CARCASSES OF wild horses lie at base of 200-foot high cliff in Lemhi Mountains near Howe in Butte County, Vebma (Wild Horse Annie) Johnson, Reno, Nev., and humane society officials claim horses were driven over cliff in roundup of some 60 mustangs. Fifteen carcasses were found. Investigation is planned by federal agencies. (Related stories, p. 13) (UPI)

Senate panel OK's polluter controls

BOISE (UPI) — The Senate Health Education and Welfare Committee gave "do pass" recommendations today to a package of measures that would strengthen the state's hand in dealing with pollution.

The five measures, all of which passed the House earlier in the session, gave the Department of Environmental Protection and Health "the necessary legal authority to allow continuation of state jurisdiction over pollution control programs," according to Department administrator, Dr. James Bax.

(Related story, p. 13)

One of the measures gives the department the authority to review plans for sewage treatment plants; two deal with the authority of the department to negotiate with polluters, one provides for a misdemeanor penalty for violators and the fifth proposed law redefines a "public water supply."

At Figuren, assistant administrator for the environmental protection division, told the committee if the legislature did not give the state the authority to deal with polluters, the federal government would move in and do the job.

The committee also gave "do pass" recommendations to a pair of measures, one of which would exempt doctors or medical personnel from performing sterilization operations for moral reasons.

The second measure, providing greater protection against child abuse, requires certain professional personnel,

BOISE — Today, March 5, is a day of immense significance to trivia collectors.

It is the 3,000th legislative day in Idaho history.

The second 1,000 was reached Feb. 11, 1951.

In each case it took just over 30 calendar years to rack up 1,000 days of legislative work. But the third millennium has been concluded in 22 years and three weeks. The legislature is meeting more often now, and longer at a time.

No special celebration is planned by the legislature. In fact, out of the 105 of them, 105 woke up this morning without even thinking about the 3,000th day.

While the days have added up, the issues haven't changed much. The legislature has spent 170 days in special session, nine days in organizing sessions, and 2,821 days — including today — in regular session. That includes weekends and holidays, since they count as legislative days and the lawmakers get paid for them. In fact, the 2,000th day was a Sunday.

What was happening on the 1,000th day?

Execution pledged

KHARTOUM (UPI) — Sudanese officials told American diplomats today that the Black September Palestinian guerrillas who murdered two American and one Belgian diplomat in the Saudi Arabian Embassy on Friday face execution for their deeds.

American sources said Sudanese officials who were at Khartoum airport to see the bodies of the two Americans down back to the United States with their families approached U.S. diplomats and told them, "They will be executed."

The State Department said the bodies of Ambassador Cleo A. Noel, 54, and deputy chief of mission George Curtis Moore, 47, would arrive at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., near Washington late today and that they would be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. Both were World War II veterans.

Tax, fee proposal menaces aviation

By O. A. (GUS) KELLER
Editor, Times-News

TWIN FALLS — General aviation — all flight movements except commercial airline — could be priced out of existence by the end of the year.

If accepted by Congress, the recommendations of a study made by the Federal Aviation Administration and the Department of Transportation would drastically increase general aviation fees and taxes to a level required to pay for services provided by the FAA.

It could eliminate or ground 98 per cent of the nation's aircraft and 96 per cent of all licensed pilots. Airline planes and pilots make up only five per cent of the nation's total.

According to Darrell V. Manning, Idaho Department of Aeronautics director, the study if adopted by Congress would impose a tax of 50 cents a gallon on all fuel used by general aviation craft.

It would levy an annual aircraft registration fee of $1,500 for turbine-powered or $2,600 for any other category.

Federal landing fees at all airports would be charged at the rate of $2.50 for each landing of single-engine aircraft, $12.50 for multi-engine aircraft, and $25 for turbine-powered planes.

Flight plans filed with the FAA — for instance, a plan to cover a flight from Twin Falls to Boise — would cost $64 for each plane, or $80 for instrument flight plans.

A warning of the gravity of the situation so far as private aviation is concerned was received today by all registered pilots from Manning. He urged that pilots immediately contact the members of their Congressional delegation to protest possible adoption of the plan.

Manning said the cost allocation study was ordered by Congress as part of the Airport and Airway Development and Revenue Act of 1970. It was made by the Resource Management Corporation of Bethesda, Md., under a $630,000 contract from the FAA.

The report contends the share of FAA services which should be paid for by general aviation amounts to $421 million a year.

At the present time Idaho general aviation pilots pay an extra 8 cents a gallon tax on aviation fuel and a fee of $25 a year for each private plane. These charges are in addition to regular taxes both on planes and fuel, landing fee, and parking costs, license inspection fees, medical fees for flight licenses and other costs. Nationally, private pilots pay more than $30 million in special gasoline fees alone. These are in addition to regular state and local gasoline taxes and regular federal taxes on gasoline.

Manning warned in a "fact sheet" that Congress could impose the new taxes by the end of this year. He contends that although general aviation benefits when the federal system is upgraded, many improvements have been made for larger and faster aircraft, mostly airline and military.

At the present time general aviation, FAA records show contributes $92 million a year to the national economy in payroll and in-state and local taxes averaging $887 per pilot.

As a possibility of money saving by the federal government, he said would be to cut FAA employees.

The "average" salary of the 574 FAA navigation and communications people in Idaho, Oregon and Washington is $18,293.

There is one FAA employee for every 14 pilots, and one FAA employee for every two airplanes. Idaho has 200 airports and only five are served by air carriers. Of the 200 fields, 190 do not require the FAA facilities which the pilots and plane owners are being charged for, Manning said.

The second plane, a Spantax, with 60 persons aboard collided with a Boeing 747 in flight with another Spantax. The Boeing 747 was en route from Madrid to London and made a safe emergency landing at a French airport today and crashed in a military field at Cognac. All of the passengers, including the pilot, were killed.

Money markets close, talks set

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The during monetary crisis. The European Common Market action symbolized the seriousness of the latest money crisis. In Tokyo, banking officials today to give its nine members, said Japan was likely to keep its foreign exchange closed time to work out an overall solution to the latest world monetary crisis.

The Market decision came Sunday at a 5-hour emergency meeting after a week marked by another round of heavy selling of unwanted dollars by speculators who are afraid the dollar cannot maintain its value since World War II, although the money markets have been closed for shorter periods.

As they announced the closing of money markets, Market finance ministers said they also asked the United States and the rest of the world's richest Western countries to meet Friday in Paris to discuss the second monetary crisis of the year.

"We expect some cooperation from the United States," said French Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

There was no official reaction from Washington on the latest developments in the crisis. The Market ministers said they would meet again Thursday to make plans for the Friday meeting, then will meet again next Sunday "to draw conclusions," as one minister put it.

Other nations asked to join in the Paris talks include the so-called "Group of 10," the world's richest Western nations, among them Canada, Sweden, Japan and Switzerland.

In Ottawa, Finance Minister John Turner said his country probably will attend but that a decision must await details of what ministers will discuss.

More POW's reach Clark

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (UPI) — A group of 34 prisoners of war, including 30 Americans and the only known female POW, flew to freedom today, marking the halfway point in the attempt to get all Americans out of Communist prisons by the end of the month.

In one of the most emotional welcomes since Operation Homecoming began last month, the families of two Filipino POWs who had been captured while working for the Voice of America swarmed over the pier, hugging and kissing them.

In addition to the Filipinos, the latest group consisted of 27 U.S. servicemen, three American civilians and two West Germans, including nurse Monika Schweinf, the only known female held by the Communists. They had been taken to the Viet Cong but were taken to Hanoi for their release.

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist delegates, angered by a deadlock on the exchange of Vietnamese prisoners, walked out of a Joint Military Commission (JMC) meeting today and a North Vietnamese official warned the action could delay the next release of American POWs.

The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegates left before the meeting was adjourned because they said they felt the four-old problem has "paralyzed" the four-power commission. Communist spokesmen said the Viet Cong would boycott future meetings until some settlement is reached on the number of Vietnamese prisoners to be set free.

Idaho politicians that day were denouncing the Audubon Society, because the Audubon Society opposed the building of a dam in the Fall River Basin of Yellowstone Park that would provide irrigation water for Idahoans.

The State Affairs Committee was working on legislation dealing with predator control. Governor D. W. Davis was asking the legislature for property tax relief, and was being opposed on the issue.

Representative Montgomery of Jerome was working for legislation to set up a state fire warden. Senator Fisher of Power County was working on legislation to allow farmers to get higher prices for their crops.

The legislature was arguing over whether there should be more frequent paydays for state employees — monthly instead of every three months.

Of course, some things have changed. The budget enacted by that legislature totaled $5.2 million for 2 years. The biggest chunk went to public schools and the University of Idaho — less than $1 million to each. The third-highest budget, $271,000, went to the state department of agriculture. The governor's office got $27,350, a little less than the salary of the governor today.

A Twin Falls legislator successfully sponsored a bill to prevent interracial marriage. Legislation was enacted requiring the pasteurization of

Organize, Gem women decide

BOISE — Where there's a will there's a way.

And, after three days in Boise, Idaho women feel they may have found the way.

Organize. Organize from the grass roots to build strength that must be recognized throughout the state. Organize with a firm foundation that can't be toppled until equal rights can be obtained for Idaho women.

Approximately 300 Idaho women and a scattering of men at Boise State College this past weekend to exchange ideas on economic, political and social status of today's women and to determine "exactly where we go from here."

The conference included conscious raising sessions bringing out clearly the need for organizing Idaho women for a common goal.

Painful discussion dealing with women's rights led into workshops and rap sessions. Dinner speaker Dr. John Hipple, (psychologist and counselor, University of Idaho), stimulated the group bringing about the selection of representatives from present law was demeaning to the family and wife and needed radical change.

Sonya Joelsen, Twin Falls, will represent the Magic Valley area, with the Boise YWCA to serve as a clearing house and temporary base for the action network of the newly formed group. The statewide network has the goal of achieving equality through the political process under the name of the Idaho Women's Political Caucus.

During Saturday's session, the Equal Rights Amendment was discussed by a five member panel, moderated by Bill Hall of the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

Edith Miller Klein, Boise attorney and state senator, discussed S.R. 1038, the property rights bill noting the bill would repeat the section of the Idaho Code which says the husband is the head of the family and will give the wife equal power to the rights of privacy in conjunction with E.R.A. but took up another panel, moderated by Alice Dieter, KBOI television.

Discussed working for wages, Equality or Tipoff?

LaZelle Johnson, regional Women's Bureau director, said women are helpers rather than put in executive positions and for most jobs women are paid $3 less than men in the same position.

To date 28 states have ratified the amendment. Idaho is one of the few states that have not.

Allyn Derr, Boise lawyer, stressed the need for E.R.A. and against the "piecemeal case-by-case approach, will never bring true equality in our lifetimes."

Alan Schwartzman, Ada County magistrate, discussed the rights of privacy in conjunction with E.R.A. but took up another panel, moderated by Alice Dieter, KBOI television.

Carol Clapp, industrial consultant, urged women to support other women, whether at home or in the work force.

The homemaker must realize that — though — unforeseen tragedies she too, could be in the work force overnight.

The only male on the panel was George Madsen, general performer manager, Mountain Bell Telephone, said the Bell System has opened its doors and as of Jan. 13, 1973, all jobs are available to women who meet the qualifications.

His presentation of the firm's program showed clearly the attempt to overcome sex discrimination in employment.

COMMENT

The Ankle Iron

Portland Oregonian
In spite of an otherwise strong performance, the Nixon Administration has scored low in one aspect of its handling of the devaluation of the dollar: It has left the public to puzzle out its meaning at a time when understanding could be an important ingredient in the solution.

Most government discussion has centered on actions of currency speculators. Japanese intransigence regarding the value of the yen and potent but unnamed tariff barriers that prevent American traders from getting an even break in world markets. There is truth to each of them, but their over-all effect is to make the other fellow the scapegoat and to deflect attention from the real culprit — ourselves.

The ankle iron that has hobbled our financial stability at home and abroad has been inflation, and for that we cannot blame foreign businessmen and governments. For a variety of reasons, good and bad, we have reached for a higher slice of the hog without regard to its cost. We have supported a long, costly war and numerous domestic social programs of noble purpose on the cuff with chronic, heavy budget deficits. We have been unwilling to pay the tab through tax increases or other self-restraint. Until the current budget proposals were received, neither of the last two presidents nor the Congresses that have served with them have made a determined stand to seek a balance between our expectations and our resources.

The result was inflation, and inflation is the enemy of an international payments balance. Inflation causes goods to be overpriced and less competitive. It also makes currency available domestically for those who wish to buy imports. As a result, money flows out.

In the past three years, the U.S. government and its citizens have spent, lent or invested abroad more than $50 billion more than foreigners have spent here. If these dollars had returned to the United States in payment for American goods and services, there wouldn't have been a problem. But they stayed overseas, and the more they piled up, the more worried became those who held them as to their actual worth. From there, it was only a short step to the panic sales of dollars that forced the devaluation. If inflation is the enemy of a stable balance of payments system, then productivity probably the most important word in the entire devaluation story — in its greatest ally.

Productivity, or output per man hour, encompasses technology, management skill, worker morale, financial and marketing insight and age and efficiency of plant and equipment. The complete blend of men, money and machines. A country that continues to manufacture goods for less and less cost per unit is growing more competitive. Almost by definition, inflation is being checked when productivity is increasing. What all this means is that the battle to stabilize our currency, to bring order to international trade and to halt the domestic price spiral that robs those least able to afford it — the elderly and those on fixed incomes — requires an unusual degree of domestic cooperation between the Congress and the President and between labor and management.

It means that while the President and the Congress should continue to battle for their visions of proper spending priorities, they must move to bring our spending for all purposes into close balance with our income from all sources. Continued chronic budgetary deficits can only produce more economic distortions and promote intolerable social hostility.

As government sets about its task, industry and labor must back the effort by pinning wage objectives to productivity increases. Assumptions that inflation will continue unabated and must be anticipated in contracts for several years in advance, defeat chances to regain stability.

In short, we are all long overdue for a big dose of self-discipline.

WASHINGTON — In his secret heart, I suspect Richard Nixon doesn't really want to give North Vietnam $2 billion, or take a few hundred million. His recent maneuvers strongly suggest that he is banking on the liberals in Congress to get him off the hook. Not having been born yesterday, the President must have been aware long months ago that spending American dollars, even as they may be internationally, to reconstruct the Communist enemy would not cause dancing in American streets. He was right. Conservatives and liberals on Capitol Hill have joined in denouncing the handout — the bailiwick. He has done this by making it perfectly clear that bundles for domestic programs. Assuming that Nixon is not all that enthusiastic about dispatching aid to Hanoi, he's always known he could count on the conservatives to follow their opposition. Intentionally or not, so the left would take to the barricades.

"WELL, THERE GOES THE OLD BATTING AVERAGE"

All On Tennis

WASHINGTON — The hottest sport in America this year is tennis. It is estimated that 1,654,469 more people will be playing tennis this year, than last. Where are all these tennis players coming from? Most of them are coming from the golf courses.

Every time you talk to someone in a locker room who has just taken up tennis, he confides he used to be a golf player, but decided tennis takes up less time, gives him as much exercise and is cheaper.

Those of us who never played golf are naturally very happy so many of their people come over to our sport. But, at the beginning, one must have considerable patience with a dethroned golf player before he catches on that tennis is an entirely different game.

I realized this last week when I took Dumbarton to my indoor tennis club. We were scheduled to play with two pretty young ladies in a doubles game.

The first thing Dumbarton said to the ladies when we got on the court was "May we play through?"

"No, Dumbarton," I said patiently, "you don't ask the ladies to play through in tennis. You play with them. It's not like golf."

"You mean you play with girls in tennis?" Dumbarton asked in amazement.

"That's what makes the game so much fun," I said.

"But don't they slow you down?" he asked.

"Not necessarily. Many women tennis players are better than men."

"I don't think I'm going to like this sport," Dumbarton said.

"Now get your tennis racket," I said, and ran on the other side of the net.

"I have only one racket," Dumbarton said.

"That's all you need," I said.

"But shouldn't you have a wood for the serve and a different iron for each shot?" Dumbarton asked.

"No, Dumbarton. One racket is used for all the shots."

"Well, that's stupid. In golf you at least have a choice of clubs."

"That's the way we do it in tennis. Let's go."

"But who tells you you've hit a good drive?" Dumbarton demanded.

"We do. Your partner and the opposition. All right, go over there and I'll serve to you."

Dumbarton went to the other side of the net and I hit a ball to him. He ducked and then came rushing angrily up to the net.

"Why didn't you yell 'fore'?" I said, "that ball coming right at me!"

"You don't yell 'fore' in tennis," I shouted. "The ball is supposed to come right at you, and you're supposed to hit it back."

Dumbarton mumbled, something to himself and went to the serve line. I hit another ball to him and he hit it back. Then he stood there watching it. My partner hit it back to him.

"Don't just stand there, Dumbarton!" I yelled. "Hit it back!"

"I wanted to see if it was going to land in the rough or not."

"I thought you didn't use tennis," Dumbarton said.

"We haven't," the other lady replied, "until today."

"You mean if it's out, you can't whip shot it in?"

"No. When it's out, it's out for good."

Dumbarton said, "You must lose a lot of balls that way."

"We go out and get the same ball and play with it again."

Dumbarton said, "Okay, let's start. What's par for this set?"

There is no par for the set. The side that wins the six games wins the set.

"Well, how do you know your handicap then?"

"By the way you play, stupid."

The women who were supposed to be our partners had said it by now, and one of them said to me, "May we play through?"

"I thought you didn't use tennis," Dumbarton said.

"We haven't," the other lady replied, "until today."

George would have crawled to Hanoi, would come from Hanoi to seek a cease-fire and induce them to accept our money. Economic Opportunity and wants to cut Medicare benefits. Through various surrogates in Treasury, Defense and the Office of Management and Budget, he has informed the nation's mayors that they won't get as much money as they expected to rebuild their cities. It worked. The mayors have banded together like a crowd of antiwar demonstrators to roar that Nixon has adopted a "Hanoi First" policy. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, Chicago's militant black leader, has accused the administration of "transferring the DEO to Hanoi." Hardly a day passes without a fiery speech by some liberal on Capitol Hill inveighing against Nixon's "sellout" to the Communists.

The irony in the situation is fascinating. Those liberals who now protest against using tax monies to bind North Vietnam's wounds are the same who for years bled gallons for the gallant freedom-loving enemy. bleeding, they demanded as a matter of morality that the United States not only stop fighting but finance North Vietnam's reconstruction. Their slogan was billions for Hanoi, but not one cent for Saigon.

Consider the about-face of Sen. George McGovern. Throughout the Presidential campaign, his speeches on the Vietnam War persuaded audiences to take it for granted that if elected he would propose massive economic aid to Hanoi. If necessary, it seemed, Good

About A Dog

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am an 8-year-old girl and want to get a dog. My family are all allergic to dogs, all but me. I have heard that poodles do not cause allergy, but I want to get a beagle. Which breed would be better? Is there any dog that doesn't cause allergy? — M.F.

I'm sorry, sweetie, but if people are allergic to dogs, it isn't their fault. They just are. With a whole family of allergic people, the chances are that you will find that you are allergic to something or other. Maybe not dogs — but something.

Allergists frankly have a lot of trouble persuading people that if they are allergic to dogs, the thing to do is to get rid of the dog. Cats, too, some people are allergic to various types of animals.

For a given person, one dog may not cause as much trouble as another breed, but when one is allergic to dogs, there isn't much point in trying to find one that causes less trouble.

For the sake of your family, you'll just have to do without a dog. That's only fair to them.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you explain what a hiatal hernia is? Does heavy lifting endanger one? Is it a major or minor surgery? What are the risks of delaying surgery a few months? — C.C.

The esophagus or gullet has to pass through your diaphragm to reach your stomach. Well, if the gap in the diaphragm through which it passes is larger than it needs to be, that's a hiatal hernia.

Thus the upper part of the stomach, where it joins the gullet, can push slightly upward through the gap. This can be painful, especially since stomach acids then can escape into the esophagus, where they don't belong.

The net result is a sensation very much like the pain of a peptic ulcer — and, indeed, ulceration can occur.

Heavy lifting doesn't post the same risk involved with an ungular hernia or "rupture," but if the lifting increases pressure inside the abdomen (which is quite probable) it increases the pressure pushing the top of the stomach up through that gap.

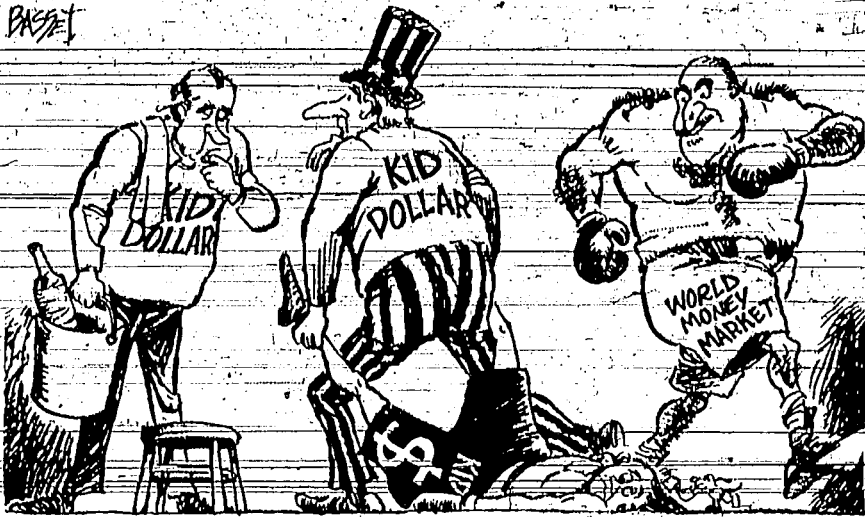

There are various ways of managing a hiatal hernia, one of which is to lose some weight if you have a bigish belly.

If it has to be corrected by surgery, it is, decidedly, major surgery; in a great majority of cases, however, more conservative methods are satisfactory, and it is seldom that a doctor recommends surgery without trying the other methods for a few months, or longer.

You'll probably benefit by sending 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for a copy of my booklet on the subject, "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Control It."

2 Valley senators east 'swing' votes for Jones

By DAVID ESPO Times-News writer
BOISE — For a variety of reasons the two senators from the Mini-Cassia area were the "swing votes" in the fight Thursday over the confirmation of Franklin Jones to the Idaho Water Resource Board.

To win the confirmation battle, the forces of Gov. Cecil D. Andrus had to minimize their defections from the Democratic Party ranks. Of the 12 minority party senators, only one, Sen. Richard Egbert, D-Teton, was a definite "no" on confirmation.

He said he would represent "my people," and his people meant the Upper Snake River Valley, and not another Boise man on the board.

With Egbert gone over to the forces opposing Jones, Saxvik's vote became critical. A Democrat in a Republican district, a two-time winner by the slimmest of margins, Saxvik had the tough job of pleasing both the party and the constituency he represents, and dealing with his own conscience.

For similar reasons, Sen. John Peavey, R-Rupert, faced a tough vote. Peavey has spent a good deal of time in the last two to three years carving out a

Jones could have done a great deal in getting him back into the good graces of the Senate leadership. It also would have meant the destruction of what he had done over a longer period of time to establish credibility with the more liberal elements in the Blaine County part of his split legislative district.

Peavey didn't debate the confirmation on the floor. But before casting his vote he exercised his privilege of "explaining his vote." He admitted there had been pressure. He admitted it had been a difficult choice. He admitted there had been efforts made on both sides. But he said "environmentalist" shouldn't be a dirty word in Idaho.

"Saxvik was different. He took the floor with a joke. Paraphrasing the great Fomichem W. Fields, Saxvik told the senators and packed gallery he'd "rather be in Philadelphia."

Then, turning serious and at times almost emotional, Saxvik said, "In recent days I have been subjected to the greatest of pressures from some of my own constituents and close supporters."

"It is almost as if some kind of Mafia has been at work. It seems as though those people closest to me have called me and exhorted me not to vote for the confirmation of Franklin Jones."

He went on to say that as their duly elected representative, he wanted to inform them and this Senate that what he does today is not to be construed as pressure from the governor or pressure from my constituents, but rather a deep seated effort to do what is right by my conscience.

He said flatly, "I shall not be party to a political game that puts Franklin Jones in the middle of the bullring and lets this fine man be gored to the cheering — thousands — of irrigators."

With ten sure Democrats and six Republicans (including five from Ada County) considered certain to go for Jones, Peavey and Saxvik became crucial if the necessary 18 votes were to be collected.

Both the Mini-Cassia senators voted to confirm Jones by a term on the board.

The only question remaining is the length of voter memory in the predominantly irrigatorist district of Cassia County and the strength of the emerging environmentalist coalition in the northern part of Peavey's district.

Ravenscroft gains delay in proposal

By DWIGHT JENSEN Special to the Times-News
BOISE — Rep. Vernon Ravenscroft, R-Butte, succeeded this past week in postponing for at least a year a proposal to provide tax relief for people over 65 who own their own homes and have gross incomes of less than $7,000 per year.

The so-called "circuit breaker" system was presented to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee by Rep. John Eyre, D-Pocatello, representing a three-man subcommittee that had been drafting the legislation.

Ravenscroft, who had said earlier he was skeptical of the concept, successfully moved to ask that it be made the subject of an interim study. The study resolution has yet to be approved by the legislature.

and any other kind of income you can imagine — he would have to pay his own taxes until they equaled 5 per cent of that amount, or $225.

Then the "circuit-breaker" would take effect and for the next $200 he would pay the tax but be reimbursed by the state. If his property tax went higher than $125, he would pay the balance himself.

Eyre said the average property tax bill on a home in Idaho is $238. Attorney Phil Peterson said the bill would affect an estimated 28,000 households in Idaho.

This table was proposed in the bill:

Property Tax	Amount Paid	Amount Paid	Amount Paid

If a person were also eligible for widow's tax relief or some other form of property tax relief, the person would have to choose whether to use the "circuit-breaker" or the other tax relief — he or she could not have both.

Ravenscroft, who had already registered objections to the concept, said the bill does not require the person to pay his taxes in order to qualify for relief.

Attorney Peterson pointed out that taxes constitute a first lien on the house, but Ravenscroft said the state would nevertheless be working on faith.

He then moved to work on setting up an interim study of the question, and his motion passed without a dissenting vote.

Analysis

The bill would have provided $1.5 million from the general fund to reimburse low-income elderly property owners for a portion of their property taxes.

The system would work by dividing a person's property taxes into three parts — a base amount, which the taxpayer would pay; a block of relief for which he would be reimbursed; and, in the case of low income people with expensive homes: if there are any — an amount over and above both of these, which the taxpayer would pay.

If, for example, a man of 66 had $4,500 per year gross income — including pension, welfare, unemployment compensation, alimony

Medicare cutbacks questioned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said today he wants to know "how and why" the administration decided to cut back on Medicare payments.

The Senate's special subcommittee on health of the elderly opened two days of hearings, and Muskie, the chairman, prepared to question the leadoff witness, HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

Weinberger, in his first appearance on Capitol Hill as secretary of health, education and welfare, testified to the House public health subcommittee last week that the benefits had resulted in an "overutilization" of hospitals.

Hansen school chairman says district lacks funds

By ROBERT PETTYGROVE
Chairman, Hansen School Board

The rural schools of the eastern part of Twin Falls County are among the most educationally impoverished in Idaho, especially at the secondary level.

Some of these districts are labeled wealthy due to the assessed valuation per child. Despite this invisible wealth the patrons of some of these districts have found it necessary to continually pass override levies to maintain the lean education available.

The rural high school typically has a narrow curriculum which will not compare with the usual urban school curriculum. When you start talking about equal education, the rural schools are the ones needing help.

Of course, equality of educational opportunity is an elusive ideal which cannot exist unless you are willing to accept a minimal program. The education of rural youth will always cost more, and their curriculum opportunities will be somewhat limited.

Just as all districts receive a weighting factor to compensate for the additional costs of secondary education, the small schools receive a weighting factor to compensate for the higher costs in a small school.

At first glance, it looks like the small school has a financial advantage, but when the state distribution formula is applied, the large amount subtracted for the participation levy more than off sets the sparsity factor, and the district finds itself without sufficient funds to meet minimal needs.

At present, the 22 mill participation levy requires a contribution of $106 per ADA for Twin Falls School District. Hansen contributes $185, and Murtough $251 per ADA. A move to 30 mills would result in even greater inequities. The state distribution formula is not geared to supply the financial needs of the districts, but only to distribute the available money. This is the reason most districts feel they are short changed by the formula.

Large districts seem to get the idea that if they could get the "excess" funds which small districts receive, their problems would be solved. Less than 10 per cent of the state's students are in small schools. If all the funds they receive were divided among the rest of the students, the effect would be very small. Depriving rural students of an education will not solve the problems of urban districts.

The reply we always hear is "Why don't you consolidate?" First, let's lay to rest the myth that administration reorganization will save money. Such a move would cost money because more personnel would have to be hired, and at a higher salary.

The tax base can not be equalized without combining rural and urban school districts. Such a move would create more problems than it would solve.

For instance, where are the much needed buildings to be built? Which will be built first? How do you guarantee rural youth an opportunity to participate in extra curricular activities?

How far do you transport students before it interferes with, rather than improves, their education? Urban-rural conflicts could make the passage of any kind of a night mare

How much financial help is the Twin Falls District able and willing to give toward east end building problems in return for the higher assessed evaluation per student?

If the east end schools were consolidated, we would have the same students in the same buildings, and — because of the formula — $60,000 less money to educate them with.

That kind of economy is not possible unless you get all of the students under one roof. It would take nearly $700,000 from sources outside these districts to build such a facility.

Small schools, because of their size, have a favorable teacher pupil ratio which results in a high quality program. Unless increased funding is used to improve the teacher pupil ratio as well as increase teacher salaries, it will not improve the quality of education in the large schools. There is much evidence that participation in extra curricular activities is important to the total development of students. Rural youth have traditionally been very active in these programs.

Few of the rural parents believe a change to the very large school would really be beneficial to their children. Large schools are by nature, designed for the elite. The average student finds little advantage in the large unit.

From all the conflict between small and large schools, from all the discussion about equal educational opportunity, from all the argument about equalizing taxpayer responsibility, from all the efforts to equalize the assessed value per student, one thing becomes more and more evident: There is no simple, easy solution.

It will require more taxpayer effort — from local or state level, and compromise by all parties if the ideal is even to be approached.

It is to be hoped that through all the facts, statistics, talk, and smoke, that the most important resource of our state — our children — will be kept paramount.

US said 'slumlord'

CAMP DAVID, Md. (UPI) — The U.S. government is becoming a nationwide slumlord, President Nixon told a national radio audience Sunday while defending his decision to eliminate scores of urban renewal projects and suspend subsidized housing programs.

In the fifth installment of a serialized State of the Union report to the nation, Nixon said he wanted to turn community planning over to state and local officials.

The President said Congress would receive a written message on community development and "the quality of life in our cities and towns" later this week. He indicated that new legislation in these areas would be proposed but gave no hint when it would be sent to Capitol Hill or what it might contain.

Nixon was expected to spend today at Camp David accompanied by his close friend — G. G. "Hebe" Hebozo and his personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods.

In his speech, Nixon gave an optimistic assessment of urban America's general outlook now, compared with a few years ago when "we constantly heard that the nation's cities and towns were 'on the brink of collapse.'"

Nixon claimed the nation's air is now cleaner, said the financial condition of most local governments has been shored up and cited a decrease in the crime rate.

"The hour of crisis has passed," he said.

US-Russian trade jump seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A last October high Soviet trade official predicts that once the Soviet-American trade agreement is fully implemented, mutual trade could run into "billions of dollars" a year with Moscow inviting U.S. businessmen to join in a variety of joint enterprises.

Vladimir S. Alkhimov, Soviet vice minister of foreign trade, expressed the hope that Congress would approve "most favored nation" (MFN) trading status for the Soviet Union, implementing the accord, which the administration negotiated with the Russians.

MFN would give the Soviet Union the same favorable trading conditions as America's best trading partners. But approval of such status by Congress faces what appears to be a serious obstacle.

Amendments have been proposed in both the House and Senate which would bar the granting of MFN to Russia unless the Soviet government permits Jews wishing to emigrate to do so freely without payment of substantial educational taxes.

In an interview Sunday, Alkhimov stressed that the Soviet government had approved a system of waivers for its decree of Aug. 3, 1972, which established a schedule of taxes to be paid by emigrants in compensation of free education, which they had received.

"There is a small group of Jews who want to leave," Alkhimov said. "Practically, 99.5 per cent of all applications in 1972 have been settled and they have left. We have liberalized our procedures and only 10 per cent have had to pay something."

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Opposition parties gained in a critical election for President Salvador Allende Sunday, but failed to pick up enough seats in the Chamber of Deputies and Senate to oust the self-described Marxist leader.

Allende hailed the results as a triumph for his minority government led by a combination of Communists and Socialists. He was reported by an opposition victory.

There was only one reported incident of violence on election day. Police and army troops used tear gas to break up crowds of political rivals assembling a block away from the presidential palace.

Allende's coalition received more than 40 per cent of the vote in elections for all 150 members of the Chamber of Deputies and for 25 of the 50 members of the Senate.

The government said it gained five seats in the Chamber of Deputies and three in the Senate, bringing its total to 49 deputies and 20 senators. This was enough to prevent the opposition from obtaining the two-thirds majority it needed to impeach Allende or override any veto of legislation he proposed.

When Allende won a three-man race for the presidency in 1970, and thus became the first self-proclaimed Marxist to win an election in Latin America, he took 36 per cent of the vote. He said before the voting that he would consider it a smashing victory if his government gained 40 per cent of the vote.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An American child who is a "moderate" viewer of television sees 5,000 commercials a year—80,000 commercials by the time he reaches 16.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., gave the figures and added that a large portion of the commercials deal with food products—predominantly breakfast and snack foods.

McGovern cited surveys by the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which "indicate a disturbing decline in some very important parts of the traditional American diet."

Prater trial security tight

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — Unusually tight courtroom security set the tone today in the first day of the triple-murder trial of William J. Prater, accused of killing dissident mine union leader Joseph A. "Jack" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

Yablonski and his family were slain Dec. 31, 1969, three weeks after Yablonski's unsuccessful bid to unseat former UMW President W. A. "Tony" Boyle. Prater, a former United Mine Workers field organizer from LaFollette, Tenn., is the first of two high-ranking former UMW officials to face trial in the Dec. 31, 1969 murders. The other is Albert Pass, a former executive board member whose trial date has not been set.

Prater and Pass are charged with hiring five assassins and paying them with union funds to commit the murders at the Yablonski's Clarksville, Pa., home.

Attorneys said Boyle may be called as a witness in the case and authorities instituted tight security in the courtroom of Erie County President Judge Edward Carney.

Carney took over the cases of Prater and Pass when the Pennsylvania Supreme Court ruled last October they could not receive a fair trial in Washington County, where the murders were committed, because of prejudicial publicity.

Saturn study aired

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The rings that encircle the planet Saturn are rough and rocky, not made of gas, ice or dust as previously believed, according to two astronomers at Cal Tech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The bands "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings," warned Dr. Richard M. Goldstein and George A. Morris Jr.

Using the NASA 204-foot antenna at Goldstone Tracking Station in California's Mojave Desert, they carried out the first radar probe of Saturn, directing 400-kilowatt beams at the planet in December and January.

"We received much stronger backscatter signals than we expected, from such a distance," the astronomers said in a joint report Sunday.

Meany criticizes Nixon statements

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany warns that organized labor has "a stick in the closet" if the administration's Phase III economic program is not applied with equity.

Meany, the head of 14 million union members, said Sunday he wanted to "cooperate" with President Nixon, "in order to keep the prices down."

But he complained of "galloping inflation" and food prices that were "absolutely running wild."

"The only thing we have got under control is the workers' wages, and we think this is eminently and very definitely unfair," Meany said.

Meany criticized statements by Nixon that it would not be wise to continue controls on rents and by Treasury Secretary, George Shultz, that it would not be good to control farm prices.

"The President is saying (top) the landlord, we can't touch him, because he will go on strike if we touch him, and George Shultz is saying, the farmer, we can't touch him, he will go on strike—he won't plant."

"So the point is ... that there is a stick in the closet for labor," Meany said.

His reference was to a statement Nixon made earlier this year that he had a big stick in his closet that he would use if inflation got out of line.

Meany was interviewed on NBC's Meet the Press. He said he was "mystified" by the statements of administration officials last week that the 5.5 per cent wage ceiling in earlier phases of the economic program would be strictly enforced in the current Phase III.

Meany said, the Advisory Committee to the Cost of Living Council, which was assigned the task of recommending policy for Phase III, drafted a statement saying no single wage standard could be applied practically to the economy.

"If you ask me where we are going on the 5.5 per cent, I am just as mystified as you are," Meany said.

"I am quite sure that there will be higher settlements and I am quite sure they will be approved by the Cost of Living Council this year as they were last year."

Meany said he thought the White House statements on the 5.5 per cent guideline represented "another case of trying to manage the news." He said the White House called a full press conference to explain the advisory committee's recommendation "with none of us present."

Meany was a member of the advisory committee. The labor leader said his understanding was that the 5.5 per cent guideline would be relaxed this year under Phase III.

At the same time, they said it was unlikely the left would gain control of the National Assembly and that Gaullists would rule for another five years.

The final results come next Sunday when 30 million voters return to the polls to make their choice among candidates forced into run-offs.

Pilot won't face criminal action

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (UPI) — A grand jury has decided against criminal prosecution for Martin Hartwell, the bush pilot who ate the flesh of a dead passenger to survive 32 days in the sub-Arctic barrens after his plane crashed.

The 46-year-old German-born pilot, who survived 32 days in the sub-Arctic barrens after his plane crashed and his three passengers died, was not recommended for criminal prosecution by a coroner's jury.

The jury's report said the 46-year-old German-born pilot's inexperience in piloting his Cessna 441 in the northern barrens and his unfamiliarity with the countryside and flying at night contributed to the crash.

But it did not recommend that Hartwell be prosecuted either for criminal negligence or for desecrating the body of the passenger.

The six-day ordeal into the Nov. 8 crash about 200 miles northwest of Yellowknife ended Saturday night when the jury handed down its verdict to rents and by Treasury Secretary, George Shultz, that it would not be good to control farm prices.

"The President is saying (top) the landlord, we can't touch him, because he will go on strike if we touch him, and George Shultz is saying, the farmer, we can't touch him, he will go on strike—he won't plant."

Coroner Walter England.

The aircraft skidded into a hillside about 50 miles south of Great Bear Lake, nearly 200 miles off course while on a mercy flight from Cambridge Bay, north of the Arctic Circle on Victoria Island, to Yellowknife.

The incident began in the early afternoon when the youths boarded a car of a train heading from Columbus Circle at 36th Street on Manhattan's West Side.

Socialists lead in Paris vote

PARIS (UPI) — Communists and Socialists, forming an election coalition for the first time in 37 years, seized the lead today in first-round voting for a new government but were still short of enough seats to wrest control from the Gaullists.

Official figures early today gave 9,687,142 votes to the leftwing coalition, 8,569,332 to the Gaullists and 7,374,167 to a middle-of-the-road reform bloc.

With results from 446 of the 493 constituencies, the leftwing coalition led the Gaullist coalition by 2.3 per cent.

Only 55 seats were decided in Sunday's vote by a record 81.2 per cent of the electorate.

Gaullists captured 44 seats and the left took nine but most of the Gaullist victories were scored in places that traditionally vote conservative.

Political experts said the voting broke out predictions the government would lose most of its present 112-seat majority in the National Assembly and could be forced into a deal with the reform bloc.

At the same time, they said it was unlikely the left would gain control of the National Assembly and that Gaullists would rule for another five years.

The final results come next Sunday when 30 million voters return to the polls to make their choice among candidates forced into run-offs.

Pebblesize

CHICAGO (UPI) — Those pebbles on the beach must be the right size or they become something else when you throw them into the sea.

Oceanographers, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, define pebbles as having a diameter of between 2 1/2 to 6-3/4 of an inch. If bigger, they're "cobble," which range up to 10 inches in diameter.

Winners and work

MRS. ERNEST THAETE, Filer, right, chairman of the Farm Bureau Women's committee, presented cash prizes Friday to Starla Denise Miller and Faith Marie Rupperecht, top winners in the safety contest at Filer. The prize winning posters may still be entered in state competition at Pocatello.

Serendipity Singers slated

TWIN FALLS — Next on the musical agenda at the College of Southern Idaho is the Serendipity Singers. The well-known group has just completed a record-breaking tour through Florida and Illinois where they appeared before standing room only audiences. They will be appearing at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. The five young musicians specialize in a variety of country folk musical with folk rock, contemporary and music from "the new scene" founding out their repertoire. The group is now known as the Rosebud Music Co. and consists of two girls and three young men. Marilyn, a former lead singer with the Serendipity Singers, has appeared on the Steve Allen Show, Mike Douglas Show, and in many special performances. Ted is a singer and instrumentalist, and has also performed with the Serendipity Singers and has an extensive education in many types of music.

PLANT NOW ON A.S.C. WHEAT SET ASIDE PROGRAM AND PASTURE THIS FALL AND TAKE ANOTHER CROP OFF NEXT YEAR!

This grain has now produced outstanding yields in Idaho for the past 3 years.
 Pasture in the spring and summer—then take Green Chop or Harvest Grain in the fall.
 Triticale is a dual purpose cereal grain, which produces green foliage and is high in protein going 19 to 21%.
 Outstanding yields have been produced on the better farms with excess of 100 bu. per acre in Idaho.
 Plant 60 lbs. on dryland or 100 lbs. on irrigated land. Use ordinary grain drill.
 Those varieties of Triticale we have for sale can either be planted in fall or spring. Most other varieties are for spring planting only. Ask your dealer about Graze Grain 70 or Graze Grain 72.

Safety contest winners listed

By MAIJOE LIEBMAN, Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS — Starla Denise Miller and Faith Marie Rupperecht were awarded cash prizes Friday for their winning posters in the Farm Bureau sponsored safety contest.
 Miss Rupperecht is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rupperecht, Buhl. She is in the eighth grade at Clover Trinity Lutheran School. She stressed safety with fire and her winning poster featured a black silhouette of a growing blaze with the caption "We Were Thoughtless."
 Miss Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Miller, Twin Falls, attends the fifth grade at Hollister Elementary School. Her poster portrayed the danger of drugs showing pills spilling from an overturned bottle, a syringe and a hypodermic needle. She named her poster "Pretty but Deadly."
 Posters dealing with the dangers of drugs were predominant in the contest, according to Mrs. Ernest Thaete, Filer, poster chairman. The contest is sponsored each year by the Idaho Farm Bureau Women's Committee and schools participating this year were Hansen Elementary, Filer; Elementary, Hollister; Elementary and Clover Trinity. There were 62 entries in the contest.
 The winners were presented cash prizes and their posters will be eligible for the state finals contest in Pocatello. Posters were to be accompanied by short essays on safety and were to pertain to safety in the home, on the farm, on the highway, in recreation or health.
 Second place winner in the grades four through six group was Christine Ann Kaster, Buhl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kaster. Koreen Lavon Eggleston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleston, Twin Falls, placed third. Both attend the Clover Trinity school.
 In the contest for students from grades seven through 12, Mike Wayne Ihler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ihler, Twin Falls placed second. Tamra Lynn Gartner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gartner, Filer, was third place winner. Both also attend the Clover Trinity Lutheran School.

Nader hits VA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader task force said Saturday the Veterans Administration is short-changing America's 3 million Vietnam veterans by wasting billions of dollars on "many older men who 'do not need or merit its help.'"

The VA's $12 billion annual budget goes largely to "phantom disabilities, non-service-connected claims, improper care, waste and business frauds," Nader himself charged in releasing a 150-page report prepared by his Center for Study of Responsive Law.

VA Administrator Donald E. Johnson, who came under heavy fire from Congress and the Veterans of Foreign Wars last month for proposing a $160 million cut in disability benefits for Vietnam veterans, including amputees, said Nader's charges of favoritism toward older veterans was "insulting as well as totally untrue" and was "utterly absurd."

The White House ordered Johnson's cutback plan withdrawn for "further intensive study" Feb. 14 and announced Friday that Johnson, a former American Legion national commander from Iowa, would be leaving the VA.

Demonstrates technique

ALDRICH BOWLER (center, wearing white sweat shirt) demonstrates pottery-making techniques at Adult Development Center, Twin Falls. He shows how to knead, mix and recover clay. Students later made their own free form creations.

Idaho education board plans an open hearing

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Board of Education Friday announced plans for an open hearing on problems related to higher institutions of learning April 3-4 preceding the board meeting at the University of Idaho.

Students, faculty, administrators, legislators, news media and other interested persons will participate in making recommendations for future courses of action at the state's four institutions of higher education.

The board Friday concluded its March meeting in Boise. During the meeting, findings of a follow up investigation by a state department of education committee in support of efforts by the Whitepine School District at Troy in behalf of a deaf student were discussed.

The report was made by D.F. Engelking, state superintendent of public instruction. Engelking told board members the school district is doing "everything financially possible" for Lisa (last, the handicapped) child, including special classes at the University of Idaho and Washington State University.

Students learn pottery making

By MARJORIE LIEBERMAN
Times-News Staff Writer
TWIN FALLS — A lesson on pottery making Friday in the Adult Development Center was an instant hit with the students.

Aldrich Bowler, owner of the Snake River Pottery plant at Hagerman, demonstrated the techniques of mixing and kneading the clay to nearly 30 clients at the center, after which the group spent the morning making free form articles from the clay.

A variety of objects was turned out by the eager students, including figurines, baskets, bowls and many others.

"Working with clay relieves self-consciousness and exalts the imagination," said Bowler. A person cannot think of themselves while indulging in creative modeling and the same holds true with other demanding mediums, he added.

Bowler was assisted by Mrs. Fern Fowler, Gooding, instructor at the center, and Cheryl Stout, Twin Falls, a teacher's aide at the adult center under the National Youth Community Action project.

Mrs. Fowler had previously taken a course in modeling under Bowler's instruction and the group at the center has had some previous instruction in working with clay but this was the first time the techniques had been shown by Bowler himself to the class. Bowler has generously donated all the clay the classes have been using.

The group was shown how to mix and prepare the clay, also how to recover old clay by softening and kneading. Bowler praised the group's efforts and said it took real pride in its modeling.

Lincoln students named

SHOEHONE — Two Lincoln County students have been named to Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges.

They are Frank Garrett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garrett Sr., Shoshone; and Brian Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lindell Cooper, Dietrich. The students are selected on the basis of academic achievement, leadership contributions in the various activities on campus and for spiritual qualities. Dr. Mack Shirley, dean of student life at Dietrich College, said.

Ruptured Men Get $4.95 Gift for Trying This

Kansas City, Mo. — Here is an improved means of holding ruptured inguinal or hernia pads. It has caused many to say, "I don't see how it holds so easy. I would not have believed had I not tried it."

Inconspicuous, without leg straps, elastic bands, body encircling springs or harsh pads, it has caused many to say, "I don't see how it holds so easy. I would not have believed had I not tried it."

So comfortable, "so easy to wear" — it could show you the way to joyous freedom from your rupture trouble.

You can't lose by trying. It is sent to you on 30 days trial. You receive a separate $4.95 gift as a gift just for trying the invention.

Write for descriptive circular. It's free. Just address Physicians Associates Company, 3065 West Blvd., S.W., 25th St., Kansas City, Mo. 64114.

TF Cookie Cutters see demonstrations

TWIN FALLS — The Healthy Cookie Cutters Club met Friday at the home of the leader, Luanne Platt.

Roll call was one new sewing habit acquired.

It was decided to change the meeting to each Monday beginning March 12. The club voted to buy 4-11 shirts again this year.

It was decided the girls would make four baby quilts for a community project. This is in conjunction with their handy hand sewing.

Demonstrations were by Pam Moseley on home hazards; Shelley Bartlett on child care; Jeanina Peterson on how to wash dishes properly and how to sew on a button; Diane Murphy, how to assemble a first aid kit; Treanna Peterson, how not to cook; and Manon McBride and Valerie Kerr, the right and wrong way to babysit.

Miss Platt gave a lesson and quiz on labels in clothing. The girls are to finish their stitches and wrist pin cushions this week.

Refreshments were by Miss McBride and Miss Moseley. Next meeting will be March 12 at Miss Platt's home.

Pool fund increases by $380

SHOEHONE — The Lincoln County swimming fund increased by over $380 with donations from the Lincoln Ettes and a fourth grade at the Lincoln school.

The fourth grade, under instruction from Mrs. Harold Williams, had sold candy and popcorn to raise some money last year and after purchasing a gift for their school, had $5 left in the treasury. This amount they donated to the pool fund this week.

Since the Lincoln Ettes, a civic organization no longer active, had $378.03 in their treasury, they voted to give it to the pool fund also.

The Lincoln Ettes have become inactive at this time due to lack of membership.

During the time they were active, funds were raised with projects such as the Fiddler's Jamboree held last year.

Mrs. George Swanner and Mrs. Clarence Mudgett, representing the organization, presented the money to city clerk, Mrs. Claude Chess.

Lincoln Red Cross campaigns

SHOEHONE — Lincoln County Red Cross officials are planning an all-out campaign to raise funds and create community awareness of the services of Red Cross.

A meeting is set for 8 p.m. March 12 at the Manhattan Cafe, the Rev. Hardy Thompson, fund drive chairman, said.

The Rev. Hardy said "no community is immune to disasters. The Red Cross services, to a community include first aid training, assistance to servicemen's families in case of emergencies, swimming instructions, blood drawings and immediate disaster relief."

Easter Seal campaign to April 22

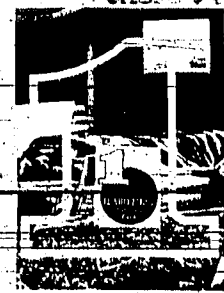

SHOEHONE — The Easter Seal campaign in this area will be from March 1 to April 22.

Mrs. Frank Starnes, local trustee, said Easter Seals will be mailed to over 100,000 Idaho homes in an appeal for contributions.

She pointed to the speech therapy centers in Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho Falls; kindergarten classes for children with speech handicaps in Boise and Twin Falls; and a pre-school class for children with learning disabilities in Boise, as some of the services provided by the society.

The program also provides funds for transportation to medical centers, as well as braces, wheelchairs, corrective shoes and other orthopedic devices to those who need them.

Each summer 40 or 50 crippled children are sent to Camp Easter Seal near Coeur d'Alene where they can enjoy two weeks of outdoor living.

Whether you're buying or building a new home, step one of the process should be a visit to Idaho First. Qualified home financing people can tell you early what to expect in the way of price, local activity and what to look for that's realistically within your budget. Former POW tells events

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Air Force Lt. Col. Robert B. Purcell, a former prisoner of war in North Vietnam, told of making us superpatriots. "We were pretty sure they couldn't be telling us the truth of pink-and-white, patterned slacks and a T-shirt, propped his bare foot on a kitchen chair and relaxed over a cup of coffee."

It was his third day back home after more than seven years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam.

A welcome-home banner still hung over the front doorway of his new, colonial-style home in a fashionable subdivision.

"When the full story finally can be told about our lives as POWs, it will have to include how much of a role a good sense of humor played in our day-to-day existence," he said.

"There is no question but what we were better prepared for captivity than the POWs back in the Korean War what with the prior indoctrination we received in the event we got captured," Purcell said.

"It's a funny thing but the word 'brainwash' never was used over there by any of us except in a historical sense with reference to the Korean War."

Purcell said the North Vietnamese did try to indoctrinate the prisoners with propaganda, but it was so heavy-handed "it actually had the reverse effect of making us superpatriots."

"There was a strong unity among the men in my compound of the Hanoi Hilton in our reaction to the propaganda we were hearing," Purcell revealed. "I wouldn't call it a disciplined attitude. It's just that we were pretty much in tune with each other."

Purcell said POW life even had strong elements of humor. "The men who were POWs in South Vietnam claim they had it better than we did, but I have my own ideas about that," he said, looking out his kitchen window. "I know I would rather be living under a roof in one place, than, say, out in that yard."

Purcell, a short, wiry man with alert dark eyes, was the senior officer and POW leader of a section of the "Hanoi Hilton," in which about 40 to 50 junior officers and non-coms were imprisoned.

"Of course, I'd never want to go through it again, but life as a prisoner of war has developed me into a much more fulfilled person," he said.

Disclosure refused on electric bill charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of state officials — how regulate public utilities has refused a second time to call for full disclosure of charges on household gas and electric bills.

A source in the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners said Saturday that the group's position was decided by its executive committee at meetings this week in Washington.

The association's leaders, according to the source, voted to abolish a special panel which had recommended the move to improve billing practices. It was understood that a new panel was set up, presumably to offer a more moderate proposal.

Many gas and electric bills include small square reading "pay not amount by" a certain date and others saying "pay gross amount after" that date. If a customer doesn't pay within the required time, the bill is slightly more.

The association's special committee said in an Oct. 23 report that the difference between those figures actually was interest, sometimes at exorbitant rates.

The panel suggested that customers be given more time to pay before the larger amount comes due and that they should be informed of the rate of interest assessed.

Accordingly, it recommended that all utilities state clearly the date of billing, the amount of the bill, the date the bill is due, the credit charges in dollars if the bill is not paid by the due date, and the effective annual rate of interest if the bill is not paid then.

The recommendation was presented to the association's national convention last November in New Orleans. After heated debate, it was sent to the executive committee for action.

On the original three-member special committee were Diarmuid O'Scannlain, chairman of the Oregon Public Utilities Commission; William F. Rich, chairman of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission; and Marvin R. Wooten, chairman of the North Carolina Utilities Commission.

Saving. Is it a word from another generation with no relevance to today's live-your-life-now young people? Frankly, that's a question you have to answer for yourself. Saving is, simply, a useful tool for getting the things you want. Whether it's something you want to buy, or just something you want to have later in life, saving is a good way to get it.

And First Security is a good place for saving. You don't have to worry about losing your money, it grows at a variety of different rates, and it's available when you need it. First Security is a place where there's room to grow.

Ruling given on gas firm

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today ruled that the El Paso Natural Gas Co. must relinquish the former Pacific Northwest Pipeline Co. to the APCO group, an independent purchaser.

The change reduces El Paso's total system gas reserves by one third.

In a brief order, the Court affirmed rulings made last summer by U.S. District Judge Olin Hatfield Chilson of Denver. The lawsuit is now more than 15 years old. El Paso acquired Pacific Northwest in 1959.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White, and Thurgood Marshall did not participate in today's action.

The court received five separate appeals by 13 parties. El Paso itself and the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. argued that divestiture should be eliminated altogether.

Three others objected to Chilson's choice of APCO.

The high court first ordered the divestiture in 1964, in an effort to restore competition in California among natural gas suppliers. The Court found the merger violated the Clayton Antitrust Law.

In the meantime a shortage of natural gas developed, but the court twice reaffirmed its decision and only last term refused to reconsider it.

The Justice Department was about to drop the case, but it was pursued by William M. Bennett, a former chairman of the California Public Utilities Commission, who won another Supreme Court hearing on it.

More recently Chilson had ordered the Pacific Northwest properties turned over to the Colorado Interstate Corp. But shortly thereafter, control of that company was acquired by a subsidiary of Coastal States Gas Producing Co., which had never been before Chilson. Chilson then revoked the Colorado interstate order, and selected the APCO group, which is composed of Alaska Interstate Co., APCO Oil Corp., Gulf Interstate Co. and Tiberary Land & Exploration Corp.

El Paso told the high court that because of the current gas shortage there is no longer any meaningful competition in the sale of natural gas. It asked the court to modify its divestiture directive and either devise an alternative or refer the remedy issue to the Federal Power Commission.

Urging affirmation of Chilson, the government said the nation is not experiencing a shortage of physical gas resources, but only "developed" deliverable gas resources.

Gas distributors who challenged APCO represented regional interests which might be disadvantaged in gas sales under the new system.

APCO applauded the Supreme Court ruling, saying the end of 15 years litigation "makes possible the establishment of an independent, publicly held company to serve the gas supply needs of the Northwest."

A spokesman, John G. McMillan, said APCO immediately will begin negotiations to set a price for the assets of El Paso's Northwest division, the portion the Supreme Court ordered divested.

APCO said the new Northwest Pipeline Co. given the go-ahead by the high court decision, will have assets of $300 million and annual revenues of $190 million; will rank about midway in financial size among the major gas transmission companies in the nation; and will rank fourth in total reserves.

BLM to remove old buildings

SALMON — The old building located on BLM administered land, BLM personnel the past week burned a two-room cabin, a one-room structure and a shed.

The buildings housing the pool also will be removed and the pool eliminated.

The spring is to be allowed to run into Warm Springs Creek. At one time the pool was a popular gathering place but in recent years has been abandoned.

Unhappy crowd

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thrillseeking motorcycle fans claiming stunts by daredevil Evel Knievel were to start at a motorcycle show Saturday night got some excitement after all when the promoter of the show faced them during a dispute over a refund for tickets, police said.

The promoter, Ken Brown, 30, was arrested on harassment and mass possession charges, and nine persons were treated at the first aid station of Nassau County Coliseum at East Meadow, N.Y.

About 75 persons among the audience of 2,700, all of whom paid $8 each to see the show, confronted Brown afterwards, told him the stunts weren't good enough and demanded their money back.

Police said two other men, James M. Draper, 30, of Wichita, Kan., and Seth Westling, 26, of Chicago, Ill., both connected with the show, also were charged with possession of Mace.

Malta water system needs aired in study

MALTA — The city of Malta should consider construction of a central water system.

This recommendation was presented to Cassia County commissioners in a 95-page study manual "Comprehensive Rural Water and Sewerage Planning Study for Cassia County," compiled by the Idaho Water Resource Board and financed by the Farmers Home Administration.

The summary of conclusions and recommendations for Malta reads as follows:

"Domestic water is obtained from individual private wells which are generally quite shallow. In recent years the water level has been steadily declining due to an overdraw on the Raft River Plain infiltration of irrigation water and/or surface water may be occurring."

In 1967, Wendell H. Smith, consulting engineer, prepared a preliminary engineering report proposing a system of 8, 6, and 4-inch mains with a new deep well as the source of supply. Action to implement the proposed system was never undertaken due to the high projected costs of construction.

It is recommended that the city, again, consider the construction of a central water system. There are numerous incentive programs being offered to assist those communities having excessively high projected costs. The system proposed would consist of a deep well and ground-level storage tank with a distribution system of 4-inch and larger mains. It would also contain adequate fire hydrants.

Present sewage disposal is through either individual septic tanks and/or drainfields, cesspools, or, in a few isolated cases, direct discharge into Cassia Creek. Septic tanks and drainfields operate well in the area when properly installed.

"Due to the sparsity of development in Malta, it is recommended that septic tanks and drainfield use continue. A central facility is not a necessity for health reasons and would impose a heavy financial burden on the community. This is based upon the assumption that a central domestic water system will be constructed as recommended. It is further recommended that open discharge into Cassia Creek be eliminated."

Based upon 30-year revenue bonds at five per cent interest, its equivalent connections add an annual cost of $5,500 for operation and maintenance, the monthly water service charge to a typical user would be approximately $7.95.

Hansen offers funding bill

WASHINGTON — Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, has introduced a measure to release $50 million which Congress appropriated for rehabilitation of the handicapped but which the Administration has not spent on technical grounds.

Hansen said that last year President Nixon requested and the Congress appropriated $60 million for rehabilitation services for the handicapped.

However, Hansen said, "Since the appropriations measure referred to the Rehabilitation Act of 1972 which the Administration is funding vocational rehabilitation programs under the provisions of a continuing resolution

SRS urges dismissal

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Social and Rehabilitative Services has moved for dismissal of a suit brought by 11 Idaho hospitals claiming funds provided by the department are inadequate for the care of indigent patients.

The suit also contends the department over-allocates funds for skilled care nursing homes, while under-allocates funds for hospitals providing the same type of care.

However, the department and its director, John R. Marks, say allocations in the amounts of $11.60 per day for skilled nursing homes and $20 per month for medication meet the requirements of federal and state laws and regulations.

With controversy over General Fund spending heading toward the floors of the two houses, the joint committee takes up non-recurring federal revenue sharing and the permanent building fund.

More than $9 million of the federal revenue sharing funds flowing into the state coffers are non-recurring, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has suggested speeding them on building construction.

Senators have approved a bill to spend $1.5 million of those funds as a down payment to the Endowment Funds on a $15 million payoff for the endowment lands taken for parks and recreation.

This would leave $7.5 million

Roundup gives Gem bad name

BOISE (UPI) — A member of the Humane Society Rocky Mountain Regional Council considers the recent horse roundup in central Idaho "the worst thing since the rabbit bash."

"Between this and the rabbit bash, Idaho surely is getting a name for itself," said Mrs. Ann Hurnton. "We feel strongly about this and feel this type of cruelty must be stopped."

She said a few years ago groups used to round up rabbits and ship them to death. We had letters from all over the world regarding it, wondering what kind of people we are. Now we have this," she said.

Mrs. Hurnton said the investigation into the roundup was started when reports were made to the Humane Society that ranchers were hunting horses with helicopters and snowmobiles.

Robert Corhart, Grandview, said "The thing the Humane Society ought to do is look in the back yards of people whose horses are flat starving to death eating lettuce and carrots but their owners won't buy any hay."

Corhart operated a meat packing plant in Grandview until it was destroyed by fire in January.

When in operation, his plant had purchased horses — "misfits, undesirable, crippled, broken legs, ex-milking horses, blind horses" — for processing at the plant.

The horses rounded up in the Lemhi Mountains of central Idaho this time were not destined for the slaughterhouse.

Glen Baich, Boise, the author of a number of books about wild horses, said "There is so much misunderstanding about this whole subject."

Baich said range horses are always mixed branded and unbranded, because some ranch horses escape to run with the wild herds.

"Ranchers are only allowed to have so many horses on BLM land," Baich said. "Bureau of Land Management, Grass and Land Management, or too many get out they have to go get them."

"They put them in a corral and brand the colts that are following branded mares. Then they are done with as their captors want," Baich said.

Gem ranchers face cruelty charges

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — A blood-flecked corral in the Idaho mountains and seven slain horses are all that's left of a herd of 60 mustangs brutally captured and killed by ranchers, Yelma "Wild Horse Annie" Johnston said Sunday.

The horses were driven to a remote corral in the Lemhi Mountains of central Idaho by a helicopter, then hauled away for use as dog food said Mrs. Johnston, a founding member of the national Wild Horse Advisory Board.

Nostrils of the horses were clipped with metal rings to subdue them, said Frantz Dantzier, Salt Lake City, Utah.

It was "the most outrageous, premeditated incident of animal cruelty I have seen in 10 years," said Dantzier, who is director of the national Humane Society's Intermountain Region.

Charges of cruelty to animals under Idaho law will be filed Tuesday against at least four ranchers, Dantzier said. Two federal laws and one state law were broken by the stockmen who rounded up and carted off the animals, he said.

"We maintain these were wild horses, part of a horse herd that has been in that area since 1940. The size of the herd is estimated to be 60 to 70 head. Perhaps as many as 60 were removed within the last 10 days," said Dantzier.

"He said he visited the area where some of the horses apparently panicked and bolted over a cliff as their captors

Public hearing slated at Paul

PAUL — A public hearing for comment on a proposed 1973 city budget of $100,000 has been scheduled here at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the city office.

Administrative costs comprise the largest portion of the tentative figure at $17,500. Other proposed appropriations include the police department, $13,000; streets, $14,500; domestic water, $11,000; parks and recreation, $5,300; city buildings, $3,700; sewer, $9,000; irrigation, $7,000; sanitation, $8,000; and contingency fund, $10,000.

Projected revenue listed in the tentative budget total $85,474, with another $10,000 expected in revenue sharing funds and $5,000 in "tax

Boys cited

GOODING — Two former Gooding youngsters have been cited for saving the life of a Boise woman.

Randy and Rich Tillman, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Tillman, former Gooding residents, now of Boise, observed Mrs. Loraine Crabbs slumped over the steering wheel of her still-running car, while delivering newspapers.

"When the boys were unable to turn off the car from the driver's side because of Mrs. Crabbs' position, they raised the hood and jerked the distributor wire to stop the motor. They then aroused a neighbor who called police and an ambulance."

Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Winnett, Gooding, are grandparents of the boys, who were honored by a Boise newspaper they deliver.

Another budget battle begins

BOISE (UPI) — Another budget battle begins in the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee today when the 42nd Idaho Legislature begins its eighth and possibly final week.

With controversy over General Fund spending heading toward the floors of the two houses, the joint committee takes up non-recurring federal revenue sharing and the permanent building fund.

More than $9 million of the federal revenue sharing funds flowing into the state coffers are non-recurring, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has suggested speeding them on building construction.

Senators have approved a bill to spend $1.5 million of those funds as a down payment to the Endowment Funds on a $15 million payoff for the endowment lands taken for parks and recreation.

This would leave $7.5 million for disposition, and there are a number of proposals on how that money should be spent. In addition, the joint committee must make some recommendations on nearly $5 million in building fund priorities for next year.

While the joint committee wrestles with spending problems, house tax writers must reach some decisions on tax relief and on a proposed $5 million Contingency Fund.

Tax relief proposals include Andrus' recommendation to cut the county school levy by seven mills, alternative cuts of three, five and seven mills in the school maintenance and operation levies, repeal of the $10 head tax, a $5 increase in the grocery allowance on state income taxes and restoration of the federal deduction on state income taxes.

Because of efforts to reduce some federal programs, many legislators want to set up a contingency fund so the state can pick up the tab on the programs it wants to retain.

A bill introduced by the Revenue and Taxation Committee would set aside $6 million for that purpose. If the money is not needed, it would be put into the Endowment Funds to replace revenue lost when endowment lands were taken for park purposes.

In addition to these problems the legislature still must come to grips with the problem of the General Fund Budget. The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee has recommended spending $157 million, or $1.5 million more than the total amount agreed upon earlier in house and senate caucuses.

Controversy over the size of the budget prompted conservatives to attempt a slowdown in the house last Thursday by forcing full reading of all bills up for final consideration. House leaders got around the problem by dismissing major committees in the afternoon, reading all the bills and then holding them for debate the next two days.

What form the conservatives' protest may take next is questionable, although they could try to block rules suspension for immediate consideration of appropriations bills if suspension becomes necessary. They are expected to attack the Public Schools, Health and Welfare appropriations when they come up.

Thursday will be the 60th legislative day. After that, lawmakers will not draw their $10 daily salary — working only for expenses at that point. This deadline could wind up Saturday, but it will take harmony instead of discord to accomplish that goal.

Contaminated lettuce warnings given quickly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state agriculture official says some shipments of pesticide-contaminated California lettuce reached Eastern markets late last year but federal authorities were quickly warned about the food product.

David Bingham, assistant director of the State Agriculture and Food Department, said "some lettuce and already been shipped out of the state" from the Imperial Valley before it was discovered that a small part of the crop was contaminated.

Bingham, testifying Tuesday before a state senate committee, said the federal food and drug administration (FDA) was told immediately about shipments from areas where excessive residue of a chemical called monitrol was found on iceberg lettuce.

However, Bingham told lawmakers the FDA did not quarantine lettuce suspected of being contaminated until it was being analyzed.

Bingham recalled the state's action against the contaminated lettuce during testimony on a report issued last month by legislative analyst A. Alan Post criticizing the department's enforcement of pesticide regulation programs.

Bingham said quick reaction by state officials prevented any bad lettuce from reaching California consumers.

"We were ahead of the game at all times," he said. "Without doubt, there is no contaminated lettuce on the market in California."

The contaminated lettuce has been reported in markets in North Carolina, New York and Canada. Cesar Chavez, whose United Farm Workers union is conducting a nationwide boycott of iceberg lettuce, and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., have called for investigations on how the lettuce reached the markets.

Bingham said lettuce with a tolerance level was first discovered in Imperial Dec. 22 by county officials.

He said FDA officials were told about early lettuce shipments from the area and that about 12,000 cartons of the produce destined for California markets were held at shipping points.

Cattle meeting slated

TWIN FALLS — Ancel Armstrong and William R. Jones will be guest speakers during a cattle breeders' meeting at 1 p.m. Thursday in the College of Southern Idaho main auditorium.

The meeting, according to Walter Leitch, Buhl, a technician for Select Sires Inc., will be of great interest to cattlemen in the area. Armstrong, of New Breeds Industries, Manhattan, Kan., will speak to ranchers on "Utilizing the New Breeds for a Profit," a subject that is of concern to all cattle breeders.

Armstrong was former manager of KAHU and has been extensively involved in new cattle breeds. He serves on a number of breeds committees throughout the United States and Canada.

Burley — All classes of feeder cattle were active during the Burley Livestock Commission Co. Sale Thursday.

the state was under the jurisdiction of the FDA. He said FDA regulations do not require suspected produce to be quarantined while it is being analyzed.

Bingham also said no illnesses had been reported in California from the pesticide, which can cause flu-like symptoms and diarrhea.

In the report issued by Post, the department was charged with failing short of its duty to control and regulate pesticide use.

Post acknowledged data for the report was collected in 1971 but told the committee "there is no reason to believe they will be punished for violating laws regulating the chemicals."

Post said the department was caught between promoting the agriculture industry and watching over pesticide use and called for stricter enforcement.

Bingham and other state agriculture officials defended the department's pesticide regulation program as the most "progressive" in the nation.

Lincoln marketer meet set

SHOSHONE — The annual meeting of the Lincoln County Marketing Association Inc. will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the courtroom of the courthouse, Shoshone.

Officers for the coming year will be elected and plans made for next year's activity.

Charles Pendleton, Shoshone, is the current president with Emil Klimes, Jerome, vice president, and Ivan Hopkins, Shoshone, secretary-treasurer.

Other directors, besides the president and vice president, are Forrest Armstrong, Richfield; Tom Jackson, Jerome; and Reed Hulet, Wendell.

A quorum must be at the annual meeting, Pendleton said.

Contracts have been mailed to all members to be returned no later than Friday for the wool pool this spring. Officers explained that in order to sell with the wool pool in 1973, the contracts must be signed and returned by Friday.

The fact that a person sold through the pool before and who wishes to do so may sign up also, officers explained.

Italian captures special slalom

ISTE ANNE (UPI) — Gustavo Thoeni of Italy won the men's special slalom Sunday in the Canadian World Cup following the disqualification of Claude Perrot of France. The victory gave him first place in the overall point standings.

Thoeni, winner of the World Cup title in 1971 and 1972, could very well make the top in point standings for the third year in a row. His unofficial time in the two-run event was 51.00 and 47.59 seconds for a combined time of 98.59.

Perrot, 22, was disqualified by the judges for going through a gate on the wrong side in the first run. The French team protested the disqualification and he was allowed to participate in the second run pending a viewing of the racing film, but was disqualified after the second run.

In second place was Ilario Pegorari of Italy who posted unofficial times of 50.33 and 48.43 for a total of 98.76. Third position went to Christian Neureuther of West Germany, who had a combined unofficial time of 98.83 and the fourth spot was grabbed by Walter Tschudi of Switzerland, who had a combined time of 98.95 in the 56-gate 760-foot vertical drop course.

Thoeni, 22, who was third in the overall World Cup point standings until Sunday's slalom, moved into first place with 151 points. In second place, overall, was David Zwilling of Austria with 147 points and third was Roland Collombin of Switzerland with 131. Collombin is not participating due to injuries.

Despite the pouring rain the slalom course was hard because of special chemicals which were put on Sunday morning. Some skiers complained, however, that it was too hard at the top of the run and too soft at the bottom.

In Saturday's competition, Max Rieger of West Germany captured first place in the men's giant slalom for a combined time in two heats of 3:13.52 minutes. Second was Hans Hinterseer of Austria and third was Franz Klammer, also of Austria.

Rieger, one of the oldest competitors in the World Cup circuit at the age of 26, had never posted a first-place victory since the beginning of the series six years ago.

"I want to race for another three years because I want to compete in the 1976 winter Olympics in Austria," Rieger said after his victory. "My age has nothing to do with my performance. After all those efforts I got my victory."

In the women's special slalom run Saturday, the first four places went to the French girls, led by little 16-year old Patricia Emonet. She streaked down the 56-gate course in two heats at a combined time of 89.59.

Following her in second, third and fourth place, were Danielle Bebernard, Britt Tafforgue and Christine Rolland. Barbara Cochran of the United States finished fifth.

In the first day of the Canadian World Cup on Friday, Anne-Marie Proell, who has already clinched the World Cup title this season, won first place in the women's giant slalom.

For Miss Proell, who will be 20 years old on March 27, it was her 27th individual world cup victory—the 11th this season.

She negotiated the 64-gate giant slalom course in 91.02 seconds. Just two one hundredths of a second behind her was 16-year-old Bernadette Zuberger of Switzerland.

Third place went to Miss Zuberger's teammate, Marie Therese Madin, who raced down the slope in 92.03 seconds.

Indiana topples Chaparrals

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Forward George McGinnis hit two clutch free throws with 40 seconds remaining Sunday to insure the Indiana Pacers a 121-118 victory over the Dallas Chaparrals.

McGinnis scored 36 points, including the final two and was backed by three Pacers with 20 or more points. Freddie Lewis gunned in 24, Donnie Freeman had 23 and Darnell Hillman 20.

Dallas, with two of their top players—Rich Jones and Don Silas on the injured list—twice missed potential three-point baskets which could have tied the game in the closing seconds.

Coby Dietrick and Shaler Harrison shared Chaparrals scoring honors with 21 apiece. Bob Netolicky, a former Pacer, had 17.

The Chaparrals managed a four-point lead in the final period but McGinnis erased it singlehandedly.

Atlanta outlasts 76ers

ATLANTA (UPI) — For the third consecutive game, the Atlanta Hawks had their best quarter and highest point total of the year to outlast the Philadelphia 76ers 138-130 in an NBA game.

It was the Hawks' fourth straight victory, but they still failed to gain ground in the Central Division since Baltimore whopped New York for the second day in a row.

Pete Maravich scored 20 points in the third period and the Hawks picked up 49 points in the period to break open a tight game. They scored 41 in one quarter Saturday night against Houston, and 43 Friday night in Philadelphia.

Maravich finished with 38 points and Lou Hudson had 36. The 76ers, losers of 62 of 71 games this year, got 29 points from Fred Carter. Don May added 20 against the team that traded him away last month.

Kentucky trounces Memphis

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Powered by Artis Gilmore, Dan Issel and Rick Mount, the Kentucky Colonels Sunday continued their mastery over the Memphis Tams this season with a 121-91 victory.

Gilmore contributed 22 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, and Issel had 26 points and 12 rebounds as the Colonels knocked their seventh straight victory with the Tams this season. Mount came off the bench to score 21 points, hitting 10 of 14 shots from the field.

The lopsided contest enabled Colonels coach Joe Mullaney to substitute at will as Kentucky rocketed to a 63-45 lead at the half and widened to margin to 75-52 after three quarters.

Memphis, struggling to gain the last playoff berth in the American Basketball Association's eastern division, suffered its fifth straight loss. Johnny Neumann was high for the Tams with 19 points.

Isn't spring training fun?

Germany were identical with the top three in the recent European Championships that were marked by a rather low standard.

But Toller Cranston, the world's best free skater last year, fell in his final performance and thus spoiled his hopes to make the top three.

The pairs world title went to Irina Rodnina and her new partner Alexander Zaitsev and thus remained for the ninth straight time in the possession of Russia.

Russia also took the dance competition with Ludmila Pakhomova and Alexander Gorshkov winning their fourth consecutive title.

Skaters bid farewell to amateur contests

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — The 1973 singles world figure skating champions bid farewell to amateur competition Sunday but remained tightlipped about when and where they will turn pro.

Ondrej Nepela of Czechoslovakia, who won his third straight world title Saturday night, said "I would not mind skating for one year as a professional."

His statement indicated he has received authorization from Czechoslovak authorities for a professional career in which case he has to return part of his hard currency income.

"But I want to finish my studies first," Nepela said. "I will therefore skip my appearances in the amateur exhibition shows for the rest of this season."

Karen Magnusson of Canada, the women's world champion, said: "I will make up my mind about a pro career at the end of this season."

But it was an open secret that she will not defend her title next year.

Thomas K. Scallen, president of the Ice Follies, said "we have discussed a possible pro contract with Karen Magnusson but we haven't made a deal yet."

Janet Lynn from Rockford, Ill., who came second to Magnusson, was in the center of attention for Ice Follies managers here but stated firmly she will continue amateur skating next year.

"She won't give up before she has a world title which she is bound to get next year," one skating official remarked.

Magnussen, on the other hand, would have nothing to gain but everything to lose in case of a re-appearance next year.

Professional Ice Follies contracts are usually never signed before June after a world championships because it would spoil the skaters' appearances in the amateur shows that continue until late May.

The big surprise of the championships were the continued supremacy of European men skaters over their big challengers from overseas.

The top three in the men's world event—Nepela, Sergei Chetverukhin from Russia and Jan Hoffmann from East

Jabbar-led Bucks defeat Rockets

HOUSTON (UPI) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 29 points and Lucius Allen added 20 to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a 116-101 victory over the Houston Rockets Sunday.

Milwaukee held Houston to 18 points the second quarter and 17 points the third quarter to wrap up its fifth victory in five attempts in Houston the last three years. The Bucks, after trailing 32-20 at the end of the first quarter, poured in 62 points the next two periods to take a 91-68 lead after three quarters.

The triumph was the first on a Sunday afternoon for Milwaukee after losing four consecutive weeks in televised contests. This game had been tentatively set for television, but was taken off the schedule.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 17 points the first half as the Bucks took a 58-51 lead and added 12 the last half. He also had 13 rebounds, Curtis Perry grabbed 25 rebounds, tying a career high he set earlier this season. He also scored 19 points.

Jack Marin led the Rockets with 19 points and Mike Newlin and Rudy Tomjanovich had 17 each.

Court takes first prize

DETRIT (UPI) — Margaret Court of Australia took first prize money of $6,000 Sunday in the $25,000 Virginia Slims women's tennis tournament by defeating countrywoman Kerry Melville, 7-6, 6-3.

The win—Mrs. Court's 13th in her last 14 tournaments—gave her a total of $36,000 for six weeks on the pro tour this year. It was the fourth time she has thumped Miss Melville in the finals.

Third place money went to Billie Jean King, who was eliminated Saturday by second-seeded Miss Melville, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Hosiopary Casals wound up fourth.

Mrs. Court trailed 4-0 in the first set before rallying to win six of the next eight and force the tie-breaker.

Buddy Baker wins Hickory car race

HICKORY, N.C. (UPI) — Buddy Baker of Charlotte averaged 69.966 miles per hour in a 1973 Dodge Sunday to win the Hickory 276 NASCAR Grand National East stock car race.

Baker swapped the lead four times with Chevrolet driver Bobby Allison of Huettown, Ala., before moving out front for good on the 151st lap.

Allison had a three-second advantage when both drivers pitted following a caution flag, posted at the 143-lap mark when Richard Bryon of Claremont lost a fender on his Chevrolet.

Vic Parsons of Skyland finished third in a Ford on the 3.63 mile Hickory Speedway Track, with Harry Gant of Taylorsville fourth in a Ford.

Keena Rothhammer defeats teammate

BREMEN, Germany (UPI) — Keena Rothhammer of the United States won the Women's 200-meter freestyle from teammate Shirley Babashoff Sunday in an invitational indoor swimming meet.

Miss Rothhammer, an Olympic gold medalist over the 800-meter freestyle, came home first in 2:05.61 minutes to the 2:05.72 clocked by Miss Babashoff, who captured two silvers in Munich last year.

Robin Backhaus of the U.S., a 1972 Olympic bronze medalist over the women's 200-meter butterfly, took first place in his specialty in 2:04.07 minutes, beating West Germany's No. 1 butterfly specialist, Folkert Meyer.

Backhaus also splashed to victory in the men's 100-meter freestyle in 4:04.45 minutes. Americans John Naber and Steven Genter finished 2-3, respectively.

Other American victories went into the books in the aquatic gala in the 25-meter Bremen Zentralbad indoor pool with Joe Bottom winning the men's 100-meter freestyle and Naber coming home first in the men's 100-meter backstroke.

In the women's 200 meter breaststroke, Catherine Carr of the United States, a 1972 Olympic titlist over the 100-meters, ramped to victory in 2:12.02 minutes, beating Russia's Nadesha Kurzova into second place.

Musselman ponders Florida job offer

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — Minnesota Basketball Coach Bill Musselman met with athletic director Paul Giel Sunday; then said he would make within 24 hours whether to take a coaching job at the University of Florida.

Musselman, whose third-ranked Gophers are expected to clinch their second straight Big Ten title Monday night, visited the Gainesville, Fla., campus last Tuesday.

He said the Florida job would be the only other college job he would be interested in. Included in the Florida offer was a pay raise and, reportedly, an unlimited recruiting budget.

Giel was believed Sunday to have offered Musselman a raise above his current salary of $19,000, and other new assistance for the Minnesota basketball program.

"We had a very friendly, thorough, two-hour discussion," Giel said in a statement.

The Minnesota Athletic Department is facing a $275,000 budget deficit, and Musselman's revitalization of the basketball program has proved a boon. In 13 home games this year, the Gophers will average more than 17,000 fans.

Chris Evert wins as pro

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Miss Evert, the 10-year-old, picked up a second place check of $10,000 in the opening event of an eight-week USLTA women's tour, designed to showcase her first pro prize money. She easily defeated Miss Goolagong, 11-6, 6-1, 6-2, in the first round. She was Miss Evert who captured Sunday in the USLTA's S&H the hometown crowd. Green Stump tennis tournament. Miss Evert, a senior at St. Thomas Aquinas High School, took immediate command of the final match by winning the first five games and putting the frustrated 27-year-old Miss Wade away in a quick 56-minute contest. "I haven't played this well for a long time," said the 18-year-old Miss Evert, who favors strong backcourt play. Miss Wade agreed. She said she hadn't really been good right now no one can touch her. Connors cops indoor match

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors became the richest man in indoor tennis this year by defeating Ilie Nastase Sunday in the singles final of the Coliseum Mall International Tennis Tournament. Connors, of Belloville, Ill., won $10,000 for his victory over the Romanian and assured himself mathematically of winning the $17,000 first place of the mini-grand prix of indoor tournaments, a "bonus" point. His total winnings this year stand at $18,200, more than any other player on an indoor circuit.

Blazers defeat New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bryan Campbell's goal early in the third period sparked a three-goal rally Sunday afternoon as the Philadelphia Blazers defeated New York 4-2, and moved into third place in the world hockey league eastern division — one point ahead of the Raiders. With the score tied 1-1, New York's Bill Speer was penalized for interference at 2:44 of the third period. Only four seconds later, Campbell scored on a 55-foot slap shot to put the Blazers into the lead. The Blazers then wrapped up the game seven minutes later when New York goaltender Gary Kurt's clearing pass was intercepted by Don Burgess during a Raider power play. Burgess then slid the puck into an open net with Kurt completely out of position. John McKenzie added the final goal to complete the Blazer scoring. Earlier, Danny Lawson had scored his 52nd goal of the season to give Philadelphia a 7-0 lead and in the second period the Raiders' Bobby Sheehan tied the game with his 31st marker of the season.

Ashe is winner of event

CHICAGO (UPI) — Arthur Ashe defeated Roger Taylor, Great Britain 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 Sunday to win the $50,000 World Championship Tennis Tournament after being awarded a disputed line call on match point in the second set tie-breaker. Ashe, of New York, won the second set tie-breaker 9-7 after a line call disputed by Taylor was awarded to Ashe on a match point that would have given Taylor the match. The line judge was removed at Taylor's request for the final set. Ashe won $10,000 and Taylor, trying to become the first player on the Group B WCT tour to win for a second time, got $5,000 for second place. Ashe easily took the last tie-breaker in the last set, 7-2, while Taylor double faulted twice on the first serve and the fifth serve, giving Ashe a 4-1 advantage.

Effect of Clemente's death on Pittsburgh is unknown

BRADENTON, Fla. (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates will take the field without Roberto Clemente this season for the first time since 1955 and no one really knows what effect his absence will have on them. On the one hand experts argue that the Pirates have sufficient hitting depth to carry on without their late star. On the other hand other experts argue that the Pirates will miss Clemente a great deal. Otherwise, the Pirates will be essentially the same team which have won three consecutive Eastern Division titles and topped by 10-16 games last season. Strengths: Sluggers Willie Stargell and Al Oliver plus eight others players who hit more than 200 in 1972, form the most consistent day to day attack in the league even without Clemente. Manny Sanguillen is an outstanding catcher second only to Johnny Bench. Two potential star leaders in Steve Blass and Dick Ellis. Strong out of the bullpen with Dave Giusti and Ramon Hernandez. Club's hitting depth is its greatest strength. Weaknesses: Infield is not as strong defensively as several others in the league. Shortstop Gene Alley has not played more than 125 games in any season since 1968. Possible shift of Sanguillen to the outfield could cause problems. Starting rotation is sound but not spectacular. Loss of Clemente must hurt even though the Pirates still have Stargell, Oliver and those rat-fat-tat hitters.

New faces: Rich Zisk and Jim Hooker. Zisk is 6-1 and 205-pound hitting outfielder with good power. Hooker brought shaky credentials with him from Kansas City but might help pitching staff. Pirates aren't counting much on any newcomer except Zisk. Comment: Still the team to beat in the National League East. Team like Mets, who were 8-6 in season series in 1972, can beat the Pirates in a crucial series. The trick is to stay close to the Pirates whose hitting depth makes them a constant threat to break away from the field. TOO MANY COMFORTS OF HOME? Sell extra homeoids good with West Ads. Wyoming's Strannigan resigns from cage job

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — Wyoming basketball coach Bill Strannigan, 55, ending one of his most disappointing seasons as a coach, said Sunday that he was resigning his post because coaching is a young man's job. Strannigan's announcement of resignation came after a heartbreaking 81-82 loss to Arizona Saturday in the Cowboys' season finale. "I've been coaching for 23 years now in college and I think it's getting to be a young man's game," Strannigan said. "You've got to go out and recruit so much all the time." The curtain fell on Strannigan's 14-year career at Wyoming on a sad note when Arizona's Ron Allen sank a 21-foot jump shot with 10 seconds on the clock to give the Wildcats a game in which the Cowboys had led most of the way. The loss dropped Wyoming's season record to 9-17 and Western Athletic Conference record to 4-10.

Wyoming because he grew up in the state and liked it. "I can't say I was ever sorry because I knew it was going to be a real tough job," he said. "The last three years everything seemed to go sour. We had some great ones there in football and basketball and then all of a sudden it seemed like the end of our cycle." Strannigan led the Pokes to their first WAC crown in 1967 and 1969 and post season tournament appearances at the NCAA regionals in 1967 and the NIT in 1968 and 1969. His team, like other athletic teams at Wyoming, was hurt in 1969 by the incident in which 14 black football players were dismissed for planning a demonstration against Brigham Young University. "I think with blacks and whites it sort of hurt us as far as recruiting is concerned," he said. The team lost two of its best players after the incident and has not had a winning season since.

Strannigan recruited what was thought to have been a winning team for this season, standing four junior college students, but the team never jelled. "I just didn't feel that this team ever did play up to its potential," he said. "We had some junior college players that will be good next year, though." League coaches said they were sorry to see Strannigan leave. "He is a true gentleman and I'll miss him very much," rookie Arizona Coach Fred Snowden said. "Bill Strannigan is a super dude." New Mexico Coach Norm Allen, whose labors were upset by the Cowboys, 61-60, last month in Albuquerque, said, "I'm sorry he's decided to go. He's a good man and well respected."

Allin wins Citrus with 265

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Brin "Bud" Allin, a decorated Vietnam veteran spurred on by the presence of three ex-POWs in the gallery, routed his kitting enemies in the Florida Citrus Open Sunday, winning by a whopping eight strokes with a record-setting 23-under-par 265.

The 28-year-old Californian simply ran away from the field in the $150,000 tournament as he started the day with a four stroke lead after rounds of 66-65-67 and widened it with a closing 5-under-par 67 to make off with the $30,000 top prize.

His nearest pursuer, if you could call him that under the circumstances, was former Masters champion Charles Coody, who shot a 3-under-par 68 Sunday for a four-round total of 15-under-par 273 and won $17,100 second place money.

Allin's score was the lowest four-round total on the pro tour in more than two years and third-year pro, who won the 1971 Greater Greensboro Open in his rookie season for his only other victory, displayed the same type of pressure-resisting nerves he obviously used in winning a bronze star and three other medals as an artillery officer in Vietnam.

The three ex-POWs, Capt. Tom Browning and Maj. Glendon Perkins of Orlando and Col. Richard Kern of Tampa, were among the huge gallery of about 26,000 which crowded around the final green and gave Allin a thunderous ovation.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, the runnerup, four strokes back, at Gary Player, who is recuperating from an operation back home in South Africa.

Arnold Palmer was here, but failed to make the cut. Zarley was the biggest surprise among the leaders since he needed an eagle Friday to barely make the cut. But he was 13 under the last two days—and that's as good as Allin did the first two days.

Johnny Miller, Dave Hill and San Diego winner Bob Dickson were at 276; David Graham, Rod Curl and Steve Melnyk at 277; and Lee Trevino, who won last week in the 36-hole Cleason Classic with 5-under golf, was at 280. Along with New Zealand left-hander Bob Charles and Peter Oosterhuis.

"When I came out here today, I really counted on winning. I was confident," said Allin. "Now that it has happened, I'm at a loss for words."

Allin, who won more than $100,000 his first two years on the tour, raised his earnings for this year past the $45,000 mark Sunday barely $2,000 less than he won all last year when his best finish was a second at Milwaukee. It jumped him into sixth place on this year's money list.

Allin's eight-stroke victory was the biggest margin so far this year and was topped last year only once, by Nicklaus in the Disney World. The previous low score this year was Bruce Crampton's 268 at Phoenix, played on a par 70 course, and the biggest previous under-par total for a 72-hole tournament this year was John Schlee's 15-under in the Hawaiian Open.

Last year's lowest score was Nicklaus' 267 at Disney and the top under-par figure in 1972 was 21, two less than Allin, that also by Nicklaus at Disney.

"I feel I backed into my first victory at Greensboro two years ago, but I really won this one," Allin said elatedly.

Allin started the day at 18 under par, having already tied the tournament record with a full round left to play. He quickly went to 20 under—and seven strokes ahead of the field when he birdied the second and third holes.

The Washington State native who now resides in Santa Barbara, Calif., with his wife Barbara, said he was "obviously brimming with confidence at that point and was content to play par golf over the next seven holes, but picked

Sportsmen should choose, train dog for fall hunting

By JIM HUMBIRD

Idaho Fish-Game Department With about eight months to go until the frost is on the pumpkin and upland bird and migratory waterfowl seasons are at hand, it's time for sportsmen without dogs to be thinking about getting and training a hunting dog.

No matter what a man's choice may be—whether pheasants, chukar partridge or quail, ducks, geese or rabbits—there are various breeds of dogs which can help improve hunter efficiency and satisfaction immeasurably. Selective breeding through many generations has produced types with amazing aptitudes for their speciality.

The hunter whose choice is upland game birds—pheasants, grouse, chukars, etc.—has a great variety of breeds from which to choose. Pointing dogs are the old standbys and continue first in popularity. But there are a number of other dogs also capable of doing a good job. Anybody who has thrilled to the wild thrashing of a cackling rooster rushing unexpectedly from a fence-row should just try hunting the wily ringneck using an intense, industrious pointing dog.

Such a dog will come to a sliding, skidding, stiff-legged stop, tailhigh, and then with a hypnotic stare point to the bird with his entire body as if to say, "He's right there, Boss, flush him!" What the pointer silently implies when his master shoots and misses is unsuitable to print in a family newspaper.

Baltimore pins loss on New York

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI)

Archie Clark and Phil Chenier combined for 45 points as the Baltimore Bullets put away in the last four minutes to hand the New York Knicks their third consecutive defeat, 106-87, Sunday afternoon in a nationally televised NBA game. Mike Jordan added 23 points and Wes Unseld clipped in with 16 rebounds and 16 points as the Bullets beat New York for the second straight day, following a 97-76 win in New York on Saturday night and evened their season series at three wins apiece. Chenier's three-point play with 3:43 left boosted the Bullets lead to six points, 92-87 before Clark clipped in a string of six straight points to make it 99-91 with 1:51 to go. Clark finished with 23 points and Chenier had

Which brings up another point. A dog's job is not done when he merely finds game. Don't let him quit until he has retrieved the downed bird. Some dogs retrieve naturally, while others may require a little coaxing—even training in one way or another. But any effort given over to sharpening up the retrieve will pay off handsomely in the recovery of game which would otherwise be lost. Several of the spaniel breeds come naturally by the retrieving chore and at the same time do a bang-up job at sniffing out well concealed birds hunters would never flush.

Good retrievers are indispensable for serious waterfowl hunters. These hardy, intelligent breeds save ducks and geese almost every time out. They also save many a weary step struggling through mud and tules by finding birds that would be impossible for hunters to retrieve.

If there is a gun dog breed born with everything it needs to know to do the job right, it's the diminutive hound known as the beagle. Unlike pointers, retrievers and other sporting breeds, their mission in life is not to mark and hold game for hunters, but to chase it. And the beagle doesn't bring his quarry around in a circle. He just chases and yaps. The cottontail circles on his own accord, and only for the reason that he wants to stay on familiar terrain.

While his specialty is rabbits, the beagle can do a commendable job on upland game birds as well. He'll bury his nose in the ground and put them out of the densest cover. And you can't beat him for a breed to live with the year around. One of the best reasons for using a good hunting dog is the fact that he's more apt to find a bird after it's hit and fewer cripples will be left unretrieved in the field. It's the mark of a good sportsman and a good conservationist to hunt over a dog when possible.

Once the psychological hurdle of getting a dog—any breed of dog—is over, the close association between man and dog develops until upland game or waterfowl season becomes something profoundly more meaningful than just shooting birds.

Duquesne slips by Detroit

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Duquesne, clinging to a hope for a bid to the National Invitational Tournament, outfigured Detroit 73-70 Sunday afternoon.

The Dukes took a 6-0 lead and never behind. They led 31-25 at intermission and their biggest margin was 56-47 midway in the second half.

Going into the game, the Dukes ranked eighth in the nation in field goal accuracy but they clicked only on 24 out of 58 field goal attempts in raising their season record to 18-7. The Dukes close out their season Wednesday night at South Carolina.

The Titans, who ended their season with a 16-9 mark, hit 49 percent of their attempts from the floor.

Ruben Montanez, the Dukes' top scorer, had 21 points to raise his season total to 421. The top scorer for the losers was Tom Marsh with 14.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 6, 1973

GENERAL TENDENCIES. A day when you wish to put some new ventures into execution, but it would be a most unwise course. It is suggested you study your activities and be more prepared to put them in motion on another day. Be sure to sidestep a brewing argument. Avoid expressing prejudices.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are irritated and want to blast at others, but silence would be your best weapon now. Study the work you have to do. Do not commit yourself to anything you cannot follow through on.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You want to run away from pressures to do something else but this only leads to more trouble, so take time to relax and think. Then you will be able to handle everything in stride.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day to ask a friend for a favor, since this person is busy. Wait until next week. Do more work and forget social fun which would be disappointing, anyway. Gain more ambition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Anything of a civic nature done quietly and well will bring many benefits at this time. Taking even a small risk could be dangerous today. Show that you are a dependable person.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Many new activities are very appealing, but choose wisely or you could get into real trouble. Obtain the data you need before you proceed. He who travels slowly, travels safely and travels well.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't feel imposed upon because you have assumed so many responsibilities, but carry through in an objective manner. Intuitive faculties are not working well today, so use your logic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen to what an associate has to say, but don't lose your temper. Steer clear of one who opposes you and avoid trouble. Be sure to arrive on time for an important business appointment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Remain busy at your work and have little or no discussion with co-workers, otherwise arguments could arise. Take the health treatments you need and build up your energy for the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Keep personal matters to yourself if you want to avoid a big argument at home, but quietly get rid of whatever is causing the trouble. A new plan you have needs more study.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Travel with utmost care so that you avoid a possible accident. Formulate a new plan you have so you can discuss it later with good friends. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use extreme care with your money, either in spending or investing, and listen to what a monetary expert has to suggest. Don't rely on your intuition which could be off base right now.

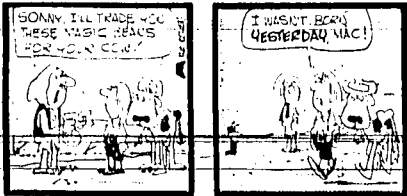

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You feel discontented and could take your ire out on good friends, so refrain from doing this. You can attend an important social event tonight provided you remain calm and poised.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those delightful young people who loves to solve problems, so be sure to give an opportunity to do just that with whatever may arise at home during early youth. Teach to have a positive attitude toward life and then this becomes a very successful chart. Give the finest ethical and religious training possible. Sports are a natural here.

"The stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Twice as many wives as husbands on any given evening want to go out on the town. The surveytakers found that out, too. Evidently this is not just because the husbands work all day. Even twice as many working wives are first to suggest the night out.

A NUMBER OF PORTRAIT painters refuse to do any woman's picture in profile. Or so one of them tells me, and I've heard it before. Says he, "Women customarily see themselves only in the mirror or their 'makeup' mirrors. Their profiles are fairly unfamiliar to them. So they almost invariably blame the artists for poor work."

THE HARD FACTS

MOST MISPELLED word in the English language, it's said, is "question." UNDERSTAND is down to under 175 lions. THE SUICIDE rate among extremely overweight people is noticeably as high as the suicide rate among thin folk. NO GRASSHOPPER eggs will hatch unless they're frozen first. FILE THE FACT, too, that just about 200 people a year are killed climbing mountains.

THE LONGER a baby is confined each day, in a playpen, the less swiftly said baby will develop, both mentally and physically. Such be the claim of some child experts. Chance-taking with brakes isn't wise. If your brakes are a little less than excellent, let our brake experts replace worn linings and check your hydraulic system. It doesn't cost much to do it, especially with the volume of brake business we do, but it may cost a fortune or even a life if you don't!
