the health department locally.

Dr. Carte said that a venereal disease clinic has already been established and is held once a week. He said that he has hopes of establishing a family planning program, a "well child" and mental health programs. Dr. Carte added that these services have existed for some time in a few Idaho districts. One major effort that has been in effect several years is the immunization of migrant workers. Dr. Carte said a whole camp can be immunized at one time. He said most are cooperative with the health department efforts. He added that immunization is a good way to control hepatitis in labor camps. Health workers find it frequently in the summer, he said.

Dr. Carte was chosen by the board of directors of the Fifth District and started work May 1. He had been in general practice in Shelton, Wash. before coming to Twin Falls.

Fairfield mill start due in July

By ROBERTA DANIEL
Times-News Writer

FAIRFIELD — Operations are expected to begin the early part of July at the new Wendell Mill and Lumber Co. Mill.

The main building was destroyed by a disastrous fire last September. The rubble was cleared and construction of the new mill was begun in October. Construction of the mill building and installation of the heavy machinery was done by longtime employees of the mill. They are now putting the finishing touches on the metal building and machinery in preparation for the opening of the season.

Huge stockpiles of logs await the opening of operations. The only outside contractor was Kencke Electric Co., Mountain Home, who did the electrical work.

The new building is similar to the one destroyed by the fire but is more modern in design and the machinery and equipment is of a newer type. It is expected to be capable of producing 80,000 board feet of lumber per day, according to R. E. Davidson, who has been manager the past five years. He also hopes that the mill can operate at least ten months out of the year.

The machinery is all-electric powered and the largest motor is 250 horse power. There is a seven foot band saw and a six foot horizontal resaw. Douglas fir timber is cut at the mill.

A new de-barker was operating on a trial basis at the time of the fire. This machinery and buildings have been added to and a large metal bark bin installed. The bark will be hauled to feedlots and is also used as a garden cover. This is the first phase of the complete utilization of the logs. A future plan includes a chipper to reduce the slabs and edgings

Deer hit

HANSEN — David Wayne Moyes, 22, escaped injury but damage to his 1967 sedan was estimated at $200 as a result of a collision with two deer on U.S. Highway 30 early Saturday.

Sheriff's officers said the deer ran into the highway in front of the Moyes vehicle about one quarter mile west of Hansen at 12:04 a.m. Saturday. The driver was traveling east and the accident killed one of the deer.

into pulp. This pulp will be sent by rail to paper mills. Large burners have been burning the bark and waste material in the past.

Lumber from the mill is shipped by truck and rail to many points. Much of it is used in Magic and Treasure valleys. Some is shipped to the Denver area and points further east. All lumber cut at the mill is finished at a planer that is operated on the site by the company.

Cutting of logs will begin in about 30 days in the Shake Creek ranger area. Logging is done by contract and about 25 men are employed in the woods crew. About 10 truckers haul the logs to the mill. One contract hauler brings logs from the Ketchum area.

The original mill was built in 1947 and destroyed by a fire in the early 50's and rebuilt and again burned in 1963. After the 1963 fire a modern all-electric mill was built and went into operation in 1964. That same year the planer burned and had to be rebuilt. The all electric mill was destroyed by a flash fire of unknown origin last September.

Society trip set for July

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Historical Society's next field trip will be an excursion into "Old Boulder City" north of Ketchum on July 18.

The 4-Wheel Drive Club of Ketchum will take the members back to the old mining town in their vehicles. The starting point will be Boulder Creek which is located on the right side of the highway north of Ketchum.

Anyone interested in going on the tour is asked to call 733-0341 this week so the society can inform the club how many persons to expect.

The 4-Wheel Drive Club recommends that anyone having heart trouble be excluded from the trip, a spokesman said.

Canyon guards pick Hemingway

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Jack Hemingway, Sun Valley, Idaho, was elected Saturday to head a 38-group coalition for the preservation of Hell's Canyon.

Seventy-five representatives, representing 38 Pacific north west organizations, formed "The Coalition to Save the Snake" and named Hemingway, son of the late novelist Ernest Hemingway, to lead the group. Hemingway, well-known in Idaho for his conservation efforts, declared the coalition's task to be that of coping with "the arrogance of power."

The coalition approved by voice vote three resolutions, including a pledge "to aggressively seek speedy enactment" of what is known as the Packwood-Saylor bill to create a Hell's Canyon-Snake National River. This would freeze dam construction and further developments of some 750,000 acres on either side of the river for a 120-mile stretch.

Coalition members, who raised $3,470 in cash and pledges in the first 10 minutes of their meeting, said they aimed to prevent dam construction in Hell's Canyon and in the lower Granite Dam project west of Lewiston. That dam is about 80 per cent completed.

High water slows recovery efforts

SALMON — Efforts to find the body of Lt. Gary McGuire, 26, Mountain Home Air Force Base, who is presumed to have drowned in an accident on the Salmon River June 19 have been hampered by high water in the river.

Sheriff Bill Baker of Lemhi County said the river was the highest Sunday that it has been all year — 7 feet and 1 inch. Today, the river was still at 6 feet, 8 inches and Baker said there is not "much use in looking until it drops to 5 feet."

He said the river was supposed to drop to 5 feet this week, but heavy rain in the area has probably erased that possibility.

McGuire, son of Mrs. Florence McGuire, Twin Falls, was lost in the river when the rubber raft he and his wife and a companion were riding on collided with a pier at the Carmen Bridge on U. S. 93.

Baker said even if the river does drop to 5 feet, chances of finding the body are "slim." He said there will be no full scale organized search.

McGuire was a graduate of Idaho State University.

Flooding doubted

By MELBA THORNE
Times-News Writer

SHOSHONE — Though the canal and river beds are full again, officials of the Big Wood Canal Co. do not fear serious flooding, Leon Grieve, manager, said today.

Magic Reservoir was 2.5 inches over the top this morning, containing 192,292 acre feet of water. The full mark is 191,500 acre feet.

This extra water is coming from runoff from Wood River, and Grieve said when he was at the point where Big Wood River enters Magic Friday it was "really gushing in" and was extremely muddy. Magic itself, however, is clear, particularly in the lower end, Grieve said.

He said the muddy water now entering has not yet had time to spread out over the reservoir.

The heavy runoff takes about two days to show up in the lower areas, but under present conditions there will be no flood danger, due to use of the water along the way for irrigation, he said.

The only place Grieve said he knew of flooding on farm land was near Gooding. This could not be eliminated as Milner Canal must be kept full to provide the irrigation commitments and with the extra runoff, some water escaped onto fields at the Castle farm, he said.

Under ordinary situations this time of year, Carey farmers use all the Silver Creek water there, but with the heavy rainfall, the irrigation is cut and the extra water has been coming into Little Wood River from Silver Creek.

Grieve said canal crews have had to put in and take out 15 boards at the Magic Reservoir spillway so many times this spring that the boards are about worn out. There are 66 boards across the spillway and it is by removing and replacing some of these that the water level is maintained at a desired spot.

High water level in Big Wood River was on June 22, when there was 33.66 second feet there. This morning, Monday, the content run was 22.86 second feet.

Monday morning 2,900 second feet of water was being let from Magic, down some from the high of 3,300 second feet Saturday after the boards were removed.

Air pollution index 54

The pollution reading was taken by the staff of the South Central Health District at the Twin Falls City Hall. The reading is expressed as the number of micrograms of particulate material per cubic meter of air for the 24-hour period.

ending at 8 a.m. today. Federal pollution regulations say pollution levels should be kept below 75 micrograms over any 24-hour period, and should not be permitted to rise above 260 micrograms for even a short period of time.

Forecast

Today: Excellent
Tonight: Good
Tomorrow: Excellent

This forecast provided by the Idaho Department of Health indicates the ability of the atmosphere to disperse pollution. Burning as permitted by law should be curtailed when the air is poorly able to disperse air pollutants.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks were lower Monday in one of the slowest sessions of the year. The Commerce Department reported that the government's index of leading economic indicators climbed for the seventh consecutive month in May, although it was noted that the gain of 0.6 per cent was only half as large as the 1.2 per cent rise a month earlier.

Analysts said that much of the hesitancy on Wall Street reflects concern the economy is not recovering as swiftly as expected.

As trading rounded the half-year mark on the NYSE, the Dow Jones industrial average was off more than 4 1/2 points at 872.01. Declined stopped advances by about 225 issues.

Volume at 1 p.m. amounted to 5,850,000 shares, down from 6,500,000 shares traded at a comparable period last Friday.

Chemicals were among the day's softest spots. Eastman Kodak lost around 2 1/2, and Du Pont 1 1/2.

Motors surrendered fractions, while steels showed a steady tone. UAL Inc. and Northwest were weak airlines, losing a point or more.

Other soft spots included Bausch & Lomb down 3, and Corning Glass 3/4.

Among the stocks on the most active list were Shell Oil unchanged, First Charter Financial up 1/2, United Utilities 1/4 lower, and Pan American World Airways down 1/2.

MR. AND MRS. KENNETH STAFFORD

Kris Kunau, Stafford exchange promise

BURLEY — Kris Kunau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Kunau, Burley, became the bride of Kenneth Stafford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Stafford, Twin Falls, in rites June 10 at the Burley Presbyterian Church.

The single ring ceremony was performed by Dr. David Buzza before a setting of large baskets of creamy-white gladioli, light pink chrysanthemums, accented with dark red roses and tall tiered candelabra. Pink pew bows enhanced the setting along with a white carpet in the middle aisle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white satin Bridal gown, empire-styled with scalloped lace accenting the bodice, front and back. The long puffed sleeves were fashioned with tight lace cuffs and the skirt with a wide band of lace around the bottom which formed a long chapel train. Her elbow-length veil was held by a frothy bow. She carried a cascade bouquet of Forever Yours deep red rosebuds accented with white chrysanthemums and Stephanotis.

Karen Kunau, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and Sharon Caldwell as bridesmaid.

David Stafford, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Robert Kunau, brother of the bride, and Duane Presnell, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Ann Seymour, Burley, was soloist, with Tom Church, Burley, as organist.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the Pomerelle Room at the Ponderosa Inn. Guests were received before a sparkling white silver backdrop flanked by large baskets of creamy white gladioli and light pink chrysanthemums, accented with dark red roses.

The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with three-tiered pink and white cake topped by pink chrysanthemums and deep red roses. The cake was flanked by floral arrangements.

Mrs. Alvin Smutny and Mrs. Bert Tracy served the cake. Mrs. Bula Gregory and Mrs. Keith Evans presided at the punch bowl.

Guests were registered by Carol Presnell, sister of the bridegroom.

Guests attended from Phillipsburg, N.J.; Boise and the surrounding areas.

After a wedding trip to Wyoming and Montana, the couple will reside in Twin Falls before returning to law school at the University of Idaho this fall.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at the Ponderosa Inn.

The bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower by Mrs. Hermon King, Burley, and at a kitchen shower by Mrs. Perry Stephenson, Burley.

A Lovelier You

AIDS TO WEEKEND TRAVEL

By Mary Sue Miller

Happy weekendings depends on weather, travel conditions, accommodations and companions. All may prove ideal. But a small beauty accident can introduce a note of discomfort. Trouble in Paradise.

If you go on frequent weekend jaunts, there's wisdom in keeping a kit stocked with beauty remedies. Be sure to include your favorites. These are newsworthy and meant as reminders:

The other is a between shampoo-shampoo, an aerosol that sprays a mini-mist of instant dry shampoo.

- To soothe sun-tired, swim-reddened eyes, drops with a decongestant formula that works to prevent contamination via a drop-director dispenser.

- Total tube of all-purpose medicated skin cream for washing before and after sunning, to apply as a cooler should you feel sunbite when old Sol goes down.

- To ward off makeup wilt on long days, try blotting with little sheer linen face-savers. Great for absorbing excess oil, too.

- Body powder in feather-light squeeze bottles. An all time refresher, like a whiff from Woods of the Isles.

New art outlet . . .

Different approach to art galleries

TWIN FALLS — Et Cetera sells local artists work as one of Twin Falls' art outlets. Nick and Kelly Bond, owners and operators of Et Cetera, said they opened this shop to attempt to find a different approach to art galleries. "The primary purpose of Et Cetera is to accept art work without passing judgment, which is the difference," said Mrs. Bond. Mrs. Bond says the shop is not a full-time commercial operation as their first interest is music and both are well-known Twin Falls musicians. According to Mrs. Bond, the gallery is primarily a pastime to help local artists find a market for their creations. Art work is accepted on a commission basis. Much of the work in the shop comes from College of Southern Idaho students who use sales to help with college expenses, says Mrs. Bond. The shop is open until 9 p.m. seven days a week. A variety of works are available in oil paintings, sculpture, leather works, jewelry, etc.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "STAMP WIDOW" she's lucky. Unlike sports widows who wonder if their husbands really went to the game, or TV widows whose husbands ignore them for hours on end, stamp widows always know where their husbands are. And there isn't a stamp collector alive who doesn't like to talk about his hobby. Even to his wife. Ticket stubs and programs from sports events only add to the nation's pollution, but a stamp collection is like money in the bank. Think of the legacy the stamp collector's wife will have, if she outlives him.

ISRAEL I. BICK: BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR MR. BICK: And what if she doesn't outlive him? She's given the best years of her life to a man whose biggest thrill is finding a 1923 airplane stamp with the airplane upside down. And his second wife winds up with a valuable stamp collection.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter from "STAMP WIDOW." My husband is an avid stamp collector and we had the biggest laugh over it. My Montie doesn't drink, smoke or chase women. His home is the most important thing in his life—after his stamps, of course.

LORRAINE RUMSOWER: LOWDEN, IA.

DEAR ABBY: You told "STAMP WIDOW" she was lucky because her husband had the one hobby she could "lick." Shame on you, Abby. Anyone who collects stamps knows that to lick a stamp is blasphemy. Stamp collectors use stamp hinges or protective mounts.

ED SUSMAN: HARTFORD TIMES

DEAR ED: Okay, I'M take a good "licking" with a Scott catalog.

DEAR ABBY: Stamp Widow doesn't know how lucky she is. My husband is a stamp collector and I have to go to all the stamp shows and auctions with him. And I'm the "soaker off" from envelopes and cards that friends give him. Yes, my house is a mess with stamps drying off all over. But I'm lucky. He could be in a tavern, gambling, instead of in his stamp corner.

I've gone to work with stamp hinges clinging to my clothes, inside my shoes, and you don't ask where else. For Christmas, birthdays, Father's Day, what does my man want? Stamps, or supplies for his albums. LILLIAN

DEAR ABBY: Words cannot adequately express my appreciation for the wholesome hobby of stamp collecting. My husband was forced to retire before 60 so he turned to his stamp collection, added to it, bought and sold stamps and found a fascinating hobby that required no physical effort.

We exposed our children to stamps early. As they brought in the mail they would announce, "Betsy Ross Flag!" Or "Another Mr. Lincoln!" They learned history through observing stamps. To this day I never throw away a canceled stamp. I cut, soak and dry. And they're saved for my grandchildren. STAMP WIDOW: MPLS.

Book Review

By MARY ALICE FLORENCE

Twin Falls Public Library

For those movie-going readers who prefer to read the book before they see the movie, time is running out on "The Phantom Tollbooth."

Newsweek's movie reviewer refers to Norton Juster's book as a juvenile classic. There are those who will dispute the fact that a book can become a classic in just ten years, but "The Phantom Tollbooth" certainly has the wit and wisdom to call it a modern "Alice in Wonderland."

There was once a very bored boy named Milo — wherever he was, he wished he was someplace else, and when he got here, he always wondered why he bothered. Then one day he came home from school and found a tollbooth in his room. He drove his small electric automobile up to the tollbooth, deposited a coin, and rolled into a fantasy world.

Milo's first stop is Dictionopolis where he meets King Azaz the Unabridged and an amazing assortment of allegorical characters. Two of the most unforgettable are his friends on the remainder of his journey, the watchdog Tock and Humbog.

Because of the rivalry of King Azaz and his brother Mathemagician, the ruler of Digitopolis, the two beautiful princesses, Rhyme and Reason, have been banished to the Castle in the Air.

Milo's quest is to return the princesses and bring peace to the kingdoms of words and numbers. On the way, he visits the Island of Conclusions — which can be reached only by jumping. He also meets half a child — well, 58 to be exact.

"What is the rest of your family like?" Milo asked the child.

"Oh, we're just the average family," he said thoughtfully, "mother, father, and 2.58 children — and, I'm the .58."

Of course, all ends well, and there is a beautiful finale with all Milo's new friends before he passes back through the tollbooth. It is hard to imagine a child of any age not liking this book and adults, too, should find it just as much fun. Because "The Phantom Tollbooth" is the kind of book the reader is always interrupting someone with to read a passage, it would be a great choice for family reading aloud this summer.

MR. AND MRS. STEVE A. DAVIS (Shig Morita photo)

TWIN FALLS — Janice Marie Thietten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thietten, Twin Falls, became the bride of Steve Allen Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orval Davis, Portland, Ore., in rites June 13 at the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Twin Falls. Pastor Dale Ringering, Caldwell, performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with baskets of pink snapdragons and yellow pompons and yellow tapered candles in brass candelabra.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of peau de soie, fashioned with an overlay of organza with lace applique on the bodice, sleeves and cathedral train. Her shoulder-length bouffant veil was worn with a white floret headpiece. She carried a nosegay of yellow pompons centered with deep pink Elfe roses accented with baby breath and pink ribbon streamers.

Mrs. Ron Kuest, Walla Walla, Wash., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Dalene Ringering, Caldwell; Judy McAlexander, Pendleton, Ore., and Mrs. Clinton Schultz, Walla Walla. Ron Davis, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Doug Sayles, Boise, cousin of the bridegroom; Marvin Boyd, Portland, and Ray Thietten, Twin Falls, brother of the bride.

Flower girl was Shawna Bull. Bible boy was Kevan Hughes. Candlelighters were Dalene and Scott Davis, niece and nephew of the bridegroom, Sandy, Ore. Guests were registered by Candy Ringering. Organist was Mrs. Dale Ringering, with Gary Ireland as soloist and Marvin Boyd presenting a trumpet solo.

A garden reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thietten, Twin Falls, grandparents of the bride.

The bride's table was decorated with a four-tiered cake trimmed with pink florets. Between the layers pink butterflies were featured. It was topped with miniature bells. The cake was baked by Mrs. Woodrow Bingham.

Punch was served by Mrs. Ron Davis, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Celia Burke. Cake was cut and served by Mrs. Gideon Sperle and Mrs. Irwin Cook, assisted by Mrs. Melvin Tilly, Mrs. Don Tilly and Mrs. Ray Tilly, aunts of the bride.

Gifts were displayed by Christine Abbott and Cara Tilly, niece of the bride.

A wedding party brunch was held at the Rogerson Hotel Roundup Room June 13, hosted by the bridegroom's parents. Showers were given for the bride in Walla Walla by Mrs. Ron Kuest and Daylene Ringering and in Twin Falls at the home of Mrs. Willard Clark by Mrs. Ray Tilly, Mrs. Ardith Schneider, Mrs. Anthony Bull and Mrs. Irwin Cook.

A reception also was held June 20 at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Portland.

After a honeymoon trip to Sun Valley and Oceanside, Ore., the couple will reside in Roseburg, Ore., where the bridegroom will be engaged in assistant pastoral work.

The bridegroom was graduated in June from Walla Walla College, where he majored in religion.

Summer story hour slated in Ketchum

KETCHUM — A summer series of the children's story hour is set for each Monday and Friday, July 5 through July 30, at the Ketchum Library, reports Mrs. Louis Mallane, director of the pre-school program. This marks the first summer story hour sponsored as a community service by the Ketchum-Sun Valley Library. Due to past popularity of the fall and spring series, it was felt by the board of directors this third program should be given.

The program is offered to 4 and 5-year-olds only and mothers are requested to respect the prescribed age limits and not enroll younger children. The hour-long, twice-weekly program begins at 10 a.m. and youngsters must be picked up by parents at 11 a.m. Games, songs, crafts and stories will be featured.

The "unstructured" include both knits and woens in a host of colors, patterns and styles.

Time for living

By ROGERS FRANKLIN
I heard a lot of good talk recently; now I'm waiting for the action.

The good talk was at the 24th Annual Conference on Aging held at the University of Michigan. Over 700 professionals, policy makers, and some of us greybeards sat around to discuss "The Care of Old People — Creating the Humane Environment."

Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs in the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, sounded the conference keynote by stating: "Americans must begin preparing in their thirties and forties for an old age that is creative, purposeful, and happy." Also, Dr. Egeberg urged the younger generation to help create an environment in which we can feel fully accepted, particularly in the family home.

Concern for the million elderly patients in nursing homes was voiced by Sen. Frank E. Moss (D-Utah), who called for a clear national policy to improve conditions. He also challenged us to "provide a broad spectrum of institutional facilities as well as alternatives to placing individuals in nursing homes; enforce the legal standards set for nursing homes; develop in-services and other training programs for nursing home personnel; and develop effective controls to prevent abuses of Medicare and Medicaid."

Another prominent speaker,

Wilbur J. Cohen, former secretary of health, education, and welfare, claimed that the 21 per cent increase in social security and other benefits outlined in the Social Security and Welfare Reform Bill now pending is "unsubstantial in its present form."

Dr. Cohen called for an additional across-the-board 5 per cent increase "perhaps through a uniform $5 per month increase to all primary beneficiaries," effective in 1972. "This would significantly help lower-benefit and lower-income recipients," he said.

Dr. Cohen also called for extension of the Older Americans Act, the lowering (to age 60) of eligibility for Medicare; coverage of prescription drugs, and more basic research in the field of aging.

Other speakers talked about options for living the later years, about our right to live or die, humane treatment for old folks in institutions, how to create the humane environment, the economics of health care, and the mobilizing of older people.

And not only did the speakers and panelists offer a number of good ideas, but the audience asked many leading questions, and started a lot of lively debate. Everybody expressed concern, compassion, and understanding... all that talk was nice, but it's action that counts.

Let's all hope that somebody will DO something about all those good ideas!

SHOSHONE — Shoshone Chamber of Commerce will have a membership in the Idaho Public Lands and Resource Council, by paying a $25 membership fee, reports president Myron D. Johnson.

Johnson also reports that more than enough signatures of qualified voters was received on a petition here to ask for the regional airport.

Man fighting elm disease

CHICAGO (UPI)—This is the 50th year man has known about a disease that is destroying one of nature's majestic works, the elm tree.

But in all those years it has been mostly a losing battle because of the hardness of another of nature's marvels—the fungus that causes the disease.

Known as Dutch elm disease since 1921, when it was first observed in Holland, it was found within the next few years in central and southern Europe and nine years later it had invaded America.

Until Dutch elm disease struck, says Encyclopaedia Britannica, few trees were better known than the American elm, which is especially susceptible to the disease. Perhaps the most venerated of the nation's trees, the American elm has been especially suited to urban environment.

Seldom considered worthwhile as timber, the elm was valued almost entirely for its beauty. But it is popular also with a large assortment of insects, among them a beetle that carries the disease from infected to healthy trees.

Cowboys bow to Giants, host Billings tonight

Scott Wolfe and Harold Ingle drove in nine runs between them — Wolfe unloading a grand slam homer — as the Great Falls Giants topped the Magic Valley Cowboys in a 10-8 slugfest Sunday night.

The Cowboys, now 1-1 for the young season, remain home Monday to host the Billings Mustangs at 7:30 p.m. in the opener for a four-game series.

Cowboys made its pay off for six runs and a pair of doubles polished off the job Sunday night.

Ingle took over with a two-run homer in the sixth and added a two-run double two innings later. The other Giant run came in the first when Guaroa Veloz followed Wolfe with a single.

Despite the early blitz — which actually was traceable to a couple of poor decisions in the outfield — the Cowboys came back in the bottom of the first for a short-lived 3-2 edge.

Three walks by eventual winner Frank Ricelli were followed by an infield hit by Dave Walski and a pair of errors.

But after Wolfe's grand-slammer in the second the Cowboys were behind for good.

Terry Nelson belted a solo homer in the fifth and Walski added another one-run shot in the seventh.

Boston takes third straight decision from Baltimore 3-1

By NEIL HERSHBERG
UPI Sports Writer
Contrary to recent rumor, the Boston Red Sox were not dead.

Boston made it three straight over defending world champion Baltimore Sunday as Ray Culp pitched a seven-hitter for his ninth victory of the season in downing the Orioles 3-1.

The Red Sox were the American League Eastern Division leaders throughout much of the early season and remained in first place until June 4.

Erratic pitching as well as disappointing batting performances from recent acquisitions Luis Aparicio and Duane Josephson accounted for the Red Sox slide in the standings.

Baltimore, off to a rocky start, took advantage of Boston's decline and gained possession of first place, a lead it still holds.

"Surprisingly, the club was down," said Red Sox Manager Eddie Kasko, in describing his team's reaction when they suddenly found themselves seven games behind the Orioles after a recent road trip.

But the three straight wins over Baltimore have given the Red Sox an emotional uplift.

In other American League action Cleveland downed Detroit, 3-1, Washington took a pair from New York 2-1 and 8-0, Minnesota defeated Milwaukee 2-1 in the first game of a doubleheader with the Brewers taking the nightcap 8-5.

Aaron hits two homers, pulls within 100 of Babe Ruth's all-time record

ATLANTA (UPI)—Lee May's two-run ninth-inning homer enabled the Cincinnati Reds to defeat the Atlanta Braves, 7-5, Sunday despite a pair of two-run homers by Hank Aaron, now exactly 100 homers behind Babe Ruth's all-time total.

Gary Nolan retired the first 19 batters he faced and had a perfect game before Felix Millan singled with one out in the seventh.

Aaron followed with his first two-run homer of the game. Aaron hit his second homer of the game — and the 614th of his career — when the Braves kayped Nolan in a three-run ninth inning rally.

Nolan received credit for his sixth win of the season with the ninth-inning relief help of Wayne Granger.

May delivered the game-winning two-run homer in the ninth, giving the Reds a 7-2 lead, after George Foster was hit by reliever Tom House.

Wynn, hitting only .203 and playing because Jesus Alou has an injured ankle, lined a two-out bases-loaded single in the seventh inning off reliever Jerry Johnson to put the game out of reach at a time when Houston had a precarious 3-2 lead.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Bill Buckner's bad-hop single with the bases loaded opened the way for four runs in the fourth inning and Richie Allen clouted a two-run homer in the fifth Sunday to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

With Los Angeles trailing 1-0, Allen and Wes Parker led off the Dodger fourth with singles. One out later, Bill Grabarkewitz walked.

Buckner hit what appeared to be a doubleplay ball but it skipped over the head of second baseman Don Mason for two runs.

Laver still man to beat as Wimbledon tourney resumes

WIMBLEDON, Eng. (UPI) — Stan Smith enjoys playing Rod Laver. Ken Rosewall says the red-haired southpaw doesn't frighten him.

Cliff Richey would have preferred seeing him upset last week — it would have made everything easier.

But the four-time Wimbledon champ himself wasn't talking.

The second week of the 85th All-England Tennis Championships starts today. The favorites — and no one is more favored than Laver — are still tightly clustered after a first week that brought few upsets and saw four Australians and three Americans advance to the last eight.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Muhammad Ali, who refused to step forward for induction into the Army four years ago, is expected to learn today from the Supreme Court whether he will spend the next five years in prison.

Alli, who won the World Heavyweight boxing championship under the name of Cassius Clay, said he was a Black Muslim minister and pacifist exempt from serving in any armed conflict except a holy war declared by Allah.

"I don't have no personal war with those Viet Congs," Ali said on April 28, 1967, when he refused to be sworn into the Army at the Houston Armed Forces Induction Center.

ATLANTA (UPI)—Hank Aaron, obviously riled by a local sports column which said "Henry Aaron is overrated," had a ready explanation after hitting successive two-run homers.

"When you are overrated, you've got to try harder," Aaron's homers, his 21st and 22nd of the season, came in his last two times at bat Sunday as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Atlanta Braves, 7-5.

Although they weren't enough to save the Braves from defeat, they did move Aaron to exactly 100 back of Babe Ruth's record of 714 homers.

And the four RBIs raised Aaron's career total in that department to 1,902, 20 behind Jimmy Foxx who is fifth on the all-time list. Hank has 60 RBIs so far this season.

These facts were called to Aaron's attention, as well as that Sunday marked the 50th time he had had two homers in a game, and he replied with a grin:

"How about that. Not bad for an overrated player."

Mitchell wins Cleveland tourney at 22 under par

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI)—Nobody caught Bobby Mitchell Sunday.

After three scorching rounds, Mitchell had threatened to run away with the Cleveland Open, but no one expected him to leave the field of some of the top touring pros standing still.

Mitchell, following his 67 Saturday, said if he played Sunday like he did the first three holes of the third round, "there was nobody who could catch me no matter how good they played." And he was right.

The former caddie who turned pro at the age of 15 broke the back of the 6,618-yard Beechmont Country Club course with a score of 262—22 strokes under par and picked up $30,000.

The victory was the first for Mitchell since he turned pro. His best finish had been second in the Azalea Open last year when he three-putted the last three holes to finish second.

"Oh man, it was a long wait but it was well worth it," Mitchell said following his final round score of 65. "I knew I could six putt on the last green and still win."

"I was a little nervous all last night thinking about the final round. I got up about five or six times trying to think about what I was going to do, but never did come up with anything. So I just went out and played the final round just like I had played the last three days."

He set quite a goal. Mitchell's first three rounds were 68, 64 and 67.

He had a one shot lead over Dan Sikes at the end of the second round and increased it to four over Bruce Crampton and Charles Coody at the end of the third.

But he put it out of reach Sunday with four birdies on the first six holes and wound up the tournament seven strokes ahead of Coody, who shot a 68 Sunday for a 15-under par 269 to collect $17,000.

Crampton, who would have tied Coody had he been able to make a five foot putt for a 68 on the 18th hole, finished with a 270 and collected $10,650.

Mitchell's $30,000 first prize more than doubled his earnings for the year going into the Cleveland Open, which stood at $19,928.

"I was cozying the ball up to the holes on the greens," Mitchell said. "I was trying to make the putt, but not really since I had a good lead."

"I was playing under pressure all the way, especially this final round. I was thinking about last year when I three-putted the last three greens at Azalea and lost to Cesar Sanudo. I didn't want that to happen again."

Mitchell's playing partner for the final 18 holes was Crampton, who birdied the first two holes just like the winner. But after Mitchell dropped another birdie on the par three 159-yard third hole and Crampton made par "I sort'a left him there for the rest of the day."

Finishing the tournament with 13-under-par 271s, good enough for $6,200, were Phil Rodgers, Jerry Heard and Jerry McGee.

Gene Littler, who already has won two PGA events this year, the Monsanto Open and the Colonial National, stood alone at 272, after his final round of 68.

Billy Casper, who hasn't won since the Avco Classic last year, tied with first round leader Dan Sikes at 273, 11 under for the tourney.

Stewart wins at Can-Am

MONT TREMBLANT, Canada (UPI)—The most surprised person at the end of Sunday's second Can-Am series race here was Jackie Stewart, the winner.

Stewart, a Scotsman, hadn't intended to race hard since he was breaking in a new car. But he saw his chance late in the race and took advantage to beat England's Dennis Hulmer.

"The car never missed a beat," said Stewart, who drove a Chevrolet Lola over the 75-lap, 198-mile course. "The race was absolutely perfect."

Stewart had said before the race that he wouldn't go all out unless he saw his chance. "If I see an opportunity, I will try to win, but I really don't expect to be driving hard."

Stewart's chance came when Hulme, running ahead, had to slow down for a slower car. Stewart zipped by and held the lead to the end, finishing with an average speed of 98.96 miles per hour and a time of one hour, 59.29 seconds.

Crabbe still setting marks

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Buster Crabbe, 1932 Olympic Games gold medal winner, Sunday set two more world age-group records in the 60-64 bracket, swimming the 1,500-meter freestyle in 28 minutes and 59.8 seconds.

His other mark was 2:23.3 in the 150-meter individual medley. He also swam a leg on the winning 200 freestyle relay team, which was timed in 2:04.6.

Title never was in doubt

Mrs. Carner ends exercise in boredom by winning tourney

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — For JoAnne Gunderson Carner, winning the U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship was an exercise in boredom.

Sunday with a five-stroke lead, ended it with a seven-stroke victory and admitted there was never a moment in-between when she felt the $5,000 first place check was in jeopardy.

I always try to start out really good, then they know they've got to shoot par or under par to catch me," explained Mrs. Carner, 32.

"It was very quiet out there. I heard a roar on three and I never heard it again. You had to figure there weren't a lot of people making birdies."

Mrs. Carner, who won the Women's Amateur title five times before joining the pro tour last year, hit the first 11 greens in regulation and two-putted for pars as she coasted in with a one-over-par 73 and a 72-hole total of even par 288, one stroke off the tournament record.

"The Open really means that I beat the pros," she said. "I wanted to as an amateur and couldn't, and I turned pro, and have perfected my game a little better, and finally did it—which really makes me feel good."

Kathy Whitworth, who has won everything there is to win except the Open, shot a 72 Sunday and finished second with 295 while four players including defending champion Donna Caponi tied for third at 299.

Miss Caponi, whose bid for a record third straight tiele fizzled on the back nine of the 6,306-yard, par-72 Kahkwa Club course (she was 10-over-par on the back nine the last three days) had a 77 Sunday to join Mickey Wright, Jane Bialock and amateur Jane Bastanchury at 299.

It was only the third time Mrs. Carner played in the Open and the first time she finished better than 15th. She said she skipped the tournament, even when she was the amateur champion, because the U.S. Golf Association "was trying to force all the amateurs to play in the Open to qualify for the Curtis Cup and World teams."

"In the amateur ranks, you can't really let loose, you have to control yourself," she said. "Out here, I just get carried away, you know, I'm the first one to yell if a putt goes in and all that."

"I get more excited playing pro golf than I did as an amateur, although I loved amateur golf." Mrs. Carner, who had rounds of 70, 73 and 72 before Sunday, will vacation in Canada this week with her husband, Don, before she rejoins the tour next week in Philadelphia.

Before winning the Open, her only pro victory had come last year in the Wendell-West Open at Ocean Shores, Wash.

SMILING Mrs. JoAnne Gunderson Carner holds the trophy she won Sunday in the U.S. Women's Open. Mrs. Carner went into the lead the first day of the tournament and never relinquished it, finishing seven strokes ahead of her nearest competitor. (UPI telephoto)

Alex expected to appeal suspension

ANAHEIM (UPI)—The California Angels expect Alex Johnson to appeal his indefinite suspension and last year's American League batting champion apparently is going to do just that.

"If the suspension lasts 10 days," general manager Dick Walsh said Sunday, "I would assume he (Johnson) would appeal to the commissioner and then we would be required to prove why we suspended him."

Reached at his home in Detroit on the first day of his suspension announced Saturday, Johnson said he planned to go to the Major League Baseball Players Association and indicated he would ask for a hearing.

He answered "no comment" when asked if he thought he would play again this season. The post-Alex Johnson era began at Chicago and the Angels responded with a doubleheader victory over the White Sox to split a four-game series and end a 12-game road trip with a 5-8 record. The scores were 2-1 and 12-3.

Walsh, who suspended the controversial Johnson without pay for his failure to hustle on the field, said he didn't consider the 28-year-old outfielder "in our plans for the balance of the season" but added: "There's only one man to make him play to his potential."

U.S. ready for Soviet teams

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—The Russians are coming to town Friday and the question before the house today is: are America's track and field stars ready?

If they aren't it's too late to worry now, but the suspicion is, if last weekend's National AAU championships can be used as a yardstick, they are. Still, the visitors from behind the Iron Curtain have a flock of stars and no longer is their talent limited to field events and the distance races.

Neither is America's track strength strictly in the sprints. Development of distance racers and general improvement in the field events the last few years makes the Yanks more balanced than in the past.

It all adds up to a close fight Friday and Saturday at the University of California's Edwards Stadium, site of all the action. The competition won't be limited to the two old antagonists for in actuality it will be a three-way fight with a group of stars from around the world lumped together into a third team called appropriately the World All-Stars.

The Russians arrived from the East coast Sunday night about 100 strong, including their female stars.

Jim: "Today's hand shows JACOBY MODERN bidding. With nine high-card points, plus a 10-spot, North jumps to game opposite a 16-18 no-trump. South has nine easy tricks."

Oswald: "If North and South were playing a 15-17 no-trump, North would raise to two. South would consider his 16 points, plus a 10 and two nines, enough to continue to three no-trump and he would achieve the same result."

Jim: "The blunderbuss 15-18-point no-trumper would also be raised to two. He might go to three on the theory that there was a special providence to watch over him, but it is far more likely he would stop at two and miss the game."

You, South, hold:	♠ A 9 13	♥ Q 7 6 2	♦ 4 3	♣ 9 6 3

What do you do now?
A—Bid four hearts. Your partner is trying for game and you appear to have the hand to help him.

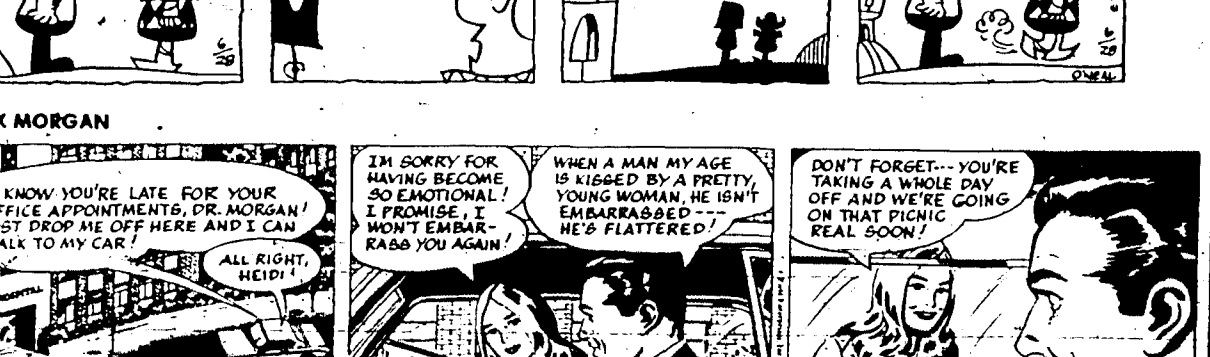

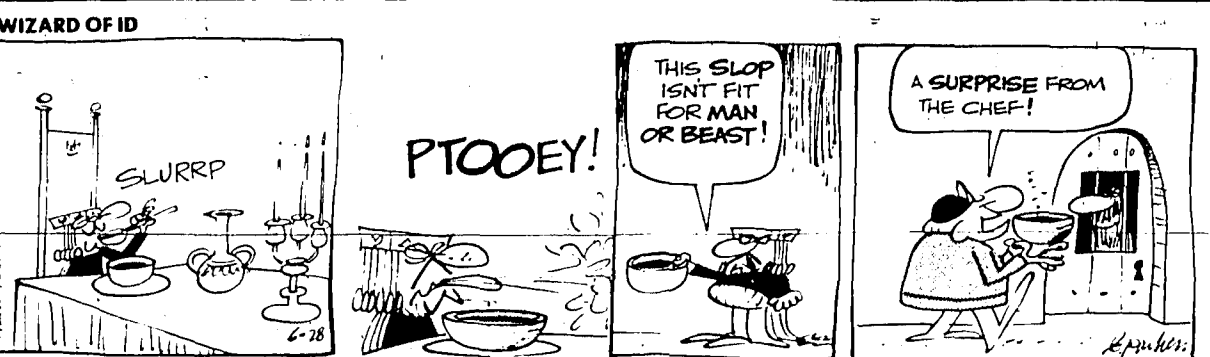

TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of passing over your two hearts West has bid three diamonds. This is passed around to you. What do you do now?
Answer Tomorrow

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "We have set point limits for JACOBY MODERN no-trump openings at the standard 16-18. In practice, we tend to reduce this a trifle. We don't open one no-trump with 18 points if the hand has any extra strength and we will open with 15 points if we have 10s and nines to back us up."

Jim: "Our limits are 16 to 18. The important point is that we don't go all the way from 15-18 and use a random no-trump."

Oswald: "Those players who use 15-18 points for no-trump openings end up in a lot of no-trumps," but they also lose effectiveness. They get too high with some or miss game on others."

PASS IT ON
by L.M. Boyd

RESEARCH REVEALS more than half the world's midgets take normal-sized matrimonial mates... WHY IS IT the girl who wears false eyelashes rarely makes a good cook?... IN ENGLAND, I'm told, the wall switches flip downward to turn on the lights, not upward as here... ODD NOT ONE woman in 1,000 can properly sharpen a pencil... IT ALSO HAS BEEN determined that the majority of striptease dancers are firstborn daughters.

IN THE HIGHLANDS of the Central Sahara live the nomadic tribesmen called the Teda. If a wife among them is humiliated by her husband in public, according to custom she has one extreme recourse. She may tear off all her clothes and fling them to the ground at his feet. By all, I mean all. She then marches straightaway in the altogether to her tent. Onlookers do not blame her. They feel the provocation must have been too much. They take the husband. And he's required to buy her a whole new costume. The stuff on the ground can never be worn again. Am surprised the garment industry hereabouts hasn't jumped on this promotion.

ON THE AVERAGE: A $1 bill lasts 18 months. A $5 bill, 20 months. A $10 bill, 33 months. A $20 bill, 42 months. A $50 bill, 108 months. A $100 bill, just 105 months. All right, how do you account for the fact the $50 bill outlasts the $100 bill?

CUSTOMER SERVICE: Q. "How do most people like their breakfast eggs cooked?" A. Easy over. That's what the restaurant men say. Or is it over easy?... Q. "How long can those walking catfish in Florida stay out of the water?" A. All day and night if they can get into dirt deep enough to keep their skin wet.... Q. "How many counties in Delaware?" A. Three. At low tide.

WOMEN-BORN-under-Scorpio, Libra or Aries definitely should be kissed goodnight on the first date. That's our Planet man's counsel. When a gentleman friend fails to do so, it's known these girls regard it as an affront to their sex appeal. Such firstdate goodnight kisses should not last more than 15 seconds, however. They merely ought to signify gentle affection, going a bit beyond simple respect but falling short of messy contamination.

IF YOU ARE 44 years old, you were born a year before the word "Yo-Yo" was coined by that Chicago toy manufacturer Donald F. Duncan... STUDIES SHOW that type of town most apt to attract the retired citizen is any state capital with a university in it... IT WAS NONE OTHER than George Santayana who said, "The young man who has not wept is a savage and the old man who will not laugh is a fool."

Your questions and comments are welcomed and will be used in PASS IT ON wherever possible. Please address your letters to L.M. Boyd, P.O. Box 17076, Fort Worth, Texas 76102.

London bird keepers have unique problem

LONDON (UPI)—The bird-keepers in London's royal parks have a problem their colleagues in other capitals might well envy.

No one comes in the noon day sun or the dark of night to kill their ducks or swans as they do in some cities. Things work differently in England. Here people bring their own pet geese and ducks to the parks and leave them to prosper.

"It's a bigger problem than if they took them away and ate them," said Jack Nerley, secretary of the Bird Sanctuaries Committee of the Department of the Environment. "They bring pets they don't want anymore or if they have too many. Sometimes they don't get along with the waterfowl we are breeding, but I guess it's still better than having someone attack them."

Nerley said he was aware some cities were plagued with vandals plaguing park wildlife, "but in Britain, we've never suffered from that."

How do they prevent it?

"It's not a question of prevention. We don't do anything at all about it. We take no protective measures. That type of thing is just so very, very rare," Nerley said.

There are five royal parks in central London. Regents Park, home of the city's zoo and bordered by the splendid terraces designed by the Regency architect Nash, is the largest with 670 acres.

Ducks and swans glide across the Serpentine in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens, a refuge of greenery and water bounded by Knightsbridge boutiques, the millionaires' row of Kensington and the luxury hotels of Park Lane.

A double row of plane trees border the Mall, the boulevard which runs from Trafalgar Square to Buckingham Palace splitting Green Park from St. James' Park. In the latter on Duck Island, Royal Birdkeeper Arthur May has run the main hatchery for the royal parks since 1958.

Charles II introduced ducks to what is now the park 300 years ago. Arid fountains and azalea bushes on Duck Island, May hatches 100 of the web-footed creatures a year, while caring for another 700 birds of 32 species.

"I think these must be the best fed ducks in the whole world," said the 60-year-old May, scattering some corn.

Oh yes, he said, park visitors pretty much leave the birds alone. But he remembered one dastardly exception.

That was when police picked up two men for getting a fully grown goose drunk on whiskey with a late supper in mind.

For the most part, troubles are few.

'Gunsmoke' cast happy over Doc's set visit

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—"Millie's back!"

The cry echoed around Stage 3 at CBS Studio Center and everyone came running. Electricians climbed down from their catwalks, grips and script girl scurried to say a warm hello.

Ken Curtis, Amanda Blake and Jim Arness whooped it up. "Millie" is Milburn Stone. He was visiting the "Gunsmoke" set for the first time since undergoing open heart surgery last March.

The affection of cast and crew was genuine. Stone was touched by their outpouring of delight and good wishes. But he reacted with the crusty attitude of old Doc Adams. "Dad burn it, why all the excitement?"

Ahead of Schedule

Stone, who will soon be 67, stayed briefly and returned to his home in the hills overlooking the San Fernando Valley and the studio in which the longest-running drama is hot (17 years on the air).

"I've felt better," Stone said, slipping into a favorite easy chair. "But I'm way ahead of schedule on getting well."

"I was dragged half-way through death's door after the operation. The surgery was successful, but in the intensive care unit I had three cardiac arrests in the first 48 hours. It was tough and go for 10 days. They even performed a tracheotomy on me. But I didn't know how much trouble I was in. They used adrenalin and oxygen to keep me alive."

When Stone checked into the University of Alabama Hospital last March he thought he would undergo tests and nothing more. But surgeons told him an operation was necessary.

"I'd had three heart attacks, and they thought a fourth one would kill me," he explained. "So I told them to go ahead and operate."

Asked why he went to Alabama for the delicate surgery, Stone replied: "I wanted the best money could afford. And all the specialists I talked to said this team was tops."

Feed grain aid ready for tribes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The federal government will donate free feed grain to help Indians in drought-stricken sections of the Southwest preserve their livestock herds, it announced Friday.

The Agriculture and Interior departments said the grain would be available in New Mexico and Arizona counties already declared drought disaster areas, and in San Juan County, Utah.

The Agriculture Department will deliver the grain to Indian tribes at several central points and the tribes, in turn, will pay the cost of distributing the grain locally to individual Indian livestock owners.

The free grain was authorized under 1967 White House order authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to extend such aid to Indians if he determines reservations are "acute distress areas."

Other farmers and ranchers in the same designated drought counties are eligible to buy government-owned feed grains at cut rates, but cannot get completely free grain in the absence of special presidential disaster proclamation.

As much as the surgeons, Stone credits prayer for pulling him through the post-operative crisis.

"I'm thoroughly convinced of the power of prayer," he said. "I never practiced it much. But I got more than 6,000 letters from viewers around the country and most of them said they were praying for me."

Stone will return to his role in "Gunsmoke" next September to finish out the season. He's not sure about the following year.

Now he is building his strength by taking walks, doing a few push-ups and riding a stationary bicycle—all under doctors' orders. He's on a health food diet. His weight is down to 150 pounds where he hopes to keep it the rest of his life.

"Look," Stone said, "a guy gets a reprieve like this and he's going to take care of himself. At least I am."

"And I'm going to try to answer all those letters one way or another. It was all those prayers that did it, damn right." And then he scratched his ear in imitation of salty Doc Adams.

Protesters march

SYDNEY (UPI) — Six-thousand antiwar demonstrators marched through Sydney Sunday to a rally at which American pacifist Dr. Benjamin Spock denounced U.S. participation in the Vietnam War. Spock said that because of the publication of secret Pentagon papers by U.S. newspapers "we have evidence of much greater deceitfulness now than we ever had before."

Walnuts are the oldest tree food used by man.

Fewer mistakes on applications

BOISE — Preliminary screening of applications for controlled hunt permits indicates fewer errors are being made, even though there still is time for submission of a corrected application, the Idaho Fish and Game Department said today.

However, it is planned that checking for errors and verifying eligibility will help convert to an automatic computer identification system, the use of social security numbers, according to A. Kay Belnap, chief of business administration.

He said the reason early application for controlled hunt permits is urged is to allow time for the correction of errors and filing of a new application within the deadline cut-off date, July 13 (office closes at 5 p.m.; postmark deadline, midnight same date).

Sale of nonresident combination hunting-fishing licenses ($135) is brisk at the Boise headquarters office of the department, but a supply of licenses of this class still is available. Because of the new quota system for nonresident license sales, the odds this year of residents drawing controlled hunt permits have been improved.

All correct, complete applications on hand at the closing date and hour, or properly postmarked, will be entered in the first public drawing for moose, sheep and goat, July 29.

If sufficient applications are not received for the first drawing, those applicants having submitted a complete, correct application will receive a permit and a second drawing will be held for the remaining permits.

Firms seal street

SHOSHONE — Three businesses have completed resealing jobs in front of their business office locations. They are Stowell's Texaco Station, John Lallis, at the Arco Richfield station, and Mike Urrutia at Mike's Cold Storage.

The Stewart Oiling and Paving Co., Boise, completed the work.

All three firms are on the combination of Greenwood Street and Highway 931
