Abernathy vows violence

US, Arabs May clash

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States and the Arab states led by Egypt may be moving toward a confrontation in the U.N. Security Council today over the charges that the United States was involved in the Israeli raid into the heart of Beirut.

Today, en route to New York, Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohamed El Zayyat said in Rome under direct questioning about the Arab charges of U.S. involvement:

"We don't know. But what is certain is that American weapons continue to be supplied to that government of murderers (Israel)."

He contended what he called Israel's use of "assassination as a systematic policy method."

Economic controls pressed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats hope to pass a set of tough price-interest-rate controls that President Nixon will be forced to accept or lose his economic control powers entirely.

The Democrats face a tight deadline. Their chances of passing the bill, with rollbacks of all prices and most interest rates to March 16 levels and rents to Jan. 10 were considered no better than a tossup in the short time remaining before Congress takes its Easter recess beginning next Thursday.

The House will not return from that recess until April 30, the day Nixon's discretionary wage-price control powers expire.

Next Tuesday is Passover, when no votes are taken in the House, so that leaves only Monday and Wednesday for Democrats to go through this cumbersome process: dispose of all debate and amendments and pass the bill, go to a conference committee to iron out differences with the Senate-passed bill, and then bring the conference report back to both houses for approval.

Zayyat passed through Rome on his way to New York for the Security Council debate on Israel's raid into Lebanon. He was expected to arrive too late for today's session and probably will make a major address to the Council on Saturday or Monday.

"We don't know. But what is certain is that American weapons continue to be supplied to that government of murderers (Israel)."

Another hint of Chinese policy in the forthcoming debate came from the official New China News Agency which carried a commentary today condemning "another new crime committed frantically by the Israeli aggressors" and blaming the "superpowers" without naming them for supplying money, arms and technical specialists in the form of emigrants to Israel.

It's that day

TWIN FALLS — Triskaidekaphobia. Sounds ominous — if not contagious. But today's the day to watch out for it. One of two days this year. The other comes in July. That's right, Friday, the 13th.

A day for the superstitious to any degree to avoid black cats, breaking mirrors, walking beneath ladders or any other action which might bring some manner of ill fortune on their heads.

And while they are at it, they'll be showing the effects of triskaidekaphobia. The term means "fear of the number 13."

Sharp Gem tax hike threatens

By DAVID ESPO Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — Gov. Cecil

D Andrus warned the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club Thursday the next decade could bring Idaho rapidly rising property taxes unless some type of adjustment is made.

Andrus said the threat of the increased taxes resulted from court decisions that rule out varying tax rates for various types of property. As a result of that decision and legislative action, he said, the state assessors must raise the assessment level on all property to 20 per cent by 1982.

In Twin Falls County, Andrus said, that would mean an increase in property taxes by two thirds in the next decade unless some other measures are considered.

He said he had recommended in the past legislative action on his proposal that Idaho voters be allowed to amend the constitution to permit different classes of property to be taxed at varying rates. "The legislature failed to approve my proposal" he said.

He said he had also asked the legislature to change the assessment ratio of 1982 to 15 per cent from its anticipated 20 per cent, but noted there was no action taken by the lawmakers.

Bills may send clash to court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has before it today three proposals that would settle the struggle between the legislative branch and the President over executive privilege to the courts.

The proposals, which varied in detail, were made Thursday by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, constitutional law scholar Ronald Berger, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., at hearings on executive privilege held jointly by three Senate subcommittees.

The doctrine of executive privilege — which presidents have used to withhold information or testimony from Congress — is the subject of current controversy because President Nixon has invoked it to bar White House Counsel John W. Dean III from testifying in the Senate Watergate investigation.

US jets hit Red outposts

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. warplanes, hammering Communist targets for the 37th consecutive day, struck the outskirts of a provincial capital where military sources said Communist gunners were shelling the city with captured American artillery.

Heavy air raids on Takeo, 66 miles south of Phnom Penh, followed intelligence reports that Communist troops would attack a provincial capital or Phnom Penh itself in celebration of today's Buddhist New Year.

There were no initial reports of a Communist thrust on Phnom Penh, although the Cambodian command said U.S. B52s struck within nine miles of the capital Thursday night in a drive to silence Communist gunners — pounding government positions outside suburban Takhmau.

Military spokesmen said at least 13 persons were wounded in the shelling of Takeo. They said heavy ground fighting was raging around the city but had no immediate reports of casualties.

The spokesmen said Communists shelling Takeo, and using U.S. 105mm howitzers captured from government troops, fired at least 52 rounds at the city Thursday night and early today.

Continuing fierce fighting was reported Thursday on six fronts around Phnom Penh and military sources said Communist troops who choked off the capital's six major supply routes over the past three weeks do not appear to be scaling down their operations.

For the second consecutive day, U.S. Air Force C130 Hercules transport planes flew thousands of gallons of fuel and oil into the capital over the Communist blockade for use by the Cambodian Air Force.

But diplomatic sources said the government could not hope to fulfill its pressing petroleum needs with an airlift. The fuel shortage was described as critical and has caused serious problems with the city's water supply because Phnom Penh's water pumps are operated by fuel-driven electric generators.

The diplomats said the current U.S. airlift appears to be primarily designed to boost the morale of the Cambodian armed forces and to signal the Communists that the United States will not allow President Lon Nol's government to knuckle under to a supply blockade.

Firing, charge mark Viet war

SAIGON (UPI) — The Canadian delegation to the four-nation International Commission for Control and Supervision indirectly accused the North Vietnamese today of shooting down a well-marked ICSS helicopter last Saturday and of infiltrating troops into South Vietnam.

On the battlefield, the Saigon command said Communist gunners intensified their attacks along the Central Coast today, killing 14 government Rangers in an artillery and ground attack about 290 miles northeast of Saigon. Fighting also was reported at the encircled border Ranger camp at Tong Le Chan, 50 miles north of Saigon, and at Hong Ngu, west of the capital along the Cambodian border.

The Communists said the ICSS helicopter flew out of its assigned air corridor and met with an "accident" Saturday when it strayed over Communist-held territory, 100 miles north of Saigon. All nine aboard, including two Viet Cong officers and two American crewmen, were killed.

The official ICSS report is not expected to be completed before Tuesday.

A Canadian ICSS delegate, Maj. Gen. Duncan McAlpine, said it appeared the chopper was blown out of the sky by a Communist-fired missile.

Water on its way

Mississippi may begin gradual decline today

VICKSBURG, Miss. (UPI) — The flooding Mississippi River crested at its highest level in 35 years at the Delta port Thursday and Gov. Bill Waller appealed to the White House for disaster loans for hard-hit farmers.

The nation's longest river, spilling out of rain-swollen banks over 17 million acres from Iowa to Louisiana for the past two weeks, rose to 50.4 feet at Vicksburg, more than seven feet above flood stage. The National Weather Service said the water would begin a gradual decline today.

Farmers waited impatiently for the water to recede — they could get to their delayed planting. Upriver in Tennessee and Missouri officials warned refugees not to return to their homes yet because the water still was high enough to flood again if it rains.

The U. S. Corps of Engineers in the Memphis district said Thursday that tentative flood damage estimates for six states totaled $21 million. Mississippi officials however, had estimated damage in that state alone at $100 million.

Waller said in his telegram to the White House that "millions of acres of farm land has been flooded, ruining some 1972 crops and preventing the planting of 1973 crops." He said about 530,000 acres of farm land remained under water.

The governor, following an aerial inspection of flooded areas with State Game and Fish Commission director Avery Wood, said flooding had created a "critical situation" for the state's wildlife.

"We're going to be two to four weeks later than usual in getting the crop planted," said George Mullendore, cotton specialist for the State Cooperative Extension Service at Mississippi State University.

"But with some normal weather for the next few weeks, we should plant more than 1.5 million acres which is more than our allotment."

MAJOR FLOODING HAS NOT BEEN CAUSED BY THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER, but by swollen tributaries such as the Yazoo and Sunflower rivers which have not been able to empty into the Mississippi.

R. D. Drummond, a spokesman for the U. S. Corps of Engineers, said it probably would be several days before there was any significant change in the backwater flooding.

Vandals attack sepulchre

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Police said intruders attacked a Franciscan friar today and tampered with religious ornaments in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, built on the site where Jesus was believed to have been buried after crucifixion.

The incident was the second act of vandalism at the church this week. Police said Thursday they arrested a French tourist on charges of splashing red paint on the floor of the shrine, as well as at the Church of the Holy Nativity in Bethlehem and a Lutheran church in Jerusalem.

Police said the group stole a plaque from its place above a statue of Jesus and tried to take a coronet attached to a figure of the Virgin Mary.

US MIA relatives cling to rumors

By United Press International

There is no evidence to support rumors that hundreds of Americans are still held secretly in Laotian prisons—or that many POWs were executed by their Communist captors, the Defense Department said Thursday.

"I don't believe it, I'll tell you that," said Mrs. Henry C. Worrell Jr., Philadelphia, whose son Paul, a Navy lieutenant pilot, was shot down on a night flight over North Vietnam in 1966 and listed as "missing."

Her reaction was typical of that from relatives and friends of Americans missing in action.

"There are 1,326 names who weren't on any list, including my son's," Mrs. Worrell said. "I don't know where they're getting their information from. I realize some have died but not 1,326. If it was reversed—500 and some killed and 1,326 brought home—I might be able to accept it, but there are too many men missing."

Roger E. Shields, chief of the Pentagon's "Operation Homecoming" program for returning prisoners, said his announcement was intended to dispel rumors that hundreds of Americans were still held secretly in Laotian prisons, or had been executed.

To suggest that Americans were still held captive would "do the families a disservice," Shields said.

"I'm not going to give up at this time," said Mrs. Fred H. McMurray Jr., Charleston, S.C. Her husband is an Army helicopter pilot missing more than five years. "I'm going to hang in there."

"I still believe my boy is over there alive," said Mrs. George Griffin of Centralia, Mo., whose son, Rodney, is missing. "I don't see how the Defense Department can come to such a conclusion so early."

The National League of Families of POW-MIAs said it would continue working for information about the 1,326 men still missing.

"Until we know where they are, we cannot give up hope," the league said in a statement from Washington.

"For the sake of the MIA families, I still hope somehow and somewhere more men will be found alive," said Mrs. Carolyn Collins, the league's Georgia coordinator.

"I know there are over 300 men unaccounted for in Laos and with lines of communications not up to par it is conceivable many men are still being held as POWs," she said. "I know this, we won't close our doors for a long time...Until we are certain there is no one else alive."

Mrs. Elizabeth E. Bedinger of Hatboro, Pa., said: "I would hope this isn't the bitter end, for the sake of those families with missing."

Klansman informer testifies

DETROIT (UPI) — The government's star witness in the trial of five Ku Klux Klansmen charged in a 1971 bus bombing conspiracy insisted under cross examination Thursday that his glory was nothing but the truth.

"I've never been more truthful in my life," FBI informer Jerome Lainger told defense attorney James Wells.

Today's session was to be devoted to witnesses called by the government to corroborate Lainger's account of how the Klansmen allegedly plotted to disrupt a court-ordered school integration program in nearby Pontiac through violence.

The defendants are charged in an alleged conspiracy involving the dynamiting of 10 empty school buses in a school board parking lot a week before schools opened under the integration program.

Lainger, a fireman who spent three years working in Klan ranks for the FBI, also has testified that additional violence had been planned before the five were arrested.

Wells sought repeatedly to discredit Lainger's testimony, dwelling often on his supposed reputation among fellow firemen as "a good bullshooter" in casual conversation.

Kicking smokers increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The percentage of cigarette smokers who tried to quit the habit and succeeded increased more than three times between 1963 and 1972, government officials say.

Daniel Horn, director of HEW's National Clearing House for Smoking and Health, said Thursday nearly 35 per cent of smokers who tried to quit were successful last year.

The success figure in 1963 was only 10 per cent, he reported to the American College of Chest Physicians.

Horn attributed the increase to "a climate more supportive of efforts to give up smoking." Contributing to the climate, he said, was publicity about smoking hazards and bans on smoking in a growing number of public places.

"There is no technique for getting people to quit that hasn't worked for somebody," Horn said. "You can almost make people turn around three times and bow to the East, and 35 per cent of them will give up smoking. The conditions of the environment have changed."

The chest physicians opened a two-day meeting to make plans for educating doctors, nurses and other health workers on how to modify the smoking habits of their patients.

BLM holds public land meet in TF

TWIN FALLS — The Burley District of the Bureau of Land Management held a public meeting Wednesday evening on land use planning within its Twin Falls unit.

Sheridan Hansen, Twin Falls area manager for the BLM, conducted the meeting before a large audience at the College of Southern Idaho.

The meeting represented an effort by the BLM to gather grassroots opinion on classification of its lands in Twin Falls County. Participants were given a brief outline of resources and land use in the areas of recreation, livestock grazing, watershed management, minerals, wildlife and lands.

On the subject of land, Hansen told the group the BLM is considering a trade-off of its isolated tracts and a general consolidation of its lands which might also include trade-offs with the State Land Board to bring scattered sections of State endowment land into blocks and leave Bureau land uninterrupted. If this is done, Hansen said, land exchanges of equal value would be attempted.

Hansen said BLM land available for agriculture in Twin Falls County was basically gone. "Maybe we've pretty much got the private land," he said when asked if more agricultural land would not have to be developed to provide a tax base for growth in Twin Falls County.

Hansen also said the proposed canal from Milner Dam would have little effect on BLM holdings but would basically service private land.

Much of the audience participation concerned with the use of motorcycles and other off-road vehicles. Hansen said the BLM would close some tracts to vehicle use once the new classification system was established.

Hansen said at present there are no developed recreational sites in the Twin Falls unit, which covers all of Twin Falls County east of Salmon Falls Creek. He said 11 sites had been identified for possible development as picnic grounds.

Hansen said gravel was the chief mineral in the Twin Falls tract. He said mineral extraction amounted to about $1 million annually. Possible gas and oil sites and geothermal energy sites have been identified in the eastern portion of the county, he said. He also said there are still gold claims on the Snake River and with the price of gold hovering near $90 an ounce people might soon head for the river with pans.

On the problems of watershed and grazing, Hansen said spraying sagebrush and putting it in crested wheat grass increased the watershed as well as the grazing potential. He said properly managed grazing could also have a positive effect on watershed and wildlife habitat. He said the South Hills could conceivably be developed to provide grazing for an additional 7,000 cows per month.

Hansen asked audience members to write down their ideas on land use management on forms provided and send them to the Burley BLM office at P. O. Box 489. Public response, he said, was a vital element in the reclassification of BLM lands.

Hansen told the audience the BLM would begin its reclassification after May 16 and that when completed further public meetings would be held to review the results.

SHERIDAN HANSEN talks land

Gov. Andrus warns about rising taxes in TF talk

But the governor also had kind words for the 1973 Republican-controlled legislative session that ended in March.

He termed it "adequate" and listed as major accomplishments a three mill tax cut for property owners, state appropriations of education of $11 million over last year, the merger of the Departments of Social and Rehabilitation Services and Environmental Protection and Health and the establishment of an interim study committee on land use planning.

The tax cut that the lawmakers did approve, he told the Kiwanis members would mean a savings of $182,000 for Twin Falls County property owners. He said, however, that amounted to less savings than his proposals would have meant.

He termed the creation of the newly merged Department of Environmental and Community Services a "major accomplishment" of the legislative session and said it would provide "in a single agency the great bulk of the State's people-oriented services."

GOV. ANDRUS talks in TF

Praises TF

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus praised Twin Falls Thursday for being one of the first cities in the country to complete an urban renewal project.

He made his remarks during an address to the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club.

"I think your beautiful mall is a fine example of what can be done in any community when all the people work together toward a common goal," Andrus said.

He also praised businessmen who were willing to tax themselves in a local improvement district as well as "property owners" who prepared an off-street parking project and then donated the land to Twin Falls City.

Timber release urged

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — An official of the Idaho Forest Industry Council says he has urged President Nixon to release more stockpiled timber from federal timberlands.

Council President James W. Martin said Nixon's plans to reduce the nation's stockpile of strategic industrial materials has an anti-inflation move and said the same should be done with timber.

TWIN FALLS — City police in Twin Falls are looking for a missing truck with 10 tons of hay aboard.

Edgar Ballard told officers this morning he left this 1953 flat bed truck loaded with 224 bales of hay, or about 10 tons, parked beside the South Side Bean Co. building on Park Avenue West at about 9 p.m. Thursday.

When he returned at 6:15 a.m. today the vehicle and hay were gone. He listed the value at about $2,400 and said the hay was owned by John Qualls.

Agency asked to reconsider

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Fish and Game commission Thursday passed are solutions urging the U. S. Forest Service to reconsider its decision to reduce controlled burning in north Idaho.

A statement released by the commissioners after a meeting said eight years of research had developed workable, acceptable techniques for the improvement of elk winter range.

The commission urged the Forest Service to reconsider its decision and both restore and expand the burning program as the "one proven method of restoring elk populations in this area."

The commission said the effect of the forest service decision will be a reduction in the amount of critical elk winter range, followed by a continual downward trend of elk herds in the Clearwater River Drainage.

They said browse production for elk use by burning has been proven successful in the Clearwater, but the planned acreage to be burned this year was far short of the estimated 30,000 acres per year needed.

They also said an environmental impact statement has been completed on the overall project and that burning is done only under atmospheric conditions specified by air pollution regulations as optimum for smoke dispersal.

A hearing will be held May 10 for public comments on the big game hunting season opening and closing dates.

TF youth wins CSI position

TWIN FALLS — Ted Argyle, an 18 year old Twin Falls student, defeated two other candidates this week to win election as student body president at the College of Southern Idaho.

He suffered chest and arm cuts and received a number of stitches to close wounds. He is the son of Huey Loper, Twin Falls.

Money For Schools

The state legislature voted a three mill tax reduction for property owners for the coming year.

It did so by reducing the authority of local school districts to tax without a special override election.

But it made certain there would be no shortage of funds because of the tax cut, by putting, dollar for dollar, the amount of money lost through local taxes into the state formula that sends money back to the schools.

In addition, it approved a large chunk of new money for local school districts. It is important to realize that this combination of lower taxes and higher income was accomplished through the use of federal revenue sharing money, $8 million of which went to public schools by the time the legislature had finished its work.

In spite of all the complicating factors, there was also a substantial group of lawmakers which felt there was enough money for kindergartens funded from the state level.

Sen. Richard High and Sen. John Barker, who chair the two Senate committees most germane to the kindergarten question, both supported the kindergarten bill in the Senate, and both spoke out vigorously for it on the floor during debate.

Barker said he had favored kindergartens in the past, but hadn't felt there was enough money available.

High said he had the same thinking as Barker did, and told the Senate to "believe me" because the money was there.

There was also a group of lawmakers which feels there wasn't enough money. Rep. Vernon Ravenscroft, who spoke against the kindergarten bill in the House, said there was enough money only if other programs were going to be cut and slashed beyond usefulness.

Few would accuse High or Barker of being wild eyed spending liberals, and since Ravenscroft is highly respected in the legislative chambers, the question for the lawmakers became one of priorities. Where and when on the magic priority wheel did kindergartens come up?

For different people, at different times, obviously.

School District 411, the Twin Falls District will have about $530,000 more to spend for the next school year current budget levels, using the best information available from state and local estimates.

The increase results from various budget carryovers, surpluses and the large increase approved by the legislators last month.

It also takes into account the property tax cut the legislature voted, which reduces the district's ability to raise taxes.

The school board has passed an 11.32 per cent pay increase for teachers and non certified personnel. District figures place the increase of the district payroll at about $270,000.

Conservatively speaking, that leaves about $260,000 remaining for the district to spend next year that it doesn't have this year.

District estimates figure the loss locally from federally funded programs that are being cut back could reach $60,000.

If that is correct, there is still $200,000 remaining on the books, after the district chooses to use its new money to replace the federal losses.

Estimates place kindergarten costs at substantially less than the $200,000 figure. A working estimate of about $150,000 seems adequate.

These basic facts should serve to explode one predominant myth: that there is only enough money for the 11 per cent increase or the kindergartens, but not both.

If the school board wishes not to fund kindergartens this year, that is a policy decision it is certainly entitled to make. Its members were elected to make decisions like that and to leave the day to day running of the school system to the administration which it hires.

But the policy decision does not have to be made this year on an economic plane. There is more than enough money for the pay raise and the kindergartens.

So the question reduces easily to the hardest question of all: is the school board willing to approve a kindergarten program for the district's five year olds?

The money is willing, if the trustees are.

Severe Blow

Librarians, whom at least one marketing research group stereotypes as "timid, fearful and passive," are getting on their muscle about the Nixon administration's proposed cutbacks in library aid almost to zero in the fiscal 1974 budget.

It is "a severe blow to all concerned with the public's right to information," says the American Library Association.

Federal assistance to all types of libraries will end. Gone will be monies for library construction and training of librarians. Cutbacks in service and the elimination of many innovative programs made possible by federal funding seem inevitable.

To counteract this threat and to make libraries and librarians more visible to the public, the ALA is coordinating a campaign that seeks to generate citizen support for the many library programs now available.

Using the theme, "Dimming the Light on the People's Right to Know," the program will involve librarians throughout the nation, asking them to acquaint library patrons with what they have now and what they stand to lose.

The campaign will culminate with a symbolic dimming of the lights in libraries across the country briefly at noon on a date to be announced.

Now this is a worthy cause, one of the worthiest. The question is whether Americans value their libraries — or anything else — enough to pay for them.

It's easy to demand that Congress vote funds for this and that, and Congress is always willing to oblige. But the funds have to come from somewhere, either from taxes or from spending available money on something else — or from printing cheaper dollars.

This is a bit of information the public also has a right to know.

Move On

The well-known mobility of Americans would seem to have reached new heights with the development of a "movable" office building.

A new approach to building construction has been developed and tested by Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, similar to the idea of the erector set. In this concept, a building would be assembled from the foundation up, used, and then when its period of use was over, be disassembled and re-erected somewhere else.

Sounds like a handy option to have in case the neighborhood goes to heck.

No breath of scandal has ever touched the fair forehead of George Gallup. Public opinion surveys generally are more credible than they have ever been. Samplings, however imperfect, are at least indicative. Then why do the surveys say that you are both for federal government, economizing — and against it? Frequently, following a speaking engagement somewhere, I've been approached by Farmer Brown who is near tears with appreciation: "You keep tellin' em, Paul Harvey, to cut out all that government — extravagance; stop pouring our tax dollars down all those alien rat holes; tighten the belt until we again have a dollar we can bite — except —" says Farmer Brown.

"Except in this matter of crop price supports; now this is different, you see..." And Farmer Brown is now always a farmer. Each of us has his private row to hoe. Each of us is likely to applaud frugality in general and oppose it in particular.

That's how come we persist in financing 4,000 lame-duck draft boards holding lotteries and shuffling paper with nobody to draft.

The Harris national opinion poll finds Americans generally opposed to specific welfare cutbacks.

At the same time, the Christian Science Monitor survey shows the national mood to be in favor of less government spending, not more taxes.

Of course, we can't have it both ways. Every public opinion poll for the past two years has indicated we, the people, to be solidly opposed to higher taxes.

That is why office seekers of both parties last year vowed opposition to any tax increase. Yet you ask the typical American if he is in favor of federal aid for hospital construction, for education, for the Job Corps — almost certainly he will be. Presently the President and Congress are at loggerheads over how to reflect the two of us that's in each of us.

President Nixon believes his landslide election reflected overwhelming support for his philosophy of less government and less government spending and stabilization or rollback of taxes.

But members of Congress hear persistently and separately from the segments of their constituencies who want everybody kicked off the gravy train except themselves. And "themselves" comprise a majority of the electorate.

The Wall Street Journal has suggested — and I second the notion — that the pollsters might well rephrase their questions. Instead of asking "your reaction to the decision to stop using government money to build house for poor people

Instead of focusing on the theoretical, the pollster would get a more accurate reflection of how you really feel if he'd ask: "How much would you be willing to contribute to this purpose each week, above and beyond your regular tax payments?"

If Americans were thus reminded of the personal cost of government programs, they'd encourage the President and depressurize the Congress.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I wish to have a vasectomy but at the same time make provision in case more children are wanted. I understand that, although these operations are reversible, the success rate on the restoration is low.

To provide additional insurance, I was wondering if there is a process available to freeze human sperm for use later, as is done in cattle breeding. If so whom should I contact and what would be the cost for the preserving process? — W.S.K.

There have been reports of a "reversible vasectomy" technique, but it is my understanding that it still does not make the reversal a guaranteed success.

My advice, therefore, remains as it has been for some years. If you are considering a vasectomy to avoid having any more children, do so only with the thought in mind that it probably will be permanent.

Don't do it with the idea that "I can have it changed later if I want to."

Yes, sperm can be frozen. The last report I saw indicated its effectiveness begins to diminish after two years or so. As to the cost of freezing and storing, I do not know. It would probably vary considerably, depending on where it was being done.

For either question chances of reversing a vasectomy or frozen sperm consult a urologist, but on the second question, I suspect that you may have some difficulty unless you find a medical center studying the problem. After all, keeping it frozen isn't as simple as just putting it in a household refrigerator!

Dear Doctor: Being a faithful reader of your daily column, I am herewith enclosing 35 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for your booklet, "Make Menopause Easier."

After reading your article on hot flashes in menopause, I am wondering whether a certain sinus condition could be caused by going through a change of life. I am 48 years old. — L.B.B.

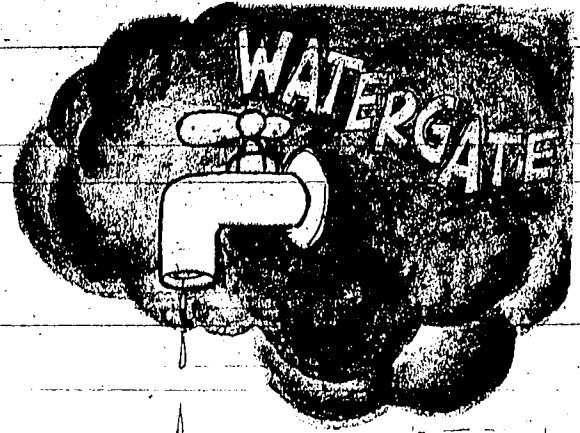

Menopause has been blamed for a good many things, but sinus trouble, to my knowledge, has not been one of them. The answer is no.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you explain what is done exactly in a bunionectomy? I thought a calcium build-up was removed, but now I understand that a bone is involved.

Mrs. R.G. Although there is a calcium build-up, as is expected in any injury, a bunion usually includes a distortion of the joint and hence of bone. Removal of excess bone and straightening, in such degree as is possible, of the bone structure is governed by the extent of the damage. And a bunion is "damage."

How does VD start? Why are teenagers among its most frequent victims? Will it cure itself? Dr. Thosteson has the answers in his convenient, layman's language booklet, "Venereal Disease: How to Avoid It; How to Cure It."

NOTHING MORE ANNOYING THAN A LEAKY FAUCET

BRUCE BLOSSAT

President Gazing

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Some scholars of the presidency get annoyed at mere political journalists because they say that we, during a campaign, don't tell the American people enough about how a candidate will act if he wins the office.

Like everybody else, we have our full quota of imperfections. But this particular complaint is unfair on two counts.

In the first place, with all due respect to the scholars, there really is no way to predict specific-presidential behavior on the basis of prior performance and known traits of character and personality.

Few if any people could have foreseen that the rather unexciting governor of New York, Franklin D. Roosevelt, would in 1933 and thereafter galvanize and give hope to a despairing, depression-ridden nation with astonishing dramatic flair.

No digging into Lyndon Johnson's Texas background, or his long years in Washington, could have prepared us for exactly the kind of response he made to the Vietnam dilemma he faced in 1964.

What scholar, liberal or otherwise, would have told us that it would be Richard Nixon, perceived by so many for so long as a "Communist fighter," who would make the first significant approaches to Peking and Moscow?

Obviously, what a president does in office is the product of an interaction between his make-up and experience, and the situations and problems he encounters — most of which cannot be foreseen when he is seeking office.

Yet, further in newsmen's defense, it is not true that they give no cues at all to a public looking for guiding impressions.

Before he assumed office, Johnson had been fairly well portrayed by perceptive journalists as a man of roaring energy, and out-sized ego, who in his days as Senate majority leader maneuvered, cajoled, wheedled, and bulldozed his way to successful management of legislation.

It was not too far a jump from that to a Johnson who, in the White House, treated the presidency almost as a personal possession, drove furiously for the passage of Great Society bills, managed and developed the Vietnam war as if he were a commander in uniform planted in the nap room.

He was a natural-born Intervener, down to the point of designing the tickets politicians would use to board his southern-bound Cornpone

Special train in his 1960 campaign as Democratic vice-presidential nominee. His command of such details, and his enormous pride, were well-told stories. Was it, then, all that much a surprise when he would say, at the end of Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh sit in Saigon?

I don't propose to let North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh sit in Saigon?

As for Mr. Nixon, though there could have been no sure forecasting of his conduct toward the Communist world or toward some economic problems many reporters took note of the special irony that this man who clearly loves politics and government never in his life had given evidence that he could master the art of "human relations" which lay at their core.

It was a pretty thoroughly known thing that Mr. Nixon disliked the ordinary give-and-take of political contact, that he was painfully ill at ease in small talk, that he had to contrive his performance at these levels.

Again, where is the real surprise when, free finally of the need to electroneer any more, the President throws off this uncomfortable burden and walls himself off?

RAY CROMLEY

Actions and Words

WASHINGTON (NEA) — We pay too much attention to what Peking and Moscow say — and not enough to what they do.

Mao Tse-tung's "inflexible" public stand has been that China will not do business with Western countries which recognize the Chinese government on Taiwan. Yet it is now clear that Mao's men have found a formula by which Japan and the United States can keep their economic and political relationships with Taiwan and yet have rather normal contacts with Peking.

The Soviet Union has followed suit. To achieve economic assistance from the United States, Moscow apparently has agreed to abolish its tax on men and women wishing to leave that country.

Both Peking and Moscow have affirmed loudly their backing for Hanoi. They have invested heavily in money and weapons in the Vietnam war. Support of leftwing underground invasions is a centerpiece in Communist credo.

Yet when President Nixon mined North Vietnam's rivers and harbors and resumed intensive bombing of the North, the Soviet Union let the White House know that Mr. Nixon would be welcome in Moscow regardless and told Hanoi bluntly Russia's interests were paramount. There is no doubt Moscow and Peking, for their own national purposes, put restraints on Hanoi in the months preceding a cease-fire.

The word is pragmatism. This does not mean China and the U.S.S.R. have given up their worldwide revolutionary aims. They will foster new underground subversions and open invasions when these seem profitable — and safe.

A recent report in this column outlined Peking's new anti-American, anti-Russian plans. A similar report could be made on the Kremlin. Americans should not forget these facts in their euphoria over the breakthroughs to China and Russia.

But we must not forget, either, that what serves their national interests, Mao's China and Brezhnev's Russia will deal with the United States. There are times, as in the war against Hitler and Tojo, that our interests coincide, at least temporarily.

At such times it is possible and practical to "deal" with the Russians and Chinese looking carefully at each arrangement, not buying a pig in a poke or paying too high a price.

If the Russians and Chinese wish to cooperate, they will meet any reasonable terms we lay down. If they do not wish to cooperate at any given time, no terms short of our surrender will win that cooperation. This adds up to old-fashioned horse trading.

When the Soviet Union wishes better relations because of its economic crisis, this may be used to ease the Middle East crisis. If China, in fear of a Russian invasion, wants to move closer to this country, this can be made useful in negotiating added stability in Southeast Asia.

My own experience with Mao and his people is that Americans can get along very well in these deals if we are blunt and don't pretend a relationship that doesn't exist.

It is not necessary for us to fool ourselves into believing other country has changed its aims, or that the closer relations will be permanent or more than skin deep. They are merely opportunities — not signs of a brave new world.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

House avoided new campaign law in 1972, agency charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Common Cause contends the House circumvented the new campaign finance law last year and refused to send a series of major complaints to the Justice Department.

Fred Wertheimer, director of legislative activities for Common Cause, a "citizen's lobby," said the House Special Elections Committee wrested control of reporting violations from Clerk of the House, W. Pat Jennings.

Testifying before a Senate Rules subcommittee, Wertheimer said the 1971 campaign finance disclosure act specifically empowered Jennings to refer complaints to the Justice Department without prior approval.

But in February, 1972, with very little debate and no roll call vote, the House directed Jennings to seek advice and consult with the Elections Committee before sending any complaints to Justice.

Under this resolution, all complaints were channeled through the Elections Committee and violations of late filing or non-filing were routinely routed to the Justice Department.

But of 18 other complaints, described by Common Cause as major and dealing with exceeding median spending and corporate contributions, only one was forwarded to the attorney general.

"In an incredible maneuver which went completely unnoticed, the House last year established a procedure which required the clerk to obtain prior approval from a special House committee for violations he wanted to forward to the Justice Department," Wertheimer said.

"Thus, by means of the special committee to investigate campaign expenditures, the House itself has assumed absolute control over an enforcement process which the new law vested solely in the Clerk of the House."

He strongly urged the creation of an independent commission to enforce the law. In its first year, Wertheimer said, the new law "left virtually intact" the history of government non-enforcement.

Indochina money lack worries few

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon is running "out of money to fight the war in Indochina and nobody is worried."

Don H. Brazier, the acting Defense Department comptroller, submitted the bills for the war Thursday to a group of shirt-sleeved congressmen who wondered where their authority to control the federal budget has gone.

Brazier, in brief, said it cost $492 million more than expected to pay for the December bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong and other military activities in Indochina the last three months of 1972.

Now, with Pentagon operational accounts depleted and the bombing of Cambodia continuing, the department expects to run at least $150 million in debt for Indochina operations by June 30 unless Congress acts, and acts quickly.

The Pentagon's request for supplemental spending authority could give war critics in Congress an early opportunity to force an end to the bombing in Cambodia. But so far there is no sign of any concerted activity to deny the Pentagon what it is asking, despite charges that the war is being carried on illegally without Congressional sanction.

Chairman George Mahon of the House Appropriations Committee said he foresaw no action by the committee to deny the Defense Department spending authority. Although Mahon has questioned the President's constitutional right to continue the Cambodia bombing, he said "my disposition is to not try and impede the effort of the President to wind down the war."

With the Pentagon facing what one aide calls "bankruptcy" if the Cambodia bombing continues, it would seem to be a simple matter for Congress to force an end to the bombing by cutting off the tap.

But, like everything having to do with the appropriations process, it is not that simple. When the Defense Department began running out of money for the war last year, it did not come to Congress asking for more appropriations.

State funds asked

BOISE (UPI) — An advisory committee of the Statewide Information System for Public Schools Thursday decided to recommend to the State Board of Education that a major portion of the system's funding come from state appropriation monies for fiscal 1973-74.

The last session of the legislature approved an expenditure of $310,570 by the State Department of Education for the informational system but did not allocate any funds to the department for the project.

D. F. A. Engelking, state superintendent of public instruction, said it was the Instead, it used authority provided in the defense appropriations act to transfer money from one account to another—sort of like a housewife who saves money in a sugar bowl for groceries, but dips into it to pay the gas bill.

Starting two years ago, Congress started putting a dollar limitation on this transfer authority when it became apparent that the department was using it to exceed limits imposed by Congress. It also required the department to get advance approval from Congress for every nickel approved.

The limit for the current budget year that ends June 30 was set at $750 million. That was virtually exhausted by January because of the big chunk spent for the December bombing.

Advance approval for these transfers were not sought. When Rep. L. F. Sikes, D-Fla., acting chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee, demanded to know why, Brazier said nothing illegal had been done. He said the money was not formally transferred from one account to another, but was being held to await congressional approval. Nevertheless, he said, Congress must now sign on the dotted line or the Pentagon will face extremely serious deficiencies.

"It could cause us great problems if the request were not approved," he said. "It could result in an unacceptable situation and force us to stand down forces and terminate operations."

Sikes, a broad-shouldered man in a blue shirt who has backed Nixon's Vietnam policies, said he understood the Pentagon's need for flexibility to run its worldwide operations. But he contended that the department was simply presenting Congress now with a fait accompli.

Brazier said the approval for the $492 million was only the first installment.

He said the department also needs for the committee to increase the $750 million limit on transfers to $1.25 billion. The extra $500 million, he said, would include at least $150 million for U.S. operations in Indochina.

Brazier said it would be "impossible" for the department to break down how much of the money would be attributable to the U.S. operations in Cambodia.

Tug of war over Watergate case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two federal judges and a Senate committee were engaged in a tug-of-war today to get full testimony about the Watergate wiretapping case and other political espionage and sabotage in the 1972 presidential campaign.

In developments in which the legal maneuvering was becoming as complex as the allegations themselves: — Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. was expected to go to Capitol Hill to be questioned by investigators for the Senate's Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities.

The federal grand jury, closely watched by Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, received testimony under heavy security from two secretaries and an aide of another Watergate conspirator, G. Gordon Liddy.

Federal Judge Charles S. Richey strongly admonished Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., chairman of the Senate committee, about "separation of powers" in refusing Ervin's request to see McCord's deposition, to be given soon, in the Democrats' $4.4 million civil suit against the Committee to Re-elect the President.

The New York Daily News reported McCord said he knows the whereabouts of other burglary equipment which the newspaper said was concealed to the Watergate break-in and allegedly traceable to the Nixon re-election committee.

After Richey's statement, the attorneys for McCord, who was security chief for the re-election committee at the time of the June 17 bugging of Democratic national headquarters, cancelled their plans for a news conference at which the defendant would tell all.

The attorneys said they did so because Sirica, who presided over the Watergate trial in January, wanted them to cooperate with the Senate committee. Ervin has sought to keep allegations out of the public eye until the committee can begin public hearings, probably after May 1.

Sally Harmony and Sylvia Panarites, the secretaries to Liddy while he was finance counsel for the re-election committee, and Powell Moore, deputy press aide for the committee, testified before the grand jury Thursday. They were taken through a maze of corridors and doors to evade reporters.

The Los Angeles Times reported today Mrs. Harmony may have typed a proposed budget at Liddy's request, covering the alleged espionage against Democratic headquarters, according to testimony by McCord. The Times, quoting a source, said McCord also testified that Mrs. Harmony may have typed transcripts of wiretapped conversations.

The testimony by the committee aides, along with that of four other key aides at the White House and re-election committee in 1972, strengthened the belief that the grand jury is going beyond the Watergate into other allegations of political tricks during the last campaign.

During a long hearing, Richey also continued a request by the Democratic National Committee for access to documents in the Watergate case, including the investigation made at President Nixon's request by White House Counsel John W. Dean III.

Ervin had asked Richey in a letter to seal McCord's deposition, presumably until after the Senate committee received his testimony openly.

"This court will not allow either the legislative or executive branches of government to interfere with the conduct of any judicial proceedings pending before it," Richey said in a statement in reply to Ervin. "Moreover, the doctrine of the separation of powers is too deeply rooted in the historical foundation of our democracy to permit otherwise."

Ervin replied that he "strongly supported" the doctrine and said that Richey himself had asked that the request about McCord's deposition be spelled out in a letter.

Humphrey asks end of import barriers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A secret government study made public Thursday by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., calls for ending restrictions on American food imports to win free access to foreign markets for U.S. grains.

The study, compiled by Agriculture Department experts, was prepared last year at the request of White House trade specialist Peter Flanigan. It said the United States could greatly increase its export earnings by persuading other nations — mainly Europe and Japan — to eliminate barriers against imports of grains and livestock products.

With reduced barriers like the Common Market's "variable levy" tariff protection, the report estimated the United States could increase farm exports enough to produce an $1 billion improvement in its overall international trade balance by 1980.

Humphrey said he delayed release of the report for several weeks, hoping the administration would make it public and because he feared parts of it might "unduly expose our nation's negotiating strategy" in trade talks abroad.

He said he was inserting the report in the Congressional Record partly because "much has already been done behind the back of Congress and out of sight of the public."

"While the secretary of agriculture has been patting the farmer on the back ... officials of this administration have been hard at work carrying out their secret strategy" of seeking to phase out some farm subsidies and opening the way for new trade negotiations, Humphrey said.

Heavy sniping attacks continuing in Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Heavy sniping attacks burst across Belfast early today after British soldiers reported killing one Irish Republican Army (IRA) suspect and capturing three others in a running gun battle.

At least six army troops were wounded in the latest outbreak of shooting and bombing. Army spokesmen said the clashes, the worst in three months, could mark the opening of a new IRA offensive.

Most of the fighting centered in two Roman Catholic neighborhoods in Belfast, but the army also reported a mine explosion in Londonderry. Snipers went into the streets

Thursday night after soldiers chased four IRA suspects into a house, caught two and opened fire at the other two when they tried to flee by climbing a wall. The army said one man, identified as IRA quartermaster Edward O'Riaw, died. The other was wounded.

Gummen responded to the Belfast shooting by wounding two British soldiers in Belfast sniping attacks and four soldiers in a mine explosion in Londonderry.

Army spokesmen said the shooting of the IRA suspects may have prematurely sparked a new IRA campaign. "It is evident they already had the weapons in position," one said. "All they were waiting for was the word to use them." The spokesmen said more than 200 shots were fired at soldiers.

Pentagon papers trial postponed for 2nd day

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Pentagon Papers trial was postponed for a second day today while the chief defense lawyer underwent tests to determine if his weak heart would permit him to go on with the trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne Jr., who sent the jury home Thursday without hearing any testimony, planned to excuse the jurors until Monday.

Attorney Leonard Boudin, 60, notified the court late Thursday afternoon that his cardiologist wanted to perform further tests before deciding whether to allow him to continue with the direct examination of defendant Daniel Ellsberg.

Ellsberg had just gotten to the point in his testimony Wednesday where he was about to explain why he took the secret Vietnam War history from the Rand Corp. — an act that led to his being charged with espionage, theft and conspiracy.

Court was adjourned 40 minutes early when Boudin abruptly told the judge he wasn't feeling well. Thursday morning he reported that he had suffered discomfort during the night and wanted to see a doctor.

Boudin's wife, Jean, told newsmen that her husband had suffered a cardiac arrest prior to the trial of Dr. Benjamin Spock, in which he served as defense counsel, and had a Pacemaker implanted.

She said he had forgotten to take some medicine Wednesday and had suffered a dizzy spell at the lectern.

Ellsberg said if Boudin is not able to proceed on Monday, his examination would be conducted by another of his attorneys. Harvard law professor Charles Nesson.

Ellsberg began testifying in his own behalf on Tuesday and had not yet reached the critical part of his story, involving the leak of the top secret Defense Department Study.

He said he had spent the decade between 1959 and 1969 working as a defense department consultant on national security and had volunteered to go to Vietnam with a state department task force "because I wanted to see what we could do to win the war and beat the Communists."

It was while he was helping compile the Pentagon study of the war's origins, he said, that he began to have a change of heart about the war.

"I began to question my whole previous career," he told newsmen outside of court.

Gem court to meet in Pocatello

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court will hold sessions next week in Pocatello to hear oral arguments on appeals in cases from the southern part of the state.

The cases include an appeal from the University of Utah Medical Center in an action to recover the balance of two unpaid bills.

The hospital furnished medical services to two indigent residents of Bonneville County, Idaho, in 1970.

The patients had been approved for benefits by the Idaho Department of Public Assistance and the department paid for the expenses and services given by the hospital for the first 21 days in each case.

The hospital has tried to obtain the balance due in the two cases which totals $12,346.

The court also will hear arguments in an appeal brought by Kenneth W. Johnson, Jackson, Mont.

Pilot rejects Hanoi remarks

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — A Navy pilot who appeared at a news conference in Hanoi with Jane Fonda and Ramsey Clark said Thursday he was forced to appear by Communist torturers who yanked his broken arm.

Lt. Cmdr. David W. Hoffman, 39, made the accusation to newsmen while Miss Fonda — after a rally in Los Angeles at which she was heckled and tangled in effigy by students — was denying that she said "all" former POWs were lying when they said they were tortured.

Hoffman, 32, who was shot down in 1971, told a news conference he retracted everything he said at an appearance with the actress and Clark, former attorney general, when he appeared with them in Hanoi.

"I reject everything I said. I had a broken arm," Hoffman said.

"It was in a cast. I was hung by that broken arm several times and allowed to drop at the end of a rope from a table which was kicked out from under me."

Asked about comments by Miss Fonda and her husband, Tom Hayden, that the POWs were comparatively well treated, Hoffman said: "If Miss Fonda thinks for a minute that any of the people that she saw were able to speak freely, and were not fully aware that any deviation from what we were told to say or could say would bring instant punishment, the moment she departed the area, then she's got another think coming."

16 dead in fiery 2 plane wreckage

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (UPI) — A space agency research jet trimmed the tail of a Navy antisubmarine patrol plane in flight Thursday and their fiery wreckage plummeted on a golf course. Sixteen men died; but one survived.

Both the Convair 990, a white four-engine plane loaded with sophisticated research gear, and the Navy P3 Orion, a grey four-engine turbo-prop, were approaching the Moffett Field Naval Air Station for a landing when the collision occurred 300 feet over the 12th fairway of the Sunnyvale Municipal Course.

Witnesses said both planes somersaulted before hitting the ground in a "ball of fire."

The survivor was Navy PO 3C Bruce N. Malibert, 22, an antisubmarine warfare technician from Bakersfield, Calif. The Navy said Malibert was "thrown clear." He was taken to a hospital where his condition was reported as "very serious."

No golfers were hurt, but several had to run for safety.

Mark Triforos, 25, a bartender who saw the crash, said one brave golfer ran up to one of the cockpits and tried to smash in a window with a golf club in an effort to rescue the pilot. He said several small explosions forced the golfer away.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the $2.5 million Convair carried a crew of three along with eight scientists and technicians. The Navy said there were six men including Malibert aboard the Orion.

The Navy set up a Board of Inquiry, and one officer said the flight recorders of both planes were recovered but were "slightly damaged."

Ralph Bryant, Los Altos, said the NASA jet "settled on the Orion's tail. Both then nosed up and then went onto their tails onto the golf course."

NASA said the Convair named "The Galileo" had just completed a 1-1/2 hour flight during which the scientists conducted an "earth resources related experiment." The Orion, according to the Navy, was returning from a routine patrol.

The crash occurred on Moffett Field's 40th anniversary, and a spokesman said it was the "worst tragedy in the history" of the big field which has several big hangars once used to house blimps.

A sailor and Marine who helped fight the blaze on the golf course suffered minor injuries. One woman spectator suffered a heart attack but was reported in fair condition at a hospital. Another spectator received treatment for hysteria.

Tax reforms may stop discrimination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Organization for Women (NOW) asked Congress today to use the tax laws to make universities and foundations stop discriminating against women.

Franziska P. Hosken, testifying on NOW's behalf at a tax reform hearing by the House Ways and Means Committee, asked that tax exemptions be denied educational institutions and foundations "that illegally discriminate thus damaging a majority of the population of the country."

She said the Ford Foundation has only three women among 16 trustees and no women on its executive or finance committees.

"The taxes that are not paid by foundations and universities have to be paid by women who are 43 percent of the labor force and the largest lowest paid group," her statement said.

"Continuing illegal discrimination by universities and grant making foundations is in large part to blame for the deteriorating situation of women in the labor market."

Brandt emerges victorious

HANOVER, Germany (UPI) — Chancellor Willy Brandt today beat back a leftwing drive to nudge Germany out of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and won a resounding reelection as chairman of his Social Democratic party.

In a solid 40:20 vote of confidence at a Social Democratic convention, the 59-year-old chancellor retained his seat and crushed leftist attacks from within the party on his pro-American foreign policy. Delegates rose from their seats and cheered him for several minutes after announcement of the vote.

Brandt's powerhouse also beat back an attempt to put the convention on record as criticizing his refusal to publicly denounce President

Nixon's Christmas bombing of North Vietnam. Brandt is the first Social Democrat to head a German government in 40 years. In an election Nov. 19, his party emerged for the first time since the 1920's as the largest group in a German Parliament.

The vote came after Brandt and his middle-of-the-road supporters successfully fought off repeated leftwing attacks on his foreign policy.

The leftwingers brought in a series of resolutions describing the presence of U.S. troops in West Germany as unwanted and unnecessary, and calling on the government to cease all financial support for them. Brandt intervened in the debate repeatedly to state his view that the presence of U.S. troops in West Germany was essential to the republic's security.

Rioting flares in Italy

ROME (UPI) — Premier Giulio Andreotti survived four confidence votes Thursday in the Senate. But political unrest elsewhere sparked street fighting in Milan that killed one policeman and injured at least 14 others.

In four secret votes on a proposed education law, the moderately rightwing coalition Andreotti has led since mid-1971 won three times by margins of nine votes and once by a margin of eight.

Andreotti's political challenges coincided with growing social unrest and economic recession.

The unrest flamed into rioting late Wednesday in Milan with leftwing students fighting police. More fighting erupted there Thursday between neo-Fascists and police.

Policeman Antonio Marina, 22, was killed when a hand grenade struck him in the chest and exploded. Other policemen near him were wounded.

Dozens of demonstrators were wounded and a 14-year-old boy who left his home to see what was happening was shot in the throat.

The fighting began when about 500 demonstrators defied an earlier police ban on political rallies, and began marching through Milan, shouting: "Communism shall not pass."

Abernathy supports violence

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, head of the nonviolent Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said Thursday he would support a "violent movement" if he could be assured that blacks wouldn't be the only ones killed in the action.

"We have a lot of rhetoric about violence," said Abernathy on a radio talk show (WRNG), "and that's all we have. If there is a program of violence that would really move into areas other than the black community, burning down the black community and killing the black people, which has been the history so far, then I would give serious consideration to that movement."

Abernathy, who succeeded slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in the nonviolent cause, said he thought blacks would be annihilated if they launched a violent movement now.

The Piedmont Crescent, a curving area stretching from Raleigh N.C., to Greenville, S.C., contains the major share of industries in the two Carolinas.

God heals fear of death

By CATHY WILKIE
Western Springs, Illinois
The cottage on Lake Michigan where my family and I stay for a few weeks each summer has always been a place of quiet renewal for me, where I can slow my pace and enjoy life.

I came to believe in myself again and find my faith in God refreshed. But one day four summers ago, I learned that the lake could also bring sudden death. It was an experience which almost shattered my faith.

On that day a storm was brewing. Boats had been warned to stay off the lake. Suddenly my sister Karen noticed it — an overturned cabin cruiser just offshore and two men in the water struggling to pull it to the beach. One of them, seeing us, ran to the foot of the stairs and shouted something. But we couldn't hear over the roar of the waves. Karen ran down the steps to him.

"There are children trapped under the boat!" she screamed. The boat, belly up, was scraping on the sand, which meant we would have to lift almost its full weight to turn it over. We lined up on one side and somehow we righted the huge boat.

In the jumbled mess of the forward cabin were the crumpled figures of three young boys, but one of them was breathing.

The boys had been able to breathe and talk to their fathers outside for a while, but Finally a rescue team arrived by ambulance with oxygen but all their efforts, like ours, failed.

I slept very little that night. I realize now that it was partly my own refusing to accept the tragedy that prolonged my reaction to it, but the bitterness I felt toward a God who would allow a child to die without even having had a chance to live was so strong that I could neither ignore it nor heal it myself.

One night a week after the accident, the pattern repeated itself, and I woke up and sat up in bed suddenly. This time I didn't fight back my fear and go back to sleep again.

I reached for my Bible lying on the night stand, flipped through it, not knowing exactly where I was going, and found myself looking down at the

Ninety-first Psalm. "He who dwells in the shelter of the Most High, who abides in the shadow of the Almighty, will say to the Lord, 'My refuge and my fortress; my God, in whom I trust.'"

"The tears I had held back for so long finally came; and when I finished, I was no longer bitter or afraid."

To some this may not seem like a miracle, but I have never doubted that it was. The feat of death, when it grips the mind for the first time, is a power that can be shaken only by the one force which is stronger — the love of God. It was God who healed me that night. The same God who cared for three young boys and took one home with Him, the same God of compassion who healed me in the moment of my greatest weakness and need so that my faith in His love would be stronger.

record) is that the 'obedience, the integrity of commitment, which was the most notable mark of his life and death was certainly not easy or automatic.'

Many who give lip service to the orthodox doctrine that Jesus was fully human don't really believe it when the chips are down, Robinson says. They actually think of Jesus as God-in-disguise, a perfect person who could not have done wrong. But to think this way is to deprive Jesus of an essential element of the humanity he shared with us: freedom of will.

Robinson would have emphasized what the gospels clearly teach, whatever else Jesus may have been, he was a completely normal, fully human man.

"The gospels give every reason to believe that Jesus was a man of like passions with ourselves, sharing the same unscrupulous drives and libido, with a temper, intolerance, anxiety and fear of death as strong as anyone else's," Robinson says.

It is not necessary, he contends, to claim that Jesus never harbored a single malicious or lustful thought, or that he was always loving.

Easter tree blooms

AN EASTER TREE can be almost as exciting as a Christmas tree, says Jennifer Hulzinga, Burley, as she admires one made by her grandmother, Mrs. Mildred Cazier, Burley. Mrs. Cazier has been making the trees for the enjoyment of her grandchildren the past 10 years. This one, a lilac branch, has an added attraction. She picked it several weeks ago and now it is in bloom.

English bishop calls for mature concept of God

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

Ten years ago, an English bishop named John A. T. Robinson stirred a worldwide sensation with a book entitled "Honest to God."

In it, he argued that the widely-held image of God as a sort of Super-person residing somewhere "up there" or "out there" had become untenable in the space age, and must be replaced by a more mature concept of God as the Ground of Being, immanent in all persons and things.

Now Bishop Robinson has written another book, called "The Human Face of God," in which he calls for a new "image" — that is, a new way of thinking about and trying to comprehend — the person and mission of Jesus Christ.

The picture of Jesus which most people have picked up from a limited exposure to the teaching of the church, Robinson says, is more apt to confuse or pit them off than to attract them to Jesus.

"This image is of the insertion into a stream of history, as a visitor from outside, or a perfect man who was 'God himself in human guise,'" Robinson says in a preview of his book published in Christian Century magazine.

To counteract this image, Robinson would have emphasized what the gospels clearly teach, whatever else Jesus may have been, he was a completely normal, fully human man.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How much does a daughter owe her mother? Mom divorced Dad when I was five. I'm 23 now, and Dad has paid her a generous alimony all these years, plus child support which enabled me to have the best clothes, music lessons, dancing lessons, and a college education. Mom never had to go out and work.

I recently married a wonderful man whose work takes him all over the world. At first Mom sulked because we didn't ask her to live with us. Now she wants me to stay home with her or invite her to travel with us. Abby, I love my mother, and my husband is very considerate of her, but he doesn't want to make it a steady threesome.

Mother is 56, attractive, and could easily marry again but she says she won't let Dad off the alimony hook as long as she lives. (She's bitter because he's happily married now.)

I feel guilty leaving her. In fact, I feel guilty just writing this. What should I do? LIFE OF MY OWN

DEAR LIFE: If you want someone to tell you not to feel guilty, count me in. A woman who makes a martyr of herself because she's determined to keep her husband on the alimony hook doesn't deserve much sympathy. You'd feel less guilty if you told her how you felt. It might cause her to take a good hard look at herself and possibly change her life's direction.

Daughter owes mom?

DEAR ABBY: We were planning a lovely big church wedding for our daughter in June. Well, she got pregnant, and she and her boy friend panicked and drove to Reno and got married there.

Now she wants to be married in church by our priest. (Do we have to tell him the truth?) Of course, the wedding won't be as big and elaborate as the one we planned originally, but I wonder if we could still have a flower girl and ring bearer? We promised my little niece and nephew, and they will be so disappointed. MRS. J.

DEAR MRS. J.: Under the circumstances I think explicitly should be the keynote in this wedding. Discuss it with your priest. And, yes, tell him the truth; he can count and will probably be asked to baptize the baby in six months.

DEAR ABBY: A girl with whom I work is getting married soon. She and I have spent our lunch hour together nearly every day since she came here a year ago. I was quite sure she would invite me to her wedding, but the other day she said she wasn't having anybody from the office because if she invited one she'd have to have them all or there would be hard feelings.

Abby, she isn't friendly with any of the other girls, and I'm sure there would be no hard feelings if she were to invite me. I am very hurt, and I don't know how I can continue to have lunch with her every day and keep a plastic smile on my face. If the situation were reversed, I'd have invited her to my wedding. I think she should be more concerned about hurting MY feelings than the feelings of the other girls in the office who are mere acquaintances.

Should I tell her how hurt I am? Or should I let it slide? HURT

DEAR HURT: Let it slide, dear. Some people don't feel as close to us as we feel to them.

Problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 40700, L. A., Calif. 90049. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

South's two no-trump call was one of those happiness bids. It didn't make his partner happy but it certainly did a lot to cheer up his opponents.

West opened his fourth best heart against three no-trump. If West had led from the king, South would have been all right, but after the three-spot was played from dummy, East produced the suit. Then he returned the suit and when West got in later with the ace of spades he cashed enough hearts to leave declarer one trick short.

South's two no-trump call was one of those hoggish bids that its perpetrators justify by saying, "I had 14 points and a no-trump type hand." The statement is accurate but the only real reason for this type bid is that the bidder wants to be sure that if the hand plays in no-trump he will be the declarer.

South should have responded one diamond. If North rebid to one heart, South could then have jumped in no-trump. If North rebid one no-trump, South could have raised him to game.

Actually, North would rebid one spade. South would raise spades and the lay-down spade contract would have been reached.

Dixie peaches freeze

United Fruit International farmers in the peach-growing states of Dixie today reported heavy losses in some parts due to a late-spring cold snap, and in Illinois almost the entire crop of the fruit was wiped out.

Agricultural experts said the full extent of the losses won't be known for the next several days when the smaller fruit begins to shed skin.

Dr. E.F. Savage of the University of Georgia Experiment Station reported 40 per cent of the crop around Griffin in the Peach State was damaged by six hours of subfreezing temperatures Wednesday. The tender fruit is now about the size of a thumb and especially vulnerable to cold, he said.

South Carolina, which annually produces a $25 million crop, was hit by temperatures from the mid-to-upper 20s, but a cloud cover helped protect the biggest peach-producing area around Spartanburg County.

"It (the cold) hit us a lick and a hard one," said Bobby Futral, county agent for Chilton County, Ala. "We've had severe damage but we are going to have some peaches left in some orchards."

He said one large orchard lost 75-100 per cent of its peaches. Temperatures in the central Alabama county, which had a $3 million crop last year, dropped to 28 degrees early Wednesday and left peaches frozen solid, he said.

Officials in Illinois reported the cold air and icy north wind may have brought the biggest fruit kill in almost 20 years.

A spokesman for the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange estimated 95 per cent of the peaches were ruined and half to three-quarters of the apples. Apple losses were reported also in north Georgia. Jim Bridges of the State Commodity Commission said, "Some producers felt they lost everything in bloom up to this time."

Plains sugar beet payments at record

DENVER (UPI) — George E. Wilber, Jr., president of Great Western Sugar Co., said Wednesday that its sugar beet payments in a five state area will reach record levels.

"After the average payment of $1.55 per ton on April 20, (T) Sugar growers in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Montana and Wyoming will have received $18.26," said Wilber. He said that includes $2.26 per ton from the Sugar Act payment.

Great Western will mail $9 million to 4,200 growers on Friday, bringing total payments to $99.3 million. Of that amount, $12.3 million is in condition payments under the Sugar Act, which is financed by a federal tax on the industry.

The payments to date present the highest return to growers in the 60-year history of the company. The growers' return is $1.71 more per ton than at the same time last year.

"If current market trends continue and given normal sugar content, average gross returns to growers should be excellent," said Wilber.

Disaster tag due Colorado

DENVER (UPI) — Gov. John A. Love has asked US Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz to declare five southeastern Colorado counties disaster areas.

Love, who sent a telegram to Butz Wednesday, said he asked for the designation because of extended and severe weather conditions in that part of the state.

Love estimated the loss of livestock in excess of $10 million, including destruction of at least half of the 1973 calf crop and 10 to 20 per cent of the area's breeding stock.

The counties involved are Baca, Bent, Las Animas, Otero and Powers.

Helicopters from Ft. Carson planned to end their flights to stranded cattle in southern Colorado and northern New Mexico Thursday.

State Agriculture Commissioner Clinton Jeffers said five helicopters dropped hay to cattle in sections of Las Animas County and parts of New Mexico Wednesday.

A total of 416 tons of hay were dropped in the two states in the helicopter lift. The governor requested the use of Army and National Guard helicopters for the program March 31 after severe weather hit the region.

Wendell's sewage system inadequate

Ribbon cutting

Senior housing units opened

WENDELL — The Wendell Senior Citizen housing units were officially opened during ribbon cutting ceremonies Thursday afternoon.

The project began Nov. 1 at a cost of $156,000. Of that total, $14,000 was the cost of the land and $140,000 was building cost.

The 12 unit, two-bedroom project was built by Volvo Builders of Jerome.

Clyde Peterson, chairman of the Wendell Housing Authority, praised the team effort of the housing authority and the city.

Fred Johnson, Farmers Home Administration county representative, told the group that Wendell can be proud of this type of project which will be possible.

Two more units are available for occupancy, according to Larry Peterson, manager of the housing units.

Members of the WHA are Charles Iretton, Phillip Becker, Charles Freeman and Charles Miller.

Clyde Peterson announced that a contest will be held to name the project and a suggestion box will be provided in the First National Bank.

WENDELL — Mayor Eugene Soares declared the Wendell sewage system in a disastrous situation because of inadequacy at Thursday night's City Council meeting.

According to Soares there are several people waiting for sewer hookups but no more have been allowed by the Idaho Department of Health until a new sewage treatment system is installed.

City engineers estimate it will be at least September before work can begin and Harold Smerly said that by that time cold weather could delay the project even longer.

Soares told the city councilmen that pumping at the lagoon site has been going on for 45 days and the water has not dropped an inch.

He said "if the water starts coming out and runs down on the ranches we will be in trouble." He declared the city at a standstill.

Hugh Hedges of JUB Engineers told the council that a grant offer for funding the sewer system would not be forthcoming until August if a bill.

The council discussed writing to the representatives in Congress for possible action to speed up the funding.

In other council action, the members voted to rejoin the Wood River Resource Area Council of Governments. They had withdrawn from that organization last month.

Charles Case, Gooding Mayor Harley Crippen, Clyde Peterson and Nelson King, members of the WRRA, met with the council to request that it reconsider the decision made last month.

They discussed the projects being accomplished by the WRRA and told the councilmen that membership in the organization would be more effective than working individually and that it would facilitate focusing state and federal attention on local problems.

The city accepted a bid of $15,900 for a water tank from Pittsburg-Des Moines Steel. Hedges told the council that there was no response on the bids for the piping and base for the tank and that the city should do the work before the tank is installed in August.

Hedges also read a letter being sent to downstream users of the Northside Canal Co. requesting their permission to empty the sewage lagoons into the Northside Canal one time in order to install chlorination equipment in the fall.

City cleanup week was set April 23 to May 4.

Land board tends lakes

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Land Board agreed Friday to take full control over encroachments on navigable lakes in Idaho but sent back to the drawing board for change some emergency regulations (for them).

At the same two-hour meeting the board approved sale of more than 6,000 acres of endowment lands to the Department of Parks and Recreation for $15 million.

This decision implemented a bill enacted by the legislature earlier this year to pay the endowment funds for lands appropriated over the years for parks and recreational use.

Parks will make a down payment of $1.5 million and pay off the balance in equal installments over 30 years at interest of six per cent.

In approving a sale contract however, the board called for reduction of more than 60 acres in land that would have gone to parks around Payette Lake near McCall. Public instruction Supt. D. F. Engelking said the agreement was far too inclusive and land Commissioner Gordon Trombley said that resulted from communications failure in his department.

Board members also gave the land department authority to replace with a pre-stressed concrete structure a rotting timber bridge east of Clarkia on the Floodwood State Forest in northern Idaho.

Total cost of the bridge will be $19,500 and the state's share will be 90 per cent. Timber companies will pay the balance.

An agreement giving the land department sole authority over navigable lake encroachments went through with little discussion but proposed 120-day emergency regulations made a lot of waves in the lengthy board meeting.

Sam Kaufman, Boise, a lawyer representing the Coeur d'Alene Lake Front Property Owners Association, attacked the proposed regulations point by point.

He singled out for special criticism a definition of "mean high water mark," calling it an "unlawful definition."

"As I read it," he said, "it even takes in flood waters."

"It would be better," Kaufman said, to stick to the normally used ordinary or natural high water mark.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Don Knickrehm, who helped draft the proposed regulations, disagreed. He said the State Channel Protection Act — which includes navigable lakes — uses the term "mean high water mark." He said the definition was drafted to give land department personnel something with which to work.

This definition says that mean high water mark "means the water level corresponding to the average of the yearly peak water levels or flows, where the years referred to are water years (October through September)."

Kaufman also questioned the lack of a "grandfather clause" in the proposed regulations and asked whether the land board will require permits for all docks and other "navigational aids" covered by the regulations.

Knickrehm said the regulations refer only to new navigational aids.

Hot wood

KETCHUM — Investigation is continuing into the theft of about $300 in wood cutting tools and camping equipment from a Lake Creek residence north of Ketchum.

According to a Blaine County Sheriff's deputy, the theft occurred at the Don Adams residence, sometime since March 1. Entry was made through an unlocked door.

Included in the theft was a $175 chain saw, and other miscellaneous outdoor equipment.

Coroner's jury rules death 'accidental'

BURLEY — A coroner's jury Thursday ruled the shooting death of Michael O'Brien last week as "accidental."

O'Brien, 19, Sublett, died April 5 when a gun carried by Robert Scott Price, 18, Malta, discharged, hitting O'Brien in the chest. The two, who were friends and co-workers, were at Durfee's cafe, where both worked, when the incident occurred.

Price reportedly thought the gun was empty when he stepped out of the car holding it in his left hand. O'Brien was near the car door talking with Price when the gun discharged, the reports said.

O'Brien apparently died within minutes.

County Coroner Roger Porter presided over the hearing Thursday afternoon. No criminal charges will be filed.

Price and another friend, Norman Marshall, also from the area, had stopped at the cafe preceding a hunting trip, according to Burley police reports.

Seven Blaine petitions filed

BELLEVUE — Seven juvenile petitions have been filed on six area youths in Blaine County Magistrate Court.

According to Bellevue City Marshall Duane Dudley, the petitions were filed in connection with March 28th of liquor from the Marva Shoemaker residence, Bellevue.

Dudley said the youths include five Bellevue juveniles and one Hailey youth.

After a preliminary hearing Thursday for four of the juveniles, Magistrate V. K. Jeppesen requested youth rehabilitation counselor Robert Schelske to conduct background investigations on three of the youths.

A preliminary hearing for the remaining two juveniles is scheduled for April 19.

All of the youths have been released to parental custody.

BOISE (UPI) — The State Land Department recently established a field office at the former tuberculosis hospital in Gooding.

Commissioner Gordon C. Trombley reported Thursday.

Trombley said the office is staffed by Resource Manager Howard Kestie, who was promoted and transferred from Idaho Falls.

Kestie will be responsible for field administration of state endowment lands in the southeastern supervisory area which includes the counties of Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls. It also includes the southeastern corner of Elmore County and the eastern edge of Owyhee County.

Truckers united in Sparks, Nev.

SPARKS, Nev. (UPI) — Some where between Reno and Detroit, a tractor-trailer rig is tooling along interstate 80 with "just married" splattered on its door.

Tom Johnson and Charlene Estlick, both truckers for Iowa Packer's Express, were married Wednesday in Sparks.

Between them, they have logged 31 accident-free years on the road hauling cargo to all 48 continental states.

Several days ago, according to Johnson, company dispatcher Bill Husby in Spencer, Iowa, sent them on a run together to Sparks saying:

"You two have been eyeing each other long enough. Tie the knot." Using Charlene's rig for the three-day drive to Sparks, Tom's just what they did: Tom has his own rig.

Johnson, originally from Lapine, Ore., has logged 17 years with Iowa Packer's. Charlene, from Duncan, Okla., has driven on the big rigs for 14 years.

After a brief stay at the Nugget Hotel-Casino for a honeymoon, it was back on the road Thursday for Detroit.

As one Nugget official said, how many families can boast his-and-her tractor-trailer rigs.

Egg hunt

TWIN FALLS — The annual Exchange Club Easter Egg Hunt will be April 21, at Harmon Park beginning at 10 a.m.

According to Rick Carriero, and Lynn Baird, co-chairmen, the hunt will have divisions for ages 3 and under, 4-5, 6-7, and 8-9.

Thirty golden eggs worth $1 each will be hidden among the "dozens and dozens" of eggs donated by local grocery stores, Carriero said.

The home economics students of Anna Davis at Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School, will prepare the eggs, he said.

IEA chief scores court decision

BOISE (UPI) — The executive secretary of the Idaho Education Association today called the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision of financing public school education "a surprise, embarrassment and disappointment to the IEA."

Wayne York of Boise addressed the delegates at the association's annual delegate assembly at Capital High School.

He said the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in the Rodriguez case means that "reform will come in financing the public schools, but not as quickly as if the court had ruled the other way."

He was critical of the 5-4 decision of the high court for failure to strike down as unconstitutional the reliance on the property tax in Texas and other states such as Idaho in financing public schools.

The court, in reversing the Rodriguez decision of a federal court in Texas, ruled that education is not a fundamental right "afforded explicit equal protection" under the federal constitution, and that educational systems which rely heavily on the property tax do not necessarily discriminate against "any definable category of poor people" or low income school districts.

According to York the decision was "a surprise, embarrassment, and disappointment to the IEA."

"The decision was unrealistic because it allows the quality of education in America to be determined by the fertility of farms, the productivity of mines and factories, and the concentrations of wealth in school districts," he said.

"Such a system is wrought with injustice and inequity—because the type of education a child receives should never depend on the accident of birth or residence, or the value of the property held by his next door neighbor," he added.

York said the court "passed the buck beautifully" by indicating the need is apparent for reform in tax systems which may have relied too long and too heavily on the local property tax, but such reforms must come from the state legislators.

York said it is "unrealistic to expect the lawmakers and democratic pressures from the people to change the school finance systems very rapidly because every taxpayer, teacher, superintendent, board member and legislator looks at the interest of his districts first and the rest of the state later, if at all."

He recommended the IEA delegates continue to support "strong positive moves to assure that all citizens bear an equitable share of the costs of public education, and that all children be provided more nearly equal educational opportunity."

York also criticized the federal government for the "confusion and uncertainty" of federal programs in education. He charged President Nixon with embracing a federal education program of "pernicious neglect and empty promises."

Auto makers score EPA's standards

DETROIT (UPI) — The auto industry claims less-stringent 1975 auto emission standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency don't let it out from under intensive pressure to cut pollution from cars.

General Motors Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg said he was "disappointed and dismayed." Ford chairman Henry Ford II said further legal action might be necessary because of the EPA decision Wednesday. Both said their companies still might not be able to make it down to federal emission levels.

While William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the EPA, proposed that only cars sold in California in 1975 be required to use catalytic converters to meet emission standards, the automakers say the pollution control devices still may be needed on all cars. That could add $200 to $300 to the cost of the 1975 models.

Detroit car builders had wanted standards for 1975 left at 1973 levels with the exception of California where they would begin to phase in the catalytic converter—a muffler-like device in which the combination of platinum catalyst and heat changes carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons to harmless carbon dioxide and water.

When the 1970 clear air act was passed calling for reduction of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide by 90 percent by 1975, the automakers opted in favor of cleaning up the present internal combustion engine, primarily with the intended catalytic converter.

Three foreign makers have shown they could meet the standards with different types of engines, but Detroit is tied to its present engines.

The industry claimed in hearings before the EPA that there was the risk of a "business catastrophe" with the converters failed during assembly line tests.

Ruckelshaus agreed, saying he set the double standard with converters phased in on a gradual basis to insure that the carmakers continue work on them without running the risk of massive disruptions.

A Chrysler Corp. statement described the interim standards as "extremely severe." Ford charged that Ruckelshaus "went beyond the limits of practically in the two sets of interim standards he proposed."

On the basis of what we now know, the requirements for 49 states are so tough as to make it extremely doubtful that we can meet them across the full range of our production without the use of expensive untried catalysts," Ford said.

Ford said the company would again explore possible legal action to prevent implementation of any new standards. Last May, Ruckelshaus denied a request for a one-year extension, but was forced to reconsider that decision by court action.

Pioneer 11 trajectory changed for good look

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The change in trajectory of Pioneer 11 put it on a precise course today that will enable scientists to swing it past any part of Jupiter they want a good look at when the space probe reaches the giant planet 20 months from now.

"Preliminary tracking data indicates the course change Wednesday produced a new trajectory that will provide a wide selection of mission options," said a spokesman for the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of Cal Tech.

JPL monitors and controls the Pioneer space explorers launched by NASA. Pioneer 11, launched a week ago, was more than 3 million miles from Earth today and speeding on its long journey to Jupiter at 85,000 miles per hour, JPL said.

Pioneer 11 follows Pioneer 10, launched 13 months ago, which will arrive over Jupiter in December, and radio its findings to JPL. That will give scientists a better idea of where to send the next Pioneer. "The options now available include looks at almost any portion of Jupiter, including the polar regions, where scientists theorize the heavy Jovian atmosphere may be transparent," the JPL spokesman said.

"The spacecraft can be sent on from Jupiter to several destinations, including "Saturn, for mankind's first close look at that planet," the spokesman said.

Pioneer 11 could follow Pioneer 10, which will become the first manmade object to leave this solar system when it crosses the orbits of the outermost planets a decade from now and forges on into the vast emptiness of interstellar space.

Both Pioneers carry plaques bearing symbols to identify them as the work of men and signal the location of Earth to any intelligent beings in another solar system who may encounter them.

VICTORVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — The bones that Debbie Hart brought to her high school anthropology class were not those of a long-dead Indian, or an Ice Age man bitten by a sabre tooth tiger.

The deceased was apparently killed by some more modern means—like two bullets in the head, the San Bernardino County Coroner's office said Wednesday.

A dog discovered the bones that Miss Hart brought to her school class—a skull, a jawbone and a legbone. Investigating deputies said the skull bore what appeared to be two bullet holes, and the bones, "definitely human," were about two years old.

Karate classes at Albion

ALBION — Toshio Osaka, a black-belt karate expert from Japan, will conduct a karate program at the Oregon Trail Festival of the Arts here this summer.

Students will live in a karate training hall on the Albion campus, according to Osaka. Their schedule will be designed to meet traditional standards of karate training and will stress self-control in the use of the Oriental skill.

Osaka said males 12 years of age and older will be accepted in the eight-week course.

A fourth-degree black belt, Osaka is currently head karate instructor in the physical education department of the University of Utah.

He is a graduate of the University of Nihon, Japan, and won the single expert prize in the all-star karate championships at the university in 1963. He was also coach of the champion All-Japan university karate team in 1967.

"All students must have a genuine desire to study karate for the purpose of cultivating a spirit of self-confidence," Osaka said. "If a person truly devotes himself to a period of strict discipline, the benefits will last him a lifetime."

Inquiries concerning the summer programs should be addressed to Karate, Albion, Idaho 83311.

New York downs Black Hawks 4-1

CHICAGO (UPI) — Walter Tkaczuk scored twice and Vic Hadfield, once in the third period to give the New York Rangers a 4-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks in the opening game of their Stanley Cup playoff semifinals Thursday night.

Pit Martin got the first goal of the game for the Hawks on a 35-foot screen shot midway through the first period, but Bobby Rousseau tied it 92 seconds later when he took the puck away from Keith Morrison in the Chicago end and beat Esposito from 35 feet for an unassisted goal.

Both Hadfield and Tkaczuk, on his first goal, scored on 40-foot drives from the right of Black Hawks goalie "Body Esposito" as they were left almost unattended for clear shots.

New York goalie Ed Giacomin stopped 21 shots to beat the Hawks for the first time in four games this season after being twice and tying once against Chicago in the regular season.

The start of the series was similar to the 1972 semifinal round when the same two teams met and the Rangers swept the series in four games.

Blancas leads Monsanto open

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Homero Blancas, "ticked pink" to be playing so well on a day when brisk winds and hard greens sent scores soaring higher than expected, shot a 4-under-par 67 Thursday to take the first round lead in the Monsanto Open golf tournament.

The 35-year-old Texan wound up a stroke ahead of aging Doug Sanders thanks to an eagle 3 four holes from the end of his round when he laid a four-wood shot just 12 feet from the cup.

Sanders, who won here in 1961 and 1965 and who missed a third Pensacola title in 1966 when he was disqualified for failing to sign his scorecard after leading the first two rounds, appeared headed for a 67 himself Thursday, but three-putted the final hole from the fringe.

Blancas, who had three top-10 finishes in earlier Florida tournaments this year, was delighted with his round because he missed the cut last week at the Masters and hadn't been able to better 75 in practice here.

"I've never been consistent here," Blancas moaned. "It's hard for me to get going this time of year. When it keeps switching from hot to cold, I'm off my game. I'm a warm weather player."

Sanders, who'll be 40 in a couple of months, wasn't overly impressed with his 68. "It wasn't too exciting," he said as he rushed to the practice range. "It was just another day at the office."

Tommy Aaron, "bonafide" three days after winning the Masters championship, struggled in with a 6-over-par 77 Thursday and decided to skip Friday's second round and return home "to rest."

Aaron, who had asked to be relieved of his commitment here after winning the Masters, said he "knew I'd be emotionally and mentally exhausted. It's almost impossible to play. It's hard to get going again, especially when the tournament (the Masters) ended on Monday."

Aaron, who said that he figured he'd "just be spinning my wheels" by further playing here, said he came to Pensacola because "I felt I had an obligation. I knew full well what to expect."

New Zealand lefthander Bob Charles, Bob Wynn and Chuck Courtney were all in at 69 Thursday as only five of the 14-man field was able to break 70 over the Pensacola Country Club course.

This came as a big surprise since the course is not considered tough by PGA tour standards. But the greens are harder than had been expected and a brisk wind which came in off Pensacola Bay in the afternoon hampered the late starters — none of whom broke 70.

There were 10 who shot 1-under-par 70s, making 15 sub-par rounds on the first day. Bruce Crampton, who needs a third place finish here to move back to the top of this year's money list (at more than $106,000) was in that 70 group along with Al Golberger, Cosir Sanudo, Greg Edwards, Dick Crawford, Jim Barber, Mike Kallam, Dan Sikas, Ron Still and George Knudson.

J. C. Snead, who finished second to Aaron at the Masters by missing a birdie putt on the final hole, was in a large group of par-71 shooters while Jim Jimmison, who tied for third at the Masters, had a 74.

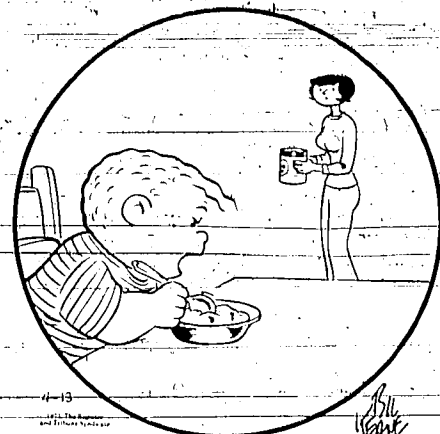

Jack Nicklaus and Peter Oosterhuis, the two men Jimmison tied with at Augusta, and such other outstanding golfers as Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Billy Casper are not playing this week. This $150,000 tournament falls between the Masters and next week's Tournament of Champions and annually has trouble luring the big names.

That's why tournament officials were so anxious to hold Tommy Aaron to his commitment — and why Aaron played for the one round.

What's What

L. M. Boyd

Meter, have you ever been injured on the job? If so, what got hurt? One statistical breakdown of a sizable batch of industrial injuries shows they occurred to the various parts of the body in these relative frequencies: Hand, 1,000; arm, 340; leg, 311; head, 270; eye, 236; and foot, 119.

Most seasoned police operation in the country is known to be the 150-year-old Texas Rangers. Stripes on a zebra are an individual as a human's fingerprints. Two out of three rabbits alive in the spring are dead even before the fall-hunting season. Switzerland now claims 53 so-called silent reserves wherein no cars are permitted. And in the language of the law, remember, it takes a least three persons to start a riot.

Do not salt that meat until after it's cooked, advises a culinary specialist, because salt draws out those nutritious juices, my dear.

TO DISROBE

If some wealthy oddball were to offer you a $1 million to take off all your clothes in public, would you do so? When pollsters put that question to a sizable sampling of citizens, only 12 per cent said, "Yes, certainly, why not?" Another small percentage said, "I'd think about it." But the majority replied, "Never!" Or, words to that effect. What's your stand on this significant query?

Again am asked which is more likely to occur, a hole in one on a golf course or a 300 game in the bowling alley. The statisticians have worked that out, too. Odds against a hole in one run about 30,000 to one, against a 300 game, about 290,000 to one.

WHITEN SHIRT

Q "How do you lighten a wash-and-wear shirt that has been yellowed by chlorine bleach?"

A. Use either potassium monopersulfate or sodium perborate bleach. No, I don't know what that stuff is. But a consultant says just follow the instructions on the box.

Q "How many quills on a porcupine?"

A. Figure 30,000.

Still much argued is whether men or women are more apt to be about their ages. Among the famous, however, it's known which. Compilers of "Who's Who" say the ladies definitely tend to rewrite their longevity statistics more than do the gentlemen. Predictably, actresses appear to be the swiftest of all to shuffle dates, they say.

Exactly 31 out of every 100 married women nationwide have been given some sort of diamond jewelry during their matrimonial life, it's claimed.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are able to communicate beautifully with associates, so get in touch with them early and make progress. Questionable points hard to clear up before now become easy. Show you are intelligent.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those precise and meticulous young people who would do well in vocations where precision, detail, research and patience are required and also in clothes designing, selling, etc. There will be a very marked streak to be overparticular, but that is the quality that will bring the big success denoted in this chart, so don't let it bother you. Give an opportunity to travel early, and permit music lessons early, too.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

US firm, Russia sign farm chemical contract

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Occidental Petroleum Corp. and the Soviet Union Thursday signed an $8 billion agreement — the largest ever between a nation and a private firm for chemicals to be used in the making of fertilizer.

The agreement is aimed at helping the Soviets to boost their chemical fertilizer production, a major goal following their most disastrous crop year this century last year.

Under the agreement, Occidental will supply the Soviet Union for the next 20 years more than a million tons of super phosphoric acid used in making fertilizers. In return, Occidental will receive ammonia and urea for use in some of its industrial processes.

The agreement, confirmed by the Soviet news agency Tass, is a straight barter deal of $4 billion worth of materials each way. No cash is involved except for some initial Occidental financing.

Armand Hammer, the 74-year-old chairman of Occidental whose first Soviet business contact was V.I. Lenin in 1921, signed for the American firm.

Hammer left Moscow immediately after the unpublished ceremony and could not be reached for comment.

Western economists called it the largest deal ever made between a nation and a private company. "It's a historic day, all right," said one economist.

The agreement stipulates that Occidental and the Bechtel Corp., of San Francisco, would build four plants near Kuybyshev, a Volga River city, to produce four million tons of urea annually. They also will build pipelines to transport the liquid ammonia.

Instead of beginning in the fall as usual the next classes will begin this spring on June 18th and run for eleven consecutive months until the following August. This will mean graduation at a time when employment opportunities are at their greatest.

Those interested in either of the programs are urged to contact the College of Southern Idaho counseling office on Kimberly Road as soon as possible for enrollment. Both programs have limited enrollment.

Also, the deadline for enrollment in the licensed practical nursing program at the College of Southern Idaho has been changed from May 15. This course also has a limited enrollment so any interested persons need to apply now.

Up to their necks

A HERD OF CATTLE stands in neck deep flood water near Kersey, Colo., Thursday after the Latham Reservoir broke, flooding the town of 400 persons. A nearby school with 1,000 students was also evacuated to higher ground. (UPI)

Colorado dam breaks, floods town

KERSEY, Colo. (UPI) — Charles Carey has spent most of his 76 years in Kersey. He refused to leave Thursday even though a dam erupted, spilling more than 1.8 billion gallons of water through the small northeastern Colorado town.

"I've been here since 1907," said Carey, as water swirled near his home. "I've never seen anything like this, but I'm not leaving because my wife will be coming home soon and she'll worry if I'm not here."

Carey was one of only a handful of the town's 600 residents who chose to stay.

The rest hurriedly piled clothes, television sets and other possessions into their cars and left as water poured over the dam around the town and flooded the business section to five foot depths in some spots.

There were no injuries.

The Lower Latham Reservoir Dam, built in 1890, had been leaking from cracks all week as snowed from heavy snows swelled the reservoir. Pressure finally punched a 40-foot hole in the dam, eventually widening the gap to 300 feet.

The water, more than six feet deep and 100 feet wide, rushed through the town and slowly receded into the South Platte River almost a mile from the town's northern edge.

Weld County Commissioner Glen Billings. "In less than an hour the water moved two miles north of the reservoir and covered all the farmland in the area."

An Army National Guard helicopter plucked three ranchers from a high-dry spot near the dam.

Fire departments from five nearby towns rushed to Kersey to evacuate the town as men using tractors and shovels worked frantically on the communities south side to build a six foot high dike in the water's path. They were from two sides.

Officials said the residents would be allowed to return today to begin the cleanup job.

"It's no use bellyaching, I guess," said Henry Cynnanski, whose farm directly north of the dam was extensively damaged. "But we have everything we own in there."

Officials said residents were urged to evacuate the area earlier this week when the leaks were first discovered, but refused.

Those who do not have veteran status will be considered only if the position cannot be filled by a veterans preference applicant.

Thiebert discussed the consequences of third party movements over the years and defined the role of the American Party.

Wayne Kinney, county chairman, conducted the meeting and noted the rapid growth of membership and interest in the American Party since the elections in November. He said this is evidenced by the increasing interest in and demand for the Idaho Eagle, the state publication of the American Party of Idaho.

The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. May 17 at the Judicial Building. An educational program is planned and all interested persons are invited to attend.

Lake rules need public hearings

BOISE (UPI) — A public hearing should be held before the Land Board adopts rules for navigational aid permits on Idaho's navigable lakes, Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa said today.

Land Board members are scheduled to make up emergency rules for such permits at a special meeting starting at 8 a.m. Friday.

In addition, the board will consider a proposed agreement between the Departments of Lands and Water Administration covering stream channel and navigable lake protection. This agreement would vest full authority over the lakes in the Land Department and the Land Board which governs that agency.

Cenarrusa said that on rules for navigational aid permits he favors public hearings.

"A draft of the proposed emergency rules—which also apply to certain Land Board authority over navigable streams—was put before the board Tuesday.

At Cenarrusa's request action was put off at that time so board members could study the proposal. Since then, Cenarrusa said, a number of questions have arisen about the proposed rules. "I'm studying them now, as to how far-reaching they may be," he said. "They would have the effect of law because the Lake Bed Act passed by the last legislature) was vetoed by the governor.

"Anything that has the full effect of law should have a full airing before the public," he said.

Attorney General W. Anthony Park, whose staff helped prepare the rules, said there are only "emergency rules" and that the board by law must conduct hearings before adopting permanent rules.

These simply would be put into effect in the interim between now and the time the board can agree with the Department of Water Administration on permanent rules, he said. He estimated that will take about six months.

One of the items questioned in the proposed emergency rules is the definition of "mean high water mark."

This proposal says the mean high water mark "means the water level corresponding to average of the yearly peak water levels or flows where the years referred to are water years (October through September)."

The department will from time to time declare the elevation of the mean high water mark of navigable lakes within the State of Idaho," the proposal states.

Park said this, as written, means the high water mark could change from year to year possibly, but he said he did not feel the definition would have much practical effect insofar as any changes from present practice.

The U.S. battleship Maine was blown up in Havana Harbor Feb. 15, 1898.

Dr. Atkins defends embattled diet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Embattled diet revolutionary Dr. Robert C. Atkins, claiming 10,000 trouble-free reducers in support, defended his high-protein menu before a Senate committee Thursday as "eminently safe, medically proper, and exceedingly effective."

Atkins, 42, author of the best-selling "Diet Revolution," criticized Sen. George S. McGovern's Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs for calling him as a witness on the subject of diet fats and frauds.

He also struck back at the American Medical Association whose Nutrition Council Chairman, Dr. C. E. Butterworth, told the committee that the Atkins low-carbohydrate diet was "risky and very dangerous."

The medical community, Atkins said, "should be cooperating on the development of fresh approaches for combatting (obesity) instead of quarrelling over every new suggestion that departs from the traditionally standard but unsuccessful recommendations of the medical establishment."

The AMA previously had said Atkins' diet plan was "neither new nor revolutionary" and could lead to a risk of hardening of the arteries and "coronary disease" because of its high cholesterol content.

US bitterly denounces Arab radio broadcasts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States bitterly denounced Arab governments Thursday for helping the Palestine guerrilla movement in a "big lie" anti-American campaign.

A State Department spokesman, Charles W. Bray, categorically denied charges that the United States connived in the Beirut attack Monday by Israeli commandos, killing three guerrilla leaders.

Bray warned Arab governments in the Middle East that they might ultimately regret the consequences of aiding the Fedeyeen campaign on this issue.

Bray did not specify the governments to which he was referring but other officials cited broadcasts by the official radios in Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Iraq, Syria, The Sudan and Jordan. They said the broadcasts were repeating allegations originally carried by the Fedeyeen's "Voice of Palestine" transmitters in Algeria and Libya.

He said that it was "particularly repugnant to all responsible men to find those supposedly clandestine outlets in some cases calling for a lay-off on American officials and U.S. property."
