TWIN FALLS — There will be no state-sponsored kindergartens in Twin Falls, unless Gov. Cecil D. Andrus can take personal action in the future.

An effort by the South-Central Community Action Agency to operate the kindergartens under the state-sponsored program has come to an end, according to Rev. John Wallace, chairman of the Twin Falls County CAA board.

"As I understand, there is no possibility of any entity other than a school district operating the kindergartens under the federally funded program," Wallace told the Times-News today.

CAA officials petitioned the state Department of Education in Boise, asking that federal funds for four kindergarten teachers, refused by the Twin Falls school district, be allocated to the CAA.

The petition has been refused without appeal, Wallace said. The law provided only that the federal funds, designed to boost employment, be channeled through the state-to-participating school districts.

Twin Falls school officials declined the funds, saying the district could not afford the additional cost of providing facilities, and that the program is too limited, allowing only half of the five-year-olds in the district to participate.

The proposal to seek the state funds was discussed at length during the CAA board meeting in Jerome Tuesday night. Roy Slotten, Twin Falls, chairman of the tri-county board, said the three county boards would have to determine their own policies on participating in the state program — if the funds could be allocated.

Wallace said today that "We will appeal to Gov. Andrus at some time in the future to determine our next step."

The action of the Twin Falls school district was taken at a special meeting a week ago, after consideration of the results of a survey conducted through the schools and the Times-News in an effort to determine interest in kindergartens and possibly the number of children who would be enrolled in those classes.

Canadian Jews protest during Kosygin's visit

Kosygin hits US dollar plan

OTTAWA (UPI) — Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, under heavy security following an attack on him by a Hungarian refugee and a demonstration by thousands of Canadian Jews, criticized U.S. economic policy Tuesday as being disruptive to international trade.

Without mentioning the United States by name, Kosygin's remarks showed an obvious awareness of Canada's strained relations with the United States over recent U.S. economic policy. He was expected to elaborate on the subject before a parliamentary committee today.

Kosygin made his remarks Tuesday in a luncheon toast to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. The apparent friendliness between the two leaders—their business talks were to have ended Tuesday but will continue today—was a contrast to the uproar created in the streets of Ottawa.

More than 10,000 persons marched the heart of the city Tuesday to protest alleged mistreatment of Soviet Jews. A small plane flew overhead carrying a banner reading, "Let them live as Jews or let them leave." The demonstrators did not get near Kosygin.

Kosygin called Tuesday for international trade to be based on a stable system of foreign exchange rates and indirectly blamed America's conduct in the Vietnam war for throwing international trade into disruption.

2 Chinas reject compromise

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Both Communist and Nationalist China rejected a Japanese suggestion today that they settle their differences in a U.N. compromise.

Frantic lobbying for a dozen undecided votes went on behind scenes while the General Assembly, in its third day on the issue, made extraordinary speed in its historic China debate.

Veteran diplomats were finding the outcome "too close to call" with the voting expected to begin next Tuesday and several delegations still awaiting instructions from their foreign offices.

In the first two days' debate, 28 countries were heard, with 18 favoring the Peking government and nine the Taiwan regime, with Ecuador noncommittal. The speakers' list had a total of 42 countries still to be heard at the start of today's meetings.

Japan, strongly supporting the U.S. proposal to seat Communist China in both the assembly and the Security Council while retaining an assembly seat for the Nationalist Chinese, argued that having both governments here could "open the path to reconciliation and peaceful dialogue and promote peace and stability in Asia."

They could work out a "mutual accommodation for a more enduring solution" of the dispute that divides them, Kishi Aichi, former Japanese Foreign Minister, told the assembly.

Nobel goes to Brandt

OSLO (UPI) — The 1971 Nobel Peace Prize was awarded today to West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

The award was in recognition of his efforts to ease West Germany's relations with Eastern Europe through a series of treaties and a friendship pact with the Soviet Union.

The award was announced by the Norwegian parliament Nobel committee which selects the peace prize winner. The other Nobel prizes are awarded in Stockholm.

The prize, considered the world's finest humanitarian award, is worth 450,000 Swedish kronor — $90,000 at current market rates.

Brandt, 58, a Social Democrat, fled to Norway during World War II to escape nazism. After the war he returned to serve as mayor of West Berlin when he became a world figure.

As chancellor he has worked to reach a permanent peace settlement with Poland and settle their border disputes, has sent emissaries to other East European countries to try to improve relations with them and is currently engaged in East-West German talks to ease the Berlin situation, long an East-West trouble spot.

Brandt was one of 30 candidates for this year's award but most observers had ruled him out of contention, considering him too controversial.

Brandt, who became chancellor in 1969 when he formed a coalition between his own Social Democrats and the Free Democrats, has made reconciliation between West Germany and the Communist nations the major aim of his foreign policy.

Cambodia now 'dictatorship'

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Prime Minister Lon Nol said today his government no longer will "play the game of democracy and freedom" but will act in a way that "will bring us to victory."

The prime minister spoke in a nationwide broadcast following a silent protest by Buddhists against Saturday's action suspending the powers of the National Assembly.

"Should we vainly play the game of democracy and freedom which will lead us to complete defeat or should we certain anarchic freedom in order to achieve victory?" Lon Nol asked in the broadcast.

"The government has made its decision," he added. "We have selected the way that will bring us to victory."

He appealed for "unity," but couched it with a veiled threat.

"Recently, certain groups have launched acts aimed at creating confusion," he said. "There is a fifth column at work."

He did not elaborate, but information minister Long Borel told a news conference the statement did not mean national assembly deputies were suspected of being members of the Viet Cong.

On Saturday, Lon Nol stripped the national assembly of its powers. Three of the deputies, including vice premier in Tam, refused to accept the action as illegal. However, 59 of the deputies signed a petition saying they supported the government in stripping the body of its powers.

The assembly largely has been an ineffective body since Lon Nol led the bloodless coup that overthrew Prince Norodom Sihanouk March 18, 1970.

Today, some 4,000 politically influential Buddhist monks held a silent demonstration protesting the action against the national assembly and asked Lon Nol to "rectify the state of affairs." The monks stayed in their pagodas, gathered behind saffron-colored banners calling for democracy.

Police and soldiers moved into the area of the 18 pagodas and urged the monks not to take to the streets.

Buddhist leaders said the demonstration was called hastily Tuesday night and was taking place only in the capital of Phnom Penh. They said its purpose "is to attract the government and world attention to the fact that we want the crisis to end, democracy and unity to return to the country."

House defeats pullout rider

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, which two years ago endorsed President Nixon's Vietnam policy by a thumping 333 to 55 vote, has narrowed the margin of support to a scant 215 to 192 and threatens to turn against him on the next test.

Doves claimed that might have happened Tuesday had Republican leaders permitted a straight, up-or-down vote on whether the House should accept the Senate-passed Mansfield amendment—a proposal calling for the total withdrawal of all U.S. military forces from Indochina in six months, subject to the release of American prisoners of war.

GOP leaders insisted however that Tuesday's vote was as clear-cut as previous House encounters on Vietnam and that the result was a victory for the President. The White House agreed. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon was gratified by the outcome.

On Dec. 2, 1969, the House adopted a bipartisan resolution expressing its "support for the President in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam" and for his goal of free and internationally supervised elections in South Vietnam.

About three weeks before the House approved the resolution, the President went to the Capitol to personally thank the more than 300 House members who had co-sponsored the resolution.

Since that time there has been a steady erosion of support for administration's Vietnam policy, even though Nixon has just as steadily pulled American troops out of Vietnam. Nevertheless an increasing number of members have made it clear they want a firm deadline for total withdrawal, qualified only by the return of the POW's.

Train kills Murtaugh man

MILNER — Julius E. Neumann, 71, Murtaugh, a prominent Milner area rancher and long-time official of the Milner Low Lift Irrigation Co., was killed Tuesday night in a truck and train accident here.

Investigating officers said Neumann was driving a two-ton truck loaded with sugar beets and had just pulled out of a nearby field when he drove onto the crossing into the path of eastbound Union Pacific train No. 405.

Officers said apparently he was driving to nearby Milner beet dump and did not hear or see the approaching train. The impact carried the truck about a quarter mile down the track and threw the driver out.

Officers said Neumann's body was about 175 yards from where the truck and train came to a stop. Neumann was dead on arrival at the Cassia County hospital.

Officers said it was established the train had sounded a whistle before reaching the crossing known as Parson's crossing, and on a gravel county road.

Kenneth Dean, 40, Twin Falls, brakeman on the train, was also injured but is listed in good condition today in Cassia Memorial Hospital.

The truck was traveling south, Deputy Sheriff Clark Ward, Cassia County, said. He said Robert J. Servis, Twin Falls, was engineer on the train. The truck was demolished and damage to the front of the train was estimated at $1,200.

State police who assisted in the investigation said the accident was reported at 6:55 p.m. by Los Jones, Twin Falls. The accident scene is located on the dividing line between Cassia and Twin Falls counties and it had not been determined today if Neumann was killed in Twin Falls or Cassia County. The crossing is located five miles east of Murtaugh and about one half mile west of the Milner sugarbeet dump.

Funeral services for Mr. Neumann will be announced by White Mortuary, Twin Falls.

Key bank cuts rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. today cut its prime interest rate for commercial loans to 5 1/2 percent from 6 percent.

The bank said the cut reflects market conditions, including a less than seasonal increase in the demand for loans and a lower cost for funds.

Thompson retires as T.F. assessor

CLIFFORD THOMPSON

BY RONNIE HAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Assessor Clifford Thompson today announced he is resigning from the office for reasons of health.

Thompson, a Republican who had been hospitalized several times in the past year has been county assessor 23 years.

Thompson said he will complete the current year at the request of the county commissioners if his health permits.

At the same time the board of county commissioners announced the selection of Ron Taylor, Kimberly, to fill the position, effective Jan. 10. Taylor is currently a deputy assessor, handling tax assessments in the Kimberly area on a part-time basis. He has been doing this type of work the past five years while affiliated with his father, Don Taylor, in the Taylor Agency, a real estate firm in Kimberly.

Douglas Kramer, chairman, Twin Falls Republican Central Committee, said Taylor has the endorsement of the committee for the appointment. He will serve under appointment until the end of Thompson's term in 1972.

Thompson said he is happy with the selection of Taylor. He said Taylor is well qualified for the position. He said Taylor has the potential of becoming one of the outstanding assessors in the state.

Students defy troops

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Queens University students today defied British soldiers and police trying to enter the student union building to arrest the head of the official Irish Republican Army (IRA) political organization.

The students piled desks and office furniture at entrances to the modern, four-story building where Thomas MacGiolla, 45, president of the IRA's Sinn Fein, took refuge Tuesday night. They demanded he be given safe escort across the border to the Irish Republic.

MacGiolla went to the university to participate in a debate on the European Common Market at the invitation of the students representative council. His presence was advertised in the Irish News, the city's only Roman Catholic newspaper.

Health care decision near

Editor's note: This is the last of a series of articles dealing with the expanded role of public health in the Magic Valley.

BY MARY GOE
Times-News Writer

JEROME — The question of how much should be spent for public health services in Magic Valley will be threatened today at a key meeting in Jerome.

A joint meeting of the South Central District Board of Health and a budget committee made up of county commissioners chairmen from the eight counties of the district will try to come to grips with an increased budget proposed by the district health board.

Faced with the necessity of converting to a new funding system contained in a state law enacted July 1, the group will have to reach an agreement on the amount per person all eight counties will appropriate for support of local health services.

Because of the difference in proportions paid by individual counties in the past, the new legal requirement that each county in the district pay its proportional share is expected to cause consternation to those counties whose appropriations have been below average.

The chance of disagreement among member counties of a district as to an acceptable per capita appropriation was not overlooked by the legislature in establishing the new system.

The law not only stipulates that a budget for each health district shall be agreed upon and approved by a majority of the budget committee, but also that "such determination shall be binding upon all counties within the district and the district itself." Thus in any district, should it come to a contest, five of the eight counties could set the appropriation for all.

County funds appropriated for this health district in 1971 totaled $122,148, or an average per resident of the district of $1.20.

Individually, member counties of the district contributed the following total and per capita amounts:

Blaine	$9,418	or	$1.64	per person;
Cassia	$10,943	or	$1.17	per person;
Gooding	$14,600	or	$1.69	per person;
Jerome	$18,801	or	$1.65	per person;
Lincoln	$8,701	or	$2.19	per person;
Minidoka	$20,487	or	$1.30	per person;
Twin Falls	$33,528	or	80 cents	per person.

Wine said economic aid

TWIN FALLS — Retail sale of table wines, now allowed in 23 Idaho counties under the new state law, has proven a benefit for the economy without bringing any problems of increased alcoholism, according to Bill Roden, Boise, a spokesman for the wine industry.

Roden, former majority leader in the Idaho Senate, is serving as the Idaho attorney for the Wine Institute, an association of California wineries.

Twin Falls and Gooding County voters will decide next Tuesday in the dual election whether to allow retail sale of table wines within the county. These will be only the second and third public elections among 25 Idaho counties allowing retail sale of wine; the county commissions in 22 counties voted to allow the sale without calling a referendum, as allowed by the state law, Roden said.

In Ada County, voters approved the issue by a 60 per cent majority in the first election in the state. Merchants selling the wine have indicated that they realize, on the average, about seven per cent additional profit from the wine along — a sizable percentage of their total profit, according to Roden.

Earlier fears by state officials that the retail sales, supplanting the liquor-store monopoly now in effect which carry higher taxes, would reduce total state income have proven unfounded, Roden said. In fact, the state will realize a significant amount in additional income from the 45-cents-per-gallon state tax on table wines in retail outlets, plus the three-per-cent sales tax which is not charged in the state liquor outlets.

At present levels of consumption, Roden said, the state will realize about $500,000 per year or $1 million per biennium in wine tax from the 23 counties now allowing the retail sale.

The state liquor dispensary is in favor of the retail sale of table wines, since at present their stocks carry about 20 per cent wine, yet realize only two per cent of gross sales from the product. If all Idaho counties allow retail sale of wine, the liquor dispensary will have room to expand other lines of merchandise not now carried because of lack of room, Roden said.

Roden said he has encountered no opposition to the question in Twin Falls and Gooding Counties during a visit to the area. There has been little agitation either for or against the issue, in sharp contrast to the continuing controversy over the airport referendum, the other issue up for vote next Tuesday.

Urging a favorable vote on the issue, Roden said "It's not a question of prohibition — of keeping the wine out of the county — but of who should be allowed to sell table wines. Shall the state continue the liquor monopoly at high prices or should the retail trade be allowed to sell wine on the open market at competitive prices?"

In Boise, the sale of table wines has brought a major expansion by one distributor, who has constructed additional warehouse space. Another has added nine new employees, creating new jobs for the labor market, and others have added equipment, including trucks for distribution.

"All in all, it's proven a healthy boost to the economy with no major problems reported," Roden explained. In Oregon and Washington, where retail wine sales have been allowed for some time, state officials report no major increase of alcoholism. In Washington, in fact, Roden said, consumption of "hard" liquor has dropped as the consumption of table wines, which can contain no more than 14 per cent alcohol, has increased.

Counties face a funding increase

Camas County, which did not belong to the district until July 1, had to budget from emergency funds for the half year. Its contribution was $800, or $.82 per person for six months, a per capita rate of $1.64 if projected for a year.

In addition to having to equalize proportionate contributions to the district health budget, counties are also faced with a request for an overall increase in funds to finance services that have been turned over to local districts by the state.

According to Dr. Wayne B. Carle, medical director of the health department, the South Central Health District is the poorest of the six operating districts in the state and so is the least prepared to handle new responsibilities being delegated without additional funding by the state.

In comparison to this district's per person funding of $1.28 for 1971, he said, the panhandle district has $2.14 per person; north central, $2.47; central, $2.80; southeast, $2.75; and northeast, $2.14.

Struggling with a large operating deficit in the current year, the district board of health has gone on record approving a request to member counties of $2.25 per person for 1972, a total of $231,720 for the district.

"Any appropriation under $2 per person would mean that we would have to cut services that even now are minimal and reduce an already overburdened staff," Dr. Carle said.

"The $2.25 being requested would allow us to add three more people so that we can handle current programs and undertake the responsibilities being turned over to us by the state."

Approval of the $2.25 figure would mean an increased appropriation for each county to that amount per capita totaling:

Blaine, $12,935; Camas, $1,638; Cassia, $38,286; Gooding, $19,451; Jerome, $23,069; Lincoln, $6,878; Minidoka, $36,395; and Twin Falls, $94,066.

Labor Restraint

Will organized labor discipline itself? That is the key question on how well the Pay Board will discharge its responsibilities in Phase Two of wage and price restraint.

George Meany, AFL-CIO chief, and spokesman for some 17 million union members, promised labor will serve on the Pay Board and try to make the President's "mechanism" work.

In order to get this qualified support, President Nixon apparently had to yield to labor's demand for an autonomous Pay Board.

Treasury Secretary John Connally in a national broadcast October 9th said, "The Cost of Living Council is not going to veto actions of the Pay Board or the Price Commission."

Labor's complete support is essential to any program of voluntary restraints and it remains to be seen if that kind of cooperation will be forthcoming.

that it will name its own "watchdog" teams to monitor prices. Bluntly speaking, as Meany always is, labor leaders must be statesmanlike in using their power for the system to work.

President Nixon is betting on popular support to maintain restraint but he wants power to act as well.

The Pay Board will have five members from labor, five from business, and five representing the public. If labor seeks to maintain veto power over majority decisions it doesn't like as Meany suggested it might, it cannot be effective.

The Administration's goal is to reduce inflation to a rate of 2 to 3 per cent by the end of 1972, a goal that may be jeopardized if Meany has his way and negotiated wage boosts on the order of 10 per cent a year over the next 3 years take effect next month.

Crucial to acceptance and cooperation is fairness. There will be anger and resentment if any group appears to get more favorable treatment than another.

If labor uses its power to disrupt the economy and block efforts to wind down inflation, a task about as difficult as winding down the Vietnam war, the public and its elected representatives in Congress might decide that it is time to curb union power.

That could be a victory for the country.

Drawing Nearer

Young boys and girls have discovered that they can have their Halloween fun without damaging their neighbors' property or perhaps causing them bodily injury.

Adults recognize that high spirits are generated by this swift-moving age. They now take precautions to see that enough safety valves exist in games, parties or some other form of group activity.

direct youthful energies along proper lines.

Nobody wants to take the fun out of life, and the Halloween season has become traditionally a time for pranks and gaiety. But neither is there a desire to revert to the uncivilized practices of the early Druids, who actually thought that Satan called together the wicked souls on Halloween.

There is a happy medium, and young people know the difference between harmless pranks and wrong-doing. But they need to be reminded, and helped.

MR. SPECTATOR

Not Long Ago

The other day we were wandering around the Blue Lakes area in the Snake River canyon with Burt Perrine. Most of what we were doing was of a historic nature - or rather the gathering of things historic for use at later dates.

But the thing that started Mr. Spector thinking was that Burt is a son of I. B. Perrine who was the founder of the Twin Falls tract and of Twin Falls.

That shows how young this community of Twin Falls really is, and how far it has traveled since the 1904 birth. Here the son of the founder is still living here. Not many towns across this old land could make that statement!

OUR FEELINGS

We have lost old Dobbin. So we get in our jitney and go. It may be out on the hillside. Or on, up higher in the snow. But when we think of city travel our minds say No, no, no! We would rather be out with nature. So there is where we go.

THE HUNTERS

Have a good time, sportsmen of America. We know you are full of beer. Scatter your beer cans and leave your trash. Although there are no deer. But close the gates and put out your fires. Don't shoot among the cows. We're going to try to put up with you. But sometimes we don't know how! ...A rancher Carey

Nixon And The High Court

WASHINGTON - President Nixon's astonishing attitude toward the Supreme Court, which has now painted him into a political corner, was revealed when he met at the White House with top advisers to discuss filling the two vacancies.

"I'M NOT SITTING STILL FOR THIS!"

ANDREW TULLY

A Death Wish

WASHINGTON - Sometimes the thought intrudes that both the Nixon administration and certain members of Congress are possessed by a death wish. Is it possible that they threaten to join the long and illustrious list of plain, garden variety of criminals?

I take up the subject again, knowing it will draw insulting mail from a certain type of wild-eyed gun lover, because the House Ways and Means Committee inexplicably has voted to exempt .22 ammunition used in rifles and pistols from record-keeping requirements of the 1968 Gun Control Act.

Obviously, the committee was moved by the contention of the Nixon administration that records of retail sales of .22 ammunition "serve no useful purpose in apprehending criminals, and impose a paperwork burden on dealers."

This is the kind of lunatic-reasoning that John Wilkes Booth and Lee Oswald would have applauded. Stripped of its political trimmings, the vote is simply an attempt to make it even easier for a common thug or political fanatic or an angry neighbor to kill with a gun.

still citizens who do not endorse the stand of New York City's Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy.

"I begin," Murphy told a Senate committee hearing, "with the premise that very few people who now have access to handguns have a legitimate interest in possessing them."

Murphy was saying that nobody in the United States should own a pistol without a permit, and that the authorities should take a hard look at applicants for such permits. Other assorted guns are available for the use of hunters and other sportsmen who enjoy more-or-less regulated target shooting.

deciding to use their pistols to kill a wandering wife or settle a traffic dispute.

Gun devotees, notably the unctuous National Rifle Association, have advanced two main arguments in opposing meaningful gun controls. One is the old chestnut that people kill, guns don't. The other is that New York's strict controls don't work.

What adolescent twaddle! Of course guns kill people. But the average killer finds it much easier to kill when armed with a gun. It is harder and more time-consuming to kill with one's bare hands, or even with a knife or club. Few bombs would attack a policeman without that little ol' equalizer at hand. Besides, a gun can kill at a considerable distance, thus making the job safer.

ART BUCHWALD

TV Crime

WASHINGTON - The first crime figures for the fall television season are now in, and it has been confirmed that there were increases in all categories of crime in prime time from rape to involuntary homicide.

For example, there were twice as many murders committed on the networks in September of this year than in all of 1971.

Aggravated assaults were up 176 per cent, and robbery rose 320 per cent. If you include the reruns of old James Cagney movies.

The report indicated that while guns were still the chief weapons in television crime, writers were introducing more sophisticated methods of doing away with victims. These included holding their heads under sewer water, throwing gasoline on them and setting them afire, pushing them into bubbling vats of molasses and running them down in 1938 Buicks in dark alleys.

A spokesman for the criminal division of television broadcasting said, "It's true that there has been an upsurge of crime on TV as compared to last year, but I would like to point out that despite the increase, every crime committed on one of our shows has been solved in 90 minutes or less."

The spokesman was asked why most of the crimes this year were solved by private investigators and not by the police.

He said, "The reason for this is that the private eye, as we like to call him, has more flexibility than a city detective. A private eye doesn't have to worry about such things as made clear in uncharacteristically colorful language just what the ABA could do about it. In short, the President was not going to let questions of legal quality interfere with his political designs for the Supreme Court.

That led to two incontestably mediocre selections, a wave of public and professional repugnance and, finally, a White House decision to rethink the whole business. At the weekend, Mr. Nixon had dug himself into another hole on court appointments.

At the heart of Mr. Nixon's court troubles is his determination to appoint law-and-order conservatives pleasing to the old segregationist South without regard to ability. That determination is shared, with monomaniacal inflexibility, by Mitchell and Deputy Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst.

Kleindienst, in particular, is convinced of boundless political capital flowing from anti-liberal court selections. In charge of recommending judicial appointments, Kleindienst sought out hardliners without worrying about quality.

Two weeks ago, during a session of top Administration officials, a fascinating possibility for the court was put forward: Elliott Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. A former attorney general of Massachusetts, the greatly respected Richardson would be an adornment on the court. Under no conditions, said Kleindienst.

Richardson is too liberal on civil rights-and, therefore, would displease the South. Later, moderate Administration officials proposed Edward Levi, president of the University of Chicago. A renowned legal scholar, Levi is a strict constructionist and scarcely a wild-eyed radical.

Besides, he would end the absence of any Jews on the court, an absence begun under Mr. Nixon in 1969 for the first time in 53 years. But Levi too was vetoed. The reason: he did not fit the law-and-order, anti-civil rights formula.

The wholly political nature of the selection process can be seen in the attitude toward a woman justice. Originally, Mr. Nixon had no intention of appointing a woman, but gradually realized that would be bad politics, indeed.

That set off a mad search for a law-and-order woman judge. Perhaps the best qualified prospect, Judge Shirley Hufstader of the U. S. Court of Appeals in Los Angeles, was immediately ruled out as a liberal Democrat. Finally, Kleindienst hit pay dirt. He gleefully told associates he had found in California state Appeals Judge Mildred L. Lillie a very tough lady with no use for the Warren Court's liberalism.

The line was finally drawn at conservative Democratic Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, who has never practiced law and is not a member of the bar. He was just too unqualified for Mitchell. The upshot last week was the selection of Mrs. Lillie and Herschel H. Friday of Little Rock, Ark., best known as attorney for anti-integration suits.

Four other names were sent to the ABA for approval, in case trouble developed over Friday or Mrs. Lillie. Until the last minute, the list also included U. S. District Judges Arlin Adams of Philadelphia (who is Jewish) and the highly regarded Frank Johnson of Montgomery, Ala.

Finally, however, they were eliminated for being too liberal. Their inclusion might generate a late campaign for them. Thus, the six names sent the ABA were uniform in both mediocrity and acceptability to the segregationist South.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

A Stroke

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a stroke five months ago. It affected my right hand and my speech. My speech came back and my hand was improving with therapy exercises.

But about six weeks after the stroke the hand began to swell, and now I cannot completely close it. I still do exercises but the hand continues to be swollen and the doctor has given me no reason for it. Mrs. B.S.

There can be different reasons for such swelling, but perhaps the commonest, in the circumstances you describe (following a stroke), is the loss of muscle tone.

Blood circulation, you see, doesn't depend entirely on the pumping action by the heart. The circulation is very much aided by a squeezing action on the blood vessels by muscle movement.

If circulation is not up to par, congestion develops; more fluid than normal accumulates in the tissues, instead of being swept along by a brisker circulation.

When you have a stroke, it means that some part of your brain no longer can send signals to certain muscles, telling them when to move. Or don't move much.

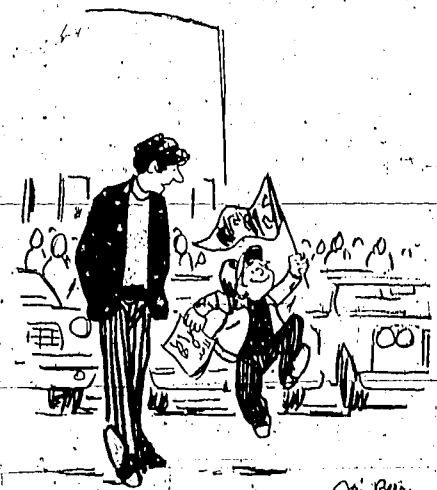

Without much muscle activity in your hand, the circulation suffers.

So by all means keep on with your hand exercises, but I would add this suggestion: when exercising your hand, keep your arm, or anyway the forearm, pretty much horizontal. Rest it on a table, for example.

Then periodically raise the arm over your head, or up to shoulder level. The purpose of this is to aid circulation not only by muscle movement, but by making use of gravity-when the arm is raised, blood flows downward toward the heart, and when the arm is lowered, fresh blood easily flows the other way. This doesn't work in a hurry, but it works.

Another cause of such swelling is called the shoulder-hand syndrome, a reflex nervous disorder of an extremity that can follow a stroke. Exercise, especially involving the shoulder joint, is important. But in that case, if it happens to be your case, better be guided by your doctor's advice. Anyway, as in the other situation, continued exercise, over the long haul, is important. You don't expect results overnight. You have to keep at it.

Expanded goals told

TWIN FALLS — Plans for strengthening and expanding the regional library system under one year and five year programs were presented during a day long Region Four Public Library workshop in Twin Falls Tuesday.

Meeting at the Holiday Inn, the workshop delegates heard a panel discussion of library future planning. Information was presented by delegates who attended the Governor's Conference on Libraries in June. Speakers included Helen Miller, state librarian; Gary Bettis, state library staff member; Mrs. Nita Becker, Jerome librarian; Mrs. Sterling Vaughn, and Mrs. James Kinney, Twin Falls trustee, and Charlene Orr, regional assistant, Twin Falls.

Mrs. Kinney said region four has one of the most advanced regional programs of the six Idaho library regions and many other areas look to Magic Valley as an example.

Miss Miller said the state library office hopes to have all six regions serving not only on their own areas but as a statewide organization to bring library services to all people of the state.

In region four, she said 67 per cent of the residents now have available library service. This is higher than in most other regions.

Ray Lincoln, state representative, District 23, luncheon speaker, urged the library officials to continue to work with more committees and advisory boards. This is a good means of bringing more people of the community into contact with the libraries and thus strengthening community support, he said. Steve Antone, Ruper, state representative, District 21 also attended.

More than 100 library staff members, trustees and city officials of Magic Valley attended the one day event.

Eugene Stacey, trustee, and Twin Falls City Council member, welcomed the group to Twin Falls. Mayor Frank Feldman attended morning sessions.

Robert Speyer, College of Southern Idaho sociology instructor, addressed the group Tuesday afternoon. He outlined methods of conducting a library survey in communities, organization of the survey and the types of material to be covered. Speyer said survey workers should keep in mind the full scope of library services and facilities when conducting the survey as compared to the needs of the community.

Taylor new TF assessor

Taylor, a native of Kimberly, was educated in Jerome schools. He was Times-News assistant advertising manager for seven years, and farmed four years before joining the Kimberly firm.

He is married to the former Phyllis Martin, Hansen, and they have one son, Kevan, 13. Taylor said he plans to continue living in Kimberly.

Thompson said the appointment is being made now to give Taylor an opportunity to work in the county office during the remainder of the year to become familiar with the job before taking over on a full time basis.

Thompson came to Twin Falls 38 years ago from Dillon, Mont., and was employed for 14 years at Diamond Hardware. He was also a stockholder in the company for a number of years.

When George Childs resigned in 1949 as county assessor, Thompson ran for the office and has held the position since.

He has been active in the Idaho Assessor's Assn., and in the Republican party for many years.

County Commission Chairman William L. (Bill) Chancey said the county is accepting Thompson's resignation with regret and out of respect to his health and personal wishes. Chancey said during the past 23 years, Thompson has become recognized as one of the best qualified assessors of Idaho and is frequently called upon by assessors in other counties for assistance and advice. Thompson has given Twin Falls County a position of leadership in meeting tax problems and in establishing property and assessment records, Chancey said.

In 1940 when he became assessor, the assessed valuation of Twin Falls County was $27.0 million and it has more than doubled with the present valuation of $57.8 million.

At that time, Thompson said, one man handled assessment of the towns and subdivisions of Twin Falls. Now there are four men working to keep up with assessments in this area.

In addition to the tax office, the assessor's office also handles the registration and licensing of vehicles with a second office on the first floor of the courthouse. The tax office on the third floor of the courthouse and the license office employ 17 women and 11 field assessors.

One of the major undertakings during Thompson's term of office was the county revaluation from 1959 through 1965.

Taylor has been a lifelong Republican and has been active in 4-H, Cub Scouts, Kimberly Zoning Commission and the Twin Falls Board of Realtors, of which he is a former president. He was vice president of the Multiple Listing Service.

Thompson and his wife, Gladys, reside at 769 Polk St. They have one daughter, Kyleene Perry, Idaho Falls, and a grandson.

GLENN W. NICHOLS

Idaho planning chief to speak

TWIN FALLS — Glenn W. Nichols, director, Idaho State Planning and Community Affairs Agency, will be speaker at the Kiwanis meeting at the Turf Club Thursday noon. executive director for higher education, state of Idaho. Nichols is chairman of the Idaho Rural Development Council, a member of the Human Resource Development Council, Federation of Rocky Mountain States and the National Transportation Needs Study Policy Committee. Wrong worship hit

BOISE (UPI) — The president of Northwest Nazarene College told the 38th annual convention of the Idaho Allied Civic Forces Tuesday that society has "lost the God of Sinai and Calvary."

Now, said Dr. John Riley of Nampa, society worships sex, power and pleasure.

He said that society — deeply torn by dissent, disruption and violence — has reacted in self defense with efforts at control which usually have been moderate but at times have been extreme.

Results, he said, have been mixed.

"No one can speak with certainty as to what the state of society may be tomorrow," Dr. Riley said.

Dead man called informer

BOISE (UPI) — A prosecution witness testified at the Michael Leslie Beer murder trial that slain Edward Mark Harris was an informant for the Idaho Bureau of Drug Control.

Bert Wilson, an agent for the bureau, told a Fourth District Court jury that Harris worked as an informant for him about a year before he was shot to death early last Jan. 4.

Wilson said the 38-year-old Harris was on methadone treatment for heroin addiction and was attending Boise State College as part of a rehabilitation program.

But while Harris performed undercover work the only payment he received was $10 for gasoline he used, Wilson said. Beer, 21, is accused of first-degree murder in the fatal shooting of Harris.

Gary Collins, 21, Boise, testified he had given Beer a 22-caliber, loaded eight-shot revolver on Jan. 3. He said Beer returned it to him empty the next morning and that he Collins, ejected the empty casings in his furnace and threw the gun into Lucky Penk Reservoir.

Sheriff's deputies recovered both the gun and the casings and the prosecution introduced them as evidence Tuesday.

Observance Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Observance of Credit Union Day in Twin Falls is scheduled Thursday with a dinner at the Rogerson Hotel Thursday night for all committee members and directors.

The dinner will feature an address by Emil Jerome, past president of the Idaho Credit Union League, now serving in the league office.

Gov. Cecil Andrus has issued a proclamation designating Oct. 17 through 23 as Credit Union Week in Idaho. The entire South Central Chapter is being urged to participate in the Thursday night dinner program.

Hijacker arraigned

BEIJINGHAM, Wash. (UPI) — A convicted killer who hijacked a Boeing 737 jet at gunpoint Monday and spent some 10 hours airborne with a hostage crew of four was deported from Canada Tuesday and promptly arrested by FBI agents on charges of air piracy.

Dale Lavin Thomas, 28, was turned over to U.S. authorities in the border town of Blaine, Wash., after Canadian immigration authorities ordered his deportation at the conclusion of a three-hour hearing in Vancouver, B.C.

He was driven to Bellingham, about 35 miles south of the border, for arraignment before a U.S. magistrate on the hijacking charges filed Monday in Anchorage, Alaska.

Thomas was accused of trying to hijack the Wlen-Consolidated Airlines plane for a 5,000-mile trip to Cuba shortly after it took off from Anchorage, Alaska, Monday with 31 passengers aboard on a flight to Bethel in western Alaska.

The high-flying drama ended in Vancouver 10 hours later when Thomas emerged from the aircraft accompanied by a lone Royal Canadian Mounted Police inspector who had persuaded him to surrender.

The former gas station attendant was refused entry into Canada under a section of its Immigration Act which prohibits entry of any person "who has been convicted or admits having committed any crime involving moral turpitude."

Thomas was paroled in August after serving six years on a manslaughter conviction in the shooting death of a man in Kotlik, Alaska.

Bar starts study of court choices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Bar Association began formal consideration today of six candidates for the Supreme Court amid speculation that President Nixon already has decided on Mildred L. Illie and Herschel H. Friday.

Mrs. Illie is a judge on the California Court of Appeal. Friday is an Arkansas bond attorney.

There were reports that the FBI has begun to investigate the backgrounds of Mrs. Illie and Friday and that only an unfavorable finding by the ABA committee on the federal judiciary, meeting in New York, would change Nixon's plans. The President said the two nominees will be announced this week.

Proposals sought

BOISE (UPI) — A land board subcommittee Tuesday requested Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy to present his formal recommendations for selection of 11,000 acres due the state at the land board meeting next month.

The subcommittee approved Murphy's tentative selection recommendations of 11,000 acres in Eastern Idaho as part of 37,000 acres due the state from the federal government.

Murphy said he would leave for Northern Idaho Wednesday to investigate additional lands that would be of interest to Idaho.

Murphy, chairman of the Inland lands selection committee, outlined for the land board representatives features of the Eastern Idaho land as a result of an inspection tour he took previously.

But Murphy declined to identify the land recommended for selection until the land board has reviewed the recommendations.

Earth use study set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two spacecraft to be orbited in 1972 and 1973 will scan the earth with remote sensors to find out what man and nature are doing to its limited resources and living room.

Studies thus far approved for these punters in space will include investigations of everything from vegetation damage by highway builders in Maine to locust breeding sites in Saudi Arabia.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said Tuesday it has tentatively chosen 28 U.S. and 22 foreign scientists to plan initial experiments for the first earth resources technology satellite and the manned Skylab with its earth resources experiment package.

The earth resources technology satellite, weighing 2,100 pounds, will be launched into a 565-mile-high, near polar orbit in the spring of 1972. It will be synchronized with the sun so that its many sensors always look down on a lighted earth.

SkyLab and its earth resources experiments, weighing 190,000 pounds, will be launched unimpaired into a 270-mile orbit in the spring of 1973. It will be subsequently tenanted by three-man crews for one 28-day and two 56-day periods over eight months.

The spacecraft will study such things as:

- Land use in Bosnywash, the megalopolis extending from Boston through New York to Washington.
- Effectiveness of measures to control pink bollworm infestation in California's Imperial Valley.
- Grazing of wild and domestic animals on public lands in the West.

Meat plant sale nears

PAYETTE (UPI) — A tentative agreement has been reached in the sale of Wells and Davies Meat Packing plant here, but a spokesman for the company declined to name the prospective purchaser.

Slaughtering and packing has been halted temporarily pending conclusion of the negotiations and completion of the plant inventory.

The spokesman said the firm will continue in the meat packing business.

Retires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Tuesday announced retirement of Fred M. Taylor, Boise, Idaho, as a U. S. District Court Judge for Idaho effective upon the appointment of a successor.

Taylor was named to the court in 1954 by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Alaska payments planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House is near approval of legislation that would pay $925 million in cash to the Alaska natives whose Indian and Eskimo ancestors inhabited the land America bought from Russia for $7.2 million 104 years ago.

Though still subject to amendments, the basic legislation, center of a two-hour House debate Tuesday evening, would pay the money to 55,000 natives and to turn over 40 million acres of land to them.

Both land and money would be put into corporations in which the natives would be given stock that could not be sold for 20 years.

Similar legislation is pending in the Senate, where the Interior Committee has recommended a total cash payment of $1 billion, plus ownership and use of 50 million acres of land.

Reps. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., and John P. Saylor, R-Pa., said they would seek to amend the legislation so that land planning would be required before the territory is surrendered to the natives. Saylor said "without such planning speculators could get hold of the land, adding:

"This is the only place left under the U.S. flag where you can plan before the land is ruined," he said.

Blast kills 1, injures 36

HOUSTON (UPI)—Two chemical tank cars from a derailed Missouri-Pacific freight train exploded an hour apart a dozen miles from downtown Houston Tuesday, producing a flaming mushroom cloud that charred houses 600 yards away.

One man—Fire Inspector T. J. Hathaway Jr.—died in the burst of fire and 36 others—including 26 firemen, six newsmen and four residents—were burned.

Fourteen other tank cars were scattered for a half mile along the tracks in southeast Houston. Two of them—one filled with acetone and another with formaldehyde—were still burning hours after the derailment. Houses within 2,000 yards of the burning cars were evacuated for fear of further explosions.

"It looked like a Saturn rocket blasting off," said A. Smith, 59, of Houston, who witnessed both explosions from his office at Anasco Transportation Co. nearby. "The first one was actually two—one small one, and a bigger one, then an hour later, the biggest one of all."

"To me, it looked like Texas City blowing up in 1947."

The second blast caught firemen and newsmen by surprise. The tank car which erupted split in two—one half ending up 60 yards to the south and the other half 100 yards to the north.

A fire truck, a Santa Fe Railroad maintenance truck and a station wagon were turned into charred hulks of metal by the fireball. A nearby house was destroyed, houses 600 yards away were charred and windows of houses two miles away were shattered.

A long, low rail car used for hauling grain was tossed into the middle of a nearby intersection, chewing up the pavement.

"If it had been a horizontal explosion instead of a vertical one," said radio newsmen Joe

Allen, "it would have wiped out the whole block."

The fire mushroomed over the whole area and mushroomed over my head for a block. I was trying to outrun it, thinking it was going to fall. I jumped about a four-foot high fence. I still don't know how I got over it."

Allen was not injured.

Police Lt. B. M. Finch said the blast took a fireman off a ladder near the tank car, and although that fireman was first burned dead he survived the blast with critical burns.

For hours after the explosion the emergency room at the Baptist Hospital was jammed. A nurse reported at least 34 persons were treated.

15 die in fire

FIREMEN, CORONER stand in charred hallway of nursing home near Honesdale, Pa., where 15 elderly persons died in fire Tuesday. Coroner Robert Jennings said patients died of smoke inhalation in one-story building. Ten women and five men were trapped in beds or chairs. Only one licensed practical nurse escaped. (UPI)

Rap due in court from bed

NEW YORK (UPI)—Black militant H. Rap Brown, wounded during a holdup Saturday, will be arraigned while in his hospital bed today on charges of attempted murder, robbery and possession of a dangerous weapon.

On Tuesday, three of Brown's alleged accomplices in the bar holdup had their bail reduced from $150,000 to $100,000 each during a hearing in Manhattan Criminal Court.

Brown, former head of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), was in fair condition at Roosevelt Hospital, recovering from bullet wounds in the abdomen and thigh. Heavy police security remained around the hospital.

Brown was shot following the holdup by a patrolman who said the black militant was wielding a .38-caliber revolver. It was the first time Brown had been seen since he disappeared 10 months ago.

Two policemen also were wounded in the shootout.

Brown's attorney, William Kunstler, also represented the other three men—Samuel Petty, 23, Arthur Lee Young, 25, and Levi Valentine, 24—at the bail reduction hearing Tuesday.

Kunstler asked that the charges be dropped against all four on the ground that no evidence had been presented. Judge James Yeargin denied the motion but reduced the bail.

Advisor reaches Peking

BEIJING (UPI)— Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Peking today to talk with Chinese leaders about preparations for President Nixon's forthcoming trip to Red China, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said.

The special presidential jet carrying Kissinger and his entourage of specialists took off from Andersen Air Force Base on Guam at 6:30 a.m. local time for a four-hour flight to Shanghai, the first stop in China.

It was believed he stopped only briefly in Shanghai before heading to Peking. Efforts by phone to confirm his arrival in Shanghai, China's largest city, failed when an unidentified Communist spokesman there told UPI "we have no authority to discuss this matter over the telephone," and then hung up.

Tanjug, in a dispatch from its Peking correspondent, said Kissinger's Boeing 707 landed on time at Peking Airport to a low-level welcome. Only correspondents and second-level officials were on hand for the welcome, which lasted about 10 minutes before Kissinger and his hosts drove into the city.

Kissinger made a secret trip to Peking July 9-11 for extensive talks with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

The trouble began Saturday evening when Harve Stephens, 24, a former Chicago street gang member serving 100 to 200 years for murder, broke away from a guard attempting to transfer him from one cell to another in the maximum security section.

Rebelling prisoners disarmed

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI)—About 50 prison guards, using Mace and tear gas and advancing behind wooden shields, disarmed 21 rebellious convicts in a maximum security section of Joliet Prison Tuesday.

The convicts, armed with pieces of iron pipe ripped from bed frames, had been holed up in their individual cells since early Sunday. They defied orders to lay down their weapons, prison authorities said.

Prison Superintendent Herbert Scott said the guards, in a seven-hour operation, disarmed the convicts and transferred them one by one to more secure cells without any injury on either side.

"All we wanted to do is remove those weapons we knew the prisoners had fashioned from dismantled beds," Scott said.

Swift blaze kills 15 aged home occupants

HONESDALE, Pa. (UPI)—A fire broke out at bedtime in a private nursing home for the elderly and spread so swiftly that all 15 residents were killed before they could make an effort to escape.

The fire Tuesday night at the Geiger Nursing Home near here caused the asphyxiation deaths of 10 women and five men patients, according to Robert Jennings, Wayne County Coroner, in the northeastern corner of the state.

"Some of them were found in bed and others on the floor and it looks like most of them weren't aware of what happened," said firemen Larry Martone, brother of Fire Chief

Vince Martone. "There wasn't any indication that they tried to get out."

Chief Martone said the fire began in a laundry room "and had a good start by the time it broke out of that room."

"When we got there, heat was especially intense in the laundry room section," he said. "It was evident rescue attempts would be futile and instead we simply tried to keep the fire within the building."

The chief said some of the residents were sitting in arm chairs and others were lying in bed. One man was found in the hallway. They were in their late 70s and 80s he said. Some were bedridden.

Practical nurse Vaudine Lyon, the home's only attendant, was taken to Wayne County Memorial Hospital here, treated for shock, and held for observation. She was the only person in the building to escape. A fireman was treated for smoke inhalation.

Agnew pick in '72 run

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI)—White House Communications Director Herbert G. Klein said Tuesday he feels President Nixon will choose Spiro T. Agnew to run again as vice president.

Klein made the prediction following a speech to a convention of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters, in which he said many broadcasters were oversensitive to criticism of the press.

"I see no threat or danger despite all the rhetoric we've heard from the administration itself," Klein said.

"We've heard that we're trying to intimidate the reporters of the news industry," he said. "But I can tell you as one who's had a great number of press conferences, I've yet to meet the first intimidated reporter and I hope I never will."

They said they were disturbed at a joint chiefs of staff recommendations for a doubling of U.S. military expenditures and a five-fold increase in the size of the Cambodian army.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has already voted to clamp a $250 million ceiling on aid to Cambodia this year.

But Mansfield, the Senate Democratic leader, said that in itself may be construed as a ratification of present U. S. policies.

Cambodian buildup could slow pullout

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate doves warned Tuesday of a planned surge in U. S. military assistance to Cambodia that could turn the country into an armed camp and thwart the U. S. withdrawal from Indochina.

Charging that the administration was searching for loopholes in congressional restrictions on U. S. activity in Cambodia, Sens. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., Frank Church, D-Idaho, Thomas P. Eagleton, D-Mo., and Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., went to the Senate floor to plead for Congress to stop further intervention.

Coffee pots, trailer hitch occupy Gem board

BOISE (UPI) — State employees still must pay for their own office coffee pots even though they may have provided visitors or guests; the State Board of Examiners ruled Tuesday.

This reaffirmation of board policy was one of a number of decisions made by the board at a two-hour meeting concerning spending policies on state agencies.

Board members also gave reluctant permission to State Hospital North to pay $188 for a mobile home trailer hitch on the private car of Mrs. Doreen Riemann, Kamiah.

Mrs. Riemann was one of 77 employees laid off at State Hospital North. She later obtained employment at the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa and was authorized relocation expenses.

Her Nampa employment, the board was advised, was to be temporary and she was to be re-employed at Hospital North in Orfino when their budget could afford it.

It would have cost $150 to haul her trailer one way. Because a similar cost would have to be incurred in moving her trailer back to Orofino, the board surmised, Hospital North officials actually saved the state $122 by paying for the trailer hitch.

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, while going along with the "logical thinking," of the hospital officials said, "We have no business putting trailer hitches on private cars."

Dr. Donald F. Kline, executive director of higher education, raised the question of buying coffee pots with state funds when he asked approval of a claim for $17.78 for two such pots.

He said the coffee pots "were felt to be a legitimate expenditure in that we often cater luncheons for the State Board of Education and board of regents for the University of Idaho, as well as many institutional representatives who meet in the board room of the office of higher education on many occasions."

"It has been our experience," Kline wrote the Board of Examiners, "that catering a light luncheon is far less expensive for the State of Idaho than to reimburse each participant on the basis of approved travel regulations or in the case of the state board, on the basis of actual expense should they buy luncheons independently at one of the established restaurants in the downtown Boise area."

He added that employees in his office pay $1 per month minimum into the office coffee fund.

State Auditor Joe R. Williams, non-voting secretary to the Board of Examiners, said he felt the board should formulate a policy on the matter.

"The bill is $17," Andrus noted. "It's costing us more than that to breathe."

"These things seem incidental but on performance audits they are made something of and this is what bothers the state auditor," Williams said.

Attorney General W. Anthony Park wondered if the board would be setting a precedent in allowing the taxpayers to subsidize coffee breaks.

"We're constantly being asked to subsidize coffee breaks," Williams said.

Secretary of State Pete T. Conrussa noted that there already is a board policy against state payment for such things and he successfully moved the board reaffirm that policy.

In other action, the board: —Gave the State Board of Correction authority to pay $7,134.99 in overtime to personnel needed for security and other reasons following the Aug. 10 prison riot.

—Approved a Land Department proposal to buy 10 acres in Lakeland Industrial Park north of Coeur d'Alene for $1,500 per acre for a combined automotive shop, a state central fire warehouse and a headquarters for the Mica Forest Protective District.

—Asked the attorney general to review a proposed new actuarial agreement between the state insurance fund and Woodward and Fondiller, Inc., New York City, in which the rate would be raised to $1,000 per month from $600.

—Sent to the attorney general for study the request of I. W. Minden, Harvard, Idaho, to write off $973 worth of unsold fish and game licenses which were stolen from his store by burglars.

—Instructed the state auditor to pay no more than 30 days accrued vacation to state employees who are fired or who quit even though they may have accumulated more time than that. —Approved proposed purchase by the Fish and Game Department of 1960.39 acres of land bordering the Snake River in Nez Perce County from Harold Galster to provide a land route to the river for sportsmen and additional forage for mule deer.

Decided to ask State Commerce Secretary Lloyd Howe to explain what he meant by his request concerning invitations to attend various meetings.

Howe said that his wife as well as he sometimes is invited by various organizations to attend certain functions and he asked whether this can be at state expense.

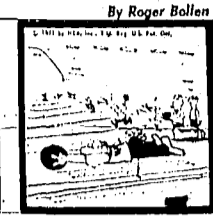

Park said there may be some special rules for the department of Commerce and Development "but for the rest of us my understanding is the state will pay for their hotel rooms only."

Williams noted that whatever Lacking food bulk?

decision the board reaches in the matter could be "very wide reaching."

New bid date set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, said today bids on the Teton Dam Project in southeastern Idaho are now scheduled to be opened Oct. 29, probably in Idaho Falls.

Hansen said he received a telephone call from Interior Secretary Rogers Morton and was told the department planned to let the bid and start construction as soon as possible.

Bids were to have been opened in Idaho Falls Oct. 7, but minutes before the opening the Bureau of Reclamation announced a one-month delay to give the Department of Interior further time to study the controversial proposal.

Last week Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said he had been told by Rogers the study would be done on the cost-benefit ratio alone and not on the basis of environmental considerations.

LBJ's View..

'War on poverty'

From the book, THE VANTAGE POINT, Perspectives of the Presidency, 1963-1969, by Lyndon Baines Johnson, published by Holt, Rinehart and Winston Inc. Copyright (c) 1971 by HEC Public Affairs Foundation.

By Lyndon Baines Johnson

The first full day of my Presidency was loaded with the urgencies of government in crisis.

When I recall that day, I think of people: people entering my office, people leaving my office, people meeting in my office, people waiting in my reception room, a steady stream of people. They included former Presidents, Cabinet officers, leaders of Congress, and staff members.

Among the latter was Walter Heller, Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, who came to see me at 7:40 in the evening. He wanted to tell me about the research recently conducted on the problem of poverty.

Heller told me that early in November he had asked the departments and agencies of the federal government for ideas that could be used in developing a program to alleviate poverty. He said that he had discussed the subject with John Kennedy three days before his assassination. At that time, Heller told me, President Kennedy had approved his going ahead with plans for a program but had given no guidance as to the specific content.

Now Heller had come to ask me an urgent question: Did I want the Council of Economic Advisers to develop a program to attack poverty?

Before me now was a call for action, a call for a revolutionary new program to attack one of the most stubbornly entrenched social ills in America. Like most social change, such a revolution would not come without a struggle.

My perceptions of America persuaded me that three separate conditions were required before social change could take root and flourish in our national life — a recognition of need, a willingness to act, and someone to lead the effort.

In 1963 I saw those three conditions coming together in historic harmony.

The poverty program Heller described was my kind of undertaking.

"I'm interested," I responded. "I'm sympathetic. Go ahead. Give it the highest priority. Push ahead full tilt."

Work on the program continued through December. I announced at a news conference that poverty legislation would be "high on the agenda of priority" in our requests to Congress in 1964. We continued our search for ways to reduce spending, mainly in Defense but in other departments as well, so that money could be used to launch the poverty program. A poverty bill that would increase the budget at the outset would have little chance of success.

We were moving into uncharted territory. Powerful forces of opposition would be stirred. Many people warned me not to get caught in the snare of a program directed entirely toward helping the poor.

Walter Heller and Kermit Gordon, Director of the Bureau of the Budget, worked together as the government's "poverty team" in those early days. They came to the LBJ Ranch over the

Johnson recruits Shriver for War on Poverty

Christmas week at the end of 1963. I spent many long hours with them, discussing, planning, and evolving the outlines of a poverty program.

The problem of poverty in the 1960s was not the same as that of the hard times in the 1930s. During the Depression we had been concerned mainly with educated and trained people who had been temporarily dislocated by the sickness of the economy.

The poverty of the 1960s, the paradoxical poverty in the midst of plenty, was of another breed. The economy was booming. Jobs were plentiful, but the unemployed were incapable of filling them. The most significant aspects of this new poverty, once the spotlight of attention was thrown on it, were the dismaying nature of its stubborn entrenchment and the total entrapment of its victims from one generation to the next.

A man was poor if he did not have enough money to live on, but that was only part of it. If he was poor, the consequences were that he had little education, that he received inadequate medical care and substandard nutrition, that he lived in crowded and insanitary conditions. He had no real chance to train for a decent job.

Moreover, he had been poor all his life and was destined to die poor. His children could look forward to the same hopeless cycle, from a deprived youth to a bleak and despairing old age. The poor man was trapped; no escape was possible; hope was beyond his understanding. To defeat poverty meant breaking this cruel pattern.

For one thing, I was convinced that a successful program would have to provide not only special services but, more important, the opportunities for people to lift themselves out of the treadmill of poverty. For another, I wanted to place heavy emphasis on efforts to help children. They offered the best hope of breaking the poverty cycle.

Gordon and Heller had been thinking in terms of a pilot venture to be carried out in a limited number of "demonstration project" cities. But I urged them to broaden their scope. I was certain that we could not start small and hope to propel a program through the Congress. It had to be big and bold and hit the whole nation with real impact.

We managed to earmark $500 million in the budget to launch the anti-poverty drive, much of it derived from Defense Department economies. In addition, the budget contained another $500 million for federal agency efforts — such as manpower training — which would also strike at poverty in one way or another. I instructed Gordon to incorporate those funds in the poverty program so that we could launch the campaign at a $1 billion level.

The challenge I presented to my advisers was the development of a new concept. I didn't want to paste together a lot of existing approaches. I wanted original, inspiring ideas.

The Title War on Poverty was decided on during those days at the Ranch. It had disadvantages. The military image carried with it connotations of victories and defeats that could prove misleading. But I wanted to rally the nation, to sound a call to arms which would stir people in the government, in private industry, and on the campuses to lend their talents to a massive effort to eliminate the evil.

Basically, the idea was this: Local organizations would be formed in the neighborhoods and communities where the poor people themselves lived, and programs to help the poor would be channeled through organizations on the scene.

This plan had the sound of something brand new and even faintly radical. Actually, it was based on one of the oldest ideas of our democracy, as old as the New England town meeting — self-determination at the local level. The concept of community action became the first building block in our program to attack poverty.

Part IV

This is the fourth in a series of 12 articles excerpted from "The Vantage Point," President Lyndon B. Johnson's personal record of his five years in the White House.

In this installment the former Chief Executive recalls his first campaign in the war on poverty.

On January 8, 1964, in my first State of the Union address to the Congress, I announced: "This administration today, here and now, declares unconditional war on poverty in America."

"One thousand dollars invested in salvaging an unemployable youth today," I pointed out, "can return forty thousand dollars in his lifetime."

Once the poverty "war" was declared, I faced the task of submitting a full-scale program to Congress as quickly as possible. The time had come to move the planning out of the Council of Economic Advisers and the Budget Bureau orbit. They had done a good job in getting the project started. But I thought the people destined to run the program should now take over development of the plans.

I concluded that the program should be handled by an independent agency in the Executive branch, reporting directly to the President. I wanted a strong man at its head. A number of names were proposed. I decided on Sargent Shriver. He had demonstrated ability as Director of the Peace Corps. In planning that organization, he had personally visited and briefed many Senators and Congressmen, obtaining a measure of congressional respect not always given to a bureaucrat. He had shown that he could get along with diverse groups.

Shriver took over the directorship of the poverty program on February 1, 1964. I told him he would have to work fast. Not only did I want to propel a program through the Congress immediately but I wanted the plan to produce visible results, so that there would be no question about Congress' continuing the effort with adequate funding in the years ahead.

The task force solicited ideas from more than 150 leaders in every section of the nation's life: businessmen and teachers, mayors and social workers, officials in private organizations and officers of state governments.

Soon other ideas began to take their place beside community action in the emerging legislative proposal: programs to give a special educational head start to children from deprived backgrounds; plans to train school dropouts for productive jobs; a blueprint to draw on the volunteer spirit of American youth; new ways to help small businessmen in the slums get started and to help impoverished farmers keep going; programs to enable students from low-income families to work while they pursued an education.

Only six weeks after the task force had first assembled, the program was ready to go. On March 16 I approved it and sent it to the Congress.

In a special message I told the Congress that poverty was "a domestic enemy which threatens the strength of our nation and the welfare of our people." That language was in keeping with the fact that I was calling for a war, one which would strike "at the causes and not just the consequences of poverty, one which would treat not just poor individuals but poor communities as well." The strategy for that was best described in the title of the bill itself. It was called the Economic Opportunity Act.

We did everything we could to keep the poor people in the headlines while the bill was in committee. Many Cabinet officers and other high-ranking government officials took up the poor people's cause in their speeches across the country, and they received good press coverage. Lady Bird and I made a special trip to the Middle West and through the scarred mountains of Appalachia to focus the nation's attention on the problem of poverty. It was a full and long day that I still vividly recall. At a schoolhouse in South Bend at a meeting of the League of Women Voters in a Pittsburgh ballroom . . . at a convocation in a steelworkers' Union hall on the other side of town . . . in the courthouse square at Paintsville, Kentucky . . . and finally at the moonlit airport in Huntington, West Virginia, I delivered my message to the nation: The War on Poverty was not a partisan effort. It was a moral obligation and its success rested on every one of us. Wherever we went, along every mile of the road of our travels, the people sounded their approval. The bill was approved by the Senate on July 23, by a vote of 61 to 34. Then we prepared for the final vote in the House. We had no assurance of victory, and as late as July 31 Larry O'Brien told me that his head count showed the House deadlocked, with thirty Southerners undecided.

When the final vote in the House came, on August 8, the result reflected the strong effort we had not made. The tally was 226 to 185, a margin of victory much wider than we had expected. Within minutes after the final vote I received a phone call from Congressman Carl Albert, the Democratic Floor Leader, and Congressman Hale Boggs, the Democratic Whip. They told me they were sitting alone, toasting our victory: "I really can't figure out, Mr. President," Carl Albert said, "how in the world we ever got this through. I honestly don't know."

When I signed the Economic Opportunity Act on August 20, I tried to set it in historical perspective. "Today," I said, "for the first time in all the history of the human race, a great nation is able to make and is willing to make a commitment to eradicate poverty among its people."

Because poverty itself is a complex problem composed of many interlocking facets, our assault on it had to be an integrated attack launched on many fronts. No single poverty program could reverse centuries of discrimination and deprivation. That reversal would come only with the long, hard work of dozens of campaigns fought on hundreds of battlegrounds, and it would take time.

There was no magic formula. We had to try a wide variety of approaches. Some worked better than others. Some failed completely. I heard bitter complaints from the mayors of several cities. Some funds were used to finance questionable activities. Some were badly mismanaged. That was all part of the risk. We created new bureaus and consolidated old ones. We altered priorities. We learned from mistakes. But as I used to tell our critics: "We have to pull the drowning man out of the water and talk about it later."

When I left office, government reports showed that of the 35 million Americans who had been trapped in poverty in 1964, 12.5 million had been lifted out — a reduction of almost 36 per cent in just over four years.

Not only because of the War on Poverty but also because of the expanding economy, people were coming out of poverty during those years at a rate two and a half times faster than at any time in our history.

Next: The 1964 Campaign

'I really can't figure out, Mr. President, . . . how in the world we ever got this through'

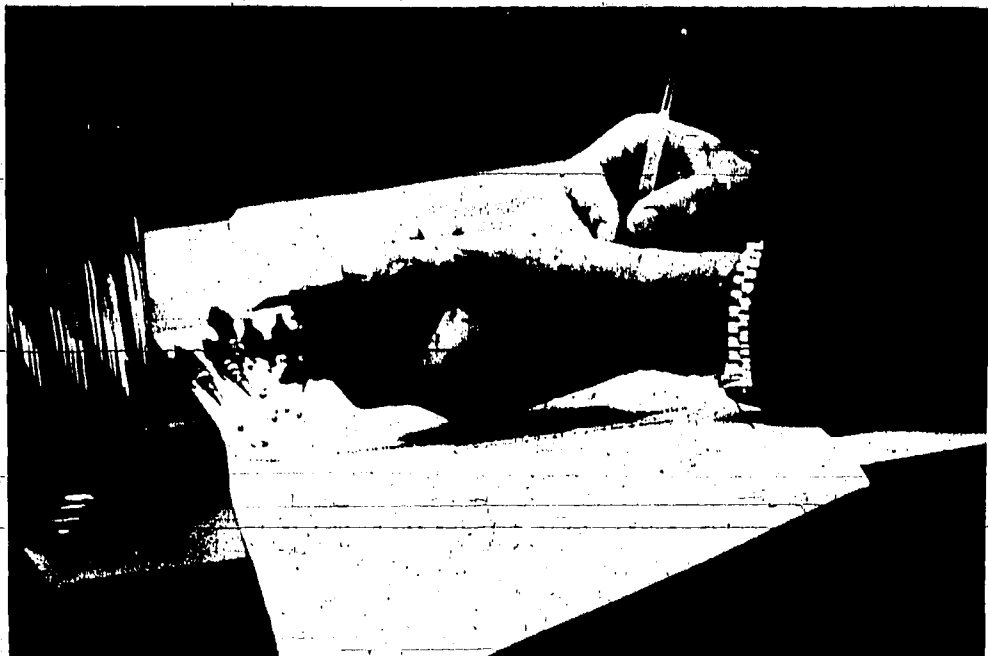

A sense of home

The sense of home runs strong and deep in me, and better housing would automatically appear on any list of my priorities. I believe that the American home is the bedrock of our national strength and that the physical home is like an umbilical cord that sustains a family. Every family in America deserves a decent home, whether a farmhouse or a city apartment, rented or owned, modest or splendid. What matters is that the home be a place for a family to live in health and grow in dignity.

I have been criticized for such statements by people who think I raised hopes that can never be fulfilled, but I believe in the wisdom of the Bible — "Where there is no vision, the people perish." Unless these hopes are held out and unless they are eventually realized, our system of government will undergo a drastic change, and the change may not necessarily be concerned with the Constitution.

Men will not support indefinitely a system which denies them a roof over their heads and shelter and warmth for their children. If all our people were properly housed, most of the problems that now threaten our society would be less critical, and we would be an immeasurably stronger nation.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: How can you tell if a man is a homosexual? My husband's partner (they are CPA's) hired a male secretary. What kind of man would hire a male secretary? And what kind of man would BE a secretary? My husband's partner is a married man and he doesn't seem "faggy," but I've heard that sometimes this doesn't mean anything.

Should I make an issue of this? I'd like an answer, but please don't use my name.

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: You can't tell if a man is a homosexual from his appearance, but if you really think it's your business, why don't you ask him? Homosexuals as a group are honest.

All kinds of men hire male secretaries. And no "special" kind of man pursues secretarial work any more than any special kind of woman does.

And don't make an issue of it. A man who is bright enough to be a CPA can take care of himself.

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to attend the wedding of a girl who works where I started working about a month ago. (I'll call her Rosie.) I accepted. Another co-worker who was also invited asked if we could buy Rosie a wedding present together. I said okay. We bought the gift and had it delivered to Rosie's home.

Both the co-worker and I got a "thank you" note for the "shower gift." We weren't invited to any shower, and the card we enclosed with our present plainly said, "FOR YOUR WEDDING." Well, anybody can make a mistake, so I didn't care about that, but listen to this:

The day before the wedding, Rosie calls me up and asks me NOT to come to her wedding because she "over-invited" and there wasn't enough room. She called the other co-worker and told her the same thing.

Do you think Rosie should have offered to return our gift? Or at least try to patch things up by offering to bring us a piece of wedding cake? Thank you.

"LOST OUT" IN N. J.

DEAR "LOST": Either your friend Rosie has corn flakes—where her brains belong—or she became—added by her forthcoming nuptials. Forget it.

DEAR ABBY: My mom likes to have company, and when she knows someone is coming over, she spends the day fixing refreshments.

The problem is that some people do things like the following: Mom had her club over last Thursday, and she made some real fancy sandwiches, chocolate-covered brownies and all kinds of cookies. Well, I wish you could have seen those ladies!

One said, "I can't eat very much because I'm on a diet, but I'd sure like to carry something home to my Herman." [Then she wraps up a whole lunch in a paper napkin.]

Then someone else says, "My Milton loves sweets. Mind if I take him a few?"

My mom is too nice to say anything. So the company carries out all the treats—what is your opinion of this?

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: If it doesn't bug your momma, it shouldn't bug you.

DEAR ABBY: May I have the last word about the policy one church had of allowing the preacher exactly one hour in which to deliver his sermon, and if he talked longer, he would be automatically "drowned out" by chimes?

In my opinion, the world has enough Saturday and Sunday Christians, and could certainly use more who practice their religion seven days a week, 24 hours a day.

If I want to pray, I don't want to wait until Saturday or Sunday. It might be too late then.

J. J. O., WAUKEEN, ILL.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 49700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90049. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hints

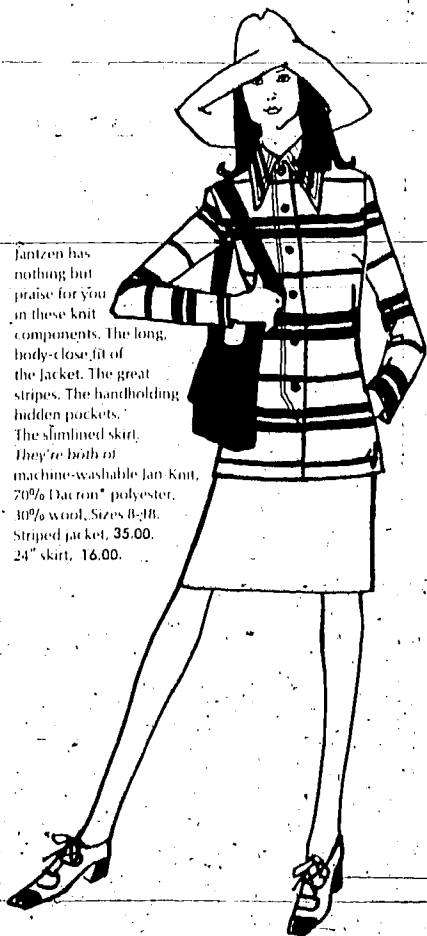

SHOSHONE — A way to hang a wall composition (grouping of pictures, mirrors, plaques, fabric panels and such) is explained by Jennene Amnest, Lincoln, Blaine and Camas Counties home economist.

She suggests using a piece of paper, the same size as the wall to be used, on the floor. Then arrange pictures on the paper, situate them where desired, mark around the edge of each. This can then be used as a pattern by putting the paper up to the wall and using the marked positions to hang the pictures, etc.

Area AARP and NRTA members attend conference

JEROME — Five members of Jerome's Unit of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and one member from Twin Falls returned home this week after attending the area eight conference of the AARP and the National Retired Teachers Association in Salt Lake City, Utah, according to Edith Nancolas, president of the South-Central Retired Teachers Association.

Miss Nancolas said there were more than 1,500 older Americans from a five state area who attended the meeting, participating in sessions devoted to consumer protection, Social Security and new housing for the elderly. Theme of the conference was "Developing Strategy for Aging in the 70's."

Congressmen David Pryor, D-Ark., and Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, were the featured speakers at the conference legislative sessions. Chester Lauck of Hot Springs, Ark., the former "Lum" of "Lum and Abner" radio fame was the principal speaker at the meetings, concluding session Miss Nancolas said.

She explained that with a combined membership of over three million persons, the two associations are the nation's largest organizations dedicated to helping Americans achieve retirement lives of independence, dignity and purpose. They conduct a vigorous legislative representation program and sponsor many member services to help older persons meet their insurance, health, medical and travel needs and maintain active involvement in community national affairs.

Association officials at the conference discussed the many income-stretching services sponsored by AARP-NRTA, including recommended health, life and automobile insurance programs, pharmacies offering prescription medicines at reasonable prices on a mail-order and walk-in basis, a travel service and a continuing education program.

Attending from this area were members of both associations including Miss Nancolas and Mrs. Shirley Young, both members of both organizations; Mr. and Mrs. William King, president of Jerome AARP, and Mrs. Mildred Walker, an AARP member, all from Jerome and Mrs. Sue Stronk, AARP, Twin Falls.

Following the conference, Miss Nancolas remained to take the instructor's course for the defensive driving training course, which qualified her to hold classes for local members and other interested retired persons as soon as they can be arranged. This will be announced later.

Hints

Leftover egg whites should be refrigerated promptly in tightly covered containers and used within a day or two.

Store canned fish in a cool, dry place. Do not store for longer than a year.

If your old refrigerator is to be stored or discarded, take the proper precautionary steps to reduce the possibility of child entrapment. Remove the door.

Disconnect power cord from electrical outlet before attempting any repair work, light bulb replacement, or cleansing. (Turning the control to "off" position does not normally disconnect power to appliance).

Even an electric ice-cube crusher, which under normal conditions doesn't get very dirty, should be kept clean by wiping the unit after each use with a sudsy sponge. Wash the ice container in soapy water.

Some medical authorities on skin problems of children believe cleanliness is the key to avoiding many common skin infections.

Colorful glass canisters brighten a kitchen.

Fashion historians say clothing reflects the times and the recent "anything goes" spirit definitely has had some influence on the contemporary fashion scene.

Oil stains around the collars and cuffs can ruin the "pizzazz" of colorful men's shirts. To get rid of them, pre-treat such areas with a paste of detergent made with a little water. Then wash as usual.

Patricia Turner, Gergens marry

TWIN FALLS — Patricia Joan Turner and Carl Leo Gergens were married in rites Oct. 9 at the First Christian Church, Twin Falls.

Miss Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Turner, Murtlough, and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Gergens, Twin Falls, are parents of the bridegroom. The bride wore a floor-length gown of polyester crepe and carried a white Bible covered with a Dutch Colonial bouquet of pink gladioli and pink and white carnations.

Ray Jones and Larry Brown, ministers at the First Christian Church, performed the ceremony, while Mrs. Jim Turner, Twin Falls, and Claire Harkins, Twin Falls, attended the couple.

A program of anniversary music was presented by organist, Mrs. William Boyd, and soloist, Howard Larson.

Ushers were Wes Beeson, Jim Turner, Dick Shaffer and Don Norris all Twin Falls. The bride's nephews, Mark and Mick Turner, lit the candles.

A reception was held in the church after the ceremony. After their honeymoon, the new Mrs. Gergens, an employee of First National Bank, and Gergens, who is employed by the Driveway Market, will reside at Route 1, Kimberly.

Homecoming Many crib, educational toys are waste of money set Friday

RICHFIELD — Richfield High School's homecoming game Friday will honor alumni, feature a parade preceding the game, and half-time parade and queen crowning. The game, with Bliss High School, will start at 2 p.m.

Members of the Girls League will be in charge of a social hour at the school cafeteria to honor alumni following the game. Floral favors will be presented to each alumni at the game. Homecoming queen candidates are Colleen Brown and July Milligan, seniors; Brenda Hill and Kelly Pridmore, juniors; Valynn Gardner and Christy Crowthers, sophomores and Carla McRoberts and Mary Margaret Lozanz, freshmen.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Parents waste their money buying scientifically designed crib devices and educational toys to speed the development of their infant children, a noted pediatrician said Sunday.

Dr. Richard I. Feinbloom, professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, told members of the American Academy of Pediatrics that toy manufacturers have seized upon unfounded opinions and incomplete research to create and market educational toys for infants.

Parents are told they should equip their baby's crib with mirrors, live fish tanks, gravity toiles, mobiles, finger-tracking modules and other paraphernalia, Feinbloom said, none of which are any more effective than plastic rattles, rubber balls and other objects parents traditionally have used to keep a junior quiet.

"I have searched for empirical evidence to support the claims of manufacturers and have found none," Feinbloom said.

Tenderizers

SHOSHONE — "Meat tenderizers do most of their work during cooking, with most of the action taking place between 140 and 187 degrees Fahrenheit."

Jeanene Annett, home economist for Lincoln, Blaine and Camas counties, said the tenderizers are not harmful to the stomach as some people feel. "Most tenderizers work by enzymatic action that breaks down meat protein, softening or tenderizing connective tissue and muscle fibers. When cooking temperatures get above 176 degrees the enzymes in the tenderizers are destroyed," she said.

"Even if heat did not stop, the enzymes in the tenderizers could not survive the gastric juices produced during digestion."

The question was . . .

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The Newlywed Game," on television isn't billed as a comedy show. Neither is it billed as a commentary on modern education. A recent show could have been both.

During this show four young couples separately are asked questions concerning their spouses. Later they are brought together to see how their answers match. The purpose of the game is to reveal how well newly-married people know each other.

A question this day was: "What would you say your husband would say is his favorite condiment?"

Some of the answers:

"His car."

"My house." (This newlywed later said he thought the question had something to do with condominiums.)

"Banana cream pie."

"This karate school."

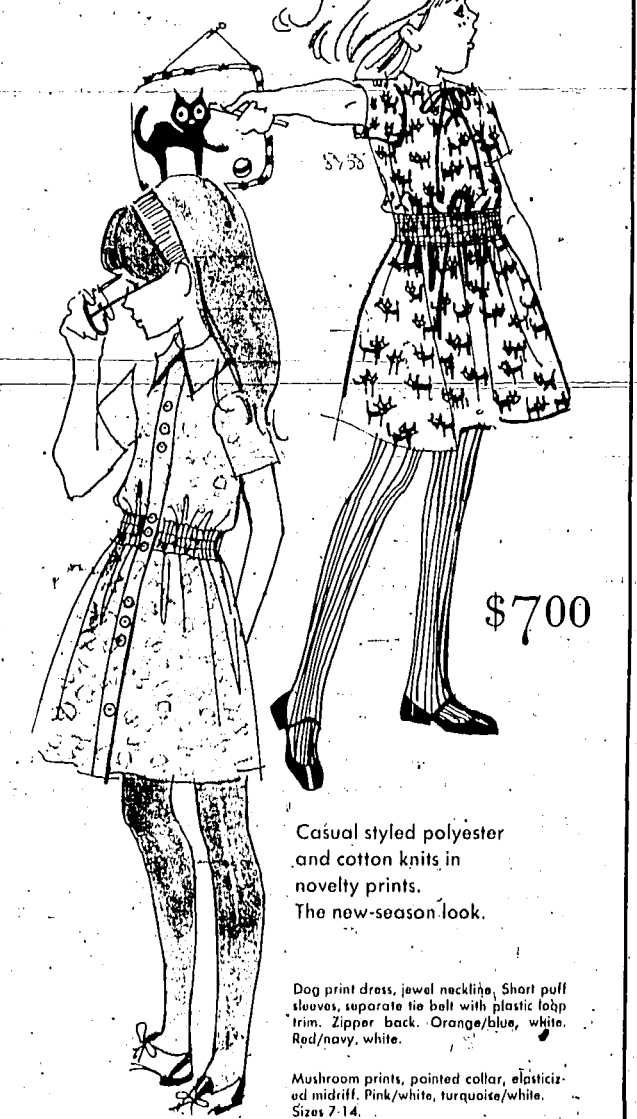

"My skis."

"Chocolate cream pie."

None of the eight young persons, all in their late teens or early 20s, knew the meaning of condiment.

As every housewife knows, a condiment is a spice or seasoning—such as salt, pepper or ketchup.

Buhl firm plans suit against town residents

BY LEE TREMAINE
Times-News Writer

BUHL — A "sizable lawsuit," asking damages well in excess of $100,000, is planned against 28 Buhl residents by Cascade Commodities Corp. according to Twin Falls attorney Lloyd Webb.

Webb said Tuesday that he plans to seek damages from the 28 plaintiffs who forced the closure of Cascade Commodities' rendering plant earlier this year in a dispute over offensive odors emanating from the plant.

The Buhl residents, who live within a short distance of the rendering plant, filed suit against the firm in February of this year, a short time after the former Carter Packing Co. became Cascade Commodities in a sale to "outside interests" and changed the operations from routine meat-packing to rendering of animal carcasses for their tallow.

After a number of hearings and court battles before Fifth District Judge James M. Cunningham, an order was issued in March ordering the firm to "cease and desist" from producing offensive odors.

The order was ignored, according to the plaintiffs, and Judge Cunningham issued a second order in April, declaring he would order the sheriff to "padlock the doors" if necessary in order to enforce his ruling. This time, Cascade Commodities shut down its operations.

Subsequent appeals by Webb, as attorney for Cascade, have proven futile. Webb said Tuesday he plans an appeal of the closure order to the Idaho

Supreme Court in an attempt to overturn Judge Cunningham's April ruling.

In other court action, Webb appealed for an increase in the "injunctive bond" which was posted by the Buhl plaintiffs. Under state law, plaintiffs in a complaint action against a firm such as Cascade Commodities must post a bond in the event they lose the case and are found liable for damages.

The Buhl plaintiffs posted a bond of $15,000 as ordered by Judge Cunningham. Webb said Tuesday he had asked for a substantial increase in the bond, as the firm is losing income every day it is closed, but he was turned down.

Webb also said his lawsuit takes into account the estimated losses suffered by Cascade Commodities due to their closure an amount which is increasing daily. The damages to be asked will be "well in excess of $100,000," depending on when the action is filed, Webb said.

The saga of Cascade Commodities began more than a year ago when the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, AFI-CIO, struck the former Carter Packing Co. in September, 1970. The strike dragged on for many weeks, even continuing after the sale to the unnamed "outside interests" which brought the change of name and the new troubles to the firm.

The strike, actually, was never formally settled. Pickets were withdrawn from the plant during the dispute over the odor but no settlement has been reported.

CONSTRUCTION CREWS poured concrete for footings at the site of the new Tupperware plant at the south edge of Jerome Tuesday. Building of the plant is moving ahead rapidly, although the project is still in its early phases. The plant is scheduled to be in production by mid-1972.

Child aid center set

By DAVID ESPO
Times-News Writer

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council Tuesday approved use of the Civic Armory building as a child development center for mentally and physically handicapped children in the Mini-Cassin area.

Responding to a request from William Strasser, chairman of the center's building committee, the council unanimously directed Terry Duffin, city recreation official, to establish an arrangement between the city and center officials that would not disrupt other programs already in progress.

Strasser told the council he hoped the use of the armory would be a "stop-gap measure" until next summer when he was hopeful of receiving federal funds to locate another building. The city will charge the center only the cost of utilities.

In other action Tuesday night the council:

- Approved the transfer of $1,600 from the city recreation fund into a special fund for senior citizens.
- Held first reading on proposed Ordinance 521 introduced by Councilman William F. Whitton to set limits on public gatherings of large numbers of people within the city limits.
- Learned from the Idaho Department of Health that portions of the Snake River in Rupert will be tested for effluent samples as part of an environmental protection plan being carried out by state and federal authorities.

Duffin told the council the senior citizens center is nearly complete and plans are going ahead for dedication ceremonies. The recreation director said he anticipates a representative of the governor's office will be present.

The city ordinance, patterned after similar laws in Twin Falls and Blaine counties, will be read twice more before it is acted upon. It provides that the sponsor of a gathering of 500 or more people for longer than 22 hours on city property file for a permit and show conformance with various sanitary and health conditions before the proposed assembly be held.

In requesting several weeks ago that the council discuss the ordinance, Whitton said his chief concern was for the anticipated strain on city sanitary and parking facilities in the event a large assembly would be held.

A letter from Vaughn Anderson, director of the Idaho Department of Health's Environmental Improvement Division, informed the city that crews from the Federal Environmental Protection Agency will conduct studies along the Snake River and its major tributaries this week and next.

Sale of TF firm listed

TWIN FALLS — Sale of E. W. McRoberts and Co., Twin Falls, brokerage firm was announced today by Mrs. E. W. (Betty) McRoberts.

She said the firm established by her late husband 34 years ago, has been sold to Alex Sinclair, Eugene Sturgill and Jack Mallowney. Amount of the transaction was not disclosed.

Mrs. McRoberts said, "After Mr. McRoberts' recent death it became apparent I could not carry on the business and it is satisfying to be able to sell the business to local, established people whom I have known for many years."

"There were opportunities to sell to non-resident people, but I believe 34 years of local ownership should be continued," she said.

Sturgill, a Twin Falls broker, will move into the present E. W. McRoberts and Co. location at 135 Second St. East, immediately operating under the name of McRoberts-Sturgill and Co. Sinclair and Mallowney will join Sturgill in a common quarters operation which, in addition to stocks bonds and mutual funds, will include the Louis-N-Ritten-and-Co. commodity futures, now operated by Sinclair and Mallowney.

The new owners said, "We are pleased to offer the Magic Valley investing public the continuity of the McRoberts' firm and instantaneous stock prices, additional research information and the services of several qualified individuals."

Jenny Dougherty, secretary-treasurer and registered representative of E. W. McRoberts and Co., will remain with McRoberts, Sturgill and Co. as will Phil McRoberts.

House OK's district cost bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House has approved a bill of Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, which provides local water districts will not be charged for certain costs incurred by the Bureau of Reclamation in its investigation programs.

Hansen said the major purpose of his bill is to establish consistency of accounting treatment between the bureau on one hand and the Corps of Engineers and the Soil Conservation Service on the other.

He said the corps and SCS have not been obligated to arrange cost-sharing for pre-authorization investigation costs of water resource development projects under their jurisdiction while the bureau has not had such an exemption.

Footings poured

JEROME — Work on the new Tupperware plant south of Jerome is on schedule, with excavation of footings for wall forms to be followed by pouring of concrete for the footings.

Don Sharp, job superintendent, said today that the wall forms will be in place by the end of the week, weather permitting.

Work is also progressing on excavation and laying of sewer lines for the sewage-treatment plant which will be built to serve the plant. Electrical conduit will be placed underground, as will pipelines for the plant's sprinkler system of fire protection. Excavation for these lines is also continuing, Sharp said.

The work will be susceptible to slowdowns from inclement weather, especially unseasonably cold weather, which would slow the pouring of concrete. Heavy snow or rainstorms could also force a halt to the work at its present stage.

The Tupperware project, being built by Kiddo Constructors, a subsidiary of Boise-Cascade, is scheduled to continue throughout the winter, with completion called for by May 1, 1972.

About 45 men are working on the job at the present time, with employment to rise as the construction progresses. The job may employ more than 100 men at its peak, Sharp said.

CAA sets home panel

JEROME — Mrs. Ramona Ritchie, chairman of the housing committee of the South-Central Community Action Agency, reported to the CAA board of trustees Tuesday night on housing problems in the three counties covered by CAA activities.

Mrs. Ritchie said each of the three counties, including Jerome, Cassia and Twin Falls, will have their individual organizations for housing, then will work together as a tri-county group.

"We should set certain goals we hope to accomplish in 1971," she said. "These are in accordance with our three-year plan that the Community Action Agency has set up and housing ranked fourth as one of the problems."

She said that in 1971, "We would like to build 25 units under the '236' program of the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, in addition to rehabilitation of eight units, using federal rehabilitation loans, and we hope to submit by the end of the year applications for Cassia County for a total of 150 units, and to have construction underway."

She pointed out that student housing is an acute problem in this area. Bob Holland and Mark Story, students at the College of Southern Idaho representing the Student Housing Commission, said they have formed a committee to deal with the housing shortage in the Twin Falls area for college students.

Story said available rentals are so high-priced that the students cannot afford them. "It seems college students have a bad reputation, and most people refuse to rent to them," he said.

Ima Jean Patterson, also a CSI student, told the board that "If you pay less than $85 per month for a one-room apartment, it would be in such bad shape you wouldn't let your dog sleep in it."

She added, "I think the real estate agents and renters have a conspiracy going to keep rents so high that low-income people cannot afford to rent."

Mrs. Ritchie said two-thirds of the wage-earners in the tri-county area have incomes of less than $3,000 per year, and that 23,383 persons of a total of 69,077 in the tri-county area are over 65 years of age.

This indicates that there is an acute shortage of housing for the area's senior citizens as well, since they represent 34 per cent of the total population, she said.

Mrs. Ritchie emphasized that the one out of four persons in that three counties "is not properly housed."

"Our problems are so acute at this time," she said, "because of the college and all the young people it has brought in."

She added, "If you think we have problems now, wait until Tupperware people start moving in." She estimated that 1,200 new people will move into the area, representing at least two people for every Tupperware employe.

Murtaugh girl wins karate belt

MURTAUGH — A 17-year-old Idahoan has become the second girl ever to achieve a second grade brown belt rating in kaju-kumi karate.

Marrone Lattimer, Murtaugh, who is five feet three inches tall and weighs 118 pounds, gained the rank after 2 1/2 years and 250 hours of classwork. She became interested in karate through her brother, who holds a black belt rank.

Marrone hopes to teach the sport at the College of Southern Idaho and is a student of CSI instructor Bob Tidd. She also throws the discus for her high school girls track team.

The only other girl to attain the brown belt rating is another Idahoan, Roz Wagner, Twin Falls.

Airport backer blasts critics

BURLEY — George Forschler, chairman of the Interim Regional Airport Board of Trustees, took "sharp issue" today with critics of the proposal to be decided next Tuesday in an election in eight Magic Valley counties.

Forschler branded claims that Magic Valley residents failed to work together toward formation of a regional airport as "ridiculous and untrue."

"What could we do when the now-famous CH2M report was issued in July 1966, when there were no regional airport statutes on the books?" Forschler explained that in 1966 "there was no legal process provided by law. We had no way to wave over the Idaho Code to produce a regional airport statute."

Reviewing the first introduction of legislation to allow formation of a Regional Airport Authority by Sen. Richard S. High, R-Twin Falls, Forschler said the law had "faulty provisions."

"Twin Falls critics forget that many people in outlying counties held many public meetings and made plans to get the ball rolling, but there was one little joker in the statute —

BURLEY — Burley City finances are back in the black, auditors say.

LaMar Anderson of the firm of Nelson, Sagers, Anderson and King, certified accountants, complimented councilmen Monday night for getting the city "out of a bad situation in past years to a sound financial basis."

He listed a few places in the budget where changes would be made to make it easier to disburse funds.

Councilmen authorized Mayor Garis Robertson to appoint a committee to investigate the problem of livestock on property owned by Larry Boyd and Sid Larson. The men, who have been asked to remove their livestock from the city limits, appealed to the council for help.

They own about 15 acres which joins the Swift feed yards and is used for farming. Larson lives on his property and has some milk cows. Boyd has several horses on his property.

Lax Kunnau, chairman of the Pomerelle ski school which is conducted each February, asked the city to participate financially in the school as it has done in the past. The matter was turned over to the recreation committee.

Mayor Robertson asked if the rural areas and other towns were helping support the school.

"Since children from these other areas attend, I do not think it is fair if Burley is the only one helping with the financing," he said.

Councilmen turned down a request to re-ol the alley north of the new First Security Bank which is under construction. They said the alley was olled and has been torn up in the construction of the building.

In other business, councilmen:

- Heard a report from Councilman Rex Stanley that the Idaho Parks Board has approved $85,000 to enlarge the Burley Golf Course from nine holes to 18 with other improvements on the course.
- Heard a letter from former Gov. Don Samuelson who is now transportation director for Federal District No. 10, offering his services if needed.
- Approved final payment of Gordon Paving Co., Burley, for Local Improvement District No. 17, northeast of Burley, for oiling the streets.
- Approved building and remodeling permits and a taxi license transfer from Gale Bailey to L. F. Dollahyde.

TF driver charged

TWIN FALLS — Delmar Verne Harper, 36, Twin Falls, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident Wednesday morning after his vehicle crashed into two parked vehicles, city police said.

Officers said the Harper automobile collided with a parked automobile in the 400 block of Second Avenue North, forcing it into another parked vehicle. Damage was estimated at $500 to the Harper automobile and $800 and $1,800 to the two parked vehicles.

GOODING — Manning Patterson, Gooding, president of the board of directors of the Southern Idaho Production Credit Association, met in Spokane, Wash., Tuesday and today with 20 other PCA directors for the second annual conference of the 12th District advisory committee of PCAs.

The two day session studied the many facets of agricultural credit problems and tried to seek solutions to better serve farmers with operating capital.

Air pollution 122 index

The pollution reading was taken by the staff of the South Central Health District at the Twin Falls City Hall. The reading is expressed as the number of micrograms of particulate material per cubic meter of air for the 24 hour period ending at 8 a.m. today.

Federal pollution regulations say pollution levels should be kept below 75 micrograms over any 24-hour period, and should not be permitted to rise above 260 micrograms for even shorter period of time.

Today:	Excellent
Tonight:	Excellent
Tomorrow:	Excellent

This forecast provided by the Idaho Department of Health indicates the ability of the atmosphere to disperse pollution.

"pollution burning or certified by law should be curtailed, when the air is partly able to disperse air pollutants."

Hike eyed

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — A hearing was slated today here on a request by the Idaho Water Co. which is seeking an increase in rates for northern Idaho customers.

Tuesday a hearing was held at Kellogg before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission at which residents protested the proposed hikes which could amount to as much as an increase of 100 per cent in their water rates.

Color book distributed

BURLEY — About 700 Cassia County elementary school children have a new textbook. It is a coloring book designed to bring the students and local police departments closer together.

The Albion Four-Leaf Clover Club has been canvassing elementary schools in the county, selling the books to school officials for 40 cents apiece.

"There are no profits out of this for us," Marcella Mahoney, who along with Bethea Chulburn has been visiting the schools, said. "We are doing this as a community service."

The coloring books, 24 pages in size, were created by James D. Miller of the Soda Springs Police Department. With each drawing is a brief verse bringing home to the children the importance of remembering one's own telephone number, being aware of strangers, attending church and taking care to watch for traffic when crossing the street.

The chief message, however, is that policemen are natural friends of children. In one sequence, a child in the book becomes lost while walking home from school, stops by a grocery store to call her parents, and realizes she doesn't remember her telephone number.

A policeman happens by, however, and resolves the difficulty.

In one picture, a grocer tells a student that he will help her get home. "He said he would call a policeman who would come and make things right. They work helping people all the time day and night."

After the books have been distributed, Mrs. Mahoney said, the children will color them and turn them over to local police officials. The books will be judged by police on their coloring skills. Awards will be presented in the classrooms by police officers, who will discuss safety precautions with the youngsters.

Burley Chief of Police Kenneth Barry said he thought the program is "A whole of a good idea." He said representatives of the 4-H club hadn't discussed plans with him recently, but he was pleased they were making the effort.

Club award given

MRS. ROY HONDO 4-H leader, left, congratulates Howard Allred, president of the Cassia County 4-H Builders club, and Susan Kuwana, secretary, for the group's achievement in winning a $25 award from Standard Oil Co. for its Community Pride project. The project, carried out as a cleanup effort this past spring, also won the club a plaque.

Standard Short term interest loans OK'd peg asked

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The head of the world's largest bank said Tuesday the so-called "prime rate" should be abandoned, and all interest rates pegged to a standard determined by supply and demand.

A. W. Clausen, president of Bank of America, said the prime rate — the interest charged a bank's best customers — has received too much attention when it actually applies to relatively few loans. Bankers are currently in a dilemma about the prime rate. They are under pressure to reduce it but fear that because of new economic controls "that may be a one-way street" according to Clausen.

Under the system he advocated, interest rates would be "pegged to the marketplace"

Dream trip ends in death, horror

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—A dream vacation in Mexico turned into horror for a Norman, Okla., woman Monday night in thick storm clouds over Tucson, Ariz.

Robert Delafield and his wife, Elaine, were flying back to their home from a week's vacation in Hermosillo when Delafield suffered a heart attack at the controls of his Cessna 172.

Mrs. Delafield, unable to revive her husband, called for help on the plane's radio. She can fly the plane but had never flown at night and was unfamiliar with the area around Tucson.

Her pleas were heard by a training crew from the German Lufthansa Airlines, which has a training base at Tucson Airport.

The German pilots notified the Tucson tower and continued to relay messages between the woman and the tower until she came into range of the tower's radio receivers.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The $10,000 income figure may become the median income line among all U.S. families. A new 10-year survey shows that 25.5 million of the more than 61.9 million families in the nation had incomes of $10,000 or more in 1970. That's 49.13 per cent. The study was conducted by Meinhard-Commercial Corporation, a financing and factoring firm, which analyzed government data to reach its conclusions.

Commissioner visits boys
OSCAR ARSTEIN, Idaho Commissioner of Agriculture, shakes hands with boys from the Idaho Youth Ranch, Rupert, in the potato field of Orvin Jenks, 14 miles southwest of Burley. They were hired to hand pick the spuds from the experimental field.

Test field of potatoes undergoes hand picking

By GEORGIA LAYTON
Times-News Writer

BURLEY—In contrast to widespread mechanization of harvesting operations, a field of potatoes on the Orvin Jenks farm 14 miles southwest of Burley is being hand picked.

The reason? This is a special research field which has undergone tests all year long, according to Bob Callihan, Aberdeen Extension Experiment Station who directed the digging.

He said it was decided to hire boys from the Idaho Youth Ranch to pick the spuds after school along with other persons who could pick all day to avoid any bruising of the crop.

Results of the tests made on the plot will be made public in potato schools held this winter by the extension service.

The project is a joint effort to gain information for potato growers. The land, care and water for the project was donated by the grower and tests throughout the growing season were made by personnel from the Aberdeen station.

Some of the questions which should be answered are what herbicides used gave the best weed control, amount of dosages, how much the potato vines can tolerate, best ways of administering herbicides and results and how much herbicide is left in the soil and its effect on the following crop.

Funds for the project were provided by the University of Idaho School of Agriculture and experimental service and the Idaho Potato Commission.

Angus ranch holds sale

JEROME—Eighty outstanding Angus bulls and heifers will go on sale Nov. 6 at the Mon Repos Emulous Angus Ranch southwest of Jerome, ranch owners A. F. Patterson and Sons announced today.

The sale, one of the largest private breeder production sales in the state, will offer 35 bulls and 45 females. Many are the offspring or closely related to Idaho's first certified meat sire, Mon Repos Big John.

This bull, one of the reference animals for the sale, sold for $14,200 earlier this year by the Mon Repos owners. He was purchased by four Oregon Angus breeders for use in their herds.

Patterson is offering a half interest and half possession in Mon Repos John, III, a full brother to Big John. The bull was calved a year ago and had a yearling weight of 1,139 lbs.

Mon Repos John 940, sired by Big John will be offered with the buyer taking a two-thirds interest and full possession. Several other offspring of Big John will be offered for full ownership.

Prospective buyers and other interested persons may inspect the animals at 10 a.m. with lunch in the barns beginning at 11 a.m.

The sale will be conducted at the Mon Repos Ranch, southwest of Jerome and sale catalogues have been published and are available for prospective buyers by writing A. F. Patterson and Sons, Route 2, Jerome.

Idaho's harvest advances

BOISE (UPI)—As of Oct. 1, harvest was nearing completion in Idaho for all crops except potatoes and sugar beets, according to the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The 1970 spring wheat crop in Idaho is estimated at 14.8 million bushels, unchanged from a month ago. The Idaho corn for grain crop is estimated at 2.95 million bushels, up from the 2.43 million harvested last year.

All hay production in Idaho is estimated at 3.8 million tons, down four per cent from last year but up one per cent from 1969. Production of dry beans is expected to total 1.98 million hundredweight, unchanged from a month earlier and slightly up from last year's production.

The Idaho sugar beet production is placed at 3.1 million tons, up four per cent from last year but down five per cent from 1969. Idaho potato production is forecast at 76.15 million hundredweight, two per cent above last year's record crop of 74.66 million hundredweight.

Harvest weather during the past week was ideal and considerable progress was made in getting late season crops out of the fields.

Cattle have been mostly moved from summer ranges and weaning of calves is in progress.

Murtaugh girl is honored

MURTAUGH—An 11-year-old Murtaugh girl, Julie Breeding, has been honored by the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Assn. as having completed the most outstanding 4-H beef breeding project in the district this year.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert (Bud) Breeding, Murtaugh, she entered a Hereford heifer in the Twin Falls County Fair where she won top honors and then went on to win a similar rating in the district fair in Jerome. Julie will keep the heifer for additional 4-H project work and for breeding.

She received a large trophy from Larry Lickley, Jerome, association secretary, as part of the cattlemen's program to encourage better quality beef production. The association annually presents the trophy to the outstanding young beef breeder of the area. Lickley says beef production of the future depends on today's young producers and 4-H programs are contributing to good practices.

Award presented
BEEF PRODUCTION, 4-H style, earned Julie Breeding, 11, Murtaugh, a trophy from the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Assn., presented here by Larry Lickley, Jerome. Her Hereford beef breeding project was judged the best in the district.

Child deaths

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Most Michigan children who die between the ages of one and 19 are killed violently, not by disease, reports State Public Health Director Maurice Reizen.

"These deaths are attributed to accidents at home, at school and on the roads," Reizen said. "We find that if a child manages to survive his first year of life, the second greatest danger comes when he is 15 to 19. The major cause of death for these youngsters include motor vehicle crashes, other accidents, homicides and suicides."

School lunches to needy kids

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The administration Monday rescinded a controversial regulation that critics said would have denied free or low-priced school lunches to as many as 1.3 million needy children.

By bowing to White House orders and heavy congressional pressure, the Agriculture Department adopted a new rule stating that free or cut-rate lunches will be available to all youngsters meeting state eligibility standards.

A few hours later, the House approved, 354 to 0, a bill directing the Agriculture Department to include in its school lunch program the children who would have been cut off under the rescinded regulation. The Senate has passed a similar measure earlier this month.

"This resolution is still necessary," said Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., manager of the measure. "The department's language is somewhat fuzzy. We want to make it clear that Congress intends that every needy child shall share in this program."

Problems facing Wendell listed

BY MYRTLE SCHRENK
Times-News Writer

WENDELL — Wendell is experiencing growing pains, Mayor Eugene Soares said Tuesday, urging voters to consider carefully when they vote for councilmen Nov. 2.

Seven men are running for the three posts. Vernon Mason, an appointee; Ed McNutt and Ben Morgan are vying for the two-year term, while Francis Goble, Russell Carpenter, Harold Simerly and Glenn Harmsen have filed for the two four-year terms. Dale Bitterli is the holdover member.

Mayor Soares said the existing sewer system is antiquated because of population growth and change in regulations by the Department of Health. The costs involved in solving the sewer problems are being studied, the mayor said.

The city also is faced with the utilization of a new well for domestic use. During the past year a pumphouse was completed but a holding tank and hook up into the water mains must be made before the new facility can be used. Cost would be about $50,000, he said.

Other issues in the municipal election include law enforcement, regulating the uniform building codes so it does not create hardship for those persons planning additions or improvements and irrigation water assessments. The dog leash problem will be decided by the voters in a special ballot, Nov. 2.

Mayor Soares said during his tenure of office Main Street has been resurfaced and painted, improvements have been made at the city park including a covered pavilion, playground equipment, sidewalks, restroom improvement and an underground sprinkling system will be installed during the coming year.

Mason, one of the candidates for the two-year term, is owner-operator of a small construction company and does land leveling and other jobs with heavy equipment. A native of Wendell, he served in the Navy during the Korean war, and belongs to the American Legion, VFW and the Wood River Resource Area Association.

Ed McNutt, whose picture was not available, has lived in Wendell most of his life and is a former councilman. He is self-employed as a contractor and owns an office building in the city's business district.

The third candidate for the post, Ben Morgan, also is a previous councilman and has lived in Wendell for the past 12 years and is in the contracting business with his sons.

An avid sportsman, he is interested in young people and is Scoutmaster for Troop 95. He also belongs to the Wendell Boosters, Lions Club American Legion and the Presbyterian church. He came to Wendell from Washington where he attended Washington State College.

Goble has lived in Wendell since 1939. He is employed by Ida Gem Creamery in Jerome and belongs to the Masonic lodge.

Carpenter has lived here the past three years, but is a former resident. He was employed by the late Charles Gates as a contractor in 1946. He now is employed by the Cowles Publishing Co., Spokane, Wash., as sales supervisor of Idaho and part of Washington.

He belongs to the Disabled American Veterans, Masonic and Eastern Star lodges and the Presbyterian church.

Simerly is assistant manager of Simerly's Market and has lived in Wendell the past 20 years. He served in the navy for four and one-half years.

The candidate is a director for the Wendell Chamber of Commerce, an officer in the American Legion and secretary-treasurer of the Wendell city and rural volunteer fire department.

Harmsen has lived in the community for 13 years and farmed before he retired and moved into town. A World War I veteran, he is a past officer of the American Legion and Veteran of World War I.

Dog leash law vote set Nov. 2

WENDELL — Voters in the Nov. 2 Wendell City election will also decide whether or not the city should adopt a dog leash law.

They also will be asked if the law should apply for nine months or the entire year.

Mrs. Gwen Collett, city clerk, reports that about 500 voters are presently registered. She said many voters are confusing county and city registration. To be registered for the city election a voter must be registered at the city offices. The city of Wendell is just one precinct.

Anyone who has not registered may do so during regular office hours Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. On Oct. 28-30 the office will be open an additional two hours from 7-9 p.m.

The clerk said that absentee ballots are now available. Judges and clerks for the election appointed by city councilmen are Jang Petersen, Willa Caldwell, Myrtle Toole, Florence Nielson, Emma Colman and Jim Lee, constable.

The polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. Nov. 2.

MRS. BETTE HECKERT, Twin Falls, kindergarten teacher in the Wendell Elementary school, gives Jennie Miller a name tag at the newly opened kindergarten class, the first such class in Magic Valley under the new state program which provides funds for the teacher's salary.

New little pig

WENDELL — The newest business in Wendell is the "Little Pig Cafe," located on the west side of Idaho Street, north of town. The owner operators are Steve and Oda Sturtevant.

The cafe features businessmen's luncheons and special evening dinners.

Asked about the unusual name of their cafe, Sturtevant said that for the past several years he has made a hobby of collecting miniature pigs made of plaster, glass and wood and when he decided to go into the restaurant business in Wendell, a nephew suggested the name to him.

The Sturtevants have lived in the area only a short time but are enthusiastic about the response of the people to their new business.

Tot class opens

WENDELL — First kindergarten in Magic Valley under the new state program went into effect Monday in the Wendell elementary school.

Wendell kindergarten initiates new program

WENDELL — First kindergarten in Magic Valley under the new state program went into effect Monday in the Wendell elementary school.

About 50 pre-schoolers have enrolled so far, Arlin Dennis, principal, said. They are divided into two classes, with half the children coming from 8:30 to 11 a.m. and the other half in the afternoon class from 12:30 to 3 p.m.

The classes are taught by Mrs. Bette Heckert, Twin Falls, whose husband, John Heckert, is the distributive education teacher in the Twin Falls High School.

The kindergarten classes are held in a room which was available in the elementary school.

Mrs. Heckert was hired after the school board formally approved the kindergarten program last week. Supt. Lawrence LaRue said he received applications from qualified kindergarten teachers from Arizona and Illinois, as well as several from the Magic Valley area.

The state provides salary for the one kindergarten teacher, and LaRue said school officials are hopeful of obtaining funds for a teacher's aide, but if not, student help will be used.

The classes are scheduled so that students in each of the classes can ride the school bus one way, LaRue said.

Milk is provided for snacks for the children and mothers are providing cookies.

School officials say they expect about 60 first graders next fall on the basis of a survey made. Only about 10 families did not take advantage of the new class, Dennis said.

Farmers event slated Nov. 11

WENDELL — The Sixth annual Farmers night banquet, sponsored by the Wendell Chamber of Commerce, will be held Nov. 11 at the Elementary school all-purpose room.

Clyde Petersen, chairman, said the dinner will be catered and the method of serving has been changed to accommodate a large crowd. The event has been successful in past years in promoting better relations between ranchers and farmers of the area, he said.

Committee members are making efforts to contact all farmers twice before the dinner, but anyone who would like to attend and is not contacted, is welcome.

The program is designed for men only, said Charles Ireton, program director.

Agnew cheered at ancestral home

GARGAGLIANOI, Greece (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was cheered by virtually all the 8,000 residents of his ancestral home Tuesday and hailed by schoolchildren as "the greatest Greek."

Thousands of Greek adults and school children from nearby villages also mobbed the American vice president as he paid a sentimental visit to the small town in southern Peloponnese where his father was born.

Agnew went to his family's ancestral gravesite, unveiled a plaque recording his visit for posterity, planted an olive tree and lunched with town leaders before flying to Heraklion, Crete, his next stop on a five-day private trip.

Schools let out for the day and about 500 students cheered wildly when the vice president planted the olive tree in front of the local library.

"They said they want him to become president," said Mrs. Ireni Krimbakou, the gym teacher. "They consider him the greatest Greek."

Agnew arrived on a U.S. Marine helicopter at the village soccer field and was greeted by Mayor Dionysios Panagopoulos.

"It was at my father's knees that I learned of this town and of the ancient Greek culture," Agnew said. "He was a man of dedication and great principles and I only wish he could return with us."

Agnew's father, Theoforastos Anagnostopoulos, was born here in 1877 but emigrated in 1907 to the United States. He has since died.

The vice president placed a wreath of red carnations and gladioli and prayed at his ancestral grave site.

Sixth suspect sought in Virginia slaying

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Police sought a sixth suspect Tuesday in the bizarre slaying of an Arlington, Va., housewife whose husband, a retired naval officer, reported the murder and then was arrested along with four alleged extortionists.

Robert L. Ammidown, 49, told police Oct. 1 that his wife, Linda, was abducted from the couple's car after they had dined at a Washington waterfront restaurant and was later raped and shot to death.

A task force of 18 detectives worked around the clock on the case but no arrests were made until Sunday when Ammidown, an economist with the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), was charged with murder.

Police then disclosed an alleged plot that involved three unemployed laborers, a woman and another man who is still free. The laborers, police said, were approached earlier this year by a man who wanted to have his wife killed.

The men agreed at first but then backed out, claiming the price was not high enough. The three men decided to blackmail Ammidown after reading that Mrs. Ammidown, 47, had been killed, police said.

The men then enlisted the aid of a woman who called Ammidown's office to arrange the alleged extortion. Ammidown was not in because he

Nominations expected this week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon still plans to send two nominations for Supreme Court vacancies to the Senate this week, the White House said Tuesday.

The word that Nixon still is sticking by his plan to make his choices this week for the seats left vacant by the resignations of Justices Hugo L. Black and John M. Harlan came from White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler after the President's weekly meeting with Republican congressional leaders.

Health insurance regulation asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration said Tuesday it would ask Congress to authorize federal regulation of private health insurance companies to ensure fair priced, dependable, high quality coverage for nearly all Americans.

Secretary Elliot L. Richardson of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said this would be sought as part of the administration's plans for expanded health insurance coverage by requiring all employers to provide insurance plans and pay most of the premiums.

Testifying at the opening hearings before the House Ways and Means Committee, Richardson said HEW would ask Congress for legislation requiring the states to meet federal standards in regulating health insurance companies. These firms are now regulated by states without any federal guidelines.

HEW's proposals, said Richardson, "will effectively protect the consumer against unwarranted cost inflation and ensure maintenance of quality in both health insurance and health care services."

The administration plan, which would provide free insurance to the poor, would apply to those persons and their families not under the medicare program for the elderly. The two programs combined, Richardson said, would guarantee health insurance to 95 per cent of the population.

Angels trying to lure Oriole general manager

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Baltimore Orioles have finally cleared the way for Harry Dalton, baseball's "Executive of the Year" in 1970, to become the new general manager of the California Angels.

The Angels had asked permission earlier to talk with Dalton, vice president and director of player personnel with the Orioles, but had been turned down by Jerold C. Hoffberger, the Orioles' owner and chairman of the board.

Now the Angels have permission and Dalton undoubtedly will succeed Dick Walsh as general manager of the California club.

The 41-year-old Dalton, considered one of baseball's brightest and most successful executives, had been scheduled to leave with the Orioles tomorrow for a post-season tour of Japan but he will not leave with them.

He was busy as usual at his desk in Baltimore Tuesday, working on the Orioles' reserve list and making the final decision on which players in the farm system to protect, and declined to say anything about his moving over to the Angels.

"I can not say anything at this point," said Dalton.

However, the UPI has learned that the Angels will make another strong bid for Dalton's services and he probably will accept their offer.

"Harry Dalton has been given the right to consider anything which he might regard as advantageous to him elsewhere in baseball," said Hoffberger. "This was done in consideration for Harry."

Walsh has a term contract with the Angels calling for $55,000 a year. He claims it is a seven year contract and has four years to run. The Angels insist it has only two more years to go.

Dalton, who receives an estimated $38,500 from the Orioles, made the deals which brought them Frank Robinson from the Reds, Don Buford from the White Sox, Pete Richert from the Senators, Mike Cuellar from the Astros and Pat Dobson from the Padres among others.

Hoffberger and Dalton conferred following the series loss to Pittsburgh and Dalton was offered a raise plus a promotion.

"We have in the hours since the end of the world series finalized an offer to Harry relative to changes in his duties and an increase in responsibility," Hoffberger said. "That offer now is being considered by him."

The Orioles' owner said if Dalton decides to remain with the Orioles he will assume the duties of the executive vice president now being handled by Frank Cashen. If Dalton stayed on, Cashen would leave the Orioles for another post with the National Brewing Co., owned by the Hoffberger family, but Cashen still would remain a member of the ball club's executive committee and board of directors.

Weaver inks new Oriole contract

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Earl Weaver, who has managed the Baltimore Orioles to three successive American League pennants, signed a new contract Tuesday for the 1972 season.

Weaver, 41, took over when Hank Bauer was fired in July 1968. Under him, the Orioles have won 366 games and lost 106.

Baltimore has won more than 100 regular season games and swept the American League playoffs each of the last three seasons, but was beaten in the 1969 and 1971 World Series by the New York Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hurry Dalton, the club's vice president and director of player personnel, announced Weaver's signing but did not reveal the terms.

Mathis works out for press

NEW YORK (UPI)—Buster Mathis, who faces Muhammad Ali in Houston's Astrodome on Nov. 17, worked out for the press Tuesday and appeared fairly fit at only 255 pounds.

"The fight itself is easy," the good natured 6-3 1/4 giant smiled. "I saw Ali last week down in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, and all I can say is that I'll be in shape and he better get in shape."

All, according to Mathis, was puffing like the old steam engine after two rounds during the Jersey exhibition, and "if he's in that kind of shape for me over 12 rounds in Houston, well...and Buster grinned again.

On Tuesday, Mathis worked against Jimmy Young, a 190 pounder from Philadelphia whose best asset was his speed of foot. Mathis chased him throughout the drill, and then said: "I'm firmly convinced I can win against Ali. My mental attitude couldn't be better."

Lakers stay undefeated

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain and Gail Goodrich powered Los Angeles to a big early lead and the undefeated Lakers cruised on to crush the Buffalo Braves, 123-106, Tuesday night for their third straight National Basketball Association victory of the season.

Chamberlain, crowding to the inside for layups and dunks, and Goodrich, firing away from 20 feet, scored nine points each as the Lakers piled up a 31-19 lead in the first 11 minutes.

Missing 11 free throws in 13 tries, Chamberlain finished with just 20 points, but he got Buffalo's seven-foot, one-inch rookie Elmore Smith in early foul trouble to give the Lakers a big edge off the backboards. Los Angeles captured 61 rebounds and Buffalo only 46.

White, Celts drop Bullets

BOSTON (UPI)—JoJo White scored 28 points Tuesday night in leading the Boston Celtics to their first win of the new season, a 134-114 victory over the Baltimore Bullets.

The Celtics jumped out to an early 34-23 first period lead which they never relinquished in evening their season mark at 1-1.

Leading all scorers was Baltimore's Earl Monroe with 28 points. Jack Marin of Baltimore trailed White in the scoring column with 24 points.

Boston outscored the Bullets in every period but the second which they dropped 29-26.

Roomies-or how to grow quarterback

CHICAGO (UPI)—Injuries to Chicago Bears Jack Concannon and Kent Nix not only made Bobby Douglass the quarterback but also provided him a new roommate.

Bears Coach Jim Dooley abandoned his pretty wife and pleasant family to move in with Douglass this week so that the signal caller can get a cram course in quarterbacking.

Douglass played in only one game last year, breaking his arm, and has been in only one game this year, after injuries put the Bears' two other quarterbacks on the sidelines.

This week it's Douglass to quarterback against the Detroit Lions, or no one.

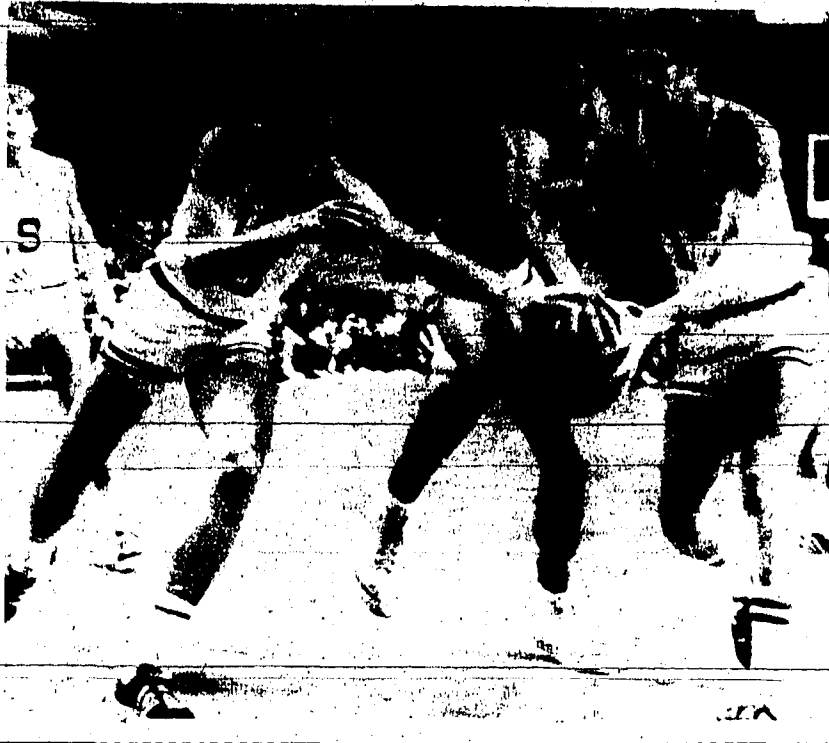

"We have to do a little extra work," Douglass said. "I'll learn why he thinks the way he does and that way it will be easier to execute."

The only uncertainty in the arrangement for Dooley to share Douglass' apartment, Douglass said, was who will do the cooking.

Both men knew they would be talking and thinking football the rest of the time.

Bucks blast Cavs 116-82

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)—The Milwaukee Bucks weren't even pressed Tuesday night as they walloped the Cleveland Cavaliers 116-82 in a National Basketball Association game and continued their near invincibility at the Milwaukee Arena.

Who's dribbling?

TANGLED UP, Celtics' Dave Cowens, left, Bullets' Dorie Murray, center, and John Havlicek knot up on the basketball. It wound up a jump as the Celtics went on to take 134-114 victory. (UPI telephoto)

Giants' woes hiked by poor player-coach communications

NEW YORK (UPI)—As if the stumbling New York Giants didn't have enough problems,

BSC, Weber ranked in UPI poll

NEW YORK (UPI)—The University of Delaware surged to the top of the United Press International Board of Coaches Small College Ratings today as North Dakota State lost not only its national supremacy but also its own state's top honors.

Delaware, which lurled major college Rutgers, 48-7, picked up 25 first place votes from the 34 of the 35 coaches participating in the balloting and outdistanced Tampa 313 points to 260.

North Dakota State, which had led the nation since preseason, saw its 35-game unbeaten streak snapped by intrastate rival North Dakota, 23-7, tumbled all the way down to eighth place. North Dakota, previously unranked by the coaches, was just two points back in ninth place.

Tampa, which got two first place nods, was followed in third place by Eastern Michigan which struggled to a 0-0 tie with Eastern Kentucky. Undefeated Akron (5-0) got three first place votes and moved up from ninth to fourth.

Undefeated McNeese State (6-0), which received two first place votes, made the week's biggest jump, moving up from 13th to fifth and Southern Illinois improved from a tie for 11th to the No. 8 spot after whipping Ball State 33-8.

Grambling rebounded from 10th to seventh after beating Mississippi Valley 25-15 and following North Dakota State and North Dakota was Western Kentucky completing the top 10. The Hilltoppers, 15-7 victors over Tennessee Tech, improved from 15th.

Weber State, which saw its perfect record blemished with a 21-21 tie with Montana State fell from seventh down to 11th and Eastern Kentucky was 12th after its 0-0 standoff with Eastern Michigan.

now the club is worrying about a lack of communication.

Couch Alex Webster said Tuesday that several matters have to be straightened out but he admitted, "If this keeps happening, we're going to be in trouble."

What happened was the Giant coach was embarrassed twice Sunday—when defensive coach Norb Hecker made several changes in the lineup Webster said was going to start on Friday and when Spider Lockhart popped off about the Giant coach after he was pulled from the game.

Lockhart, yanked with about four minutes left in the third period of the Giants' 31-7 loss to Baltimore, didn't think he was playing badly enough to be pulled and also was infuriated that none of the coaches told him why he was pulled.

Lockhart huddled with the Giant coach Tuesday and the freed safety—considered to be the Giants' best defensive player—said the matter was straightened out. "There's no problem," Lockhart said, "we thought we had a problem but we found out we don't. I'm not saying he was wrong but we made an adjustment. I didn't play up to par but I didn't think I was playing that bad."

Webster said, "something should have been said to him when he was taken out. I'll buy that. He's right, he's 100 per cent right. I'm not going to argue his point."

Lockhart was pulled in the midst of a Baltimore drive after he missed a tackle on a Norm Bulalch reverse. The Giant coaches said he also made several other mistakes in the game. Lockhart said it was the first time he's ever been yanked during a game.

Webster said Hecker told him

Lockhart was playing poorly and Webster replied, "if he's not doing the job, take him out of there."

Defending his decision, Webster said, "Lockhart's as human as everybody else. I can't blame him or anybody else. I'm not saying I was 100 per cent right. Maybe I was more wrong than right. But you have to make a decision in the heat of the game and you hope you make more right ones than wrong ones. I just wish he would have come and talked to me after the game."

Webster was also getting some flack because several of the players he said on Friday would start wound up on the bench Sunday. A notable example was at cornerback where Bennie McRae started instead of rookie Pete Athas, who'd played the last two games while McRae was injured.

Athas said he knew in the middle of the week he wouldn't start while Webster said on Friday Athas would start.

McRae wound up starting and was beaten on a pair of touchdown passes.

Webster said Athas wasn't working in practice with the second string because, "there was no predetermined who would start. We just run players in and out in practice."

But Webster defended Hecker's use of McRae. "I can see why Norb wanted to start McRae. He's the veteran. And McRae wasn't that bad against Baltimore. People say Athas was so good against St. Louis but they didn't throw many passes his way. It's beyond me why St. Louis didn't work on him."

Webster, though, does feel he should "stay in closer communication with my assistant coaches."

COPY EDITORS on newspapers sometimes "blue pencil" words and phrases and sentences. Meaning they delete same. That term "blue pencil" has been in our jargon for generations. You know that. But did you know copy editors haven't used blue pencils? Only heavy black pencils. Now a few newspapers are installing special scanning equipment which requires said copy editors to use blue pencils, not black. After all these years, we're finally catching up with our lingo.

Soviets at sea

RUSSIAN SUBMARINE of 5,000 ton Echo II class plowed through North Pacific Ocean during fleet exercises conducted in past few weeks. Photo was released by U. S. Defense Department at same time as report that Russian flotilla off American Atlantic seaboard is being watched by U. S. forces. Sub carries eight missiles and has crew of about 100 men. Similar underwater craft are reported with Atlantic flotilla, believed headed toward Cuba. (UPI)

Supreme Court agrees to hear baseball's anti-trust lawsuit

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to consider whether professional baseball should be subject to antitrust laws, and set aside a ruling that trying a defendant in jail clothes creates an unfair impression of guilt.

The justices will hear an appeal this term by former St. Louis Cardinal centerfielder Curt Flood, who has charged that baseball's "reserve clause" subjects a player to virtual slavery. The court's decision could have profound implications on the structure of the sport, which is now exempt from laws prohibiting restraint of trade.

Under baseball's reserve clause, a player is bound to one team until that team disposes of his contract in one way or another. Without this clause, a player would be free to negotiate with any team he wished after each season. Cancellation of the clause would require a complete reorganization of professional baseball and this could mean that rich clubs would get most of the best players.

Professional football uses a slightly different system, called "the one year option." When a player and a team cannot agree on a contract, it is automatically extended for one year and then the player is free to negotiate elsewhere.

In 1922, the Supreme Court ruled in a Baltimore case that professional baseball was exempt from antitrust laws, and affirmed this ruling on 1953 in a New York Yankees case. Flood brought suit after the Cardinals tried to trade him to Philadelphia at the end of the 1969 season. Flood refused and sat out the 1970 season. He played briefly with the Washington Senators at the start of this season, but his batting eye was way off and he left the team and went to Europe.

The court's decision to look at baseball's antitrust status came amidst rumblings, prompted by the move of the American League Senators from Washington to Dallas-Fort Worth, that perhaps Congress should investigate baseball's operation. Sen. Leo J. Ervin Jr., D-S.C., and Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., have introduced bills to end baseball's antitrust immunity. The prison garb case could trigger pleas by other defendants who were found guilty in trials in which they wore jail clothes.

The Supreme Court refused to review a ruling by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court that Juan D. Hernandez of Houston, Tex., should be set free or given a new trial because he was dressed in a T-shirt and khaki dungarees stamped "County Jail" during his first trial.

In its April ruling, the 5th Circuit Court said: "It is inherently unfair to try a defendant for a crime while garbed in his jail uniform, especially when his civilian clothing is at hand. No insinuations, indications or implications suggesting guilt should be displayed before the jury, other than admissible evidence and permissible argument."

Economic control asked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon sent Congress proposed legislation Tuesday for his post-freeze economic controls, including a request for authority to lift controls selectively once inflation is broken in a particular industry.

Most of the legal authority sought by the President would be invested in the full-time chairmen of the pay board and the price commission, whose members were expected to be named on Wednesday. The White House said both probably would hold their first meetings by this weekend.

The bill basically would extend Nixon's authority to control wages and prices until May 1, 1973, and would add standby authority to impose controls on dividends and interest rates at the President's discretion.

Treasury Undersecretary Charles E. Walker told newsmen the year-long extension of control authority past next April 30 did not necessarily mean that Phase II controls would last that long.

Post-freeze controls starting Nov. 14 would be maintained "long enough to break the back of inflationary expectations and make meaningful progress toward bringing down the cost of living," Walker said.

By "meaningful progress," Walker said he meant a substantial decline in the rate of increase in the cost of living, now averaging about 4.7 percent for the year.

As expected, the bill would create a special court of appeals of three or more U.S. district or circuit court judges designated by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger to handle appeals of Pay Board or Price Commission decisions. The new court's rulings could be appealed directly to the Supreme Court.

The wage and price panels would be given subpoena powers. Violations of its guidelines for increases would be subject to a civil penalty of $2,500. Present law provides a criminal fine of $5,000, but the government prefers civil prosecution as easier to win.

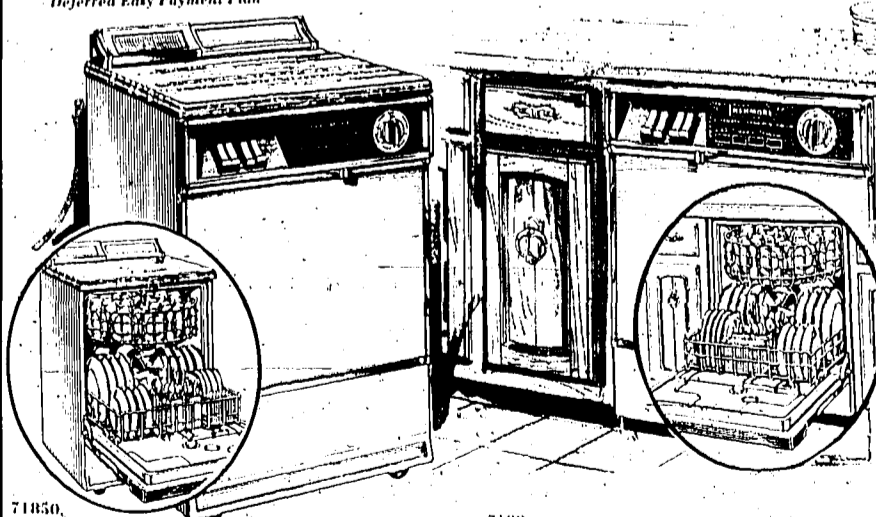

Hernandez was found guilty in Houston in 1963 of drunken-driving murder in the death of a 12-year-old boy whose bicycle he had struck with his car. Because he had two previous convictions for theft, he was automatically sentenced to life in prison.

The Supreme Court's action Tuesday was a refusal to hear an appeal by the state of Texas from the 5th Circuit ruling.
