

Marijuana 'not harmless,' US panel reports

By CRAIG A. PALMER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse today recommended removal of federal and state restrictions against the personal possession and private use of marijuana, but said pot is not harmless and its use should be discouraged.

"Throughout the commission's deliberations there was a recurring awareness of the possibility that marijuana use may be a bad habit, if not institutionalized, will recede substantially in time," the 13-member panel said in the first of two scheduled reports to President Nixon and Congress. It will report next year on drug abuse in general.

The report, "Marijuana: A Signal of Misunderstanding," recommends a policy of confinement of marijuana to the home and official discouragement of its use.

It also said intermittent or experimental use of marijuana carried only a minimal risk to public health and in general the whole controversy has ballooned out of proportion.

The panel, chaired by Raymond P. Shafer, the former governor of Pennsylvania, appeared to strike a middle path between those who want complete legalization of marijuana, and those, such as the President, who categorically oppose its legalization.

Nixon told a news conference in May that "Even if the commission does recommend that it be legalized, I will not follow that recommendation."

Today's report said: "The states have primary responsibility for enforcing the existing prescriptions against possession for personal use. Their present efforts are designed mainly to keep marijuana use contained and in private.

"Such an enforcement policy is consistent with our social policy approach... so while we see no need for criminal sanctions against possession for personal use or against casual transfers, we recommend a number of provisions for confining marijuana use to the home."

House set for crime code fight

By RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE (UPI) — With most key revenue and appropriations bills out of the way, the House headed for a showdown on the criminal code this afternoon which could determine when this legislature goes home.

Both parties held caucuses in the House this morning on what to do about the two versions of the criminal code — the revised "new" code introduced Tuesday night and the revised "old" code passed earlier by the Senate.

Democrats decide they would suspend rules for consideration of both proposals this afternoon. Because it takes two-thirds of the membership to suspend rules that meant the action would have to wait until afternoon.

While some House leaders said they still hoped to complete the legislative work and adjourn sine die today it seemed unlikely. Thursday appeared to be a better guess, although anything can happen in the final moments of a legislative session.

Final adjournment may depend on criminal code the House decides to accept. If it picks the revised "new" code over the revised "old" code it could be headed for a stalemate with the Senate that could prolong this second regular session of the 41st Legislature.

Senators passed the "old" code and then sent along some afterthought amendments to clean up ambiguities and archaic language. A revised version of the "new" code was introduced in the House Tuesday night with endorsement from the commissioners of the Idaho State Bar.

But when leadership of the House made it clear they wanted the 105-page new revision printed Chairman Walter E. Little, R-New Plymouth, bolted and resigned as head of the Printing Committee.

Little said he felt printing of the bill simply would be a waste of time and money and "prolong" this session of the legislature which, today, began its 73rd day.

Speaker William J. Lanting, R-Holliester, accepted the resignation with regret and the House went on with its business — the Printing Committee taking up the new code revision immediately after adjournment for the day.

In a seven-page letter to the speaker, Bar Commission President Eugene C. Thomas of Boise endorsed the new revision on behalf of the bar commissioners. Noting it would be an interim code expiring Nov. 30, 1973, he called it the "preferred course" for the state and outlined 12 specific areas of accomplishment it contains.

Because the legislature has enacted and the governor has signed a bill to repeal the controversial new criminal code on April 1, the legislature must enact a replacement before going home. Otherwise, the state will be without a criminal code.

Meantime, faint hopes of approving legislation to provide 100 per cent state funding of the public schools lingered in the dying moments of this session. The Senate planned to look at amendments to a House-approved bill. These would lower the percentage somewhat and would delay its enactment until next year.

Vacation?

TWIN FALLS — Leon Smith, prosecuting attorney for Twin Falls County, thinks he may have a vacation coming.

A sign on his door today reads, "Unless they do something in Boise, this office will be closed after April 1."

April 1 is the date the new criminal code becomes void, but the legislature has not yet adopted the old code and its amendments.

Muskie sweeps Illinois votes

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie revived his faltering Democratic presidential campaign in Tuesday's Illinois primary, taking more than 60 per cent of the vote over Eugene J. McCarthy.

Muskie headed for the next big showdown in Wisconsin saying, "This has the taste of a clear-cut victory."

But there was little or no taste of victory for Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago, the Democratic party kingmaker.

His candidate for the pivotal post of Cook County state's attorney was soundly whipped by the man Daley had dumped as an endorsed candidate, incumbent Edward V. Hanrahan. And his choice for the gubernatorial nomination, Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, was trailing maverick anti-Daleyite Daniel Walker.

A massive crossover of Republican voters to the Democratic primary appeared to be the key factor in threatening Daley with a defeat which could grievously affect his stature as the Democrat who calls the shots in Illinois and speaks loudly in the councils of the national party.

But for Maine's Muskie, badly needing a comeback victory after his Florida fiasco, it was not only "a solid victory" but a double one.

In separate voting for 160 national convention delegates at stake, his candidates had an impressive lead over those of his chief rival in this race, Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D.

The rundown of the voting in Illinois:

With 10,195 of the state's 10,858 precincts counted, Muskie led McCarthy in the nonbinding preferential balloting with 709,922 votes or 63 per cent to 411,937 votes and 37 per cent.

With 8,010 precincts reporting, returns indicated Muskie had 60 delegates pledged or favoring him against McGovern's 14. Both Muskie and McGovern conceded about 80 of the 160 at stake to an "uncommitted" slate committed to the wishes of Daley.

Returns from 10,343 precincts showed Walker, who coined the phrase "Police Riot" in the "Walker Report" on the 1968 Democratic convention disorders, leading Simon, 693,751 votes and 51 per cent to 659,006 votes and 49 per cent.

Puntney claims rejected

JEROME — The Jerome City Council rejected a claim for $5,000 damages by former chief of police C. H. Puntney.

The council Tuesday night read the claim filed by S. A. Kolman on behalf of Puntney asking for the damages on the grounds that because the council did not reappoint Puntney, and because of innuendos and allegations made by certain members of the council against Puntney, he has been unable to obtain work in the law enforcement field.

The council rejected the claim by three votes, Councilman St. N. (Shorty) Weeks having been excused from the meeting. It was pointed out at the meeting that the claim has been turned over to the insurance company.

Tax reform drive opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that the graduated income tax has eroded to the point that the average $50,000-a-year executive pays taxes at the same rate as his $9,000-a-year secretary, a dozen Democratic senators Tuesday opened a new campaign for tax reform.

Led by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., they introduced in the Senate a bill to attack 11 tax "loopholes" and designed to increase the taxes of the rich by $16 billion.

They said that money could be passed along to low and middle-income families to relieve the burden of rising property taxes. President Nixon also wants to make possible the reduction of property taxes, but his expected solution is the imposition of a value-added tax (VAT).

TF health case heard

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Authority of a state-created district to demand specific amounts of money from counties within the district was argued today.

The arguments were presented before the Idaho Supreme Court in proceedings brought by the District 5 Health Board of the State Department of Health. It is asking for an alternative writ of mandate against the Twin Falls County commissioners.

Torn Nelson, arguing for the health district, said the basic issue is if a county has the power to "run the affairs of the health district."

He said the health board's budget committee, made up of county commissioners from all counties in the district, approved a $1.66 per capita assessment for county support of the district. He said all counties of the state are in districts and all districts have the same power.

Twin Falls County, under the $1.66 per capita levy, would have required a $60,400 health budget but instead budgeted $51,000 for the district.

Douglas Kramer, arguing for the county commissioners, said the state law creating the health districts is unconstitutional and gives the boards power to organize and collect taxes without a vote from the taxpayers.

He emphasized the "per capita" fee of $1.66 is still paid in full by the property owners and thus is a property tax. He called the situation the giving of political subdivision power to an agency and said the legislature has the authority to levy for the district programs it authorizes.

Kramer said should such districts be found constitutional it could be the forerunner of district governments established by the state to abolish county governments without a vote of the public.

Nelson said the district law is constitutional and compares with other district operations, and said the budget committee members sit as representatives of the district, not as county commissioners.

Supreme court justices will rule later on the mandate application. The high court is hearing 15 appeals during the current session which ends Friday.

Court drops birth data bar

By CHARLOTTE MOULTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled today that a state cannot bar dissemination of birth control devices to single persons if it permits married couples to obtain them.

The far-reaching 8-1 opinion — with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger the only dissenter — came in a decision striking down a Massachusetts law physician or pharmacist. In the majority opinion, Justice William J. Brennan Jr. declared: "If the right of privacy means anything, it is the right of the individual, married or single, to be free from unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters so fundamentally affecting a person as the decision whether to bear or beget a child."

The Massachusetts law was considered the toughest state anticontraceptive statute on the books but 25 other states have similar, though less stringent laws which are affected by today's decision. They are Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

'He says he's got Mrs. Beard's real ITT memo'

Columnist releases more ITT documents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson today released a stack of confidential documents allegedly chronicling efforts by International Telephone & Telegraph (ITT) to keep Marxist Salvador Allende from becoming president of Chile.

The photocopied documents included accounts of meetings between officials of ITT and contacts at the Central Intelligence Agency, the White House, the State Department and the Chilean military establishment. They included several detailed reports recommending a widespread ITT effort to enlist other U.S. industries in Chile in a campaign to bring about the country's economic collapse.

ITT already is the subject of a congressional investigation as the result of another Anderson allegation — that it offered to subsidize the Republican National Convention this summer in return for favorable administration treatment of a big antitrust case against it.

Anderson did not say where he got the Chilean papers but ITT officials have said "many sacks" of their records were put through a shredder — and they supposed destroyed — last month to keep any more of them from getting into public print.

One of the Chile papers was an account by W. R. Merriam, ITT's vice president in charge of the Washington office, of a meeting with "our contact at the McLean agency." It was addressed to John McCone, a former CIA head who now is an ITT director. The CIA is in McLean, Va.

"He (the contact) is still very, very pessimistic about defeating Allende when the congressional vote takes place on October 24," the Oct. 9 memo said. "Approaches continue to be made to select members of the Armed Forces in an attempt to have them lead some sort of uprising — no success to date."

Oil spilled in Colo.

HENRIEVILLE, Utah (UPI) — Crews labored today to halt a 10,000-gallon crude oil spill before it entered the Colorado River near the head of its twisting, scenic route through the Grand Canyon.

The workers erected board dams and spread bales of straw Tuesday in efforts to stem the oil flow, which spilled from a semi-trailer tanker truck that was wrecked near the head of the Paria River.

The Paria joins the Colorado below Glen Canyon Dam and Lake Powell at historic Lees Ferry, Ariz.

A spokesman for Hatchco, the firm that was shipping the crude petroleum from oil wells near Escalante to Salt Lake City, said the truck accident Saturday spilled between 7,500 and 10,000 gallons of oil.

About 100 oil-laden trucks pass the spill site daily.

County aides record deed to dumpsite

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners have decided the only way to halt unauthorized dumping northwest of Buhl is to acquire the dumpsite and clean it up.

Following a tour of the dumping area Tuesday afternoon, the commissioners voted to record a deed presented them last week by the Buhl Highway District. They had held the deed pending additional study and an estimate of the cost of cleaning the area.

Tuesday afternoon Commissioners William Chancey and Merl Leonard, and County Clerk Harold Lancaster surveyed the 40 acres of Buhl Highway District land which has been used for many years for public dumping.

Commissioners found many dead calves, lambs and some dogs in the dump.

The land includes 40 acres now owned by the county adjoining a similar area owned by the Idaho National Guard. Chancey said the guard units in Buhl have agreed to clean their portion of the dump site and post it for "no dumping."

Commissioners plan to call for bids for cleaning the other 40 acres which will include trenching to bury collections of trash and removal of old car bodies and larger items.

Chancey said the car crusher which cleared the park site just west of the hospital will be back in the area within a few weeks and will be available for clearing this and other sites of car bodies.

As for the dead animals, he said, the county must provide some means of their disposal. The rendering plant in Buhl has been closed and the rendering plant in Twin Falls is a considerable distance away and charges for pickup of dead animals.

"This is a cattle producing area," Leonard said, "and as long as we have livestock we are going to have dead animals and we must have a means of disposal. I believe once we get the sites operating we will be able to accommodate the small animals by trenching."

Chancey said the commissioners hope to have the area cleaned and ready to operate as a supervised landfill site by June.

He said even if the county adopts a central solid waste disposal such as the Twin Falls landfill, some such facility will also be needed in the west end of the county.

Commissioners said if such sites as the one northwest of Buhl are not cleaned up in an orderly fashion, the county could be forced to do so under health laws, especially where dead animals are involved.

"We would like to be able to take care of it in our own way as funds permit and not face a deadline and procedure under enforcement conditions," Chancey said.

Library workshop conducted

By DIXIE DIXON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Norma Creed conducted a story telling workshop at the monthly meeting of the Regional Reference Center Council Tuesday.

It was held at the Twin Falls Public Library.

She advised the librarians and trustees attending to select a story that will be enjoyable to themselves and the audience and then use "time and tape" to prepare well. She demonstrated how audio visual materials may be used to enhance story telling. The use of tape recordings and overhead projector transparencies was demonstrated.

Mrs. Creed is media director for the Twin Falls School District. Librarians and trustees from Buhl, Burley, Gooding, Jerome, Shoshone, Richfield, Wendell and Twin Falls attended.

Arian Call, Twin Falls librarian and Reference Center Director, conducted the meeting. He was assisted by Charlene Orr, regional assistant.

National Library Week, April 17 to 23, was discussed and plans being made by the various libraries were revealed.

Annie Laurie Burton, Twin Falls library staff, suggested ideas that could be incorporated by local libraries. Bookmobile visits and puppet shows, displays in businesses, and films in strategic locations were suggested.

Sally Carpenter, children's librarian, introduced several new children's books.

The next meeting will be held at the Twin Falls library April 11 with Allen Benz, cataloger, for Twin Falls library, giving a cataloging workshop.

Devaluation agreed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bill devaluing the dollar 7.89 percent by raising the official U.S. price of gold from $35 to $38 an ounce has gone to the White House for President Nixon's signature.

The House gave final congressional approval to the measure with a 342-43 vote Tuesday.

The purpose of the devaluation is to make American goods cheaper and more competitive in the world marketplace.

The United States agreed to the devaluation at a meeting Dec. 18 in Washington of the finance ministers of the world's 10 wealthiest industrial nations.

Off Schedule

Amtrak has not maintained the schedule outlined for it when Congress authorized the "new look" in passenger rail service. In Magic Valley, of course, there are no passenger trains.

Officials of the corporation have returned to Congress for another handout — $170 million — to keep the system operating.

This is in addition to the original $140 million provided by Congress in grants and federal-guaranteed loans and $197 million contributed by participating railroads. The supplemental funds, it is now figured, should keep Amtrak going until mid-1973.

Perhaps, but don't count on it. The rate of losses has been greater than that since the system started. In all fairness, the new rail corporation took on a task the nation's railroads found impossible. A test period of less than a year is not very long.

Before too much longer, however, something of a glimpse of improvement should be possible. Instead of the golden age of rail travel some have envisioned, Amtrak could turn into the age of the golden rail. And our area will have neither the train or the rail!

Retirement

Mandatory retirement ages may be welcomed or regretted by the individuals to whom they apply. Without asking the worker, in most cases, what he thinks about it, nearly all industries have accepted the principle that on a certain birthday a man becomes a reject.

Senator Frank Church, as head of the special Senate committee on aging, is against this mandatory feature.

The White House Conference on Aging has proposed mandatory retirement ages be abolished. Senator Church agrees.

In spite of the educational campaigns and the enactment of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, the participation of the middle-aged and older workers in the labor force continues to decrease," said a conference report.

Not only are mandatory retirement ages commonly practiced today, during times of economic softness "early" retirement may be offered or forced upon the worker. Employment act or not, the conference will have its hands full reforming one employment practice which sooner or later affects nearly everyone.

No Secret

President Nixon decided to soft-pedal the "Top Secret" practice. It was getting so we had "Top Secrets" NOBODY knew about and "Top Secrets" EVERYBODY knew about.

The "Top Secret" craze got started when Moscow bought into the atom bomb. From then on, most anything could be blown up to "Top Secret."

"Top Secret" can be carried to an extreme. It used to be that a woman's age was "Top Secret," but now the Ms. types even keep husbands "Top Secret."

Men don't have many "Top Secrets." Just stuff like a cryptic "Honey, I have to attend an important meeting tonight."

The government has tens of thousands of "Top Secrets." Spiro may not know, but the file clerks do.

If you know a "Top Secret" and can't tell anyone, what good is it? You're in the same position as the priest who made a hole-in-one on Christmas.

MR. SPECTATOR

Silly Centimeters

The case for American conversion to metrication has been argued many times, but perhaps not as exhaustively as it has been by the National Bureau of Standards. That agency recently produced a 12-volume study on the merits of metrication.

Fortunately, the bureau also provided a 188-page summary. The main arguments in favor can be compacted further. Everyone else is doing it, except Canada and eight underdeveloped countries. Although Britain, Australia and New Zealand are still in the process of conversion.

It would be healthful for trade (bringing in perhaps an additional billion or two in trade per year). And, if the United States does not convert to the metric system, it will become increasingly isolated from the rest of the world.

Some opponents of conversion dispute this last point. They have a more potent weapon, however. It would cost between $10 billion and $40 billion to adopt the metric system over a 10-year period. The confusion involved in changing something as basic to almost every life as units of measurement would be enormous.

Even the opponents agree that sooner or later it will probably happen. When and how to start are the questions.

It's Carolina In The Mourning

GREENSBORO, N. C. — The breakdown of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's front-running strategy has transformed prospects for the May 6 Presidential primary here into a nightmare for liberals that reflects the instability now permeating the Democratic party nationwide. Under drastically altered post-Florida conditions of the race for the Democratic nomination, an active campaign here by Muskie would only improve Gov. George Wallace's prospects. Now past the deadline for getting off the North Carolina ballot, the best Muskie can do is to ignore the state and hope his name does not draw too many votes away from Wallace's only serious challenger here: Terry Sanford, the moderate former governor and now Duke University president.

That is a startling comedown from three weeks ago, when Muskie's advisers counted on winning this progressive Southern state. So, North Carolina is a case study of how the Muskie strategy backfired. That strategy was a three-legged stool: (1) enter all primary elections; (2) recognize no favorite sons; (3) get commitments from state Democratic leaders. So long as Muskie was first in the polls, that strategy was well designed to lock up the nomination at an early date.

It certainly seemed to be working well here. Muskie agents had enlisted Gov. Robert Scott and his political organization. Muskie polls showed him winning the state in a three-way contest — with Wallace and Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

Consequently, Muskie's managers were outraged when Sanford indicated he would become a candidate for the first time in 12 years and enter the North Carolina primary. Sanford, fumed the Muskie men, risked splitting the moderate vote and delivering North Carolina to Wallace.

To serious political students here, the concept of Sanford's stalking horse is ludicrous. Rather, from the very first, he doubted Muskie's poll ratings and feared that a plethora of liberal-to-moderate candidates would insure first place for Wallace.

Sanford eloquently made his case with Max Kampelman, Humphrey's longtime adviser, and with Sen. George McGovern's aides — but not with the Muskie camp, frozen into its rigid strategy of contesting every primary and honoring no favorite sons. If the game is delegates, asked Muskie strategists, why surrender our share of the 64-member North Carolina delegation under proportional representation? And there was Gov. Bob Scott. Having committed himself early to Muskie and pried some scarce money for Muskie out of his friends, Scott was not about to be left high and dry. But in fact, during his last year of a less than popular governorship, Scott might do Muskie more harm than good. Insensibly, the governor had been transformed from an asset to a liability for Muskie here.

This was the situation Feb. 25 when Sanford journeyed to Clearwater, Fla., for a secret meeting with Muskie. Both wanted the other to step aside, and both failed, although Sanford felt he had convinced Muskie he was no front for Humphrey. He also felt he had planted seeds of doubt in Muskie about entering North Carolina.

Perhaps. But on Feb. 26, Ed Muskie was bone-tired. That night, he would travel to New Hampshire where, the next day, he would burst into tears. Whether Sanford's arguments were ever the subject of a serious strategy reassessment by Muskie is doubtful. Without such a reassessment, Muskie was the prisoner of his rigid strategy.

In the intervening month, the political world has been convulsed. Given his present momentum, Wallace may run well not only in the rural eastern part of this state, but in metropolitan centers such as Charlotte and Greensboro, where busing has been heavy. Sanford, despite his popularity, might today have trouble besting Wallace even in a two-man race.

SPLITTING HEADACHE

ANDREW TULLY

Can't Win 'Em All

WASHINGTON — As both Sophocles and Ring Lardner noted, you can't win 'em all. Concerning the way to the hearts of the country's Negro voters, Democratic Presidential candidates have to be wondering whether you can win any of 'em.

Of the contenders who count, and excluding the special case of George Wallace, only Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson came out foursquare against busing as an integration tool; the others either endorsed busing or fudged on the issue — looking toward the black vote.

So in Gary, Ind., the 3,300 voting delegates of the National Black Political Convention overwhelmingly condemned busing to achieve school desegregation as "racist, suicidal methods," based on the "false notion that black children are unable to learn unless they are in the same setting as white children." It was the biggest ever purely political assemblage of blacks, offering a "black political assembly" independent of major parties, while threatening both with black muscle.

In effect, the convention snubbed the "liberal," self-appointed white guardians of Negro rights. At the same time, it did a favor for President Nixon, Wallace, Jackson and all other politicians who are opposed to school busing to achieve racial balance.

Indeed, the language used by Roy Innis, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), might have come from George Wallace's mouth. Innis pointed out that the anti-busing resolution had been sponsored by Southern delegates — "people who have been the guinea pigs for the social engineering of the black community." He sure enough didn't sound like George McGovern or John Lindsay or even the determinedly ambiguous Hubert Humphrey and Ed Muskie.

To be sure the convention's strategy has a separatist flavor. Its goal is black control of quality public schools in black neighborhoods, following the creation of separate school districts for those areas. Then the huge voting majority would revive the "separate but equal" school doctrine that the Supreme Court in 1954 declared was unconstitutional.

But the delegates are yet on solid ground. The 1964 decision outlawed intentional, legally-sanctioned segregation of blacks and whites, not de facto segregation caused by residential patterns. They key here is the phrase "racial balance," to which the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is unequivocally addressed. Provisions of that act say that "desegregation shall not mean the assignment of students to public schools in order to overcome racial imbalance."

Moreover, the act also prohibits "any official or court of the United States to issue any order seeking to achieve a racial balance by requiring the transportation of pupils or students from one school to another or one school district to another."

What has happened, it seems to me, is that what might be called the grassroots of the black population has found forced school busing onerous, inconvenient and sometimes physically and/or mentally unhealthy for its children.

Black parents are no different from white parents when it comes to their children's welfare. They don't want their children to spend several hours a week on buses when they could be out in the fresh air or doing a little homework. Caring for one's own kids is not a privileged white prerogative.

This feeling obviously was reflected in the convention's resolution. After all, most of the convention's leaders were black elected officials, and office holders pay more attention to their electorates than to professional pleaders and bleeders. Like their white counterparts, black politicians do not take stands that might alienate the citizen heading for the voting booth.

Where all this leaves the pro-busing white office-seeker is for him to fret about.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

The Treatment

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our son, 22, has been under treatment for hyperthyroidism. He was taking propylthiouracil but at present is off medication, awaiting a T3 or T4 test.

In the event that his former condition would recur, it has been suggested that he go back on medication, or take some sort of radium treatment (what is this?) or have an operation.

Our son prefers either of the first two. How effective is radiation treatment? Is it harmful? What is the best treatment in case of recurrence? — F. T. W.

All three of the methods are used effectively in treating hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid gland). Which one your son prefers isn't the important question. The real question is what will do the job for him.

If medication will slow the thyroid gland down sufficiently, fine. If not, sometimes radiation will do it. In this case, it is a matter of drinking a quantity of water containing radioactive iodine. (113)

The thyroid depends on having traces of iodine, so iodine is readily absorbed by the thyroid. If it is radioactive iodine, the radioactivity serves to slow the gland's activity. It's not a harmful treatment; it is a very useful one in the right cases.

If neither works, part of the gland can be removed surgically. Surgery used to be the only recourse before the other methods were developed.

If you ask which is "best," the only answer is the one that succeeds. Obviously the doctor feels that medication may succeed in your son's case. If it doesn't, the other two methods are available.

In some instances it is obvious from the beginning that surgery is going to be necessary. In others, signs indicate whether the other methods have a probability of success, so they are tried.

Individual situations can vary so widely I can give you no way of deciding what is necessary, so the best course is for your son to let the doctor do the deciding.

Dear Doctor: Is it possible to check a man to see if he had a vasectomy? — Mrs. L. B.

The operation leaves a tiny scar that is often difficult to identify. The surest method is a laboratory examination of the semen.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

JEROME — We've halted decline in water quality—but present water levels are still intolerable.

We've used our waterways as a sewer for more than two centuries so today we have dirty rivers, dying lakes and fouled seashores. Chemicals, raw or partly treated sewage, oil, agricultural wastes and just plain junk, all manmade wastes, are the contaminants.

But there's reason to believe we've hit the dirty bottom, and can now start the long climb back to the clean water that Nature gave us. Although some water is dirtier and some cleaner than in 1970, the overall Water Environmental Quality Index (EQ) held steady in 1971.

New and expanded sewage plants have been completed. More industrial plants are installing new water treatment equipment. But even more important, people are beginning to demand action of their city councils, state legislatures and congress. And they're getting it through the courts if necessary.

Danger of mercury contamination was forced out into the open. Ten polluters were referred to the Justice Department for action, and 40 others identified. EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) says there has now been a 94 per cent reduction in mercury discharge from these companies. But it may take a lifetime for pollution to go away.

Often belatedly, and usually with reluctance, industry is starting to clean up its two-thirds share of water pollution.

This year has seen landmark court cases with rediscovery of the 1899 Refuse Act. Each industrial plant dumping into public waters must obtain a Federal permit, and identify its wastes. And informants get half of the court fines if they provide information leading to conviction. So no polluter is immune today.

U.S. industry uses 17 trillion gallons of water annually, and less than one-third is treated before discharge. EPA officials say today's know-how can remove 85 per cent of all pollutants: and with 190 technology, 95 per cent.

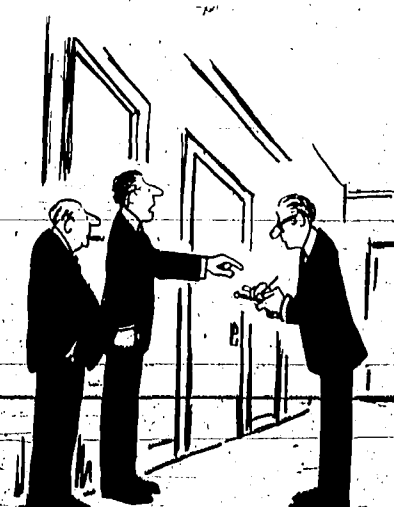

Enough oil was spilled accidentally or dumped intentionally around the world last year to fill gas tanks of 75 million autos.

A new law imposes a $10,000 fine for not reporting spills. In addition, oil companies have paid millions of dollars in fines from spills in offshore drilling rigs.

Purity of city drinking water has been an article of faith for generations. But citizens were shaken up when a cross-section survey of 300 U.S. city systems showed water in 40 per cent of the cities was inferior in quality, and 9 per cent downright dangerous. Many plants were old, ineptly operated, and seldom inspected.

More than $12 billion will go into new municipal sewage plant constructed over the next three years, compared with $10.2 billion in the last 14 years.

3 Pay Board heads argue for boycott

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three influential union leaders were reported prepared today to quit President Nixon's Pay Board and argue for a total labor boycott of the government body which controls wage increases.

Labor sources said the union leaders would present their case at a conference at which labor will decide whether to continue cooperating with the government wage program.

Labor leaders have been particularly angered by a Pay Board ruling—voted by its business and public members—to cut back a wage settlement for West Coast dockers by about one-fourth.

The unusual session of the 35-member executive council of the AFL-CIO was scheduled at midmorning. Invited to partici-

Final vote expected on rights proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Following a 50-year fight, a constitutional amendment which would make men and women legal equals appeared, likely today to finally get out of the halls of Congress.

A final vote was expected sometime during the day, following roll calls on more amendments designed to soften the proposal's impact should it eventually become part of the Constitution.

But the more than 2-to-1 defeat of similar proposed changes Tuesday indicated supporters easily would muster the two-thirds majority needed to approve the proposed amendment.

Senate approval of the House-passed proposal would send the amendment to the states for ratification, nearly 50 years after the Equal Rights Amendment was first proposed in Congress. It then would have to be approved by three-fourths of the state legislatures to become a part of the Constitution.

Angela to stay free under bail

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The prosecution in the Angela Davis murder-kidnap trial will not ask that her bail be revoked despite the California Supreme Court's modification of its ruling outlawing the death penalty.

Prosecutor Albert W. Harris Jr., an assistant state attorney general, said Tuesday he made the decision on instructions of state Attorney General Evelle Younger.

Miss Davis, 28, is accused of murder, kidnap and conspiracy in the Aug. 7, 1970, Marin County courthouse shootings in which four persons died. Testimony in her trial begins next Monday in San Jose.

She had been held without bail since she was arrested in New York in October, 1970, because a state law prohibited bail to those accused of capital crimes.

But after the California Supreme Court declared the death penalty unconstitutional Feb. 18, thus abolishing capital crimes, Judge Richard E. Aronson ordered Miss Davis released on $102,500 bail.

Commission asks ban lifted from marijuana

Specifically, the panel recommended what it called "decriminalization," which would allow possession of pot for personal, private use, but would retain criminal controls on its production, distribution and public use.

At the state level, where most criminal prosecution of marijuana takes place, the panel would impose only fines for public use, except for disorderly conduct associated with marijuana intoxication which would carry a recommended penalty of up to 60 days in jail and/or a $100 fine.

The panel agreed with Nixon, who called Tuesday for "uniformity in state laws. It said the cultivation, sale or distribution for profit and possession of marijuana with intent to sell should remain a felony.

Private distribution of small amounts of pot, and private possession for personal use, no longer should be offenses, it said.

Public possession of one ounce or less would not be an offense but the marijuana would be subject to seizure. Public possession of more than one ounce would be a criminal offense punishable by a fine of $100.

Public distribution of small amounts of pot not involving a profit, and its public use, each would be punishable by fines of $100.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Ela., and Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., both panel members, recommended in a separate statement that in addition to the majority recommendation, a civil fine for possession of any amount of marijuana in private or public should be imposed.

"Both commissioners feel that the civil fine clearly symbolizes societal disapproval and is a simple mechanism for law enforcement authorities to carry out," the report said.

The social symbolism of marijuana was discussed frequently in the 184-page report.

"Marijuana has become both a focus and a symbol of the generation gap and for many young people its use has become an expedient means of protest against adult values," it said.

Commando team kidnaps manager

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—Marxist terrorists kidnapped Flat's general manager for Argentina Tuesday and declared in a communique that he would be tried by "popular justice" for repression of workers and for monopolistic practices.

A commando team of six men and a woman using two automobiles intercepted the chauffeur-driven limousine of Obediano Sallustro, 56, a Paraguayan, as he left his suburban home.

They forced his car to the curb, shot chauffeur Jose Puente in the shoulder when he attempted to resist, intimidated a ineffectual bodyguard, and hauled Sallustro away after a pistol-whipping.

Relief rolls up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a report last month that the size of the nation's welfare rolls might start declining, the government said today the relief rolls increased last November for the fourth consecutive month.

Welfare payments to the needy also increased in November for the fifth straight month, said the Health, Education and Welfare Department. John D. Twinn, administrator of HEW's Social and Rehabilitation Service, said 14.6 million needy persons received $871.8 million in cash payments last November, the latest month for which figures were available.

He said 42 states and jurisdictions reported November increases in needy families on welfare.

Public possession of one ounce or less would not be an offense but the marijuana would be subject to seizure. Public possession of more than one ounce would be a criminal offense punishable by a fine of $100.

Public distribution of small amounts of pot not involving a profit, and its public use, each would be punishable by fines of $100.

Common Market takes first step

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH
BRUSSELS (UPI)—The European Common Market (EEC) took the formal first step Tuesday toward monetary union but foundered in a dispute between France and Germany about farm prices.

The community's foreign, finance and farm ministers met in simultaneous but separate sessions in the Charlemagne office building. Outside 7,000 market employees went on strike to demand machinery for automatic pay raises and spent the day milling in front of their headquarters.

Despite the strike, these results emerged from the ministerial sessions:

—Finance ministers ratified an earlier agreement to narrow the band within which their currencies may fluctuate against each other from 4.5 to 2.25 per cent. Spokesmen described the move as the first step toward an eventual elimination of fluctuation margins toward a single European currency.

—German Agricultural Minister Josef Ertl left the farm ministers meeting in protest and flew to Munich to consult with Chancellor Willy Brandt after accusing the French of reneging on a agreement reached last week.

—Sicco Mansholt, a Dutchman who has been the market's vice president for farm policy for 14 years, was named president of the executive commission to fill out the term of Franco-Maria (Malfatti) of Italy, who resigned to run in the Italian parliamentary elections. Mansholt, who had planned to resign from the commission later this year anyway, will serve only six months as its president.

TV violence halt requested

By JOHN HALL
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld called Tuesday for immediate action to stem violence on television, contending there is an "overwhelming" consensus among scientists that it causes antisocial behavior in some children.

Steinfeld told the Senate communications subcommittee the problem should be solved by voluntary action by networks and stations, and not by censorship. He suggested a violence-rating system to guide parents and to be used by the government in determining whether to renew station licenses.

Steinfeld testified in an attempt to correct what he called "public misunderstanding" of the surgeon general's Scientific Advisory Committee Report on Television and Social Behavior. The report—prepared at a cost of $2 million—was so carefully worded that some industry and government officials have interpreted it as finding no cause-and-effect relationship between violence and antisocial behavior, while others said there was a link.

Although the report was couched in "language acceptable to social scientists, it is clear to me that the casual relationship between televised violence and antisocial behavior is sufficient to warrant appropriate and immediate remedial action," Steinfeld said.

The world's largest bank, Bank of America, operates 20 branches in nine European countries.

West Point farmers near Wendell take over work for ill neighbor

BY CHARLOTTE BELL
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Helping your neighbor may be old-fashioned for some, but not in the West Point area of Wendell.

This pioneering helping hand is still evident today, as shown by several Gooding County residents who took time this week to help a neighbor get his fields ready for planting.

Marin Dobrev, who lives southwest of Wendell, has been unable to work on his farm since October because of a serious illness.

The West Point Grange in Wendell, under the direction of Master Elmer Hansen, organized a project to assist the Dobrev family on the farm.

Neighbors and friends joined in the effort.

Sixteen men worked all day Monday using their own equipment in an effort to get the fields plowed and fertilizer spread. At one time there were 10 tractors, plowing, discing or corrugating, and three trucks hauling and spreading fertilizer.

A spokesman for the group said the community would continue to help the Dobrev family for as long as necessary.

"When a neighbor needs help, you help him," he said.

Mrs. Dobrev said she was surprised by the help.

"I had no idea people could be so friendly and nice."

"We just moved here from California in April and a lot of these people I don't even know. I'm deeply gratified by their help and still find it hard to believe," she said.

Mrs. Dobrev said she intends to keep the farm and "make a go of it" as farming has been the family's dream. She said her neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Copenbarger, had been helping her for some time.

Many of the wives arrived with dinner for the group. Because of good weather, the noon meal was served out-of-doors.

Those assisting the family were Mr. and Mrs. John Corner, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Rast, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Ruffing, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ruffing, Mr. and Mrs. Copenbarger, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Kurtz, George Blackburn, Bill Ruffing, Less Coble, Elmer Hansen, Randy Adams, Walter Marcheck and Carl Doramus.

Ketchum drive in opposed

KETCHUM — About 250 signatures opposing an Arctic Circle Drive In, planned for Main Street, were presented to the Ketchum City Council Monday night.

Ketchum resident Bill Carr, who represented the group, said "I have never seen a good looking Arctic Circle. They are pretty much of an eyesore." He said that the signers did not feel that the facility would be an "attraction for Main Street."

Carr said the signatures didn't form a legal petition but served only as an "indicator of opinion."

The representative said also that the signers requested that the council establish a city architectural review commission. He said the commission would review the facade of a building as well as its structural construction.

City building inspector John Jacoby said presently the city, beyond structural considerations, could only control the building height.

Councilman Gerald Sidwell said that a design review board is currently being "worked on" by the city planning and zoning commission and has gotten to the ordinance stage.

Carr said residents are worried "about rumor" because no plans showing the appearance of the drive in have been presented.

Sidwell said that earlier discussions had indicated that the owner was "interested in fitting the building into the community much more than he was required to do legally."

Race set Saturday

SUN VALLEY — The "Fun" Cross Country ski races will begin 10 a.m. Saturday on the Sun Valley Golf Course, not Friday as earlier reported.

Nordic Ski School Director, Lof Odmark said all cross-country skiers from the Magic and Wood River Valleys are invited to compete, regardless of proficiency.

Skiers must register prior to noon Friday. Registration can be made by calling the Nordic Ski office, Sun Valley.

Warm Springs Bridge defeated at Ketchum

BY TERRY CAMPBELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The Warm Springs Bridge bond issue was defeated Tuesday by Ketchum voters.

Pro and con votes for the $180,000 bond proposal were almost evenly split with the yes vote taking a slight advantage.

The issue required a two-thirds majority of votes cast for passage. With more than one-half of the registered voters casting ballots, 166 voted yes and 157 voted no. Of the number that voted, 50 more favorable ballots were needed.

The special bond issue included a $45,000 provision for a new Warm Springs Bridge which would have been built north of the present bridge. The old bridge would have been retained as horse, foot and bicycle bridge.

Another $30,000 would have been allocated for approach road construction and right of way costs.

Councilman Vern McClellan said he felt the main reason for the issue's defeat was the "uninterest of the people in Warm Springs. As a whole they did not generate much support for it."

Councilwoman JoAnn Algiers said "We will have to find another solution because a new bridge is still very much needed."

Councilman Glenn Brannen said that the council has already started work on several other ways to obtain a new bridge. "We will probably proceed on the best plan," he said.

Brannen said that the vote "indicates that Ketchum residents aren't really as interested in better streets and bridges as they have told me in the past."

Rupert approves budget increase

By LETREMAINE
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council approved a $886,150 city budget for 1972 Tuesday night during a council meeting in which no protests were heard.

In contrast to the 1971 budget hearing, which developed considerable controversy, no taxpayers appeared at Tuesday's budget hearing to oppose the budget, which calls for an increase of about 14.5 percent over spending for 1971.

In a separate action the council adopted a revised salary scale for city employees, allowing for specific increases for each worker based on current salaries. The raise averaged 7 to 10 percent, with lower-salaried employees given larger raises than the higher-salaried employees.

The 1972 budget includes funds for 5.5 percent increases, but the figures will allow the higher increases, according to Mayor Wendell Johnson.

Total revenue in 1971 for city departments was $855,275.00 and an additional $12,617 must be added to the 1972 budget to make the total figure of $967,892. This will come from a guaranteed fee for Local Improvement District projects of $3,000 and LID bond redemption funds totaling $9,617, according to City Clerk Loretha Klingenberg.

The 14.6 percent increase, however, is calculated in the basic budget without incorporating the additional LID funds, which are not comparable.

By departments, the 1971 revenue and 1972 estimated expenditures, respectively, include, electric department, $346,023.78 and $334,000; water department, $67,518.48 and $60,000; irrigation, $15,363.83 and $37,000; and library, $9,242.70 and $9,000.

The assessment against city property for irrigation was raised by one third to 20 cents per front foot from 15 cents. The per-acre assessment was set at $13.50 with a minimum charge of $17.50 per lot.

No increase in city levies will be required by the new budget, according to the mayor.

In other action the council accepted a bid from Waterworks Equipment Co. to supply, 2,636 feet of six-inch cast-iron pipe for the city water department.

Closed session generates 'heat'

RUPERT — The timing of a closed session of the Rupert City Council last Saturday spurred a brief but heated argument between two council members and the mayor.

Councilman W. F. (Bill) Whitton, a frequent opponent of Mayor Wendell Johnson, said he was unable to attend Saturday's council session because he did not receive a letter advising him of the meeting in time.

Whitton said letters to all councilmen were mailed last Thursday but he was out of town when they were delivered on Friday.

"I first heard of the meeting Saturday morning, and that's pretty short notice," Whitton told the mayor.

He questioned the reasons for the meeting, during which councilmen agreed to grant city employees "specific" pay raises instead of the flat 5.5 percent increases allowed in the 1972 budget. The council also interviewed applicants for a park maintenance man on Saturday, but took no formal action until Tuesday's public meeting.

Mayor Johnson said Saturday's meeting was not open to the public when Whitton questioned him.

Councilman George McDonald, however, who entered the fray to side with the mayor, disagreed, saying he believed the meeting would have been open to the public if any citizen had been present.

The mayor said the press was not advised of the meeting, since it concerned "personnel matters."

Whitton also objected later in the meeting to a proposed salary schedule which did not allow an increase for Ron Klebe, city public works director. Mayor Johnson said Klebe had had two in-step salary increases over the past year and was not due for another increase.

The mayor also said he is shifting responsibilities of city officials in the public works department, giving more responsibility to each unit, such as the sewer and water department.

Klebe will have less responsibility, with sewer and water department directors having full control of their departments, the mayor said.

Klebe denied the mayor's assertion that he had been advised of this change during Saturday's meeting.

Whitton protested the mayor's proposal, saying he had not been consulted in the matter.

Gooding chamber memory improves

GOODING — Chamber of Commerce memories improved this year.

The year the chamber remembered to invite the A-2 basketball champions, Gooding High School, team members to the dinner honoring them. The dinner was held Tuesday noon in the Lincoln Inn.

Last year when the A-2 champions, Gooding's team, were to be honored, the luncheon was prepared for the team but no one told the players.

In the Tuesday luncheon team members appeared and were introduced to the chamber members and guests.

The Tuesday chamber meeting was the first held under new rules closing meetings to the press.

The decision had been made, chamber officials said, to prevent reports of chamber meetings by the Times-News until after the Gooding County Leader was able to print the news on Thursday.

Chamber members saw a slide presentation by John Givens and Ed Leatherwood of the Givens-Davies advertising agency, Boise. The presentation depicted the Sun Valley area as it is now and showed the plans for the Elkhorn development.

The men stressed the policy of the developer not to locate any improvement which would interrupt the environment.

Leatherwood said extensive soil analysis, topographical and vegetative studies to insure the least possible damage had been made. He said construction would begin this spring on the $38-million resort community. Leatherwood said the resort will include summer and winter recreation and second home stays in the form of condominium and studio apartments.

Included in the plans are an all-season swimming pool, a carousel ice rink, an equestrian path and walkways, he said. A gondola ski lift and a 7,500-yard golf course, designed by Robert Trent Jones, will be provided.

Out of the 2,300 acres, only 200 acres will be developed, he said.

The cost will be left in natural form.

All facilities will be built on land with less than 15 percent slope so buildings and homes will be at the valley floor and the view will not be blocked by development.

The speaker said the basic prices on condominium and other units have not been determined and no home sites have been sold.

Elkhorn at Sun Valley is being developed by subsidiary companies of Sun Valley Corp. and Janns - Marville Corp. Architects for the project are Killingsworth, Brady and Associates, Long Beach, Calif.

Site planning and landscape architecture is by Sasaki, Walker and Associates, Inc., Sausalito, Calif. Engineers are Cornell, Howland, Hayes and Merrifield, and Anderson and Kelly, both Boise.

Talks at Burley

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, left, is greeted by John LeMoynne, Hagerman, newly elected president of the South Idaho Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting Tuesday in Burley.

Governor raps Burley paper

BURLEY — "For the first time in my life I feel I must take issue with an editorial," Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said Tuesday evening.

He made the statement when he addressed the South Idaho Chamber of Commerce meeting at the Ponderosa Inn.

The editorial, titled "Figures Don't Lie," appeared in the March 13, 1972, issue of the South Idaho Press. It was written by William MacKnight in regard to payrolls of state employees.

Andrus told those attending the annual banquet that he believed an editorial page in a paper is up to the editorial writers, but that false information was apparently given, and "we did not have the opportunity to give him the exact facts because he did not return a call to our office."

The editorial said state employees received an across-the-board increase of 15 percent last year as ordered by the governor. Andrus said the Idaho Code, section 67-309 passed by the legislature says classified state employees shall receive a salary comparable to those in private enterprise.

"I don't have any control over it," Andrus said. "Last year, the comparable salary study was made, and by following the law it was supposed to go into effect July 1. I met with state employees and requested that the increases be taken in three steps because of the financial status of the state. They agreed."

Andrus said some employees did not get raises because their salaries were already comparable to private industry. The number of general fund employees actually decreased by 12.3 percent. At the same time the legislature transferred county district health employees and probate judges to the state payroll, he said.

The editorial used figures from a wage and salary supplement schedule, Andrus said, which figures reflected agency requests and not requests of the governor.

Filer pupils to walk for pool

By MARGELIEMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — A walk-a-thon by Filer school children will kick off the fund raising drive for the Filer swimming pool.

The event called "sole power," to include more than 150 school children, is scheduled for April 8, according to Rev. Roy Watkins, chairman.

The group will start at the old hospital building in Twin Falls, will walk down Addison to the Lynwood Shopping Center and then back to Filer on the Poleline Road.

The walk of 13 miles will give the children a chance to "sell themselves" at so much per mile, with all money collected to go into the pool fund. The group will be supervised and will be walking on sidewalks or shoulders of the road all the way.

An enthusiastic crowd heartily endorsed the pool project at Tuesday night's meeting in the high school auditorium.

Bill Heaps, member of the fund committee, stated everybody in the district will be contacted soon for donations or pledges. Students at the school are planning number of other fund raising events, he added.

An uncovered pool costing approximately $65,000 is the aim of the community. Matching funds are available from the Idaho Department of Parks.

CSI's Kelly named to all-America third team

Victor Kelly joined a growing list of College of Southern Idaho all-Americans Wednesday when he was named to the national junior college athletic association's third team and the 8-foot, 6-inch New Yorker also picked up all-region first-team honors.

Kelly, who now has won all but one individual citation offered by the NJCAA, is joined in the awards circle this time around by Coach Jerry Hale who was named region 18 coach of the year.

Kelly, who probably was second in the only thing he missed while at CSI—the outstanding player in the national tournament—joins Ples Vann, Tom Bush, Steve Hegens and Tim Bassett on the CSI all-American list. Vann was an honorable mention and Bush, Hegens and Bassett were first-team selections.

Kelly was pleased with the selection, but, following an outstanding performance in the national tournament and being the leading scorer there, felt slightly disappointed that it wasn't a little higher. "Now, I'm not complaining. Third team out of 512 schools makes me feel very happy and very proud," he said. Coach Hale said the third team ranking probably was due to last year.

"There were a lot of boys on the second and third unit and honorable mentions last year as freshmen and this made a difference to the selection committee," Coach Hale said. "It was a tough year to try to crack the first three teams."

For Kelly it wound up two great years at CSI, both for the school and himself. "This is a great place to be," he said. "Anybody who has the chance to come here and play and doesn't is crazy, man. There are ups and downs here, but a lot more ups than downs. I really hate to leave here."

In retrospect, the youngster has no second guesses. "The only thing I can't do now that I couldn't do when I came here is dunk the basketball," he smiles. "I couldn't then and I can't now. But I feel everything else has fallen into place very well for me. For instance, I wasn't a very good shooter when I came here. Now I can shoot the ball pretty well from outside—things like that. All of it is because of Coach Hale."

The coach tells us what we can do and what we should work on. He tells us what will happen if we learn to do certain things. By the time it's all over, we (the team) are doing it and just like he said, we have accomplished other goals. He is a great coach.

Kelly's whole life has been spent in setting goals and then working toward them. His first big success came as a frosh at Benjamin Franklin high school in New York City where, at 5 feet, 1 inch in height and 105 pounds, he became the first freshman guard to ever crack a major high school starting lineup.

"But the coach that year resigned. The jayvee coach who got the job couldn't see how I could be a starting player. I knew the man wasn't going to play me, so I transferred to DeWitt Clinton (high school). I had to sit out a year and I started messing things up. I mean, there weren't any sports to look forward to and I just started messing up in school. Then Lew Schaffel and I came into contact and we started talking and I started getting things back into perspective. I went to Washington, D.C., the last year to live with Lew and complete my high school playing and then decided to come to CSI."

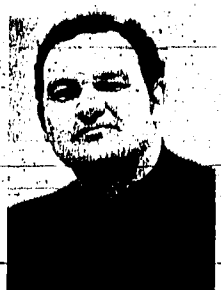

The decision to go to a junior college will never be regretted. "I think it's the thing to do," he said. "I'm not a great student, but I'm not a bad one. But sometimes things are said in class that I can't get. In a four-year school or in other places, that's it. Here I can ask the teacher if I can meet with him later and get the thing straightened out."

School teams play more games than that. Along toward the end of your freshman year, someone might start talking about you when they start thinking about next year's varsity," Kelly says.

He's available for recruiting. "I'll tell any player I know to come to CSI if he has the chance. But I'm not going to talk CSI with anyone who I figure is a poor citizen-risk. There are a lot of great players in the city who I wouldn't send out here simply because they'd mess it up. They might last a while and then they'd blow sky high."

About the matter of racial issues, Kelly says "I've never been prejudiced. I don't know why. A lot of people in the city talk badly about whites. I just never had time to learn to hate. I have individuals that don't appeal to me and I know I don't appeal to some individuals. I've only had one run in (on a race) since coming here and that was during a touch football game when tempers started flaring.

But the man involved looked me up later that same day and apologized."

"I think probably the reason for the way I think is because I never had time for anything but athletics. Even after dark in the city when we couldn't play basketball, our games were oriented to sports, running, strength or something like that. Because of that I didn't have time for hate, or cigarettes or drinking or drugs. The kids who thought they had time for that stuff are all strung out on heroin now. It's a bad scene. Buying drugs in the city is as easy as buying cigarettes in Twin Falls, No," he corrected himself. "It's easier because you don't have people out in the streets of Twin Falls trying to sell cigarettes."

In a short while, Kelly will be studying his next move.

Jabbar repeats as pro player of year

NEW YORK (UPI) — He is the greatest basketball player ever. So said Larry Costello, the coach of the Milwaukee Bucks, who admittedly might be biased in favor of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, his 7-foot-2 center.

Costello made his appraisal after the Bucks clinched their second straight Midwest Division title on March 14 at Portland.

"He is extremely intelligent and easy to coach," added the mentor of the NBA defending champions.

Today the players in the NBA agreed with Costello to the extent that they voted Kareem Abdul-Jabbar the Most Valuable Player of the 1971-72 season.

Abdul-Jabbar had 81 first-place votes and a total of 581 points in the 17th annual balloting conducted by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

It marked the second straight season that Abdul-Jabbar has been named recipient of the Podoloff Trophy as the league's MVP.

Jerry West of Los Angeles was the runner-up for the third year in a row. The veteran guard received 44 first-place votes and a total of 393 points.

West's teammate, Will Chamberlain, the 35-year-old all-time scoring champion and four-time MVP, finished third.

St. John's, Niagara advance into semi-finals on upsets

NEW YORK (UPI) — St. John's overcame a shocking first-half injury to star Mel Davis with an aggressive defense that held high-scoring Rhode Island to 30 points in the first game of the doubleheader at Madison Square Garden. It will mark Niagara's first appearance in the semi-finals since 1954.

Maryland and Jacksonville will meet in Thursday night's other semi-final game.

Oral Roberts, which had won 28 of 27 games this season including its last 22 in a row, was stunned from the outset by the Redmen's tight man-to-man defense and hit only 23.8 percent of its shots in the first half as St. John's built a commanding 46-29 lead.

Fuqua, the nation's second leading scorer who had poured in 42 points in the Titans' opening-round victory over Memphis State, was played head to head by Mike Kelly and Richie Lyons and scored just 12 points in the first half while hitting on only four of 15 field goal attempts. The sharpshooting guard who averaged better than 35 points a game this year, led a second-half surge that got Oral Roberts to within six points with 8:30 left to play. But the Titans never got closer.

Davis, the Redmen's leading scorer and rebounder, was instrumental in St. John's first-half surge as he scored 12 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in the first 10 minutes of play. However, the senior forward suffered pulled tendons in his right knee while going up for a rebound and was carried off the court on a stretcher with 5:57 remaining in the half.

He was taken to a hospital and it was not immediately known whether he would be available for the remainder of the tournament.

Princeton, which entered the game a slight favorite, never got untracked as the Purple Eagles' combination zone and man to man defenses intercepted several Ivy League passes and forced the Ivy Leaguers into many hurried shots.

The Purple Eagles got Princeton's high scorer Brian Taylor into foul trouble in the first half and he was forced to sit out for the final 10:35 of the opening stanza.

That turned out to be fatal for Princeton as Taylor, who scored only six points in the first half, finished with 23 and almost brought the Tigers back from an 11-point deficit midway through the second half.

Taylor, however, did miss four layups in the course of the game which turned out to be the insurance Niagara needed to post its 20th victory of the season.

The Purple Eagles led by only two points, 30-28, at halftime but scored the first eight points of the second half to take a lead they never relinquished.

Newest all-American Coliseum selected as super bowl site

HONOLULU (UPI) — Super Bowl VII will be played on Jan. 17, 1973 in Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle announced Tuesday.

Rice Stadium in Houston will host Super Bowl VIII Jan. 13, 1974.

Rozelle also said the Pro Bowl, scheduled for Los Angeles next January, will be moved to another city which will be decided on during the current annual meeting here of National Football League executives.

Rozelle said the choice of Los Angeles came on the ninth ballot after two hours of balloting.

Rozelle also said the Pro Bowl, which is the annual all star game between the American and National conferences, will now be moved to a different city each year.

The choice of Houston was the first time that the NFL selected the city to host the Super Bowl two years in advance.

The selection of Los Angeles apparently meant that the loss of one of the largest television markets—due to an area blackout—was overlooked.

The Super Bowl will return to the City of Angels for the first time since it began in 1967. That was when the Green Bay Packers, champions of the National Football League, trounced the Kansas City Chiefs, the old AFL champions, 35-10.

The owners apparently also overlooked the fact that only 61,946 attended that contest.

The Los Angeles delegation pointed out that it had only two weeks notice to prepare for that game and that there was a feeling that the contest was a mismatch which, in turn, resulted in the lowest attendance of all Super Bowls.

Rozelle might have given a hint of his preference for Los Angeles during a news briefing Monday when he pointed these facts out. He said that a viewing audience of 65,000,000

Fla. State isn't awed by task

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida State Coach Hugh Durham said Tuesday his Seminoles are by no means awed at finding themselves one of the final four teams in the NCAA playoffs.

"We look at it with the attitude that we can win," said Durham. "We're definitely not going out to Los Angeles for any vacation."

Florida State plays North Carolina Thursday, while defending NCAA champ UCLA takes on Louisville, and the winners meet for the title Saturday.

"I don't think we're out of our class or we wouldn't be down to the last four teams," said Durham. "We can win."

The Seminoles had been on NCAA probation for two seasons, barred from post-season playoffs because of recruiting violations Durham said he committed accidentally.

At a news conference in the capitol, Durham said the Seminoles can bounce back from the blacklist and go all the way in Los Angeles this week, with little luck, defense and speed.

"I think defense tells the story," he said, "when you come this far, you take your defense for granted because you wouldn't have won without it. When it comes world series time, the team that can pitch is in there."

Meat cutters union gives money for Burley emergency food pantry

BURLEY — Officers of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Union Local 218 Monday afternoon presented a check for a freezer for the Emergency Food Pantry.

Manuel Lopez, director of the Community Action Center, Burley, received the check from the union officers including Bill Sparks, president; Glen Anderson, vice president; and Robert Gee, secretary-treasurer.

The emergency food pantry is operated by voluntary contributions of food from individuals, grocery stores, and processing plants of the area.

Mrs. Mary Ann Morrison was approved as the contact person to pick up food from the various sources. The program is administered by the staff of the Community Action Agency, 1600 Albion Ave., with Lopez as the director.

For over one and half years the emergency pantry has helped meet the needs of transients, people in need when all other possibilities failed, and when other emergencies occurred, Lopez said.

At first the pantry was located on the second floor of city hall, after the federal funding for an out-reach worker was exhausted, the pantry was moved back to the Neighborhood Center.

A committee of interested citizens recommended that the pantry be operated out of the CAA.

Recently the Cassia County Board of the CAA recommended that a day be set for collection of food items throughout the county, on a door to door canvass.

Youth groups of the county are being invited to cooperate on a "Food For Others" campaign on April 15.

All leaders of youth groups should contact the CAA for specifically assigned areas of the county, as well as identification cards for all canvassers, according to Rev. George Trobrough, chairman of the CAA board.

Boise man speaks to chamber at GF

GLENN FERRY — Jamie Thomas, vice-president of Imge Builders, Inc., Boise, was guest speaker Monday at the Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce meeting.

He explained how the businessmen of Boise put out a business directory in booklet form once a year, which is distributed to postal patrons. Thompson suggested that such a directory for Elmore County could include Brunenau and Grand View.

Gene Crismon, Mountain Home, of the agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, showed films of methods of soil conservation in Hawaii.

He said it is not possible to build dirt dams and dams built with natural cinders must be lined with rubber. He then compared them with the methods used in this country. Jerry Hober, manager of Three Island State Park, and assistant manager Bill Scudder, announced the park will open for the season this Sunday. Eddie Bostik, park chairman of the chamber, pledged assistance for the opening ceremonies and said refreshments will be furnished by the chamber.

Bert Walker was appointed chairman of the clean-up campaign to be sponsored by the chamber. Chamber president James Carpenter said soil conservation personnel will soon be conducting a survey of the city water supply.

Calif. Supreme Court declines ruling review

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The State Supreme Court Monday declined to review a ruling that a newspaper reporter may be held in contempt for refusing to name a lawyer who violates a trial court's ban on publicity.

The court refused to hear an appeal from William T. Farr, a former Los Angeles Herald-Examiner reporter who covered the Charles Manson trial.

On Oct. 9, 1971, the Herald-Examiner published extensive excerpts from a copy of a potential witness' statement which Farr obtained. The trial judge excluded from evidence many of the statements contained in the news story.

After the trial ended, Farr was summoned to a contempt hearing on May 19, 1971, and told Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older he had obtained the statement from two attorneys involved in the Manson case. But Farr refused to identify either of them.

Despite objections that California law prohibits punishing reporters who refuse to identify their sources, Older held Farr in contempt.

Dean returns

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dean Jones returns to Walt Disney Productions to star in the title role of "Baron Von Munchausen."

GF cannery unit lists directors

GLENN FERRY — A new Glenns Ferry cooperative cannery board was announced today.

Elected to the new board were Mrs. Susel Koch, Hammett; Mrs. Elva McNulty, Mrs. Elsie Thomas, Mrs. Elsie Perrin and Mrs. Gladys Adams, all Glenns

Ferry. The new board was elected to reinstate the original cooperative. The cannery was closed in 1961. The board is now trying to acquire the building and has purchased the lot on which the cannery stands for $300.

Wendell school election May 9

WENDELL — The Wendell School Board Monday night set May 9 for the trustee election. Nominating petitions for the election must be filed with Mrs. Barbara Hosack, clerk of the school board, by 4 p.m. April 20.

The election will be from noon to 8 p.m. in the high school building. The term of John Newbrough, zone 3, is expiring. He has not indicated if he will seek re-election.

Zone 3 is the West Point area of the school district.

Candidates for election and voters must be at least 18 years old and meet residency requirements established by Idaho voter law. They must live in zone 3 but do not have to be property owners.

Members of the Wendell City Council were asked about city water and sewer connections for 40 acres east of the city. The school district wants to acquire an option on the land to build a physical education gymnasium and as a future building site for a new high school.

Engineering work will have to be done before a direct hookup can be made, according to Supt. Lawrence LaRue.

Snowmobile event slated at Stanley

New uniforms

LINCOLN COUNTY Deputy Sheriff Bill Anderson,

Shoshone, shows new uniform now being worn by Lincoln County officers. This is the first time they have had uniforms. The outfits are grey and the men wear black boots and ties.

STANLEY — Plans are set for the annual Sun Day for Snowmobilers at Stanley this weekend.

The 50-mile cross-country race will start Saturday at Smiley Creek at 12 noon sharp. This will be a one-man race with three different classes.

On Sunday, races for children, ladies and men will be held near Stanley and will include a balloon race, relays, a man and woman team race and other novelty races as well as some speed oval races.

Deep snow covers the race area, according to Freda Nicholson, reporter for the Salmon River Snowmobilers.

Gooding students learn from shows

GOODING — Gooding pre-schoolers and grade school children are learning French and watching puppet shows at the same time.

This is a result of Gooding High School French class project.

Under the direction of Mrs. Gary Majors, French teacher, the art, physics, shop and French students have made puppets, stage, scenery, costumes and lighting in order to present puppet shows, in French, to each other and the kindergarten and first grade children.

A narrator first tells the story in English and then the children are taught French songs to sing as the plays progress.

Guignol puppet shows were given hundreds of years ago to French royalty and are still presented today at parks, fairs and on television in France, explained Mrs. Majors.

The project was started last fall to give the French students more stimulation outside the classroom and to acquaint them with the art of puppetry.

Approximately 100 students helped make the idea possible, according to Mrs. Majors.

Shoshone schools plan conference

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School District will conduct a conference for patrons as part of the needs assessment program.

well as teachers and students. Teachers and students will be conducting their own "spunkies" earlier in the day.

The program, which began last month is an evaluation of the school system.

Shoshone is one of three schools selected for a pilot program this year by the state for such an evaluation.

Puppet shows

GOODING HIGH school French student Brenda Fuqua shows a large puppet to one of the first graders attending the Guignol puppet show presented by Mrs. Gary Majors' French class. A narrator first tells the story in English and then the youngsters are taught French songs to sing as the play progresses.

A Lovelier You

ROUGE TO THE RESCUE

By Mary Sue Miller

Naturalness is a beauty ideal of today. To ape the work of nature's own hand, new makeup goes all out. That, no doubt, is why rouge—the real thing—has staged a comeback. Whoever saw a natural beauty without a clear, warm glow?

As a radiance maker creams or creamy liquids are favored. But radiance is not the only virtue of rouge. It also has the ability to save a wayward feature. For purposes of camouflage, be sure to use a shade that blends with your lipstick—pink, peach or coral. Apply it after your foundation and before face powder. Dot on and blend with the fingertips. Minimizing placements follow:

To strengthen a receding chin, rouge the center and blend outward along the jawline. Plump up a thin face by rouging the carboles. Slim a round face with triangles of color close to the nose. (Point triangles toward inner corners of eyes; base diagonally slashes nose-side of cheek.)

For a convincing fill, treat the hollows of gaunt cheeks with a generous amount of rouge and work it around whirlpool fashion. But not a speck further than the hollow's edges. A too narrow space between the eyes seems to widen by dotting the inner corners with a pinhead of rouge. No blending this time, the only time.

BEAUTY KNOWS NO AGE

When you hold pressure cards in three suits you may be able to work a double-squeeze in which you squeeze both your opponents.

South bid his hand with all the delicacy of a steam roller. When North admitted possession of two aces and two kings, South counted 12 top tricks and felt that the Lord would provide a 13th for him. The game was duplicated so South placed his grand slam in no-trump.

The queen of clubs lead was encouraging. It looks as if West might be the only player to be able to stop clubs. Then if East was the only man able to stop either of the major suits a double-squeeze would be automatic.

He won the club and cashed five diamonds while discarding one card in each suit from dummy. West discarded two clubs, East three hearts.

That gave South all the information he needed. East was obviously very long in hearts. Thus South was ready to put real pressure on West.

He led a heart to dummy's ace and came back to his king. West discarded a spade. Now South led his last diamond and West had to let another spade go. He was still under club pressure.

Dummy's nine of clubs was thrown and East let his club go. Now South's last club was led to dummy and East had to throw a spade. Dummy's heart had squeezed him. Since West held a club and East a heart, no one could have a spade stopped.

Idaho FFA sets meet for Burley March 29

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Water supply prospects in western states now range from "possible" irrigation shortages in Arizona, New Mexico and southern California to possible high water damage on some streams in the Columbia, Missouri, Green and Northern great basins, the Soil Conservation Service said today.

In northwestern states where snowpack is heavy, most streams will produce 25 to 50 percent more flow than normal, the SCS March report said.

The heavy runoff is expected because most watersheds in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, western Wyoming and along the northern edges of Utah and Nevada received average to much above average mountain snowfall in February.

In the southwest, however, the SCS said snowfall was light and warm temperatures removed much of the existing snowpack. As a result, most streams are expected to be down to 25 to 50 percent of normal flow. Officials said most of the deficit for irrigation areas should be made up by reservoir storage supplies.

Water supplies vary over West

BURLEY — About 700 Idaho Future Farmers of America members are expected to attend the 41st annual state leadership conference opening March 29 at the Ponderosa Inn.

Among the speakers will be Tim Burke, New Hampton, Iowa, national FFA president elected this past fall in Kansas City, Mo.

The first session will open at 1:30 p.m. March 29, and business meetings will continue through March 31. Burke will greet delegates at the opening session.

Other speakers March 29 include Dr. Darrell Hatfield, Minidoka County school superintendent. Business sessions and committee meetings will be conducted during the afternoon. The state public speaking contest is scheduled in the evening.

On Thursday, the Idaho Star State Farmer will be chosen and State Farmer degrees will be conferred on 89 outstanding FFA members. Burke will speak during one of the day's meetings. That evening, during the annual dinner, honorary state farmers and FFA Foundation Award winners will be chosen.

Business sessions, committee reports, election and installation of new officers are scheduled on Friday.

Zane Hansen, Moreland, state FFA president, will conduct meetings. Other officers are Chris Yamamoto, Caldwell, vice president; Robert Abbott, Parma, secretary; Tom Sutton, Rexburg, treasurer; Paul Tew, Firth, reporter; and Paul Beckman, Weiser, sentinel.

Predator control said states' job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — States should take over the primary job of protecting flocks and herds from predators while looking for ways other than poison to accomplish the job, an interior department official said Monday.

Nathaniel P. Reed, assistant secretary for fish and wildlife and parks, testified to a subcommittee of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, on a bill to change the predator control program.

He spoke in support of a bill for a three-year federal aid program to states for predator control.

The bill embodies three thoughts the Interior Department considers the main ones in the issue, he said:

— That management of non-migratory species is primarily a state responsibility.

— More research is needed to find a better way to control only the predators that are actually causing damage.

— Poison is not the way to do it.

The old predator control program "has been popular among sheep ranchers," for obvious reasons, Reed said. But the public at large finds increasing reason to oppose it, he said, because it is "believed to be the cause of the shrinking of certain wildlife populations" and because research does not really show what the actual predator-caused losses are.

Tom Garrett, wildlife consultant for the Friends of the Earth, a conservation organization, said his group generally supports the bill's approach, but "we have serious doubts as to the wisdom of ending federal subsidies at the end of three years. This will necessarily reduce the ability of the federal government to influence and control the actions of the states."

Garrett said Friends of the Earth agree predator control should aim at the specific animal that is causing the damage.

Farm Alien hiring bill dies

BOISE (UPI) — A Senate bill to make it a misdemeanor to hire an illegal alien died in the House Agricultural Affairs Committee Tuesday when members said its provisions were far too "broad."

Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, successfully moved the bill be held "for further study." Immediately after the motion passed, Chairman Jack Chaborn, R-Twin Falls, said this probably would be the last meeting of that committee at this session.

Thanking his fellow members for at least considering the measure Rep. Virgil Farmer, D-Nampa, said he felt the committee nonetheless was making a mistake by not putting it out for floor action.

He said he understands more "backlogs are headed this way" and added, "I'm afraid we're going to have more trouble by not having it than by having it."

In its present form the bill would go into effect next Jan. 1. Rep. Wayne Tibbitts, D-Lorenzo, said, "If that is the case why not leave it for the next legislature to consider?"

Farmer said he felt it would offer a warning to those tempted to bring in illegal aliens that Idaho "will not put up with it forever."

Rep. Max Kendall, R-Aberdeen, said he felt the bill puts the burden on the wrong persons. He said it should be on those who bring in illegal aliens and not those who hire them.

Little said he felt there is a problem and that the senate tried to solve it. But he questioned how the bill would be enforced.

He suggested the problem really is one for immigration authorities.

Rep. Kurt Johnson, R-Idaho Falls, said that with "so many forged documents these days" it would be difficult for a farmer to know whether a man he hired had a false passport or visa.

Concurring Rep. S. Albert Johnson, D-Pocatello said a beet thinning crew of 50 or 60 workers will come in and a farmer has no way to check the identity of each member. He said it should be up to the crew leader.

Rep. Angus Condie, R-Preston, said that to be safe under the bill an employer would have to interrogate each worker.

"You can't look at a person and tell whether he's a citizen or not," Condie said.

However, Condie said a bill of this sort later on might be acceptable if it could be modified so it would not be so broad.

Support asked on TIP

GLENN FERRY — Jack Streeter, spokesman for local organizations sponsoring the Turn In A Pusher (TIP) program, urging local groups to support the project.

He has spoken before the chamber of commerce and plans to present talks to other local organizations. He said that a similar project in Tampa, Fla., resulted in 25 convictions to hard drug sales cases in the first six months the drive was in operation.

Streeter said he has been corresponding with a retired FBI man from Tampa about the project. He reported the program, which has been operating in Boise for several months has resulted in several arrests and convictions.

The program includes marijuana and other controlled substances as well as hard drugs, Streeter said.

The Glenn Ferry TIP program answers phone number 587-4682 around-the-clock. All information on suspected drug pushing operations is given to authorities for investigation. Names of the tipsters are kept secret. If a conviction results from the tip, a reward is won.

Mrs. Kenneth Peterson and Mrs. Earl Christensen were in charge of refreshments which were served by the fourth grade room mothers.

Railroad history sold at Philadelphia auction

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The auctioneer's voice echoed through the halls of the old building and bounced off the faded marble columns. The crowd stirred.

"Lot Number 408," he shouted. "Two framed photographs of the Lincoln funeral train..."

A nod, a flick of a hand and the photographs were gone—another piece of railroad history sold to the highest bidder.

The scene was the 30th Street Station, once the proud home of the old Pennsylvania Railroad. It was the site Monday of the sale of more than 100,000 railroad memorabilia placed on the auction block by the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad.

More than 1,000 persons packed the station to bid on items such as century-old passbooks, posters and lanterns—relics of the age when the railroad was king.

Most of them were railroad buffs who traveled hundreds of miles to bid. But the front rows were filled with professional buyers, many of them from museums and historical associations.

They answered the auctioneer's voice with bids as high as $500 for a handful of old tickets, $60 for faded dining car menus and $300 for a photo album of steam locomotives.

DIETRICH — The Dietrich School and Community Booster Club will have a cooked food sale at 9 a.m. Friday at the city hall. Proceeds will go for sponsoring a girl to Girls' State.

Hard to believe bright, colorful Gooding facility really a school

GOODING — For anyone who attended the old high school of drab, chipped painted walls, a walk through the new Gooding High School is a real surprise.

Some will find it hard to believe that such a pleasant, cheerful building is actually a school. The walls are covered with a white, washable vinyl material, with a two-foot high brightly painted strip at the top in red, green, yellow and blue.

Separating the color from the white vinyl is a black picture molding, which eliminates nail holes in the wall.

The lockers in the student commons room are bright yellow and green, and there are 40,000 square feet of maple flooring and 9,000 square feet of tile.

The $1.5 million school contains 23 basic teaching stations; has a 450-car parking lot; a multi-purpose room which seats 650 with 330 fixed seats; a gym which seats 2,300; controlled heating and air conditioning, and a complete public address system.

The library has individual study carrels and study rooms, and has storage for filmstrips, slides and tapes. In the biology classroom, the lab desks and class desks are combined. Each two-pupil station has its own water and gas.

In addition there is a project room with its own heating and lighting which can be regulated to control growth for special projects.

Special features of the arts and crafts room are a pottery wheel, loom and kiln. All rooms are wired for closed-circuit television when it becomes available. The public address system can use radio and tapes to play throughout the school.

Statements on sewer clarified

GOODING — Robert Amoureux, Jerome, today clarified several statements pertaining to the sewage problem in Gooding County.

Amoureux, environmentalist for the South Central Health Department in Jerome, Gooding and Lincoln counties, spoke to the Gooding County Planning Commission Thursday evening.

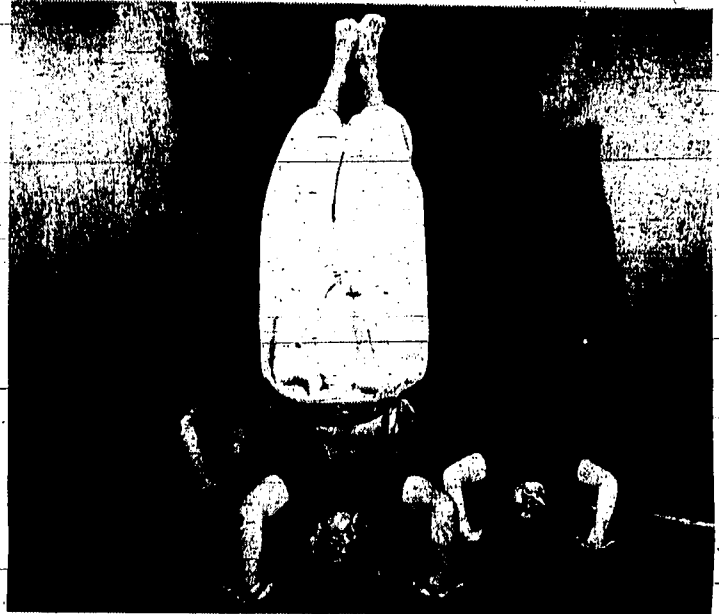

He said a sewer lagoon must be between 200 and 300 feet from a dwelling, but one quarter mile is preferred. Six feet of soil is required for a seepage pit, he said, but 8 to 10 feet is optimum.

It was reported that seepage pits could not be installed in Gooding County because the soil was not deep enough, but Amoureux said they were being installed in the area with difficulty.

He said ground level drain beds and drain fields are being installed where there is shallow soil depth.
