

Pretty scary!

MAGIC VALLEY children will be converging on homes for Halloween treats tonight. Students at the Bo Peep kindergarten dressed for the occasion today. Their Jack O'Lanterns were lit Monday night, possibly as an advance warning of tonight's adventures.

Caution urged on tiny spooks

TWIN FALLS — Mini-goblins and other assorted "spooks" will make their Halloween rounds tonight.

The "trick or treat" brigade will make its annual appearance about dusk, and calls at homes will probably continue until late in the evening.

Because the youngsters may be paying more attention to their fun and less to traffic hazards, motorists are asked to drive carefully and keep a close watch for children.

Police Chief Frank Barnett said parents can help reduce the accident hazard by being sure small children can see well through masks. Barnett said all children under 16 years of age must be off the street by 11 p.m. unless accompanied by adults.

Victim extracted

THE AGONIZING task of removing victims from the twisted wreckage continued today as the death toll mounted in the south Chicago commuter train wreck. The disaster was the worst railroad mishap in the United States in more than 14 years. (UPI)

Toll mounts in twisted Chicago train wreckage

By FRANK L. SPENCER

(CHICAGO, UPI) — J. A. Watts was at the controls of the modern, four-car commuter train during Monday's morning rush-hour when it apparently overshot the 27th Street stop on the South Side.

He stopped the train and began backing up, triggering the railroad's "red" warning light. But it was too late. Another six-car Illinois Central commuter train speeding along behind him slammed into the rear of the first train, causing the nation's worst train accident in 14 years.

At least 44 persons were killed in two-train disaster and more than 320 others injured, some critically.

"People were flying all over the place," Mrs. Laurence Browning, 33, a passenger on one train, said. "I just screamed and screamed, but somehow I was able to find my way off that thing."

Harold Melcher, 21, who was in the first car of the approaching rear train, said he heard the conductor shout: "We're going to crash. Everybody get down." He said he dropped to the floor and escaped without injury.

In the impact the first car of the train coming up from behind telescoped into the last double-decker car of the first train. Most of the dead and seriously injured were riding in the double-decker. It took rescue workers six hours to remove bodies and survivors from the wreckage.

Viet deadline passes as US predicts delay

By United Press International
The Communists' deadline for signing a Vietnam cease-fire passed today with no signing and no indication when one might be signed.

In Paris, North Vietnam softened its demand for a signing today. Setting of the date was left to Washington, but the Communists said it should be "as soon as possible."

The White House said today President Nixon is "seeking a lasting peace" in Vietnam and will not be stampeded by either a Hanoi-set deadline or the U.S. presidential election Nov. 7.

Viet Cong peace delegation spokesman Ly Van Sau, in a press statement, criticized the United States for not signing the nine-point cease-fire accords here today as the Communists demanded and as they said Washington "had agreed."

"We demand that the U.S. government respect the text of the accords agreed upon by the side of the Democratic Republic of (North) Vietnam and the American side, and that it sign the agreements as soon as possible."

The Viet Cong statement was the first official Communist admission the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will consider as valid beyond today's alleged deadline the bulky accord negotiated secretly by White House adviser Henry A. Kissinger.

The Communists extended the deadline shortly after the South Vietnamese peace delegation, in a statement to United Press International, warned that "substantive questions" remained to be settled with the Communists before a stable peace can be achieved in Vietnam. The delegation said Saigon wants firm guarantees about the withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia and guarantees the South Vietnamese population will be granted the right of free self-determination.

"The only deadline we're operating under is the one that will bring about the right kind of an agreement," presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said.

North Vietnam had demanded that the United States sign the nine-point Vietnam cease-fire and political agreement by today but apparently was willing to continue negotiations in view of White House insistence on at least one more final negotiating session.

Ziegler said, "The president has been very meticulous in making clear" that he will not agree to the signing of a peace pact until the remaining outstanding issues are clarified.

"It is the President's firm intention to have a settlement which will offer the best hope for lasting peace and a peace that does not leave the seed of a future conflict," Ziegler said.

Kissinger was in the White House today, and while it was apparent he would be traveling again soon to Paris, officials said there was no set timetable for another round of negotiations with Communist diplomats.

Reports had been circulating in Washington that Kissinger would fly to Paris Friday and be ready to sign an end-the-war treaty by Sunday.

Officials today discounted the possibility there would be any signing before another round of consultations with Hanoi's delegates in Paris and another probable trip by Kissinger to Saigon to bring South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu into the fold.

Officials said at this point Kissinger had no definite plans to leave Washington. But it was clear he was in touch with Hanoi.

French authorities, who have been in charge of the physical side of the 3 1/2-year-old talks, sent a crew of workers to the conference hall on Paris' Avenue Kleber today to put into the meeting hall steel stands and flashlights for television crews.

McGovern suggests US balks

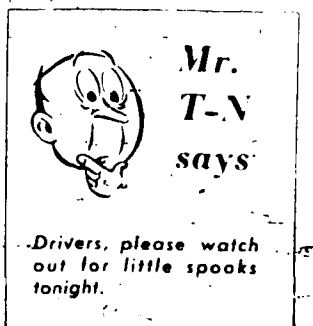

By United Press International
Sen. George McGovern says President Nixon may be backing away from a Vietnam peace settlement. Administration officials claim that McGovern is hurting efforts to end the war.

After hearing reports in Pittsburgh that the White House would not initial a draft for a nine-point peace plan today, McGovern said that Nixon may be holding up a settlement to appease South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

"Even now the promise of peace is first displayed, then postponed and possibly withdrawn because of the veto of Thieu," McGovern said. He also said that "every day the war continues is significant. It is one more day that the fighting goes on; it is one more day that our prisoners stay in their cells."

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said in a paid, political broadcast from Washington that McGovern's position was "incredible."

Agnew said the United States was on the verge of peace after 10 years.

Trudeau grip cut in Canada

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's ruling Liberal party lost its majority control of Canada's House of Commons in Monday's national elections, finishing in a virtual deadlock with the surprising Conservative party.

The balance of power was held by minority parties and observers said the stalemate was almost sure to result in another election in the near future to give one party or another a clear mandate.

Late returns today showed the Liberals controlling 108 of the country's 264-seat constituencies and the Conservatives, led by Robert Stanfield, had 107. The Socialist New Democratic party NDP won 32 seats and the Quebec-based Social Credit had 15.

Attacks hit all Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist troops increased their attacks the width and length of South Vietnam today for the sixth consecutive day, and the United States launched near record B-52 strikes on North Vietnam, military spokesmen said.

On South Vietnamese battlefields, the Saigon high command said there were 121 Communist shelling, terror and ground attacks between dawn Monday and dawn today, an increase of 17 over the previous day. Two district towns (county seats) on the central coast were lost.

U.S. B-52 bombers flew at least 39 raids in 13 waves over North Vietnam between noon Monday and noon today, matching the record of 13 set last Aug. 12, the U.S. command said. The reports came on the day which the Communists said had been chosen for signing a cease-fire.

At least 130 jet fighter-bombers hit North Vietnam Monday, and a three-ship Naval task force bombarded shore targets on at least five occasions during the day, spokesmen reported.

CSI student poll suggests strong Republican showing

By DAVID ESPINO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A student poll taken at CSI shows Republicans leading in the three major election races, with the senatorial contest the closest.

The poll, conducted Oct. 18 by a college class, shows Rep. James A. McClure, Republican senatorial candidate with 58 per cent of the vote, compared to Davis' 42 per cent.

A sample of 250 students was used in the study, but only 200 of them said they intended to vote. McClure received 128 votes to 93 for his Democratic opponent, Davis. McClure's margin dropped to 55-45 per cent among those who said they would vote.

President Nixon and incumbent Rep. Orval Hansen both rolled up huge margins over their Democratic challengers in the polls, each of them receiving majorities of 77 per cent.

Nixon took 180 votes compared to Sen. George McGovern's 46, while American Party candidate Rep. John Schmitz received five votes and Peace and Freedom Party hopeful Dr. Benjamin Spock received a pair of votes.

The president's 180 votes was 77 per cent of those cast in the poll, compared to McGovern's 19 per cent.

Hansen also received 77 per cent of the vote, compared to 23 per cent for his Democratic challenger, Willis Ludlow. The vote spread was 163 to 47.

Steve Carter, political science instructor whose class conducted the poll, said most of those surveyed were 18 to 21 years old, although some of the students polled were over 30.

A study of religious affiliation among the students polled show both McGovern and Davis running even with their opponents among Catholic voters, but Ludlow trails Hansen by 7 per cent to 30 per cent among the same people.

Mormons participating in the poll favor — the three Republicans, Nixon, McClure and Hansen, by about 75-25 per cent in their respective races.

The poll results, obtained with a computer program at CSI, shows the Democrats drawing their greatest strength among self-supporting students with incomes of $3,000 to $5,000, while the Republicans show greater support among self-supporting students earning over $5,000.

Blacks attend classes 3rd day

NEW YORK (UPI)—Twenty-nine black and Puerto Rican children ordered to attend predominantly white junior high school 211 returned to classes for the third day today without major incident.

Some 300 white parents, protesting the enrollment of 31 minority children at the school, were relatively subdued as the children arrived for classes at 8:40 a.m. Only a few boos and jeers were heard.

Only 150 of 10,000 enrolled in the district's schools showed up for classes Monday. The student boycott was in protest against the Board of Education order admitting the black and Puerto Rican children. The boycott was expected to continue today but there was no early word on the extent of student absenteeism.

Teachers arrived at the school in the Carnesie section of Brooklyn 10 minutes before the children today, and Mrs. Judy Koretz, president of the Parents Association of JHS 211, asked parents over a bullhorn not to harass the teachers.

"Our quarrel is not with the teachers," she said. "Our quarrel is with the Board of Education."

The Rev. Wilbert Miller, a spokesman for the Brownsville group, said the children were "courageous...they're not afraid. They have confidence in the police department."

Miller said he was "tentatively" prepared to meet with the local school board of District 18 to discuss the issue, which he insists is "strictly racist."

"Tentatively, perhaps, we can have a meeting," Miller said.

The boycott sponsored by white parents, forced six of eight public schools in the district to close Monday.

Trial Seen... block asked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has been asked to block a trial designed to force identification of donors of an estimated $10 million to Republican campaign organizations before April 7.

President Nixon's campaign committees appealed to the chief justice Monday. They asked Burger to stop proceedings scheduled to start today in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C.

The lower court scheduled the start of the trial of a lawsuit brought by Common Cause, which claims a 1975 Federal Corrupt Practices Act requires disclosure of campaign donations above $100.

Church ruling asked

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Justice Department wants the Supreme Court to overturn a lower court ruling that would force the armed services academies to give up their 150-year-old tradition of compulsory chapel attendance.

Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold told the Supreme Court Monday that compulsory religious services are a necessary ingredient of officer training. He argued the practice restricts constitutionally protected rights "only to the extent necessary to vindicate legitimate military need."

The court has recognized in past opinions, Griswold said, that overriding demands of discipline and duty mean the "scope of a serviceman's First Amendment freedoms of speech and expression are not the same as those in civilian life."

Recently the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 that compulsory attendance at Sunday services at the U.S. Military Academy, the Naval Academy and the Air Force Academy violated the constitutional ban on "an establishment of religion."

AEC chief to visit Gem site

By DAVID ESPO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Atomic Energy Commissioner William O. Doub will visit the Idaho nuclear research station in the next few months "so people can talk freely without fear."

Rep. Orval Hansen, Republican incumbent campaigning for re-election, said Monday Doub had assured him of the visit, scheduled for this December or January of next year, to make his own personal review of the safety research program being undertaken at the Nuclear Reactor Testing Station west of Idaho Falls.

The issue of the nation's safety research has recently been thrust into the scientific spotlight through a series of articles in Science Magazine, and has been raised in the current political campaign by Democrat Willis Ludlow, who is challenging Hansen on election day.

Hansen said the safety research—in effect, work being done to prevent catastrophe in case of accidents at nuclear sites—had been the subject of a "complete review ordered by the Joint Atomic Energy Commission," of which he is a member.

"The report is almost ready," Hansen said, and will be the basis for extensive hearings at the beginning of the next session of Congress.

The incumbent representative also said he had requested the AEC undertake a review of its "major programs."

"There is no problem of safety at the NRTS," Hansen said. "The question is whether we know enough of the answers in case of certain types of accidents."

He said the safety research program was expanding rapidly, and Doub's visit would in part be devoted to determining "if the safety research program is getting enough of the right kind of resources."

Back in his district for a hurry-up two week re-election campaign, the Idaho Falls Republican also said his opponent had "misrepresented" his position on possibility of a value added tax. The VAT, which Ludlow and others claim is a national sales tax, was the subject of an article Hansen wrote in the American Legion Magazine, according to the Congressman.

But he said his support of any possible VAT was contingent upon a "dollar for dollar" reduction in property taxes, and a system of income tax credits pegged to the new levy which would favor low income persons over those making more money.

He said the value added tax was "not an issue, and has not been proposed," and added that the Nixon administration has recently "said it was not interested."

Hansen did say, however, that he thought there would be no new tax increases in the next year, but that further tax measures would depend on Congress's response to what he said was the challenge of "reorganizing the whole budget making and appropriations process."

"The challenge to the next Congress is either to face up to bringing spending under control or watching the President's hand strengthened by a taxpayers' revolt," Hansen said.

He said he had supported a recent move in the House to grant the president authority to cut certain spending levels without Congressional approval as a "temporary" delegation of authority.

But he said it was "not good in principle for Congress to delegate" that authority, although in this case, he said, the Congress had "abdicated its responsibility" by approving large amounts of appropriations.

His opponent, Ludlow, had charged that Hansen's support for the recent bill was the economic equivalent of the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which enabled President Lyndon B. Johnson to begin the buildup of American men and aid to South Vietnam without a formal Congressional declaration of war.

In this case, Hansen said, "Congress had not been able to determine overall (spending) limits and then resist individual appropriations as they come along."

Nader study 'poorly done,' Hansen claims

TWIN FALLS — A recent Ralph Nader study of Congress was "very poorly done," according to Rep. Orval Hansen.

While Hansen expressed approval of the idea of a citizen's study of the Congress, he said the recent one completed by a Nader study group was put together by "inexperienced people... who did not understand how Congress worked."

He said the report on him and his voting record originally contained 54 errors of fact and resulting "errors of judgment."

The final draft, the one that was released to the public, corrected some of the "nitty gritty" of politics, and was "somewhat naive."

The representative said the comment about naivete resulted from a discussion he had with a Nader researcher about campaign contribution laws and other measures to illuminate the personal finances of office holders.

Hansen said he told the researcher that any bill would ultimately depend on the "basic integrity" of the individual, and she responded that that was a naive point of view, he said.

But, Hansen said, acknowledging one of the study's claims, "I don't get all enamored with partisan politics," and said he had brushed aside complaints of some of his backers that he was slighted when Vice President Agnew visited Twin Falls a week ago.

The welcoming posters in town encouraged people to see the vice president and Rep. James A. McClure, but contained no specific mention of Hansen. He said the failure to list him individually was "purely an oversight," and he had instructed his staff and supporters to ignore it.

Chills offered tonight

TWIN FALLS — Nostalgia and chills will mix tonight.

A Twin Falls radio station will broadcast a series of five well-remembered programs from the heyday of radio drama between 9 p.m. and midnight — traditionally the most scary hours of Halloween.

The broadcasts over KTFI will include "The Whistler," an "Inner Sanctum" episode complete with squeaking door; "The Shadow," the classic "Wrong Number" tale on "Suspense" starring Agnes Moorehead; and H. G. Wells' "War of the Worlds" performed by Orson Welles in 1938.

The latter show will anchor the broadcast at 11 p.m. Wells' performance on Oct. 30, 1938, spread terror across the United States as many listeners believed it to be an actual occurrence instead of a skillfully created radio drama.

Amendment supported by League

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls League of Women Voters today announced its support of a constitutional amendment to reorganize state government.

Mrs. Alyne Brown, state constitutional amendment chairman, said, "If Idaho's administrative agencies are to be responsive to the needs of the people, the structure needs to be simple and understandable to the citizens it serves."

Mrs. Brown said no effective government reorganization has been effected since 1919.

Senate Joint Resolution (SJR) 132, which appears on the November ballot, calls for reorganization of government by Jan. 1, 1975, with a limit of 20 agencies established by law.

Hansen optimistic on project funds

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Orval Hansen Monday said he was "fairly optimistic" the Salmon Falls Reclamation project could receive congressional appropriations.

He termed the reclamation effort a "meritorious project," and noted it had met with virtually no objections from citizen groups.

He noted there are currently "several billions of dollars in projects authorized but not funded," but nevertheless expressed optimism that money would be placed in the budget for the project to allow for planning to begin.

"There's a pretty good chance to move ahead more or less on schedule," Hansen said.

The bill gained the approval of Congress in the last several weeks of the recent session, and was signed by the president ten days ago.

Congressional hearings were held in Twin Falls six months ago on the proposed project, which would bring irrigation to thousands of acres south of the present high line canal.

Clinic set Friday

TWIN FALLS — A birth defects clinic will be conducted at the South Central District Department of Health, 321 Second Ave. E., Friday.

Dr. Garth G. Myers, director of the Birth Defects Center at Primary Children's Hospital, Salt Lake City, will be the physician in charge.

Magic Valley parents having children with birth defects of the central nervous system who wish to attend the clinic should contact private physicians for referral.

Patient information or history should accompany either the doctor or the parent of the patient to the clinic.

Appointments may be made by calling the health department, 733-6711.

The clinic will be sponsored by the National Foundation-March of Dimes and the Department of Health.

Dr. Myers will also address doctors, nurses, and other interested health professionals at the College of Southern Idaho Thursday from 7:30 p.m. until 10 p.m. in the Shields Academic Building.

On The Cuff

An amazing thing about modern national political campaigns is how easily a campaign apparatus can borrow money when the bank account is cleaned out. The Humphrey campaign of 1968 left debts of approximately $9 million.

It is not clear from the latest financial statement filed by the McGovern managers whether the campaign is more than $2 million, more than $4 million — or more than the latter figure — in the red.

And the statement deals only in loans, apparently. Millions have been borrowed to meet the commitments as they fell due. When the sums needed in the closing days of this campaign are added, it seems a good bet that the total owed come election day will be still higher.

Financing that wouldn't be possible in any ordinary transactions are commonplace during the frenzied days and weeks of a presidential election campaign. Some of the unsuccessful candidates for the Democratic nomination this year are reported to owe hundreds of thousands of dollars. Some of the Republicans, perhaps, owe as much.

But just because the politicians can get away with it — don't try it at the corner store. If you do, you will go without eating! — OAK

Recall Ignored

Buying a used car always was a chancy business. It still is, warns Traffic Safety magazine, despite federal regulations governing vehicle safety.

This is because many new car owners who have been receiving recall notices about a possible flaw in their model have not been having the necessary inspection made or the recall-related defect corrected, writes Jim Kiely, road safety supervisor for the National Safety Council, in the organization's publication.

These cars may eventually be sold to private parties or traded in on new cars. Thus unsuspecting used car buyers may be driving cars with possible defective engine mounts or faulty rear axles or some other potentially dangerous flaw.

More than 30 million cars have been issued recall notices for the inspection and correction of possible safety defects since passage of the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966.

Automakers estimate that about 90 per cent of the owners of new cars bring in their vehicles for the necessary, serious repairs. But with cars four or five years old, the figure falls to about 50 per cent.

Kiely suggests that:

(1) All used car dealers should make sure the necessary recall-type maintenance work has been performed on all the cars they sell. Dealer associations should require this. A more drastic method would be to make it a legal requirement.

(2) Insurance coverage might be refused to those vehicles that have not had possible defects corrected. This system could easily include those cars sold by one private party to another.

(3) States with mandatory motor vehicle inspection laws should refuse to pass cars that have not had recall defects corrected.

In the meantime, a person considering buying a used car from a dealer can protect himself by having the dealer check the car's serial number against the warranty processing data banks of the manufacturer. These contain the serial numbers of all recall-repaired vehicles.

MR. SPECTATOR

Sniffing For Purity

What may be odoriferous to some simply smells bad to others. And that could be one of the major problems the Environmental Protection Agency confronts as it attempts to establish what constitutes an odor and how intense it should be before it is regulated.

Yes, odorous substances are next in line to come under review of the EPA. To start, the agency has proposed adopting a test developed by the American Society of Testing Materials Methods in which a panel would breathe the air containing various quantities of a substance. When half the members of a panel are able to detect the odor, that level of concentration becomes an odor unit.

The next step is to determine how many odor units of each substance will be permitted. That will be the most difficult part and already some objections have been heard that the method is unscientific at best.

Perhaps it is. But it is the human nose which is offended by noxious substances in the air. What better mechanism exists to detect and rate them by?

As with other types of pollution control, the system is not foolproof and as standards are developed some of them may be found faulty. The EPA must caution that zeal does not overcome practicality.

But with the cooperative efforts of all concerned, there is no reason why odors which assault the nostrils on a large scale cannot be deodorized.

BLACK BLACKOUT

The "invisible American" is no longer so invisible.

For the first time, according to a study commissioned by the American Federation of Teachers, the role of the Negro in American history is being fairly and adequately treated in school textbooks.

The study, "The Negro in Modern American History Textbooks," was prepared by Irving Sloan, a junior high school teacher in Scarsdale, N. Y.

Three previous editions of the study, the first in 1966, found that junior and senior high school history texts used around the country either ignored or presented a distorted view of the American Negro.

The latest study involved an examination of 19 recently published history texts. While it found room for improvement in most of them, it also found that in terms of historical scholarship, "they meet the highest standards, almost without exception."

The time has now come to praise what American history textbooks have achieved in their treatment of black Americans, says Sloan.

"Much, if not most, and, in some instances all, that we critics, black and white, have been calling for through the years has come to pass."

ROBERT ALLEN

Morality Is As Morality Does

WASHINGTON — For Sen. McGovern, morality is as morality does. With characteristic hauteur and unctuousness, the South Dakota radical is loudly and rancorously trading against political opponents as "immoral" and "evil" — carefully not spelling out exactly on what and why.

At the same time, he plausibly sees nothing dishonest or unethical in collecting tens of thousands of dollars from taxpayers and doing nothing for it — except to scamper about the country running for office.

That's what he has been doing for 20 months while being paid $42,500 as a U.S. Senator, plus another $250,000 in numerous perquisites and fringe benefits. In effect, taxpayers have been financing his Presidential electioneering.

For some 20 months, the morality-spouting leftist has done virtually nothing to earn his nearly $300,000 in salary and benefits.

For most of the Congressional session this year, he was away from the Senate for weeks at a time. When he did appear, it was only briefly — and sort of incidentally. Of the several hundred record votes on momentous issues in the Senate, McGovern was on hand for very few — and again only passing.

Yet while ignoring these eventful deliberations and professes to feel most deeply about the Vietnam war. On every Senate showdown on the various "end-the-war" amendments and resolutions sponsored by fellow doves, McGovern was prominently not present.

He didn't even show up on the one issue he sanctimoniously professes to feel most deeply about — the Vietnam war.

He has shed buckets of crocodile tears about Vietnam, but on these important tests his votes weren't where his mouth was. He was too busy dishing out campaign promises — which he subsequently junked or waffled on.

He has shed buckets of crocodile tears about Vietnam, but on these important tests his votes weren't where his mouth was. He was too busy dishing out campaign promises — which he subsequently junked or waffled on.

In the New Left, apparently there is nothing immoral or evil about such a devious course.

Among the self-righteous do-gooders, morality is as morality does.

Collecting some $300,000 in salary and perquisites while doing little or nothing for it is only part of the McGovern "morality" story.

In the 14 years the South Dakota radical has been in Congress (four in the House; 10 in the Senate), he not only has become well-to-do, but has used his office to make tens of thousands of dollars in lucrative moonlighting.

In three years (1969-71), he pocketed $147,000 in lecture fees and other payments.

That explains how and why he now owns a $160,000 custom-built home in a fashionable Washington residential area after living for years in a modest suburban six-room frame house; a $75,000 eleven-acre estate on Maryland's Eastern Shore; a "blind trust" that netted him $4,200 last year; and sundry other assets. Prior to coming to Washington and latching onto the Federal payroll, McGovern never earned more than $6,000 a year. Politics has paid off very handsomely for him — particularly running for president.

McGovern's $160,000 Japanese-style Washington home, which he bought from Chief Judge David Bazelon of the U.S. Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, has ten rooms and four baths. Bazelon, a New Leftist, handed down the majority opinion last spring upholding McGovern in the crucial California and Chicago delegate contest. McGovern's Eastern Shore estate, sonorously called "Royal Oak," has a swimming pool, tennis court, white picket fence and sun porch extending the full length of the house.

Since last October, he hasn't spent five consecutive days in Washington. During this protracted absenteeism (while drawing full pay and perquisites), his office has been run by assistants and other personnel provided by taxpayers. One casualty of this long absence is an investigation McGovern announced last year would be made by the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, which he heads.

Willie And Orval

By DAVID ESPO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Willis Ludlow and John Thiebert are both hoping for the same election day phenomenon — that the voters will up and vote their principles.

The basic fallacy with that hope is that comfort is more comfortable than change, and besides, Orval Hansen probably represents more "principles" held by Second Congressional District voters than either Ludlow, the Democrat, on his left, or Thiebert, of the American Party, on the other side.

Ludlow has been hammering away for six months on the basic themes of his campaign, that American policy in the areas of defense, tax laws, protection of the Bill of Rights, and preservation of the environment have been reduced to whipping boys for the generals, economic corporate giants, law and order policemen and development corporations.

Thiebert, for his part, although late in the race, has said basically that the federal government is in everything it shouldn't be in, like the United Nations and social security, and won't commit itself sufficiently where it should, such as in Southeast Asia.

Hansen, who has been in Congress for four years, can't really agree with either basic position of his opponents, since he has tended to vote with the administration on most of the important issues, including defense spending, and he has worked hard for the interests of Idaho, as seen in his support for the National Recreation Area.

In spite of the cakewalk nature of the reelection campaign for Hansen, the race has developed into an interesting one, largely because of Ludlow's invention and sense of confrontation politics.

In Twin Falls last week, Ludlow held a one-man debate in front of Hansen's downtown Congressional office. Hansen, of course, was absent from the debate, in keeping with his basic strategy of staying in Washington until the Congress ended its session, and his office staff went home for lunch a few minutes before noon — and a few minutes before Ludlow knocked on the office door.

There are those who are saying that the debate, like earlier ones in Idaho Falls and Boise, was a cheap political stunt, an attempt to get some free publicity in a campaign that lacks funds, in spite of recent fund raising successes.

Rather than try to control his personality as so many politicians do, Ludlow has put up with it, and the result is a boyish enthusiasm that can't help but appeal to at least a few voters.

And Ludlow has also been hitting Hansen on the issue of representation, as the debate is meant to show and while the debate had a sound of one hand clapping, it does help point up Hansen's campaign tactics.

He had consistently refused to come back to the district to campaign, pleading the work he is doing in Congress on behalf of his district. Earlier in the year he sent his administrative assistant, Louise Shadduck, along the trail to keep the voter enthusiasms from waning too much until he could get back and appear.

Not entirely parenthetically, Hansen's behavior is instructive vis a vis Rep. James A. McClure's. McClure, involved in a close race for the Senate, decided campaigning was the better part of representing, and came back to the state early to work the voters hard. If Hansen were involved in a similarly close race, what would his decision have been?

Hansen, who according to a report by a Ralph Nader study group, doesn't much like the "nitty gritty" of politics, but the effect of his strategy is potentially damaging.

Ludlow's campaign issues have not been free swinging, below the belt attacks. They have been rather simple and straightforward.

"Orval Hansen is for the value added tax, a national sales tax," he says again and again.

Hansen may very well favor the value added tax, and there is nothing at all wrong with that in the eyes of many, but unless he stumps the district, telling everyone what he does and doesn't favor, voters can't even make their voting decisions on a reasonable, comparative basis. A fundamental necessity of electoral democracy is an informed electorate, and candidates have a responsibility to contribute that information.

It was preordained long ago that Hansen wouldn't be involved in close race. Ludlow, a liberal by any standards, was the only Democrat to seek the nomination to oppose Hansen, and the toughest challenge Hansen could have found himself facing never materialized.

George Hansen, enormously popular in the Second District, decided in what was a brave, but probably foolish move, to seek the support of all the state's Republicans in a Senatorial bid, and saved the congressman the embarrassment of a primary challenge, and again later, the riskiness of a strong third party bid on the American Party ticket.

On top of all that, Ludlow failed to gain the endorsement of the organized labor movement in Idaho, when it chose to remain neutral, even while endorsing Democrat Dr. William E. (Bud) Davis for the Senate.

Hansen holds a seat on the House Education and Labor Committee, and some have been unkind enough to suggest that that is the reason for labor's neutrality.

But that should come as no surprise, especially to George Hansen, who upset a few people when he told all, or at least part, about a big corporation move to make the Senate safe for McClure and the State House safe for George Hansen in 1974.

Hansen raised an interesting point with his disclosures, and maybe that is what this election is all about, not only in the Idaho Second Congressional District, but across the country.

If voters do vote their "principles," whether they be Ludlow's, Thiebert's or Orval Hansen's, how long will the voting public be whipping boys for the powerful few?

The Laxative

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am writing only to give you my sincere thanks. A few weeks ago I wrote for your booklet on constipation as I have been plagued with this for over 10 years.

My entire life revolved around not being able to have a normal bowel movement and I lived on laxatives. A few months ago I was at the point where I was consuming two to three laxatives a day. It was sheer hell if you will pardon my expression.

Now, after reading your booklet and making up my mind to stop living on aids I can finally say I am no longer constipated. Mind you, it is still a little difficult, but I am determined to follow your rules and it gets easier each day. — Mrs. N.I.

Good for you! After 10 years or more of the "laxative habit," a few weeks may not be enough to get back completely to normal, but you are on your way.

I've learned as a physician that countless folks who deeply believe that they are hopelessly constipated really needn't be. They just don't understand the way a normal colon behaves, so they don't know what to do about their "constipation."

The booklet on constipation is available to anyone by mail. Send 25 cents for printing and handling, and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of Times-News.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In taking vitamins, is it any advantage or is it harmful to take more pills than prescribed?

My daughter takes six tablets each of iron, vitamin E and vitamin B. The prescription on the bottles call for one each daily. — H.C.B.

Your daughter apparently has bought the theory that a little of something is good, a lot of it is better. Of course, this is not correct.

Remember that if she eats a reasonably balanced diet to begin with she gets vitamins of all types and all she needs of each. The reason for prescribing supplemental vitamins is to make up for the lack of a balanced diet.

Extra amounts of vitamins E and B will do no particular harm, although supplemental iron can be harmful.

But really, now, why not believe the label on the bottle? At the very least your daughter, or you, could cut vitamin pills by five-sixths.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had ulcers for 15 years, drank and ate heavily, and then had three quarters of his stomach removed. He didn't drink for six months after surgery but now gets drunk about two times a week.

We argue about that. I say he can get another ulcer, and he says he cannot. Would you answer this in the paper? — T.Y.

Of course, he can get another ulcer in what's left of his stomach and duodenum. I hope he doesn't, because it will be pretty miserable for him. I doubt if there's anything to be gained by arguing about it. If he insists on taking the risk, that's too bad.

Halloween hex seen for Idaho

By RANDY LEBLANC
BOISE (UPI) — Halloween has a hex on it in Idaho this year.

The days of yore when kids were turned loose from their homes and allowed to roam the streets for hours, tricking a candy bar from one house and treating the next to a rotten egg, are for the most part, disappearing in Idaho — vanishing like the Great Pumpkin that traditionally holds sway over witches, hobgoblins, Charlie Brown and Snoopy.

According to Idaho police and store owners alike, the Halloween atmosphere in recent years has bred what it is supposed to breed only in myth — evil spirits. Parents have become spooked, store owners say, and Halloween sales for the first time have slacked off noticeably, from costumes and masks to candy and gum.

"Halloween around here is definitely on the way out," said Ed Taylor, assistant manager of Osco Variety store in Boise. Several other Idaho market and variety store managers agreed with his appraisal.

"One mother told me her neighborhood was grouping together and holding its own Halloween party to keep the kids off the street," a supermarket manager in Twin Falls said. "They just don't trust their kids out in the streets at night anymore on Halloween."

Another supermarket manager in Lewiston told of a few incidents last year where small children, out for an evening of trick or treating, returned home with their booty only to have their parents find an assortment of amphetamines, barbiturates and a marijuana cigarette or two.

"And then there's the old trick of putting a razor blade in an apple," said Jack Chacartegui, store manager at a market in Boise. He, too, reported several "worried" parents in check-out lines commenting on their neighborhoods' dangers.

"Let's face it, Halloween will never be what it used to be," he said.

"We're pretty much limiting ourselves to one or two kinds of trick or treat items this year. Mothers are buying a lot less candy and gum, and lots more pumpkins," Chacartegui added, saying the most popular goodies this year are "old favorite" candy bars — "ones adults will eat if kids don't."

Even members of Idaho's city police forces seem to be less anxious about age-old Halloween pranks — eggs smeared on car windshields, shaving cream and soap coating front porches and leftover Fourth of July fireworks saved for Old Man Jones' flower bed — and more concerned about actual crimes.

"We just don't worry about the traditional stuff on our patrols anymore," said Capt. Earl Walters of the Boise City Police, adding the Halloween beat, once an officer's nightmare, has been cut this year to one holdover shift.

"Muggings, drugs and burglaries are obviously what we're interested in."

"But I think that even that will fade out before long," he said, "and there won't be much left of Halloween but pumpkins in windows and dried corn on door-knockers."

Assets listed

BOISE (UPI) — Republican Senate nominee James A. McClure issued a statement of his personal worth Monday, showing total net assets of more than $115,000.

Included in the 48-year-old congressman's disclosure were half interest in a Payette law office worth $9,000; a house in Payette valued at $40,000; equity in an Arlington, Va., home listed at $46,000, and equity in a family farm at Nez Perce worth $46,000.

McClure's net liabilities were limited to $10,200 in notes owed the Riggs National Bank in Washington, D.C., according to the statement.

Expanded camper facilities urged

By United Press International
Second district congressional candidate Ed Williams suggested Monday that because of the large increase in campers and recreational vehicle use, the nation should expand its facilities for them.

"Every year the tremendous increase of recreational vehicles has overcrowded the state and national parks," the 44-year-old Democrat said. "We must provide additional facilities for those who use the camper and recreational vehicle for their vacation relaxation."

"There is no way we can legislate or stop the influx, but we can solve many of the problems faced by people who use these recreational vehicles," he added.

In Boise meanwhile,

Williams' Republican opponent, Steve Symms, said inflation and high taxes caused by irresponsible government spending is one of the most critical problems facing the nation.

"We all need to realize that inflation is a form of taxation," he told a group of supporters. "The National debt is not just a loan to be paid back by future generations, but is actually paid for now by inflating your dollars."

"It is the cruelest tax of all, because it destroys the purchasing power of elderly people on pensions and Social Security, and those citizens who must live on a fixed income," Symms, 34, a fruit rancher from Marsing, added.

He said taxes have reached the point where they are beginning to destroy incentive and initiative to work.

Elsewhere on the Idaho political spectrum Monday, U.S. Senate candidate James A. McClure said he is convinced the Idaho voter will not be fooled by "smear tactics" in the election this year. Campaigning in Jerome on the final day of a three-week bus tour to more than 200 towns around the state, the Payette Republican said, "Charges that I have a $500,000 war chest to run my campaign are absolutely and totally false."

Former hospital free of germs

BOISE (UPI) — Dr. Orville Merrell, director of the state's adult health facilities, has assured officials of the special services division that there are no dangerous germs at large in the Old St. Alphonsus Hospital.

Kay Pell, director of special services, requested the opinion from Merrell, whose division is in the Department of Environmental Protection and Health, after she received inquiries from employees about the possibility of germs remaining from patients treated at the former hospital. Special services recently moved into a new facility last spring and the building has been vacant until recently.

Mrs. Pell said the questions of the germs first came to light in a staff meeting when several of her division heads told her about employees' questions.

"I didn't think I was qualified to decide whether there were dangerous germs in the building, so I went to the health department," she said.

Mrs. Pell said she also received a letter from department employees which stated items which they thought should be corrected in the building.

She said the items included cleaning of walls and drapes and general "safety requirements." She said the letter was sent to Robert Lenaghan, director of Administrative Services.

Vets aides meet

BOISE (UPI) — Veterans Administration directors from a three-state area convened in Boise Monday for a two-day meeting of Idaho-Oregon-Washington regional V.A. medical directors.

Among topics discussed during the first day included nuclear medicine and specialized medical services in the Pacific northwest.

Keynoting the affair is Dr. Charles P. Henke, director of the Portland, Ore., V. A. Hospital and chairman of the district.

Tuesday's session includes a tour of the Idaho Veterans Home which Henke described as "an important part of the total community health picture for veterans in this medical district."

Investigations were begun by a number of agencies, including the railroad, the federal and state government transportation departments, the Illinois Commerce Commission, and the Cook County coroner's office.

Jack Humbert, the railroad's vice president in charge of operations, said overshooting the platform apparently let to the accident.

Humbert said the railroad uses block signals, with a green "go" light permitting speed up to 65 miles per hour, a yellow "caution" light, permitting speeds up to 30 m.p.h. and a red light which calls for the approaching train to stop.

Humbert said by the time the train backed up and the signal color changed to red the second train apparently had traveled too far and was traveling too fast to stop in time.

H. G. Mullins, I.C.'s superintendent of passenger service, said Watts told him he overshoot the platform by about 250 feet. Mullins said he didn't know why the engineer passed the platform but speculated "maybe he was going faster than he should have."

The accident happened about three miles south of the Loop in central Chicago and less than 100 yards from the Michael Reese Hospital complex. Dozens of doctors and nurses rushed from the hospital to give first aid to the injured.

Hundreds of motorists also stopped to lend assistance, jamming the nearby expressway. The platform of the 27th Street Station was turned into an "outdoor hospital" where the injured were treated until they could be removed to hospitals.

Dr. Edward Goldberg, staff surgeon at Michael Reese Hospital, was the first doctor at the scene. "Human limbs were hanging out the windows," he said. "There was one 22-year-old fellow whose heart stopped, but he was revived. About the only thing doctors and nurses could do at the scene was apply tourniquets and splints and give sedatives."

FIREMEN work to rescue passengers still trapped in wreckage of Illinois Central trains early Monday. At least 44 persons were killed and more than 300 injured when a train rammed into the rear of a standing commuter train south of Chicago. (UPI)

Bombing in Israel

TEL AVIV (UPI)—An Arab guerrilla bomb exploded on the third floor of Israel's tallest building today, blowing out two plate glass windows and slightly injuring three persons in the third such bombing in five weeks.

"It was definitely sabotage," said police spokesman Amos Aricha. He added that pieces of a watch were found near the scene of the blast, indicating it was a timed device.

Two pedestrians were injured when hit by falling glass, he said, while a woman inside the store was slightly scratched. It was the first reported guerrilla bombing in Tel Aviv since July 11 when nine persons were wounded in the central bus station.

Depot closes

COTTONWOOD, Idaho (UPI)—The Cottonwood depot of the Camas Prairie Railroad, a landmark in north central Idaho since 1909, will close next Wednesday.

Joe H. Harwood, Camas Prairie Lewiston office manager, said the business transactions involving freight will be handled through his office after the closure which he said has been approved by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Korean vote set Nov. 21

SEOUL (UPI)—The government announced today it will conduct a national referendum Nov. 21 to seek popular approval of a new constitution giving more powers to President Park Chung-hee at the expense of a weaker parliament.

A government spokesman said the voting date was set at a meeting of the Extraordinary State Council, the supreme ruling body of the nation Park placed under martial law on Oct. 17.

The new constitution, proposed last Friday, gives Park more powers, including the right to dissolve parliament, extends his term from four to six years and abolishes restrictions on the number of times he may run for office.

Campaigning for and against the constitution will be restricted.

Queen opens parliament

LONDON (UPI)—Queen Elizabeth II opened a new session of Parliament today with traditional pageantry and ceremony which fell slightly flat. Britons' eyes were on their pocketbooks, hit hard by inflation.

All the glitter and dash for which Britain's state ceremonies are famous were there today. The queen, her diamond crown gleaming, waved from the gilded state coach behind a royal escort of mounted Horse Guards, resplendent in burnished breastplates and high waving plumes, en route to the House of Commons. But some of the usual enthusiasm was missing.

"I seem to be the last survivor of a dying custom," said Sir Robert Cary, 74. He was the unchallenged winner of the classic race among members of Parliament to be first in their seats for the state opening. He was unchallenged because nobody else was there. "In the old days, some of us used to be here at 4 a.m. to reserve our places," Sir Robert lamented. "Not now."

The queen's nine-minute government-written speech from the throne, delivered as she wore her jeweled state crown and ermine-fringed robe, outlined 19 measures the government intends to push through Parliament this session.

One was ratification of an antihijacking measure, the Montreal Convention which Britain signed last year. Another was legislation setting up a referendum "on the question of the border" in Northern Ireland. There were no surprises.

In 1968, President Lyndon Johnson announced a halt in the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

A thought for the day: American humorist, writer and artist Jaffes Thurber said, "You might as well fall flat on your face as lean over too far backward."

4 cities off list

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The number of major areas with "substantial unemployment" has fallen to its lowest point in 20 months with the removal of four cities from the list.

The Labor Department said Monday it had taken Pittsburgh, Pa.; Baton Rouge, La.; Racine, Wis., and Gary-Hammond-East Chicago off the list of areas with an unemployment rate of six per cent or more.

A total of 47 areas remained on the list. A high of 65 was reached last October. There are 150 cities in the major areas classification.

However, the number of smaller labor markets with "substantial unemployment" increased by one this month to a total of 835. Bradford and St. Mary's, Pa., were dropped from the list, but Cripple Creek, Colo., and Hawkinsville and Rineon, Ga., were added. A high of 853 in the smaller cities category was reached in July.

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson said the removal of 18 cities from the major areas list since the high was reached a year ago "reflected a steady improvement in employment trends." The overall national unemployment rate, after hovering at about six per cent for 19 months, now has fallen to 5.5 per cent.

Hodgson said expansion of employment in steel and fabricated metals, other durable goods manufacturing and construction accounted for the decline in the unemployment rate in Pittsburgh. He said the Baton Rouge drop largely was the result of higher employment in nonmanufacturing industries, while Racine job opportunities improved in durable goods industries.

Fugitive reveals dual role

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Last week Charles A. Tuller was a high-level government executive holding a "policy-making" position paying $26,463 a year.

Today, Tuller, 48, was a fugitive in Cuba charged with participating with his teen-aged son in a Virginia Bank robbery and a Houston jetliner hijacking that killed a total of three persons.

Why was there this abrupt and violent change in the life of Charles Tuller?

His former colleagues at the U.S. Commerce Department were mystified. One of them described him as a "considerate and thoughtful" person who enjoyed skeet shooting "but said he didn't like shooting small animals."

But a probe by UPI reporters showed that away from work Tuller had another reputation—that of a quarrelsome and dedicated revolutionary who kept a gun collection at home.

The FBI says Tuller, his son, Bryce Mathew Tuller, 19, and William White Graham, 18, fled to Cuba Sunday night in a hijacked Eastern Air Lines jet. A fourth hijacker was not identified.

Amendment study slowing Gem residents voting absentee

BOISE (UPI) — A spotcheck of absentee voting around the state indicates study of nine proposed constitutional amendments is slowing down the voting process, the chief election officer said today.

Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa said spotchecks by his election staff indicate balloting by absentee voters is requiring an unusually long amount of time.

He attributed this to the fact there are nine constitutional proposals on the ballot.

To ensure nobody is disenfranchised from his voting right,

Cenarrusa urged all voters to study the constitutional proposals carefully before they go to the polls so they can cast their ballots quickly. He pointed out all nine have been published in recent weeks.

Meantime, Attorney General Tony Park put out a special statement clarifying two of the proposed amendments on the ballot.

He said confusion has arisen over one amendment to lower the margin required to pass a sewer or water revenue bond to a simple majority from a two-thirds majority.

Park pointed out that this would affect just revenue bonds for sewer and water projects and that revenue bonds, unlike general obligation bonds, are paid off by revenue from the projects.

He said his office has received a number of inquiries about another proposal which would remove from the constitution the provision allowing a person between the ages of six and 18 to satisfy his compulsory attendance requirement at public schools by attending for a time equivalent to three years.

"The question which has arisen is whether the passage of the proposed amendment would require compulsory attendance at public schools between age six and age 18 or whether it merely would allow the legislature to set a durational maximum between ages six and 18 years — that is, for a time less if it saw fit."

He said it is apparent to him that the amendment, if passed, would permit the legislature to compel the attendance at public schools of persons between six and 18. But he said it also clearly allows the legislature to provide a compulsory attendance requirement of something less than the full period between age six and 18.

Span damaged

KAMIAH (UPI) — Camas Prairie Railroad officials inspected a fire damaged bridge near here Monday trying to determine how long it will be unusable.

The bridge was severely damaged by fire Saturday, when an untended blaze believed to have been started by some teenage fishermen, spread to the structure and heavily damaged at least one span over the Clearwater River.

Traffic across the bridge has been halted pending completion of the investigation and repair work, which is believed will take several days.

MH wing 'retires'

MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI) — The 347th tactical fighter wing will "retire" at Mountain Home Air Force Base Wednesday and the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing will be assigned to replace it.

Air Force officials said, however, the change is in the number only. They said the 366th is coming to Idaho from Thakli Royal Thai AFB, Thailand, but without personnel and equipment.

Murder charge filed

FRUITLAND, Idaho (UPI) — First degree murder charges were brought today against a non-English speaking suspect stemming from the gunshot death Sunday of Paul Hernandez, 38, Nampa.

Payette County Sheriff Richard Hayes said he was interrogating the suspect to determine his proper name. Apparently, Hayes said, the man has used several aliases.

Hernandez was shot six times at close range with a 38-caliber automatic pistol south of Fruitland on Highway 95, Hayes said.

WHY do local Merchants begin Christmas Promotions before Thanksgiving?

Remember how crowded our stores are the final two or three weeks before Christmas?

Now imagine how impossibly jammed they would be if no one did his Christmas shopping early. Imagine how difficult it would be to select that gift for a far-off friend and get it mailed on time.

People sometimes wonder why merchants start Christmas shopping promotions before Thanksgiving. But suppose they didn't? It would not only pose many problems for the merchant, but for YOU, the customer.

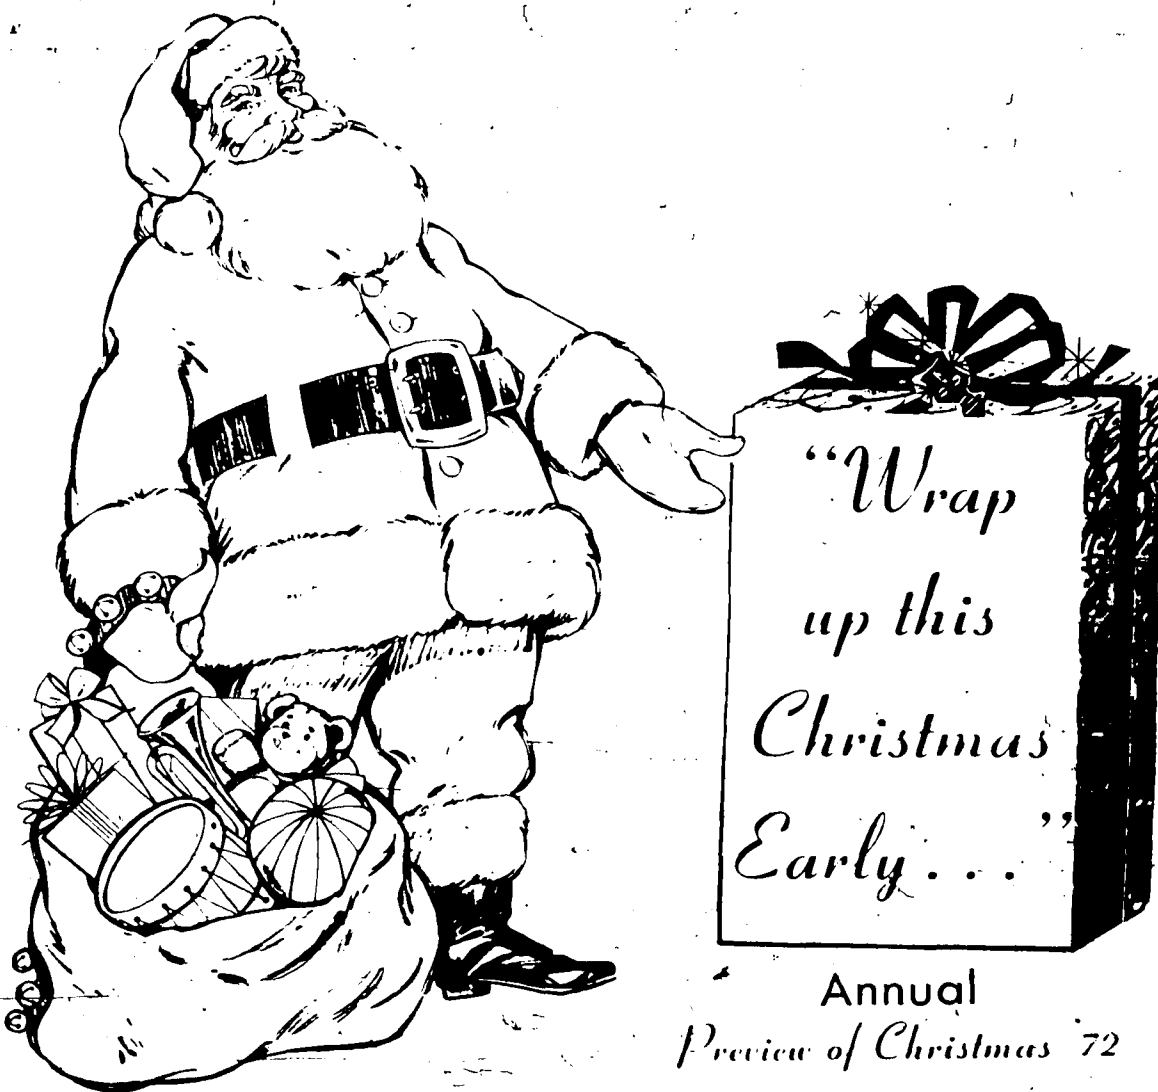

Any business has a responsibility to all its customers. Many people prefer to do their Christmas shopping in the pre-Thanksgiving period when stores aren't quite so crowded.

What if all Christmas shopping was postponed until after Thanksgiving? An impossible problem would be created because most stores even now are strained to capacity to provide the type of service you've come to expect, even during the peak of the season.

If no one was able to do his Christmas shopping early, the problem would be compounded many times. Thousands of children who wanted to visit Santa would be unable to because it would be physically impossible for him to see them all.

Early Christmas shopping promotions also make it easier for the merchant to stock and display the goods he needs, and also easier for his employees, who would be even busier during the peak season than they are traditionally.

The reason merchants start Christmas before Thanksgiving can really be summed up in two words—"Public Service"—the kind you've come to expect from progressive stores.

Davis pledges independence

BOISE (UPI) — Dr. William E. (Bud) Davis told a news conference Monday that, if elected, he will be an "independent senator" reserving the right to disagree even with a President of his own party.

Davis blasted the "team" campaign of his Republican opponent, Rep. James A. McClure, saying Congress has yielded too much power over the years to the White House.

During a question and answer session, he said even if Sen. George McGovern were to be elected President he would reserve the right to disagree with him on some of his proposals.

For one thing, he said, he would want specific data before he could buy McGovern's cuts in defense spending. He said he was against McGovern's original welfare plan but noted that the Democratic nominee since has modified it and made it more acceptable.

"I have always regarded Congress as a separate branch of government," Davis said, "regardless of the party affiliation in the White House."

He said he feels fiscal responsibility is not the prerogative of the executive but of the legislative branch of government.

"If elected to the U. S. Senate I expect to be an independent senator," Davis said.

Davis criticized the voting attendance record of his opponent as a member of Congress and said he was present only for 58 per cent of the votes in 1971 and 59 per cent in 1972.

"Anybody who is working for a living knows if he is not on the job 40 per cent of the time he can be fired," Davis said. "I'm amazed he can even run for the Senate with a record such as this."

Among the votes McClure missed in Congress, Davis said, were those on funding of the National Reactor Testing Station, bills on cancer research, drug abuse, equal working rights for women, predator control assistance, revenue sharing and strip mining. Davis called for re-enactment of some of the federal works programs of the 1930's to meet the problems of high unemployment of the 1970's.

He recommended creation of an environmental corps based on the old Civilian Conservation Corps and on a return-to-works project (WPA) programs.

Davis applauded efforts toward peace in Vietnam and said these take precedence over politics, including the election of any person in this campaign.

"I'm fully committed to ending the war," he said. "Only then can we shift our efforts to domestic issues."

Davis said he appreciated the endorsement Sunday of the Idaho Statesman newspaper and expressed disappointment that all of the Democratic candidates did not receive it.

China opposes Soviet role

LONDON (UPI) — China intends to participate in the projected Vietnam peace conference and its guarantees, but is opposed to any key Soviet role in Southeast Asia, diplomats said Wednesday.

Peking was said to be ready in principle to participate in an international Vietnam peace conference and its supervision, provided under the draft settlement that was leaked by Hanoi.

The sources said that China also let it be understood it is against the continuation or resurrection of the arrangement of the 1954 Indochina Geneva Conference in which Russia and Britain served as co-chairmen and thus held a special controlling position. Britain for all practical purposes is keeping out, though prepared to participate and assist.

The participation of Cambodia and Laos is not clear so far, they said, but was held likely.

Both China and Russia have endorsed the reported draft accord between Hanoi and the United States.

Both were certain to participate in the projected peace conference which under the terms of the draft agreement would underwrite and guarantee it. China also was said in principle prepared to participate in any international peace keeping machinery, though is noncommittal until more is known about it.

But China is watching hawk-like for any signs of Russian intentions to take a key role in Asia through the medium of the projected Vietnam peace guarantees, the sources said.

Peking is highly suspicious of Soviet intentions in Asia and fears it may be seeking to strengthen its influence in Southeast Asia after the war.

The diplomats said China is therefore opposed from the outset to giving Russia any preferential role in the projected guarantees and peace conference, on the lines it enjoyed in the past through the 1954 Indochina conference

Thieu dislikes 7 pact points

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu objects to at least seven points in the draft peace treaty worked out between Hanoi and Washington, government sources have indicated since the release of the treaty outline last week.

Some of the points of contention are, in the words of presidential adviser Henry Kissinger who worked out the accords in secret meetings with Hanoi negotiators, "not insuperable."

Others are basic Thieu stands on which he must either compromise or be accused of threatening a peace agreement.

In approximate order of importance to Thieu, the seven main points to which he objects are these:

—The lack of any provision in the treaty for North Vietnamese troop withdrawal. The nine-point plan worked out by Kissinger and Hanoi negotiators calls only for the pullout of all of Saigon's allies within 60 days.

In a speech to the nation Oct. 24, Thieu said he believes that after the U.S. withdrawal, "the North Vietnamese Communists will strike the last military blow with the North Vietnamese troops (still) in the South."

—The establishment of what the peace treaty calls a "National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord of three equal segments." Thieu, with a large backing from South Vietnamese politicians, sees this body as merely a "disguised coalition." A Viet Cong radio broadcast apparently agreed with Thieu on this point. It said the establishment of such a body satisfied the Communist demand for a coalition.

—Thieu and his government also object—less strenuously—to the three-part council being imposed rather than elected. Thieu's stated view on several occasions lately is that any replacement of his government must come through elections.

—The president has been adamant that any cease-fire agreement must cover all of Indochina, while the Kissinger-Hanoi document specifically covers only South Vietnam.

"This must be a cease-fire throughout Indochina, because if the North Vietnamese Communists are allowed to stay in Cambodia and Laos, they will be able to jump into the South to attack us at any time they want," Thieu said. Although the Kissinger peace formula calls for all foreign troops to withdraw from Cambodia and Laos, Thieu wants the North Vietnamese specifically directed to withdraw.

The treaty stipulates that neither South Vietnam nor the Viet Cong can add to their military forces in men or equipment. There is no such provision for the North Vietnamese, a point Thieu is unlikely to buy.

Thieu has insisted he, or his representative, must be allowed to sign the treaty if it is to be valid. But he has said he will not sign unless it meets his criteria for peace settlement that was leaked by Hanoi.

The sources said that China also let it be understood it is against the continuation or resurrection of the arrangement of the 1954 Indochina Geneva Conference in which Russia and Britain served as co-chairmen and thus held a special controlling position. Britain for all practical purposes is keeping out, though prepared to participate and assist.

IF woman sets home, art show

IDAHO FALLS — Ina S. Oyler will have her annual home art show from 2 to 9 p.m. Sunday and from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday at 1025 Merritt Drive, Idaho Falls. Mrs. Oyler refers to her painting as "a hobby which got out of hand." She was a private instructor previously and now devotes her full time to painting with an occasional workshop. Her paintings are featured in galleries in Idaho, Wyoming, Montana and California and in many private collections throughout the United States and abroad. She has won many awards in Nebraska, Idaho and Wyoming. Featured in her show this year will be the landscape which won the "Spectator's Choice Sweepstakes" award at this year's Eastern Idaho State Fair. A new feature of the show will be paintings with "human interest" — old buildings, relics of the past, the unexpected, and an assortment of "people watchers." Mrs. Oyler has received instruction from Conrad Schweiring, Jackson Hole, Wyo.; Frederic Taubes, New York; Wergi Bongart, Santa Monica, Calif.; Milford Zornes, Utah, and the late Hayward Veal, London.

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again. Anacin. Each year, doctors give over 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain? You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend most than any other leading tablet. Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset. When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin.

KH couple observes 25th year

KING HILL. — Mr. and Mrs. Glenn McCleary were honored Sunday at an open house in observance of their 25th Wedding Anniversary. Some 50 guests attended the event hosted by the couple's children, Mrs. Daniel Chapin and Dale McCleary, both Boise, and Sarah, Glenna and Thomasina McCleary, all King Hill. Another son, Michael McCleary, was unable to attend the open house but visited with his parents the week before. The rooms of the home were decorated with fall flowers. Mrs. Gary Gill, King Hill, baked and decorated the cake, assisted by Glenna McCleary. The white cake was accented with yellow rosebuds. Mr. and Mrs. McCleary were married Oct. 30, 1947, in Ontario, Calif. They resided in Riverside for five years before moving to Orchard Valley, near Wehdell. In 1960 they purchased the Ross place east of King Hill where they have lived since.

A Lovelier You

WHICH IS WITCH?

By Mary Sue Miller

Just as May Day celebrates springtime, Halloween was originally an autumn festival, an eve hallowing winter stores. The custom of roasting nuts and ducking for apples was the fun part.

Somehow old superstitions handed down from the Druids — their belief in spirits and goblins, ghosts and witches — came to haunt the festivities. Young belles, as always, twisted customs to their own purposes. A maiden who ducked for an apple and won it, placed it before her mirror. She ate it at midnight, while combing her hair before the mirror, in the hope that she would see her future husband's face in the glass. He would peer over her shoulder but, if she turned around to get a better look, he would vanish. A witch would take his place in the mirror. Many a disbeliever in spooks will tell you that the belle herself scared the boy away because of her witchy hair. Too long and too stringy, like a tangled web in the making. Well, my lovelies, what say you? Which is witch? A mark of a witch is unkempt hair. A mark of a belle is a perfectly groomed head. Any ailments are properly treated. A professional cut shapes the style. Shampoos, needed sets, and daily brushing sessions take place as scheduled without skip or skimp. Whooooo! The goblins'll git ya if ya don't watch out!

Others are Don Dean, Kimberly; Tom Dean and Ted Dean, Hazelton; Mrs. Merle (Rosemary) Fullmer, Rupert; Mrs. Robert (Normalee) Ridley, Filer; Mrs. Bob (Grace) Johnson, Hansen; Bill Dean and Dick Dean, Twin Falls. The open house is set from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Mountain Rock Grange.

Senator Frank Church and Senator Len Jordan made a great team for Idaho in the U.S. Senate. Such teamwork is now in jeopardy.

Bud Davis has made it clear he wishes to continue that cooperation for the State of Idaho.

Sen. Church has stated that Bud Davis is the man able to carry on that tradition of teamwork he and retiring Sen. Jordan have enjoyed for more than a decade.

A senator alone is limited in his ability to provide for his state. Two senators off-setting each other's vote could render Idaho impotent.

Idaho has benefited from the Church-Jordan cooperation in the Senate. Bud Davis will continue that teamwork. Bud Davis will be a senator for all of us.

Debra Hoopes, Gerard wed

SHOSHONE — Debra Hoopes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hoopes, Gooding, and Steven Gerard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gerard, Shoshone, were married Oct. 28. The ceremony was performed at the First Christian Church, Gooding. Rev. Harold Hake officiated at the double ring ceremony before an altar flanked by two floor baskets of white carnations and purple asters. Mrs. John Condie and Mrs. Larry Taggart sang, accompanied by Mrs. Wayne Thornock, who also played the traditional wedding music. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace over satin, fashioned with a square neckline. The long full sleeves came to a point at the wrist. Her floor-length satin train was held at the shoulders by a large satin bow and was edged with a wide band of lace. Her bridal veil of nylon illusion was held in place by a lace petal headpiece. The gown was made by the bride's mother. She carried a nosegay of purple asters and white carnations enhanced with purple ribbon streamers. Steve Estep, Boise, was best man, and Gene Gerard, brother of the bridegroom, and Philip Drake, Rigby, cousin of the bride, were ushers. A reception was held after the ceremony in the church social rooms. The refreshment table was covered with white lace over purple and white and featured a three-tiered wedding cake. A white stairway led to the top where a miniature bridal couple stood under wedding bells. Serving the cake were Mrs. Elwin Drake and Mrs. Paul Drake, both Rigby, aunts of the bride. Mrs. Nephi Johnson, Mrs. Wilma Pike, Mrs. Vernon Miller, and Mrs. Lillian Osborn assisted. Mrs. Allen Meyer, Coulee Dam, Wash., a sister of the bridegroom, registered guests. The gift table was handled by Teresa Hoopes, Sandra Hoopes and Mary Ann Hoopes, all sisters of the bride; Nadine Thornock, Terri Barnes, Idaho Falls, and Melody Drake, Rigby. Guests were seated at a quartet table centered with a miniature bride and bridegroom under a white chenille archway with wedding bells and purple flowers around the base. Staley Cheney was master of ceremonies for the program at the reception. The couple will reside at Moscow where the bridegroom is attending the University of Idaho and the bride will complete her senior year in high school. Special guests attended the wedding from the Magic Valley area, Moscow, Rigby, Lorenzo, Idaho Falls and Washington.

England councils set 'love ration'

LONDON (UPI)—Some municipal councils in England have introduced a "love ration" to limit the number of free contraceptives they dispense to men under local family planning programs. In the London borough of Hounslow, men are limited to 12 contraceptives a month, according to a survey published Sunday.

In Birmingham, men will receive only seven contraceptives each month.

But in the London borough of Islington, a council spokesman said: "A man can have as many as he can carry away."

The Family Planning Association, which distributes the contraceptives on behalf of most local councils, said there is no limit for women.

"If a girl needs 21 pills a month there is not much point in giving her only 10," a spokesman for the association said. "But if a man wants more than his ration he has to pay for them."

Msgr. Cody honored

TWIN FALLS — A parish reception was held on Sunday for Msgr. Edmund R. Cody in St. Edward's Parish Hall. Msgr. Cody said the morning mass at which the Fourth Degree of the Knights of Columbus were the guard of honor.

Gem film never viewed

(Editor's Note: This is the third of several dispatches about motion pictures produced for state agencies.)

By RICHARD CHARNOCK and GEORGE FRANK

BOISE (UPI) — Last January, the Idaho Department of Education paid out $10,800 in federal funds to produce a drivers' education film to be shown to the legislature — but the lawmakers never saw it.

"One of the primary reasons the film was produced was to show to the legislature," Harold Farley, deputy superintendent of public instruction, said. "No, it was never shown to the legislature."

Farley said that when the 12-minute film was produced by the non-profit Multi-Media Service Foundation, Inc., an unexpected turn was taken in the controversial legislative debate about drivers' education. He said it did not have to be shown because the "blame was resting at the legislative level."

But Farley added that the film had other purposes such as viewing on educational television and showing to public schools at the local basis.

"We got our money's worth," Farley said, speaking of the federal funds used to pay for the film. "The film is still valuable and usable in the state."

In the last year, state agencies have ordered three films from Multi-Media. A fourth, canceled by order of Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, while in the production stages, was negotiated by the former executive vice president of Multi-Media.

Three of the contracts were awarded by state officials without inquiring about price or production from other firms. The fourth film for the Idaho Water Resource Board — at $22,400 was the lowest of three proposals submitted.

Martin Peterson, director of the Human Resource Development Council, said he did not check with the attorney general's office before signing the $11,700 contract for production of a film by Multi-Media.

He said he relied on the word of Barrett Rainey, then executive vice president of Multi-Media. He said he had seen Rainey's work as a broadcast newsman both in Boise and in Washington D. C., recalled he won an Idaho Press Club award and said he liked what he saw.

"Maybe I'm too trusting," Peterson said, expressing a firm belief in the inherent goodness of people.

Both Peterson and Rainey returned to Boise from the nation's capital about the same time in 1971 to accept state positions — Rainey subsequently quitting his to take the Multi-Media job.

After the initial interview with Peterson, UPI learned from other sources that Peterson and Rainey were roommates in Washington, D. C., for seven months in 1970. Peterson later confirmed this report in a further check with him.

Following the Oct. 18 executive order by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus to halt film-making orders for the state, Atty. Gen. W. Anthony Park was asked in an Oct. 19 letter from State Purchasing Agent Dan Pilkington whether film production was a service or required a bid.

This, apparently, was the first formal request of the attorney general for an opinion on whether films should be put up for bid or were "services" exempt from the bidding procedure. Yet, prior to this, state officials ordered films without bid — saying later they "understood" films were exempt.

Park said "any ordinary definition of film production would be that the same is a service." He said a film includes "such things" as writing scripts, camera work, lighting, editing and other skills involving professional judgment and ability.

He said the total production "is in the nature of a service," adding that two previous opinions — one from the office of his Republican predecessor — called food service and moving contracts non-bidding items. He said they still were in force.

But Legislative Auditor James A. Defenbach, a certified public accountant and not an attorney, said a previous audit of a state agency's film library included the cost of film production and the films as a capital item — property requiring a bid.

"We did not ask for an attorney general's opinion in the matter and I am sure the attorney general's office can defend their interpretation," Defenbach said.

"But it certainly is open to question."

Ketchum housing suit aired

By TERRY CAMPBELL

Times-News writer
KETCHUM — Muddy waters run just as deep.

That was the order of the day, as about 30 Ketchum residents and opposing attorneys waded through the clouded implications and issues of an investment firm's suit against the city during a public hearing Monday before the Ketchum City Council.

However, no action beyond recording of testimony could be taken by the council because of the lack of a quorum.

Present were Councilmen Glenn Brannen and Vern McClellan. Absent were Mayor Kenneth Richey, and council members Gerald Sidwell and JoAnn Algiers.

The original suit, brought by G and H Investments, concerned the council's decision on Sept. 26 to suspend the firm's building permit for eight apartment units because, with the inclusion of basement apartments, the building exceeded the maximum allowable floor space.

After a subsequent court hearing, Fifth District Judge Charles Scoggin denied the plaintiff's request for a temporary restraining order against the city, but directed the council to grant the firm a full hearing, giving the firm "a right to offer testimony to uphold its position."

At Monday's hearing, attorney Stephen W. Boller, representing plaintiffs Russ Horn and Bill Grant, said "the matter at this time is moot."

He said "For the purpose of the public hearing only, Grant and Horn concede to the city's position" on the non-inclusion of the basement as allowable floor space.

City Building Inspector John Jacoby said new plans had been submitted for a five unit apartment which conforms to the city planning and zoning ordinance in effect at the time of the first application.

On the strength of this conformance, he said the original building permit had been re-issued.

Attorney George Kneeland, who with James Donart represent the intervenors, adjacent property owners Tony Raeber and Mrs. George Kneeland, said his feeling was that the new plans must conform to the recently passed ordinance which allows a maximum density of one duplex per lot.

The intervenors have filed a further suit, which will be heard in Fifth District Court Thursday against G and H Investments and Jacoby.

The second suit seeks a court order, directing the defendants to show cause "why they should not be held in contempt of court for causing construction to be commenced pursuant to the original building permit without complying with the requirements of the court's decision" for a full hearing.

Further discussion Monday centered also on whether the building permit had been suspended or revoked.

J. D. Pace, who said he was an interested resident who had been following the case for two months, said the matter had been "clouded with half truths" and described what he called "gentlemen's agreements" and "conflicts of interest" in the case.

Pace said further that a

"gentleman's agreement" was made between Sidwell and Horn to "cut down the number of units despite court orders."

By looking at one floor of the original building plan, Pace said, the plan did not exceed the allowable floor space.

However, he said he "believed the intent of the plan was to use the basement for four apartments without any of it counting as living space."

He said what he termed the "third floor crawl space" was "room which could be used for a third set of apartments."

Pace said his opinion was because of Grant and Horn's "intent to defraud" that they not be allowed to build in the city at all.

Pace said further that a

School bond vote slated in Hansen

HANSEN — Patrons of the Hansen School District will vote Wednesday on a $280,000 bond issue to construct a new elementary school.

Polls will be open from noon until 8 p.m. at the Hansen High School.

If approved, the bonds will provide funds to construct an elementary school to replace the present structure, built in the early 1920s.

Supt. Percy Christensen said the school board and a citizens' committee, which helped prepare the proposal feel it is a needed facility.

The present elementary school — if a new one is built — would be used for junior high and high school purposes.

He said the present elementary school, serving 111 pupils in grades one through five, is overcrowded and overburdened.

Information prepared by the citizens' committee says the approximate increase in school taxes would be 74 cents per $100 in valuation, providing an estimated increase in taxes of $11.80 for a property valued at $10,000 or an estimated increase of $17.70 for property valued at $15,000.

The school plant proposed would have 7,106 square feet of classroom space to serve about 225 students, Christensen said.

The proposed school would be built in a hexagonal design using the "open area" concept in which the five grade areas and a materials resource center would be divided by movable screens.

This would allow adjusting the sizes of the class areas to the number of pupils enrolled, Christensen said.

The new school would be built immediately southwest of the present school building.

Offices, storage space, workrooms and a teachers' lounge would be included in the building.

Eligible to vote in the election are all qualified electors of School District 415 or 18 years of age and older; a resident of the state, county, and school district. No registration is required.

Christensen said he believes Hansen will require an elementary school to serve the community in the future, even though that district may some day be consolidated with another in the same area.

He said anticipated residential development in Hansen could add an estimated 40 pupils to the enrollment of the grade school.

Burley computer certified

BURLEY — The computer at Cassia National Bank was certified Monday for counting the ballots for Cassia County in the general election.

On hand for the certification and checkout of the computer were Steve Thayne, Computer Election Systems; Dryden Hally, official from the Idaho secretary of state's office; John Clark, chairman of Cassia County Commission; J. Weldon Beck and Orvil Beecher, both commissioners.

Others included Frank Kearns, county clerk; Sen. Robert Saxvik, Ed Elliott, Gus Engstrom and Charles Terhune, candidate for state senator; Mez McMurray, and officials from the bank.

After a trial run of ballots the computer was certified by the officials.

McClure speaks

JEROME — U. S. Senate candidate James A. McClure said Monday he is convinced the Idaho voter will not be fooled by "smear tactics" in the election this year.

Campaigning in Jerome on the final day of a three-week bus tour, McClure said, "Charges that I have a $500,000 war chest to run my campaign are absolutely and totally false. I have never even hoped for that kind of money."

McClure said that while his opponent "is claiming he is under-financed, he can afford to purchase advertising in Salt Lake City, something I have not been able to do."

McClure said charges of "large vested interests in my campaign are erroneous. More than 8,400 people have donated to my campaign and of those, more than 8,200 were donations of less than $100."

Rupert man, 18, gets sentence

BURLEY — Joseph Ybarra, 18, Rupert, was sentenced to serve 14 years in the Idaho State Prison Monday for his assault and attempted rape of a Rupert woman Aug. 9.

Fifth District Court Judge Sherman Bellwood set the term after considering a psychiatric evaluation requested by the defense. Dr. Kenneth Briggs, Twin Falls, would have performed the evaluation requested.

Bellwood denied a request by defense counsel Golden Bennett, Twin Falls, that court should retain jurisdiction over Ybarra's case for 120 days, but Bellwood did say that the state board of corrections should provide for psychiatric treatment of Ybarra.

Monday's action ended a hard-fought case that at one point reached the Idaho Supreme Court.

Defense attorney, E. R. Frachiseur, an associate of Bennett, petitioned the high court for a writ of habeas corpus to gain Ybarra's release before the trial.

The petition was returned because of technical deficiencies and was not submitted again.

On Sept. 15, Frachiseur successfully requested that the charges against Ybarra be reduced from two felonies — forcible rape and assault with a deadly weapon — to the lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit rape.

Ybarra pleaded guilty to the lesser charge.

Minidoka County Pros. Atty. Donald Chisholm had built his case around evidence including an FBI-confirmed print of Ybarra's left index finger found in a smear of blood on the victim's bedroom floor.

The Fifth District Court's "law in motion" procedures accounted for Monday's session being held in the Cassia County Courthouse. Each Monday court is held in Minidoka County in the morning and in Cassia County during the afternoon.

Drug topic given at GF

GLENN'S FERRY — Drugs are easier to obtain in small towns, a Boise drug rehabilitation expert said here Monday.

David Goodenough of the Youth Service Bureau, told the Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce drugs are easier to obtain in small towns than in cities "because people know people."

While there is a drug problem in Idaho, Goodenough said, there is little heroin in the state.

ISU director speaks in Filer

FILER — Progress to date, and future plans were discussed by the steering committee which is working with the Filer Teacher Corps program on community participation.

Dr. Herbert Smith, project director, college of education, Idaho State University, was guest speaker at a meeting of the group and representatives from area organizations Monday afternoon at the Filer Elementary School.

Clubs which sent representatives included the Filer Civic and Home Extension, Syringa Home Extension, Town and Country, Order of Eastern Star, Miriam Rebekah Lodge, Maroa Woman's Club, Filer Grange, Masons, Kiwanis and Young Mother's Counseling Services. Most of the churches in the area also were represented.

Mrs. Roy Watson, lay coordinator for the community involvement phase, welcomed guests and introduced Dr. Smith who showed a film, "To Touch a Child," filmed at the Cook School, Flint, Mich., in 1969.

Dr. Smith said during the time when many schools and colleges were engaging in demonstrations and riots, the Flint school had no trouble of any kind.

This was attributed to the way the people of the area have made their schools into community centers to be used by all the people.

Flint people became convinced schools should not stand empty during weekends or summer months but could be used every day by various groups.

Taking the children out of the streets, they gave them the school playgrounds and gymnasiums for their use, also for the use of boys' clubs and similar organizations.

Dr. Smith said by "awakening the sleeping giant of education," the people became aware not only children but adults are reaching out for recreation and companionship, and the schools were offered for basketball, volleyball, exercise classes, music and dancing, art and craft classes, swimming, cooking lessons, card playing and many other activities.

When the program was first offered to the people of the Cook school area, the public response was tremendous, and soon five more schools joined in similar programs.

Within the next year 15 more schools joined, and eventually every elementary and high school had become a community center.

When the townspeople became more interested in the physical and cultural needs of children and adults, they also became more interested in their home and personal needs.

Finding both children and many adults undernourished, handicapped and illiterate, they formed health centers, vocational training centers to help find better jobs, job skill training to offer school "dropouts" and others.

The film is available for showing at clubs and schools by contacting Ellen Morrill, Filer Teachers Corps program leader.

Miss Morrill said the corps program helps with training of future teachers, individualization and team-teaching projects, and community participation.

She said team-teaching in the Filer first and second grades at school now include reading, math and science lessons. Music, art, physical education and social studies will be included in the future.

Mrs. Joyce Harding, member of the committee and also a corps intern, demonstrated pottery objects she had made after attending a workshop at the Snake River Pottery in Hagerman.

Many articles could be made by children, she said. If sufficient interest is shown, pottery classes could be one of the first community classes to be taught.

A questionnaire is being prepared which will be sent to families in the area so they may state their preferences for classes of study.

These will be compiled by the steering committee and further plans then made for classes, shown most in demand.

Participation programs

200 attend Halloween fete

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Everyone knows a Halloween party is the most fun there is!

And certainly a party was never enjoyed more than the Halloween carnival hosted by the TORCH clubs of the Twin Falls High School and the College of Southern Idaho for nearly 200 students of the special education classes and the Child Development Center.

The party was held Saturday evening in the gymnasium of the Robert Stewart Junior High School where black and orange streamers, skeletons dangling from the ceiling, black cats, witches and pumpkins all provided a setting for the carnival booths which offered a variety of games and entertainment for all. Colored lights and "spooky" music from record players added to the Halloween atmosphere.

All the old familiar games were offered, as well as a number of new ones. Partygoers tried their luck at bowling, with prizes for all. Bobbing for apples in tubs of water or catching them dangling from strings proved great fun.

The fish pond was a popular place and a bean bag toss had a long standing line. TORCH members bravely placed their hands and heads through large cardboard cartoon figures so colored sponges could be thrown at them for prizes.

Two gypsies in a booth told fortunes to the great delight of all, and a spook house brought shrieks and laughter to those going through it, with one small boy coming out breathlessly exclaiming, "Boy, it's scary in there!"

Children were given shaving cream to smear on blown-up balloons and then told to shave it off without breaking the balloons. A candle squirt was popular, and a cake walk brought prizes of cookies and cakes to those standing on the lucky numbers when the music stopped.

A table of goodies was used for prizes as well as refreshments toward the evening's end. Punch, cookies, popcorn balls and candy were plentiful.

TORCH members came dressed in costumes as did all those attending the gala event. A prize for the most original costume went to Marlene Allred who was dressed as a large blue bunny.

Allen Schmidt received the prize for the funniest costume, dressed as a flapper, and little Tim Fiscus received the "scariest" prize for his red devil costume. A special prize was given to Edgar Hertel for his red hobo costume.

The TORCH groups had spent all day Saturday getting ready for the party. They made costumes, collected prizes, baked cakes and cookies, decorated the gymnasium and provided transportation for some of the students.

They were assisted by Janice Mittleider, college adviser of the group, and Penny Stevens, adviser of the high school unit.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this open letter to friends and relatives of a childless couple:

Dear People: We are in our late thirties and have finally accepted the fact that we cannot have children. It's due to a medical problem one of us has (and please don't ask which one, or what kind, because it's none of your business).

Don't tell us "to never give up hope." It would be better if we did, so that is what we are doing.

Don't suggest we take in foster children. Have you ever known the heartache of having to give up a child you've grown to love like your own? Well, we have. And we'd never do it again.

Childless couples

Don't suggest adoption. Where we live you need $700 just to start proceedings. And you have to be buying or building your own home, have an excellent credit rating and money in the bank. Then there is the chance that the child will be taken from you during the first year before the final papers are signed.

And don't say, "You don't have any children? Boy, you're lucky, we have four you can have." Or, "Gee, you're smart. If we could live our lives over we wouldn't have any."

Some people are too stupid for words.

—CHILDLESS AND SICK OF QUESTIONS—

DEAR CHILDLESS: You may not speak for all childless couples, but I'll wager a good number of them are on your wave length.

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a wonderful guy, and he is the first one I have ever felt this deeply about. He's 21 and so am I.

He says he loves me, but there is one big problem. He always falls asleep on me!

He has done this from the beginning of our relationship. I have tried everything to cure him, including just leaving him and going home (if we're out), getting angry, and going to bed and just letting him sleep in the chair at my place.

I know he has to get up at five o'clock in the morning to go to work, but he could get some rest before seeing me in the evening.

It wouldn't do any good to fall asleep on him because he would be asleep before me.

The other night he was over and I was modeling my bikini for him, and he fell fast asleep! Boy, if that didn't put a dent in my ego.

He says he wants to marry me someday, but Abby, I need a guy who's awake. His problem could be medical, but if it isn't, what do you suggest I do?

LONELY IN INDIANAPOLIS

DEAR LONELY: First find out if it IS medical. If it is, it's no joke, and should be treated promptly. If it's not medical, you'd better look for another boy friend. He's much too passive when he should be active.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a 30-year-old single woman to change her clothes and use some deodorant, or some kind of fragrance to mask the odor? For the last year she has worn TWO soiled pants suits to work, and would you believe, we have not seen her in a dress for two years?

She happens to be obese, but we feel there is no excuse for appearing so sloppy and careless in a business office. Also, we haven't seen her own hair in two years. She wears a dirty wig every day!

Please, please, help us. We are

SUFFOCATING IN CLEVELAND

DEAR SUFFOCATING: If this woman has one friend in the office, ask her to have a heart-to-heart talk with her. If the company employs a nurse, you might ask the nurse to talk to her. The woman may not be aware that she is offensive. It would be a kindness to tip her off.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN": Could your mother have written this letter?

DEAR ABBY: My children live less than an hour away, yet I sit alone, month after month now that I am old and no longer needed. I wonder if I will be able to pick a time to die so that my funeral will fit into their social calendar? Thank you, Dear Abby.

UNICEF party

KETCHUM — A Halloween night party is being planned for children who participate in the "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" program.

According to Vicky Gudmundsson, event chairman, UNICEF collection boxes will serve as admission tickets for the party scheduled for 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The party will include a carnival, spook house and refreshments. Ms. Gudmundsson also reminded residents to have dimes, nickels and quarters ready for Halloween night.

For 25 cents, the United Nations Children's Fund can provide a child in another country with vaccinations against small pox, tuberculosis, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus; be given a pencil and exercise book for school, and have three glasses of milk a day for 21 days, Ms. Gudmundsson said.

Ketchum Mayor Kenneth Richey has proclaimed Halloween as UNICEF Day in the city this year. Children will also be collecting for UNICEF in Halley and Bellevue.

Never mind how you got to seven hearts with today's hand. You are there and can count 12 winners with no apparent play for the all important 13th trick.

If you know about squeezes you recognize that while the opponents have spades, diamonds and clubs well stopped the squeeze should develop because only West can stop clubs while only East can stop diamonds and that if you time your play right you can make it impossible for either one to stop spades.

You start by ruffing the first club. Maybe West holds a nine-card suit. You draw trumps with three leads cash dummy's ace and king of clubs to discard two spades from your hand.

Now you cash your two high diamonds and the rest of your trumps to leave you with one diamond and two spades.

West will have to come down to three cards while dummy still holds ace-king-small of spades and a club. West will have to throw a spade, then dummy's club can be jettisoned.

East will also have to throw a spade to keep a diamond and dummy's spades will be good.

Was this squeeze a sure thing? Yes, it was. The bidding had marked West with the only club stopper and East with the only diamond protection.

Potato yield drops

MOSCOW — The evidence points to a "substantially smaller potato crop this year, nationally, than we have had for several years," says Robert Sargent, University of Idaho extension agricultural economist.

Sargent said the situation has several important implications and cautions growers "that orderly marketing is "extremely important this year."

This, he says, should avoid price depressing gluts. It could also reduce shrinkage and loss that might result from undue holding.

Use great care to keep storage losses at a minimum, Sargent said. Reduced storage losses will mean greater producer income. Perhaps equally important for the long run, it will mean more potatoes available to consumers, therefore, less likelihood of a shift to substitute foods.

"It is important to the industry to keep these shifts to a minimum," Sargent said.

Although it applies more to shippers than growers, the temptation to lower the quality of packaged fresh potatoes in a short production year should be guarded against. "Lowered quality is bound to meet adverse consumer reaction in the long run, to the detriment of the industry," Sargent said.

Producers, by reason of the smaller crop nationally, are and will likely continue to receive prices "somewhat better than they have been the past few years," says Sargent.

Idaho producers are in a good position. A modest production increase is predicted in Idaho this year despite lowered acreage. However, nationally, a seven per cent decline in production is projected. Also on the plus side in Idaho, field reports indicate quality in the state is better than in 1971.

The picture from the consumer's viewpoint is not so rosy. Not only are potato prices higher at the vegetable counter, but fresh potatoes for the table might be in short supply times in some areas, according to Sargent.

For example, last year about 258 million cwt. of potatoes went for food.

Soviet display grows

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Soviet Union is thinking about expanding its display at Expo-74, a Russian official said today.

Nicoli D. Filippov, vice president of the Soviet Union Chamber of Commerce in charge of foreign expositions, told a news conference his country is thinking of expanding its display space from 30,000 to about 50,000 square feet.

Russia is one of four nations which so far have announced participation in the world environmental exposition in 1974.

Filippov was one of four Soviet officials who have spent the past week conferring with Expo officials and studying the more than 50-acre site located on and near Havermale Island in the middle of the Spokane River.

"We have solved all of the problems with the administration of Expo-74 pertaining to the display of our exhibit items, which will present different aspects of the environmental protection problem," he said. "By means of our exposition we are going to show and present how the problems pertaining to environmental protection are being solved in the USSR."

He said the display would include movies, exhibits, a national restaurant, and a kiosk selling souvenirs.

"We also plan to bring some teams of outstanding artists,"

Filippov said, "but these are things which must be discussed between specialists."

Less wheat

BOISE (UPI) — Total wheat stocks in Idaho on Oct. 1 were down 5 per cent from a year ago, according to the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The service said that both on-farm and off-farm stocks were lower than a year earlier. While off-farm stocks were down 10 per cent, on farm stocks had only a modest decline — less than one per cent.

Land bill signed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed into law Monday a measure guaranteeing clear title to individuals owning Idaho lands claimed by the federal government, according to U. S. Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho.

Hansen, Rep. James A. McClure and Sens. Frank Church and Len B. Jordan were co-sponsors of the legislation involving some 20,000 acres along the Snake River and other areas where rivers have changed course or floodwaters have receded following earlier surveys.

Hansen said the new law will correct inequities to Idaho property owners resulting under application of the Omitted Lands Act of 1962.

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — State agriculture officials report this year's Utah alfalfa seed crop is the smallest terms of acreage in more than half a century.

The crop is estimated at 11,000 acres. The overall production total, however, is not so low. Officials said if the production forecast for the year holds up the crop will be 13 per cent below the 4 million pounds of 1971 and the fourth smallest since 1945.

City cage league to organize

Organizational meeting of the Twin Falls men's adult recreation basketball league will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the upstairs meeting room of city hall.

Chad Browning, city recreation director, said all managers and-or team representatives should attend as the league would like to begin play by Dec. 1.

Erving tops ABA scorers

NEW YORK (UPI)—Julius Erving, who appears equally familiar on the basketball court as in a court of law, is the American Basketball Association's leading scorer, according to statistics released Monday.

Erving has tallied 151 points on 56 field goals and 39 free throws for the Virginia Squires, an average of 25.17 points per game.

George Thompson of the Memphis Tams and India's George McGinnis are tied for second in the scoring with 23.78 averages.

Willie Wise of the Utah Stars holds down the fourth spot with 23.67 points per game and Aarl Issel of the Kentucky Colonels is fifth with a 22.86 average.

Sun general manager replaces Van Breda Kolff with himself

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Bill Van Breda Kolff, head coach of the Phoenix Suns only four months, was fired Monday by General Manager Jerry Colangelo.

Colangelo said he would assume the coaching duties himself.

He denied the Suns' 3-4 record had anything to do with the dismissal, but Van Breda Kolff said it was at least part of the reason he was let go.

"I feel that a change is absolutely necessary at this time, not because of a 3-4 record, but because of the total situation as I have seen it through training camp, the exhibition games and the first seven regular season games," Colangelo said.

"I realize that some people might say I didn't give him a full shot but I must make decisions on my true feelings and I don't believe the job was being done," he said.

Van Breda Kolff joined the Suns June 28 after two seasons at the helm of the Detroit Pistons and two seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers.

He succeeded Cotton Fitzsimmons who resigned to assume the coaching position at Atlanta.

Colangelo served as Phoenix head coach during the last half of the 1969-70 season when the Suns compiled a 24-20 record and landed a spot in the playoffs.

Van Breda Kolff said he felt his dismissal was due to "a combination of things," including the team's record.

"I guess Jerry Colangelo just felt the team wasn't playing well and a good deal of it was my fault," he said. "It's usually the coach's fault, and to be frank, I guess it was my fault."

"I want to see him and I said I was disappointed in the way the team was playing," Van Breda Kolff said.

He said there was no mention of the possible dismissal at that time, but said during a later practice session Monday he was recalled to Colangelo's office.

"He said he just didn't see how things were going to get straightened out or rectified," Van Breda Kolff said.

He said he couldn't single out one particular factor that was causing the trouble.

"If I knew that, they wouldn't be disappointing," Van Breda Kolff said. "It's just a combination of things."

"The main thing in this game is winning and losing and while our record is 3-4, I think the thinking in the front office was, 'We'd better do something now before it's too late.'"

He said he had no plans for the future. "It's really sudden," he said. "I'll just have to wait and see if someone calls. We have a house in New Jersey and we may have to go back there."

Pitcher first

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The late, legendary Frank (Lefty) O'Doul who had a lifetime batting average of .349 and who once made 254 safe hits in one season, spent seven years as a pitcher before playing every day as an outfielder.

Morton's key passes let Cowboys topple Detroit

IRVING, Tex. (UPI)—Quarterback Craig Morton hit the first six passes he threw Monday night, two of them going for touchdowns, and then connected on three big passes in a time-consuming fourth quarter drive in a steady rain that wrapped up a 28-24 victory for Dallas over the Detroit Lions.

The Cowboys, in their most consistent offensive performance since the Super Bowl victory over Miami last January, stayed within one game of the Washington Redskins in the NFC Eastern Division with a 5-2 record and Detroit fell back into a tie with the Green Bay Packers at 4-3 for the lead in the jumbled Central Division.

Morton drove Dallas 77 and 68 yards the first two times the Cowboys had the ball, hitting Billy Parks with a 38-yard scoring toss for the first touchdown and finding Calvin Hill romping in the Detroit secondary with a 33-yard throw for the second score.

Mike Montgomery got Dallas' third touchdown on a one-yard run late in the second period, but the Cowboys were still in jeopardy until Morton guided them 70 yards to open the fourth quarter in a drive that took up more than a third of the period.

Morton connected with running back Walt Garrison and rookie tight end Jean Fugett on passes of 16 and 19 yards to keep that drive going and then on a third-down and seven situation from the Detroit 15 he caught the Lions in a blitz and hit Montgomery in the flat. Montgomery pranced across the goal line with the wrapup score.

Detroit got two first half touchdowns on a two-yard keeper by quarterback Greg Landry and a 40-yard pass from Landry to running back Albie Taylor, who turned a simple pass over the middle into a score by avoiding three tackles.

Errol Mann kicked a 17-yard field goal midway through the third period that narrowed the Dallas lead at that point to 21-17.

After Dallas went in front by 11, Detroit got a late touchdown on a 21-yard pass from Landry to Larry Walton.

Morton hit 11 of 19 passes for 206 yards in an attack supplemented throughout the night by the running of Calvin Hill, Walt Garrison and Hill's replacement—Mike Montgomery.

Hill's running in the first period set up both of Morton's touchdown throws in that period. After running the ball on seven of the opening plays of the game Morton went long to Parks, obtained along with Montgomery from San Diego for reluctant running back Duane Thomas.

Parks caught it on his fingertips five yards deep in the end zone.

Then, after Coach Tom Landry had called five running plays in six snaps on the next drive, Hill burned linebacker Charlie Weaver with a deep pattern and caught Morton's pass on the goal line.

Detroit stayed in the game through three quarters although Dallas dominated much of the contest.

The first Detroit touchdown came following a Hill fumble on the Dallas 18.

Greg Landry performed as well as Morton in the air.

California coaches praise Cougars

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—For a team beaten 35-20 and virtually eliminated from the Rose Bowl race, Washington State received a lot of attention from the opposing coaches Monday.

Coach Pepper Rodgers of UCLA was the first to pay his respects to Jim Seene's Cougars who went down fighting before the Bruins Saturday.

"I thought Washington State would be tough and it was," Rodgers told the Southern California Football Writers. "Ty Paine is as good as anybody we have faced this year at quarterback and defensively they were much stronger than ever before."

Rodgers was high in praise of his own quarterback, Mark Harmon, saying, "It was his best game. He handled the ball like a magician."

The coach said it was also Harmon's best passing effort as he completed five of eight passes for 145 yards and two touchdowns although he threw one interception, only the second of the year for UCLA.

Turning to this week's opponent, Stanford, Rodgers said it was somewhat the same as the team which went to the Rose Bowl Jan. 1.

"Stanford always has fine receivers and a hard-hitting defense. They have as many quick people as anybody we play and they have three or four outstanding players in their defensive secondary."

Rodgers said he was well acquainted with the work of Stanford back John Winesberry from when he was coaching at Kansas and tried to recruit Winesberry who is from Tulsa, Okla.

Assistant coach Craig Fertig of the No. 1 ranked University of Southern California, which meets Washington State at Seattle Saturday, also had praise for the Cougars.

"From the films we saw of the UCLA-Washington State game, the Cougars showed an outstanding offense but fumbles hurt them," Fertig said. "We know we have to stop Paine and we think their tailback, Ken Grandberry, is outstanding."

"Where Washington State has improved most is in its defense. They use a Kansas City type of bump and run defense and handle it well."

Fertig said in commenting on USC's victory over Oregon, he didn't know whether to give a weather report or talk about the game, played in a rainstorm on soggy artificial turf.

"Our quarterback has quick release—he released a couple of times before he had the ball," Fertig said.

The coach credited great blocking for springing Anthony Davis on two touchdown runs on which the sophomore tailback broke two tackles the first time and three the next.

Fertig said the Trojans were preparing for more wet weather for Saturday's game but added that practicing with a wet ball on grass was not the same as playing on wet artificial turf.

Put your money on a winner. The 1973 Jeep CJ-5.

The 1972 Mint 400 was the richest event in the history of American off road racing. The vehicle that took first in the 4 wheel drive production class - storming in over 420 hours ahead of Blazer, Bronco, Toyota, Scout and Suzuki - was a race-equipped Jeep CJ-5.

This year the Jeep CJ-5 is tougher than ever. So if you're ready to ride with a winner, come down and see us today. When it comes to good honest deals and expert service, we're way ahead of the pack.
