Bombs blast Irish

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—A bomb today damaged an apartment building and stores not far from the gates of the Stormont, the Northern Ireland Parliament, an army spokesman said. There were no injuries.

Abolition of the Stormont was one of the demands made Sunday night by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) in a five-point peace plan submitted to the British government.

In return for acceptance of the plan, said a spokesman for the militant IRA Provisional Wing in Dublin, the IRA would halt its campaign of violence. If it is rejected, violence will intensify, he said.

Britain was given until midnight Wednesday to act on the offer. There was no immediate response from the British government.

A spokesman for Premier Brian Faulkner's government rejected the plan almost immediately. "We do not deal with murderers or make comments on their actions," he said.

In London, political sources said the IRA offer most likely would be among the items discussed at today's talks between Prime Minister Edward Heath and Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic. The two were meeting at Heath's Chequers country residence near London.

The sources said the session, advanced by six weeks from its original date, would also touch on Lynch's weekend request for a joint Anglo-Irish request to the United Nations to set up a U.N. observer corps to patrol both sides of the Northern Ireland-Irish Republic border.

An army spokesman said a man was being questioned about the early morning explosion a half mile from the Stormont's entrance in Summerhill Park. Later a blast damaged a supermarket in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown area.

Traffic stopped

HEAVY SMOKE blowing across Highway 93 north of Twin Falls Sunday evening halted traffic while Bureau of Land Management crews battled a range fire which burned areas on both sides of the highway. Some of the halted vehicles are shown (above) in this view toward the north, while (below) flames near grass and sagebrush on either side of a truck passing through the dense smoke. S. Viets open drive

SAIGON (UPI)—An armada of 200 U.S. helicopters ferried thousands of South Vietnamese troops into western Quang Tri province today in a major new operation to disrupt Communist supply lines below the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), military sources said.

The sweep, involving at least three brigades of government troops, began at 6 a.m. in rugged country west of Cam Lo and not far from the abandoned Khe Sanh outpost. More than 2,000 American soldiers were moved back into the province to support the campaign, military sources said, including armored, artillery and infantry units.

U.S. B52 bomber crews struck six times overnight in the region, unloading nearly 500 tons of explosives to soften up in advance of the new government operation, field reports said. The drive was one of the biggest since the South Vietnamese incursion into Laos last spring.

Field reports said a South Vietnamese armored column rumbled down Highway 9 today and reopened the old Vandegrift Combat Base east of Khe Sanh.

There were no reports of any contact with Communist forces, UPI Correspondent Stewart Kellerman reported from Quang Tri.

Weather delays rescuers

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI)—Rescuers waited for a break in wet, foggy weather today to start bringing out the bodies of 111 persons killed in the worst single-plane airliner disaster in U.S. history.

"If we can finish up in three days, we'll be lucky with the weather the way it is," said Lt. Harry McLaughlin of the Alaska State Police, who was directing recovery operations.

"We have people at the site," he reported. "We've only moved up those we have shelter for. It's rainy, windy and cold up there."

The site was the side of a 3,500 foot mountain the foothills of the rugged Chilkoot Mountain range, where the Alaska Airlines Boeing 727 trijet smashed Saturday afternoon, killing all 104 passengers and seven crew members on board.

Helicopters slipped through a brief break in the bad weather Sunday afternoon to carry federal investigators to the site, 17 miles northwest of Juneau.

Dust, silence over fest site

BELLEVUE — A low cloud of smoke and dust hung over Slaughterhouse Gulch this morning as about 200 festival goers cooked breakfast and rolled up sleeping bags, preparing to leave the site of the Wood River Rock Festival.

Broken wine bottles, beer cans and watermelon rinds lay strewn across the ground, site of the three day event, which drew a crowd of about 1,500 young persons.

Blaine County Sheriff Orville Drexler said Sunday afternoon eight arrests had been made involving drugs, as well as three more arrests stemming from traffic violations.

He declined to release the names of those being held. He said there had been no trouble at the site, and no violence between the youthful fans and the citizens of this town of 500 persons.

The live entertainment, scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Sunday, didn't start until five hours later. The music continued until 1 a.m. today, when most of those fans left the site.

Ticket takers reported a steady stream of cars pouring into the festival site early Sunday evening. The price of admission, originally set at $15 for the three day event, had been lowered to $10 Saturday and again to $5 yesterday.

The owner of the land used for the festival, Lawrence A. Boyd, said Sunday he expected no legal problems involving himself and Blaine County officials as a result of the festival.

"In my capacity as land owner I have a legitimate and bona fide lease with Jack Teater, promoter and official holder of this festival," Boyd said.

There was more doubt, however, concerning the legal standing of Teater. Stephen W. Boller, deputy prosecuting attorney for Blaine County, had said Saturday no decision had been made concerning Teater's arrest. He said no decision would be reached until he had an opportunity to confer with Drexler and other county officials.

Teater's lawyer, Lloyd Webb, said Saturday any arrest of his client would be illegal and threatened suit against Blaine County if his client were taken into custody.

As they had for the first two days of the festival, young fans sat in groups and waited for the entertainment to begin Sunday. Several left the gulch to go into Bellevue to purchase food and other supplies. Local merchants reported a record volume of business over the three days of the festival.

Several festival goers expressed disappointment that the festival had been unsuccessful. Said one, Steve Bell, Boise, referring to the lack of garbage disposal facilities, "I think the $15 included picking up the garbage."

Los Angeles radio personality and festival master of ceremonies Wolfman Jack said Sunday he was pleased with the crowd at the festival.

County officials said they expected those arrested on drug charges to be arraigned in court sometime shortly after the Labor Day holiday.

Crash kills Albion men

DECLO — Two young Albion men were killed about 1:30 a.m. Sunday on State Highway near Declo when one apparently veered across the center line and hit the other head-on, according to State Police Officer Tommy Thompson.

The victims were identified as Randy Tremayne, about 20, and Duane R. Bailey, 22. Thompson said Tremayne, driving north, crossed the center line and struck the Bailey car head-on.

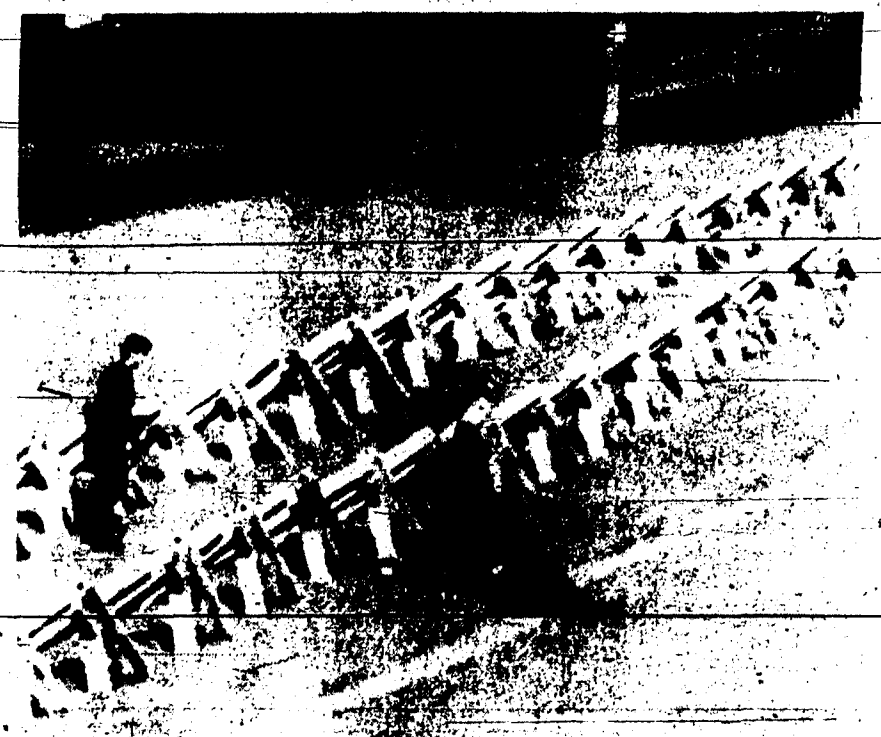

Neither vehicle overturned. Tremayne was thrown out of his car, and Bailey, who was pronounced dead on arrival at Cassia Memorial Hospital, was trapped in his vehicle.

Tremayne died of his injuries later at the hospital, Thompson said.

Daniel Lewis, 20, of Declo, a passenger in Bailey's car, was treated for minor injuries at the hospital and dismissed.

Services for Tremayne will be announced by McCulloch Funeral Home, Burley. Payne's services have been announced by Payne Mortuary, Burley. (Obituary, page 2)

Nixon lauds American labor

THURMONT, Md. (UPI)—In a special Labor Day message, President Nixon saluted the nation's workers today for their willingness to make personal sacrifices required by his new economic policies and for proving that "America's competitive spirit" still thrives.

Nixon, in a nationally broadcast radio address, made only brief and oblique mention of strong objections raised by many labor union leaders to the 90-day wage-price-rent freeze and other broad restrictions he ordered exactly three weeks ago. He also offered no hint of what restraints might follow when the freeze expires Nov. 13.

"Of course, there have been complaints," the President said in the 15-minute speech delivered from Camp David, his mountaintop retreat about 65 miles northwest of Washington.

"There have been counter-suggestions; there have been criticisms by special interest groups. But the most heartening reaction was the surge of national confidence, the reaffirmation of our competitive spirit, the willingness to make a personal sacrifice in the pursuit of worthy goals by the man in the street, the worker on the job and the homemaker trying to balance the family budget ...

"Let the detractors of America, and the doubters of the American spirit, take note: America's competitive spirit, the work ethic of this people, is alive and well on Labor Day, 1971. The dignity of work, the value of achievement, the morality of self-reliance—none of these is going out of style."

In sum, Nixon said, "the overwhelming response" to his efforts to bring inflation in tow and cut unemployment while protecting the value of the dollar overseas "is a new justification for every American's faith in himself and faith in his country."

In the course of his speech, the President also touched on the themes that he has stressed in half a dozen campaign-style appearances throughout the country during the past two weeks: the Vietnam War is drawing to a close and ahead lies an "era of peaceful competition which will pose unprecedented challenges to the U.S. economy and character."

He held out the hope of reaching "a goal we have rarely been able to achieve in the past 40 years—a new prosperity without war and without inflation."

Nixon said he was certain that Americans were ready to strive for that objective after seeing the nation react to his economic program.

letter, which Nixon said was typical of thousands received by the White House recently, the man said he and his wife would have gotten raises in September if it were not for the freeze.

"But we will survive," the man wrote. "If it were necessary to cut our income in half, I still know of no other country I would choose to call my own. I've heard the young people using a phrase that might fit: Right On."

The President also dwelt at length on the need to increase productivity, which he said "really means getting more out of your work," if the nation is to meet the economic threat from foreign competition and attain the "New Prosperity."

Nixon did not mention the 10 per cent surcharge imposed on foreign imports, but he said "we are not going to build protective walls to shelter us from honest competition" or "live in our own cocoon while the rest of the world passes us by."

Guerrillas flee jail

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI)—A group of 100 leftwing Tupamaro terrorists escaped from the Punta Carretas Maximum Security prison today through a tunnel that connected with a nearby house, government authorities reported.

They said the escape was carried out with such efficiency that there was no violence. Friends of the imprisoned men had dug the tunnel several hundred feet from a house into a prison bathroom and a half mile from the city center.

guards were aware of the mass exodus.

Police refused to give details, but one of the escapees was believed to be Raul Sendic, the leader of the Tupamaros. The urban guerrilla group has carried out a wave of terrorism that has included the kidnaping and murder of foreign diplomats and advisers.

"Kinda cold for Labor Day, isn't it?"

Woman fails to find body

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Joyce Dianne Turner flew back to Idaho Sunday for a court appearance after an unsuccessful search for the body of a man she said her boyfriend killed.

Miss Turner, 22, and Michael Wren Pennpage, 28, both of Sacramento, were charged in Idaho with slaying three farmworkers and wounding a fourth and a town marshal.

Miss Turner, told authorities Pennpage also killed Joseph W. Wymuth, 19, of Sylmar, Calif., and dumped his body in a culvert in the Saugus-Newhall area.

However, she led a part of nearly two-dozen deputies on a search of the area without finding the body.

Signs of the times

Controls may continue

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Arnold R. Weber, director of the Cost of Living Council, says wage and price controls may continue for three or four years after the freeze expires Nov. 13.

Weber was asked Sunday in a UPI Washington Window interview whether economic conditions would improve enough so that government controls would not be necessary.

"In three years or four years, I would say, yes," he said.

Weber said the administration is considering possible restraints for use after the 90-day freeze on wages, prices and rents expires with the view that "any system of controls would preferably be viewed as temporary."

AFL-CIO President George Meany continued his criticism of the freeze because it did not extend to business profits and dividends. He called the program "Robin Hood in reverse," taking from the poor to give to the rich.

Meany was questioned Sunday on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

President Nixon made a nationwide radio speech today that was not critical of Meany and other labor leaders who have opposed the freeze policy. The President prepared to meet later this week with economic advisers on a course that could conciliate workers.

A high official in the administration ruled out any form of tax on excess profits made during the freeze on grounds that such a levy stifles initiative, but the administration moved over the weekend to prevent an increase in dividends announced by six corporations.

Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, scheduled a meeting Tuesday with officials of the six firms and said the council "takes a serious view of any change in dividend rates that would be inconsistent with the President's program."

To make up the losses, Meany said, Nixon is taking $1.8 billion from federal employees through layoffs and canceling wage increases, deferring the welfare reform program to prevent spending $1.1 billion on the poor and eliminating $1.8 billion from the proposed revenue sharing plan.

Officials, leaders meet to end riots

HOBOKEN, N.J. (UPI)—State and city officials met for four hours early today with leaders of the Puerto Rican community in efforts to end disturbances which rocked the city for two nights. A spokesman for Gov. William Cahill said the two sides agreed on the issues involved.

The city was hit Saturday night by rock throwing and window smashing by Puerto Rican youths. The tensions apparently were sparked with the arrests of two men.

Police said 42 persons were arrested and eight policemen injured in the two nights of disturbances.

Cahill's spokesman said after the meeting, held in nearby Jersey City, that Hoboken prosecutor Geoffrey Gaulkin agreed to recommend that 33 persons arrested during the disturbances be released in the custody of an attorney to be chosen by the Puerto Rican community.

The five-man Puerto Rican delegation said it would go into the community to discuss the agreement and take other measures to prevent renewed disorders, the spokesman said. Gaulkin said he would investigate alleged police brutality in connection with the disturbances. But the spokesman said Gaulkin said repeatedly during the meeting his office would have investigated such allegations on its own.

Law could be enforced

BOISE (UPI)—State Rep. Edward Rice, R-Boise, says Idaho's new vehicle antipollute statute could be enforced if vehicles inspection stations would not certify vehicles with modified exhaust systems.

Rice said the new law limits noise from a motor vehicle to 92 decibels and is simpler to enforce than the older law. He added that a portion of the statute was being overlooked. It states, he said, that no person shall alter an exhaust system of a motor vehicle to amplify noise beyond that which would be emitted by the muffler installed or finally by the manufacturer.

WHY LABOR DAY?

We don't think the "dignity of labor" and the "puritan work ethic" are old-hat at all. In today's world where some people shirk work, or search vainly for something "relevant" to do in life, we make this comment: We find conscientious work is its own greatest reward. Today we salute organized labor — and everyone who finds meaning in his daily contribution.

Four city council members will be elected in the November election, succeeding Mayor Frank Feldtman, Winston Jones, Gene Stacey and Frank Koch.

A total of 10 precincts will be designated for the election.

A public hearing is scheduled at 8 p.m. Tuesday, during the council meeting, to receive protests against Local Improvement District 86, calling for curb, sidewalk and street improvements in Falls Avenue East.

Opinions will also be received at the same time on a request from W. C. Malberg, Jr., for a side-yard setback variance at 1922 Shoup Avenue East.

Overnight delivery of mail promised in area

TWIN FALLS — Overnight mail delivery from Twin Falls to southern Idaho and northern Utah points is anticipated by Oct. 31, according to Twin Falls Postmaster Lloyd E. Libert.

Libert told the Times-News on Saturday that the nationwide program of improved mail service announced by Postmaster General Winton M. Blount envisions next-day delivery of first-class mail deposited in the Twin Falls Post Office by 5 p.m. each business day.

The region covered ranges from the area covered by zip code 832, centered on Pocatello, and 834, Idaho Falls, on the east, to Boise, 836, 837, and 879, on the west to Ogden, Utah, zip codes 843 and 844 on the south.

Blount's accelerated delivery program will move more than half of the 52 billion pieces of first-class mail handled annually which are destined for delivery either in the city where they are mailed or in nearby communities.

The U.S. Postal Service has set Oct. 31 as a deadline for achieving 95 per cent of the nationwide goal, Libert said.

Libert said the next-day delivery will be assured by that date for all mail deposited either in the post office in Twin Falls or the adjacent streetside mailboxes by 9:45 p.m. each business day.

Judge ousts charges, chides police in T.F.

TWIN FALLS — "Illegal" collection of evidence by Twin Falls Police in a robbery case has forced dismissal of charges against Billy D. Mitchell, Burley, in a ruling by Fifth District Judge Sherman Bellwood of Burley.

Judge Bellwood granted a defense motion for dismissal of all charges, ruling that there was insufficient evidence to sustain the charge that Mitchell was involved in the robbery of the 7-11 Store on Filer Avenue in Twin Falls last January.

The defense motion was based on the contention that the police collected material evidence against the suspect in an illegal manner. The evidence included a shotgun and mask taken from the suspect's car.

Judge Bellwood's ruling prevented use of the alleged evidence in the prosecution of the case.

Rudy Barchas, attorney for the suspect, argued that Mitchell was arrested under a city ordinance charging failure to register under his true name in a local motel. While he was in custody, Barchas said, an "inventory" of Mitchell's car revealed a ski mask and sawed-off shotgun. The items were confiscated by police as evidence linking him to the robbery.

Mitchell had agreed to a search of the motel room and his automobile providing charges under the city ordinance would be dropped, Barchas said.

COMMENT The Example

Portland Oregonian

The detachment of Green Beret troops nearing the end of its reenactment of the historic westward expedition of Capt. Lewis and Clark in 1804-5 has not held strictly to the original script. It has already cut more than a year off the time it took the two captains to reach destinations along their route; and it has enjoyed the advantages of modern equipment and conveniences, including air-conditioned quarters enroute.

But the undertaking is worthwhile as a reminder of the significance of the exploration that opened the West to settlement and helped tie the Oregon Country to the United States. The 1971 travelers are following the original route as nearly as practicable and are said to be trying to simulate the mental attitudes of the members of the original party.

On the latter point, an entry made in his journal just 166 years ago last week by Capt. Meriwether Lewis is pertinent. It was Sunday, Aug. 18, 1805. The expedition, having traversed the Missouri River watershed to the Continental Divide, had paused to determine how best to continue on toward the Pacific. It was decided to send Capt. Clark with 11 men to see if "the Columbia" was navigable (meaning, of course, what is now called the Salmon River, which was found too rough for safe passage).

On that day, Capt. Lewis seated himself before his journal pages and wrote the following memorable passage:

"This day I completed my 31st year and conceived that I had in all human probability now existed about half the period which I am to remain in this sublunary world. I reflected that I had as yet done but little, very little indeed to further the happiness (sic) of the human race, or to advance the information of the succeeding generation. I viewed with regret the many hours I have spent in indolence, and now soarily (sic) feel the want of that information which those hours would have given me had they been judiciously expanded. But since they are past and cannot be recalled, I dash from me the gloomy thought, and resolve in future to redouble my exertions and at least endeavor (sic) to promote those two primary objects of human existence, by giving them the aid of that portion of talents which nature and fortune have bestowed upon me; or in future, to live for mankind, as I have heretofore lived for myself."

Meriwether Lewis lived only a little more than four years after writing those words: He died by violence in a remote Tennessee inn, either a suicide or a murder victim. He was never to comprehend the full extent of his immense contribution to the generations that succeeded him. But his frame of mind on that August day is to be commended to all of us.

Wall Of Fear

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

East Berlin kindergartners visited the infamous Berlin wall Friday, thanking with gifts of flowers the soldiers who 10 years ago began shooting anyone attempting to go over, under, through or around it.

The blocks are of cement and stone and have none of the colorful lettering of building blocks in the kindergarten classroom. Stacked together they don't spell "kat," or "hund" or "haus" or anything else but fear and mistrust that has divided a city for 10 years.

And even little children are not so naive as to forget that the men who stooped beneath the barbed wire to accept the flowers had to move their machine guns out of the way.

Crime And . . .

Christian Science Monitor

Scarcely an American these days is not touched, through family or friends, by the impact of violent crime. To say that murder is in the very air might seem hyperbole, where it is not for the cold statistics just issued by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, reporting that 15,810 Americans were murdered in the United States in 1970. And that is only the worst part of a total of 5,568,200 serious crimes, of which 731,400 were violent.

Two things stand out in the FBI report, both cause for deepest concern. First is the fact that, despite a tripling of federal spending on law enforcement from $450 million to $1.5 billion, and an elevenfold increase of federal aid to states and local municipalities for law enforcement, crime has continued to increase. Overall crime increased by 11 per cent in 1970—a lower rate than 17 per cent in 1968 and 12 per cent in 1969, but an absolute increase.

President Nixon's 1967 campaign platform featured "law and order," and his administration followed through with a barrage of legislation calculated to stop crime—drug laws toughened, organized crime investigated, increased use of wire-tapping, "no-knock" police entry, and experiments with "preventive detention."

But the combination of money, legislation and more policemen has not added up to a "final solution" to growing crime rates. Crime continues to be a phenomenon of social pathology, whose roots must be got at deep within the national psyche.

Certainly one cannot divorce the incidence of individual violent crimes from the violence of war, brought with explicit detail into every living room via television, nor from the gore and sadism glorified in panoramic color in movie theaters across the land.

The second item that stands out in the FBI report is that of those 15,810 murders: 65 percent were performed with guns, and 52 percent with handguns. Here again, the obstinate refusal of the Congress to outlaw the possession of handguns can only be a contributing factor to the slaughter of thousands of Americans.

We cannot take refuge or comforts in the comment by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that since more than one fourth of the murders stem from feuds between relatives or friends, "it follows that criminal homicide is to a major extent a national social problem beyond police prevention." To the degree that supine legislature refuses to outlaw the weapons that make it possible for a citizen, in the blind passion of a moment, to reach for a lethal weapon, to that degree the government itself aids and abets murder. And who brings government to trial?

The public does. Citizens should counter the back-room lobbying of the gun interests with open letters and calls to their congressmen. The public's moral responsibility to see the gun legislation gets passed lies in holding their own district's lawmakers to the fire of right action.

The New Indian Deal

YUBA CITY, Ariz. — The Navajo nation may be on the rise, as its leaders assert, but the atmosphere of this vast reservation stirs deep enthusiasm for a more far-sighted approach to the Indians and Eskimos who claim ownership of Alaska.

The Alaska native claims bill which Congress will consider in the coming weeks will startle many with its generosity. The proposal will transfer to some 60,000 Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts almost $1 billion and 40 million acres. It will give them the land around their villages for subsistence and capital for development.

This is generous by the yardstick of the Indian claims commissions settlements with more than 500,000 Indians in the lower 48 states. Past and prospective payments of their claims will total no more than about $750 million. This is in addition to roughly 50 million acres set aside for these reservations which are the last stands of the American Indian Culture.

The disparity in treatment is justified in part by history. The Alaska natives were promised full standing as citizens in the 1867 treaty by which Russia sold Alaska. They acquiesced in the white man's intrusion without waging the resistance that left their southern cousins to the tender mercy of the War Department.

But more important, the generous settlement will absolve the government of future claims from Alaskan natives for special treatment. They can work out their own salvation as ordinary citizens. Those who fall will have access to welfare. But they will not become part of the frustrating, costly dilemma posed by the American Indian.

The nation's conscience is troubled by its failure to deal with the dilemma. President Nixon has liberalized the old policies, appropriations for Indian programs will run close to a billion dollars this year, and the Indians have new opportunities to gain control of their own affairs.

But the road ahead, viewed from this vantage point will be a hard one. The Navajos want the Anglos off the reservation because they want their own people hired by the array of Federal agencies which minister to their needs. But they are a nomadic, incohesive tribe without skills that promise they can deal efficiently with their problems.

Indians on reservations have lived so long with a paternalistic subsidization of their culture they will find it awkward to evolve an autonomous pattern of authority. Yet the failure of the old pattern is sadly evident in tragic statistics which reflect their short lives, high unemployment, heavy crime, and wide-spread rejection of the white man's education.

If the Alaska claims bill averts this dilemma, it will be well worth its price. But it should be noted that generosity and wisdom did not alone inspire a readiness to pay the price. Only four years ago, the going offer to the Alaskan natives was 10 million acres and $7,200,000, the amount Secretary of State Seward paid the Russians for all of Alaska a hundred years ago.

Oil made the difference. The strike on the north slope has made oil companies determined to secure clear titles to the land they drill. Alaskans want the economic stimulation of oil production, and the state government is ready to pay the natives $500 million from its future royalties. The claims issue must be settled before Alaska can enter a new prosperous era.

The American Indians are watching the progress of the Alaskan settlement closely. They regard it as an omen of whether they can look with assurance to a future better than their past.

BEHIND THE HATE BALL

ART BUCHWALD

Crawl, Buzz, Bite

WASHINGTON — This summer four of the big movie hits have been "Willard," "Blue Water, White Death," "The Andromeda Strain" and "The Hellstrom Chronicle." The first picture is about rats, the second picture is about sharks and the last two are about bugs.

Whether it is a sign of the times or not, Hollywood once again is panicking and the word is out at the studios to buy anything for films that crawls, buzzes or bites.

A friend of mine just returned from the film capital and reported that he was in the office of one of the major producers when the following took place:

The assistant came in. "B. J., I just got word from London we can have Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton for $1,000 a week and no expenses."

"I don't want Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, you dummy," B. J. shouted. "I want snakes."

"I've got the story department researching snakes now. Oh, William Morris Agency just called. They said they have a hot property that could make a bigger picture than 'Love Story.' In the end both the girl and the boy die."

"I don't want to make a love story. That's old hat. We need something that the public is clamoring for. Maybe roaches."

"Roaches?"

"Why not? People are afraid of roaches. We could have them infected with some horrible disease and they take over the town."

"No, it's not scary enough."

"What about boll weevils, Chief?"

"Boll weevils don't do anything for me."

The phone rang and the assistant answered it. He held his hand over the mouthpiece. "It's Ann-Margret. You told her to call here today after you saw a screening of 'Carnal Knowledge.'"

The producer took the phone. "Ann, baby, you were beautiful. Those scenes in the apartment in the guy's bedroom were out of this world."

"No, I don't have anything for you now, but I'm trying to develop a story for the present market. Say, if I can get a good script would you have any objection to working with barracudas... Yeh, that's what I said, man-eating barracudas... Ann... Ann?... She hung up on me."

"B. J., John Wayne called and want to know if you're interested in making a sequel to 'The Alamo.'"

"John Wayne doesn't mean anything. The public wants ants, buzzards, coyotes, wolves, mosquitos. That's what they're buying. The other day I asked my own son if he wanted to see 'Le Mans' with Steve McQueen and he said no, he'd rather see 'Escape From the Planet of the Apes.' He won't go to a movie any more unless there is an animal or a germ in it. These are the people we must appeal to."

"It's hard to find properties, Chief. Paramount outbid us for a picture about 'Yellow Fever,' MGM is working on a film about the plague and 20th has just made the chief doctor of tropical diseases at the National Institute of Health head of the studio." The story editor walked in. "I think I've got it! I think I've got it!"

He threw a script on the desk. "It's what we've been looking for. This thing will scare the hell out of everyone."

The chief ruffled through the pages. "What's it about?"

The story editor smiled. "Vichyssoise."

PAUL HARVEY

Victimized

No welfare abuse has aroused more resentment than ADC subsidy for illegitimacy. When a mother is paid more aid money for each child, she can collect a sizable sum.

But the abusers are susceptible to abuse by fathers demanding payoffs.

The bureau of census and labor statistics report 29 of every 100 nonwhite families are now fatherless. This is a significantly higher ratio than was revealed in the 1950 and 1960 reports, indicating a deterioration of the Negro family.

Dr. Robert Hill of the National Urban League says this is an unfair conclusion. He blames news media for accentuating the negative, when it should be lauding the 71 out of 100 hard-working father-dominated black families.

Dr. Hill's doctorate is in sociology and he says the inverted statistical emphasis tends to exaggerate the problem in the public mind, "creating the false impression that instability and pathology are characteristic of MOST black families."

One-fourth is not MOST. Daniel Moynihan's controversial federal report on the Negro family used the term "socially pathological" to describe fatherless families.

And Dr. Hill agrees that families headed by women are more vulnerable to economic and social ills, if only because women as heads of families are likely to earn less.

That statistics do not necessarily reflect the "whole truth" is further demonstrated by the black-white comparison in the Census Bureau's findings.

The figures say that the proportion of fatherless families is three times greater for blacks than for whites.

But this does not take into consideration the fact that white babies born out of wedlock are more readily put up for adoption: 33 per cent for whites, 7 per cent for blacks.

Federal analysts insist that, even allowing for this factor, the discrepancy is still great—that female-headed families are on the increase among blacks.

Critics of ADC are inclined to blame it all on welfare payments "subsidizing" illegitimacy.

Some states are seeking to limit the number of children eligible for such payment.

Those states have shown a measurable decline in welfare rolls.

But many states continue to "pay by the head," so that a mother of eight children may collect almost $1,000 per month.

A cruel backlash has resulted in some areas.

One black Chicago mother confides that she is blackmailed by the several fathers of her several children. That though she collects $800 per month, ADC, under threat of physical violence she must pay off eight men $25 each per month.

There is no way to know how many other women those SAME men may be victimizing.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Cataracts

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 77 with cataracts in the early stages.

1— Exactly what are cataracts?

2— Generally speaking, if the cataracts are just starting and if vision still seems very good, is it ever possible that they won't worsen and that surgery might possibly be unnecessary?

3— Aside from getting stronger glasses, is there any other deterrent to the cataracts other than surgery? — A.P.

First, in the front of the eye, behind the pupil, there is a small oval capsule, filled with a semi-liquid substance. This is the lens of the eye — the part that focuses light rays on the retina to form an image.

Sometimes, usually later in life, but sometimes because of an injury, the contents of this capsule, or lens starts to become cloudy or milky. That condition is what we call a "cataract."

As this milkiness or cloudiness increases, vision naturally becomes dimmer. When too little vision remains to be useful, then the "cataract" — that is, the entire cloudy lens — is removed.

Then special glasses are worn to take the place of the missing lens. In the past, rather thick glasses were used, to get the correct focus. More recently, contact lenses have been used instead, because they give a much wider field of vision.

Second: Cataracts develop very slowly. Rarely do they develop rapidly, in any event. If they develop slowly enough, vision may not be impaired to the point of requiring surgery.

Remember, that is the purpose of surgery — to restore vision if it has been lost to too great a degree. There is no arbitrary point at which surgery is necessary. It depends on how much need there is to improve your vision. Third: Cataracts do not get better. They get gradually worse. Sometimes drops are used, the purpose being to widen the pupil of the eye, thus exposing more of the lens of the eye and permitting more light to enter. This helps, since, as the lens becomes more cloudy, what really is happening is that less light is able to pass through the lens. And light is what we see with.

Cataract removal is undertaken when vision cannot be sufficiently improved by simple means.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 7, has always snored a night and seems to have difficulty breathing through her nose at night, so she breathes through her mouth.

She has many sore throats and tonsil problems. Should her adenoids be removed? One doctor kept saying wait until she has another tonsil problem and then would do nothing.

Her mouth gets very dry at night, so I use a vaporizer. What else can I do for her? — Mrs. D.M.

Naturally her mouth gets dry from breathing through it. In turn, that indicates nasal obstruction — large tonsils and adenoids, adenoids being a form of tonsil.

To me, repeated infection warrants removal of adenoids and tonsils, and this is particularly urgent if she gets ear ache or ear infection when the tonsils flare up. Does she?

Note to E.M.A.: You may be overlooking the most obvious fact of all: at 5 feet and 200 pounds, it's no wonder your arthritic knees are so painful. Losing some of that weight is going to do you more good than any salves you might use.

BERRY'S WORLD

"I don't know what the matter with me. I just can't seem to regard Gloria Steinem as anything but a sexual object!"

Battle over Amchitka nuclear test building

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atomic Energy Commission is almost ready to stage the most powerful and most controversial underground nuclear weapon test in U.S. history.

The test, called Cannikin, is planned for early October, more than a mile below the surface of Alaska's Amchitka Island.

Its purpose is to check out the Spartan missile warhead for President Nixon's Safeguard system to protect U.S. Minuteman ballistic missile silos from enemy attack. It will be about five times as powerful as any previous U.S. underground test.

The $190 million project has triggered more opposition than any weapons experiment since the fallout-cursed atmospheric tests held before the 1963 international treaty banning all but underground nuclear explosions.

So intense did this opposition become that the AEC and Defense Department felt it necessary recently to declassify and make public hitherto secret information about the nature and purpose of Cannikin.

Federal Court Suit Prepared.

But despite government assurances that the test is vital to national security and probably will have no very evil side effects, opponents remain convinced that Cannikin is neither necessary nor safe. Some of them, in fact, are preparing a federal court suit in an attempt to prevent it.

They contend Cannikin will hurt current disarmament talks between the United States and Russia. They also say it may freeze up the recent apparent thaw in U.S.-Chinese attitudes.

They assert it may trigger disastrous earthquakes and generate seismic sea waves (tsunamis) which could devastate Pacific regions as far away as Hawaii.

And they argue that it could kill many sea otters, sea lions, seals, and salmon in the waters off Amchitka, and destroy nesting sites of the already endangered bald eagle and peregrine falcon.

In any case, the test is now up to President Nixon. The White House has under study recommendations by the Under Secretaries Committee of the National Security Council, representing many agencies, which reviewed the arguments for and against Cannikin.

Assuming that the judiciary in our three-branch system of government cannot veto national security decisions of the other branches, legislative and executive, Nixon has three options: Cancel the test, let it go ahead on schedule, or postpone it to some theoretically more politic future date.

Logic, according to those who want Cannikin, says he can't cancel it. And a postponement would be not merely costly but also would give the opposition time to build up new pressures against it.

So if Nixon says go ahead, the AEC will detonate a five megaton device (equivalent to five million tons of TNT) in a spherical chamber, 52 feet across, at the bottom of a 5,875-foot hole under Amchitka.

Even now the Cannikin test device is being prepared for jet aircraft delivery to Amchitka where the shot chamber is almost ready to receive it. The AEC, meanwhile, already has made plans for pool coverage of the test by newspaper, television, and radio reporters.

The AEC says it has no idea what Nixon's decision will be. But, said a commission spokesman, "We have to be ready for whatever it is."

Amchitka is one of the Rat Islands near the westernmost end of the Aleutian chain which arcs southwest of Alaska between the Bering Sea and North Pacific to within sighting distance of Soviet Kamchatka. It is seismically one of the most active regions in the world.

Test Island Uninhabited

The test island is 42 miles long, two to four miles wide, bleak, and uninhabited except for the 700 or so men who have been working since 1967 on shot holes and several test bores.

Amchitka has been a national wildlife refuge since 193. Its remoteness was one of the main reasons the AEC picked it for Cannikin, a device so powerful that it might damage high rise buildings in Las Vegas, Reno, and Salt Lake City if it were detonated at the long-established underground test grounds in Nevada.

In a remarkable Senate debate on July 20, 1971, defenders of Cannikin disclosed previously secret information to the effect that Spartan was designed to kill enemy missiles outside the atmosphere with X-rays.

Cannikin, according to this information, is essential to determine whether the Spartan warhead, as designed, actually has the X-ray kill power demanded of it.

Otherwise, the United States could find itself stockpiling defensive missiles that might fall if ever called upon to perform their role.

59-Page Report

But the commission in a 59-page report on the environmental effects of Cannikin also conceded that it could not entirely rule out the possibility that the test might trigger some of the calamities feared by its opponents.

It said, however, it is "very unlikely" that Cannikin will cause a major earthquake and "even more unlikely" that it will kick off a damaging tidal wave.

Meanwhile, there have been actions in federal court. One suit, filed by 30 members of Congress, would force publication of a confidential report to Nixon in which it is said five of seven federal agencies concerned advised cancellation or postponement of Cannikin for various diplomatic or environmental reasons.

A U.S. district judge later ruled against the congressmen. Further appeals were expected.

Another suit, filed last July 8, asks a permanent injunction against the AEC to keep Cannikin from ever taking place. It was filed by a new organization called the Committee for Nuclear Responsibility with seven other associations joining in.

Jurisdiction Undecided

Whether the court will decide it has jurisdiction in a national security case remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, there remains the nagging doubt: Is Cannikin safe? Nobody can say with absolute certainty. Nobody can say that in the quake-prone Aleutians a convulsion of solely natural origin may not occur simultaneously with or shortly after Cannikin.

Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, retiring AEC chairman, said recently that he strongly feels Cannikin "can be carried out entirely safely."

The AEC's statutory job is to design and test weapons requested by the military. The military says Cannikin is necessary to Spartan and Spartan is necessary to Safeguard.

There are those who feel Safeguard is neither necessary nor wise. But Nixon and Congress have said it is both. Hence Cannikin.

Time for living

By ROGERS FRANKLIN

Do you get a "run-around" when you try to contact a company about a claim or bill? If you're like me, it's happened dozens of times — and made you downright mad! Yet just yesterday I learned it's often OUR fault in sometimes misunderstanding the complex ways of modern business. My friend, insurance expert Robert Simpson, explains:

"The secret of communicating with a company is simple... in one word, WRITE — don't phone or visit! When you write a letter it becomes a record; as such, it must be acknowledged and answered so that it AND the response may be included in your file.

"A telephone call is not a record. Conversations are easily forgotten or distorted, and very often the person making the response is untraceable later. Also, most companies are segmentalized organizations. If you telephone, and if you don't know which department handles your inquiry, it's quite likely you'll be switched around to several persons. Soon you're overwhelmed by frustration, wasted time, effort and money."

Who hasn't experienced all this frustration? To avoid it, Mr. Simpson advises that you write a simple letter, setting out the facts and questions. He also advised that you certify or register the letter so you're assured it's been received. He adds:

"Within a reasonable period you should receive a response telling you why there's been the delay and what you can do to speed finalization (perhaps your doctor hasn't forwarded the signed records or the company hasn't completed a necessary investigation). "Furthermore," he points out, "the company's response is signed; an individual whose name you now have is handling your claim. If you have to recommunicate, you can send your correspondence to his personal attention."

And there's one excellent step you can take. In case you still haven't received any action, you can write to the company president and relate the facts (including the name of the person you've corresponded with). Bob Simpson points out that companies spend large sums each year to project an image of strength and reliability; dissatisfied customers can undo this good will in short order. Thus, company presidents are extremely sensitive to good customer relations. Also, the president can't know every employe he has; he is grateful to learn that the action of any employe is hurting the company image (this gives you leverage with the employe, also).

Next time, therefore, WRITE — don't phone — if you have a problem or complaint. Ask (in writing) why your claim (or whatever) has been held up... what, if anything, you can do about it... when you might be receiving benefits or a settlement. As Bob says, "You'll get a far more satisfactory response than anything you've been getting by phone."

Try it: If you still fail to get a satisfactory response, carry your complaint further (in writing) to the Better Business Bureau, chamber of commerce, or industry association.

WOMEN have been doing man's work for years on a white-collar level, but their entry into the almost exclusively male construction job market has just come recently. The J.J. White Co. of the Long Island, N.Y., suburb of Old Bethpage is literally paving the way for construction-type women, with three feminine cement-truck drivers of a fleet of 12. J.J. White, owner of the firm which supplies concrete to builders, finds the women "extremely competent, capable, hard-working and most importantly, they learn very quickly." As part of their daily routine, the distaff drivers check the engine and two-way radios of their trucks, fill the gas tanks, fill the truck's water box as cement is being loaded, drive to the delivery point, pour the cement, then clean the hopper and chute. Trudi Quick of Old Bethpage is pictured living up to her name at the various stages of her job, including, on right, peering into the hopper to check on her clean-up job. (UPI)

5 homes selected for tour

TWIN FALLS — Five Twin Falls homes have been selected for this year's Junior Club Tour of Homes set from 1 to 5 p.m. Sept. 19.

Homes to be toured include those of Mr. and Mrs. Doug Borlase, 338 Locust St. N.; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Marshall III 1196 Locust St. N.; Dr. and Mrs. C. R. McWilliams, 335 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moeller, west of city, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Satterfield, 1305 Holly Drive.

Proceeds from this fifth annual Tour of Homes will be donated to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital nursery for an isolette and accessories. This equipment, used for RH-factor babies and premature or sickly infants, greatly increases the baby's chances for survival.

A $1.25 donation is asked for each ticket which is a brochure containing a brief description of each home on tour and a map showing how to reach each home.

Members of the Junior Club ask that as a courtesy to the home owners, children not be allowed to tour the homes. They also ask that the public vary the order in which they visit the homes.

Club members will be at each home to conduct the public through and to provide information concerning the furnishings and decor. Head hostesses include Mrs. Gerald Wignall, Mrs. Gergory Kadlec, Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Tom McClain and Mrs. Elbert Davis.

Pictures will be used in the Times-News periodically describing the five homes selected.

Seldom does an elegant home afford the comfort of the 38-year-old home of Dr. and Mrs. C. R. McWilliams at 335 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

This large two-story white frame home boasts beautiful mahogany woodwork, plaster moldings at the ceilings and the original linoleum on several of the floors. An elevator services all three floors and a spiral staircase leads out of the entryway to the upper floor.

Mrs. McWilliams has decorated much of the lower level with various patterns of wall paper that all carry through the color scheme of gold and green. An eye-catching mural blended right into the wallpaper covers the curving wall near the staircase.

Luxurious champagne gold carpet and gold draperies highlight the living room area, furnished in a tasteful blending of traditional and French Provincial, and including a grand piano in one corner.

A cheerful red and white kitchen and adjoining family room done in brown and orange provide a warm, inviting atmosphere in this house.

Committee members for the event include Mrs. William Kahn, chairman Mrs. Richard Reed, Mrs. Don Pfeiffer, Mrs. John Rosholt and Mrs. Elbert Davis, committee for selection of homes; Mrs. Robert Hatting, program chairman; Mrs. Jerry Meyerhoeffer, advertising chairman; Mrs. Robert Paine, arrangements chairman, and

A Lovelier You

WHAT DO YOU DO?

By Mary Sue Miller

You can just bet that the girl who always looks great is a worker. She works at good grooming.

Much like one's home, one's person mirrors the attention given it. Admittedly, some of the attention may seem trifling, but not if you recall an old maxim: "Good grooming is made up of trifles. But y-o-u-r grooming is no trifle."

Just by way of example, picture someone who is always perfectly turned out. Her lipstick never cracks, her hair never straggles. Her dress is unwrinkled, no button ever hangs loose.

Most of us know one such paragon. And we admire her, although she's a thorn in our side. She pricks our beauty conscience by never neglecting a beauty duty.

Now consider her opposite—Miss Backslider. She is guilty of any number of small flaws—rough elbows, ragged cuticles, makeup in her hairline, scedy neckwear, runover heels. A regular Pandora's Box of trifles.

Obviously a well-groomed lovely is self-organized and self-regulated. She works at the job.

YOUR GROOMING—A TO Z

Put aside your grooming doubts and worries! Send today for YOUR GROOMING—A to Z, a booklet that covers every step in achieving smooth looks. It tells how to manicure and pedicure, use deodorants and depilatories, bathe for beauty, tend feet, hands, teeth and eyes, polish skin and hair, care for clothes, apply perfumes, overcome personal posers. To obtain your copy, write Mary Sue Miller in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin.

Pantyhose is budget hangup

By PETER WEAVER

A working gal can easily spend $150 a year on pantyhose. A housewife who does not dress up as much during the day can get away with less.

No matter how you analyze it, the cost of replacing pantyhose which can last as little as two or three wearings is a major budget hangup.

I've always suspected, as a husband who pays, that store-brand pantyhose selling for as little as 69 cents a pair might be coming from the same mills that make nationally known brands selling for as much as $3.50 a pair.

Because of my obvious investigative limitations on the subject, I assigned my assistant, Martha Williams, to look into the booming pantyhose business (4.5 million dozen sold in 1967, 50 million dozen sold last year). She interviewed buyers, textile technicians and bought many kinds of pantyhose to test. Here's her report:

BEST BUY: One-size pantyhose looks like a shriveled wad in the package. On the leg, however, they look good, fit well and wear just as long, or longer, than other types costing two to three times as much. You can get this kind of pantyhose in drugstores, supermarkets and variety stores for as little as 69 cents a pair.

Manufacturers admit that one-size pantyhose won't fit "extreme sizes" but will fit 85 per cent of the market. The reason one-sizes fit so well is because they are not "boarded" when they're made. Boarding is done with more heat treatment and tends to make hosiery lose some of its stretch.

SAME MILLS: It's a known fact in the trade that the big-name manufacturers such as Burlington, Hanes and Kayser-Roth also make many of the store brands or chain brands that sell for less.

The main difference between big-name-brand pantyhose sold in a chic shop and those sold in a budget store is the price. In some instances, the big-name brands have some fancier frills on the waistband or in the toe seam but these things rarely affect wear, fit and looks—the things that really count.

HIDDEN NUMBERS: Every pair of pantyhose must have an "RN" (registered number) which, when traced back to the Federal Trade Commission, reveals who made them. If you could decode these numbers, you would be surprised to see how many 69-cent to 99-cent pairs of pantyhose are made by the same mills which get a much higher price for their own brands.

Former Area woman makes TV commercial

HANSEN — A former Hansen resident, Anita Dilworth Skeem, can be seen on television major networks these days.

She has been selected as a typical homemaker to be featured in a commercial on Johnson Wax products, her parents report.

She is married to Galen Skeem, son of Mr. and Mrs. Skeem, Route 1, Eden, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arel Dilworth, Hansen.

Mrs. Skeem said her daughter in law resides in Fylmor, Calif., and the filming of the commercial was done in her home with television cameras and crews visiting on two occasions to make plans for the filming. She said the commercials are carried on both NBC and CBS television stations and she has seen them on two different occasions.

Albertson employe honored

TWIN FALLS — Leona M. Uezzella has been named the Albertson "Employee of the Month" for September from all the chain's stores throughout the country, according to Bill Smith, Boise, east end Albertson supervisor.

Mrs. Uezzella began doing the bookkeeping for the Twin Falls Albertson store when it opened in 1948. She is still the store's bookkeeper after 22 years.

Mrs. Uezzella owned a grocery store on the West-Five Points corner and operated it for 10 years. When she sold the store she remained working for the new owners as bookkeeper.

A pin and plaque was presented to her by Twin Falls store manager Lewis Floyd and Bill Smith. She was chosen from nominations from 233 stores and over 15,000 employes.

Eden couple weds in Hazelton rites

EDEN — Karlyn Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Black, was married to James M. Ritchie, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Ritchie, all Eden, in rites Aug. 20 at the Hazelton LDS Church.

Bishop Karl Black, father of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony before a bouquet of lavender ponpons and white and purple gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown designed and made by Mrs. Ellsworth Hardy. The empire-styled gown of crepe and silk organza featured a scalloped neckline, fitted bodice of regal daisy lace and bishop sleeves gathered to a lace cuff. The chapel-length veil was bordered in matching lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of lavender carnations centered with a white orchid.

Kathryn Black, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Connie Griffiths, and Patricia and Kristine Black, sisters of the bride.

Ken Ritchie, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Joe and Dan Ritchie, brothers of the bridegroom, and Mike Black, brother of the bride.

Donna Lance played the traditional wedding music. Mrs. Norman Redd was soloist and was accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Ford.

A reception was held in the LDS Cultural Hall after the ceremony. Guests were registered by Carla Wilding.

The bride's table was covered with lace over lavender and center with a five-tiered cake decorated with lavender and purple chrysanthemums topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom. The cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Kue Beames. Mrs. LaMar Black, Mrs. Vernon Lance, aunts of the bride, and Mrs. Charles Branstetter, aunt of the bridegroom, assisted at the bride's table.

Mrs. Donald Black, aunt of the bride, Mrs. Evan Kohtz and Mrs. Monte Turner, cousins of the bridegroom, and Nina Myers displayed the gifts. Cheri Black, Sherri and Marla Middlekauff served the guests. The couple took a honeymoon trip to Payette Lake. They will reside in New York City, where the bridegroom is attending Columbia University.

Guests attended from Pennsylvania, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Oregon, Washington, and various sections of Idaho. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. John E. Bailey, Springville, Utah; Mr. and Mrs. Zed Ritchie, Kuna, and Mr. and Mrs. Joel Reynolds, Weiser, grandparents of the bride and bridegroom.

The groom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at their home. A miscellaneous shower was given by Mrs. Don Anderson and Connie Griffiths.

Mother, baby care course set Sept. 13

TWIN FALLS — An American Red Cross sponsored Mother and Baby Care course will begin Sept. 13 at 7:15 p.m. in the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital-Conference Room on the second floor.

Red Cross officials said the course will cover a six weeks period and is open to all expectant parents, with husbands especially urged to attend.

Topics to be covered include marriage, reproduction, maternal needs and changes, fetal growth and development, hospital admission, hospital maternity unit, labor and delivery, post-partum care, infant care and baby's first year.

There is no charge for the course and persons may register by attending the opening session. It is necessary to attend either the first or second week's session to be eligible for the six weeks' program.

Instructors for the course include Gigi Erdoisa, Phyllis Wagner, Delores Sims, Ann Warner and Kathy Stephenson, all registered nurses. Films, pamphlets, discussions and instruction will be featured. The course will be offered again in January, 1972.

Meat loaf

TWIN FALLS — For a quickie meat loaf highlighted with the piquant seasoning of beer, combine two pounds, lean ground beef, two envelopes spaghetti sauce mix, one cup beer, one tablespoon minced onion, one-fourth teaspoon garlic powder and one cup bread stuffing.

Bake in a shallow pan at 350 degrees for one hour or until richly browned. Beer has long been a classic ingredient in cooking. Used in place of water as the simmering liquid, it brings out all the richness of meat and vegetables. The alcohol evaporates in the cooking process.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professor of theology who has been fascinated with your column for many years.

How do you arrive at your answers? Do you think you have some special, divinely inspired power that directs you to guide others? Or do you follow a certain philosophy of life? And if so, whose?

Your answers are so direct and to the point, I sometimes think it is just a matter of common sense. Yet so few people have it. And finally, Abby, how long did it take you to write today's column? F. M. P., Ph.D.

DEAR F. M. P.: I think my answers are simply common sense in a capsule. And it took me about 1 hour and 53 years to write today's column.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently hired to give physical therapy to a partially paralyzed child to aid him in his muscular development.

My problem is I failed to complete my last year of a course in physical therapy, so although I am very well trained, I do not have a degree. I do not charge the prices professionals charge, but judging from the boy's improvement, I should have.

I am enclosing the letter I received from the boy's parents after I sent them my bill. What can I do to insure my receiving the rest of the money I am entitled to? (No names, please.) PHYSICAL THERAPIST

"Dear —: We extend to you our sincerest appreciation for what you have done for our son. We realize that he was quite unreasonable at times and required much patience. We apologize for not paying you promptly, but we were quite unaware of the charge at the time we engaged you. We were under the impression that you wanted only a small token rather than the outlandish fee you quoted, so we have decided to pay you one-third of your asking price. We feel that this is sufficient and hope you will understand."

DEAR PHYSICAL THERAPIST: Since you and the boy's parents obviously had no clear-cut understanding of your fee in advance, it is difficult to say how much you are entitled to.

You may be very well trained, but without a degree you cannot be considered a professional. I advise you to return to school, finish your training and get your credentials.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose husband left a dirty ring in the bathtub for his wife to clean, but he wouldn't dream of doing that to his mother. I have the same problem. I have tried demanding, begging and even leaving the tub dirty until I could write my message in the ring, but nothing has helped.

I have one suggestion for that woman, and all other women in the same dirty bathtub. Every time you find yourself on your knees scrubbing the tub after him, thank God for the opportunity to clean up after your man. A lot of Viet Nam widows would gladly trade tubs with you.

Mine came back, and I love that ring around the bathtub. ON MY KNEES

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SUICIDAL": You give me no clue as to where you live, which makes it impossible to help you. Go home! I promise your parents will understand.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69706, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

TF grade schools set motor-learning plan

TWIN FALLS — During the next few weeks, all first graders in the five Twin Falls elementary schools, will be initiated into an organized motor-learning situation.

Under the direction of Mr. Robert Donnelly, and Mr. Paul Epperson, volunteer mothers will be guiding the first graders through a series of specifically designed movements, similar to exercises. It is a definite program of movement geared to bring a child's motor and learning abilities up to a first grade level.

Far from being a playtime experience, although an enjoyable one, the children will work for about eighteen minutes per day for six weeks. It will help the children to coordinate hand, foot and eye movements, necessary for the learning process. A child with poor balance and poor motor ability often has trouble in his academic work. This is a problem the course hopes to overcome. The program also helps the child to develop good concentration, as the series of exercises cannot be accomplished without it.

The results hoped to gain for each child will be good coordination, ability to organize his thoughts, and good concentration, and these lead to an easier learning ability for the first grader.

The volunteer mothers will be asked to spend ninety minutes each week, or as much time as possible. Each mother of a first grader will be contacted sometime in the next few weeks, and they are urged to try and find some time for a very worthwhile project.

Book Review Debbie Bird, Wallace marry

A PECK OF SALT
By John T. Hough, Jr.
A book review by Lucille Wolfe, Twin Falls Public Library.

"A Peck of Salt," a year in the ghetto, by John T. Hough, Jr., is the story of a young white man and his experience as a Vista volunteer in Chicago and Detroit. He took his title from a quotation — "It is a true saying, that a man must eat a peck of salt with his friend before he knows him." — Cervantes.

The author feels he himself learned a great deal. His first lesson was in Chicago when he and another volunteer decided to visit the University of Chicago which is in a ghetto district. "Never (go anywhere) without a brother", is the title of his first chapter.

Also he was in Chicago during the ill-fated Democratic convention and several of them, including his "brother", decided to go watch the hippies. The police came to break up the meeting and they all had to scamper though they were not involved but would not have been able to convince the police. When John had to leave Chicago his "brother" told him "My people can be pretty mean sometimes. If things get bad up there in Detroit, don't you try to be no hero. Don't be afraid to pull out if you have to, you hear?"

In Detroit John was again told there was a lot of hostility toward white Vistas and the leaders were surprised and not too pleased they were sent there.

But he had not come for any other reason than to try to help. His small apartment was near a shopping district and not far from the Junior High School, where he was to teach, on Twelfth Street.

Debbie Bird, Wallace marry

GOODING — Debbie Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hird, Gooding, and Robert Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Wallace, Boise, were united in marriage Aug. 21 at the First Christian Church, Gooding. The double ring ceremony was officiated by Rev. Harold Hake.

The church was decorated with two floor baskets of blue and white gladioli at each side of the altar.

The bride was gowned in a cotton floor-length dress fashioned with a blue bodice, short white puffed sleeves, and alternating skirt panels of blue and white. The empire waistline and skirt panels were accented with lace and ribbon. Her headpiece was of blue daisies. As a token of sentiment she wore a blue garter made by Mrs. Jim Norfleet. The bridal bouquet was a nosegay of white daisies.

Maid of Honor was Kendra Wanzneried, Twin Falls. Best man was George Wagner, Gooding. Ushers were Dan Hird and Terry Wallace, brothers of the bride and groom.

Mrs. John Condie sang "A Wedding Prayer," accompanied by Donna Hawks.

A reception was held at the War Memorial Hall following the ceremony. The three tiered wedding cake was placed on a mirror and decorated with blue roses.

Serving the cake was Mrs. Jim Schumacher, Boise. Mrs. Jim Norfleet presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Margaret Sartor served coffee. Jolene Geise was in charge of the gifts

Teachers go to Germany

BONN (UPI)—Six months ago Philip Engstrom was teaching mathematics at Washington State University in Pullman and taking home $800 a month.

"Then things began looking a bit insecure in the department," he recalled in an interview here. "You know what the teaching situation in the states is like now. I thought it might be a good time to get out."

Today Engstrom, 44 and the father of four, has embarked on a new career as a math teacher in West Germany.

He is one of nearly 100 Americans taking part in a pilot project which most West German educators hope may provide at least a temporary solution to this country's woeful lack of qualified teachers.

West Germany always has had a labor problem. Too few people are available to fill all the jobs created by the postwar "economic miracle."

But while two million foreign "guest workers" have been brought in to fill manual jobs, virtually nothing has been done about the teaching profession, where the shortage is acute.

By one estimate, West German schools need an additional 100,000 teachers. A survey in one state last year — when conditions were better than now — showed that one of every five schooltime hours was wasted because no instructor was on hand to use the time.

Early this year, education officials in Hamburg began casting looks at the American labor market, where it is said as many as 60,000 teachers may be out of work when schools open this fall.

The result: a program to bring unemployed U.S. teachers to West Germany.

Dr. Wilhelm Reuter, superintendent of the Hamburg school system, flew to Washington, where, with the aid of a German radio correspondent and an acquaintance in the State Department, he began recruiting.

"We had more than 500 applications for 100 jobs — we never expected such a return," Reuter said.

Surprisingly, a large number of applicants were unemployed members of the aerospace industry, trying to fill time until the U.S. economy perks up.

"But only those were selected who had previous teaching experience," said a spokesman for the U.S. consulate in Hamburg, which is helping with some of the arrangements.

The standards were high. Of the first group, which arrived July 29, more than one-third hold doctoral degrees. Twenty-six teach physics and 15, mathematics.

Salaries are on a German scale — but tax-free for the entire term of contract, which is two years in most cases. Including a family allowance, Engstrom will be netting more than the $800 monthly he made at Washington State University.

Younger instructors will receive a minimum of $512 a month, excellent by West German standards.

Lottery winners continue to work and life changes little

NEW YORK (UPI)—George Ashton has been a millionaire since last fall, but he hardly has noticed the difference. He still goes each morning to Manhattan's garment district to buy ready-to-wear dresses for the J. C. Penny department store chain.

Last October, George Ashton and his family won $1 million in the New York State lottery. The night of the drawing they entertained about a dozen friends in a $130-a-night penthouse suite at the Americana Hotel in Manhattan, but that was the extent of their splurge. "It's added a little more security, but that's it," the 50-year-old Ashton says.

A girl was asked during the Apollo 15 moonwalk, what would be more exciting than walking on the moon? "Winning the lottery," she answered. Everything about the lotteries in New York, New Jersey and New Hampshire is designed to create just such expectations. A million dollars sound like a ticket to a new life—but few of the winners find that to be the case.

Last September, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Laielli of Williamsport, Pa., won $250,000 in the New York State lottery. Two months later, Laielli was laid off his $5,900-a-year stockroom job at the Avco Corp., engine plant in Williamsport.

Although John Laielli receives four times his previous salary for no work at all (his payments of $25,000 a year are spaced over 10 years), he would like his old job back if it were available and he isn't in any hurry to see the world. He and his wife bought a larger house after they won the prize and Mr. Laielli traded in his 1961 Ford for a year-old model. His wife is trying to talk him into taking a vacation this year—their first in 18 years.

Charles Klotz of Detroit is another instant millionaire who kept on working. After he won the New York lottery's $1 million prize in February, he returned to Detroit where he worked at repairing business machines. "He never missed a day," his employer said before Klotz retired in June. Now he plans to do a bit of traveling.

One reason winning the lottery isn't apt to bring drastic change to the lives of winners is that even a million dollars isn't what it used to be. The big winners are paid $50,000 a year for 20 years. After taxes, however, it works out for most to about $25,000 net a year.

In January, Norman L. Cook won a fully paid $50,000. But the 24-year-old draftsman for Consolidated Edison in New York took home only $17,000.

The tax collectors took the other $33,000. "It's pathetic anytime the government takes over half of what you make," says Cook, who earns $7,000 a year working for Con Ed.

Many lottery tickets are made out to "Joe Doakes and family," and a New York lottery official relates that the "and family" often brings dozens of unheard of relatives flocking. One winner refused to be photographed and slipped in through a side-door to collect his check. The reason: his ex-wife was already looking for him.

Relatives aren't the only ones who show up on winners' doorsteps. Mrs. Laielli receives a telephone call from a man in California who wanted her to invest in "three blossoming businesses." But the wary Mrs. Laielli said no thanks when she learned the man had just been released from prison after he was convicted of embezzlement.

Instead, one of Mrs. Laielli's two daughters wants to open a dress shop in Williamsport. "We're tall and heavyset people," she says, "and we can't always find clothes to fit in Williamsport."

George Ashton steadfastly refuses to see reporters because, he says, he doesn't want to attract fortune-seekers to his door.

On the field it's cleats. After the game it's PEDWIN BOOTS

Sub market grows

NEW YORK (UPI)—The noted oceanographer, Dr. Jacques Piccard, predicted recently that a commercial market for submarines at last is becoming a reality. Ever since the Germans sent the submarine freighter Deutschesland across the Atlantic to get a cargo of grain in 1916, underwater enthusiasts have insisted that someday submarines would carry a lot of the world commerce.

Reservoir waters exceed '70 total

The newest proposal for cargo submarines is that of General Dynamics' Electric Boat division at Groton, Conn. It sees underwater supertankers hauling oil from the Arctic slope of Alaska under the ice floes of the northwest passage to Atlantic ports. The ESSO group has given this proposal serious consideration.

SHOSHONE — Magic Reservoir contains 136,500 acre feet of water, Leon Grieve, manager of the Bog Wood Canal Co., said Saturday. Last year on this date it contained 117,600 acre feet. Grieve said since there is still a large quantity of water in the reservoir, and it can be used advantageously the Big Wood Board of directors decided to allot an extra 14 days of water to be used in September. They also allotted five days of water for October at 80 per cent to be used in October. American Falls reservoir contains 1,254,000 acre feet, compared to 892,000 a year ago. The directors decided to run water in October for 10 days at 80 per cent delivery from American Falls Reservoir. Stockwater will be run as long as possible but will be turned off for maintenance when necessary, he said.

3 Richfield children named 'super sleuths'

RICHFIELD — Ceremonies at the Richfield Public Library Thursday marked the close of the summer reading program, it was announced today.

Mrs. Ken Dixon, librarian, presented book awards to children who participated. They were Jill Dixon, Tami Whitesell, and Rick Haws. The three were counted "super sleuths" for reading 30 books.

Shelley Andreason earned "detective" status for reading 10 books. "Private eyes" were Susan Maesats, Jamie Peterson, and Berkeley Ward. Each read five books. Sixteen children were enrolled and all were presented treats by Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Carl Paulson, library board member.

Mrs. Dixon announced the board will use the book budget of $150 to purchase more children's books. The money will be matched by State funds for the project. Many reference books are now available at the library for use by school children and other interested persons.

Mrs. Paulson, library board secretary, reported receipt of $972.58, which is the second half of allotted tax money. Roofing primer has been used on the library building roof with John Paulson, Idaho State University student, hired to do the work.

Richard Sparks, renter of the library apartment, was given permission to repair the stairway platform, replace glass in the storm door, and purchase window shades.

Dope path learned

ELYRIA, Ohio (UPI) — Barry A. Wachtler, 18, heard himself sentenced Friday to one to five years in prison on drug charges and then told Judge Leroy Kelly he had learned that heroin leads to "jail, hospital and death."

"I've been in jail and I've been in hospitals. I hope it doesn't lead me to death," the youth told the court. Moments later, as he was being led from the second-floor courtroom by a deputy sheriff, Wachtler broke away, climbed out a window to a balcony and leaped to his death.

The youth's father, Carl A. Wachtler, said, "The guys who sold drugs to my son are murderers."

"The courts don't go after the big guys. Only the little guys, the two-bit guys, suffer. There are too many loopholes," the father said.

small research submarines, says they are about to become everyday commercial working tools like the truck, the bulldozer or the tugboat.

He says they will be used by oil companies to monitor and even to help lay thousands of miles of undersea pipelines and drilling stations.

Dr. Piccard also foresees submarines being used in ship salvaging, treasure hunting, fisheries research, life-saving

SEATED IN SUNSWEEP Slaughterhouse Gulch, one of the rock fans who attended the weekend Wood River Festival "grooves" on the music. The turnout increased slightly on Sunday to around 1,500 persons before the event concluded about midnight. A generally relaxed atmosphere prevailed during the event, after early tensions dissipated.

The aftermath

PILES OF LITTER scattered throughout the two-mile length of Slaughterhouse Gulch were all that remained of the trouble-prone Wood River Rock Festival today. Festival promoters had failed to make provisions for trash disposal at the site, leaving the 1,500 fans with no choice but to use the ground as a huge receptacle.

Oregon man injured

TUTTLE — A Portland, Ore., truck driver, Roosevelt Jenkins, was injured Friday afternoon while driving a semi-truck cab without an attached rig east of Tuttle, when an unidentified woman driver threatened a head-on collision.

Officers said Jenkins, traveling west, saw the other driver pass an eastbound truck, swerving directly into his lane. He swerved to miss the car, left the road and rolled over one and a half times.

The other driver continued on without stopping, Jenkins told officers.

Colorado gets 1972 HS rodeo

TWIN FALLS — The 1972 National High School Rodeo will be held at the Adams County Regional Fairgrounds near Denver, Colo., according to Mrs. Shirley Jennings, Ontario, Ore., publicity director for the national association.

Mrs. Jennings, reporting on results of a special executive committee meeting in Salt Lake City over the weekend, said the Colorado bid was among six considered. She said states bidding were South Dakota, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wyoming, Colorado and Idaho.

The 1972 finals, originally scheduled to have been held in Colorado, was put up for bids during a meeting of the executive committee during the 1971 finals last month at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds at Filer. The Colorado committee, as it stood then, was not functioning well enough that directors believed the finals should be held there.

In the meantime, Mrs. Jennings said, the committee reorganized into a state-wide organization and in a matter of a few days received underwriting for the 1972 event of more than $100,000.

She said the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce committee which sponsored the 1971 Rodeo should be thanked for considering sponsoring the event a second year. She said Idaho and Colorado were the only two sites seriously considered at the Salt Lake City meeting.

Dave Campbell, New Meadows, president of the national association, will remain in that office until a committee meeting which is expected to be held in the near future.

Mrs. Jennings said Campbell and the other six members of the executive committee flew to Colorado Sunday morning to make an on-site inspection of facilities there before casting the ballot in favor of the Colorado site.

Fire sears area north of bridge

SHOSHONE — Four fires which broke out in the Shoshone district of the Bureau of Land Management Sunday were under control this morning although several were still being patrolled.

Largest of the fires, Wallace Fixsen, fire control officer reported, covered 900 acres of dry grass, and brush along U. S. Highway 93 north of the Perrine Memorial Bridge Sunday night.

The fire started near Devil's Corral and burned near the north weigh station at the bridge. It was confined largely to the east side of the highway but jumped to the west side for a short distance. It began at 7:30 p.m. and was under control by about 10 p.m. One crew remained at the site throughout the night. Cause of the fire had not been determined this morning.

Another fire covered 60 acres in the Box Canyon area southwest of Wendell. Crews were summoned about the same time the first fire was reported. This was brought under control about 4 a.m. today. A crew also stayed there throughout the night and a second crew assisted in mopup today. The fire burned in heavy sagebrush and BLM officials said the area will be kept under watch as a wind could whip up the fire again.

The size of two other fires both along the railroad in the east end of Lincoln County, had not been determined this morning, Fixsen said.

One of the fires was east of Teacher pay hike on, off?

BOISE (UPI) — Most of Idaho's public school teachers may not receive salary increases provided for in current school year contracts after all — at least until the wage freeze is over.

The Idaho Education Association has said it interpreted rulings by the Cost of Living Council in Washington, D.C., as meaning Idaho teachers could receive payment under terms of the 1971-72 school year contracts.

A statement is to be issued Tuesday by the superintendent of public instruction in Idaho, D.F. Engelking. He said his statement would be intended as a guide for school districts in the state.

The Cost of Living Council said Friday that to be eligible for a salary increase a teacher would have had to work under terms of the new contract before Aug. 15, the effective date of the wage freeze.

Unless he worked before that date, the council said, the teacher was ineligible for increases provided for in a contract covering the 1971-72 school year — even though the contract may have been signed last spring.

The executive secretary of the Idaho Education Association, Wayne York, said the IEA would continue to wait for further clarification.

Dietrich and the other was near Owenza crossing, west of Dietrich. Both were believed to be small.

Darrell Smith, fire dispatcher for the Sawtooth National Forest, said two small man-caused fires were put out Sunday. One fire was spotted on Shake Creek where campers left an unattended fire. Another, at the Father and Son Camp on the Albion division, was also the result of an unattended campfire. Both were found shortly after spreading out of control, Smith said.

2 Yugoslav students enter Twin Falls high

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Two young citizens of Yugoslavia are enrolled in classes in the Twin Falls High School to expand their knowledge of the English language and obtain a better understanding of western American life.

Mehmed Husic, known as "Mike," and Davor Zavisic, or "Dave," have already completed high school in their own country and find high school curriculum in Twin Falls is far less demanding than in Yugoslavia.

They are attending school here as exchange students under the Youth for Understanding program which recruits students in foreign countries for American high schools and also provides an opportunity for American students to attend one year of school in other countries.

Mike, who comes from Sara Jevo, Yugoslavia, is residing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Smith on Highlawn Drive, and Dave of Backa Palanka, Yugoslavia, is now a temporary member of the O. J. Smith family on Washington Street North.

Both young men hope to continue their education by enrolling in college after their year in Twin Falls. Mike, who speaks English better than his fellow countryman, said both feel by the end of the year they will have good command of English which is becoming the universal language and which will benefit them in their future education which may be in some country other than their native Yugoslavia.

Dave is the son of two medical doctors and says he may follow his mother and father into that profession but is not certain as yet. He is studying English, world problems, history, physical education and music including both band and orchestra.

Mike, the son of a federal judge, is interested in journalism and says he may go into the newspaper field. He is studying journalism, speech, English language, world history, world problems and physical education. He hopes to obtain a scholarship in journalism next year and may attend school in Paris.

About 3,000 foreign students are in the United States this year under the Youth for Understanding program. Each is selected on a basis of scholastic ability, citizenship and leadership.

Carnival to set up

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News Writer

FILER — A caravan of trucks, buses and trailers will move into Filer Tuesday and head for the Twin Falls County fairgrounds where the Ray Cammack Shows will open Wednesday.

More than 300 people are involved in the movement and daily operation of the show, with some 60 truck and trailer units involved in the handling of rides and concessions alone.

The first unit to be erected will be the famous Price's Cookhouse, a carnival-business legend which feeds show personnel. It is also open to the public during the performances here.

Cammack this year offers his usual fine carnival with several new rides but also a "first" for the area, a circus wild animal act to be presented free daily on the midway. Featuring trained but untamed Himalayan black bears and jungle cats, Hal and Frances Fisher will present a thrilling exhibition previously seen only by paid admission.

This is the Cammack Show's 16th season on the road which began in early May and included towns in four states and nearly a dozen dates on the Canadian tour.

Cammack said he always likes to open the season with at least one new major ride. This year he's tripled that. When the midway opens for business here, it will have two rides never before featured, plus a new giant ferris wheel.

One of these is the Saturn 6 which stands in the center of the midway like a rocket about to be launched. In action, the ride wheels customers from a normal position in six passenger pods to a wheeling escalation which lifts them above the level point of the top of the ride.

Another new ride is the Zipper which is a revolving arm on which free-swinging cages flip riders in an unpredictable pattern. Also back are such favorites as the tilt-o-whirl, the octopus and scrambler, and Cammack's specially ordered Italian scooter cars.

Cammack became interested in the carnival business years ago when he used to assist a neighbor who had a small carnival and later decided to branch off on his own.

Many of the people the Cammacks hire to help operate the large carnival are high school students who will be returning to school after the Filer fair, the Cammacks' last engagement of the season.

The students enjoy the work and are given an opportunity to earn money to help them through the coming school year.

Morton asks resource unit

DENVER (UPI) — Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, who just wrapped up a month-long tour of 10 Western states, Friday called for formation of a federal Department of Natural Resources before 1972 when "it could become involved in partisan politics."

"If I could select the one great thing we learned from this trip, it would be the need in the Western states for land use planning so that the interests of conservation and development can be balanced," he said. "To fail to do this will be falling our time and the next generation."

Morton's group toured national parks, dams, BLM lands and even descended to the bottom of a mine shaft in the course of its 30-day Western Odyssey, dubbed "Operation West."

He said the investigating team found "tremendous pressure" on public lands, and he predicted that unless land use regulations are adopted and strictly enforced, Western lands will become so desecrated that

"billions of dollars" will be required to rehabilitate them.

"I'm not too happy with the way we've preserved the country," Morton said. "The biggest problem I've got is unwinding mistakes made in the '60's—especially in the Four Corners area."

Morton said he would not criticize any of his predecessors in the Interior Department, adding, "They lived in their times—without the tremendous environmental interest of ours."

Morton said the proposed Department of Natural Resources should be preceded by passage of an "Organic Act" for BLM lands. He said such an act—dealing with "basic fundamental policies"—would be vital in establishing a multi-use approach, in maintaining environmental integrity and in balancing agricultural, mining and recreational demands.

Morton said the oil shale industry could become an important one, but that "it's pretty well downstream in time."

ture on oil shale reserves and we have to make sure we have all the environmental questions answered," he said. "We've got to take our time—I don't want to rush into it."

He said predictions that some active oil-shale operations would be underway by 1975 might prove valid "if the country needs it and the price is right."

He added, however, that some changes would be required in present technology, especially in areas of waste disposal and air pollution.

Morton said his group now is studying the recently completed report of the National Parks Advisory Board headed by former First Lady, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, and that he would appoint a task force to pursue major recommendations to cope with overcrowding in national parks.

Morton said he had "just glanced" at the report, but he cited several major recommendations, including establishment of free mass transportation systems; separate trail systems; "so back packers and horses don't have to confront each other"; "resting" some areas so that "nature can overcome any degradation that has occurred"; improvement and dispersal of camping facilities; and larger federal appropriations for maintenance and development.

Morton said his own group would recommend that a number of "man-made relics," such as historic hotels, be renovated and preserved.

Asked if he would urge President Nixon to form a Department of Natural Resources by executive order should Congress decline his recommendation, he said, "Let's not put the spare tire on the ground until something goes flat."

He said he did not want to "threaten Congress with an executive order," because the system would work better with congressional approval.

Morton also predicted the decade of the 1970s would be "a great decade of change for

Lincoln memorial menaced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pollution threatens to turn the marble in the Lincoln Memorial into "one big Alka-Seltzer tablet."

They said they intended to treat the monument with Savestone, a liquid synthetic stone developed by the University of New York's Department of Restoration.

"It is, we think, an answer to this problem," said Wallace Helles, a Savestone scientist.

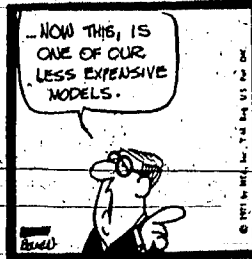

The proper application of Savestone should preserve the monument for about 100 years before another application would be necessary.

The park department said the Lincoln Memorial had shrunk 0.32 inch since its completion

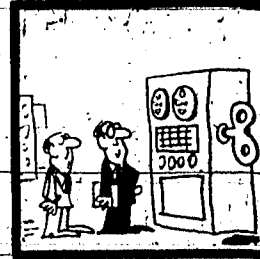

1922. Kenneth Eisenberg, a restoration specialist, said if nothing was done to stop the deterioration, the monument would turn into "one big Alka-Seltzer tablet."

Berkeley's radical council coalition cracking

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—When Berkeley's radical city councilmen and mayor swept into office last April with a "peaceful revolution" at the ballot box, they vowed to produce a model in "new politics."

Now, after four months in office, the "new politics" radical coalition is showing signs of "old politics" wear and tear.

The radicals dismiss it as merely minor differences and petty personal attacks blown up by the "establishment press." But tensions have emerged among the three radical council members, their supporters and liberal-Mayor Warren Widener that could crack the coalition.

The radicals and Widener, who is more moderate but votes with them on most issues, almost—but not quite—gained an outright majority in the April 16 election.

Because they did not do so, the council has been virtually deadlocked from the outset between the four-member radical bloc on one side and the four-man bloc of conservatives and moderates on the other. The two sides cannot even agree on filling a vacant seat to bring the council up to its authorized strength of nine. Nor can they agree on a city budget.

Now, the radicals themselves are doing some internal squabbling so noticeable that they were recently criticized for it by Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., the radical Berkeley congressman whose endorsement helped elect them.

There have also been rumblings from both the coalition's supporters and its enemies aimed at recalling one councilman, D'Army Bailey, a black attorney. During the campaign, Bailey and another black lawyer, Ira Simmons, endorsed by a group called the Black Caucus, and united with another loosely knit organization's two candidates, Iona Hancock and Rich Brown of the April coalition, to run on one ticket for four vacant council seats.

Brown, a University of California graduate student, narrowly missed the fourth seat. But Widener's election as the city's first black mayor gave the radicals a fourth vote anyway.

The deadlock between the radicals and the conservatives has stalled the council's principal business, the city budget, for weeks.

The original June 30 budget deadline was missed. Now the council must set a property tax rate by Sept. 7 or lose some $19 million in revenue.

The pressures of dealing with the proposed $2.3 million budget in sessions that sometimes drag

'We find ourselves in the situation of...discovering that we have to throw out the new ones...'

on for 10 hours recently caused an angry Widener to declare a meeting adjourned and walk out when Bailey insisted on discussing a proposed expanded business license tax.

The radicals and Widener have stuck together on most budget issues, however, although Bailey said "Widener will go further than he would in compromising to the conservatives in order to get the budget through."

But Bailey and Simmons have also recently come into sharp conflict with Mrs. Hancock, who is white and the only woman on the council, over the issues that Bailey and Simmons call the struggle of blacks and

Mrs. Hancock's special interest, women's liberation.

Bailey and Simmons voted against Mrs. Hancock's proposals for a women's health center and a women's hiring program for city employees. "We were against the health center because no black women were involved," Simmons said. "The other question was who gets priority in city hiring, blacks or women. Our position is that the struggle of blacks and the third world takes precedence over women's liberation."

The conflict openly split the coalition, with Widener and moderate Vice Mayor Wilmont Sweeney, also black, voting with Bailey and Simmons, and Mrs. Hancock getting support from the three conservatives on her proposals. It also brought on Dellums' criticism. "If these people (the radicals) see their interests as mutually exclusive, I see this as a question of whether they understood the meaning of coalition from the beginning," Dellums said from his office in Washington. "Black people's freedom is not separate from that of women and their struggles are not antithetical."

Bailey and Simmons were visibly miffed.

"Ira and myself consider ourselves political allies with the congressman," Bailey said. "But we would not attempt to make an assessment of the congressman's work in Washington, and conversely we would expect that his assessment of the local situation would be a bit more cautious." However, Bailey does not believe the differences are serious. "We don't think we ought to camouflage our political difficulties," he said. "During the campaign we had to present a united front on the left."

Presenting a united front perhaps promised too much to Berkeley's radical community, though, and the two black attorneys have been under the gun not only from disgruntled white radicals, but even from members of the Black Caucus itself.

Eric Morton, who worked for the two councilmen as campaign manager but quit before the election, said there is some discussion among the radical community of initiating a recall effort against Mayor Bailey.

"Bailey is acting in a very arrogant fashion," Morton said. "He refuses to be accountable for his actions. We find ourselves in the situation of having thrown out the Palace Guard and now discovering that we have to throw out the new ones."

Lab aide's lungs flushed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI)—A Colorado laboratory technician who inhaled radioactive particles last month in a nuclear weapons plant explosion underwent his second lung flushing in a week Friday.

Doctors said A. Michael Olveda was in good condition today in an Albuquerque hospital.

Olveda inhaled particles of radioactive plutonium in an explosion Aug. 22 at the Rocky Flats nuclear plant, 10 miles west of Denver. The explosion blew a lid off a laboratory container holding plutonium waste material.

Doctors said without the flushing, considered a medical first in the United States, the technician would die from radioactive poisoning.

Bataan Memorial Hospital spokesman Jack Janowski said Olveda's left lung was flushed Friday "for 86 continuous minutes with 25 liters of salt water. He is resting comfortably and is in good condition."

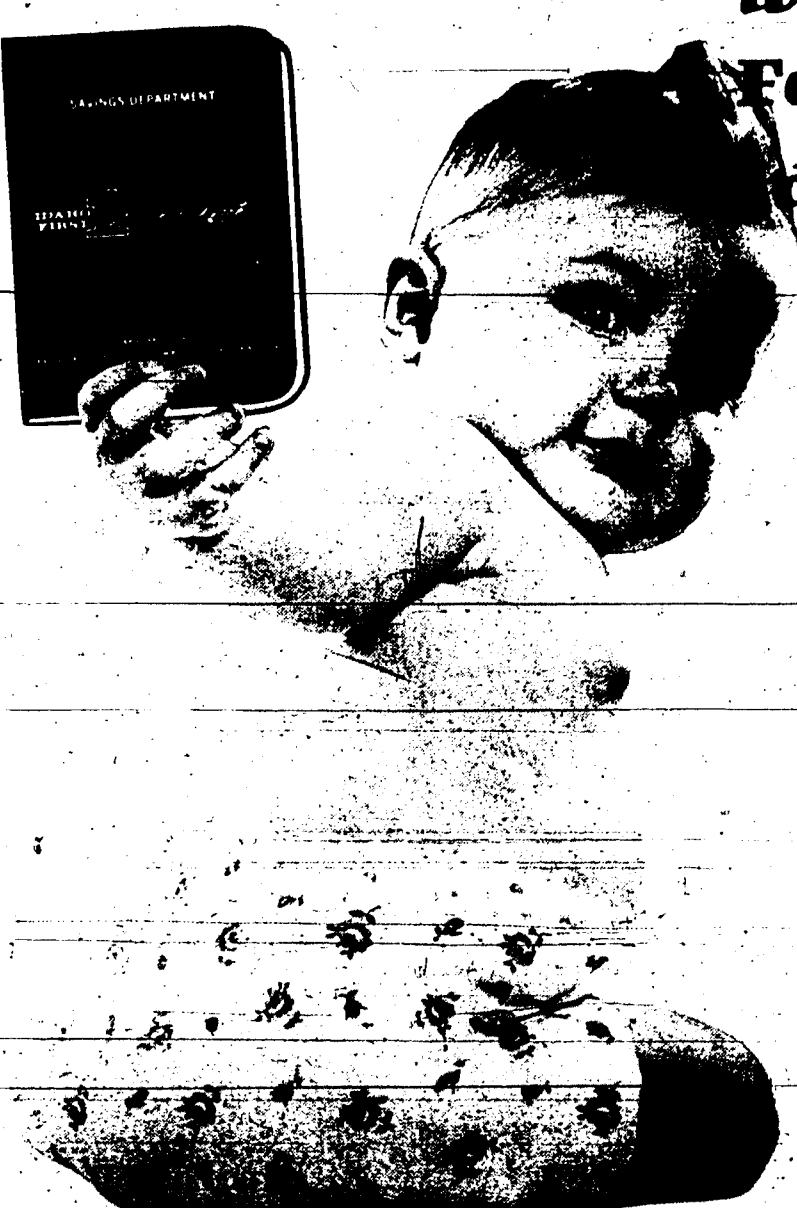

Olveda's right lung was cleansed of particles in an identical operation Monday.

Janowski said Olveda was kept alive during the two operations by pumping oxygen into one lung while doctors used the saline water to cleanse the other lung. He said Monday's operation marked the first time the procedure was performed in the United States.

Earlier in the week, a spokesman for the Dow Chemical Corp., which operates the plant, blamed the accident on "an apparent chemical reaction in the can containing plutonium turnings" of waste chips.

Editors Note: This is the first of two stories detailing a disagreement between a prominent wildlife biologist and the National Park Service concerning a study of grizzly bears in Yellowstone.

By JACK K. GRAEME
YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (UPI) — A prominent wildlife biologist says the National Park Service won't let him continue a 12-year study of Yellowstone National Park's grizzlies because findings don't agree with bear control policy.

But Yellowstone and Interior Department officials deny that is why Frank and John Craighead have been refused permission to continue their bear research in the famous park.

In addition, officials say the team could continue its research if they signed a "memorandum of understanding" which Frank Craighead says gives the government censorship power over their reports.

He said the agreement requires prior government approval for all communications regarding grizzly bear research.

"This means that almost anything of a sensitive area to them (the Park Service) would never get out," said Craighead, president of the Environmental Research Institute, headquartered in Moose, Wyo.

Harassment Charged
"There has been all kinds of harassment including the elimination of our laboratory," he said. Craighead said the facility was housed in a building owned by Yellowstone Park Co., which was destroyed on grounds it was an eyesore. However, he added, he had obtained funds for renovating the structure.

"We have decided not to do work on grizzlies and probably other species unless we can report on it," Craighead said. "This is a blocking of scientific freedom to conduct research and academic freedom to report our findings."

Craighead said since the study was not financed by the government "we then should be free to publish our findings."

According to acknowledgements at the end of the study, financial aid was received from the National Science Foundation, National Geographic Society, Philco Corp., Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, National Park Service and University of Montana.

The Craigheads argue in their study that Park Service policy of rapidly closing down open pit garbage dumps is depriving grizzly bears of food they became accustomed to by habit and forces the animals into campgrounds where human-bear confrontations are more numerous. Because of this, they argue, the Park Service is having to kill or ship more bears to zoos than ever before.

Policy Defended
The Park Service disagrees and says its policy is designed to get bears to stop depending upon human foods and return to a natural environment. The service says the program is succeeding.

Tom Bassett, chief of wildlife research of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, said prior censorship was not involved in the memorandum of understanding and that no one was stopping the Craigheads from publishing their finds.

He noted an article critical of the park's bear management program, written by the Craigheads, was recently published in a scientific magazine and had received prior editorial approval from the Interior Department.

"This is just a plain matter of editorial policy," said Bassett. "But their article is there for everyone to see that they don't agree with the Park Service."

Changed

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI) — Ruchell Magee says he has changed his mind and now wants his trial to start immediately on murder-kidnap charges stemming from last summer's bloody shootout at the Marin County Civic Center.

Magee recently had agreed to an indefinite postponement of his case until the completion of the trial of Angela Davis, the former UCLA instructor.

But in a new petition filed Friday in Marin Superior Court, Magee said he had been "ill advised" by Superior Court Judge Richard Annason to accept the postponement.

He said the memorandum of understanding was a routine contract and "results are routinely cleared."

"How can a government agency let people run all over the place on land for which they are responsible?" said Bassett.

"Further work on the grizzly study would hinge on the Craigheads' acceptance of the memorandum of understanding and so far negotiations on that are deadlocked, because it is not to their liking."

Bassett also pointed out while Frank Craighead is a private individual, his brother, John, is an employe of the Interior Department in addition to heading the Montana cooperative wildlife research unit.

Next: The Craighead report vs. The Park Service.

Pilot alters view on eagles

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — Helicopter pilot James Vogan, who has told a congressional subcommittee he flew men who shot down eagles over Wyoming and Colorado, says he no longer believes the huge birds are serious predators.

Vogan, in a copyrighted story in the Casper Star-Tribune, maintained he told the truth before Sen. Gale McGee's subcommittee concerning the eagle deaths. And he said 570 eagles alone were killed over the Bolton Ranch of Casper sheepman Herman Werner.

Werner has denied hiring men to kill eagles and this week said McGee was acting as a "public prosecutor."

"I can't see how any man can sit and accuse an honorable man such as Senator McGee," Vogan said.

"He (Werner) told all of us he had permits (to kill eagles) and maybe he thought he had. The Game and Fish kicked this back to the governor, and from the Senate hearing I guess they applied for permits."

Vogan also said Wyoming Game and Fish Department employes knew of the eagles being killed on the Bolton Ranch and may have taken pictures of them.

Gov. Stanley Hathaway recently said an investigation indicated the Game and Fish Department knew nothing of the killings.

Vogan said a talk with a friend of his after the incident convinced him the eagles were not the villains he had been told.

Vogan also said he has been interviewed for a segment of the Dick Cavett Show to be shown on television. He said he may write a book about the eagle deaths and resulting investigation.

Among young, water beds set sales pace

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI)—In the world of the long-haired young, water beds are the fastest-selling item since love beads.

Despite scare stories of collapsing floors, electrocutions and seasick sleepers, the manufacturers of the water-filled plastic bags are producing several thousand a week and are aiming at the middle-class market and permanence. Their big business competitors—the people who make the innerspring mattresses most Americans sleep on—predict the waterbed will soon go the way of the hula hoop.

But David A. Nagel, the wild-haired, bearded president of Come Together Waterbeds, Inc., in this San Francisco suburb, thinks his product—in some form—is here to stay. Nagel, who is also president of the recently formed Water Bed Institute, said the industry expects to sell a million beds this year.

"We're taking advantage of the young people market now, but we're crashing straight into the middle-class," he said in an interview. "It started out with college students and hippies, but in the past two months, we've started getting older people, especially those with kids."

Nagel expressed hope that development of a special water bed heater with Underwriter Laboratory approval will make the beds more acceptable to middle-class buyers. He also noted the increasing market in outdoor water beds for patio or poolside and sales to national motel chains.

Come Together's plant—in an old warehouse—can produce 2,200 beds a week when its long-haired employees work around-the-clock shifts. The workers cut the beds from rolls of heavy plastic, seam them together a few feet at a time by ultrasonic sound, inspect them by eye and then fold and pack them in boxes for shipment.

The firm is one of about 20 making the beds by hand—half of them located in Marin County, across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco.

The industry is frank about its biggest selling pitch—sex. A distant second in the argument that the bed has relaxing and-or "womblike" qualities.

The Water Bed Institute, made up of manufacturers and retailers, was formed this summer to set up industry standards for plastics, seams, heaters and weight-distribution and has tried to have the state of California adopt and enforce them.

The institute also acts as a publicity arm of the industry, particularly in trying to overcome the bed's early bad publicity. A spokesman insists that despite numerous stories, there have been no electrocutions, few floods and even fewer collapsing floors.

Labor potshots don't faze investors

NEW YORK (UPI)—Labor continued to take pot shots at President Nixon's mid-August crackdown on the economy, but it didn't upset jubilant investors who pushed the stock market higher for the fourth week in a row.

Organized labor contends Nixon's new economic reforms, involving a 90-day wage-price rent freeze, work heavily against working people while having a soft impact on business. At the same time, union leaders have charged Nixon's plan will result in more, not less, unemployment. The nation's unemployment rate spurted to 6.1 per cent in August from 5.8 per cent in July, but the data was fattered prior to the President's action.

Investors, however, are convinced Nixon's measures will shift the economy into forward gear and keep it there through next year's presidential election. The President is scheduled to deliver a Labor Day message to the nation Monday. Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler declined to give details of the speech, but the President was widely expected to call on dissident labor leaders to cooperate with his new economic policy and appeal for "temporary sacrifices" from the American people to curb inflation. For the week, the NYSE Common Stock Index rose 0.14 to 55.66. Standard & Poor's edged up 0.21 to 100.69, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average climbed 4.60 to 912.75. Advances topped declines, 958 to 687 among the 1,831 issues crossing the tape.

turn from its recess to see how it will implement what the administration has proposed," he added.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—Despite the complexity of President Nixon's new economic program and the many questions it raised, a distinctly more favorable market environment has been created, according to Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith.

The program's announcement was just what the economy needed—evidence that something was being done, said the firm, which noted that subsequent reports of a worsening of the nation's trade deficit and a drop in industrial production in July failed to dampen enthusiasm in the public's mind.

Successful Investing

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q—Every day we hear that the price of many types of goods is rising and that labor members are demanding and getting substantial wage increases. Yet people like myself, a moderate wage earner who saves and banks money, find that the deposited sums and interest when withdrawn, many times does not buy as much in the way of goods as when it was first deposited. My friends tell me to buy stocks, but I know they go down at times. What stocks are least likely to decline? —A.S.

A—There is no stock nor bond — except a few specialized government bond issues — that will not decline in a poor market, nor advance in a good market, if circumstances so permit. What you refer to as rising prices and advancing wages is generally referred to as inflation. And like death and taxes, it seems to be a way of life in this and other countries. We must try to adjust to it for it cannot be wished away or legislated away by government authorities.

There are certain types of stocks which have given and promise to continue to give some degree of inflation protection. All of these issues are subject to normal market pressures. However, over a period of a decade or more, the common stocks of the following companies have reported consistently higher earnings and increases in the dividend rate. There is no assurance this will continue, of course, but the pattern exists and past performance, I feel, is a good guide post.

The stocks are: American Electric Power, American Home Products, Bristol-Myers, Eastman Kodak, Federated Department Stores, Florida Power & Light, General Foods, Gulf Oil, Heublein, Kellogg Co., Sterling Drug, Texas Utilities and Winn-Dixie. This list is by no means complete, but the purchase of a cross-section of these issues would provide you with a good portfolio of stocks which should provide considerable inflation protection for the years to come.

For the week, the NYSE Common Stock Index rose 0.14 to 55.66. Standard & Poor's edged up 0.21 to 100.69, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average climbed 4.60 to 912.75. Advances topped declines, 958 to 687 among the 1,831 issues crossing the tape. Turnover for the five days aggregated 57,064,610 shares, down from 76,539,190 shares traded a week earlier, and also below the 60,391,760 shares traded during the year ago period. Wall Street analysts generally took an optimistic view of the stock market's prospects. Kenneth Ward of Reynolds Securities Inc. said he looked for the market to be higher in December than it is now. "This projected rise," he said, "seems more likely to be accomplished in a series of intermediate step-stone zigs and zags rather than by a straight line advance."

Hill and Snead battle into share of lead in Hartford tournament

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI)—A calm and uncomplaining Dave Hill and a J.C. Snead who was feeling ill moved in to share the lead Sunday in the third round of the $110,000 Greater Hartford Open.

Hill shot a five-under-par 66 for a 54-hole total of 201 and Snead recovered from what he guessed was an attack of heat sickness to shoot a 67 and tie Hill's 12-under par pace.

Hill and Snead boasted only a one-stroke lead as nine players bunched within two strokes of the pace and several others were just three strokes back.

Solons snap losing spell, top Orioles

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Dick Billings lashed a three-run homer to roll Mike Cuellar's bid for his 18th victory and the Washington Senators broke a nine-game losing streak Sunday by defeating the Baltimore Orioles, 5-3.

Dick Bosman won his 11th game by scattering seven hits as he struck out three, walked three and went the distance for only the fifth time in 30 games.

Baltimore jumped to a 2-0 lead with three straight hits in the second inning. Brooks Robinson singled and scored when leftfielder Jeff Burroughs bobbled Dave Johnson's line double.

Billings put the Senators ahead 3-2 in the third inning with his fifth home run of the season.

Boston 8, Indians 1 (UPI)—Reggie Smith and Duane Josephson clubbed two-run doubles in a six-run first inning while Gary Peters scattered 10 hits Sunday in leading the Boston Red Sox to an 8-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Peters, who boosted his record to 13-10, also had a first inning single that drove in the final run of the rally.

Baltimore jumped to a 2-0 lead with three straight hits in the second inning. Brooks Robinson singled and scored when leftfielder Jeff Burroughs bobbled Dave Johnson's line double.

But the hero of the game was rookie Juan Beniquez, a 21-year-old shortstop from San Sebastian, Puerto Rico, who started his first major league game for the Red Sox. He had three hits including two doubles, drove in two runs and handled seven chances flawlessly in the field.

Beman had the hottest streak of the day, five-straight birdies to narrowly miss the seasonal tour mark of six held by Gibby Gilbert.

Brewers 6, Cal 4 (UPI)—Tommy Harper hit two home runs and drove in four runs Sunday to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-4 victory over the California Angels.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Ron Blomberg's sacrifice fly in the fifth inning drove in what proved to be the winning run Sunday as the New York Yankees withstood a four-run seventh inning rally by Detroit to defeat the Tigers, 6-5.

But Beman also had one bogey and one double bogey to offset some of the eight birdies he shot in the round.

Skip Lockwood allowed all four Angel runs in the first two innings, before settling down and permitting only two hits until the eighth when he gave up singles to Sandy Alomar and Ken McMullen.

The Yankees built a 6-1 lead after five innings against Les Cain, but almost let the game get away in the seventh when Detroit manager Billy Martin tied a major league record by using six pinch-hitters during a four-run rally.

CHICAGO (UPI)—Wilbur Wood, forced to wait 2 hours and 31 minutes because of a rain delay in the fifth inning, gave up just three hits Sunday in recording his 19th win of the season as he hurled the Chicago White Sox to an 8-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Wood picked up his fifth shutout of the year and his 16th complete game in outdueling Paul Splittorff who dropped his seventh loss agains seven wns. Jay Johnstone's pinch three-run homer in the five-run seventh wrapped up the game.

It was the 10th victory in the last 13 starts for Pittsburgh, even though the Pirates haven't had a complete game during the stretch. Ramon Hernandez saved Sunday's victory for Bruce Kison with 2 1/3 innings of relief.

Butler and Falcons ruin Plunkett debut

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI)—Cannonball Butler ran for two touchdowns in the first three minutes and the Atlanta Falcons fought off a second half comeback by the New England Patriots to score a 45-36 victory Sunday and spoil Jim Plunkett's debut as a starting quarterback in the National Football League.

Bob Berry directed the Atlanta attack in the first half, hitting on 8 of 11 passes for 178 yards.

Butler raced 74 yards off left tackle on the first play to lead scrimmage to put Atlanta ahead 7-0. Less than three minutes later, he ran one yard for the second score to cap a 50-yard drive that took only three plays.

Five tight finishes top slate

Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winner from Stanford, was unable to move the club in the first half in his first starting assignment as a pro but he directed the Patriots to four second half touchdowns, three in the final period.

RUPERT — Five photo finishes featured the second day of pari-mutuel horse racing at Rupert Sunday afternoon as an enthusiastic crowd of 1,500 bet a total of $13,265.

The photos came in the first, third, fifth, sixth and eighth races. Coolers were present in the sixth and 10th races by D. L. Mill's Husky Service and Simplot Soil Builders, respectively.

Young Kevin Packard, a sophomore at Twin Falls high school, turned in a second straight 71 to assume a four-stroke advantage over Spencer Cahoon. Ken Bell was five shots off at 147 while Carl Feeler, Twin Falls, had 140 and Duke Whitehead 150 in a fight that ended for all title consideration right there.

The Falcons scored three touchdowns in the second quarter to take a 38-7 halftime lead. Joe Profit ran five yards and Paul Gipson four yards for two of the scores.

Third flight leader was James Bradford of Pocatello with a 150, but only one shot ahead of Gary Rene, Twin Falls; D. L. (Dude) Cain, Sun Valley, and Don Hutchings, Twin Falls. Del Erickson had a 153 to stay in sharp.

Defensive end Claude Humphrey picked up a fumble by Plunkett and lumbered 41 yards for the other touchdown.

Gene Hull opened up a four-stroke lead in the fifth with four men his closest competition at 167. The included Rex Newell, George Thorpe, Bob Chauvin Sr., and Salisbury.

Running back Bob Gadieux had a hand in three New England touchdowns, running one and three yards for two scores and passing 31 yards to Gayle Kneif for the other touch down.

First-day leader Dick Meadows skied to a 90 but stayed six strokes off the pace along with George Merritt and Bob Dun-Eddie Ray scored the Patriots final touchdown on a four yard run late in the final period.

Fourth flight leader was George Merritt with a 167. The included Rex Newell, George Thorpe, Bob Chauvin Sr., and Salisbury.

but not an absolute force. While a jump to game is a bid of game.

Oswald: "North's jump to three spades is one of those limit jump raises. He has 11, or maybe 12, points in support of spades and wants to encourage a bid of game without absolutely committing the hand to that high a contract."

Jim: "If the jump to three were a force, North would have to bid just two spades."

Send $1 for JACOBY MODERN book to: "Win at Bridge," (c/o this newspaper), P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

South would pass and the hand would play there.

Oswald: "South should have no trouble making four spades. The defense starts with two club tricks and East shifts to a trump. South wins in dummy and should attack diamonds right away. He cashes the ace and king, ruffs a diamond in dummy, enters his hand with a trump, ruffs another diamond, concedes a heart, ruffs a club or heart, draws East's last trump and claims his contract."

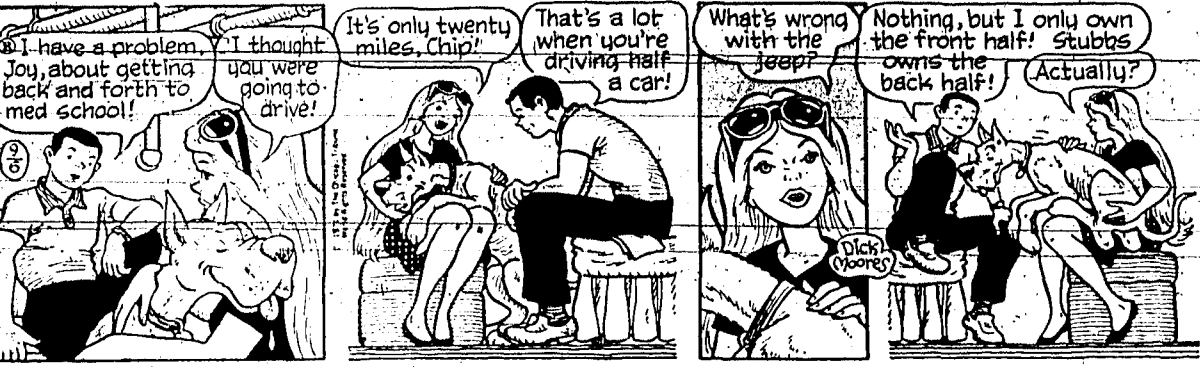

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
NO QUESTION TODAY

By Oswald & James Jacoby

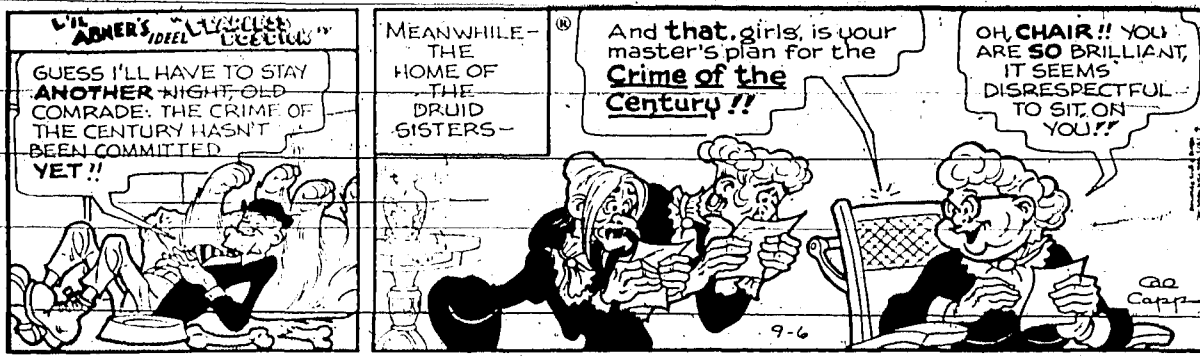

Oswald: "You and Bobby Wolff employed limit raises in winning the world's championship. Nearly all experts use them. We have made them part of JACOBY MODERN bidding, since they are very effective and easy to learn."

Jim: "There is nothing difficult about limit raises. Basically, when you get around to raising your partner, the single raise shows support for his suit, but does not invite further action. The jump to three shows very good support and is a strong invitation to game."

AM ADVISED a savvy angworm farmer can pick up an extra $100 a month with nothing more than a couple of 3-by-7-foot pits in the backyard... NOTED Orson Welles: "A woman with her hair combed up always looks as if she were going some other place - either to the opera or to the shower bath, depending on the woman."... WILL BET YOU a quarter on the corner if you're right-handed, you're also right-jawed. Meaning you chew your food mostly on the right side of your mouth.

AMONG THOSE angle couples in South Africa, two of out of five split up. That divorce rate is pretty high, isn't it? Why is understandable, however. The courts there recognize with alacrity most peculiar grounds of desertion: "A husband can take off Sunday night, and a wife can charge desertion Monday morning."

THAT FELLOW WHO uses his razor just before bedtime gets a far closer shave than the man who scrapes off his whiskers right after he gets up in the morning. Studies indicate that, Sleep makes the face puffy, they show. Cushions the razor too much... IF YOU WERE to crawl around on your hands and knees on a nightclub floor at about 11 p.m. - and it has been done, sir - you might note about 25 per cent of the women therein either have let their shoes fall off or just dangle. A headwaiter told me that.

CUSTOMER SERVICE: Q. "Does Richard Burton wear a rug?" A. Lifts in his shoes. No rug... A. "Ask your Love and War man which is better, to be wanted or needed?" A. "Wanted! Wanted!" he cried... Q. "Don't kangaroos keep on growing as long as they live?" A. The males do, it's said.

THAT WOMEN ARE far less apt than men to write on the walls of public washrooms is widely known. Almost any porter will tell you, however, it takes longer to clean up a women's washroom than a men's. Makeup stains on the sinks. Crumpled towels strewn about. Cigarette and chewing gum wrappers, whatnot.

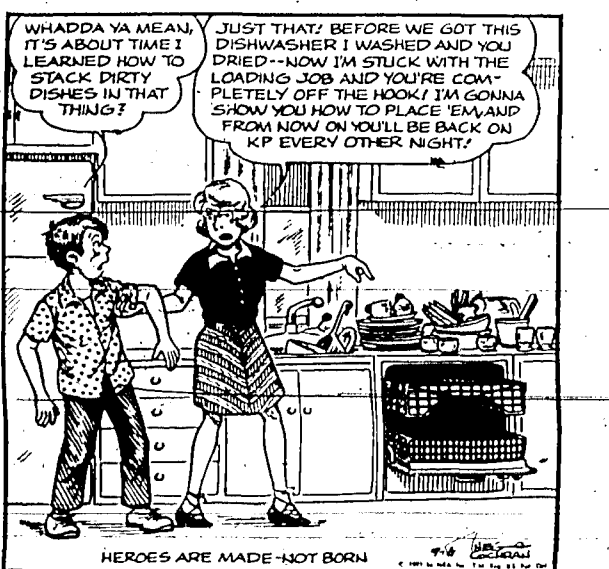

FORTUNATELY the Statue of Liberty is no nag. Her mouth is three feet wide... DID I SAY a locomotive with or without cars is a train? Only correct, say the experts if it displays markers... A DOSE OF CASTOR OIL, that's the punishment prescribed by law in Yuma, Ariz., for anyone convicted of stealing an orange.

WRITES a medical fellow who specializes in the treatment of heavy drinkers: "When a businessman tells me he wants to quit drinking but can't get past the cocktail hour, I tell him to go straight home after work every night and take a bath, the hotter the better. Don't ask me why it works, but it does. Couple dozen of my patients stay on the wagon that way. Cleanest men in town."

Idaho girls vying for title

TWIN FALLS — Miss Rodeo Idaho title hopefuls arriving in Twin Falls this week for competition during the annual Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo will include contestants from Boise, Caldwell, Nampa and Blackfoot.

Among the 10 young women entered in the contest will be the reigning queens of the Snake River Stampede which draws a large field of young horsewomen from as far away as Canada, the Caldwell Night Rodeo, a major Idaho event each year, and Western celebrations in Mackay and Buhl.

Nancy Ellis, 19, Nampa, who won the Snake River Stampede crown in July, will be competing from the western part of the state. She is a sophomore at Blue Mountain Community College and in high school and college has been active in rodeo clubs and teams. She has also been active in Quarter Horse Association and school activities.

Representing the Caldwell Night Rodeo will be Ruth Campbell, Caldwell, who won her title in August. She is a veteran of the Little Britches Rodeos and has been showing quarter horses for several years. She is also active in 4-H club work, school organizations and was twice a delegate to Washington, D. C., for the United Nations Club. She currently attends night school at Vallivue.

Queen of the Mackay Rodeo is Linda Adams, Blackfoot, who won the title last September. She is 19, and attends Idaho State University, Pocatello, where she is a junior. She is active in the ISU Riders club and is an avid sportswoman, taking part in field hockey, volleyball, basketball and softball. She has also worked with a Blackfoot training stables training horses and has been active in rodeoing and in 4-H programs.

Sue Ellen Smith, Boise, who was crowned queen of the Buhl Sagebrush Days Rodeo in July, will compete in the state contest. She is 21 and a sophomore at Boise State College. Miss Smith has been active in the Rodeo club, Girl's Athletic Club and the Idaho Girls Rodeo Association, while in school and in addition to training horses participates in team roping and other rodeo events. She is also active in the Quarter Horse organizations and Ada County Possettes.

Competition before judges will begin for the 10 contestants Wednesday and continue through Saturday, Sept. 11, when a 1972 Miss Rodeo Idaho will be selected.

Gene Hull, chairman, said the contest will keep the girls busy throughout the four days. The girls will appear each night in the grand entry of the rodeo at Filer and will be judged in special horsemanship contests.

FLAMELESS ELECTRIC LIVING FOR A NEATER, CLEANER WORLD

Berliners not excited

BERLIN (UPI)—One of the most surprising things about the Big Four agreement on Berlin was the reaction to it.

Berliners were not excited at all. They took the news as if it concerned a settlement in Vietnam or Korea or some other far off place.

They were interested, of course. They knew it was important and they knew it was a matter that affected them directly. But you never would have known from their behavior that the Big Four ambassadors had reached an agreement designed to end a cold war in a city that has been an international trouble spot since World War II.

If there was one solitary cheer it was not recorded. There were none of the ripples of public interest that usually accompany major events—no crowds around news stands or television sets, none of the spontaneous actions that break down barriers between strangers.

Berliners are a wary lot. Their long years of turbulence have taken their toll. A middle-aged Berliner has lived through two wars and inflation, Nazi and Communist dictatorships, occupation, bombings and blockades.

One reason for the lack of jubilation is that the agreement did not come at a time of crisis. The 17-month-long negotiations that led to the agreement took place during one of the calmest periods since the war.

There was no feeling that the negotiations had to be followed closely for fear of a sellout to the Russians.
