Boise, Idaho 83706

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite the wage-price freeze, the Cost of Living Council ruled Saturday that car dealers may raise the prices of 1972 models to the highest level they charged for 1971 models.

The council made the decision in response to complaints from car dealers, resort operators, farm workers and others who said they were caught in an out-of-season low price or wage period Aug. 14 when President Nixon announced the freeze.

Elsewhere on the economic front:

Organized labor continued to criticize portions of the administration's economic program. The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees met in Minneapolis, Minn., to discuss strategy for opposing the wage-price policy.

In Japan, the dollar declined 5 to 6 per cent in relation to the Japanese yen in the first official trading there since Friday when the yen was allowed to float. That was still 10 per cent above the point where Nixon reportedly would like the dollar to settle in relation to the Japanese currency.

During a briefing, Arnold R. Weber, the council's executive director, said that firms that ordinarily raise prices during the period when the 90-day freeze is in effect may do so, provided:

The raise is large and associated with a specific date, such as the introduction of new cars in the fall, higher prices on the Labor Day weekend or the start of a harvest season.

The increase has been made for the past three years.

In addition to car dealers, the ruling is expected to assist resorts, in Florida and the Southwest and the Caribbean, which traditionally raise their room rates during the winter season, broadcast networks who charge higher advertising rates when new programs are introduced in the fall, and farm workers whose wages fluctuate between harvest seasons.

Weber said the government had received about 1,700 complaints since the freeze started but that most "evaporated" when persons understood the rules.

He said officials of the Office of Emergency Preparedness and the Internal Revenue Service, who enforce and explain the freeze, have had "remarkable success in what you might call jawboning" — convincing persons to abide by the rules without taking legal action.

The council said firms could choose either of two periods in determining their seasonal prices — the time between the usual seasonal rise and Nov. 13, 1970, or the 30 days preceding Aug. 14. The latter is the "base period" on which nonseasonal firms must figure their wages and prices.

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS

LARRY STAMPS, student body president for 1971-72 at the College of Southern Idaho, was one of the first potential voters to register at a first-ever vote-registration step in the CSI student registration line. League of Women Voters volunteer Cathy Noh explained the procedure.

Registered

CSI student body could top 3,000

TWIN FALLS — Although final registration figures are not yet tabulated, College of Southern Idaho officials believe the college's enrollment may top 3,000 for the first time. The figure would include day students, vocational trainees and adult nighttime students.

According to Admissions Director Gerry Moyerhoffer, CSI enrollment, which ended Friday, was the "heaviest ever."

He said registration this year included taking colored photographs of students for use on personal identification cards and in college files.

College classes will begin on Monday.

New courses include a professional nursing course leading to qualification for the state Registered Nurses examination, directed by Mrs. Judith Roberts, and a new vocational business "cluster" series of courses under the direction of Karl Black, former owner of Twin Falls Business College, which closed this summer.

The nursing course will provide 37 young women practical experience in Magic Valley hospitals along with their intensive classroom work. The course covers five semesters, including two college years and a summer school. The class size was limited by the number of "stations" available in the hospitals, according to Mrs. Roberts.

Other new features at CSI, designed to enhance educational opportunities, include the comprehensive Learning Materials Resource Center, which encompasses the college library, and a new audio-visual center, and a dial-access information retrieval system which allows instructors in Shields academic building to "order" tape-recorded material in the library to be played on a loudspeaker in each classroom. Each building on the CSI campus also now features a floor map and room-by-room listing of offices and instructors for the guidance of students and visitors alike. The building outline, indicating the specific position of each room, is found in the hallway on each floor of the Commons and Shields buildings.

The new dormitory, built last winter to house 100 men and 50 women, will be full, according to Housing Director Jack Simms. Students living in the dormitory will use the new dining hall on the second floor of the Commons, also completed last winter.

A new vocational-technical building, currently under construction, will house some of the college vocational courses when it is completed next spring.

All classes are scheduled to get under way beginning Monday with the start of the college's sixth year of operation.

Monday rockfest test set

HAILEY — Fifth Judicial District Judge Theron W. Ward will hear arguments on two matters here Monday afternoon which will tell the fate of the proposed Slaughterhouse Canyon rock festival slated near Bellevue on Labor Day Weekend.

The hearing was originally scheduled for 1 p.m. on a temporary restraining order issued by District Judge Charles Scoggin prohibiting the festival promoter Jack Teater from advertising and selling tickets to the event because of violation of a Bellevue City ordinance.

Lloyd Webb, Twin Falls, attorney for Teater said Friday afternoon Judge Ward had issued an alternative writ of prohibition directing Blaine County officials to refrain from enforcing the ordinance or to appear at 1:30 p.m. Monday to show cause why they should not be prohibited from enforcing the ordinance.

Arguments on both matters will be heard before Judge Ward, rather than Judge Scoggin, Webb said, as his client has also filed an affidavit of prejudice against Judge Scoggin.

All was quiet Saturday in Bellevue and in Slaughterhouse Gulch, one quarter mile from town where the festival is planned for Labor Day weekend and expected to attract 5,000 to 7,000 persons.

Friday afternoon, Dr. Wayne Carte, South Central Idaho Health District medical director, took water samples above the site and from the creek that meanders through the canyon. On Saturday trailer rigs hauled out two loads of hay from the canyon meadows.

No sanitation facilities have been set up as yet and no provisions for water and electricity have been made.

Teater, Kimberly, promoter for the event is selling the tickets at $11 each.

Jerome 2 grabbed for charges dropped triple murder

JEROME — A secret settlement has been reached in the case of former Public Works Director Mel Morris, who was charged with embezzlement after his arrest on July 30 for allegedly taking 23 gallons of gas from city supplies for his own use.

Morris appeared before Magistrate Russell C. Shaud of Aug. 18, with his attorney, Golden R. Bennett, Twin Falls, and Jerome City Attorney Richard Seely. A compromise settlement was reached at that time, according to court records.

Information concerning settlement of the case and dismissal of charges was withheld by the court clerks until Friday.

The charge against Morris was dismissed, and the city acknowledged the settlement, the details of which were not released. It was also agreed that Morris cannot be charged with the same count again.

Morris was scheduled to face trial on the charges.

Morris, who was discharged from his city position after the charges were filed, said he plans to stay in Jerome, working for an unspecified construction firm in the area.

Jerome Mayor Jack Russell refused to comment on the case.

The charges, which were for a misdemeanor offense under the new criminal code for Idaho, permitted the agreement according to court officials.

DRIGGS, Idaho (UPI) — A 23-year-old California man and his tattooed girlfriend were charged Saturday with first degree murder in the pistol slaying of three Texas farmworker brothers near here.

Teton County authorities said Michael Wren Hennpage, Sacramento was being treated for a fractured skull. Joyce Diane Turner, 22, Elko, Nev., was being held in Driggs.

The couple is charged with killing Ruben De Luna, 18; Antonio (cq), 17 and Roberto, 16, who were employed as peapickers on a local farm.

A cousin of the victims ran a half-mile into town with a .38 caliber bullet in his head to tell authorities of the killings. Town Marshal Melvin Jones was wounded when he returned to the scene of the slayings with the youth.

The girl, who calls herself "Angel" and wears a blug tattoo across her chest saying "Property of Evil," was found in a car with Hennpage on the road to a ski resort.

Dr. Kitchener Head of Driggs said Richard De Luna, 18, the cousin, led him and Jones to the area early Saturday morning.

As they approached the car parked with its headlights on, DeLuna said, "That's the car with the people that will kill you," and bolted from the truck.

Russ pledges thaw

BERLIN (UPI)—Western Allied diplomatic sources said Saturday the Russians in the Big Four agreement on Berlin talks expected to end before Christmas.

The Western sources said the Soviet pledge was contained in the following three provisions of the agreement:

—The four powers will attempt to eliminate tension and prevent complications in the area under question.

—The four governments agree that in recognition of their pledges under the charter of the United Nations there should be no threats or use of force in this area and that building in the American sector, the sources said.

Then East and West German officials will work out details in talks expected to end before Christmas.

The Western sources said the Soviet pledge was contained in the following three provisions of the agreement:

—The four powers will attempt to eliminate tension and prevent complications in the area under question.

—The four governments agree that in recognition of their pledges under the charter of the United Nations there should be no threats or use of force in this area and that building in the American peaceful means.

—The four powers will respect their individual and mutual rights and responsibilities which remain unchanged.

The sources said the four powers also pledged they would make no attempt to unilaterally change the Berlin situation and they would hold four power consultations if any of the four powers considered the agreement violated.

School to start

By BONNIE HAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — School begins here Monday morning, but teachers who return to work will do so under a cloud of confusion as to salaries.

Superintendent George Staudacher of the Twin Falls District said Friday that if no definite instructions are received from the Idaho Department of Education by Sept. 23, the first regular pay period for teachers in Twin Falls, teachers will be paid on the basis of their salaries last year.

He made the announcement Friday during an orientation meeting of all teachers of the district.

Ronald Finn, president of the Idaho Education Association, Boise, said Saturday he believes where contracts were negotiated on a district-wide basis, teachers will be entitled to their regular raises.

He said the position on teacher pay raises taken by the Cost of Living Council Friday has "confused the issue."

Finn said he had requested a "yes or no" statement from the council as to whether or not Idaho teachers would get pay raises negotiated last spring.

The reply from the council was that in the event of a "master" system, teachers with previously negotiated contracts would receive the increases. Finn said Idaho has no master system and in most cases every teacher signs a contract. However, Finn said, where teachers negotiate on a district basis, they should be entitled to the raises.

In Twin Falls, salary increases range from $300 to $500 per year, depending on the position and tenure, Staudacher said.

Teachers of the system heard an address Friday by Dean Richard Willey, College of Education, Idaho State University. He urged they consider the learning ability of the individual student and accept the fact that each child can learn to some degree and must be taught accordingly.

Staudacher said high school students are to meet Monday at 9 a.m. in the gymnasium for their homeroom assignments.

In the elementary schools, class lists will be posted in each school and in the junior high schools, room assignments will be made in the principals' offices.

S. Viet election begins

SAIGON (UPI)—Blaring sirens in each metropolitan area signaled the start of voting Sunday in South Vietnam's first national assembly election since 1967.

Early voter turnout was reported light, but the hot and sunny weather was expected to encourage voters to go to the polls. President Nguyen Van Thieu was scheduled to vote at mid-morning at central Saigon's City Hall.

Communist activity initially was reported light. A fire bomb was hurled into a Nationalist Chinese Embassy truck Saturday night while it was parked outside a U.S. Agency for International Development compound, but no one was injured. The terrorists escaped on a motorcycle. Security was tight overall.

There are 1,242 candidates nationwide seeking the 150 seats — an average of better than seven candidates for each seat. Results from the 7,332 polling stations in the country's 36 voting constituencies were expected to be known unofficially within hours after the polls close Sunday night on the first assembly election since 1967.

Ferry burns off Italy

BRINDISI, Italy (UPI)—The Greek ferry "Heleanna" with more than 1,100 persons aboard burned from stern to stern Saturday in the Adriatic Sea. Hundreds of panic-stricken passengers leaped overboard and swam to rescue vessels.

Italian naval authorities said at least 35 persons died in the inferno. Another 186 persons were missing.

Adman eyes Jordan seat

POCATELLO (UPI) — F. W. "Bill" Bergeson, a Pocatello advertising executive, formally announced his candidacy Saturday for the Senate seat of Sen. Lon B. Jordan, R-Idaho.

Bergeson, a former Republican state senator from Blackfoot, is currently the chairman of the Barre County Republican Central Committee.

He is supported by a group called "Citizens for Reliable Representation," headed by former state Sen. Lloyd Barron, R-Fairfield.

Barron said, "Having served in the Idaho Senate with Bill Bergeson, I know him to be a reliable and capable legislator."

Shooting ires weapons foes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—On a spring night this year in Silver Spring, Md., federal Treasury agents and county police swung a battering ram six times and smashed in an apartment door.

The tenant, Kenyon F. Ballew, a newspaper press room employe and gun collector, seized an antique cap and ball pistol.

Ballew fired once. The raiders fired eight times. At the end of the exchange, Ballew, 27, lay with a bullet in his brain.

The incident June 7 at a low income housing development in the suburb of the District of Columbia, set off a chain of events that reached into President Nixon's Cabinet and forged an unusual alliance between firearms groups and civil libertarians.

Today, Ballew still is in a Washington, D.C., hospital. His attorney, John T. Bonner, says Ballew cannot speak and cannot use his right arm or leg.

The Treasury Department has recommended that Ballew be prosecuted for illegal possession of hand grenades and sawed-off shotguns "should his physical condition permit."

But Bonner has started a nationwide fund drive for Ballew. Part of the money will come from the sale of 10,000 new bumper stickers.

"Ken Ballew could be you — repeat the 1968 Gun Control Act," the stickers read.

And civil libertarians have been asking why the lawmen, who were armed with a search warrant, found it necessary to batter-down Ballew's door to serve the warrant.

Agents from the Treasury Department and the Montgomery County, Md., police, made the raid under the 1968 federal Gun Control Act, which prohibits the possession of destructive devices. They had a warrant to search for hand grenades.

The raiders reported finding four hand grenades in the apartment. All of them were inert, but a Treasury Department report made from an investigation order by Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said all could have been activated by Mrs. Tennant.

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Jessie A. Tennant, 57, Twin Falls, died Friday night in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after a brief illness.

Born July 26, 1914 in Seneca, Neb., she moved to Idaho in 1941 from Broken Bow, Neb. She married Howard W. Tennant in Grand Island, Neb. Sept. 16, 1932.

the addition of gun powder, which was in the apartment. The report said county police also removed Ballew's entire collection, which included 26 cap and ball pistols, rifles, shotguns and flintlock rifles. The investigators said 16 of the guns were loaded.

Authorities also have been criticized for using plainclothesmen in the raid. The investigation showed five of the six raiders — three Treasury agents and three county policemen — wore civilian clothing.

Ballew's wife, Saralouise, who was in the apartment, said she believed the law enforcement officers were "hippies" or "racketeers."

William H. Seals, the agent who was first to enter the apartment, told investigators he knocked on the metal door several times and shouted loudly, "Federal officers with a search warrant. Open up!"

The Treasury report said the agents heard "either scuffling inside or a voice saying something they could not understand." It said they then decided to batter down the door.

But another policeman who was stationed at the other apartment door said he heard a woman's voice inside shouting, "Who are you... They are breaking in and how do I know you're police?"

When the officers started battering in the door, Ballew was taking a bath and his wife was clad only in panties.

Bennett Cerf, humorist, dies

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. (UPI)—Bennett Cerf, the publisher who cofounded Random House but was best known to millions of Americans for his jokebooks and television appearances as a punning panelist on "What's My Line?" died late Friday night at his Westchester County home. He was 73.

Cerf, who had been released earlier this week from Northern Westchester Hospital, collapsed shortly before midnight and was dead—by the time an ambulance arrived at his home.

A tall pipe-smoking, well-talored man with an urbane manner and Cheshire cat grin, Cerf headed one of the nation's most prosperous and prestigious publishing houses for more than four decades. His list of authors included Eugene O'Neill, William Faulkner, Sinclair Lewis, John O'Hara, Truman Capote, Christopher Isherwood and Andre Malraux. But it was his lectures, columns, 14 anthologies of humor and his regular appearances with panelists Arlene Francis and Dorothy Kilgallen and moderator John Charles Daly on the long-running Sunday night television show that won him personal fame.

Born May 25, 1898, in New York City to a lithographer and the daughter of a wealthy tobacco dealer, Cerf was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Columbia College, where he edited the humor magazine, the Jester, and wrote a column for the campus newspaper, the Spectator.

His first job was as a reporter on the New York Herald Tribune and his second was with a Wall Street brokerage firm, but with his third—as vice president of the publishing firm of Boni & Liveright—he found his field.

In 1925, Cerf and a boyhood friend, Donald S. Klopfer, bought Boni & Liveright's list of 100 Modern Library titles for $25,000. Two years later they began publishing books "at random"—hence the name of their new publishing house—starting with a version of Voltaire's "Candide" illustrated by Rockwell Kent. In two and a half years they had made back their initial investment.

Cerf moved from the post of president of Random House in 1966, becoming chairman and chief executive officer. "It is time for a new group to take over while the old crowd is still around so that there won't be any overnight executive crisis," he said.

Cerf collected jokes wherever he went, jotting down punch lines and tossing them into a drawer until he had enough for a book or needed one for a column or lecture.

"The time may come when authors looking for a publisher will shun me because they think I am too busy trying my own eggs to sell their books, he once said. "But that hasn't happened yet. When it does, I will drop the joke books."

For Cerf, who considered that "a hearty belly-laugh is one of the beautiful sounds in the world," that time never came.

Chad hits Libya for coup aid

FORT-LAMY, Chad (UPI)—Chad accused Libya Saturday of backing an unsuccessful coup to tumble President Francois Tombalbaye and announced the leader of the revolt had committed suicide while under police interrogation.

Tombalbaye, whose central African country is dominated by the Sahara Desert, severed diplomatic relations with Libya and ordered the charge d'affaires to return to Tripoli.

Tanks rattled through the wide and almost deserted streets of Fort Lamy and the radio station, post office and airport were under heavy army guard.

Government officials gave few details of the coup. Its leader had committed suicide and "two men of foreign origin" were under arrest, they said.

The 53-year-old president has faced a constant revolt by the northern Tibetan tribesmen for the past six years.

The council is to meet to discuss a Jordanian complaint about Israel's action in Jerusalem.

Sources in Cairo, quoted by the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram, said Egyptian Ambassador Mohammed Hassan el-Zayyat would try to expand the discussions into consideration of a resolution to halt Israel's "aggressive acts in Jerusalem which are aimed at judging the city."

They said Egypt also would ask to take part in the debate, although not a council member. If this was approved, it would

WASHINGTON — Pressure on Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine by the Democratic party's left fringe poses a rising threat to his support from the center, a threat epitomized by two recent efforts, one hard-line, the other soft-line, by prominent liberals. The hard-line effort came from Joseph Rauh, the Washington lawyer and long-time leader of Americans for Democratic Action (ADA). The soft-line play was from Donald Peterson, a left-liberal Democrat now national committeeman from Wisconsin. Their motives were identical: to pressure Muskie out of the center. What makes this dangerous to Muskie is the susceptibility of him and his staff to pressure from the left. Despite this, Muskie's highest advisers believe that public criticism from the left actually is a political asset and that his centrist image must be maintained. Thus, the Muskie campaign faces a continuing test: to prevent his romantic attachment to the left from being followed so far that it undermines the broad-based appeal which now makes Muskie President Nixon's most likely opponent. The blunt pressure from Rauh was disturbing to some Muskie operatives. In an Aug. 6 letter to fellow liberals, Rauh declared: "Unfortunately, the Democratic party today exhibits an unmistakable trend towards the center." He then implies that Muskie, less liberal than some other candidates, may become the disastrous candidate of the center. Consequently, Rauh advises fellow liberals to "get as many votes as possible in the primaries for the most liberal candidates available" and pose a fourth-party threat. But Rauh's purpose is not to defeat Muskie. Rather, he candidly describes his motive: "Simply put, support for the most liberal candidates and (convention) delegates can only create pressure from the left. Possibly it will push Muskie to more vigorous positions in both the foreign and domestic fields than he seems able to take under the proddings of Evans and Novak from the right. Possibly, if he were to win the nomination, it would affect his choice of a running-mate." The Muskie camp's reaction was outrage. Thus, in a letter to liberals by former Ambassador James Loeb, one of Rauh's old ADA comrades and now a fulltime Muskie booster, Loeb accused Rauh of a "personal attack" on Muskie "involving code words, half-truths, irrelevances and even some obvious unintentional falsehoods." The outrage was based not on Rauh's wish to fully ideologize the Democratic party but on his lack of appreciation of Muskie's liberalism. Thus, Loeb's answering letter says "Ed Muskie is one helluva liberal guy," and denies he is a centrist by pointing to his 92.5 per cent ADA voting record. Such affirmation is at least partly what Rauh sought. But Peterson's soft-line may ultimately be more effective. Far to Muskie's left, he recently asked for a private meeting with Muskie. Had Muskie's own leaders in Wisconsin been consulted, he would have been advised to give Peterson short shrift. Instead, Muskie saw Peterson and gave thoughtful answers to five Peterson questions concerning Vietnam, defense spending, party reform, Muskie's possible running-mate and what Muskie thinks about Democrats of the Peterson stripe. Muskie's answers were so amiable that Peterson departed expressing satisfaction and a possibility he might soon endorse Muskie. Whether he does or not, the incident undermined the Muskie campaign's desire to ingratiate itself with the party's left fringe while ignoring the cost in national support. While Muskie operatives privately laud the centrist position, they spend inordinate time wooing the left. Further, they seem to listen more carefully to the left's thundering veto of Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington for Vice President than to advice by many state party leaders that Muskie-Jackson could be a dream ticket. In truth, most of Muskie's top staffers feel more at home with Joe Rauh or Don Peterson than with powerful county chairman. Muskie's difficult task is to make sure this romantic affinity is not carried to the point of self-destruction as Richard M. Nixon's challenger,

A Lousy View

The view is lousy. That's the one word which adequately describes any of the four highway entrances to the City of Twin Falls. Living here, we probably get used to the clutter, dirt, evidence of poor planning and general lack of beauty coming into town. But the casual visitors — the tourists, for instance — do not. The last of the four entrances to be given up to what some call progress is the Blue Lakes Boulevard entrance. In days past it was a beautiful, tree-lined roadway dominated by stately homes and well-kept fields. No longer is this the case. So now Twin Falls has joined scores of other communities with "front doors" leaving a lot to be desired. It didn't need to end up this way but it did. Next time you take a drive, why not go far enough out of town so you can get a good view when you come back in? It is no longer the city beautiful. Like we said — it's a lousy view from any direction.

"OF COURSE, THERE'S BOUND TO BE A FEW ISOLATED COMPLAINTS"

ANDREW TULLY

On Momentum

(Editor's Note: Andrew Tully is on vacation. During his absence his column will be written by leading figures on the Washington governmental and political scene.) By LAWRENCE F. O'BRIEN Democratic National Chairman What the Democratic Party does between now and the Democratic National Convention in July of 1972 could well determine the outcome of the next Presidential election. From the Democratic Party viewpoint, the need is immediate to begin to develop a national momentum — carrying with it organization, finances, issues, registration — that will be so well-developed by convention time that the actual Presidential campaign will be virtually ready to go the morning after the candidate is nominated. The nomination at Miami Beach, in short, should be viewed as not the beginning of the 1972 campaign, but the beginning of the final crucial stage of a national effort that got underway months earlier. (It will be an apt beginning, too, with a convention bringing together under its new reforms the most democratic and representative body ever to nominate a major party's Presidential candidate.) The warning, then, is clear: For Democrats to look upon the 1972 Presidential election as a job that begins two months before election day is virtually to assure the reelection of Richard Nixon. As the director of two Presidential campaigns, I remember only too well how the momentary euphoria of my candidate's nomination was shattered — practically the next morning — by the sudden realization that if there was to be a workable national campaign organization, we would have to fashion it ourselves — and in desperate haste. In neither case had the national party foreseen the need to build even a skeleton of a workable political organization — including such unglamorous but indispensable equipment as a research bank that would tell the candidate's staff what the opponent and his party had been saying and doing that merited public comment. In 1960, we were lucky. The nominating convention was held early in July — as next year's will be, for this very reason — and the Kennedy organization had time to (a) catch its breath, and (b) build the organization that had been so badly neglected. Even then, the election was a close, close call. In 1968, facing the same problem of lack of national organization — and some other problems, too — we had something like one long weekend after the nomination to Jerry-build, using yellow legal pads and a telephone, a structure that might at least get us into the opening of the campaign a short few days off. The result of the election dramatizes the point I'm making. If I do nothing else as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, I'm going to see to it that the first piece of news Candidate X receives when he wakes up that glorious morning in Miami Beach is something like this: "Here's your organization. It's ready to go. Good luck." Actually, while the news will be delightful for that candidate, it will be not all that surprising. Because in two unprecedented meetings this year — to be followed by others after the summer break — I have brought together all of the major Presidential contenders to ensure, among other things, that they have a clear voice in the operations of the Democratic National Committee and its chairman as we prepare for convention '72. Without exception, their enthusiasm and cooperation have not only indicated the recognition of the urgent need for an early start on the campaign, but have been one of the most dramatic signs of the new spirit of unity in the Democratic party.

Hillbillies

"Them hillbillies is 'mountain willies' now!" What do you want — good grammar — or money? Sophisticated singer Vic Damone, filing bankruptcy, complained that he'd received "bad income tax advice" and that he had "been duped into signing" somebody's else's bank note. Unfortunately, I put considerable trust in people who took advantage of my position, both socially and financially. Says he hopes "the public will understand." Through the tax courts have been passing an endless procession of fallen stars: Mickey Rooney, Dick Haymes, Walter Matthau. It's almost become axiomatic that the performer is a bad businessman. Yet notable exceptions to this rule include many of those country musicians. Millionaire Gene Autry is the classic example. It's only a slight exaggeration to say that Eddie Arnold owns "half the real estate in Nashville." Other country music millionaires include Marty Robbins and Webb Pierce. Ray Acuff and his astute wife have a private mint. Buck Owens owns three radio stations, among other holdings. Porter Wagner lives modestly but had the means to loan Jimmy Dean $1 million cash to start that sausage factory. The overseas legions of some show business luminaries lead them to believe their own "press agents." They imagine all that income is appropriate to their immense talent. And they are inclined to forget "all the taxes." It even happened to such stars of the first magnitude as Ethel Barrymore who was finally allowed by the government to settle her huge tax debt for a

Questions

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send your booklet on fatal hernia, for which I enclose 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope. My doctor told me it was spasms in the stomach. Then after I had pain in my chest and down the arm, he took an E.K.G. and said he was positive it was a hernia. Should I have X-rays or take his word for it? Is this something you can live with? I am 38. Is it possible to have a baby with such a hernia? I'm very depressed. I have two children and would like to see them grow up. — Mrs. S. With a satisfactory E.K.G., I don't see the necessity of X-rays, since I take it for granted that you have all the usual symptoms of fatal hernia. Stomach spasms are often a part of fatal hernia, although that isn't the entire picture. The booklet will explain it. You are much too pessimistic. Fatal hernia can be most annoying, until you learn to control it, but it isn't going to stop you from seeing your youngsters grow up. control pills, liver ailments, various other things can cause skin discoloration, including the sun. But I don't know that digestive problems do, except when liver disease causes jaundice. My wife's doctor, however, said this means it didn't "take" and should be done over. Who's right? — H.R.B. You needn't (and generally won't) develop a new scar when you have a booster vaccination. Nearly all of us retain some degree of protection from past vaccinations, much or not so much. If a tiny papule, or "blister," appears, that indicates a "take." Without this sign, it may mean a failure and a repeat vaccination with another batch of vaccine is advisable. If there is no reaction, or papule, the second time, then you probably really are immune to the extent that you can't have a "take."

BERRY'S WORLD

"On the other hand, if the Food and Drug Administration expands its food inspection operations, they'll probably find even MORE things we can't eat!"

Len Jordan

Len Jordan has had a long and distinguished career in government. If there is one man in Idaho who is close to being respected, by everyone it just has to be Senator Jordan. His decision to retire came as a bombshell because it was generally believed he would seek another term. The announcement of his plans, however, made nearly 14 months ahead of the election, was typical of the thinking of this man. This step, he said, would enable others seeking the post to have adequate time to make their plans. Senator Jordan will be missed in the Senate. His years as a member of that body have been highlighted by cooperation with anyone interested in the betterment of the State of Idaho. He will be a hard man to replace. We hate to see him retire but feel that he has earned that right. We are proud of Len Jordan. We wish him well.

Poem From Vietnam

The sun rises in the east A beautiful day to say the least. A new day — a new morning, Men will die today without warning. Some will die in a fiery blast, Some will die in the grass, Some will die in the traffic stream, Some will die by a jungle stream. Some will die because they can't see that some die to keep us free! Some will die for no cause. Some will die because they gave their all. All these men will die. Who will be the ones to cry? A mother in her woe? A wife whose love is old? A father who loves his son? A daughter who thinks he is the only one? A girl friend whose love is gone to help Fight for those who are strong? They die for a nation in strife. They leave behind mothers, fathers, wives. distribution to a large assembly of party officials, members of the press and friends. Said the announcement: "We feel that the time has come for action in American politics. We are a nation that has become bogged in bureaucratic detail. Action is the word and Evel Knievel is our man. The nation cries for action. Wherever you go you hear the people asking "where is the action? Well, Evel is the man that can lead the way. He has that special talent for leaping over obstacles, for achieving his goals, and a peculiar brand of lunacy. We fight fire with fire, we can fight lunacy with lunacy." So there you have it. And, for your information, the candidate is scheduled to make a motorcycle leap across the Snake River north of Twin Falls on Labor Day, 1972. We almost forgot. The campaign slogan? Yep — it's "damn the bureaucrats, full throttle ahead."

Return Of The Missile Gap

Great Concern

Embarrassed

Editor, Times-News:

The crisis in America's economy should cause great concern to all thinking Americans. For a century the entire world has held the dollar as a pillar of strength. Now we find fear for its future, both at home and abroad, and rightfully so.

President Nixon and many other high ranking politicians are blaming foreigners with speculating in money matters as the cause of our plight. If they are, it can only be due to the precarious position liberal politics has placed us in. No person, or nation can continue indefinitely spending more than is taken in. Economists the country over are claiming that no danger is connected with deficit spending. "It is a debt owed to ourselves" is the theory being used. If this be true, why do we now spend considerably more for interest on indebtedness than what the entire cost of running the federal government was a few years ago? Or why can the foreigners who seemingly hold 50 billion dollars redeemable in non-existent gold reserves panic us as they have done for the past six months?

I hope that all American have been able to grasp the lack of direction so noticeable in the Nixon administration during the past two weeks. Never has political double talk been so pronounced. Less than one week ago a bill was signed committing huge sums of money and authorizing employment of many thousands of new government employees, supposedly needed to bolster the economy. On Sunday evening the president used his powers of office to invoke controls needed to fight inflation and check the precarious position of the dollar. Amongst his plans is the reduction of some 5 billion dollars from the budget, and supposedly, plans to lay off large numbers of government employees.

Liberals in congress and other high offices have for forty years followed a policy of spending government funds with no thought of a genuine need for the services or materials being purchased. Their sole intent has been to circulate money. Money has been the answer to all problems. These men now claim a sudden concern as we see the handwriting on the wall. They ask what is the answer to the problems. Money problems will continue to plague America even with this week's actions.

Is prosperity so dear and sacrifice so bitter that we would destroy America in order to pursue continued good times? The American Party doesn't have all of the answers, but it has been advocating truths since its beginning. It is time that legislators set proper examples by using wisdom in legislation and economy in office, that the role of economy maker for the nation and financier for the world be removed from our government, that unions be trimmed of their destructive powers, that welfare come not from the government, but from each of us by our own concern for each other, that debts be retired and taxes reduced. It is better that we face a depression now if reversing bad policies brings one on than bring total destruction upon ourselves by continuing the present direction we are following. The government role of financier must be stopped.

Nolan Victor,
State Chairman
American Party of Idaho

Editor, Times-News:

After more than 20 years of supporting, voting and working Republican, I will have to admit that at this time I am embarrassed. Douglas Kramer proved to be the last straw. I have been very disenchanted for the past six years but not to the point where I was ashamed to admit that I was a Republican.

Mr. Kramer's vicious and immature attack on the Governor is a new low in political maneuvering. Some of the points he made in his letter on the failure of Governor Andrus to keep campaign promises were proposals which were presented to the legislature, and blocked by the Republicans simply because they were proposed by a Democrat.

I wonder if Mr. Kramer would hobble a horse and then whip it because it could not run? This seems to be an apt analogy according to Mr. Kramer's letter to the editor, comparing it with his snide innuendoes.

I want no part of a party that puts the party before the public. This is the Republican party out. The Idaho party at any rate.

The only reason I can see for such an attack on a public official is to provide a new target for the members of the party to stop the bickering within the party. This type of thing, and the internal conflict, has caused me to take a good long look at the other parties. I find that I cannot accept the Democrats as a whole since they continue to support Senator Frank Church after the Church-Cooper amendment. This was the proposal which openly attempted to protect Vietnam bases by withholding funds from the armed forces. These were bases which provided safety zones for attacking forces where our troops could not follow. As a former infantryman this does not set well with me. Enough men get killed without providing protected areas for the enemy.

In the final analysis I find that the American Independent Party is not the great monster the opposing parties have built it up to be.

All parties have their radical element - in fact, some of the radicals think I am radical. Within the American Independent Party I find a group of people who are more interested in the welfare of our nation than in the welfare of the party. I find a group of people who support a candidate because of his views and not because of his party. I find a group of people who will support a man in office no matter which party he belongs to as long as he does a good job and has the best interests of the country at heart.

I did not find the extremism, radicalism and far right element which, quite frankly, I expected. I found instead a bunch of good, honest, hard-working and dedicated Americans who are worried about the welfare of our country and are willing to try and do something about it. I would much rather be associated with a people who are concerned about the national problems than they are with in-party problems. With a group of people who are more interested in a strong and united nation than in party power.

I am going to continue my support of Governor Andrus and commend him for his good work even though the Republicans have placed road blocks in his path.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If an international contest were held today to determine which of the superpowers had the most decisive missile, the United States would win—but not by much.

But if the same contest were held a decade hence, the outcome might not be the same.

This clear consensus is the result of a private survey made by this correspondent

Defense In the '70s

In the course of a six-month study of the American and Soviet military establishments

Don't be surprised if the old "missile gap" returns to the headlines, because many military strategists have begun to worry about it again.

The facts, at the moment, are these:

1. American missiles are more accurate than are Soviet varieties and are more invulnerable to enemy attack.

2. American naval power is superior to the Soviet Union's, mainly because the U.S. Navy has had years of first-hand war experience. The Soviet navy has had no actual battle testing in 26 years.

3. The U.S. Army has also stood the test of battle for many years, a plus factor, but has also been demoralized because of Vietnam, a minus factor.

4. The Soviet trend line is moving up at a steady rate in missile building, submarine and ship construction and in military space expeditions. The growth rate in numbers and, in some cases, technology, has been greater than the U.S. rate.

American strategists point out that the development of military technology in the Soviet Union and the accompanying research are moving ahead too rapidly for comfort.

In most situations, however, the Soviet Union is doing no more than catching up to the American position. No one yet knows where they will go when they do catch up, and by the time this is learned (the state of the intelligence arts being what it is), it could be too late to react.

But what makes many observers skeptical about this sort of information is that the country has been through the "missile gap" exercise before.

For example, in the 1950s, it was argued in very high places that there would soon be a bomber gap. Indications were that the Soviet Union had embarked on large-scale bomber construction.

So the U.S. government ordered a hurry-up multi-billion dollar bomber program to combat the impending threat. Except that the Soviet Union did not build the bombers. They did build missiles.

In 1960, Sen. Stuart Symington "leaked" information that the Soviet Union would soon surpass the United States in intercontinental missiles and the "missile gap" was born.

Again, the United States crashed into a missile-building program. But the "missile gap" never developed, if it ever actually existed in the first place.

And there was Sputnik. The Russians not only scored a clear space beat but also an education and propaganda triumph. The tiny satellite demonstrated that the Soviet Union could do what the Americans had not yet done. "The rocket race" began and the Americans rushed to catch up and, ultimately, win the contest—at a cost not yet calculated.

Once again, we are being warned of a "missile gap" in the form of a new Soviet first-strike capability, the SS-9 ICBM and a possible improvement which may be off the drawing boards.

Obviously, it is no wonder that many are skeptical of the warnings about an impending missile gap, especially when enunciated at budget times.

As Herbert Scoville, former CIA deputy director told the Senate Armed Services Committee, "In essence, all across the threat to the U.S. deterrent is less than was estimated in 1969 and the United States already has programs in being, or available for rapid deployment if required, which can insure the maintenance of a secure deterrent for the foreseeable future."

If one follows the odds, then, it's likely there again be no "missile gap."

But the question remains: Can the U.S. government follow the odds when so much is at stake? Some men remain cautious.

If this government overreacts by building armaments which turn out to be unnecessary, the American long-term defense posture is seriously weakened. By spending billions on "today's" weapons, there is less to spend on long-term research and development.

If, on the other hand, the warnings are finally correct, the security of the country is seriously weakened.

It is a dilemma which this country is now facing.

Breath Of Relief

BRUCE BLOSSAT

Editor, Times-News:

Many who call themselves "moderates" and even many conservatives settled back and sighed a breath of relief when President Nixon was elected, reasoning that the accelerating pace at which the United States was approaching the socialist state, under preceding Democratic regimes, would now not only be slowed down, but stopped.

Alan L. Otten, staff reporter for the Wall Street Journal, in the August 17 issue, concerning President Nixon's far-ranging economic package, states: "There's certainly no doubt but that the President's sudden moves have left his political opposition stranded and gasping for air. Mr. Nixon bought just about every item on the shopping list of the top Democratic presidential candidates and their economic advisers, and he even added a few of his own."

The American Party has contended since its inception that there is no difference between the Republican and Democratic parties - that the American Party is in reality the "second" party - the only party giving the voter a choice between rampant liberalism and a return to constitutional government.

The real, underlying cause of inflation is irresponsible government spending, no matter how hard the administration may try to find other scapegoats. President Nixon and the majority of those elected to the present Congress have full responsibility for the continuation and acceleration of an already inflated system.

For instance, in 1969 non-defense federal outlays were $48,254,505,857. In 1970 they were $110 billion!

And on July 27 the House of Representatives voted a 39 per cent budget increase for "agriculture-environmental and consumer protection programs" and a 17 per cent increase over last year's appropriation for the Department of Labor and for all programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (except aid to education). These two appropriation bills alone represented an increase of more than one and one-half billion dollars over this year's budget (already a huge increase over last year's) in the face of a deficit now estimated at $23 billion.

But President Nixon now finds it easier and more expedient, rather than having exercised restraint in the past of a spend-happy congress, to tipple socialistic wage-price controls for 90 days (just 90 days, want to bet?).

Before President Nixon was elected, he called for "military superiority." After election, he stated that "military sufficiency" would be acceptable. The sad fact is that the United States is continuing to disarm unilaterally, at a rapid rate, while Russia builds up her military power with great speed.

Before President Nixon was elected, he stated he did not believe we should trade with Red China nor that she should be accepted into the United Nations. His stand towards Red China now is very comradely. As a Senator, he castigated the Geneva Treaty, which would destroy the sovereignty of the United States. Now he pushes hard for its ratification.

These are only a few of the issues at hand. There is an old story that goes something like this: "What's the difference between a duck?" and the answer, "Its one leg is both the same." The proof of the party is in the pudding, and the pudding, be it Republican or Democrat, is "all the same."

The American Party determines to be a potent force in the coming election. We welcome into our ranks those patriots who would return American to the Americans.

Dismay

Editor, Times-News: Whenever I tell people that I grow up in the Twin Falls area, they always exclaim, "What a beautiful city!" all those wonderful tree-lined avenues and well-kept homes.

Recently I returned to Twin Falls and noted with dismay that many of the maples and elms lining the northern approach to the city are dying or are being removed in the wake of progress.

Can't something be done to save these stately trees and to preserve the image of your city? Must every city in Idaho beak in the plastic atmosphere of artificiality?

The Face-Off

WASHINGTON - The Moscow-Peking showdown, when it comes, may be in South Asia, not on the Russo-Chinese border.

For here the Soviet Union and Communist China confront each other in much the same way as do Russia and the United States in the Middle East, which President Nixon has called our "most dangerous" problem.

The South Asia confrontation is of the most dangerous type, for the real adversaries face each other through client states—Russia backing India and China backing Pakistan. And neither Moscow nor Peking has firm control over its client, so that it may be most difficult to pull back from a crisis.

The positions of India and Pakistan are seemingly irreconcilable. Antagonisms run too deep and have lasted too long.

As in the Middle East there are smoldering religious differences.

It is no accident, therefore, that the Kissinger trip to Peking was followed closely by a Russo-India defense treaty obviously aimed at Pakistan and the People's Republic of China.

But India and Pakistan are not the only Asian battlegrounds. Take Ceylon, where Russia has been angling for a naval base, where China has heavily infiltrated.

Then there is Indochina, where the Soviet Union is now attempting to replace the discredited Chinese influence. So worried are the Indochinese that there are reports of some sentiment for approaches to Communist China as an offset to the Russians. The mainland Chinese, meanwhile, have been covertly busily rebuilding their party structure in the Indonesian islands.

The Russians have stuck with the new government in Cambodia. The Chinese have chosen to back Sihanouk and the Red Khmer guerrillas.

The same picture is visible in Thailand, where the Chinese are providing guidance, training and arms for the northern anti-Thai guerrilla operations—and building a military road from China through northern Laos aimed quite clearly for the northeastern Thai border. The Chinese control the local Thai Communist party.

The Soviet Union, on the other hand, the only Communist country with full diplomatic relations with Thailand.

It is known there is a strong belief within China that the Soviet Union is attempting an encirclement aimed at containment or strangulation.

It is known also that influential voices in the Soviet Union maintain that only a strong position in the south can offset the influence of China's growing nuclear arsenal.

There is no way at present of foretelling what the output of this confrontation will be.

Columbus' Countdown

I was very impressed with the television coverage of the moon shot which covered every facet, not only of the trip itself, but of the astronauts' private lives, and it got me to thinking. I wonder how television would have covered Christopher Columbus' departure from Spain when he went off into the unknown to discover the New World.

This is what might have happened: "Good morning, everybody. This is Don Carlos Vicente Henriquez Pietro San Pedro Jarez, your anchor man on the Castilian broadcasting system, and this is Aug. 3, 1492, a big morning for all of us. After countless delays which have taken seven years, Christopher Columbus is ready to sail into the unknown - to find a new route to the Indies. But let's first go down to Palos de la Frontera, where hundreds of reporters from all over the world are gathered to see the departure of the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Niña. Let's switch to Don Alfredo, who is on the scene."

(Shot of Port of Palos de la Frontera.)

"Thanks, Don Carlos. I have standing next to me the foreman of the shipyard, Senior Jose Fernandez, and he can probably tell us a little about the ships."

"Well, Don, the Santa Maria weighs 100 tons. We've put in a mainmast and an immense square sail, which will do most of the driving. Then we have a small main-topmast for emergencies, and, as you can see, there's a mizzenmast on the high poop which carries a small lateen-rigged sail, and there is a bowsprit sail as well. We've included every safety feature that is known to modern man."

"I'm sure you have, Senior Fernandez. Thank you. Now back to Don Carlos in Granada."

"Thanks, Don. Now we're going to take you to Genoa, Italy, where Chris was born and raised, and speak to some of the folks in the home town who knew him as a boy. And we'll also talk to his parents. Will you come in, Don Diego?"

(Shot of gymnasium at Genoa High School.)

"Yes sir, Don Carlos, I'm standing here in the gym at Genoa High School and I want to tell you this is an exciting day here on Columbus' birthplace. Everybody in this town remembers Chris Columbus. Standing next to me is the principal of the school which Chris attended for a little while before he decided to take up a career as a sailor. Mr. Spinelli, what kind of a student was Chris?"

"He was a fine student and all the teachers liked him. Of course he never learned to read or write but he was a good geography pupil and all of us here at Genoa High are mighty proud of him."

"Thanks, Mr. Spinelli. Now let's talk to Chris' best friend, Pontil Loren. Pontil, you're Chris' best friend in Genoa. What kind of a fellow was he really like?"

"Chris was always a serious fellow. I remember once when we were about 8 years old and we were throwing some rocks at a Venetian, Chris said to me: 'You know, Pontil, the world is round.' I said, 'Forget it, Chris. Are you some kind of a nut? The world is flat; everybody knows that.' But he persisted. Chris was a stubborn guy, but he was loyal."

"Thanks, Pontil, and now let's have a word with Mr. and Mrs. Columbus, the proud parents of Mr. Columbus, as you know, is a wool weaver in Genoa. How do you feel about your son going into the unknown, Mr. Columbus?"

"I was hoping Chris would go in the wool-weaving business with me. But I guess he figures he's doing something important. Frankly, I couldn't care if the earth is flat or round. It doesn't put pasta on my table."

"Thanks, Mr. Columbus. Now back to Don Carlos in Granada."

"Thanks, Don Diego. We have an announcement from the control tower."

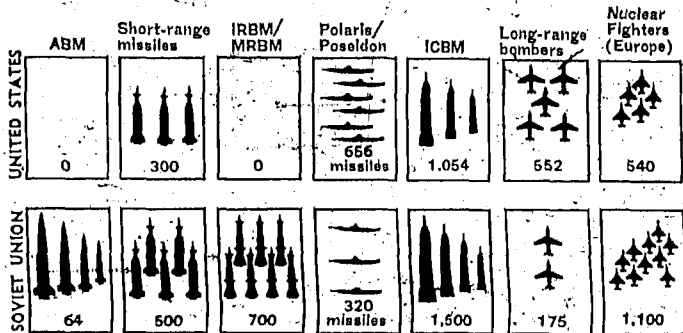

"This is lower control. We have started the countdown. 'Well, folks, while we're waiting, let's talk to Queen Isabella."

"Queen Isabella, how much did this thing cost?"

"I sold all my jewels to finance it, so Columbus better be successful or I'll chop his head off. I hate to do it because he has a great body."

"Thanks, Queen Isabella. Well, it's almost the moment we've all been waiting for. Let's go back to Don Alfredo at Palos, who is standing by the craft."

"Thanks, Don Carlos. The anchor has been lifted and in seconds the Santa Maria will be at sea: 10...9...8...7...6...5...4...3...2...1. There she blows! Good luck, Chris, and if you don't find a new route to the Indies, we're all praying that you'll be the first to discover America."

Is There Another Missile Gap?

WHEN THIS picture was taken by pioneer settler C. E. Rice the town of Twin Falls was only four years away from its birth. Just about the biggest structure in the community was the new Lincoln School, noted at the end of the story in the Streets were dirt or mud, depending on the weather at the time.

Worker aid caution asked

BOISE (UPI)—A spokesman for the Associated General Contractors urged a legislative interim committee today not to rush into a program for vocational rehabilitation of workers hurt on the job. Pointing out that the employers eventually will have to pick up the tab for such a program, Richard L. Daly of the contractors legislative committee said such a program can be expensive. He noted that such laws as the recently enacted Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act have placed a considerable financial burden on employers. "Because of these rising costs," he said, any legislation on vocational rehabilitation should be thought out clearly, before it is enacted. He suggested an advisory committee be named, similar to one that worked with a legislative interim committee earlier in revising workmen's compensation laws, to look into vocational rehabilitation. He said this committee then should study the problem in depth, taking perhaps as long as another year, before making recommendations. "I don't think you can put a timetable on something like this," Daly said. Robert MacFarlane, state president of the AFL-CIO, said he felt the Occupational Safety and Health Act was a "perfect illustration of federal intervention." But he said it came about because the private sector and the individual states did not move to meet the problem. He said he agreed it will cost some employers a considerable amount of money—especially those who have been lax in providing safe working conditions for their employees. "I have no wish to hurry this committee but I'd like to point out that we again are under a threat of national legislation," MacFarlane said of the vocational rehabilitation problem. "I would rather it be under state legislation."

Almanac

By United Press International Today is Sunday, Aug. 29, the 241st day of 1971. The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Saturn and Mercury. The evening stars are Mars, Jupiter and Venus. Those born on this day are under the sign of Virgo. American poet Oliver Wendell Holmes was born Aug. 29, 1809. On this day in history: In 1852 Brigham Young proclaimed the "celestial law of marriage," thus signifying his approval of the practice of polygamy among Mormons. In 1960 the premier of Jordan and 11 others were killed when a time bomb exploded in his office. In 1962 President John Kennedy appointed Arthur Goldberg to fill the Supreme Court vacancy left by the retirement of Felix Frankfurter. In 1965 American astronauts Gordon Cooper and Charles Conrad landed safely to end the eight-day orbital flight of Gemini V. A thought for today: American poet Oliver Wendell Holmes said, "Put not your trust in money, but put your money in trust."

Judge bars disclosure on A-test

WASHINGTON (UPI)—U.S. District Judge George L. Hart has turned down a request by 33 members of Congress for access to a secret report that was said to have advised President Nixon to cancel a huge underground nuclear test Oct. 2. The test on Amchitka Island in the Alaskan Aleutian chain is designed to test the warhead for the Spartan missile, part of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system. The test is code-named Cannikin. The congressmen had asked for release of the report under the Freedom of Information Act. They contended the act provides that the contents of such reports should be public unless the President invokes executive privilege which he has not done in this case.

Stre-t-c-hed dialogue 'sound of soap opera'

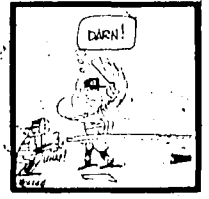

NEW YORK (UPI)—John (pause) there's (pause) something (pause) I (pause) must (pause) tell (pause) you. (long pause). Mary Stuart calls the deliberate stretching out of dialogue to cut up time, so familiar to any viewer of daytime serials, "the sound of soap opera" and she hates it. When they first tried to slow her down to that leisurely tempo she rebelled to the point where she added words and even scenes to the script. She must have done something right for that daily serial in which she made her afternoon television debut in the first episode was CBS-TV's "Search for Tomorrow" and she is still in it as it celebrates its 20th anniversary and 5197th episode next week, (Sept. 3). "We started as a 15 minutes a day show but the decision to speed our scripts were often as long as those of the 30 minute soaps," she said. "Now that we're 30 minutes a day as well it means a lot of pages to memorize every day." But she has nearly total recall so studying her role as Joanne Tate, central figure of the dramas, is—according to her tall and handsome 14-year-old son—who sat by on the interview—almost a matter of turning the pages over slowly. "I learn most of it at rehearsal," Miss Stuart agreed. She was a good-looking 23-year-old when she was signed for "Search for Tomorrow" with a background as a singer. She is now a good-looking 43-year-old who has just resumed her singing and songwriting career with a new album, "Don't Look Back," that she recorded in Nashville and is, she says, beginning to cause a stir in disc and publishing circles. With a memory like hers, Miss Stuart has no trouble remembering the main themes of "Search for Tomorrow" back to its beginnings in 1951. The basic story around which plots and subplots weave intricate patterns is the relationship between Joanne Tate, an attractive widow, and her family and friends in the mythical American town of Henderson. "Each main story runs about three years and gets more and more involved as it goes along," she said. "I see it as a long film. It tends to get pretty melodramatic, even far out, at times, but it isn't what we say but the way we look at each other that matters to the audience." She held up her wrist to show a gold bracelet with a gold disc inscribed "happy anniversary" from one of the fans who send her an average of 100 letters a week. And where does she stand now in "Search for Tomorrow"? "Let's see," she said. "I'm a mother. I'm a mother-in-law. I've got a grandchild and I've got two fellows. At this stage of my TV life," she laughed, "I'm a femme fatale."

First draft of report to Andrus

BOISE (UPI)—The State Planning Office has given Gov. Cecil D. Andrus a preliminary report on his state government reorganization proposal. Andrus said he expects a complete volume from the agency by December. The preliminary report describes the functions of each of the more than 160 state agencies. The next report is expected to include functions of all the "sub-agencies" within agencies. Utilizing these reports, Andrus and his staff hope to make recommendations for legislation to reorganize and streamline some of the agencies.

Rural planning asked

NEW YORK (UPI)—Towns in rural areas just beyond today's suburban ring should be planning now for future growth that is inevitable, according to architect and land planner William A. Gould of Cleveland.

Gould says he is "convinced planned environments have to happen. If not, sprawling Los Angeles will be the city of the 21st Century."

Ideally, Gould believes, the new, planned communities should come about through the active sponsorship of existing smaller towns in the path of natural growth.

The inner ring of suburbs around major cities are the next to face the battle of decay, Gould said. Many communities already are overcrowded. Their populations will move farther out, encouraged by improved highway networks and transportation and the spreading job market.

This growth will not be stopped and those towns in its path, rather than fight the inevitable, would do well to control the growth and see that development is to their liking, Gould said.

These new towns will change the social and economic structure of an area, but growth need not be for the worse, Gould said. He pointed as an example to the town of Orrville, Ohio, which he described as "a thriving rural community, but one based on industry, not agriculture."

Orrville, with a population just over 7,000, but convenient to the freeways system, boasts a university branch and 35 industries, including the J. M. Snicker Co. of jelly making fame.

Gould referred also to Greenwood Village, a 1,000-acre planned unit development in Sagamore Hills, Ohio, midway between Cleveland and Akron, as "proof that the demands of modern suburban development can be compatible with country living."

Gould's firm as site planner, working with the developers, "was able to achieve a healthier tax structure in a high density community without sacrificing its rural atmosphere," he said.

"The developers started with an unusually attractive site — and a commitment to preserve the natural beauty of the land."

The property originally was part of the estate of George Marshall, a local executive, who had planted a wide variety of trees, many imported from all over the world. It includes streams, a 60-foot waterfall, ridges, plateaus, ravines and a high hill overlooking the Brooksville Forest Preserve.

On some 400 acres preserved for natural open space there is a three-acre lake, picnic areas, scenic lookout points, parks, and hiking and riding trails.

Gould said "every effort was made not only to preserve the trees but also to utilize the natural contours of the land. Bulldozer developers might have considered the property a problem site, but by building houses to fit the land, rather than leveling the land to suit the houses, we were able to turn potential problems into assets."

Housing units are clustered in groups that utilize the views and open spaces to create a greater sense of privacy in what Gould called a "close to nature atmosphere." He said the use of natural wood building materials — rough-sawn siding, handsplit shake roofs, wood decks — creates a harmony between the houses and their environment.

The Greenwood development eventually will include 4,000 housing units, composed of conventional single-family dwellings, single-family attached townhouses, garden apartments and medium and high-rise apartments.

The plan for the village includes two elementary schools and a junior high school; shopping centers, office buildings, a community center, and the Village Club, which has indoor and outdoor pools, tennis courts, exercise rooms and complete recreational facilities.

"It is not just another bedroom community," Gould said. "Under the old one-acre lot zoning system we'd have had space for only 600 units. By clustering we were able to put 4,000 units on the site, and still retain large portions for community use and as a nature preserve."

"And in doing it, we were able to create a healthier tax structure for the community as a whole. Higher density increased total tax income sharply over that which would have accrued from usual zoning, and it worked to the benefit of the school system rather than overburdening it."

Have you ever started a forest fire? If you have, you probably never knew about it, for a forest fire is like a time bomb — it has a delayed reaction. A forest fire may start hours after a smouldering cigarette has been thrown from a car. Or it may result from an improperly doused campfire left a day before. Don't commit arson in our forests. Protect our timber, help keep Idaho Green.

Famed camerawoman

Bourke-White dies

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Famed magazine photographer Margaret Bourke-White, whose cameras recorded the world she lived in, died in a hospital here today after a long illness. She was 66.

Miss Bourke-White was born in New York City in 1906, the daughter of Joseph and Minnie Elizabeth (Bourke) White. She was educated at Columbia, Michigan and Cornell Universities, earning a B.A. at the last-named institution in 1927.

She became an industrial photographer — the year she earned her degree, and later branched out into general photography. She became an associate editor of Life magazine in 1936, and was a photographer-correspondent for the magazine in North Africa and Europe during World War II and in Korea.

She took pictures in 34 countries or world areas, including the Arctic region.

Miss Bourke-White was married twice, to Everett Chapman in 1925 and to author Erskine Caldwell in 1939.

'Brother' called martyr as gunfire dies

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Scarcely had the gunfire died away and the throat slashing ceased in San Quentin Prison's "adjustment center," than the cry went up from the "New Left" that George Jackson was the martyred victim of a "murder setup."

That theory ignored somehow the bodies of two white inmates and three guards piled atop of another in the cell of the "Soledad Brother" with still another guard with deep throat cuts gasping for life beneath.

There was a time when an attempted prison break was taken for the blot on society that it represents—the desperate attempt of desperate men to break out of an unbearable existence. But, for the first time, the San Quentin bloodbath was being depicted by some as a sort of revolution entirely justifiable.

What really did happen at San Quentin a week ago Saturday? Certainly, the facts are obscure—and getting cloudier by the day—but there is hard information in sufficient quantity to put the picture in focus.

Start with San Quentin itself. The gloomy cluster of yellow buildings on the bay north of San Francisco, opened on July 14, 1852, houses 2,000 prisoners. It is overcrowded, overworked.

The director of California prisons says it should have been shored into the bay 50 years ago.

Among its more notorious inmates is Sirhan, Sirhan, the assassin of Robert Kennedy. Charles Manson will join Sirhan in death row once his second trial in Los Angeles is completed.

The adjustment center is actually a little prison within a prison. It is reserved for inmates who commit crimes while they are behind bars plus an overflow from death row.

The best known of its inhabitants was the 29-year-old Jackson. His 17-year-old brother, Jonathan, was killed in the San Rafael courthouse shooting five miles away last year.

UCLA assistant philosophy professor Angela Davis faces trial on murder and kidnap charges in that bloody affair. Jonathan Jackson's reputed move was to get hostages to free the "Soledad Brothers."

George Jackson was one of the three Soledad Brothers. The other two, Fleeta Drumgo and John Cluchette, were also in the adjustment center at San Quentin. They are charged with the murder of a guard at Soledad Prison.

Also in the tier was Ruchell Magee who also is charged with murder and kidnaping in the San Rafael shooting.

Jackson and Magee have been visited by literally dozens of attorneys during the past months and it was just after such a call on Saturday, Aug. 21, at about 2 p.m. that the 'George knew the price of his . . . commitment was to live each day fighting off potential death blows'

"Bloodiest day in San Quentin history" began. Stephen Mitchell Bingham, 28, a lawyer deeply involved in civil rights issues and the grandson of the late Hiram Bingham, one time governor of Connecticut and U.S. senator from that state came to see George Jackson.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Vanita Anderson, 23, who put down her address in the visitor's register as 2230 19th St., Berkeley, the headquarters of the Berkeley chapter of the Black Panther Party and also headquarters of the Angela Davis Defense Committee.

Mrs. Anderson was not permitted to accompany Bingham in seeing Jackson. She reportedly handed him a briefcase when they parted. Prison officials will not confirm or deny that Bingham also carried a tape recorder.

The visitors' building is about 50 yards across a neatly clipped lawn from the adjustment center. Before being taken to the visiting room, Jackson was stripped to the skin and searched thoroughly. He talked with Bingham for about half an hour across a table with no screen between them and a guard looking in occasionally.

What transpired from that point on comes mainly from Associate Warden James Park and Raymond K. Procunier, state director of corrections.

Jackson was escorted back to the adjustment center by correction officer Frank de Leon, 44, an Air Force veteran who wanted to be a policeman after his discharge but had to settle for being a prison guard because of his age.

Back in the adjustment center, Jackson was ordered to strip again and undergo a search. He had a bush Afro-style haircut with a "watch cap" worn on the back and one of the guards detected what he first thought was a pencil in Jackson's hair and reached to remove it.

At that moment, there were five guards in the corridor of the first tier of the cell block—De Leon, Paul Krusenes, Charles Breckenridge, Kenneth McCray and Urbano Rubiaco.

According to Procunier, Jackson grabbed a gun Spanish-made automatic pistol from his belt and shouted: "This is it." Holding the guards at bay, he pushed a lever which opened the doors of all the cells in the tier and 25 other inmates ran out. Two remained in their reeled for a few steps and fell dead. A machinegun was brought up to the door of the adjustment center and the corridor sprayed with bullets. McCray and Rubiaco broke loose and ran to their fellow officers.

The 24 men still inside were ordered to remove all their clothing and come out one by one. They were forced to sprawl face down on the lawn with their hands cuffed behind them and searched thoroughly while other guards went into the tier and found the five bodies with Breckenridge barely alive beneath them.

All of the other inmates were locked in their cells and forbidden to go to exercise or work centers or to eat in the mess halls. It was the bloodiest escape attempt in San Quentin's history.

Those were the physical facts so far as was yet known. Then came a tangle of recrimination, accusation and promises to crack down on revolutionaries in the California prisons.

Said Procunier: "We just have to get rid of some of these bad bastards and segregate them from the rest of the inmates. We're going to take a much harder look at revolutionary type publications—most of them underground newspapers. They were a factor in much of the trouble we've had in the last year. We're going to keep them from coming in to the institutions. We're going to beef up security in all the buildings. We're going to have restrictive programs and they're going to have to work their way out of them. The people we're talking about don't consider they have a problem. They believe society has a problem. The bona fide revolutionaries."

Procunier said no more attorneys would bring in tape recorders and that screens would be placed between visitors and prisoners. Bingham was not to be found during the week after the incident. His former wife, Gretchen Sprockels of the sugar dynasty, said: "Steve has always been very liberal but very fair in his convictions and violence is not a part of his philosophy."

Bingham's mother said her son would not know what end of a gun to point.

Mrs. Anderson also was not to be found after the riot and the Black Panthers at Berkeley said they knew nothing about her.

Jackson was, of course, the catalyst of the affair. Born in Chicago, he first ran into trouble with the law at the age of 15 following a department store burglary. He was sent to reform school and had been in and out of prisons since. He was serving a one year to life term for armed robbery in a $70 holdup when he was accused of killing the Soledad guard. In his book, "Soledad Brother," he wrote of his imprisonment for 12 years in California: "I met Marx, Lenin, Trotsky, Engels and Mao . . . and they redeemed me. I dreamed of smashing my enemies entirely, overwhelming, vanquishing, crushing them completely, sinking my fangs in the hunter's neck and never, never letting go."

Gov. Ronald Reagan ordered prison officials to take "whatever steps are necessary" to protect officers and inmates in state institutions. Reagan said the escape attempt was "the result of efforts by revolutionary elements in our society intent on extending their religion of violence, hate and murder to within the walls of our prisons."

Although they had met only several times with Angela Davis was championing the Soledad Brothers and had never been alone, both Miss Davis and George Jackson had professed a deep personal love for one another.

Shortly after Jackson's death, the Angela Davis Defense Committee released a statement from her: "George knew that the price of his intense revolutionary commitment was having to live each day fighting off potential death blows."

"For me, George's death has meant the loss of a comrade and revolutionary leader, but also the loss of an irreplaceable love. This love is so agonizingly personal as to be indescribable."

Procunier said no more attorneys would bring in tape recorders and that screens would be placed between visitors and prisoners.

Fir beetle spreads

MISSOULA (UPI) — The Douglas fir beetle has reached epidemic levels in the vicinity of Dworshak Dam on the north fork of the Clearwater River northwest of Orofino, Idaho.

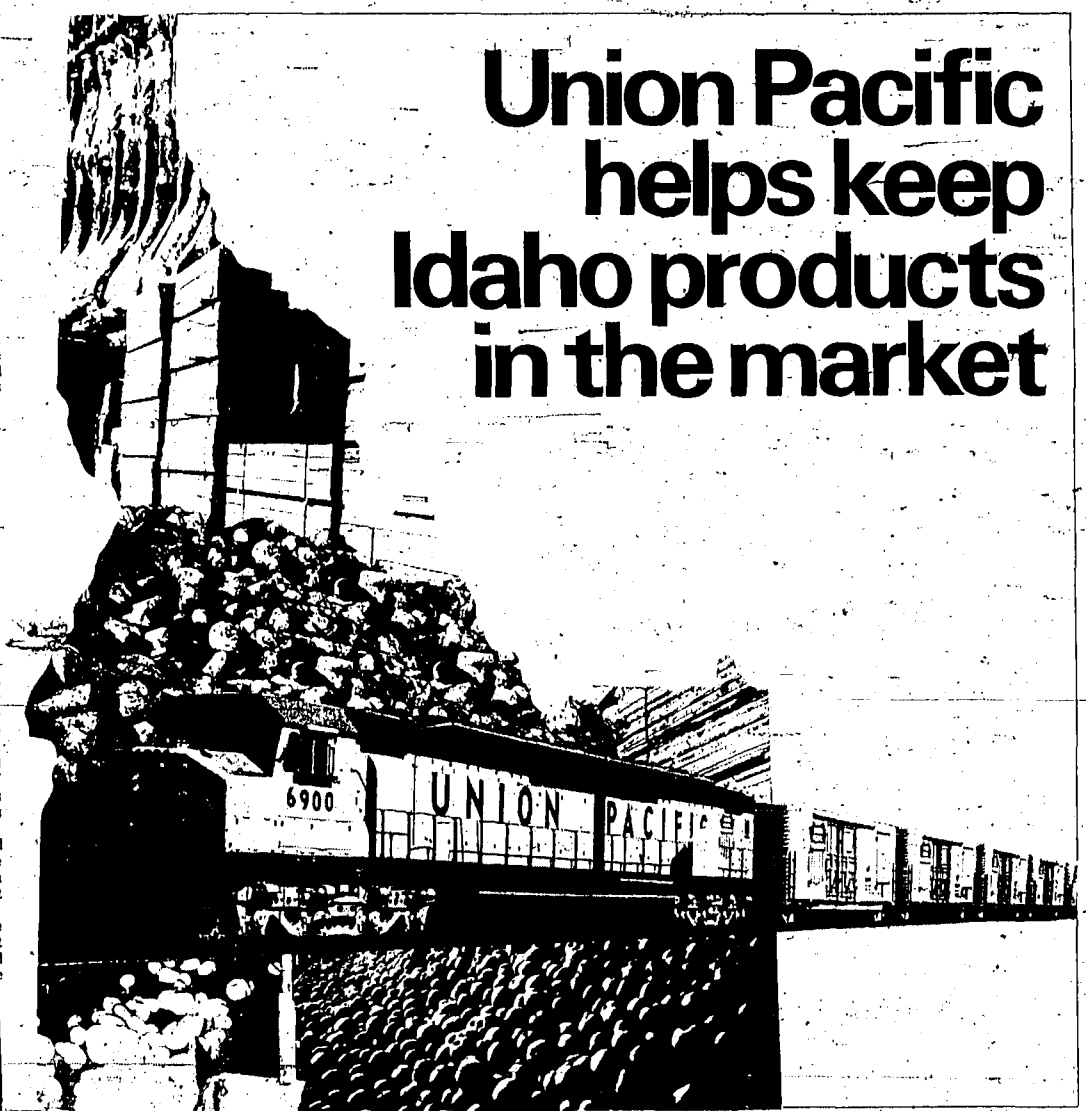

The Forest Service said entomologists William M. Ciesla and Mark D. McGregor are assisting the Idaho department of Public Lands and private landowners in determining the infestation levels in the area.

A photograph system is being used to detect trees killed by the beetles. A large photo sample is coupled with a small ground sample to provide estimates of numbers of infested trees and volume losses.

The average American Indian's annual income is $1,500, 75 per cent below the national average. The jobless rate is 40 per cent, and average life span is only 44 years.

A bulletin went out to law enforcement agencies throughout Marin County and officers converged for miles around. UPI Pacific Division Picture Editor Ray Maroney was in an antique shop nearby when the proprietor, an employee at the prison, dashed out yelling that George Jackson had been shot.

What happened next is not clear but apparently at 2:55 p.m. Jackson and another inmate, John L. Spain, broke through the door of the adjustment center and raced for a 20-foot stone wall topped with barbed wire at the end of an alleyway about 75 yards distant. The other prisoners remained inside the center.

Union Pacific's fast, efficient service and low freight rates help keep Idaho's basic products competitive in expanded market places.

In face of spiraling wage and equipment costs, which have increased 75 percent over the past fifteen years, it's surprising that Union Pacific rates in some instances are actually lower in 1971 than five or even ten years ago.

This is more remarkable considering the sinking value of the dollar which today is worth only 72 cents of what it was ten years back.

Despite these zooming costs and inflation, some U.P. rates have dropped.

For instance, fresh potatoes, a backbone product in Idaho's economy, can now be shipped to Chicago from Idaho Falls for $1.38 per cwt. compared to $1.43 in 1958. Potatoes from Idaho Falls to St.

Louis cost $1.21 per cwt. in 1961 and just $1.15 per cwt. in 1971.

Dry fertilizer to Des Moines today costs just $14.66 per ton compared to $16.10 in 1962.

Intra-state phosphate rock shipments from Gay to Don cost .64 per ton today, compared to .71 in 1963.

Other Idaho rail rates on the Union Pacific are only slightly higher today than they were five and ten years ago.

The reductions have been made possible by bigger cars, more power, increased volume, computerized operations, and other factors. They do not represent general overall freight reductions. They do show, however, how Union Pacific strives continually to provide lowest possible freight rates to keep basic Idaho products competitively strong in as many market places as possible.

'Panther' provided weapon

By CARRICK LEAVITT
SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — The gun used by black revolutionary George Jackson in Saturday's escape attempt at San Quentin Prison was "originally sold to a member of the Black Panthers," officials said today.

San Quentin spokesman W. D. Achuff said authorities did not know whether the gun was still owned by the Panther at the time it was passed to Jackson, apparently in a tape recorder. He did not identify the Panther member involved.

Achuff, deputy superintendent of the California Institute for Men at Chino, was at San Quentin assisting in the investigation following Saturday's bloody escape attempt in which Jackson was shot to death and three guards and two prisoners killed inside the prison's adjustment center.

The San Francisco Examiner said today the original owner of the gun was Landon Williams, 27, a Panther captain now in jail in New Haven, Conn., in connection with the killing of suspected informer Alex Rackley.

Meanwhile, immediate family members of San Quentin prisoners were allowed inside this institution today.

Pullout bid due

BELGRADE (UPI) — Chinese leaders will ask President Nixon to withdraw all American troops from Southeast Asia, Japan, Formosa and South Korea, Chinese Premier Chou En-lai said today, in an interview with a Yugoslav newspaper.
If Nixon refuses to end the Indochina fighting, "China would support those peoples' struggle until their final victory," the newspaper, Vjesnik, quoted Chou as saying. "We have told the Vietnamese comrades that China is prepared for the biggest national sacrifice."
The newspaper reported that Chou said that "in case of a U.S. negative posture, China would support those peoples' struggle until their final victory."
Chou denied the contention of newspapers in Hungary and Czechoslovakia that the Sino-American rapprochement and China's more outgoing foreign policy was a "threat to Europe."

Idaho's TB rate good

BOISE — With only 49 new active tuberculosis cases reported in 1970, Idaho has its TB problem under control compared with most other states, according to the Medical and Pharmaceutical Information Bureau, Inc. of New York.

Idaho's TB case rate of 6.0 per 100,000 population compares favorably with a national average of 18.3.

More effective treatment for the disease became available late in May with governmental approval for medical use of an antibiotic drug, rifampin, (CIBA's Rimactane), which experts say promises to be the most significant development in TB therapy since the early 1950's.

Clinical experience with the drug when asked as the primary component with other drugs in the initial treatment of TB patients has shown it to be superior to all drug regimens previously employed for treatment.

In the country at large, the decline in TB rates that has occurred over the past 50 years is now largely leveling off. Dr. Gordon M. Meade, former director of the National TB and Respiratory Disease Association said the disease affects 37,000 new patients each year and kills over 5,000 nationwide.

Farmers set meet on Sept. 6

JEROME — Idaho Young Farmers and Ranchers for Jerome county will meet at 8:30 p.m. Sept. 6 in the basement of the Valley Presbyterian church.

John Bruno, Hazelton, will talk on Viet nam and chemical warfare. A question period will follow.

All interested persons are invited to attend. For further information, call Carl Montgomery at 825-5175.

Control program outlined

POCATELLO (UPI) — State Sen. John Evans, D-Malad, outlined a nine-point program, including price control and farm machinery pooling, to a Senate special committee on the aged Friday.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, opened the one-day hearing here to take testimony on problems of the rural and aging farmers facing employment difficulties.

The testimony is to be collected and then presented at the special White House Conference on the Aging Nov. 29 in Washington, D. C.

Sen. Evans also called for an establishment of a training program for low income farm youth to keep them on the farm.

In his proposals, Evans said

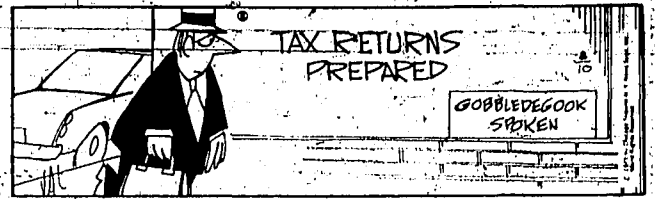

Jerome parent night set

SHOSHONE — Bruce Carpenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. LaVern Carpenter, is home on leave from the Marine Corps.

SHOSHONE — Mr. and Mrs. David Swarner and son arrived here from Kansas City, Mo., after he received his discharge from the U. S. Marine Corps. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Swarner. Mrs. Swarner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LaVaughn Sturgeon.

The number of people attending religious services in comparison to the general population has been declining over the past 15 years.

All parents of football players and other interested persons are invited to attend to kickoff Jerome's 1971 grid season, James said.

Eastern girl spending summer on fire lookout

COTTONWOOD MOUNTAIN, Ore. (UPI) — Leaving the trees, the Atlantic Ocean and the lazy days at the beach, as well as a town, family and friends, is what Sally Masl did when she journeyed from Rhode Island to Vale, Ore., to become a fire lookout.

Sally, 20, has spent the last two months on the Bureau of Land Management - owned Cottonwood Mountain — about 25 miles west of Vale — as a lookout admiring sagebrush and Rocky hills. Glenn Knott of Vale also shares the duty on the mountain.

The girls have enjoyed being on the lookout, although it wasn't exactly what Sally had in mind when she pictured her job while back in Rhode Island. "This isn't anything like I planned," she said, as she looked across the sagebrush hills. "You know — trees in the mountains. I think this has been good experience though."

Sally is from Charlestown, Rhode Island, a town of about 2,000 people on the east coast of the island. She will be a senior at the University of Rhode Island in Kingston this fall where she is majoring in horticulture.

When asked how she came to be a lookout on Cottonwood Mountain, Sally said she wanted to be lookout and asked her forestry professor at the University about it. He told her to go to the Civil Service center as she might have to take a Civil Service exam.

There she found the folder on government summer job opportunities and sent applications for a lookout to many places in Oregon. This is the first time she has been in Oregon and she finds it quite different from the rolling hills and beaches in her native state.

Sally and Glenn keep themselves busy on top of the hill. They sew, read, decorate and fix up the place, hike, make mobles, kites, paint and "coconut great recipes."

They have laid rock pathways around the tower. Sally is whitening a chess set out of scraps of redwood, oiling the wood with suntan lotion to keep it from splitting so easily.

The rattlesnakes have been a little hard for Sally to take. The girls killed one right at the foot of their tower.

Lookouts have a 40-hour week when they must be there at all times with alternating days off, when they can leave, but they must be there every night. They will finish their summer job at the lookout soon and Sally intends to drive back to Rhode Island, touring the country.

"I've really only been here about two months," Sally said. "But I haven't felt it at all. I would just as soon be up here as anywhere else."

She says she will probably apply for another lookout position next year and said she would like to be a lookout in Alaska if she can.

Cowboys slate last home game of season Tonight

Centerfielder Fred Long, who prevented defeat with a throw in the top of the ninth inning, cracked a two-run homer in the bottom of the 10th to send the Magic Valley Cowboys past the Idaho Falls Angels 3-1 Saturday night.

Travis Simpson had cracked a two-out single in the ninth. It gave the victory to righthander Rich Case who went the route, although lifted for a pinch hitter in the 10th. He outduelled Chuck Gibbon who went the distance for Idaho Falls.

The teams meet in the final game at Jaycee Park for the season at 7:30 p.m. Sunday night with a special feature. Co-general manager Kip Hargraves is turning professional, signing himself to a contract. He also has instructed skipper Art Mazmanian to insert him as lead-off man, the first to bat in the bottom of the first inning. The talk around the dugout was, 'it would also be his last at bat. However, he had two as a college player and that's enough. Saturday night's game was one of the best of the year as the two hurlers hung up goose eggs. Rafael Arjama touched Gibbon for a solo run with two out in the third inning and Case protected that — with the help of two double plays — until the top of the eighth inning.

Then Bill Smith and Darrell Darrow collected single and Dan Briggs followed with a long sacrifice fly to tie it.

Friday night, Idaho Falls broke open a good duel between winner Frank Kenyon and loser Mike Weiss by scoring three times in the seventh inning.

Idaho Falls took a 2-0 lead, getting a solo homer from Ron Jackson in the second and another run in the fourth on an error. Richie Thomas singled in the walking Don Gaudioso in the fourth and it stayed like that until the decisive seventh.

Then hits by Dan Briggs, Dan Cutler and Ron Jackson, followed by two walks, scored the three runs. Idaho Falls added two more in the ninth, one on Darrell Phillips' hit and another on a passed ball.

Buhl snaps Wendell's 18-game winning streak with tight 13-12 win

WENDELL — The Buhl Indians pushed to a 13-12 halftime lead and then fought off Wendell throughout the second half — living when a two-point conversion pass fell incomplete with two minutes left. The Indians won it 13-12 and snapped Wendell's 18-game winning streak that had covered three seasons.

Wendell, although it had the most veterans, came out the most jittery in the first half and the combination of Buhl's defense and 10 penalties effectively contained the Trojans.

Meanwhile, Buhl had its best offensive moments. But Wendell's defense stiffened in the second half and limited the Indians to just one first down.

Buhl scored the first time it got the ball, Kim Dunlap going 55 yards on an off tackle play. He moved toward the center of the line, veered to the outside and romped in untouched. Pat Charlton booted what proved to be the decisive extra point.

Early in the second period, a penalty and a fine-punt ruckback set Buhl up for its second score. Wendell punted once, downing the ball on the Buhl 30-yard line. But a penalty got the punt re-kicked and this time Steve Dentle gathered it in and romped 40 yards to the Trojans 17. Four plays later, after a five-yard penalty, big Jool Watson ripped off tackled for 13 yards and the final Buhl points.

Wendell started for its first touchdown midway through the third quarter. From the Buhl 48 the Trojans moved to the five-yard line and broke the scoring tie on a five-yard flip from Kirk Webb to Tony Rust. The run for conversion was stopped.

In the final period Wendell went 54 yards in 10 plays, the payoff again coming on a seven-yard pass from Webb to Rust. Then came the incomplete conversion pass.

Late in the first half Buhl staved off a Wendell drive at the 17-yard line with a pass interception.

Devils top Valley in see-saw battle

MURTAUGH — Behind the rollout running and passing of Steve Stanger, the Murtaugh Red Devils won a see-saw duel with the Valley Vikings 32-22 in a traditional football season opener.

The defeat hardly tarnished a sparkling display by Valley sophomore quarterback Tim Brulotte who figured into all the scoring for the Vikings.

Valley drew first blood, a rousing and the kicker penalty keeping the Vikings in possession of the ball. A short time later Brulotte fired a 30-yard pass to UI, but Valley failed on the conversion.

Murtaugh bounced back before the first period ended, sending Stewart Tolman eight yards off tackle for the tying points. John Flynn then booted the point-after for a 7-6 lead.

Valley regained the advantage in the second quarter when Brulotte and English hooked up on a 15-yard scoring aerial. Brulotte rolled out for the two extra points.

But Murtaugh rebounded for two touchdowns before halftime. The first came on a 15-yard rollout by Stanger and then just before the halftime buzzer Flynn bulldozed eight yards up the middle for a 19-14 intermission lead.

Valley saw daylight for the last time in the third period with Brulotte shaking loose for 25 yards on a bootleg. He again rolled out for the two extra points.

But the Red Devils regained the lead for keeps almost immediately, driving down to the eight-yard line and sending Clinton Dille on a reverse for the touchdown. Stanger got the insurance touchdown when he rambled 60 yards on a rollout. Flynn booted the last extra point.

Sox hang 6-3 loss on Angels

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Reggie Smith cracked his 27th homer of the season and a pair of singles to drive in four runs Saturday night, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 6-2 victory over the California Angels.

Smith fortified a 3-0 Red Sox lead with a three-run homer in the fourth inning after singling some a tally in the first.

The hitting spree enabled outpaw Rogelio Moret from Puerto Rico, to post his first triumph of the year against two losses. He completed his first major league game.

Ken McMullen clouted his 8th home run of the season following a double by Jim Regosi in the fourth inning for California's scoring.

Boston got to Angel starter Ivey Wright for six hits and two runs in 1 2/3 innings. Wright's record dipped to 12-14. Singles by Carl Yastrzemski and Smith gave the Red Sox runs in the first inning and Luis Aparicio drove in a third out tally in the second.

Bears outlast Browns in 20-19 battle

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (UPI) — The Chicago Bears held off a fourth quarter comeback by the winless Cleveland Browns for a 20-19 exhibition game victory Saturday in the first professional football game every played in Notre Dame Stadium.

The Bears grabbed a 20-12 fourth quarter lead on Packer castoff Jim Grabowski's 47-yard touchdown run and an eight-yard TD by Don Shy, before Cleveland rallied behind veteran quarterback Bill Nelsen.

Nelsen engineered a 96-yard drive, capped by a 27-yard touchdown pass to flanker Fair Hooker at 6:54 of the final quarter.

He then quickly brought the surging Browns back to the Chicago 35, but was thwarted when Bear linebacker Doug Buffone picked off a flat pass intended for fullback Bo Scott with only 2:03 remaining in the game.

The Bears trailed only briefly in the second period, when the Browns scored on a 12-yard pass from Mike Phipps to rookie wide receiver Dave Jones for a 7-3 Cleveland lead.

Cleveland sliced the Bear's lead to 13-12 at halftime on Don Cockerott's 48-yard field goal and a safety that came when Bear center Bob Hyland snapped the ball out of the end zone.

Grabowski, picked up on waivers from Green Bay earlier in the week, burst through a crowd of blockers and scampered 47-yards to put the Bears ahead for good.

Grabowski, picked up on waivers from Green Bay earlier in the week, burst through a crowd of blockers and scampered 47-yards to put the Bears ahead for good.

The Bears trailed only briefly in the second period, when the Browns scored on a 12-yard pass from Mike Phipps to rookie wide receiver Dave Jones for a 7-3 Cleveland lead.

Cleveland sliced the Bear's lead to 13-12 at halftime on Don Cockerott's 48-yard field goal and a safety that came when

Matte, Morrall sparkle as Baltimore topples Washington 'Skins 20-14

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Tom Matte ran in one touchdown and Earl Morrall threw a 36-yard scoring strike to Tom Mitchell Saturday night as the Baltimore Colts beat the Washington Redskins, 20-14.

The Colt defense allowed the Redskins to get out of their own territory only once until late in the final period when fumbles set up two Washington touchdowns on a pair of Sonny Jurgensen passes to Dave Kopay.

Bulach, Tom Matte and Don McCauley and Don Nottingham shredded the middle of the Redskins line for consistent gains to set up the Baltimore scores.

Donohue nabs pole for California 500

ONTARIO, Calif. (UPI)—Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., piloted his rebuilt McLaren

Offenhauser to a scizzling 165.004 miles per hour an hour before the first day of qualifying ended Saturday to grab the pole position for the second California 500 at the Ontario Motor Speedway.

Sports FROM ALL ANGLES

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News Sports Editor University of Idaho ticket manager, Roger Michener, is breathing a little easier these days: It would appear the new Vandal football stadium, which not complete, will be capable of hosting the Vandals' homecoming game with Idaho State.

Donohue, who crashed his McLaren in practice Thursday and was unable to get back onto Ontario's 2.5-mile oval Friday for practice, had laps of 188.721, 185.835, 184.199 and 184.299.

The winner of the Pocono 500 grabbed the pole away from Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., who won 182.668 in the morning before grabbing a plane for Indianapolis and a stock car race there.

"The contractors say we should have about 10,000 seats available (by Oct. 11)," Michener says. "We hope that will be enough."

Peter Revson of New York, scheduled to drive in the Cam-Am race at Elkhart Lake, Wis., Sunday, picked off the other position in the first row at 180.741 in his McLaren Offy.

In the fourth period, the Morrall to Mitchell touchdown pass climaxed a 73-yard drive and put the Colts in front 20-0. After a Jack Pardee fumble recovery, Sonny Jurgensen took the Skins in for a score, hitting Dave Kopay in the end-zone for a 15-yard touchdown.

It should be: The number of times Idaho has had 10,000 or more at a football game against anyone but WSU could be counted on no fingers.

"There was a lot of pressure on me not to crash," Donohue admitted. "We decided to go out late in the day to give us more time to get the car ready."

A second fumble recovered by Richie Petitbon resulted in another Washington touchdown, this time on a one-yard pitch from Jurgensen to Kopay.

This week saw the first set of eight rows of bleachers go in and the contractors say the next several sets will go quickly.

Donohue, who predicted it would take an average speed of 185 to get the pole, blasted the California 500 qualifying speed record of 178.042 set by Texan Lloyd Ruby last year.

The other Raiders touchdown came early in the second quarter when rookie linebacker Greg Slough jumped on a John Brockington fumble in the Green Bay end zone.

But one thing of note, if Idaho is able to play at home, it will mark the first time the current crop of senior has played a game in Moscow.

Swede Savage of Santa Ana, Calif., who suffered a serious head injury in a formula 5000 car wreck here this week, was the No. 4 qualifier at 180.306 in an Eagle Offy. He was followed by Johnny Rutherford, Fort Worth, Tex., Brabham Offy, 178.890, and two-time Indianapolis winner Al Unser, Albuquerque, Cal Offy, 178.713.

The Raiders defense was too overwhelming for the Green Bay offense with Slough and defensive tackle Art Thoms leading the way against rookie Hunter and the Packers. The Raiders keyed on another Green Bay rookie, Brockington, and held him to minus two yards in seven carries.

Ron Behagen, who is all set to go to University of Minnesota, evidently was pollockted off the Pan-Am basketball team.

In the third row were Gordon Johncock, Hastings, Mich., McLaren Offy, 178.491; Mario Andretti, Nazareth, Pa., McNamara Ford, 177.191, and A.J. Foyt, Houston, Coyote Ford, 175.618.

"I had three coaches left me not to worry... that I would be going to the games," Behagen said. "Then the coaches left and the selection committee announced the team and I wasn't there."

Winning pitcher Rick Wise slammed his second homer of the game with the bases loaded in the seventh inning Saturday night to carry the Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-3 victory over San Francisco after the Giants won the opener 5-2.

Wilson, 12-5, was in trouble only once, in the eighth inning when the Pirates had runners on second and third with two outs. But Wilson forced Robert Clemente to pop out to third baseman Doug Rader.

CSI Coach Jerry Hale confirms the 6-9 man's contention, noting he had talked to two of the three coaches and they had recommended Behagen be on the team. "He lost it somewhere in the committee meeting room, no doubt about it," Coach Hale said. The chairman of the committee's grandson, however, did make it and never played.

Wise, who picked up his 14th victory of the season against 10 losses, connected off reliever Don McMahon. Starter John Cumberland (7-3) left after walking Byron Browne and Roger Fried to open the seventh.

At the end of the first day of the hearing, Miller said he didn't know when the issue would be settled. Johnson is protesting his suspension without pay.

McMahon fanned Bobby Pfiel, but walked Tim McCarver to set the stage for Wise, who delivered his sixth homer of the season and 11th of his career.

Hale and Behagen both concur that the ABA and NBA clubs definitely are interested in the CSI alum. "I had some definite offers for some big money," Behagen says. "But I decided to wait a year."

Minnesota topples Pittsburgh 26-20

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Norm Sneed threw a fourth quarter touchdown pass and Fred Cox kicked four field goals, as the Minnesota Vikings defeated the Pittsburgh Steelers, 26-20, Saturday, for their fourth victory without a loss in National Football League pre-season play.

Cox, the league's leading scorer, kicked a 45-yard field goal that hit the crossbar and bounced into the end zone. He also booted 39, 35 and 12 yard field goals.

Sneed set up the first half with Gary Cuzzo at quarterback while Pittsburgh built up a 14-10 halftime lead. But, in the second half, the 11-year veteran, traded to the Vikings from Philadelphia earlier this year, completed seven of nine passes for 99 yards. He threw a seven-yard touchdown pass to Al Denson and a 45-yard pass to Gene Washington that set up Cox's last field goal.

Dave Osborn scored the first Viking touchdown from three yards out in the second quarter. Pittsburgh rookie Jim Brunfeldt ran a kickoff back 95 yards for a touchdown in the fourth period. Pittsburgh's earlier TDs came on a one-yard plunge by Preston Pearson and a five-yard run from Terry Bradshaw to Ron Shanklin.

Lamonica passes Raiders by Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Daryl Lamonica made his first appearance of the preseason for Oakland Saturday night and showed he had lost none of his opportunistic magic by passing the Raiders to a 17-13 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Oakland defense was a pair of field goals by Dave Conway—both in the third quarter—and a touchdown on a 41-yard pass from Scott Hunter to Dave Davis with just seven seconds left to play. Green Bay hurt its own chances with six fumbles—three of them picked up by the Raiders.

The win gave the Raiders a 3-1 exhibition season record in the National Football League. Green Bay is 1-3.

Lamonica, who hadn't played this year because of a knee injury, saw action only in the second and third quarters and while his statistics were not too impressive, his ability to get the Raiders points was.

Lamonica completed only four of 11 passes but they went for 99 yards.

Ken Stabler, who played the rest of the game at quarterback for Oakland, managed to control the ball with short but accurate passes. He completed eight of 17 for 47 yards.

Cincinnati tops Cards for fourth consecutive exhibition decision

CINCINNATI (UPI)—Quarterback Virgil Carter fired an 11-yard touchdown pass to Eric Crabtree with 1:48 remaining in the game to give the Cincinnati Bengals a 22-21 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in an NFL pre-season game Saturday night.

St. Louis rookie cornerback Norm Thompson put the Cardinals ahead with a 78-yard punt return in the fourth quarter. But he fumbled a fair catch punt and Cincinnati recovered on the St. Louis 14 to set up the winning score.

The Bengals offense was unable to put the ball in the end zone most of the game but Horst Muhlmann kicked five field goals.

Late TD pass lets Miami drop Detroit

MIAMI (UPI)—Tough Jim Kwik ran for three touchdowns but it took a 13-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Bob Griese to shifty Paul Warfield in the fading minutes Saturday night to give the Miami Dolphins a 28-24 victory over the Detroit Lions.

Miami's winning touchdown, with only a minute and 21 seconds left in the game, was set up when defensive back Bob Petrella intercepted a Bill Munson pass at the 60 and returned it to the 48. Four plays later, including a 27-yard scrambling Griese pass to tight end Jim Mandich, Griese spotted Warfield in the very corner of the end zone and hit him with the winning pass.

Kwik, who was involved in a two week contract holdout with his buddy Larry Csonka, scored his third touchdown with 4:07 left in the third period on a 75-yard drive in which he also caught an 18-yard pass from Griese.

Detroit kicker Erroll Mann blasted one of the longest field goals seen in the Orange Bowl when he kicked for 53 yards with no time showing on the clock as the half ended.

A national television audience saw the Dolphins score the first time they got the ball when Kwik capped a 62-yard drive by bulging over from a yard out. Kwik scored again with 13:28 left in the second period when he barged over from 4 yards out to climax a four-play drive that included a 25-yard pass to Warfield.

The Bengals, now undefeated in four exhibition games produced their other three points on a 24-yard Muhlmann field goal in the third quarter. The Cardinals' initial score came off a 33-yard first quarter pass from Jim Hart to John Gilliam.

Detroit scored its touchdown on a 14-yard pass from Munson to Albie Taylor in the second quarter, a 9-yard Munson pass to light end Charlie Sanders in the third period, and a one-yard blast by Bill Triplett with 1:02 left in the third period.

Blackfoot builds up 25-point lead, outlasts Minico for 25-20 upset

RUPERT — Blackfoot Quarterback Jeff Hoskins threw for four touchdowns for a 25-0 lead, then saved the game with a pass interception with 20 seconds left to give the Broncos a 25-20 upset decision over the Minico Spartans Friday night.

Minico, unable to mount any consistency on offense, exploded for three touchdowns in a nine-minute span in the fourth quarter and was throwing lower the end zone from the Blackfoot 28-yard line when Hoskins came up with the interception.

Blackfoot was hampered by 18 penalties — 12 of them of the 15-yard variety — and held to about nothing on the ground. But Hoskins riddled the Spartan pass defense for 284 yards.

Minico missed a golden chance early when it punted and recovered the muff on the Blackfoot 20-yard line — only to have it nullified by a penalty. Later, an interception of a safety valve pass gave Minico possession at Blackfoot's 17, but that died on a fourth and four situation on a return interception.

Blackfoot scored with 4:24 left in the first period, after recovering a fumble near midfield. After a 15-yard penalty, Hoskins threw to Jeff Stewart who outran two defenders to cover 57 yards and score.

Late in the half, Hoskins took Blackfoot 42 yards on two pass plays, the first covering 28 yards to Brian Balch and the second getting the score on a Blair pass to Stewart with 13 seconds left.

Blackfoot took the second half kickoff and went immediately to the air. Hoskins threw to Greg Hoskins for 51 yards to carry to the Minico 12 and came right back with a touchdown strike to Greg Hoskins.

Late in the third period Layno Basmsussen intercepted Blackfoot's safety valve pass to set up a chance for Minico's first score but Balch came up with the interception that stymied that. Minutes later, Hoskins threw a 52-yard bomb to Greg Hoskins and Moldenhauer converted to wind up Blackfoot scoring.

Bill Patterson, playing his first game for Minico since transferring from Richfield, picked up the Spartan offense at that point. He broke off tackle and veered outside to go 28 yards to the Blackfoot 10. Two carries later, Mike Tremayne bulldozed in from the two.

Blackfoot had to punt four plays after the "kickoff" and Minico went to the same play. This time Patterson got outside and sailed 57 yards. Both conversion passes failed.

Blackfoot held the ball for three and one-half minutes on its next possession, a major penalty forcing it to finally give up the ball. The Spartans drove to the 17-yard line and Hedrick scored from there on a play that looked like a pass at the start. Hedrick simply tucked the ball away and squirted into the end zone. He then threw to Patterson for the two points.

Bruce Fagg gave Minico its last hope when he intercepted a Bronco pass at the 46-yard line. The Spartans picked up a first down in three tries but then came Hoskins' game-ending steal.

Mackay's passes top Hansen.

MACKAY — The Mackay Bulldogs went to the air for three touchdowns and went on to defeat the young Hansen Huskies 34-8 Friday afternoon.

It was a matter of McInley and Evan Ivie that proved too much for Hansen which started seven sophomores.

McInley started it with an 18-yard off tackle jaunt and Ivie got the two points. Minutes later McInley throw to Ivie for eight yards and then in the second period the same combination clicked on a run-pass option play that covered 20 yards. McInley made it 20-0 at half-time by scoring on an end run from nine yards away.

Early in the third period the McInley-Ivie combination clicked for 60 yards and Ivie ended scoring by getting the two points.

Hansen's first good threat ended on a penalty at the Mackay 12 late in the third period. But early in the fourth Ralph Hopkins picked off a McInley pass and returned it 60 yards to the Mackay 20. Marty Shepherd rolled out for 11 yards and Ron Mothershead picked up nine more before Ralph Hopkins bulldozed in from the one. Shepherd passed to Dennis Pollard for the two-point conversion.

Hansen's young troops came along well in the second half. However, in the first half, the Huskies had the ball for only 12 plays — not counting three punts. Still by game's end Mackay put it in play only seven more times.

Kimberly, Oakley tie 12-12

KIMBERLY — The Oakley Hornets and Kimberly Bulldogs battled to a 12-12 draw Friday night but the difference in the game actually was a dangling dental guard.

Kimberly scored the last touchdown and sent in the kicker to get the point-after. He drilled the ball through the uprights but had forgotten to put his mouth guard over his teeth. It was dangling from the face guard on his helmet and the result was a 15-yard penalty in addition to a chance to win.

A blocked punt gave Kimberly the only score of the first half. Dave Higgins blocked the kick and Wes Remaley picked up the ball and went about 20 yards to score.

But early in the fourth quarter, Severe threw a 59-yard scoring pass to Burch to tie it up. Kimberly rebounded with a long drive but fumbled a golden chance away at the one-yard line.

Oakley took the lead in the fourth period when a down and out pass to Burch carried to the Bulldogs 18-yard line and Severe went off tackle from there for the touchdown.

Kimberly got the tying points on the ensuing kickoff, grinding down to the 25-yard line before Remaley broke loose for the score.

2 pros caught with marijuana

HAMILTON (UPI) — Two members of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League were remanded to Sept. 28 after appearing in Provincial Court Friday on charges of possession of marijuana.

Steve Worcester, 22-year-old All-American running back from the University of Texas and Seth Miller, 23, a cornerback from Arizona.

Weaver, Rodgers advance to pro match play finals

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI)—DeWitt Weaver edged Bruce Crampton by a stroke and Phil

Rodgers beat Ken Sill by seven victories to win semifinal Saturday in the $200,000 U.S.

professional match play championship. Weaver shot a five-over-par

77 in nipping Crampton while Rodgers took Sill with a three-under 69 to set the stage for Sunday's title match.

Weaver carded three bogeys and one triple bogey, but that was enough to edge Crampton, who had five bogeys and a double-bogey while managing a lone birdie. Both beat par on the first hole of the match.

Rodgers sank five birdies and two bogeys to trounce Sill, who bogeyed five times and birdied only once, sinking a 25-foot putt on the eighth hole.

Crampton shot a two-over-par 38 on the front nine to take a one-stroke lead over Weaver. Rodgers posted a two-under 34 for a three-stroke margin over Sill.

Crampton, who eliminated Arnold Palmer 69-72 in the quarterfinal round earlier Saturday, carded a birdie on the first hole, but posted three straight bogeys starting with the par-five fifth hole.

Weaver fell behind on the eighth hole, a 221-yard par three, when he triple-bogeyed. His tee shot fell to the right of a sand trap. He then landed in the trap, took two shots to reach the green and two putts.

Seeking his first win in seven years on the pro tour, Weaver edged his way into the semifinal round with a 71-72 win over Lou Grabam.

Rodgers, who ousted Canadian George Knudson 70-73 in the quarterfinals, bogeyed the first hole, but then scored three birdies before making the turn.

Sill, who also bogeyed the first hole, had another bogey on the fifth before carding a birdie at the third hole to head into the back nine trailing by three.

Sill beat Tom Weiskopf on the second hole of a playoff after the two deadlocked at one-under-par 71 in 18 holes of play in the quarterfinal round.

Sunny skies covered the 6,973-yard Country Club of North Carolina course for the semifinal matches, which were nationally televised (ABC).

Crampton, 35, a veteran of 15 years on the pro tour and seventh on the 1971 money list, forged ahead of Palmer on the second hole when he sank a 20-foot putt and never fell behind.

He birdied the par-three third hole when Palmer missed the green and was forced to two-putt for a bogey, then bogeyed the fifth and birdied the ninth hole to make the turn two-under-par.

Palmer, meanwhile, bogeyed the eighth and birdied the ninth to head into the second half of the round one-over-par and down by three strokes.

The only inroad he made on Crampton was at the 16th hole a 200-yard par three that he birdied with a seven-foot putt.

Error lets Tigers nip Sox 5-4

DETROIT (UPI) — Gates Brown raced home with the winning run when first baseman Mike Andrews dropped an attempted double play throw from catcher Tom Egan Saturday to give the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Detroit scored twice without a hit in the seventh. Relief pitcher Bart Johnson, 7-0, walked four batters to force in one run and Jim Northrup greeted reliever Steve Kealy by hitting a ball to Andrews, who fired to the plate for a forfeit.

But Andrews couldn't handle Egan's return throw and Brown all across the plate as the Chicago first baseman picked the ball up and tried belatedly to throw back.

Bougress sparks Eagles into 26-14 decision over New York Giants

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI)—Halfback Lee Bougress plunged one-yard for one touchdown and broke away for 52 yards for another, to lead the Philadelphia Eagles to a 26-14 victory over the New York Giants in National Football League pre-season football Saturday.

The Giants, playing their first game in New Jersey since they announced Thursday they would move to the state, lost their fourth straight pre-season game, despite the partisan cheers of New Jersey Gov. William T. Cahill and most of the crowd at Princeton University's Palmer Stadium.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton was shut out by Philadelphia until the final quarter, when he connected on a 33-yard touchdown pass to running back Pete Lizke, threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Richard Trappe in leading the Eagles to their third victory in four exhibitions.

Les-Shy scored the Giants' only touchdown on a one-yard run. Happy Feller kicked a 30-yard field goal for the Eagles, and Mark Moseley booted a 37-yarder to complete the scoring in the game.

Bougress' first touchdown capped a 41-yard drive that got the Eagles off to a 7-0 lead. The Giants had come back to within three points, 10-7, when Bougress broke away for his 52-yard touchdown run early in the third quarter.

Sold out
MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Roger Michener, University of Idaho ticket manager, announced that tickets to the Sept. 11 University of Idaho — Boise State football game at Boise have been sold out.

"There will be no general admission, no coaches or players passes and no courtesy passes of any kind accepted for this game," Michener said.

This was the first time since 1947 that an Idaho Vandal "home" game was sold out.

It's a home game for the Vandals because it was originally scheduled for the new Moscow stadium, which is not yet completed.

Larsen scores four times as Burley batters Gooding 48-6

GOODING — The Burley Bobcats broke it wide open with two touchdowns midway through the second period and Brent Larsen scored four times in defeating the Gooding Senators

48-6 Friday night. Burley took the opening kickoff and three plays later shook speedy Larry Bell loose on a 50-yard romp to the Gooding T. Five plays later

Larsen boomed in from the four. Gooding came back with a good drive, but a penalty hit the Senators at the 11-yard line and an attempted field goal wound up in a mishandled pass from center. Gooding regained possession minutes later, and moved 73 yards in nine plays, Fred Cheslik getting the last four yards over guard.

But the tie evaporated quickly as Sager and Bell hooked up on a 40-yard pass play to set up a five-yard touchdown drive by Bell. Then came the crusher. Gooding elected to gamble on fourth and four at midfield and went with an option. The plichot went awry and Larsen scooped up the ball and went 38 yards to score. In the closing minutes, Burley mounted a 60-yard drive which Larsen capped on a 10-yard sweep.

Burley wound up its scoring in the third period. Larsen broke a 40-yard touchdown run off another sweep and Wes Howard galloped 40 yards on a quick opener.

In the period, Gooding tried another field goal. The ball skittered off the side of the kicker's foot and bounced at the 15-yard line. Scott Cramer scooped it up and called 85 yards for the final points.

Brewers, Orioles swap wins

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dave McNally coasted to his 15th victory in the first game but Mike Cuellar was felled in his bid for his 17th victory Saturday night as the Milwaukee Brewers blanked Baltimore 3-0 after the Orioles won the opener 9-4.

Baltimore, attempting to become the first club since the 1920 Chicago White Sox to boast four 20-game winners, now has four 16-game winners. McNally won his 10th straight in the opener to boost his record to 16-4 although he needed ninth inning relief help from Eddie Watt.

But Cuellar, now 16-7, was beaten in the second game in an attempt to record no. 17 as Lew Krausse and Ken Sanders combined for a shutout against the Orioles. Two other Baltimore pitchers, Pat Dobson and Jim Palmer, also have won 16.

Returns

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Joe Namath, who suffered a knee injury during the New York Jets' first exhibition game, Saturday reported back to training camp at Hofstra University and announced he would accompany the team to Kansas City for a Monday night pre-season game.

Namath, who underwent surgery on his left knee three weeks ago, had the stitches removed from his knee Saturday and had a new cast put on before arriving at the training camp. The Jets said Namath would remain at camp for the final two weeks of the training session.

Gibson-led Cards drop Reds 4-0

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Bob Gibson pitched a 3-1 Saturday night to pace the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-0 shutout over the Cincinnati Reds.

The right-hander allowed only three singles, and only one Reds baserunner moved past first as he recorded his 13th victory against 11 losses, the seventh in his last nine decisions. Gary Nolan, 11-13, allowed seven hits in five innings for the loss.

Lou Brock ignited the Cardinals by stealing three bases to raise his total to 49 for the season and scoring two runs on singles by Ted Sizemore.

Brock's first run came in the Cardinals' two-run third inning when he reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home on Sizemore's single. After Matty Alou singled to rightfield, Joe Torre singled home Sizemore.

showers or thundershowers; gusty winds near showers. Continued warm today and Monday with high both days 85 to 90; low tonight 53 to 48. Little chance of measurable precipitation through Monday, Fairfield, 88-93. Central Idaho mountains, south of Salmon River: Mostly fair in the western and eastern portions through Monday with isolated late afternoon and evening thundershowers. Continued warm today and Monday with high both days 78 to 88; low tonight 35 to 45. Salmon, 90-95. The large-scale weather pattern shows very little change in sight for the next few days, with local temperatures largely depending on cloud conditions. On Saturday, temperatures in the Magic Valley and generally throughout Southern Idaho were about five degrees cooler than on Friday due to a fairly heavy cloud cover over the region. In southwestern Idaho, the agricultural evaporation rate is about a quarter of an inch per day. Some increase in local pollution levels may be anticipated as weather remains favorable to weed-burning. Conditions should remain favorable for harvest operations, also. The extended forecast calls for continued warm daytime temperatures on Tuesday, but with increasing clouds and a cooling trend by Wednesday and Thursday, with showers in the northern mountains. High temperatures will remain in the 80s on Wednesday and Thursday, with overnight lows ranging in the 40s and 50s.

Question from A. D. B. Kimberly, Idaho: I have a coin about the size of a quarter. It is very shiny and on one side is a map and the word "BRASIL." On the other side a large "2" with a star on each side. The date is 1943. Under the two is the word "Cruzeiros." Can you identify this coin and tell me its value?

Answer: You have a two-cruzeiro piece of Brazil. This coin is made from aluminum-bronze, and exchange rate would be about 52 cents. Collector value is fifty cents in Extremely Fine condition. It is not a scarce coin, but is obsolete since Brazil has now had a currency reform.

From T. R. Twin Falls, Idaho: I have a peculiar coin I would like to know about. It is made from copper or bronze. One side says "Dansk Westindien" and there is a crown above some letters and the date 1905. The other side says "1 Cent," then there is what looks like a sickle and a fish spear, with a bird of some kind and the words "5 Blt." I would like to find out where this coin came from and how much it is worth.

Answer: You have a 1-cent piece from the Danish West Indies. The Danish West Indies is a group of about 50 islands southeast of Puerto Rico and they were purchased from Denmark in 1917 by the United States and are now called the Virgin Islands. The coin you from a port city on the Baltic Sea, created by the Treaty of Versailles after the first World War. The "Frelstad Danzig" stands for "Free Danzig." In 1922 this city came under the control of the country of Poland, was taken over by the Germans under Hitler in 1939, and is now part of Poland again. Their coinage is obsolete—that is, no longer used—and your coin has a collector value of about seventy five cents.

If more people knew how valuable garlic is from a health standpoint, every one would raise it. You can plant garlic in fall for next season's use.

What's so good about garlic? Old timers will tell you how they used garlic as a home remedy to treat digestive disorders, regulate blood pressure and ward off infection. It has long been used in folk medicine as a general detoxifying agent and to improve heart rhythm.

Garlic has "something" which possess antibiotic properties. The latest issue of Health Bulletin states that doctors in Russia are using an antibiotic (allicin) made from garlic, a natural food source. The Russians have even used garlic extract to treat gout and rheumatism, and to dissolve kidney stones. Unlike other so-called antibiotic "wonder drugs" with their powerful side effects, it is believed that garlic destroys only the harmful organisms, leaving the intestine's natural, helpful bacteria untouched.

Onions are just as good for human health as garlic. Many believe that all members of the onion family (leeks, garlic and onions) help lower cholesterol in the body. As we mentioned here recently, garlic juice sprayed on plants makes a good bug repellent. People who eat garlic regularly tell us it even repels people.

You'll be interested in this historical fact: During the 20 years needed to build the gigantic pyramid at Giza, Egypt, in the Fifth Century, B.C., the workers consumed about $2 million worth of onions, garlic and radishes.

Note to those who are raising garlic now: As soon as the tops begin to ripen and fall to the ground, it's a sign to pull the bulbs and dry them like onions.

H O M E G R O W N COCOANUTS? If you're interested in starting a cocconut from seed you'll be interested in this letter.

"We took a cocconut (with gray shell on) and set the bottom in a pan of water. After a few weeks the whole bottom was covered with roots and a green sprout shot out. During the summer we set the shell and all partially in a pot of soil. It grew and grew and then we had to move it to a larger pot. All this took place in a span of 18 months and today our living room has a gorgeous 3 1/2 foot palm tree. One of the fronds is 33 inches long and 8 inches wide. We are proud of our cocconut tree and what a conversation piece it has been!"

Thanks for this tip. It shows nothing is impossible to home gardeners.

PACHYSANDRA BLIGHT: If your pachysandra (Japanese Spurge) has large brown patches on leaves, it's a disease called Volvutella blight; a fungus that can do a lot of damage. Symptoms are large brown blotches on leaves, and eventually foliage turns brown to Food firms gain OK for merger

PORTLAND—The merger of Lamb-Weston, Inc., one of the leading producers of frozen french fry potatoes and other vegetables, and Amfac, Inc., the diversified Honolulu-based service company, has been approved by stockholders of Lamb-Weston.

This was announced jointly by Henry A. Walker, Jr., president of Amfac, and F. Gilbert Lamb, president of Lamb-Weston. The merger will become effective following the filing of legal documents in Oregon and Delaware and receipt of a favorable income tax ruling.

Earlier today shareholders of Lamb-Weston, at their annual meeting here, approved an offer from Amfac to exchange nine-tenths of a share of its common stock for each outstanding share of Lamb-Weston common stock.

More than 88.4 per cent of the approximately 1,458,000 Lamb-Weston shares was voted in favor of the tax-free exchange.

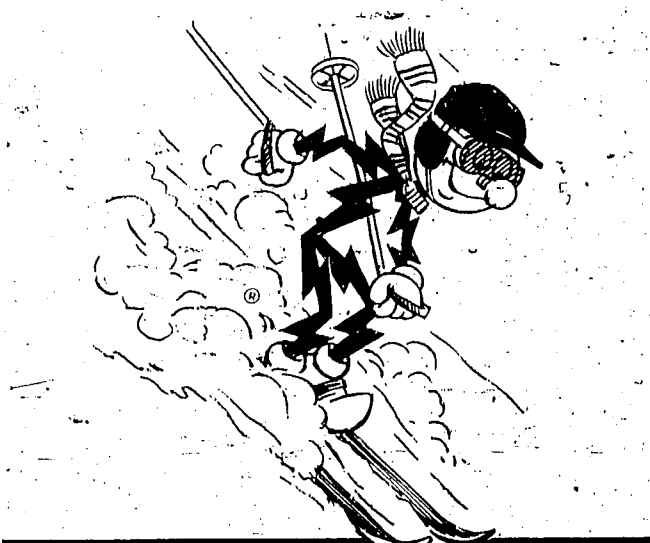

"Lamb-Weston will continue to be, as it has in the past, one of the outstanding frozen food companies in the world, noted for the high quality of its product," said Walker.

black while stems are withered by dark canker. CONTROL: Dig up infected plants and spray entire bed with Bordeaux mixture or captan.

WEATHER AND PLANTS: Dry weather and too much light can affect plant growth. For example, zinnias can actually be stunted by heat. Mum marigolds won't start to blossom until fall when the days are shorter. Mums work the same way. Many gardeners cover their giant marigolds with a plastic sheet (black) at night, and remove it in the morning. The sheet has the same effect as shorter days and induces blooming. You might try this on your chrysanthemums or mium marigolds if they are not showing buds.

Too much water or too little water will also affect plants. Roots will not grow in dry soils. Plants in a dry soil are under stress: New leaves which develop may appear small and less succulent. When water again becomes available, the small leaves and stems may never fully enlarge, and plants "hardened" by dryness may never catch up with those that get regular watering.

In general, most soils take water at rates of between one-half to one inch per hour. This is about 65 gallons per 100 square feet. For most vegetable crops the requirement is about one inch of water each week during the growing season.

Don't let your crops go dry now because they need all the moisture they can get, especially while fruit is forming. Tomatoes will develop the black, leathery patch on the blossom-end of each fruit if there is not enough moisture in the soil. No matter how you apply water, it's better to give your garden a good soaking once a week than to tease it often with a garden hose.

BEE-BALM TEA: The garden flower known as Monarda or Bee Balm was used in place of tea at the time of the Boston Tea party: The leaves and stems are cut up, dried slowly in the shade and then used as a tea. It's also a wonderful plant to have in the garden for attracting humming birds. The red blooms hold up well in floral arrangements, and many feel that the scent the plant has helps repel insects.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. E. of Twin Falls: "We have a clematis vine which has been planted for four years now. Suddenly some of the stems started to wilt. Please tell us what causes this. Should the vine be dug up?"

Clematis wilt is one of the few diseases which hits this handsome ornamental, and not too much is known about how it affects plants. First symptom is a drooping of the growing tips and the entire plant will go limp as though it had been cut through with a knife.

CONTROL: You can save the plant back to almost ground-

One hour later, the student worked it out. He should have let West hold the first trick. We might call this the loser trade play because it trades a heart loser for a diamond loser. Both the loser on loser play and this loser trade play are forms of the avoidance play which is designed to keep the dangerous hand from gaining the lead.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Your partner goes to three no-trump. What do you do now?

Answer Monday

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The student went up with dummy's ace of hearts, led a spade to his ace and a second spade back to dummy's king. Then he led dummy's four of hearts. East, who had played the deuce of hearts at his first turn, produced the five spot.

The student thought a while and threw away his deuce of diamonds. West won the trick and did the best he could by leading a diamond, but the student won with his king-let-a-thing-to-the-ace: ruffed a diamond high; entered dummy with a trump and discarded a club on the 13th diamond. He still had to lose two clubs, but he had made his game.

He turned to the Professor and said, "That was a loser on loser play to keep East

AVERAGES: The computer boys are under the impression the average wife in this country opens two cans a day... Please note also, Dr. Arthur Jensen contends the average woman is two to five IQ points smarter than the average man... And it is a matter of record, too, that the average southern girl marries two years younger than the average northern girl.

WHERE is he now, that indiscreet New Jersey lawman? One night, recently he sneaked his ladyfriend into his squad car, parked in a shadowy alley, and speaking out sweet nothings at great length, made mad passionate impetuous love to her. Unfortunately, the amorous officer left his radio transmitter on, and squawk boxes over the area carried that private program. So apprised of this pretty situation later on his shift, he promptly turned in his car, badge, gun and girl, and went west, and the New Jersey sun did not rise upon him again.

CUSTOMER SERVICE: Q. "As far as pet supplies go, don't we spend more money on cats and dogs than on anything else?" A. On dogs we do. But not so much on cats. The pet supply pie is cut up like this: Dogs, 42 per cent. Fish, 31 per cent. Birds, 16 per cent. Cats, 8 per cent. Whatnot, 3 per cent... Q. "Is it true that if you cut off a starfish's arm, the starfish will grow another arm?" A. That's right. And the arm may grow another starfish, too.

"REASON there are so many lonely old women is because, lonely old men never do anything but eat dinner and go to sleep." So writes a lively witlow. "Find me a nice Glenn man who likes to dance," she says. "But I don't want a short fat one with baggy trousers who won't spend money." Don't blame her. Unfortunately, she has no strings at the moment in the file on tall thin spenders in pressed pants. The lady is 73 years of age and holding, she reports.

A HARVARD RESEARCHER says his studies prove a sleepless night dulls your mental edge for not just one but at least two days. "I CAN JUST about always tell a woman's age by the number of wrinkle rings around her neck," claims a beautician of lengthy experience. "If she has two, she's 35; if three, she's 40..." THOSE STATES wherein you're least apt to be hit by a tornado are Alaska, Rhode Island, Hawaii, New Jersey and Nevada.

THE ROOM was plush, and smiling girls in uniforms served refreshments to the guests. They even passed out tranquilizers. It was the waiting lounge for shoppers with complaints. At a classy department store in Hamburg, Germany, irate customers simmered there while awaiting attention to their grievances. Unfortunately, the place was so comfortable, the number of complaints doubled and redoubled. So the room was closed. Complainers now, those few, stand in one short line.

Mind Your Money

By PETER WEAVER
 "Some promoters in the jewelry industry are getting away with murder," says a top government gemologist who explains that "many confusing and misleading advertising claims are made to describe diamonds and other precious stones."

measured by carats on a weight scale. Unfortunately, the public has been misled by elements in the jewelry industry to equate carats with value. By giving on weight (carats) and flaws, you'll be better able to afford a diamond with proper cut and color.

For example, there are no standard, accurate descriptions for the various qualities of a diamond. All too often "appraisals" are rigged to hood-wink the buyer. If the appraiser is in cahoots with the store, the qualities of the diamond are inflated. If the appraiser is a competitor, he might knock the stone as junk, hoping to sell "something special" of his own.

The more you know about diamonds, the better chance you have of getting good quality at a fair price. According to Robert Lyman and Bernard Burnstine, both expert gemologists, you should be familiar with a diamond's "four Cs."

CUT: Far too many improperly cut diamonds are being sold these days. They are often "spread cut" to make them look bigger and to save on weight. A diamond should be cut proportionately deep enough to give it proper refraction and brilliance. A good gemologist can describe a well-cut diamond by mathematical measurement. But the average consumer has to look at a superior, well-cut diamond to see its extra brilliance and then use it as a comparison "touchstone." Brilliance fades with improperly cut stones.

COLOR: Next in importance, is the diamond's color. Generally, the clearest or whitest diamond is the most expensive. The more yellow it has, the more the value drops. Look at the diamond sideways through the girdle (the widest part) in daylight or daylight-type fluorescent light. An incandescent lamp conceals yellowness. Put a white piece of paper behind the diamond to block extraneous color such as the salesman's yellow shirt (which also conceals a diamond's color).

CLARITY: To get the best buy, you should be willing to accept some inclusions or other marks in your diamond. Any such flaws should be hard to see with the naked eye and should be on the side (not center) of the stone.

CARAT: Diamonds are

For example, the finest cut, best color, one carat diamond with no flaws, costs around $2,500. If you accept some flaws, slight off-coloring and a "light carat" (around 85-hundredths of a carat), you can get a brilliant, well-cut diamond for around $1,200.

For further details, you can get a booklet called "Diamonds" by writing: The American Gem Society, 3142 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90005. While you're at it, ask for the AGS roster of member jewelers. Although there are good jewelers who are not members, those who do belong to AGS must adhere to rigid marketing standards.

Another good booklet is called "Trade Practice Rules for the Jewelry Industry" and you can get it by writing: Information Office, Federal Trade Commissions, Washington, D. C. 20580. It covers deceptive terms for diamonds, other precious stones, pearls, gold and silver. You should buy diamonds and other stones from a well-established jeweler. Buying at auction or at "pawn shops" is dangerous unless you're an experienced gemologist. If you buy from a store that sells diamonds only as a sideline, make sure they have access to a qualified gemologist with the necessary precision equipment to determine quality and, therefore, fair price.

Wherever you buy, you should insist on the most accurate description of the diamond you can get. Flaws should be pinpointed on a diagram. Weight, color and cut should be rated as accurately as possible. All this should be in writing on the bill of sale. This is necessary, by the way, for insurance claims. Be sure any money-back guarantee is also explained on the bill of sale.

Vague "certificates of excellence" or other such guarantees are meaningless.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Our 21-year-old daughter is living at home after three unsuccessful tries at apartment living.

She says she has no rent. She's been dating a boy for a short period of time and goes out with him all night. She stays all night at his apartment, comes home in the morning and changes her clothes and goes to work.

My husband and I. We've told her so many times that she's doing no wrong because she "loves" him. She says she'll live her own life, and if we don't let her go out and we'll never see her again. We're not in this direction she has taken will hurt her. We'll live her if he sees her only once a week. We'll have a deep-over date? If this relationship changes, and she thinks she "loves" another boy, what should we do and another, what kind of person should we be for us to accept this and be quiet, yet we still love our daughter. What should we do?

DISTRAUGHT PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Tell her that as long as she lives at home she'll have to abide by your rules, which do not include sleeping out. If she wants to move, you can't stop her. I doubt if she will because she's not financially able to do it alone.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can ask somebody who writes the obituary column to help you with this. In a recent obituary notice was the following: "Mr. [Name] was survived by his widow, who was his fifth wife."

How do I really don't see why that had to go into the paper. The man wasn't a celebrity or anything. He was just a common ordinary citizen. Besides, he was 65 years old, he averages out 19 years for each wife, so what is so special about that?

BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED: Each newspaper has its own policy. I don't see why that had to go into the paper either.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who cuts me down every chance she gets. Like yesterday she came over here and said, "What are you cooking? It smells terrible." One day last week we were in a store and I asked the salesperson to please take something out of the showcase so I could see it, and this friend said right in front of the clerk, "Why are you bothering the saleslady, you know you aren't going to buy anything." The clerk very nicely said, "That's all right. That's what I'm here for." Then my friend said, "Don't mind us. We're friends."

This neighbor makes terrible remarks about my hair and my clothes, too. Don't tell me to have nothing to do with her because we are very close neighbors and I am sorry for her because she has very few friends. How can I help her?

HER NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: You can help her by trying to educate her in tact and kindness and judgement, but it promises to be a long course. You don't say how old your neighbor is, but I hope she's young, because she has a lot to learn. Lotsa luck.

DEAR ABBY: I read somewhere that if a couple becomes engaged and the boy doesn't give the girl an engagement ring, but buys her a very fancy wedding ring instead, she can wear the wedding ring as an engagement ring. Is that true?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: Not in my book. A wedding ring shouldn't be worn until AFTER the wedding.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 59700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Family has daily flag ceremony

STANLEY — Patriotism is an everyday thing to the Darwin Hunt family who hold their own American Flag raising ceremony each morning at their summer home in the Sawtooth Mountains, 20 miles south of Stanley. The Hunts have erected a tall flagpole in their yard and the flag waves proudly and freely over the whole meadow and valley from which the area, "Valley View", gets its name. The family has a set time each morning for the flag ceremony and neighbors and friends sometimes come to witness the rites. The oldest son, Dean Hunt, 14, begins the ceremony by playing "The Star Spangled Banner" on his trumpet. As the first notes sound through the valley, Hunt releases the flag which quickly moves up the pole and is fastened at the top. The couple's younger son, Drew, 7, and Mrs. Hunt, stand at attention until the last notes of the National Anthem fade away. The flag is lowered in the evening with a simple ceremony. It flies high in the mountain air each day the weather permits. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt are both teachers in the Elko, Nev., school system. They have spent their summers at their home in the Sawtooth Mountains for a number of years.

Special speaker set for luncheon meet

TWIN FALLS — The 1969 National Mother of the Year, Mrs. R. G. LeTourneau, will address the September luncheon meeting of the Magic Valley Christian Women's Club at 1 p.m. Sept. 7 at the YWCA.

MRS. R. G. LETOURNEAU

The Texas homemaker currently serves as president of the American Mothers Committee, Inc. And, 25 years ago, she established a non-denominational Christian college in Longview, Tex.

When Mrs. LeTourneau received the 1969 honor, the Mother of the Year selection committee said, "Mrs. LeTourneau typifies American motherhood at its best, as a Christian mother who devoted herself to her family, her church, her community and the world."

Mrs. LeTourneau is the widow of industrialist-inventor, R. G. LeTourneau and is the mother of five, grandmother of 10 and great-grandmother of one. During the past two years, Mrs. LeTourneau has been filling speaking engagements for Christian Women's Clubs, church groups and meetings on behalf of the Young Mothers Service Council. She has appeared in various parts of the country from the west to the east and from Canada to the southern part of the U.S.A.

Special feature for the luncheon will be presented by Mrs. Joe Ricketts Jerome, past state president of the Federated Garden Club of Idaho. Music will be provided by Carolyn Koefo, Kimberly. Luncheon reservations can be obtained by calling Twin Falls, 733-9017 or 734-2108; Piler, 328-5180; Buhl, 543-4062; Jerome, 324-5855. Free baby sitting is available by contacting Frieda Eisenhauer, 733-5567.

Club silent auction set for Oct. 13

TWIN FALLS — A silent auction was planned for Oct. 13 by members of the Goodwill Club when they met this past week at the home of Mrs. Lewis Hoffman.

The auction will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Mattice and members are asked to bring auction articles at that time.

Mrs. Ed Orndorff, president, was in charge of the business session, with Mrs. Hoffman leading the flag salute and Mrs. George Rigdon the prayer.

Mrs. Chloë Carr served as pro tem treasurer and members answered roll call with "Favorite Teacher."

Mrs. Orndorff reported on the Idaho products dinner held at Harmon Park for members and their families. It was reported the next meeting has been postponed until Sept. 15 because of the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

The thought for the day was given by Mrs. Chloë Carr and the white elephant gift was won by Mrs. Walker Carr. Mrs. Newton Everett received a gift from her secret pal, Mae Meader and Lucille Smith were in charge of the program.

PARTY IDEAS

Low-Cal Dinner Welcome Change

PARTIES FIND occasions to happen all year long, yet the heaviest period of entertaining is still during the winter holidays. Don't save all your energy for a Christmas or New Year's gala. Instead, invite your friends to the first Christmas party of the year—a low-cal extravaganza to ready your guests for the festive season ahead, if only psychologically.

Set the light holiday mood with mistletoe hung at the entryway, spray the trees with bunches of pine placed here and there, and hang a wreath over the fireplace. A pot of "cheer-ups" consisting of an open fire adds to the Christmas spirit.

Place the lowered part, instead of platters of heavy dips and hors d'oeuvres, set out an attractive tray of fresh-cut vegetables, such as cauliflower, carrots, scallion brushes, speared cubes of assorted domestic cheeses. Solve the diet problem neatly by substituting a wine punch for the annually traditional egg nog... you'll get enough of that later.

Edna's suggestions would be an elegant coq au vin, well seasoned with red wine and herbs (only 345 calories per average serving). Serve the coq au vin buffet style, keeping it warm in an automatic electric skillet, and complete the meal with wild rice and green beans. Parties are only 100 calories per serving.

Book Review

Storrs accepted as student resident

By JEANNIE NUTILE
Twin Falls Public Library

TWIN FALLS — They perch patiently on their shelf like birds, neglected and collecting dust in their "feathers." I'm talking about the library's many collections of short stories and more specifically about the O. Henry Awards — distinguished anthologies of the year's best short stories written by some terrifically talented people.

While it may appear that the short story as a genre has in this country reached a new low, it is equally true that there are many writers creating excellent stories, many of them appearing in literary magazines that do not reach the general public.

For instance, there is "Lost in the Funhouse" by John Barth (Penguin, $6.95). It is a 4th of July during WWII and a typical American family travels to a beach-side "carnival." Inadvertently, gangly Ambrose, undergoing an awkward adolescence, becomes lost among the twisting mazes and grotesque mirrors of the funhouse, an experience which stresses the boy's sense of difference and alienation. For Ambrose is set apart by a sensitive creativity and will one day become a writer. The story, told as it will be by Ambrose years later, includes in italics advice Ambrose has read about writing and phrases he has heard from those older than himself and reveals to the reader that Ambrose is too busy observing life (especially his own awkwardness) to really live it.

"For whom is the funhouse fun? For Ambrose it is a place of fear and confusion . . . a single straight underline in the manuscript mark for italic type, which in turn is the pointed equivalent to oral emphasis of words and phrases. . . . Ambrose was "at the awkward age." His voice came out high pitched as a child's if he let himself get carried away; to be on the safe side, therefore, he moved and spoke with deliberate calm and adult gravity. . . .

Ambrose, feeling the torture of a self-conscious embarrassment, dreams of being like his brother Poto who, though younger, has taken a girl along to the beach. Ambrose's fantasizing reveals the person he would like to be, doing bold deeds about which he only dares to dream: "If you knew your way around the funhouse like your own bedroom you could wait until a girl came along and then slip away (with her) without ever getting caught. . . . It would be better to be the boyfriend and not outraged, and tear the funhouse apart. Not act; be."

Yet Ambrose cannot simply be. His whole life is lived within the framework of a page. Within the compulsive necessity to create and to observe himself from without, as one would observe a movie or read a book. Therefore, throughout the story Ambrose is seen as the author observing himself. Though in a sense you as the reader "watch the story being plotted and created," it nonetheless will draw you close. You walk with the sensitive Ambrose over the board-walk with its sound of surf and smells of popcorn, past the penny arcade and the ribald sailors with their giggling girls and into a world of black twisting tunnels. Your name is Ambrose and you are lost in the funhouse.

In the 1965 O. Henry collection there is a "marvelously funny story called "Revelation", written by a master of the genre, Flannery O'Connor. Setting: A doctor's small waiting room; somewhere in the south. Enter: Mrs. Turpin and her submissive husband, Claud.

From the moment she "ooms" over the others in the room the entire story is unfolded from her viewpoint, heavily laden with stereotypes and superficialities. It is through her "little bright black eyes" (indicative of her blindness) that the other patients, and especially Mrs. Turpin herself, are revealed to the reader.

"Next to her was a girl of eighteen or nineteen. . . . The poor girl's face was blue with pain and Mrs. Turpin thought how pitiful it was to have a face like that at that age. Mrs. Turpin herself was fat but she had always had good skin. . . . Next to the ugly girl was a leathery old woman in a cotton print dress. She and Claud had three sacks of chicken feed in their pump house that was in that same print."

It quickly becomes obvious that Mrs. Turpin doesn't relate to other people, she classifies them neatly in her mind. ("If Jesus had said to her before he made her, 'There's only two places available to you. You can either be a nigger or white trash.' What would she have said? 'Please Jesus, please.' She would have said, 'Just let me wait until there's another place available. . . .') and always weighs her social position in comparison to theirs ("Sometimes Mrs. Turpin occupied herself at night naming the classes of people. . . . Usually by the time she had fallen asleep, all the classes of people were moiling and rolling around in her head, and she would dream that they were all crammed together in a box car, being ridden off to be put in a gas oven.")

But as Mrs. Turpin smugly thinks her pious thoughts and converses with selected patients ("There's a heap of things worse than a nigger.") The girl with the facefull of acne begins staring at her fiercely, and a peculiar light appears in her eyes.

It is as if she is picking the thoughts right out of Mrs. Turpin's head and the tension increases until it erupts in a climax of chaotic hilarity. . . . The two stories I've briefly sketched, are among my favorites, but there are so many more, stories for every taste. There must be one for you.

BOISE — St. Luke's Hospital has again accepted a student resident from the University of Minnesota, Gordon Storrs, a former Filer resident, from the university's program in hospital administration, announced administrator, E. E. Gilbertson.

Storrs was graduated from Filer High School in 1964. He served a two year mission for the LDS Church from 1965 through 1967 in Southern Brazil. He is a graduate of the University of Utah, with a B.S. degree in sociology, and has completed the first year of a two-year program in hospital administration at the University of Minnesota. Storrs' parents are residents of Boise. His father is a pharmacist with Skagg's Drug Store.

Storrs will be affiliated with administrative services at St. Luke's and will rotate through various departments of the hospital. In addition to working on specially assigned projects during his 11 month residency, he will devote a large amount of time in developing his masters thesis.

Grade school enrollment in Washington, D. C., is 95 per cent black. Population is 71 per cent Negro.

Facts and Figures about dandruff

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Here are some facts and figures about dandruff compiled by the Medical and Pharmaceutical Information Bureau, Inc.

Dandruff has been called "the most common disease entity of civilized man." Half of the people who enter a drug store have dandruff, according to an article in a leading publication for pharmacists.

Some people never have dandruff. The reason for this is unclear.

The most important contributing factor is overproduction of sebum or oily wax. Improper shampooing, faulty diet, lack of sufficient rest, nervous tension and bacterial infection are others.

One dermatologist has written that overuse of lacquer sprays, coloring agents, and other popular hair cosmetics which tend to dry the scalp, are also factors that contribute to dandruff production.

Medicated shampoos help keep dandruff under control. One of these, pHisoDan, can also be used as a regular shampoo after the condition clears to help prevent recurrence.

Combs and brushes must be kept scrupulously clean. . . . Dermatologists replying to a questionnaire reported that more than half of their acne patients also had dandruff.

Reception honors area newlyweds

SPRINGDALE — Newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Brent E. Peterson, greeted guests at a reception in their honor Aug. 21 in Springdale LDS Cultural Hall and Aug. 20 at an open house at the Elaine Wardle residence in St. Anthony.

The marriage was solemnized by President Raymond W. Miles Aug. 20 at the Idaho Falls LDS Temple.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Fillmore are parents of the bride and the bridegroom is the son of Dr. L. Eugene Peterson, Rexburg.

Beauty baskets of pink gladiol and white chrysanthemums flanked the receiving line. A large gold-framed portrait of the bride was displayed in the foyer enhanced with an elaborate floral arrangement.

The bride greeted guests in a Bridal Original gown of scalloped hand-clipped Chantilly lace that formed a coat effect over a full-sleeved empire A-line gown. The dress featured a high Victorian neckline and bishop sleeves. A Venise flower crown cap held her elbow-length veil with a butterfly face veil of nylon illusion.

were Holie Peterson, Shelly; Windy Peterson, DeLo, and Yvonna Peterson and Aloha Fillmore, Springdale. Marla Peterson was flower girl.

Dan Crane, Burley, and Lowell Parkinson, Rexburg, attended the bridegroom.

Ushers were David Truiman, Layne Peterson, Rex Reed, R. Hollowell and Larry Peterson. The Allar Devries Orchestra furnished the background music for the reception and dance music throughout the evening. Barbara Wardle was in charge of the guest book and Mrs. Robert Christensen was in charge of the gift table.

The wedding cake depicted a winding stairway, lighted with twinkling lights, leading to a castle on the top of the fifth tier. Pink rosebuds, lacy white hearts and miniature slippers holding tiny flowers decorated the first tier.

Refreshments were served at quartet tables covered with pink chiffon and centered with pink candelabra.

Collin Peterson served as master of ceremonies for the program.

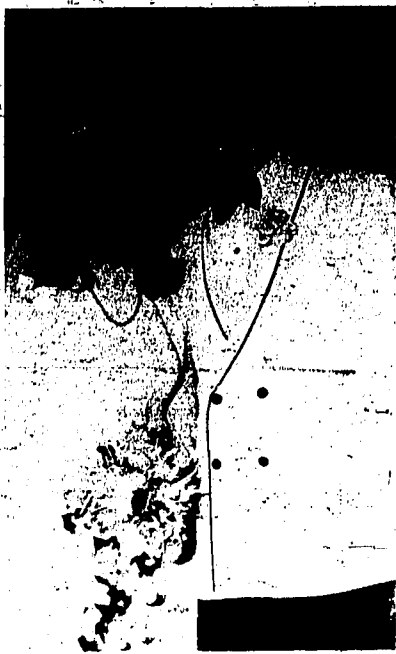

The couple will reside in Glendale, Calif., where the bridegroom will attend school. The bride was honored at a pre-nuptial shower hosted by Mrs. Carolyn Maxwell at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Matthews in Springdale.

Couple recites VOWS

FILER — In a candlelight ceremony Aug. 13 in the Filer Church of the Nazarene, Patricia Ann Sharp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sharp, became the bride of Jerry Mark York, son of Rev. and Mrs. Leonard York, Crescent City, Calif.

Rev. Mr. York, assisted by Rev. G.W. Iwerson, pastor of the Filer church, performed the double ring rites before a candle arch of pink tapers and candelabra decorated with mint-green Fujii chrysanthemums and pink gladioli with matching baskets of flowers at the base of the candelabra. Hot-pink satin bows marked the church aisle.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a Bridal Original gown. The silhouette gown was trimmed with beribboned Venise lace plunging from the neckline to the hemline of the skirt which swept in to a wateau chapel train. The gown featured a high collar and bishop sleeves.

Beauty Hint

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Young make-up users often encounter some difficulty when trying to make-up their eyes, according to famed beauty-fashion authority Max Factor. He suggests the following simple advice to help them achieve the most beautiful effects. First, shape the brows neatly by stretching the skin between two fingers and plucking the stray hairs in the direction of growth. To define them, use a sharp eyebrow pencil and lightly draw on tiny hairline strokes along the brow from inner to outer edge. Brush the brows down for a softer effect. If your eyebrows are naturally thin, a brush-on coloring provides wonderfully natural results. Apply all eye shadow shades accurately by tilting your chin up and looking down into your mirror, fully exposing the lids. Select young, soft, pretty shades that do not overpower the eyes with color.

To line your upper lid, tilt the chin upward, look down into the mirror and stretch the eyelid slightly outward with a finger. Draw a narrow line as close to the roots of your own lashes as possible. Apply mascara to the top of the upper lashes, then sweep them up from underneath with two or three light coats. Touch-up the bottom lashes.

If you are using a wand-type mascara, rotate the wand as you sweep it through the lashes. Especially ideal for all youthful eye make-up users is the Pure Magic collection which includes a complete array of hypo-allergenic, fragrance-free eye beautifiers in the softest, prettiest colors imaginable.

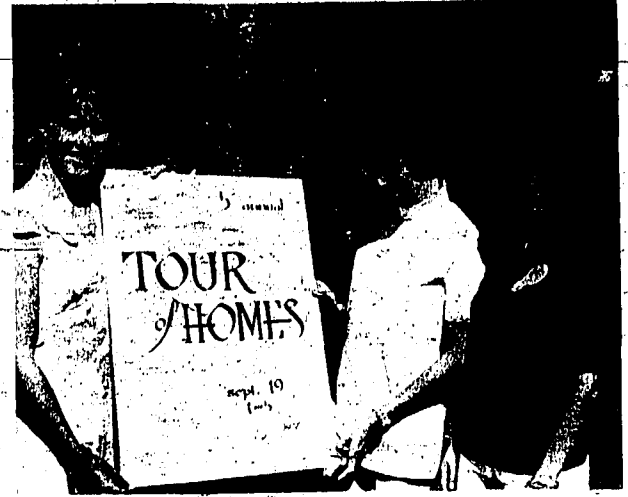

September date set for home tour

TWIN FALLS — Junior Club activities for the current year began this past week with a coffee hour for members at the home of Mrs. Robert Alexander.

New and returning members were greeted by officers for the coming year, Mrs. William Reese, president; Mrs. Fred Harder, vice president; Mrs. Dan Slavin, secretary; Mrs. Larry Henman, treasurer; Mrs. Bill Morrison, projects chairman; and Mrs. William Kahn, publicity chairman.

Junior Club's fifth annual Tour of Homes is scheduled for Sept. 19 from 1 to 5 p.m., with proceeds to benefit Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Homes on the tour this year include those of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Borlase, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Marshall III, Dr. and Mrs. C.R. McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moeller and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Satterfield.

Fifth tour

ANNOUNCING PLANS for the Junior Club's fifth annual Tour of Homes are, from left, Mrs. William Kahn, Mrs. Robert Donnelly and Mrs. William Reese. Five homes are planned for the tour set from 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 19, with proceeds going to benefit Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

A lace-trimmed pillbox held her elbow-length veil of lace-trimmed nylon illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses, chrysanthemums and carnations enhanced by ivy.

The bride wore a string of pearls which had been worn by her mother at her wedding and also by her sister, Mrs. Lynda Edwards at her wedding.

As the bride entered the church, she presented a lace-covered Bible to her mother, and as she came down the aisle after the ceremony, she presented another lace-covered Bible to her new mother-in-law.

Mrs. Edwards was matron of honor and Sandy Vall, Nampa, college roommate, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Barbie Sharp, Nampa, Linda Hansing, Filer, and Mary Herring, Lewiston.

Candlelighters were Kathy Sharp, Twin Falls, and Steve York, brother of the bridegroom, Becky York, sister of the bridegroom, was flower girl, and Nick Schroeder, cousin of the bride, was ringbearer.

Hobbs Wilden, Fairfield, Calif., served as best man, and groomsmen were Steve Sharp, Nampa, brother of the bride; Danny Edwards, Twin Falls, brother-in-law of the bride; Dave York, Crescent City, brother of the bridegroom; and Glen Rutz, Colorado Springs, Colo. Ushers were Sam Gates, Butte, Mont., and Rudy Evenson.

Hubert Hendrix, Twin Falls, was soloist and was accompanied by Mrs. Carol Kalbfleisch, organist.

Dorita York, Montaque, Calif., registered the guests at a small table covered with white lace over mint green. In charge of the gifts were Midge Fisher, assisted by Sherry Owens, Buhl; Sandy and Debbie Sharp, twin cousins of the bride, and Mrs. Michelle Wright.

Mrs. Gordon Schroeder, Burley, aunt of the bride, was hostess for the reception which was held at the American Legion Hall. She was assisted by Mrs. Ann Schroeder, Mrs. Nellie Wright, Mrs. Peggy Schroeder, Mrs. JoAnn Sheridan, Mrs. Michelle Wright and Mrs. Ray Hudson.

The bride's table was covered with white lace over mint green and centered with a four-tiered heart-shaped cake decorated with lattice hearts, pink rosebuds and sugar bells. The base of the cake was encircled with gladioli and the cake was topped with a carnation basket featuring balls, lace arches and mint green leaves.

The cake was flanked by cupid epergnes filled with pink roses and gladioli. The cake was served by Mrs. Mary Sharp, Twin Falls, and Mrs. Garth Kirkman, Mrs. Bob Wisenting, Montaque, Calif., served punch and Mrs. Dornan York, poured coffee.

Guests were seated at quartet tables covered with white lace over green and centered with hurricane lamps surrounded by pink flowers. The bridegroom's table was covered in the same way and held scrolls, bridegroom's cake and rice bags.

After a short wedding trip to Sun Valley, a gift of the bride's uncle, Garth Kirkman, the couple will reside at 555 W. 21st St., San Bernardino, Calif., where they plan to continue their college education.

The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Rogerson Hotel. Showers honoring the bride were hosted by Linda Hansing and Mrs. JoAnn Sheridan, assisted by Mrs. Sherry Iwerson.

Miss McCandless, Storro exchange nuptial promise

FILER—Kathy McCandless, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne McCandless, Filer, became the bride of Richard L. Storro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oystein Storro, Priest River, in a candlelight service Aug. 14 in the Buhl First Baptist Church. Rev. Roy Watson, pastor of the Filer First Baptist Church, officiated at the rites, assisted by Rev. Jerry Snyder of the Caldwell First Assembly of God Church. Background decorations included altar candles entwined with flowers and basket of roses, carnations, daisies and gladioli. The aisle was marked with pastel-colored bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a Bridal Original gown of Chantilly lace and Peau de soie. The gown was fashioned in a Victorian style with a wide satin ribbon interlaced at the empire waistline, a high scalloped neckline and camelot sleeves. Miniature self-covered buttons closed the wrists and the back of the dress. The chapel train was trimmed with lace. Her elbow-length veil was held by a chapel hat of Chantilly lace and bows enhanced with seed pearls. Her veil was made by Mrs. Dorothy Nagel, Twin Falls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of pink, yellow and blue roses, carnations and daisies with tulip, greenery and matching ribbons. The bride wore pearl earrings, a gift from the bridegroom. The ring pillow was borrowed from Mrs. John McCandless, a sister-in-law. Lynn Ramseyer was maid of honor and Arlene Garrison and Madlyn Kelly were bridesmaids. Lorie Kohnopp was junior bridesmaid and she and Denny Maxfield were taper lighters. Gale Storro was best man for his brother and ushers and groomsmen were Bob Buckendorf and Bill Buckendorf. Denny Maxfield was junior groomsmen. Jason Kelly was ringbearer and carried the rings on a white satin pillow trimmed in lace and ribbon bows. Susan McCandless, niece of the bride, was flower girl and carried a white chiffon and lace basket with rose petals.

Shows honoring the bride were given by Arlene Garrison and friends of Simplot Hall at the College of Idaho, and by the women of the Filer First Baptist Church. Mrs. Wade Sharp, Mrs. Elwood McCauley, Mrs. Horace Smith and Mrs. Ray Kohnopp hosted a shower at the Kohnopp home, and Lynn Ramseyer hosted a personal shower at her home. The Filer Grange held a shower at the grange hall, with Mrs. Craig Dunlap, Mrs. Clinton Dougherty and Mrs. R. J. Bennett in charge of arrangements. Laura Vincent and Linda Hansing gave a bachelorette party for the bride and friends. The bride's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at their home. A reception for the young couple was held at the Assembly of God Church, Newport, Wash.

Book Review Spicy notes: dill

MY ENEMY, MY BROTHER

By James Forman
A book review by Margaret Fry, Twin Falls Public Library. By some miracle, the life of Daniel, a Polish Jew, was spared the ghastly horror of a concentration camp death. In "My Enemy, My Brother," James Forman writes unforgettablely of the rebuilding of Daniel's broken life. Daniel fled Warsaw with his grandfather, leaving his family dead in a sewer which had been their fortress. Betrayed by the farmer who hid them, Daniel and the fiery old man were arrested and shuttled from camp to camp. They lived in terror of the gassed Nazi "shower." When the war ended, the two emaciated ghosts of men joined thousands of refugees crawling home to find rubble where there had been a house, now a pile of unreal memories. Daniel befriended three idealistic young Jews bent on fulfilling their dreams in Palestine. They were an odd combination — Sholem, articulate and highly idealistic; Gideon, eaten away by the acid of revenge and ready to kill; and red-haired Hanna, who loved both Daniel and Gideon. They persuaded Daniel to join them as they made their dangerous way to an Israeli kibbutz.

Expecting an idyllic life of sharing work and goods, Daniel found instead disillusionment and conflict with Arabs. He compounded his problems by forming a secret friendship with an Arab boy. The intricate exploration of Daniel's mental anguish, as well as the rapid action, make "My Enemy, My Brother" an exciting reading. A 1969 Prize Book in the Children's Spring Festival, Book World, it can be obtained in the Children's Room.

There is flavor magic in dill. Both dill seed and dill weed are important to the home spice shelf.

Dill is one of the oldest and most important of the herbs. Dill is a native to the Mediterranean and Black Sea areas. It was grown in the gardens of the Babylonian kings and used widely in drugs both by the Babylonians and Assyrians. Today, dill seed is imported from India and dill weed is grown in California.

The magic of using dill goes back to earliest times. It was associated with sorcery and was believed to have the power to overcome the sorcerer. To make oneself invulnerable to the "evil eye," a small bag of dill was worn over the heart. Today its magic is in terms of flavor and success in cooking.

Dill seed is well known and is immediately associated with pickles. Dill seed and dill weed both are excellent sprinkled on rolls or used in potato, meat and seafood salads. Dill also improves the flavor of spaghetti and tomato dishes (1/4 teaspoon to 1/2 teaspoon seasons 2 cups of either). Crushed dill seed adds zest to cooked vegetables such as snap beans, peas or celery, using 1/4 teaspoon to 1/2 teaspoon to 2 tablespoons butter. Dill dresses up sauerkraut when sprinkled lightly over it and does wonders when added to butter or margarine and poured over cooked noodles.

Dill seems to have a special affinity for seafoods. As one author states, "No other herb gives fish as much glamour." Don't forget, therefore, to add a few seeds to water when cooking shrimp.

Use the seed or weed in sauces that accompany cooked fish and in sauces for cold seafood dishes and salads. Dill weed is especially good in mustard sauce.

Dill weed has a more subtle flavor than dill seed. It is a great favorite of the Danes and Scandinavians. One writer on Persian foods extols its deliciousness, especially on cooked rice and rice dishes. Swedish people maintain that dill weed in the sauce or gravy transforms veal into a party dish.

Dill added to sour cream and cream cheese mixtures for dips produces a delightful flavor.

Sprinkle dill weed on whole fish and fish fillets that are to be baked or add it to salmon or tuna fish soufflés and casseroles.

Mix it with crumbs or flour for coating fried or baked chicken.

Dill weed sprinkled on sliced fresh cucumbers either in sour cream or vinegar dressing is delicious.

Add dill to creamed vegetables or soups.

Dill weed goes well, too, in egg dishes such as scrambled eggs, omelets or creamed hard-cooked eggs.

Dill weed is found also in herb-seasoned breads, biscuits and muffins that are served with salads.

The use of dill seed and weed can well be said to be "as old as the hills," yet as modern as tomorrow. Their use can be as wide as imagination and tastes envision.

Esther Cole, McCoy say vows in August ceremony

TWIN FALLS — Esther Lorraine (Jo) Cole, daughter of Mrs. Esther Cole, Twin Falls, and the late Boyd C. Cole, was married to Steven Lynn McCoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. McCoy, Eden, in rites Aug. 15 at the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church.

Rev. Herbert Morris performed the afternoon double ring ceremony before a background of baskets of white gladioli accented with pastel shades of green, pink and yellow carnations. Several sets of gold candelabra holding white tapers, with white gladioli and pastel carnations, enhanced the setting. White satin bows lined the aisles.

The bride, escorted by her brother-in-law, Donald Joerger, and given in marriage by her mother, wore a Bride-Ature empire-styled, floor-length gown of white organza and Chantilly lace with short puffed sleeves. The gown featured a partially-lined organza bodice with a high collar of matching lace. Her floor-length mantilla veil of organza was trimmed with Chantilly lace and held by a lace bow headpiece. She wore short lace gloves and carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, and ivy on a covered Bible, given her by her sister.

Matron of honor was Carol Wells, long-time friend of the bride. Linda Birrell, sister of the bridegroom, and Sandra Carr, Twin Falls, were bridesmaids.

Randy McCoy was best man for his brother, with Rich Birrell, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Keith Carlson, Hansen, as groomsmen. Ushers and candlelighters were Terry Pearson, Hansen, and Tom Billington, Twin Falls.

Mrs. Dorothy Gilson, Twin Falls, was organist. Soloist was Joyce Guyer.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church reception hall. The bride, bridegroom and their parents received guests before a white arch background decorated with gladioli.

The bride's table was covered with a white nylon flounce and linen tablecloth, centered with a four-tiered wedding cake surrounded with fern and carnations and flanked by two silver candelabra. The cake top featured tiny cherubs and bells.

Mrs. Donald Joerger, sister of the bride, served the cake, assisted by Mrs. Kenneth Hempleman, Nampa, aunt of the bride. Serving coffee was Mrs. Henry Cole, aunt of the bride. Mrs. Lynn Hempleman and Mrs. Robert Hempleman, aunts of the bride, presided at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Jim Hudson and Mrs. Bob Pearson registered guests preceding the ceremony, and following at the reception. Gifts were received by Mrs. Frank Erwin and Mrs. Rodney Kukal.

Out-of-town guests attended from South Dakota, Ogden, Boise, Bellevue, Fruitland and Nampa.

After a wedding trip to Sun Valley, the couple will reside at 312 So. Monroe, Moscow, where the bridegroom will continue his education at the University of Idaho in forest business management.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at their home near Eden.

Miscellaneous showers honoring the bride were hosted by Mrs. Kenneth Henderson; by Mrs. Archie Turner and Mrs. Oscar Ford, and by members of the Shamrock Club at the home of Mrs. Neil Olmstead and assisted by Mrs. John Koontz Jr. and Mrs. Bill Munger.

Miss Barkes, Graff exchange promise

TWIN FALLS — St. Benedict's Priory, Twin Falls, was the setting for the Aug. 14 double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Suzanne Marie Barkes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leland K. Barkes, and Steven C. Graff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer M. Graff, all Murtaugh.

The evening candlelight nuptials were solemnized by Father Simeon VanDeVoord, assisted by Brother Sylvester. Two candelabra enhanced the altar which held an all-white arrangement of gladioli and chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Jack Cubit, Twin Falls, played the traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length empire-styled gown of fine silk tulle. The elbow-length sleeves were edged in wide white Venise lace. The gown was accented with miniature self-covered buttons and bows. A queen's crown of Venise lace held her elbow-length veil of English silk illusion. She carried a crescent cascade bouquet of yellow daisy pompons, stephanotis and sprangeri.

Kristine Barkes, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, with Sheila Bessire and Janie Flores, both Murtaugh, friends of the bride, as bridesmaids. Gordon Graff, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Donald Barkes, brother of the bride, and Bill Graff, brother of the bridegroom, all Murtaugh.

The reception was held immediately after the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with white lace and skirted with a floor-length flounce accented with pale green bows. The table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with small yellow daisies. It was topped with two yellow and white wedding bells. The cake was encircled with yellow daisy pompons and fern. It was baked and decorated by Mrs. DeVon Andersen, Murtaugh. Presiding at the bride's table were Mrs. Wallace Christensen, Mrs. Ted Mason, Mrs. James Hopworth and Mrs. Leon Cope. Other reception assistants were Mrs. Glen Bessire and Lealie Lambert.

Brenda Peterson, friend of the bride, registered the guests and Elizabeth Barkes, sister of the bride, and Monica Bessire, friend of the bride, received the gifts.

Guests attended from California, Pocatello, Burley, Twin Falls and Murtaugh.

After a honeymoon trip to Yellowstone National Park, the couple will reside at 811 Washington St., Pocatello. They will be attending Idaho State University. The bridegroom is in his last year of pharmacy and is affiliated with Phi Delta Chi Fraternity.

A miscellaneous shower was given for the bride by Sheila Bessire. The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Depot Grill Caboose Room.

Warr attends institute

BURLEY — Paul Warr, Murtaugh, recently attended the annual Summer Institute of the American Institute of Cooperation at Colorado State University, Fort Collins, Colo. Warr joined with about 800 other young people from 41 states and Canada at this national agri-business meeting. They also met in many sessions with the 250 young farmers and their wives and about 1,500 adult educational, agricultural and cooperative representatives.

Layered

Designer Bonnie Chahin believes in the layered approach to clothes to adapt to assorted climates. Her new collection for Philip Hill shows a lot of combinations of put on, or take off costumes. Miss Chahin borrowed the any-weather idea from the ancient Chinese. "It's a two-shirt day, or a seven-shirt day, and so on."

Council leader elected

JEROME — Mrs. Barl (Delores) Silver was elected president of the Extension Homemakers Council for 1972-73 at the regular council meeting this past week. Mrs. Silver is a member of the County Neighbors Club.

Other new officers are Mrs. John (Mae) Pool, treasurer, a member of the Kato Club, and Mrs. Kenneth (Ileta) Filford, historian, a member of the Western Hualettes Club.

New officer will be installed at the January meeting according to Extension agent Jerome County Extension agent.

Miss LaFray said the Extension Homemakers Council State convention will be held Oct. 5-6 at the Bannock Inn, Pocatello. She noted the deadline for registration is Sept. 21.

Theme for this year's convention will be "Happiness Is." The next leadership training meeting will be held Tuesday, Sept. 7. The lesson will be "Hunches for Lunches."

The next council meeting will be the fourth Monday in October, Miss LaFray said.

By HELEN WALKER
TWIN FALLS — One of the questions most frequently asked me on freezing is: Do I have to blanch vegetables before I freeze them?

Quoting from an Edison Electric Institute publication, "Blanching or scalding is absolutely necessary to stop enzymatic action to prevent loss of color, flavor and nutritive value during storage." In many vegetables the natural growing processes continue even after they have been frozen, unless retarded by scalding or blanching. When these processes have been checked vegetables retain their natural flavor, texture, color and nutritive value. The care and use manual which comes with the freezer will give you the correct time and method for various vegetables, and so will many cookbooks. Freezing will not improve the quality of food.

You can't expect to put tough meat, dried out-stringy fowl, wilted vegetables, overripe and bruised fruit into your freezer and take out food that is delicious and perfect. Fruits and vegetables should be picked at the peak of flavor and quality, then packaged and placed in the freezer as soon after picking as possible. The less time that elapses between the garden and the freezer, the better the results.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the proper packaging and sealing of foods for your freezer for if not properly prepared and packaged in moisture-vapor-proof materials, they will dry out, lose color, flavor and nutritive value. Packaging and sealing foods is by far the most important operation in home freezing. If you do not package and seal properly or if you use unsuitable materials, your work will prove of little value. You will be able to find information on this in many publications. Food should not be kept longer than from one growing season to another. Some foods should be kept for shorter periods of time. The idea is not how long foods should be kept, but how well they will keep during out-of-season periods. For best quality avoid accumulation of "old stock" in your freezer.

Remember that nothing improves while it is sitting in the freezer. Your instruction booklet will give you guidelines for best storage life of various foods.

The freezer owner usually has a great deal of money in "frozen assets," so you should know how to protect this investment. If the freezer is off for some time (and you don't peek) — if it is fully stocked the contents will remain frozen for at least two days — if half full, at least one day. If the food does thaw, don't panic, all is not lost. All uncooked food can be cooked and frozen again. Baked goods can be safely refrozen, but will probably be drier. Authorities state that if foods are partially thawed and ice crystals remain in the package they can be safely refrozen. The quality will be reduced even if partially thawed. A frozen food is partially thawed when the temperature of the package is less than 40 degrees. Use a thermometer between wrappings and the food to test this.

Each family will purchase its freezer with a specific use for it. For many it is the best way to preserve foods in all their wholesome goodness — for others a convenient storage for frozen food purchases. The important thing is to learn what it can do for you, use it to its fullest and you will discover it is one of the most convenient appliances you own.

Miss Johns, Odom exchange promise

Most of the personal grooming items women need; to stay free and fresh and feminine throughout vacation trips come in handy travel sizes. These include mini sprays, mini powders and mini pads. Packing the minis saves valuable luggage space.

Blueberries are a summer fruit staple. Look for berries with dark color and a silvery bloom. This bloom is a natural, protective waxy coating. Select berries that are plump, firm, uniform in size, and free from stems and leaves.

Bristles of the vacuum cleaner should be cleaned occasionally. Use fingers and a coarse comb to work suds into bristles and draw out dirt and lint. Rinse thoroughly and dry before using.

TWIN FALLS — Marcella Johns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Johns, was married to Robert Odom, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McCoy, Kamlah, in rites Aug. 11 at the First United Pentecostal Church. Rev. G.W. Voas performed the ceremony before a setting of Bettertimes and pink gladioli, pink chrysanthemums and candelabra.

The bride wore a Bridal Original of scalloped Chantilly lace that formed a coat effect over a full-sleeved empire A-line satapeau gown. The Victorian styling featured a high scalloped neckline and bishop sleeves. Her elbow-length veil of English silk illusion was held by a lace cap enhanced with pearl flowers.

She carried a cascade bouquet of pink Elegance carnations and red roses. Linda Johns, St. Louis, Mo., sister of the bride, was honor attendant, with Mrs. Lee Garrison, Twin Falls, sister of the bride, and Lorene Messner, Twin Falls, as bridesmaids.

Homer Odom, Winkelman, Ariz., served as best man, with Frank Nutt Jr., Kamlah, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Stephen Kelley, Kamlah; Keith Johns, Twin Falls, brother of the bride, and Everett Messner, Twin Falls, as ushers.

Jeannette-Johns, of the bride, was flower girl, with Stacey Johns, daughter of the bride, as flower boy.

Guests were registered by Mrs. Frank Nutt Jr.

A reception was held after the ceremony, with the reception hall enhanced with bouquets of pink gladioli, Elegance carnations, seafoam statice, pink pompons and baby's breath.

Reception assistants included Mrs. Frank Nutt Jr. and Mrs. Dale Messner, aunts of the bride, cutting and serving cake, with Mrs. Eugene Dudley, and Mrs. Orval Whittaker, both aunts of the bride, pouring punch.

Special out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Homer Odom, Winkelman, Ariz.; Gail Hill, Floydada, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Bill McCoy and Stephen Kelley, all Kamlah, and Linda Johns, St. Louis, Mo.

The couple took a honeymoon trip to Sun Valley and will reside at Kamlah. The bridegroom is employed at State Hospital North, Orofino.

Spectrum of fashions shown

SUN VALLEY — What will women be wearing this fall? Almost anything that makes them feel comfortable. That is the trend as indicated Thursday at the "Fall Fashion Follies."

Girls modeled the "Adventure" apparel. A wide spectrum of fashions were presented, from the traditional look in tightly tailored clothing to impulsive and expressive clothing.

Proceeds from the buffet luncheon and fashion show, staged in the lodge's Duchin Room, benefited the Sun Valley Creative Art Center. The money will fund an arts and crafts program and environmental studies at the Ernest Hemingway Grade School, Ketchum.

And she said, Paris fashion designers, no longer influence fashion, "fashion is influenced by what is worn on the streets."

Many of the fashions created moods, impressions of a certain clothing style. The models showed apparel with Indian, Pioneer, cowboy and gypsy flavors.

Clothing no longer stresses the co-ordinated, one design, to an outfit look. One model wore black corduroy pants, flecked with white, a multi-colored striped knit shirt and topped it off with a checkered shrink vest.

A Lovelier You

BEAUTY DIET FOR GAINERS

By Mary Sue Miller

A lovely writes: When I stuff myself to gain weight my skin gets bumpy. Did you ever hear of a worse situation? Help!

The Answer: Stop stuffing!

That is good advice whatever the state of a girl's weight or skin.

The idea that mountains of rich food—banana splits and pizzas—increase the poundage of an underweight girl is not necessarily so. Rich foods add weight to heavy girls, because their systems are adjusted to overages. Thin girls only get indigestion and are thrown for a loss. In either case, quantities of sweets and fats upset the skin.

For good skin and normal weight, you must make a point of eating what fashion models call "Beauty Foods." There's not a thing exotic about them—the foods, that is.

The main elements are familiar proteins and vitamins. The proteins are found in meat, fish, fowl, cottage cheese, and whole-grained cereals and bread. The vitamins are in milk, eggs, yellow and leafy-green vegetables, tomatoes, citrus juice and fruits.

To gain weight, your daily diet should total 3200 calories and 2300 of them should be used for the beauty foods. The rest, 900 calories, go for fats, starches and sweets.

It is possible that a certain amount of gaining exercise for especially thin spots and corrective skin care would be necessary. In any case try the scheme. You eat well, feel great and look lovely.

YOUR GAIN

Are you thin, too thin? And you never can gain an ounce? Send for my leaflet, YOUR GAIN. It shows you how to gain a pound a week by eating the right foods, working with spot increasing routines and having fun. Plus tips on your most flattering fashion styles. For your copy, write to Mary Sue Miller, in care of your newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 15 cents in coin.

Coordinator of the series, Dr. Guy Hunt, 4803 Richardson, says the seminar is designed to explore critical issues in American life, and he cordially invites interested citizens to attend the seminar.

Sen. Church will speak concerning American foreign policy. The general format for the seminar series is for a prepared talk followed by a short break and ending with a discussion period.

Dr. Hunt noted the lecture series is scheduled to complement the yearly faculty lecture series and several Boise State faculty member lecturers will be a part of this seminar series. Dr. Hunt also commented the "Gaps in American Society" seminar may be taken on either an undergraduate or a graduate level. Two credits will be given for those who register. Space priorities will be given first for those who will attend for credit.

Fall fashion is in "hide"

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Fall '71 is the season when elegant leather apparel will put fashion into hide society. New leather coats, suits and separates for both informal and dress occasions have the look of the elite, a strictly upper-class collection in terms of styling, softness and wearability. American leathers used in the new fashions comprise a "Who's Who" of the best tanneries yet turned out. The list leads off with smooth cabretta, and lambskin suede, and continues with sueded buckskin, split cowhide, shearling, "naked" leathers, embossed and real patent leathers, and others.

With the technological advances made in tanning and manufacturing, the care and cleaning of leather is an easy matter, advises Leather Industries of America.

Sheila Peckardt, Hammond marry in local ceremony

Ruffles and Bows

If you're tired of seeing the same dress you're wearing on every woman walking down the street, here's a shopping hint. Buy dresses with classic lines and simple styling so that personal touches may be added. A good basic dress will allow you to alter the bodice.

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls First United Methodist Church was the setting for the Aug. 14 wedding of Sheila Peckardt, daughter of Mrs. Dwight Peckardt and the late Dwight J. Peckardt, and Ronald E. Hammond, son of Mrs. Henrietta Wald, Pocatello, and the late Mr. Hammond, Portland, Ore.

Rev. Herbert E. Morry, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony before a pair of circular brass candelabra holding tall white tapers and centered with arrangements of white spider chrysanthemums, white carnations and chrysanthemums on palm leaf and centered with white satin bows. The altar held an heirloom 70-year-old Bible belonging to the bridegroom.

The sanctuary pews were marked with sprays of tea leaf greenery centered with white sugar bells and white ribbon. White feathered doves were perched on each spray.

The candles were lighted by Cathy Epley, Portland, and Bradley Van Patten, El Torro, Calif. Mrs. Dorothy Gibson was organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Tom Van Patten, El Torro, wore a Bridal Original gown of pure silk organza that featured fine scalloped imported Chantilly lace shaping the bodice of the empire line that swept to a soft chapel train applied with Chantilly lace. Scalloped Chantilly lace edging accented the waistline and ruffled camelot sleeve.

The Chantilly lace cap with a ruffle of pearl edged tulle and pearl encrusted crown held her alow-length veil with a butterfly face veil of English nylon illusion.

She carried a cascade bouquet of a white orchid and stephanotis accented with ivy. She carried a white lace handkerchief. Her jewelry was a rhinestone pendant, borrowed from her mother which had been a gift of her father.

The bride's attendants were Sandy Evans, McCall, as maid of honor and Mrs. Dorothy Price, Pocatello, as bridesmaid. They are both sorority sisters of the bride.

Earl Price, Pocatello, was best man. Ushers were Dr. Daryl Bunde and Sam McNabb, Pocatello, and Ron Bollinger, Twin Falls.

The flower girls were Debbie Hendrix, Filer, and Cynthia Epley, Portland, Ore. They carried baskets of white chrysanthemum petals.

Douglas Hendrix, Filer, was ring bearer and carried the rings on a white satin pillow accented with lace and ribbons. The pillow was made by Mrs. Ernie Marlow, Spokane, Wash.

Soloist was Howard Moon, Twin Falls, accompanied by organist Mrs. Dorothy Gibson. Karen Popplewell, Buhl, a sorority sister of the bride, attended the guest book. The guest book was placed on a round table with a white floor-length skirt of embroidered nylon.

The receiving line was flanked by candelabra.

The bride's table was covered with an embroidered nylon skirt and centered with an all-white four-tiered wedding cake. A pillar arrangement of white satin wedding balls, pearl hearts, doves and rings, tulle and ribbon centered the cake. A garland of ivy and white chrysanthemums encircled the silver candelabra holding tall white tapers. Ivy surrounded the cake. The cake was baked by Mrs. W.A. Bingham.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD E. HAMMOND

The quartet tables were covered in white and centered with tea leaf greenery, white candles and white feathered doves.

The cake was cut by Mrs. Dorothy Van Patten, El Torro, and served by Mrs. Karen Hendrix, Filer. Pouring punch and coffee were Mrs. Florence See, Mrs. Edna Bruffey, Buhl, Mrs. Norma Epley, Portland, and Mrs. Esther Kaeser, Boise.

In charge of gifts were Alleen Tomlinaga, Pocatello, Carla Weaver and Mrs. Pat Derbidge, Caldwell, all sorority sisters of the bride.

The A.O.U.L. Sorority sisters of the bride sang several songs to the couple.

Nostalgia shows in revivals

NEW YORK (UPI)—The rhythms of the waltz and the tango are beating out the electronic rock in social dancing around the nation.

Once more, partners actually are touching and at the rate some of the classical ballroom steps are coming on, Mary Molaghan wouldn't be surprised to see even the minut reappear.

This long-time leader in the American dance world says the whole trend to the ballroom classics — with waltzes and tangoes — way up there in new popularity because they're showy — is just part of the nostalgia mood sweeping the country.

The nostalgia shows also in such as "old" fashion revivals (from the 1930s and 1940s), old movies or new movies with old style love plots, return of the "big band" sound which had its heyday in the 1930s and '40s also.

The nostalgia gambit, in turn, probably results from post-World War II social changes "so fast we couldn't keep up...we blew it. So everyone's going back," Miss Molaghan believes. She adds, though, "I wish I were a Margaret Mead (the anthropologist) so maybe I could understand it all better."

BOISE — Paul Bunyan Days in St. Maries is combined with Benewah County Fair and Horse Show for a four-day extravaganza starting Thursday.

The Fair and Horse Show initiate the celebration, but for the real fun of Paul Bunyan days — activities are at 10 a.m. on Saturday with a Kids Parade, noon barbecue, and logging and water events at 1 p.m. Sunday, Oldtime Musket Shoot begins at 10 a.m., noon barbecue, and afternoon-long logging competition. On Monday (that's Labor Day), the big parade is 10 a.m. followed by lumberjack championships. Carnival and concession booths all three days. Oldtime Fiddlers help with the entertainment including the evening dances. While in town, take a little time to drive over to Heyburn School and view the likeness of legendary Paul Bunyan himself, in a huge statue on the School's front yard.

Since Labor Day means three full days of fun, not far from St. Maries is the famous river, the Shadowy St. Joe — and you'll have all the time you need for a leisure cruise. It's the highest navigable river in the world and thanks to Ripley's "Believe-It-Or-Not" column, the many honors now include the only river anywhere that cuts right through the middle of a lake staying completely within its own banks — undisturbed!

If you do indeed go up north for this three-day holiday called Labor Day, be sure and schedule your trip to include some time on Sunday near Orofino. You have to see it to believe it — an old-fashioned threshing bee — one and one-half miles southeast of town on U.S. Highway 12. There's no charge whatsoever. Activities begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. Don't miss this chance to see wheat harvested the way Granddaddy did with 20 tons of huffing, puffing, chugging steam-powered tractors and lots of "elbow grease."

Every sport finishes the season with championship contests where skilled participants vie for honors. Horse shoe pitching is no exception. This weekend Buhl hosts the Idaho State Horseshoe Pitching Competition with entries coming from all across the state to try their hand at winning.

Entrants are placed in classes according to their percentage of ringer figure (very similar to fighting in golf). Trophies are presented, and there's no charge for watching. The place is Eastman Park, two blocks off U.S. Highway 30, close to the center of town.

Two cities in Idaho put on their best "bb and tucker" to celebrate Barbecue Day on Saturday. In Piggins, races and games begin in City Park at 1 p.m., followed by the big feed at 4 p.m. complete with ham, beef, lamb, baked beans, salads, hot rolls and pie. In Kamiah, Barbecue Day means a Cowboy Breakfast bright and early, an art exhibit, air show, street sports, queen contest, parade, and finally their famous free meal to all who pass by in thanks for a bountiful harvest. (Don't tell anyone, but there's a third barbecue — the annual Payette River Cattlemen's Feed, Rodeo and Dance in Garden Valley, including 24-hour pit roasted beef and corn-on-the-cob.)

Three summer theatres finish up this week. Running until Sunday, are the four rotating plays at 14th and Garden Streets in Coeur d'Alene, and ending Saturday at Pierre's Playhouse in Victor is the old-fashioned melodrama, "The Demon Barber." Curtain time both places is 8:30 p.m. Antique Festival Theatre closes their successful summer repertory Monday and Tuesday at Hagerman City Park.

Fairs and Rodeos this week: In Boise all week long and through Labor Day, is the Western Idaho Fair featuring on Saturday the Blue Ribbon Invitational Horse Sale of registered Appaloosas and Quarter Horses. Almost the same dates as Boise but ending Thursday is the Madison County Fair in Rexburg. Wednesday through Saturday Salmon hosts Lemhi County Fair and Rodeo, Sept. 2-6 is Minidoka County Fair and Horse Races in Rupert; Friday and Saturday both Arco with Butte County Fair and Horse Show and Filer with Jefferson County Fair-Little Buckaroo Rodeo-Amateur Horse Races. There's special stock car races in Blackfoot and Meridian; and Labor Day Golf Tournaments in Rexburg, Caldwell and Twin Falls.

Head said that as he got down from the truck he saw a body in the roadside ditch; shot through the bridge of the nose. When he walked to the car containing the pair, the doctor said he asked them if they were hurt, but said he sensed something was wrong when the pair refused to answer.

"I knew something was wrong," he said. "I was hoping Marshall Jones would pull out his gun, but he didn't."

The doctor said Jones apparently didn't see a smear of blood along the side of the car and he was afraid to cry out in case the man would try to do something.

The doctor said when the man stepped from the car Jones pulled his gun but the man drew a revolver from his coat and shot Jones in the chest.

"I knew I was dead," the doctor said, but he jumped into the roadside ditch and grabbed a rock. When he got up he found Jones on top of the man. "He wrestled the pistol from the man and hit him on the head with it," Head said. "He fractured his skull."

A search of the area turned up the rest of the bodies. All had been shot point blank once in the face with a .38-caliber weapon.

Richard De Luna told authorities that he and his cousins were sitting in their car drinking beer and celebrating the end of the pea season. He said a man approached their car, and without uttering a word, shot the driver dead.

As the others got out of the car and advanced on the man, De Luna said, they were picked off by the assailant from close range.

De Luna and Jones were reported in satisfactory condition in area hospitals. Hennepin was transferred to an Idaho Falls Hospital where he is reported in satisfactory condition.

Authorities also said a quantity of marijuana was recovered from the house where the couple had been living since arriving in the area a few weeks ago.

Minority solons requested

BOISE (UPI) — A member of the Idaho Commission on Human Rights Saturday proposed creating a state senator and representatives for Idaho's minority groups.

But although commission members agreed to study the plan made by Clifford Allen, Sweetwater, they rejected his proposal to place an Indian on the staff of Gov. Cecil D. Andrus.

Instead, Glenn Solander, Boise, newly-elected chairman of the commission, suggested asking the governor to call a session of a 10-member Indian Advisory Council so all could discuss the importance of understanding Indian treaties.

TWIN FALLS — A new office and shop of the Arnold Machinery Co., 500 Washington St. S., was formally opened Thursday.

The firm moved its Twin Falls outlet from the Curry Crossing area to the new location several weeks ago, Dave Cagn, manager, said. The firm handles lifting machinery, loaders, and other specialized equipment for materials handling purposes.

Pickets halt Filer roadwork

TWIN FALLS — Picket lines on the U.S. Highway 30 construction project west of Filer have brought work to a standstill and may threaten the project completion deadline, Duane Schrank, vice president, Twin Falls Construction Co. said Saturday night.

He said pickets appeared on the project Friday. Although his company is non-union, employees who are members of the union are not permitted to cross the picket lines. As a result, he said, the company does not have sufficient workers to continue the project.

Schrank said at the time the contract was let, his company was given a pre-determined wage scale by the government based on average union wages in this type of work and the surrounding area. Workers have been paid the salary throughout the project although union negotiators have obtained increases for union projects in the interim.

Schrank said the unions are seeking similar increases for their members who are employed by the Twin Falls Construction Company. Schrank says the firm hires both union and non-union workers.

The picketing unions are the Laborers Local 267, Pocatello, and Operating Engineers Local 370, Spokane, Wash.

Union pickets charge the construction company does not pay union wages. Two subcontractors are also working on the project. They are the Lone Pine Construction Company and Nelson Construction Co. H.H. Charlton, executive secretary for the Laborers Union, said he had no definite information at this time as to the situation on the picketing, but plans to be in the area Wednesday to personally check the matter.

Representatives of the Operating Engineer's Local could not be contacted Saturday.

Schrank said he was unable to increase the wages on the union and non-union workers on his payroll because of the wage freeze. He said officials of the Internal Revenue Service which administers the wage freeze regulations have advised he would be in violation of the order if wages were increased.

Schrank said about 50 to 60 men are out of work because of the move. He said he had hoped to complete the project by the end of September. Should the picket lines be maintained for another week or two it will delay completion schedule.

Schrank said the highway project which began last fall is about 85 per cent complete at this time.

Lucky day for overrun Jerome man

JEROME — Ernest Ray Haner, 31, of Jerome, escaped serious injury by freak mishap when a farm truck ran over him while he was lying in a field near Wendell.

Haner, according to reports, had been picking corn for the Green Giant Co. on the Bill Grout farm southwest of Wendell. He loaded his corn-picking machine, then sat down in the shade of the equipment to wait for a truck.

He apparently fell asleep, he told officers later. The driver of the truck, Jordan Grout, Buhl, en route to pick up Haner's load of corn, failed to see the sleeping man and backed his truck over him.

Haner was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, but was dismissed after treatment.

Shoshone dress code presented

SHOSHONE — "Neat and clean dress for all students is encouraged at all times," has been set as a guide-line for students for the coming school year, School Board members said this week.

The Shoshone schools open Monday. The statement is included in the dress code publication by the school, which does not dictate specific type of dress, but is intended as a guide to provide the "overall atmosphere" of the school desired by trustees.

The code states "the practice by some students of certain fads which tend to distract from a person's appearance will be discouraged."

"If necessary, the Student Council will assume the responsibility to advise students about their dress and appearance. Students who continue to disregard the advice of the Student Council will be brought to the attention of the administration and the School Board."

The regulations were made through cooperation of the faculty and trustees and officers of the Student Council, Superintendent Kenneth Crothers said.

Secretary employed

RICHFIELD — Mrs. Richard (Colette) Sparks has been hired as part time secretary for the Richfield school system.

This is the second replacement for the new job. The applications of Mrs. Rodney Pridmore and Mrs. Robert Ford were each withdrawn before the job opened.

Local government aides hit freeze

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The 23-member international executive board of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) met in closed session Saturday to plan opposition to President Nixon's wage-price freeze.

Jerry Wurf, international president of the union, said after the meeting the President has an "inherent bias and prejudice" against working people.

Wurf said he advocated wider freezes, including freezes on interests, profits and dividends, during the executive board meeting.

A spokesman said only "basic agreements on a general policy of opposition to the president" were reached during the meeting.

The spokesman said the same line of discussion would be carried into a later meeting of 16 paid area directors of AFSCME, also behind closed doors, and action will be postponed until after the local and state officials meet Sunday.

"We are saying negotiations should be carried on as if there was no wage freeze at all," the spokesman said. "State, local and county revenues appropriated for employees' wages should not be diverted during the freeze, but should be used for the purpose of granting raises as soon as that's possible."

Valley's worth $1/8 billion

By BONNIE JONES
Times-News Writer

BOISE — Real and personal property assessed valuation for Magic Valley counties is now $127 million, up about $7 million over last year's levels. State totals passed $1 billion for the first time.

Luther J. Passmore, Idaho Tax Commission, said the figures are exclusive of operating properties such as utilities. Valuations on these properties including railroads, power and telephone and gas companies have not yet been certified by county assessors.

State wide, the values are up $38.5 million or 3.05 per cent. In the eight Magic Valley Counties, there is about a $7 million increase and all counties but Camas show an upward trend in real and personal property values.

The figures are on real and personal property only and represent the cash values of property computed on the percentage ratio used in each of the counties. All counties in the state are working their ratios up to 20 per cent of true cash value by 1982 and most range around 15 per cent at this time, Passmore estimated. Utilities, already above 20 per cent are working downward toward 20 per cent.

Passmore said Blaine County revealed the greatest increase in assessed valuation for 1971 of the Magic Valley counties and had the second highest percent of increase in the state.

Camas County's valuation dropped by 21 per cent as one of seven counties in the state showing a decline. Ada County with a valuation of $116-million had the greatest dollar value increase and Valley County, up 17.2 per cent, the greatest percentage increase. Blaine County was up 17.52 per cent; Twin Falls County's real and personal property assessed valuation climbed from $44,358,420 in 1970 to $46,082,636 in 1971 for an increase of $1,724,216 or 3.88 per cent, about average in the state.

Other Magic Valley counties on the basis of the 1970 assessed valuation, the 1971 figure, the dollar increase or decrease and the percentage are: Blaine County, $11,380,053 and $13,374,339, up $1,993,286 or 17.52 per cent.

Camas County, $3,289,440 and $3,283,082, down $6,358 or .21 per cent.

Idaho FHA aids 1,700

BOISE (UPI) — Nearly 1,700 Idaho farmers and rural residents received financial assistance through the Farmers Home Administration in 1971 to purchase farms and housing.

In a report released Friday, state FHA director Donald L. Winder said 330 loans to aid in farm ownership and 1,353 loans for individual rural housing units had been made.

Winder said the rural housing program has tripled since 1969. With nearly $22 million loaned in 1971, compared with slightly more than $7 million loaned in 1969.

and $14,457,327, up $668,876 or 4.85 per cent. Lincoln County, $3,179,469 and $3,577,404, up $397,935 or 12.52 per cent. Minidoka County, $14,801,105 and $15,287,260, up $486,155 or 3.28 per cent.

DEMOLITION of the former Baker Motor Co. in Burley will allow construction of a new business, the Business at Variety Store. Klempner Concrete Co. of Paul, soon working on the demolition project, has the contract for the first stage of the work.

Blaine uneasy on rockfest

By TERRY CAMPBELL
Times-News Writer

BELLEVUE — Concern. Resentment. Flat opposition. Welcome. Opinion about the Wood River Rock Festival scheduled on Labor Day weekend one quarter mile outside this town of 600, runs the full gamut, but the main mood in Bellevue is uncertainty.

Townpeople have never experienced such a large crowd of people. They say they "just don't know what to expect." There was mixed reaction among the teenage residents of Bellevue. William Ivie, 18, welcomed the rock concert.

Mike Barratt, also 18, said he was "completely against" the festival and the hoards of people it is expected to draw.

He said, "We have never had them before and we don't need them now."

Residents here are concerned that both the town and the festival site are not equipped to handle so large a crowd. One resident said, "You take a town this small — it can't accommodate them. You've never seen a place in your life where you didn't see a crowd spill over into the town."

Laura Pascale said she was definitely against the festival and the gathering. "I know the canyon," she said, "They can't possibly put that many cars up there. They would fill the entire canyon."

Bellevue businessman Edward Cameron summed up most of the town people's concern. He said, "We are not equipped to handle that many people. We have no police protection."

He said of the festival site, "There's an extreme fire hazard in the canyon. This time of year there are a lot of rattlesnakes."

Cameron said, "It's not really a good area for that type of meeting."

Some residents expressed resentment — resentment that they were not consulted and resentment that they will not be able to hold their traditional Labor Day barbecue.

A frequent comment heard was, "This thing was just dumped into our laps two weeks ago."

Boyd Jones, chairman of the Bellevue Labor Day Barbecue Committee said the town's event has been postponed. According to Jones the parade and barbecue had been an annual event for 51 years.

Many former residents return to Bellevue for the Annual celebration. Jones said, "The festival is bad enough but their timing is worse."

COST PLUS $10

That's right, John Chris Motors is selling their remaining stock of new Pontiacs at Cost plus $10. However this offer will expire the evening of September 11th, 1971. Take full advantage of these bargains and call your favorite salesman or stop in soon.

President Nixon has recommended Legislation to repeal the excise tax on new passenger cars retro-active to August 15, 1971. If this legislation is enacted, Pontiac, Cadillac and GMC will refund the amount of the tax reduction to the purchasers of new 1971 or 1972 passenger vehicles purchased between August 15, 1971 and the date on which the tax is repealed.

It costs so little to treat yourself to the wonderful world of Magnavox Color TV! NOW $569

Magnavox Total Automatic Color is a complete electronic system—offering you not only the utmost in tuning convenience, but also the finest in performance! TAC lets you kick that bothersome tuning habit by automatically keeping flesh tones natural and pictures sharp—when you switch channels or when the scene changes. TAC eliminates the need for jumping up and down to adjust controls, for it remembers to give you a perfectly-tuned picture—with the right colors—instantly and automatically—on every channel, every time! The new ultra-rectangular and ultra-bright Matrix Tube—unlike many others—has a black, opaque substance surrounding each color dot—thereby reducing light reflection and resulting in far better picture contrast, sharpness and far more brightness. Its squarer corners give greater viewing area... its flatter surface gives less glare. The new Magna-Power Chassis with many solid-state components, assures better performance and greater reliability. Don't settle for anything less than a magnificent Magnavox Color TV with new and improved TAC!

BOBBI'S

DEAR POLLY—Our elementary school discontinued school banking, but I have continued to set aside a quarter a week. I do not miss a quarter, and if this is continued through junior and senior high school there is money on hand to cover the cost of year books, class rings, senior pictures, etc. When our daughter was a senior her father had been ill for months, and I was doubly glad to have this money at a time when school expenses reached a peak.—JANET

DEAR POLLY—To keep dolls standing up, glue the feet to flat plastic lids from cans. Of course, this is preferable for dolls with long dresses.—MARY JANE

DEAR POLLY—I use masking tape instead of freezer tape for sealing packages to go in the freezer. It's less expensive and works just as well.—DORIS Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, c/o this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY—While I had sore hands, I discovered that keeping a special pair of rubber gloves to use while cooking is very handy. When mixing anything, the food does not stick to the gloves nearly as much as it does to the hands, and can be washed off with hotter water than could be used directly on the hands.—MRS. J. P.

DEAR POLLY—If discarding any of the children's outgrown all-weather coats with fake fur linings, save the linings to make those simply but stylish children's vests that are so popular. Most such fabrics do not even need a lining.—R. P.

DEAR POLLY—A coat of wax applied to a wood picture frame improves its appearance and makes cleaning easier.—VERA

DEAR POLLY—It's a struggle to get all the pattern pieces folded neatly and back in those small pattern envelopes, so I use brown paper lunch bags. I cut the pattern envelope open, glue the picture of the garment on one side of the bag and the measurement chart on the other. The top is stapled shut and the pattern is neatly stored, with information needed visible on the outside.—ROBERTA

DEAR POLLY—I never throw away the liquid from sweet pickles, which are now quite expensive. I buy less costly dill, slice them into the sweet pickle juice and refrigerate for several hours. I then have nice, sweet, crisp, dill chips.—RUBY
(Polly's Note—I put cooked beans in the pickle juice that I save, bring to a boil, cool and then put in the refrigerator.)

DEAR POLLY—Slip shower curtain hooks over one end of the closet rod and hang umbrellas, belts and purses on them.—DEBBIE

DEAR POLLY—I use a lot of pins when I sew. My husband bought me a magnetic strip from the hardware store. I glued a strip on the table part of the machine, and I push the pins to the strip. This saves a lot of time and back-bending.—MRS. R. S.

Easy Crochet
Bands of matching lace trim on the skirt and poncho make a colorful set. No. 5496 has 270cher directions for Small (8-10), Medium (12-14) and Large (16-18). Sizes inclusive.

THE PIRATE!

CANNON FIRE FROM THE PIRATE SHIP WAS KNOCKING OUR TOWER APART, AND CARMA SAID SHE KNEW OF A DUNGEON WHERE WE COULD SHELTER. WE HURRIED TO IT--TO BE SURE WE HAD NO IDEA ANYONE HAD SURVIVED THE EXPLOSION ON THE LONGBOAT.

MY FAME PRECEDES ME! HURRY, WHOEVER YOU ARE, AND JOIN THE RATS IN THE DUNGEON. I COULD SHOOT YOU, BUT IT WILL AMUSE ME TO KNOW YOU ARE STARVING WHILE I COLLECT THE TREASURE!

CARAMBA! WE ARE IN A MESS. WHAT AN ODD LIGHT! I WOULD HAVE THOUGHT IT TO BE DARK AS PITCH!

IT COMES FROM A TUNNEL INTO THE SEA, WHICH OPENS OUTSIDE.

BALAPOR, AN INVADER WHO KNOWS LITTLE ABOUT THIS ISLAND, MUST NOT KNOW ABOUT THIS TUNNEL, FEW DO.

FAITH, THEN I'LL SWIM THROUGH IT, SETTLE THAT BALAPOR, THEN FREE YOU TWO.

AMIGO, CARMA SAYS IT IS A BASKING PLACE FOR SHARK AND BARRACUDA!

GEE, ERIK, HOW COULD HE SWIM THROUGH THERE AND LIVE?

Ask Them Yourself

FOR ALEX KARRAS of the Detroit Lions pro football team.

Do you have any major beef about the way the game is being played these days?—Kenneth House, West Medway, Mass.

● What I don't like about pro football today is that they're getting those little 5-1, 110-pound foreign soccer players, and these guys determine the outcome of the games. They sing their little song, "I'm go-eeng to keek a touchdown, I'm go-eeng to keek a touchdown." It's ridiculous. You've got all these 6-8, 250-pounders killing themselves for 59 minutes and 37 seconds, and a little guy comes out and kicks a 50-yard field goal and the game is over. It makes me mad.

FOR JANE RUSSELL, actress

Would you consent to act in the nude if 1999 were starting today?—M. T. Todd, Waco, Texas.

● If I started today, I wouldn't be in the business. In a word, "No."

FOR ROB MATHIAS, Congressman and ex-Olympic champion

In your new job as legislator do you continue to keep in shape as you did in your days as an athlete? If so, how do you keep in shape, and does it pay off for you in the essentially menial job you have now?—C. Lawrence, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● I do continue to keep in good physical condition by exercising and participating in sports every chance that I get. I think that being in good shape helps make me more alert and ready to respond to the demands of my job as a U.S. Congressman. In addition to my regular program of general calisthenics, I try to walk as much as possible. I also like to take hikes and explore when I am at my camp in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. My family and I enjoy playing volleyball in the summer and skiing in the winter. To help relieve the tension and pressure that builds up at work, I try to spend a little time in the Hotsie Gyn working out and playing paddle board with some of my colleagues. I've found this the best way to relax and feel refreshed.

FOR J. EDGAR HOOVER, Director of the FBI

What is the highest rank a woman can attain in the Federal Bureau of Investigation?—B. H. Fremont, Los Angeles, Calif.

FOR ARLENE DAHL

You've been married five times. I have heard that you feel women are most beautiful when they are in love or married. If so, what about the woman who is neither but still enjoys her social activities happily?—T. Smith, Canton, Ohio.

● I'm happy if women who are neither in love or married feel they're perfectly happy with their lives as they are... but they really don't know what they're missing! A good relationship between a man and a woman is one of the amazingly beautiful things that life has to offer. Any woman who "goes it alone" must be a victim of circumstances; or else—if she's really doing so by her own personal choice—in my view, she's a bit misguided. I'm delighted if there are some who claim to be perfectly happy. But I do think it's a little like saying you're enjoying a diet of skim milk and hard-boiled eggs—just slightly suspect.

● Women can aspire to top noninvestigative administrative positions through our 59 field offices as office service supervisors. At FBI Headquarters women also play a significant role in a wide range of positions in fields such as computer programming, records management, laboratory technical work, and as executive and administrative assistants at the highest levels.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS, psychologist

You have a very heavy schedule, what with radio and TV programs, your writings, lecturing, home, husband and daughter. With so many things needing your attention, how do you get everything done?—K. Worth, Kankakee, Ill.

● I don't. In fact, I'm always troubled by procrastination. Deep down, I have the feeling that I was really meant to sit on a cruise lounge eating chocolates. I overcome the desire to procrastinate by breaking up large tasks into small ones, so that I have immediate goals to aim at and frequent feelings of accomplishment. To spur the on.

FOR JACK DEMPSEY, former heavyweight boxing champion

What hobby or occupation is keeping you busy and interested these days? Are you still active in your restaurant business?—A. S. Krovitz, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● You can find me in my restaurant in New York City almost every day of the week. I spend a lot of time each day talking to visitors who come from all over the country. Also—I go to many sporting events and sports banquets. All in all, I keep very busy and very interested in what's going on.

FOR MIKE NICHOLS, director

What do you consider to be your best work?—D. N. Thomas, Bloomington, Ind.

● "Carnal Knowledge"—but of course it was the last one. This is like answering "Which wife did you like the best?" You can't say the first one—you can't say that you were much better off 10 years ago than now. You have to continuously tell yourself, "At least it's getting better. I'm much happier now." I think of my life as a constantly revised draft—and I always like the final draft.

FOR SEN. BARRY GOLDWATER of Arizona

Do you think we'll be able to find a solution to the problem of excessive spending in political campaigns?—Michael Matney, Elmira, N.Y.

● As long as they print money, there will be a problem. Cash can't be accounted for; it's too easy to pass around in brown envelopes. Only the candidate knows who is raising money for him. But we all spend too much—and two-thirds of it is thrown away. Part of that waste, I should add, includes television. I find myself turning off the TV anytime a candidate comes on.

FOR EVA GABOR, "Green Acres"

Do you own all those beautiful negligees that you wore in the "Green Acres" series, or are they the property of the show?—Dorothy Waitlant, Danville, Ill.

● All garments that I wear on the show are purchased by the studio. But—luckily me—I got them after the season ends!

Want to ask a famous person a question? You can through this column. Send your question, preferably on a postcard, to Ask Them Yourself, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. Mike Connors, TV's "Mannix": From Athlete to Ditchdigger to Star Until Mike Connors played "Mannix" on TV, he says, "I was considered primarily an athlete who just happened to act for a living. I think every actor who has been an athlete has had to overcome this handicap."

There are other problems that face an actor who has been an athlete. Like having to watch his temper. "I have a slow temper, and it takes a great deal to make me lose it. But when I do—I go crazy! I used to cause a lot of trouble in high school when it was a badge of manliness to be ready for a fight." He also got into his share of fights back when he was playing basketball at UCLA (which was where a talent scout first spotted him). "There were certain little tricks we all used: hooking the pants, elbowing constantly, pushing when a game got close—that sort of thing. I got barred from the game a goodly number of times."

Mike still gets into jams sometimes. "There's always some guy who wants to prove to his girl or his wife that he's tougher than I am. He'll make a nasty crack about me to prove his own virility. Usually I can kid him out of it, like telling him I'm not really a great fighter, just a great lover." But one day when he was doing a night-club act in Mexico, a big-game hunter who also fights bulls on horseback, openly challenged Mike—in newspaper headlines—to a duel using guns and live ammunition! Two days later, Mike was in a restaurant when his companion suddenly spotted the man and said, "There's the guy who challenged you!" Mike went over and introduced himself: "I understand you'd like to duel with me, using real bullets."

"That's right!" the man retorted. Said Mike, "It seems to me we'll both lose. One will be dead; and, since shooting someone is a crime, the other will go to jail. What do you say we have a drink together and then flip a coin to decide who is the fittest draw?"

For a moment the challenger was undecided, then he burst into laughter. "I guess that does make sense." He later admitted it was a girl who goaded him into challenging Connors.

Mike Connors' really has to keep in shape—not just because of the stunts he does on the show, but because he's one of the few stars who carries a one-hour weekly action-packed show almost totally by himself, with rarely a guest star in sight. "I get up at 5:30, then work out in my gym for about 15 minutes.

Mike's life is one of stability and loyalty. He has been married to Mary Lou, his college sweetheart, for more than 20 years.

"I've learned that the more you exercise, the more energy you have, and the longer you can work during the day."

Then I jump into the pool and swim as many laps as it takes to get me tired, get out, shower, and go to the studio. Sometimes when it's very cold, I substitute jogging for swimming. Weekends, I play tennis, go water-skiing, do other physical exercises to keep in shape. I've learned that the more you exercise to stay in shape, the more energy you have, and the longer you can work during the day." He puts in a 12-hour day at the studio, five days a week, nine months out of the year. "I rarely come home before eight at night. Luckily, I'm a fast study, so at least I don't have to work on my lines after dinner. I can learn them between setups on the set."

The first years in show business weren't easy for Mike. His wife worked as a secretary-hookkeeper, and he sold Fuller brushes, waxed floors, put in sprinkler systems—even dug ditches. "But we never went without a meal, and I always managed to scrounge up the $50 a month to pay the rent on our Hollywood apartment."

Mike was born Ktekor Ohanian in Fresno, Calif., where his father, who emigrated from Armenia when he was 17, learned English well enough to practice law. There's always a closely knit family. It still is. His father died when

"There's always some guy who wants to prove to his girl or his wife that he's tougher than I am. He'll make a nasty crack about me to prove his own virility. Usually I can kid him out of it, like telling him, 'I'm not really a great fighter, just a great lover.'"

Mike was 16, but he sees his mother as well as his brother and two sisters regularly.

Mike's life is one of stability and loyalty. He has been married to his college sweetheart, the former Mary Lou Wiley, for more than 20 years. They have two children, a son Matthew Gunnar, who is 12, and a daughter, Dana Lee, 11. His closest friends are people he met years ago, before he became well known, and he has had the same agent for many years. His publicist says of him: "In a profession where most of your clients treat you like dirt, it's refreshing to find someone who treats you like a gentleman."

In his pre-Mannix days, Mike made a number of movies. He got his first break playing the attorney in "Sudden Fear" with Joan Crawford. He's had co-starring roles in a lot of pretty good films; but none of them did much for his career. Now that he has made it on TV, he doesn't think much about the big screen. "I get offers for films constantly. My agent has three right now. But unless it's terribly exciting, I'm not interested."

Certainly, he doesn't need the money. Gone are the days of pork-and-beans, when hamburgers were a treat. Today he lives with his wife and children on a one-acre estate in Encino, guarded by electric gates and a black Labrador retriever. A Chinese couple take care of the place, and his garage is crowded with a 1937 vintage Bentley, a Maserati, a Cadillac, a Corvette, and a Ford station wagon. "It's kind of embarrassing," he admitted, "since only two of us drive. We'll have to get rid of a couple of cars."

But you know he probably won't. He feels he has worked hard—and is still working hard—for what he has. At this point he feels there's only one person who poses a threat to Mike Connors—John Wayne. "Whenever his films are opposite my show, we get murdered!" says Mike.

How to Retire Before 40— By a Couple Who Did Exactly That

A lot of people muse about early retirement: sunny latitudes, independence, time to think and do and drift.... Wouldn't it be great? Of course it would. And as a couple we had done more than our share of dreaming and scheming about such an event. But there is one thing that sets us apart from most other people. Impulsively, audaciously, we made our dream come true. Four years ago, we sold our home and cars, gave up Gordon's fine job as a corporation pilot, said good-bye to treasured coworkers and neighbors and ran away to sea!

"Why would a 38-year-old man renounce his position, his Porsche and a prestige piloting job that took years of training?" our friends asked. "Why would any woman at 31 choose to give up her laundry machines, her antiques, her bathtub?" While it may have been hard for people to understand, we had our reasons.

"We have retired with today's priceless luxuries of clean air and water, and of quiet. And the wonderful right to move on to new adventures or warmer weather. And independence—the true independence of doing for yourself. That is the kind of retirement you or any family can enjoy together right now—if you are willing to do it."

The first was what we called "creeping pollution" and the fact that taxes kept taking a bigger bite out of take-home pay. The second was that we were separated often by business—and we like being together. And the third was that we had known of so many couples who had waited too long for their someday, and suddenly it was too late. We vowed that this would never happen to us!

By retirement, we don't mean lolling under a palm tree. We divide our time between two homes. Winters, we live aboard a 29-foot Danish-built sailing sloop in stoop-shouldered quarters that would send most American couples scuttling back to the corporate rat-race after one day! Except when we are in port, we seldom have refrigeration, hot showers or fresh lettuce. The galley is the size of a telephone booth, and we do all our own maintenance.

Summers, our home is a 21-foot diesel motorhome where we have more moving-around room than on the boat, but far less storage area. Again, we are independent of big-city pipes and wires and services, so we must attend to all our own needs.

This doesn't mean we don't have luxuries. We do! We have today's priceless luxuries of clean water and air, and of quiet. And the wonderful right to move on to new adventures or warmer weather. And independence—the true independence of doing for yourself, either in rapture or agony, luxury or yoke. That is the kind of retirement you or any family can enjoy together right now—if you're willing to do it.

Young retirees: a few short years ago, he was a successful pilot, she a harried housewife.

"A Summer Place": after wintering on their boat, the Gordons "get away from it all" in this 21-foot diesel camper.

It all began when Gordon started adding up the total worth of the Groene estate. "I bet we could drop out for at least five years if we sold the house and the rest of this stuff," he said one day when the temperature in Danville, Ill., was nudging zero from the wrong side. We don't have children, but there are many people who have made the same decision, kids and all: the decision to sell out, adopt a new standard of living, and wander the world until the money runs out. One family we know made the break with seven young children. They have stayed "dropped out" for 10 years, earning as they go. Many others take a leave of absence from work, arrange courses for the kids by mail, and stay away a year or more.

Ideally, of course, you should wait until you have made a killing in the stock market or real estate, or have inherited a pile from an obscure relative. But we had to do it the hard way. Here's a guide to others who'd like to follow in our footsteps:

START PLANNING TODAY

By happy coincidence, the things we enjoyed doing in our leisure time were often things that gained or saved us money. We used to spend our evenings in the basement making old woods come alive again or repairing antique pieces that charmed us. Our possessions were chosen because we liked them, restored because we wanted them in our home—and sold at delicious profit when the time came to part with them!

Your whole value picture may change when you begin planning for a young retirement. We bought an older home at a bargain and spent weekends making improvements. Because it was a roomy house in a good school district and popular price range, it sold readily. All of our major purchases were made with resale in the backs of our minds. Although we knew we would have to take a loss on many furnishings and appliances, we stuck to name brands and good woods that would find buyers speedily. As the time came closer for us to leave, every cent was spent with a new life in mind. Business suits were not replaced; tropical clothing began to replace winter wear in our wardrobes.

Could you save the money spent tonight on a movie and use it instead on a book that will be enjoyed many times in retirement? When replacing your TV, would it be wiser to buy a small portable that can travel, instead of a ponderous color set? Can the children be steered into hobbies they can pursue in your new life—like music lessons on instruments you won't have to leave behind? Are you pouring money today into fancies when you could be funding solid dreams? Are you spending these precious years in keeping up with the wrong Joneses?

Your savings plan may need the advice of an expert, but your spending is in your control. Beginning now, keep that early-retirement goal in front of you and try not to get bogged-down under tons of material goods that will later have to be stored, sold, insured, moved, given away or shouldered by you.

CULTIVATE THE TOOLS OF INDEPENDENCE

Every service or skill you cannot perform yourself must either be done without or paid for. Simple things like barbering and baking bread are a beginning. If your early retirement will be spent on land—say in the mountains or a seashore cottage—start reading about gardening, home maintenance, wiring and plumbing and all the things you want to provide for your family. Before we hoisted sail, we already had learned the basics of sewing, engine repair, knot-tying and navigation.

If you cannot live without electricity, you may have to buy (and learn to maintain) a generator. There is no television in many island paradises. Can you as a family learn to make a hilarious evening from a guitar and popcorn? Enjoy rainy afternoons with books and parlor games? All this is part of real away-from-it-all independence.

EARN AS YOU GO

We didn't have enough money to live on forever, but that didn't stop us. Janet was already a free-lance writer, Gordon began studying photography. We now work, when we want to, as a writer-photographer team.

Everywhere there are ways you can earn money. Many of our friends work in boat yards or charter their boats. Others work ashore as electricians, civil engineers, teachers, technicians. The difference is that none of us strives for material goals. We live and dress very simply, give priority to important things like dental work and go without such former necessities as cars, insurance, fad styles and lavish entertainment. When our larders are stocked, we sail away until we must work again.

ARE YOU MENTALLY PREPARED FOR A LIFE OF LEISURE?

Those who live by jangling schedules and job deadlines often ask about our typical day in the Bahamas aboard our boat. Ideally, we will be anchored off an island, perhaps an uninhabited one. We get up with the sun and Janet cooks a hearty breakfast on our Primus stove. Then she gets out the typewriter while Gordon chooses tools for the day's chores: endless painting and varnishing, engine repairs, maintaining the water pump or head, or any of the other thousand things that need attention in a killing sun-salt atmosphere.

After lunch, we like to take off in the dinghy for exploring ashore, shelling, beachcombing, visiting or picture-taking. Or we may dive over the side, snorkel and tie a reef where we can spear fish. Sometimes we find conch, whelk or crawfish to eat, or we fish for grouper or grunt.

Other times we eat meals that center around Janet's home-canned meats. At dinner, we talk about the new and different sea creatures we have seen, and we get our books to read on the day's "finds." After dark, we may go to bed early to read or sit in the cockpit looking at the stars while Janet plays her autoharp and sings. These are the good days.

Of course, there are the ghastly days, too—the days when storms slam us around, engines falter, anchors drag. But always there are the new sunrises and the wonderful pursuit of riches that lie just over the horizon. We still have our goals, our pleasures, good memories and exciting plans for the future. It's just that, somehow, most of them have nothing to do with money.

Often we sit down to a simple meal of home-baked bread with stuffed cabbage or homemade corned beef hash. We'll think about all those steaks we used to have, enter on the run and frequently thousands of miles apart. Then we'll look at each other, grin, and say, "Hey! We're the richest kids on the block."

There are a great many paradises in this world of ours—but all of them demand planning, preparation and hard work. They also demand shedding so many material goods that you can squeeze through the needle's eye into an early, earthy heaven. Before we're through, we're going to visit as many of those paradises as we can. Want to come along? ♦

Gordon Groene was a professional pilot until he "retired" at the age of 38. Since then, his articles and pictures have appeared in numerous magazines. Janet began writing for a weekly newspaper while in junior high; at age 17, she had her own column in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She has written for a number of magazines, and her book, "Cooking on the Go," was published recently by Grosset and Dunlap.

THE DOCTOR LETS YOU IN BY ARTHUR G. FREESE

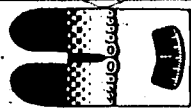

Polio Shots Are Not Obsolete

Public health experts are now concerned because, as polio has all but disappeared, children are being left without inoculation. Polio may have been sharply diminished, they warn, but it has not been eliminated. Fear is that many children will be defenseless if polio strikes again.

Dr. Vincent Gulner, Director of New York City's Bureau of Infectious Disease Control, advises this schedule of inoculation for all children: DPT shots (for diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus) at ages six, 12 and 18 weeks (oral polio vaccine should be given at the same time). Measles and rubella at one year. Smallpox vaccination at 15 months. Periodic boosters, on doctor's advice, after 18 months.

Trend in inoculation is toward combined serums, such as the DPT shot. Measles and rubella are now a combined shot; mumps will soon be added to it.

THE DIET WATCH BY HARRIET LA BARRE

What Science Says About "TV Snacking"

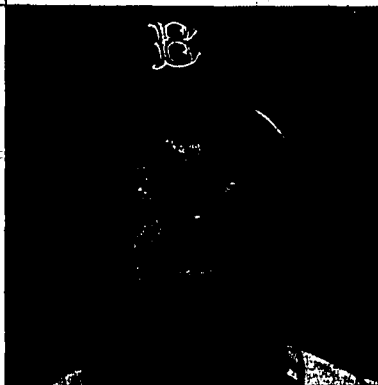

The more serene atmosphere in which the dieter eats, the less he eats. The simple explanation is that excitement and anxiety make you tense, and you eat more. Don't think that just because something comes under the heading of entertainment, it's relaxing. Tests made with people eating a meal while "relaxing" in front of the TV, indicate that when they watch a tense, stimulating show they eat rapidly, gulping down more food. Also, they have an increased production of stomach acid. And stomach acids can stimulate hunger! So if you insist on nibbling something during a TV show, pick foods that take a long time to chew and swallow—raw carrots are good and so are wedges of raw cabbage.

ECO-QUESTION BY DALE McKELVIE

Q. How Can You Get Rid of Old Tin Cans?

A. Some of the larger can companies throughout the country have begun accepting bi-metal cans for reclamation. In most cases, the companies then turn over the profit from the sale of the reclaimed metal to the community for environmental projects such as water purification and conservation. Contact the can companies in your area and see if they have such a program. If they don't, your community should urge them to start one.

SPORTS MINI-PROFILE: of Carl Yastrzemski

Yaz Learned His Baseball On The Potato Fields

Superstar Carl Yastrzemski is the highest-paid athlete in professional baseball. He's also one of the sport's most controversial personalities...Yastrzemski, who is working on a 3-year, $500,000 contract as an outfielder with the Boston Red Sox, is known as "Yaz" to sports followers who find it hard to pronounce his Polish name... Born and grew up in eastern Long Island, where his family were potato farmers; learned to play baseball in pick-up games on the potato fields and in Little League... Has won the batting championship of the American League three times and lost a fourth title last year by only .0003 of a point. His greatest year came in 1967 when he led his league in batting, runs-batted-in and home runs and carried the Red Sox to a pennant on the last day of the season... He's hit more than 40 homers a year three out of the past four years, has also won five Golden Glove awards for his play in the field. His arm is so strong that base runners are cautioned to follow a "First Commandment of the American League": "Thou shalt not run on Carl Yastrzemski"... Known as a loner who does not socialize with his fellow players, has had disagreements with most of his managers... But teammate Rico Petrocelli says, "He's helped me enormously. In fact, he's always spending time helping other guys on the team with their hitting." Petrocelli feels players and fans who knock "Yaz" are jealous of the fact that he makes so much money.

PEOPLE AND YOU BY SHIRLEY SLOAN FADER

Being Nice to Policemen DOES Make a Difference

If you're the victim, would your local policeman listen to your complaint? Maybe. Many crimes receive adequate police attention because of the manner in which the citizen presents his complaint. Studies of crime rates indicate that in more than two-thirds of the cases where the victims are disrespectful, no police report is ever written on the situation. Without a police report, there will be no follow-up police action on your complaint. If you as a citizen are civil to the police involved, your chances of having a report written on your problem increase enormously. And, the study indicates, if you are warmly respectful toward the police involved, they are almost certain to satisfy your wishes for an official police report and police action.

PET CORNER BY FELICIA AMES

Why Dogs Fight—How to Stop Them

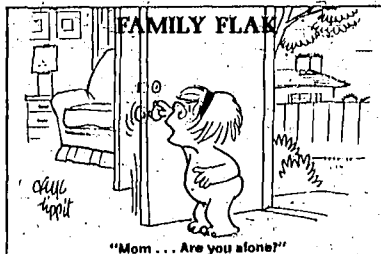

A sudden rash of dogfights in the neighborhood may mean storm warnings in more ways than one. Dogs, like people, seem to sense an approaching siege of bad weather and react with testy and restless behavior. City dog pounds report that the dogcatcher is busiest when the barometric pressure is falling. Young dogs take to the hills, or streets and alleys, in aimless wandering. Older dogs may suddenly take to fighting.

If you are involved in a dogfight, there are some practical things you can do that will not earn you a nipped wrist:

1. Grab the hind legs or tail of one of the dogs and heave him to one side. Best with small or medium-sized dogs.
2. Preferred method for making peace—douse the dogs with a bucket of water.

Do We Teach Our Children to Be Rebels—

The question is: why does one youngster stand firm under pressure from "the group" while another falls submissively in line?

It has always been a difficult task helping a child to grow up to be a healthy, happy individual—but never more difficult than it is today. These are times to try parents' souls. In the past, youngsters could be protected against the serious challenges that awaited them in the adult world. Not until they were old enough to be on their own, either away at college or holding down a job, did they have to make major decisions relating to their personal morality.

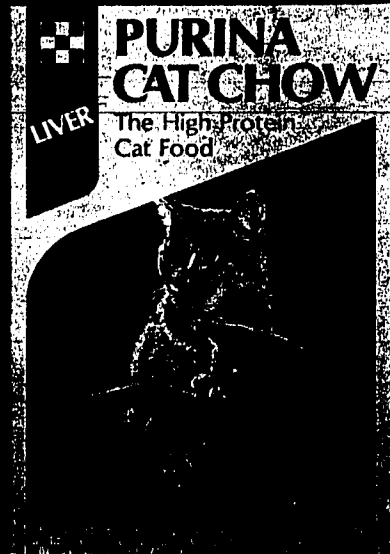

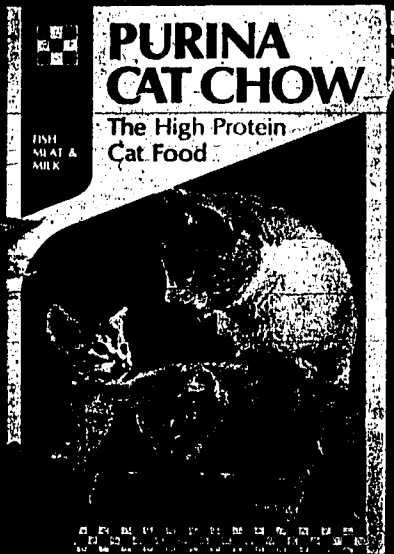

Today, however, it is not uncommon for even grade-school children to be exposed to drugs and for high-school students to be involved in sexual promiscuity or to be openly resisting authority. Such antisocial behavior, which understandably distresses parents, is almost automatically labeled as rebellion. In some cases the label is accurate—but in far more cases the boys and girls are doing the opposite of rebelling. They are conforming. They are doing what their friends do for no other reason than that their friends are doing it. They may not even enjoy it or believe in the cause; but as long as their friends behave this way, so do they.

"Conformity," points out psychiatrist George Krupp of Rockville Centre, N. Y.,

(NEW LIVER FLAVOR)

By Teaching Them to Conform? By Robert J. Levin

"For today's parents, whose children are coping all too soon with the problems of drugs, sex and authority, the goal seems reasonably clear: to help children learn to think for themselves and to practice 'creative nonconformity.'" is the opposite of being true to yourself. Instead of looking within, to find out what he genuinely thinks and how he feels, the conformist takes his cues from other people and does what they expect him to do."

From a parent's point of view, the question is whether family upbringing can in itself explain why one youngster stands firm under pressure from the group while another falls submissively in line. The issue is extremely complex, and in any given family, one child may be a rugged individualist while another may conform without the slightest whimper. But on the basis of studies by psychiatrists, sociologists and educators, some principles of behavior have become clear, and the knowledge of these can be helpful to parents who want their children to grow up with the ability to think for themselves.

With very small children, "teaching" conformity is inevitable. "Do as mommy does . . . Listen to what daddy says . . ." But this conformity in behavior often leads a parent inadvertently to teach conformity in feelings as well. "Tell Grandma you love her . . . Say thank-you to the nice lady . . ." Instructing a child to express feelings he doesn't yet understand is to teach an unfortunate lesson.

To some extent, parents encourage conformity because they believe it is in the child's best interest. And certainly the need to dress properly, to behave at the table, to exercise self-restraint in speech and action—these lessons and more must be learned because they are the "entrance requirements" to "civilized" society.

But parents also encourage conformity in the child because it is to their own advantage. An emphasis on unquestioning obedience, an insistence of rigid standards, spare the parent many clashes of will and emotional battles. And it is this kind of upbringing that risks making a child into a conformist who lacks initiative, imagination and individuality.

Perhaps the most important thing to keep in mind is this: psychologists have found that, as children, nonconformists learn that there is usually more than one answer to any given question. They are forced to think for themselves to find the answers that they felt were right. "Children who are not encouraged to think for themselves in the home," says Doctor Krupp, "cannot be expected to think for themselves outside the home. A parent must realize that he doesn't give up his authority just because he respects his child's right to express opinions. On the contrary, respecting the child's right strengthens the parent's authority by proving that he isn't afraid to consider a different opinion before acting. And this, after all, is exactly what he hopes his child will grow up to do—listen to others and then make his own decisions."

In addition to permitting honest differences of opinion, parents can help a child to avoid the trap of conformity by strengthening his sense of being an individual. "Each child is a real person," Doctor Krupp points out, "and each child is different. It is important for parents to appreciate, respect and try to understand a child's uniqueness. This is not always easily done. But if parents instill in the child a sense of pride in his unique individuality, he will be better equipped later on to stand up as an independent person."

For today's parents, whose children are coping all too soon with the problems of drugs, sex and authority, the goal seems reasonably clear: to help them learn to think for themselves and to practice "creative nonconformity." This means they must be willing to question the merits of what their friends believe in and what they do so that they can come to their own honest decisions and live by those decisions. Or, as Shakespeare put it, "This above all: to thine own self be true." ♦

COOKBOOK/By Melante De Proft

Ready to Experiment? Try Some "Pastelillos"

This Labor Day weekend, why not try something different? Here's a deep-fried "international" recipe sure to earn admiration. And what's best—it can be served as appetizer, entrée or dessert!

Pastelillos, meat pies of Spanish origin, are party fare to serve a crowd.

- | | |
|---|--|
| Pastry for Pastelillos (see recipe) | 1 can (3 oz.) deviled luncheon meat spread |
| Fat for deep frying, heated to 375°F. | 1 tomato, diced |
| 2 slices bacon, diced, fried crisp, and drained | 1/2 cup chopped Spanish green olives |
| 1 lb. ground lean beef | 1 tablespoon capers |
| 1 teaspoon salt | 1 tablespoon instant minced onion |
| 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper | 1/4 teaspoon instant minced garlic |
| 1 teaspoon oregano leaves | 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped |

1. Cook ground meat in a small amount of the bacon fat in a large skillet just until lightly browned; season with salt and pepper. Stir in remaining ingredients and heat thoroughly to blend flavors. Remove from heat to a bowl and mix in the bacon. Chill for several hours.
2. When ready to prepare the turnovers, divide pastry into 4 portions, rolling only one portion at a time about 1/4 in. thick on a lightly floured pastry canvas. Cut into 6-in. rounds for large turnovers and 3-in. rounds for small. Spoon (slightly off center) onto each round one fourth cup meat filling for large and about 1/4 tablespoon for small turnovers.
3. Fold one half of each pastry round over filling and press edges together. Mark edge with a fork, or flute. (Seal tightly to avoid leakage.) Gently prick tops. Repeat procedure, using remainder of pastry and filling. Keep chilled until ready to deep fry.

4. Fry one layer of turnovers at a time in a saucepan (or deep fryer) of hot fat about 3 min., or until golden brown. Lift them out with a slotted spoon and drain over fat for a few seconds before removing to absorbent paper. When temperature of fat returns to 375°F., fry another layer of turnovers. Repeat process until all turnovers are fried. Serve hot. 1 1/2 doz. turnovers for entrées or 3 1/2 to 4 doz. for appetizers.

PASTRY FOR PASTELILLOS

- | | |
|---------------------------------|--------------------|
| 6 cups sifted all-purpose flour | 1/4 cup shortening |
| 1 tablespoon salt | 2 eggs |
| | 1 1/2 cups water |
1. Mix flour with salt in a large bowl. Cut in shortening with a pastry blender or two knives until the particles formed are the size of fine crumbs.
 2. Beat eggs with water and stir into flour mixture until a dough is formed (dough will be crumbly).
 3. Turn onto a lightly floured pastry canvas and knead until smooth, about 5 min.

 DELUXE LONG LINE MODEL

Here's a laboratory-tested, figure-trimming method you can trust... tests conducted by the Performance Physiology Laboratory of a major West Coast University proved that it is possible for some persons to lose as much as 10 pounds in 10 days and trim bulge from hips, thighs and waistline following the Body Shaper 3-Way Plan. The average weight loss of all persons tested was one-half pound per day, every day during the ten day test. Some samples of the 20-day results are pictured above! Now you can enjoy this amazing discovery—guaranteed to work for you, or your money back.

"The secret to losing weight is not a dramatic change in your eating habits..." Contrary to what you may believe, you need not starve yourself to lose inches and weight! According to the world's leading medical associations and governmental agencies as well as The Body Shaper Plan, what you need is to eat smaller moderated amounts. With the complete Body Shaper Plan you can eat the foods your family eats, never "starve" or over-exercise, and yet still accelerate weight loss and direct inches removal!

HOW THE BODY SHAPER PLAN WORKS ITS WONDERS. There are three simple requirements to The Body Shaper Plan. The Body Shaper is a modern, carefully designed and engineered product. The combination of the Body Shapers food plan and body movement program work together to accelerate weight loss and inches removal. The Body Shapers themselves are not designed to affect weight loss; they do their part by creating a Sauna-like warmth and gentle massaging action to soothe and relax the hip, thigh, and waistline area. It's not magic. It's not tricky. The Body Shaper Plan will help you lose weight quickly, easily and more surely—it's actually guaranteed.

THE "SECRET" IS THE COMBINATION. The Body Shaper Plan is a combination which is designed to work, if honored together. The Body Shaper "combination" is made up of three items: your Body Shaper, the copyrighted Body Shaper Food Plan and the Body Shaper Movement Program—"exercise" which do not overtax you in any way. As is true of all successful weight loss programs, The Body Shaper Plan should be undertaken with the knowledge and guidance of your family doctor. The Body Shaper Plan will help you tone and shape your body... It will help you reduce your weight—all quicker and faster than you may believe possible. The actual number of pounds and inches that you will lose depends upon your body structure, present weight, metabolism, and other factors.

"I LOST 7½" AND 14 POUNDS IN 20 DAYS with the Body Shapers 3-Way Plan. I feel it helped me take off inches in the "problem places" that just dieting alone never touches. I wanted to lose in my waist and thighs especially, and I lost everywhere—7½ inches total from waist, abdomen, hips and thighs! I'm very pleased."
 Sandra Wolf

"I LOST 7½ INCHES from my waist, hips, thighs and went from a 20½ to size 16. I lost 12 pounds in 3 weeks on the Body Shaper 3-Way Plan. It really helps you lose in the right places, which encourages you to continue. I feel better now in every way."

A Reader's Remembrance

The Day I Met Johnny Carson

Suddenly I heard a voice. A stranger at the counter said, "Looking for someone?"

"Yes," I said, "but he isn't here."

"Are you sure you're not looking for me?"

"You! Why in the world would I be looking for you?"

I saw the waitress open her mouth and suck in her breath. My sister was tugging on me, urging me toward the door.

When we were outside, she asked, "Don't you know who that was?"

"No," I said. "Should I?"

"That was Johnny Carson!"

"Oh, no!"

How, you might wonder, could I have failed to recognize Johnny Carson? Simple. I live in Idaho, and his TV show didn't come on until midnight—too late for a working girl like me to see. His name was familiar, but his face didn't register.

I often think back on that incident, and I can still hear him saying, "Are you sure you're not looking for me?" And do you know what really makes me mad? There was a vacant stool beside him!

—MAJOR ROWE WITH MOM
Horrors of Being a POW

Major James Nicholas Rowe, now 33, miraculously endured five terrifying years as a prisoner of the Viet Cong until he escaped in 1968. Rowe lived in a three-foot by six-foot cage, ate dirty rice and rotten fish, suffered torture, two scheduled execution dates, dysentery, colitis, beriberi, jaundice, fungus and unending political indoctrination sessions. Somehow in the memory of his home and parents in McAllen, Texas, where he was born and raised, kept him going. "I think the thing that allowed me to reorient myself most rapidly to the changes in United States culture," the Major recalls, "was that my parents had kept everything just as I left it. I stepped into a home that allowed me to get organized in a familiar environment before venturing forth and exploring." Now Major Rowe has completed a book, "Five Years to Freedom," documenting his life as a POW (Little, Brown $7.95).

With their flowing locks and beards, many of today's young doctors resemble M.D.'s of the preantiseptic era of medicine. And now it seems they are carrying the problem of infection as well. A series of "staph" infections after surgery in one of the East Coast's best-known hospital centers was recently traced to the long hair of one member of a surgical team. The offender was persuaded to cut his hair and wash it daily with antiseptic shampoo. In an attempt to cope with the long-hair fashion, at least two hospitals are now using "helmets" of paper or cotton to cover hair and beard. Add a surgical mask and only the eyes are visible—but the patients are protected.

A little boy had developed a habit of letting others do his thinking for him. One day, when asked to put some candlesticks away for his mother, he answered with his usual query, "Where shall I put 'em, Mom?"

"Now I want you to think this one out for yourself," the mother said seriously. "Just pretend I've disappeared and can't answer your question. Now, what will you do?"

The eight-year-old's face became very serious. He thought for a moment, then, with a determined step, walked into the living room and asked: "Dad, where shall I put these candlesticks?"
