TWIN FALLS — The price of regular grade gasoline in Twin Falls has jumped about 10 per cent during the past month. A Times-News gasoline price survey revealed that the average price of regular gasoline had jumped 3.6 cents during the past month to an average price of 41.9 cents per gallon. The price of premium grade gasoline jumped to 45.8 cents on the average, an increase of 2.7 cents in the month. The last month's rapid price increase had followed two months in which the average price had held constant in Twin Falls stations.

Prices for serve-yourself gasoline pumped by the customer instead of a station attendant also rose during the past month. Self-service regular had averaged 35.0 cents per gallon three months ago. Until a month ago the price had not changed. Last month, however, self serve regular gas jumped 2.8 cents per gallon to 38.7 cents.

Self-service premium gas prices averaged 39.7 cents per gallon from March to May, increasing by roughly 7 per cent on the gallon by June 1 to 42.7 cents per gallon.

As of June 1 the price-conscious motorist could save up to five cents per gallon on regular gas by shopping selectively. The highest price recorded for regular on June 1 was 40.0 at the self-service pumps while the lowest self-service regular was 35.0 cents per gallon. For attendant pumped regular gas the high and low were less marked, with the high at 42.9 and the low at 40.9 cents per gallon.

The Times-News gasoline price survey averages the price of both attendant-pumped and self-serve gas at seven Twin Falls stations.

Attendant pumped premium also showed a two-cent differential as of June 1 with the high being 46.9 and the low 44.0 cents per gallon.

Service station operators called gave varying reasons Monday for the hike in gas prices. Some said they raised prices to stay competitive, some said to conserve gasoline, others said rising tankwagon or wholesale prices were the reason. Marv Hunt, manager of Blue Lakes American Service, 306 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., said he had raised his prices about 5 cents in the last three months. He said the increases were in part necessary because of a 1 1/2 cent increase in his tankwagon price, but also were based on staying competitive. He said the major gas company outlets in Twin Falls were "in a gas war" until about two months ago. "If everybody else started going down, I would," said Hunt. "It would be the same as if everybody else went up." Hunt said he has shortened his station's hours to cope with rationing of his gas supply and increased customer demand. (Continued on p. 13)

Ex-secretary links Magruder to spying

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy's former secretary testified today that Job Stuart Magruder — after the Watergate break-in — authorized payment of a bill for the "Gemstone" stationery on which she typed the logs of tapped telephone conversations. It was the first time that the name of Magruder, who was President Nixon's deputy campaign manager, was cited directly in the Senate committee's public hearings into the Watergate break-in and other political espionage during the 1972 presidential campaign. Unanimously brushing off a request by the government's special prosecutor that the public hearings be postponed in the name of justice, the committee questioned Sally Jackson Harmony, Liddy's former secretary, about "clandestine" activities carried out in Nixon's re-election campaign. Mrs. Harmony testified that after the June 17 Watergate break-in, a bill came to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President for the "Gemstone" stationery that she said Liddy had ordered printed. Because Liddy already had left the committee under the cloud of Watergate, "I took the bill for Gemstone to Magruder," Mrs. Harmony said. "He (Magruder) authorized payment to H. A. Post Associates, and signed Job S. Magruder in it." Mrs. Harmony said she then disposed of the bill in a paper shredder. Pressed by Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., as to why she gave the invoice to Magruder instead of the office manager, Mrs. Harmony said "I thought he would know more about it." She said she could not elaborate. Magruder resigned as assistant commerce secretary designate in April at the height of Watergate disclosures. Mrs. Harmony, who still works for Nixon's Inaugural Committee, said Magruder called her from the Commerce Department this spring and told her he had assured John N. Mitchell, Nixon's former campaign manager, that "he (Mitchell) would not have anything to worry about from your testimony." "I knew nothing to implicate Mr. Mitchell," Mrs. Harmony testified. "I said I was not aware of any way I could implicate him." Mrs. Harmony, who appeared nervous during her testimony and occasionally wrung her hands, said she did not know the information Liddy had ordered her to type had come from bugged conversations at the Democratic party's national headquarters in the Watergate. "Were you aware you were typing information obtained illegally?" asked Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii. "They were telephone conversations," she said. "I didn't know the source." "When did you first discover they were bugged?" Inouye asked. "When I read the newspapers on June 18," she replied. "In your mind, none of the information related to national security?" Inouye asked, in a reference to Nixon's statement that he did not want the Watergate investigation to interfere with national security. "No," she said. Liddy initially was counsel for the Committee for the Re-Election of the President and later became counsel to the campaign's finance arm. He was fired June 28 for refusing to talk to the FBI and ever since has refused to cooperate with investigators. Liddy had been on the witness list for this week, but Ervin announced the committee had interviewed him secretly and that he had refused to talk, citing constitutional grounds. Ervin said the committee decided it would "not insist on receiving his testimony at this time," apparently indicating senators would not seek a contempt citation against Liddy. He did not say when the secret session had been held.

TF radio station annexation voted

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — KEEP radio won approval Monday to build a 400-foot tower in South Park. The approval was granted despite objections of area residents and two city councilmen. The Twin Falls City Council voted four to two Monday night to annex KEEP property along the southern city limits and give the area residential-professional-zoning classification. Under a conditional provision of the zoning rules, KEEP will be allowed to build a new radio tower and station. No one objected to the station, but many objected to the 400-foot tower. Councilmen Paul Ostyn and Henry Woodall dissented in the vote. Mayor John Christofersen and Councilmen Winston Jones, Mike Gray and Dr. Stephen Lincoln voted in favor of the annexation and zoning. "South Park seems to be a good place to dump things," said Twin Falls attorney Robert Balleisen, speaking in behalf of resident-objectors to the KEEP project. (Continued on p. 13)

Watergate death threat
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy once threatened to kill Job S. Magruder, former deputy manager of the Nixon re-election campaign, testimony by ex-presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman revealed Tuesday. Ehrlichman said Magruder informed him of the threat. He did not elaborate on the circumstances or the date, but apparently was referring to some point before last June 17 because his lawyer did not let him testify about events prior to the break-in at the Democratic Watergate headquarters. "Mr. Magruder told me Mr. Liddy had threatened him — had threatened his life," said Ehrlichman, who resigned April 30 as Nixon's top adviser on domestic affairs.

Ulster gunfire kills officer
BELFAST (UPI) — A burst of submachinegun fire from a passing car killed a policeman in the border town of Enniskillen today. Other gunmen dumped the body of a blindfolded man in Clogher, a mile from the Irish border, police said. The deaths raised to 814 the number of dead in almost four years of violence in Northern Ireland among minority Roman Catholics, majority Protestants and the security forces.

Scandal sinks $ to new mart low

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar plummeted to new lows across Europe today and gold in London soared to a new high in frantic trading. Bankers blamed the mounting dollar crisis on a continuing flow of Watergate affair disclosures. The dollar nosedived to record lows in Finland, Frankfurt, Zurich and Brussels and slumped to its second lowest price in Paris since the end of World War II. "Everyone is dumping their dollars to avoid further losses," one London banker said. "They are afraid the Watergate scandal is going to get worse." Another London banker said "the longer Watergate drags on, the more the dollar is likely to come under pressure." Yet another banker said, the dump-the-dollar drive "was in high gear because everyone fears instability in Washington." In Finland, the dollar dropped to an all-time low today of 3.68 Finnish marks as compared to Monday's close of 3.73. Finland joined South Africa Monday to abandon the lowest agreed price for the dollar. Today's drop represents a 6 per cent decline from the base rate of 3.90 marks. In London, which generally governs world gold trading, the metal today soared $3.25 to an official fixing price of $129 an ounce after hitting $129 in early trading. Both prices were new highs. The metal closed Monday at a record $123.75. The dollar opened in Frankfurt at 2,584 marks, a record low on the West German market, then sagged still further to 2,572.

Firehouse plan gains Burley OK

BURLEY — The Burley City Council Monday night approved a proposal by the Burley National Guard Association to convert the old armory to a fire station. The association in a letter to the council agreed to turn the building over to the city on a tentative basis until the city agreed to use it as a fire station. At such time, they said, a warranty agreement will be drawn up and the city could then use the building as it saw fit. The council asked that the armory building be turned over to the city immediately. The city would assume the lease on the building by Burley Processing.

Hearing on recall petitions planned

BOISE (UPI) — Atty. Gen. W. Anthony Park and Secretary of State Pete T. Conarrusa decided today to let lawyers for both sides present arguments before deciding on validity of recall petitions against Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello. Conarrusa announced plans for the 4 p.m. conference with the attorneys after meeting with Park for more than an hour on the question this morning. "We decided we cannot make a hasty decision without all of the facts," Conarrusa said. (Earlier story, p. 14) One key question confronting them was whether petitioners legally can fill in the omitted post office address that invalidated 2,220 signatures last week.

Rifle-toting man subdued
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Three policemen wrestled a high-powered rifle away from a man demanding a plane at Portland International Airport Monday. One of the policemen was wounded in the leg when the weapon fired. The man, identified as Gerald L. Bellach, 34, of Willis, Calif., was charged with attempted air piracy and first degree assault. Bail was set at $35,000.

Cahill 'even choice' in NJ vote
TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Gov. William Cahill, who won office in 1969 by pledging to clean up the state then saw his administration embarrassed by corruption in high places, was given an even chance to win today's primary election. The Republican governor's main opponent, Rep. Charles Sandman Jr., and the Democrats have been hitting hard on the limitations of Cahill aides and campaign workers. The possible effect of the Watergate scandal on a Republican's re-election bid was an unknown factor. To date, Cahill's first state treasurer, his 1969 campaign manager, and several contributors to that campaign have been indicted by a federal grand jury probing the governor's campaign financing.

US proposes pollution rules
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States today proposed creation of a new organization within the United Nations to crack down on pollution by oil and other dangerous substances from ships on the high seas. The proposal was delivered by Russell E. Train, chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, to a meeting in London of the council, or governing body, of the International Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO), an agency of the United Nations. "The oceans are too large and vital a part of the global ecosystem to allow the danger of pollution from ocean commerce to grow unchecked," Train said in a copy of his remarks made available in Washington.

SNRA land use rules listed

By TERRY CAMPBELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Proposed private land regulations for the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA) and a draft environmental statement have been released. According to Kenneth B. Dittmer, assistant superintendent of lands for the recreation area, the Forest Service proposals set standards for the use, sub-division and development of private lands within the SNRA and apply to both existing and proposed land uses. The environmental draft details the alternatives considered in formulating the proposals and evaluates the environmental impact of the proposals. Copies of the packet, Dittmer said, have been distributed to all recorded landowners within the SNRA. Public comments on proposed regulations and environmental statements will be accepted until July 15, he said. This represents an extension over the earlier scheduled date of June 25.

Dittmer said landowners and interested residents are encouraged to set up an interview with personnel at the SNRA headquarters, three miles south of Ketchum. Appointments also may be arranged for evening and weekends, he said. A land use category map, containing large aerial photographs of all private land within the SNRA, will be available for reference at the headquarters, Dittmer said. Dittmer said all interested landowners should submit either written statements or interviews on the effect of the proposed land classification on their ownership. No public hearings will be scheduled. The SNRA contains about 25,000 acres of privately owned land out of a total of about 754,000 acres. The proposed land regulations consist of the following private property classifications: "Designated community," which presently only includes Upper and Lower Stanley. "High density residential," areas outside designated communities for residential development with a minimum lot size of one acre per single family unit, exclusive of roads, or clustered-type development. "Medium density residential," development with a minimum lot size of five acres per single family unit. "Low density residential," residential development with a minimum lot size of 10 acres per single family unit. "Commercial," areas for commercial development outside designated communities. "Agricultural," all properties outside designated communities not placed in a residential or commercial category. The agricultural classification contains the majority of the privately owned land within the SNRA. "Mineral," any areas in the land use categories used for mineral operation. Standards applying to all land use categories include the use and development of the property will be in conformance with all applicable federal, state and local laws. The proposed regulations also include general standards applying to all land use categories and detailed standards for each category.

Candidacies bloom at conference

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Presidential candidacies as delicate as mountain wildflowers blossomed and faded at the tenderest touch at the 65th National Governors' Conference.

Absolutely no one except the swarm of newsmen and political railers who followed the national governors to Nevada's most scenic resort for high rollers and penny ante players was talking openly about the presidency.

But sensing political upheavals in the wake of Watergate and the troubled economic scene, reporters were looking for the faintest signs of presidential activity. In the case of two governors who are regarded as strong possibilities — Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York — the newsmen came right out and asked. And they will likely put the same question to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew when he arrives for an appearance at the conference tonight.

The answers from Reagan and Rockefeller were uniformly genial and unlightening Monday.

"I'm not even thinking about 1976, and I don't think anyone else should," Reagan said.

Rockefeller's answer was more roundabout. Asked about Reagan as a candidate, he called the Californian an "outstanding governor, but he hasn't announced yet, so why ..."

"Should you?" The governor answered, "That's right."

Both men were asked if their age would be a barrier to the White House. Rockefeller, 64, observed that there were a number of world leaders to whom age was no impediment, and Reagan, 62, said, "I don't know. That would be up to someone else."

None of this put off speculation that both governors came to Lake Tahoe to test the presidential political waters. Rockefeller issued the text of a speech he gave at a closed meeting that prescribed for the nation's ills "a clearer sense of national purpose based on the emerging realities of the world we live in."

Reagan presented at the same meeting an explanation of his state tax reduction plan, which he suggested some others might want to consider.

The business of the conference itself was put in the shade by a talk about Watergate Democratic Gov. Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin came up with series of comments that escalated in sharpness to a flat demand that President Nixon resign. He got a tongue-lashing from several Republicans and very little open support from Democrats fearful that too hard a line on Watergate will produce a political backlash.

Reagan called Lucey's statement "dangerously irresponsible." He added, "It's time for us to shut up and let the law take its course."

Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, D-Wis.

Last Jablonski jury questioned

ELITE, Pa. (UPI) — Attorneys questioned 44 prospective jurors and selected only one Monday for the murder trial of Albert Pass, last of seven persons prosecuted in the slayings of former United Mine Workers official Joseph "Jack" Yablonski, his wife and daughter.

The juror selected at the trial's opening session before Judge Edward Carney in Erie County Court was Ronald E. Wetmore, 26, Union City, Pa., a dairy farmer.

Pass, 52, of Middlesboro, Ky., former financial secretary of UMWA District 19 in Kentucky and Tennessee, was accused of arranging to raise $20,000 in union funds to pay for the killing of Yablonski, leader of a union reform group, who ran unsuccessfully for the UMWA presidency in 1969 against W. A. "Tony" Boyle.

Special prosecutor Richard Sprague said prosecution witnesses would include Boyle, who has been deposed as the union's president; current UMWA president Arnold Miller and William Prater, convicted of murder in the case last March.

Boyle testified as a prosecution witness at the trial of Prater, 63, of LaFollette, Tenn., also a former official of UMWA District 19 and also charged in connection with the "murder phony fund."

Miller, who inherited the union reform mantle from the slain Yablonski, never previously was asked to testify in the case against the seven suspects.

The Yablonskis were shot to death in their home in Clarksville, Washington County, Pa., south of Pittsburgh, Dec. 31, 1969.

Prater and two other men were convicted by trial juries on murder charges and two other men and a woman pleaded guilty to murder charges.

'Nixon, resign,' says Gov. Lucey

New York Times News Service — LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin, saying the nation's economy was faltering and the federal government's programs were at a standstill, called upon President Nixon today to resign.

As the Watergate scandal continued to obliterate all other business at the 65th National Governors Conference here, Lucey said impeachment would be such a divisive procedure that "the cure might be worse than the disease."

Lucey said he doubted that any formal action would be taken by the governors on his proposal. But the question of the President's capacity to govern was pervading the conference and dominating its opening phases.

"That Watergate should be the No. 1 topic of discussion at the national governor's conference, dominating all other deliberations, tells us how far this paralysis has extended," Gov. Lucey declared.

After a caucus of Democratic governors this afternoon, Gov. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, chairman of the caucus, said it had been decided that no formal resolution on Watergate would be introduced by the Democrats. However, he said, each governor was free to speak for himself.

"The governors have special and severe problems running their own states. We have to do that, regardless of Watergate," he declared. "I myself do not have enough information to ask for Mr. Nixon's resignation."

Later Bumpers noted that it would take a two-thirds vote to permit the introduction of a Watergate resolution at the conference, and the Democrats did not have enough votes even if they could agree on what to introduce.

The Wisconsin governor's proposal was quickly scorned by Gov. Tom McCall the Republican governor of Oregon. He characterized it as "a hair-trigger reaction" by "one of the most political partisans" of the governors.

"There's no question the President has been severely damaged by the affair," McCall said. "It's a catastrophe for the nation and it's damaging all elected officials, Republicans or Democrats. But if the President is guilty of anything, it's misfeasance. That's not impeachable matter."

Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, a Republican, accused Lucey of being "dangerously irresponsible" in calling for the President to resign.

President to resign. "I think it is time for all of us to shut up and let the law take its course," he said. "So far everything that has been said about Watergate has largely been allegation, unfounded rumor, and unfounded accusation."

As for the move by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., to consider impeachment of the President, Reagan said: "My reaction to everything Pete McCloskey has said in the past few years is unprintable. So is this."

Gov. Linwood Holton of Virginia, chairman of the Republican Governors Association, insisted after a breakfast caucus that there was no discussion of Watergate at the meeting, where Republicans outnumbered Democrats 31 to 19.

"I reported to them what I thought I said yesterday on Meet the Press," Holton said. "At that time I urged the President to hold a press conference, or a series of them, and answer all the questions, openly, on Watergate. I have been assured today by a White House aide that the President will hold a press conference. But I do not know where or when that will be."

Holton said he personally did not consider impeachment a relevant question now. He said Nixon was doing "a very fine job on foreign policy."

"But what we need is for the air to be cleared, and the only way is to get right out in front of you press people and answer your questions, and I don't care what the mechanics of it might be."

Gov. Milton J. Shapp Democrat of Pennsylvania, issued a statement denouncing the Nixon administration, saying its policies were having "devastating effects on the states."

The Pennsylvania governor said that the President's economic policies had brought unemployment and inflation to the states and Mr. Nixon's revenue-sharing plan had so far resulted only in the dropping of some vitally needed federal programs.

"Watergate has created an executive paralysis in decision-making in Washington in addition to its legal and ethical swamps," Shapp declared.

Gov. Thomas J. Meskill, of Connecticut, a Republican, did not agree. He said his state had no insistent complaints about its relations with the federal government since Watergate.

"It's a little harder to find out who to talk to when you call up, and I guess you could blame that on Watergate," he said.

N-test set for Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear device 3,490 feet beneath the surface will be touched off Wednesday morning at the Nevada Test Site, and Atomic Energy Commission has announced, "The force of the blast may sway highrise buildings in Las Vegas, 110 miles away. One building in Beatty, 32 miles away, will be evacuated as will all mines within 50 miles of ground zero. Beatty is the nearest populated area to the blast site at Pahute Mesa. The AEC said the test, code named "Aldorado," will range from 200 kilotons to one megaton in size. A megaton is equivalent to one million tons of TNT.

Antioch College bars lifted by deputies

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio (UPI) — Sheriffs deputies again cleared barricades from in front of the administration building of Antioch College Monday and classes were held at the school for the first time since April 20.

About 50 jeering students confronted the deputies, but no injuries nor arrests were reported.

The school was closed by students protesting the school's scholarship policy. Deputies had cleared barricades last Friday in response to a court order obtained by anti-strike students.

Some students slipped into the Antioch Hall through side doors to attend a history class. Other classes were held "sporadically" in the college's ten other buildings, officials said.

School officials, including College Dean Ewell Reagan, entered the administration building earlier by wading past the debris.

About 100 deputies moved past the students and hauled away four dump truck loads of garbage cans, old chairs, filing cabinets and other debris blocking the main entrance to the building.

Antioch public information director Marge Freed said it was impossible to determine how many students and faculty attended classes. "Things are pretty conflicted, as we say here," she said. "It's very difficult to judge. Some faculty members have been holding classes in their homes. When they learned of the trouble at the administration building, they may have continued to meet at home."

Students struck the liberal arts college attended by 1,100 when officials could not guarantee present levels of financial aid for the next four years.

Police hunt Valley man

BURLEY — Burley police are continuing to search for a Wendell man missing since May 21.

According to police officials, Dennis Morton, 28, left for work on the morning of May 21 and has not been seen since that time.

Morton's pickup truck was found parked beside the road about a half-mile east of the Salt Lake interchange of Interstate 15 near Burley on the morning of May 24.

There were no signs of foul play at the pickup, police said. Morton's lunchbox containing his lunch was found in the truck. Laboratory technicians from the Idaho State Police examined the truck, without results.

Burley police have searched the area from the west Burley interchange on Interstate 80 down to the Cassia county line east of the Salt Lake interchange where the truck was found. A search boat has also made several runs on the Snake River without spotting Morton.

According to Morton's wife, he left for work saying "see you tonight."

The Morton's have lived in Wendell for five years. They have a four-year-old son and Mrs. Morton is expecting another child next month.

American pilot killed

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A rocket-laden U.S. reconnaissance spotter plane crashed and burst into flames shortly after takeoff today from Phnom Penh airport. Military sources said its American pilot was killed.

Sources said the pilot jumped or was thrown 10 feet from the twin-engine OV10 spotter plane as soon as it slammed into the ground.

The badly burned pilot, not immediately identified, died of burns shortly afterwards, they said. The cause of the crash was not known.

Witnesses to the crash, the third within a month of an American warplane in Cambodia, said rockets the craft was carrying exploded on impact, spewing white phosphorous and shrapnel into the air.

The sources said the OV10 carried 11 rockets, some of them phosphorous marker missiles and the others equipped with warheads.

Initial reports said the plane crashed away from any dwellings or supply sheds and that there were no other casualties.

At the airport one month ago, a U.S. A7 Corsair jet fighter-bomber crashed into a barracks area near the runway, killing 12 persons and wounding another 20. The pilot of the plane parachuted to safety.

Another Corsair crashed May 24 near the famous Angkor Wat ruins in northwestern Cambodia, killing the pilot.

On the diplomatic front, President Lon Nol's cabinet director, Neang Chin Han, left for Paris on what presidential palace sources said was a mission to explore the possibility of eventual peace talks with exiled Cambodian leftists.

Palace officials said Han's "sounding-out" assignment would include attempts at holding talks with Chin Seng—exiled Prince Norodom Sihanouk's minister in charge of special missions.

Sihanouk, based in Peking, has said he will not participate in negotiations with the Lon Nol regime. But the palace sources pointed out that Han could not be considered an official government emissary even though his mission had the approval of Lon Nol and the country's ruling High Political Council.

The sources pointed out that Han's trip was not officially announced and that he is not a minister and therefore not strictly a member of the Lon Nol government.

Body identified as teen escapee

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — A body found in the Snake River three miles west of Glens Ferry last Tuesday was that of a teen-aged escapee of a New Mexico mental hospital, Elmore County sheriff's officers said Monday.

Officials said fingerprints taken from the body matched with those of John S. Hughes, 17, Albuquerque, N.M., a fugitive from the Los Lunas Mental Hospital in Los Lunas.

N.M. Hughes was the object of a search April 11 when he got away from law enforcement officers in Glens Ferry when questioned by them about a stolen car from Oregon. A search of the area proved unproductive and was called off the next day.

Then his body was found last week. Officers said they believed he drowned in the river.

Nevada man, 32, blazes own trail

JACKPOT, Nev. — Michael (Mike) Simeph, 32, Jackpot, Nev., left here this morning carrying a 35 pound backpack to blaze his own trail to Jarbidge.

The 50 mile trip is through rugged mountain country with no marked trails. He expects to make 15 to 17 miles per day, arriving in Jarbidge Thursday night. Jackpot is at 5,300 feet elevation and Jarbidge is 7,500 feet. Simeph will reach 8,700 foot at the Bighorn Meadow.

Simeph said he takes back pack trips for pleasure. In 1971, he walked 73 miles from East Glacier, Mont. to the Canadian border, by trails and paths rather than through unmarked country as he is doing this year.

On Wednesday, he plans to stop at the Pole Creek ranger station in the Humboldt National forest, his only checkpoint. His compass course is 41 degrees. Simeph weighs 230 pounds and said he expects to lose 20 pounds because of the constant sweating and his diet of dehydrated foods. He carries a total of 35 pounds, 21 of which is dehydrated food. He also has a four pound sleeping bag, a first aid kit, a poncho and enough shirts and underwear for daily changes for wood-bitch control.

He was a Staff Sergeant in the Army for 10 years prior to coming to Jackpot 20 months ago. His home town is San Diego, Calif.

Simeph plans to stay in Jarbidge Friday to recuperate and hitchhike home.

Explosion?

Whether he is representative of a new breed of corporation president or is a lone "maverick," businessman Jay Monroe delivered some interesting comments recently to the New Enterprise Club of the Harvard Business School.

"We have to break with the maximizing-of-efficiency tradition," said Monroe, president of the Tensor Corp. "The concept that all is fair in the pursuit of increased earnings per share is dangerous and simplistic. The whole world could explode."

He clamped down particularly hard on "MBA-type" (master-of-business administration) thinking which, he alleges, equates success with profits.

To Monroe, "success is measured by a company being in a sufficiently good position to be able to innovate." But formalized business tradition, he claims, discourages innovation.

"I am not putting down profit per se," said Monroe. "But there are other things to be derived from a company apart from building profits for stockholders."

As far as stockholders are concerned, "I don't feel any obligation towards them, apart from complying with Securities Exchange Commission regulations as they relate to sales of an initial issue. . . . If they still choose to invest, then that's their business."

"I don't think one owes even that much, however, to the subsequent investors because they didn't invest in the company, they simply bought the stock from somebody else. If they're not satisfied with their investment, they can sell it. They're just in it for the ride."

If it was going to cost, say, 30 cents a share to invest in antipollution equipment, for example, Monroe would advise his stockholders of this, but would also tell them that "they owe it to society to improve the environment."

This kind of corporate thinking is refreshing, and maybe a little courageous.

Not No. 1

Viewer reaction to the Senate's televised Watergate hearings suggests that even the Second Coming would upset a lot of people if it occurred in prime time or interrupted afternoon soap operas.

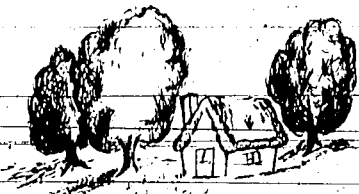

Stations in cities across the nation report that most people writing or calling in have protested the preemption of their favorite programs.

It's true that people are always ready to complain about something they don't like than to praise something they do like. It's also true that a lot of people may simply be fed up with Watergate.

MR. SPECTATOR

New Little Book

ROSES ALONG YOUR PATHWAY

Frank H. Briggs, who has lived in Twin Falls for a long time and also, for a long time, was an advertising department official for the Times-News, has published a book "Roses Along Your Pathway."

The cover drawing of the book is printed in today's Mr. Spectator. Actually, Mr. Briggs has been at this task for more than 50 years. That's when he started saving selections from company and church bulletins, trade journals, fraternal and service club magazines, newspapers and various other sources. Not too long ago he went through the hundreds of "clips" he had saved and selected scores for his "little book." Actually, some of the selections are from his personal writings.

But getting back to the book. It has a preface by Dr. Adele Thompson, dean of women at the College of Southern Idaho and comments from Dr. Ernest H. Ragland, retired superintendent of schools in Twin Falls; Elvis Cain, church worker and president of Cain's Inc., also in Twin Falls, and Dr. John Garrabrandt of Jerome. It should bring readers hours of enjoyment and memories. It's not a book to be read once and put away. It's a book to be read time and again. The selections fit all folks and all times.

Although they will be available at other places in the future, right now they are to be found at Clos Bookstore, Penny-Wise Drug, Crowley's Pharmacy and the Magic Valley Christian Supply. The price is $2.95.

And right here we'd like to mention that Mr. Briggs is donating copies to all hospitals and rest homes in Magic Valley.

ANDREW TULLY

A Fascination For The Horrible

WASHINGTON — Again, poor George McGovern. I expect critics will be "explaining" his disastrous Presidential campaign right up to Election Day 1972. Is it man's fascination for the horrible?

Whatever the lure, few of us in the racket can resist getting in our two-cents worth — or more accurately, under Nixon inflation, our two-bucks worth. Comes now a book by one Walter Karp, "Indispensable Enemies," Saturday Review, $5.95, which says the Democratic Party regulars threw the 1972 election to kill party reform. Columnists are almost as human as people, and so I grabbed Karp's book with unholly glee. I had written practically the same thing BEFORE the Democratic convention, as a prediction, basing my observations on the regulars' private conviction that reform was in the air, that they had little hope of unseating Richard Nixon, and that therefore they had cast McGovern as the fall guy to put a stop to such nonsense.

Since then, the critics' consensus has been that McGovern lost because he was a lousy candidate. But this was only partially true. In the end, he lost because the regulars were determined that he should not win; the regulars were thinking about 1974; not blenk 1972.

As Karp explains, McGovern in effect was little more than a secret "front man" for the bosses, who needed a "fake rebel" to lead a temporarily reformed Democratic Party. They created "this fake, anti-boss candidate to represent the dissident element among Democratic voters" in order to make certain reform would not become permanent. Conceding Nixon's reelection, the bosses arranged matters that the defeat of McGovern would serve their own purposes.

It is hard to argue with Karp's thesis. Aside from the fact I said pretty much the same thing last year, events proved Karp's point.

Despite all the talk about Hubert Humphrey and Scoop Jackson, the bosses never really contested McGovern's nomination at Miami Beach. Indeed, his challenges to the seating of McGovern delegates were designed to expose on television the more unattractive elements of McGovern's support.

As Chicago's Mayor Dick Daley muttered, in fake indignation but in surlitious glee: "How can voters watching these creeps on TV vote on TV vote for McGovern?" To Daley, of course, reform was a wicked six-letter word, employed by raffish hippies in much the same way they mouthed bathroom language.

There is also considerable substance to Karp's charge that far from being a victim, McGovern was a willing front man for the establishment! Karp goes too far when he calls McGovern a "poltroon, a hypocrite, a sheep-in-plastic wolf's clothing." But in fact, as Karp writes, McGovern did romance the bosses after his nomination. By jumping into bed with Daley and Lyndon Johnson, the South-Dakota did, as Karp says, "betray his followers." Scotch insurgency (and) Jettison his reforms. "Toward the end there, McGovern often sounded more like Humphrey than Humphrey did.

McGovern, of course found himself in the pickle served up by the bosses. He finally realized he couldn't win unless he brought the regulars back into the fold; nobody had to tell him that. Gloria Steinem and Abbie Hoffman had no constituency. So he had no choice but to back away from the revolutionaries. That, too, was part of the bosses' game plan. They had to seem to be supporting McGovern so they could pick up the pieces of loyal Democrats.

McGovern's big mistake was that he overdid the revolutionary bit until the eleventh hour. He swallowed the more blatant lunacies of reform whole during the primary campaigns.

Apparently it never occurred to him that he was all those primaries mainly because the revolutionaries had stacked the delegation-selection process as professionally as the Dick Daleys had always done. He failed to notice that he was not collecting the primary votes of Democrats who elect Presidents. He was not a poltroon or a hypocrite; he just couldn't count.

Cheaper Than Oil

ART BUCHWALD

Watergate Day

WASHINGTON — In just a few days, on June 17, the United States will celebrate the first anniversary of the breaking in of the Watergate. A group of patriotic citizens under the leadership of a friend of mine, Julian Stein, are urging President Nixon to declare it a national holiday.

He told me, "The one thing England has that we don't is Guy Fawkes Day. For more than 365 years the British have indulged in all sorts of shenanigans in memory of the man who tried to blow up Parliament in the Gunpowder Plot of 1605. Among other things, they burn Guy Fawkes in effigy, make huge bonfires and set off firecrackers. In further commemoration of the Plot, a formal and ritualistic search of the vaults beneath the houses of Parliament is made each year at the opening of their sessions.

President would review CIA and FBI bands as they marched down Pennsylvania Avenue leading the loyal members of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President.

"In the afternoon the President would lay a wreath at the Watergate complex just under the window of the former headquarters of the Democratic National Committee."

"That would be nice," I said. "In the evening there would be a fireworks display in every town to remind us all of the fireworks the Watergate has caused in this country."

"I get chills just thinking about it," I admitted.

"If the President declares

June 17 a national holiday, you could have "Watergate Day" sales in the department stores with giant savings on burglary tools, shredding machines and lie detectors. And grand juries would only have to work a half day."

"Of course," added Mr. Stein, "the churches would remain open for people who wanted to pray for their country."

"I don't see anything wrong with it," I said. "There's only one question. In England on Guy Fawkes Day, they burn Guy Fawkes in effigy. Who would Americans burn in effigy on 'Watergate Day'?"

"We may have to wait until June 17, 1974, before we figure that one out."

RAY CROMLEY

Short Food?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A worldwide shortage of grain, meat and assorted other foodstuffs will make it exceedingly difficult for President Nixon to bring inflation under steady control in the year just ahead.

Mounting worldwide price inflation in some key raw materials this country must import in increasing amounts — such as petroleum — adds to Mr. Nixon's problems.

These are pressures, it will be noted, which no president can bring under control.

Supply and demand have their ups and downs, making some temporary price slowdowns, or even dips, possible (some experts say quite likely). But the long-range trend is up, and much more sharply than in the historic past, though perhaps not so rapidly as in the last two years.

Last year's worldwide grain failures virtually exhausted reserve stocks. The international crop outlook at this time appears better for this year. But without reserve supplies, the grain-shortage countries are not likely to take chances. This caution, if nothing else, will likely serve to hold prices at high levels.

The world hunger for meat, exemplified by the rapid increases in demand in Japan, the Soviet Union and elsewhere, plus the growing appetite for beef in this country, keeps the heat on the prices for beef, pork, mutton and all protein foods generally. (Thus the increased demand for soy beans, for example.)

The Middle-East countries have learned that by banding together they can get more — and more — for their oil. Add the growing energy scarcities in the United States, and it becomes crystal clear that the driving force in oil and gas prices will be steadily upward through this decade.

Then there is the worldwide pressure among workmen for higher pay. In a growing number of nations wage rates have been moving up with unprecedented speed for the last five to eight years. These increased payments to workmen, however much deserved, will certainly force higher prices for the raw materials this country buys abroad.

This American vulnerability results, of course, from the growing U. S. dependence on overseas sources for a long list of materials. Today, this country imports almost 30 per cent of its oil and gas, a third of its iron ore, 87 per cent of its bauxite and alumina, all of its chromium, two-thirds of its molybdenum, almost all of its manganese, plus major amounts of a range of other raw materials.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Food Travels

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I haven't been feeling like myself since I had upper and lower G.I. X-rays. If it isn't too much bother, could you explain how food and liquid goes through the body? After it goes down your throat, what it enters, and from there on down? — E. K.

After you swallow, food goes first into the esophagus, or gullet, and from there into the stomach. The process of digestion starts even before that — by chewing you chop food into fairly small bits, and your saliva starts the early part of digestion, particularly of starch.

The esophagus conveys your food into the stomach. There your gastric (stomach) juices go to work, and your food is churned into a thick liquid.

When it is ready to continue its trip, the liquefied food moves through the duodenum, which is the exit at the lower part of the stomach, and enters the small intestine. This is where a large proportion of the nutriment is absorbed by the body, although some, particularly sugar, is absorbed in the stomach itself. The small intestine, about 20 feet long, folds back and forth across the abdomen, the food value being extracted as rhythmic contractions move it gradually along.

The upper portion is known as the jejunum, the lower part the ileum, but these terms are useful mainly to physicians, in indicating what portion of the small intestine they mean. Finally, the remainder passes into the large intestine, or colon, or large bowel — all mean the same thing. This is of larger diameter than the small intestine, but only about one-fourth as long.

By this time nearly all the food value has been extracted, leaving the waste matter, water, and various odds and ends of salts or organic materials that cannot be absorbed. Much of this remainder consists of cellulose fibers from fruits and vegetables.

Principal duty of the colon is to remove most of the water, and what is left is known as feces, or stool, which accumulates in the rectum (the lower part of the colon) and finally is expelled through the anus.

There is no reason for your X-rays to bother you afterward, with one exception. Ordinarily the barium mixture, with which the intestinal tract is filled to make it visible on X-ray, passes on through the same way anything else does. It is not absorbed, and you can tell when it is being excreted because of the chalky color.

If bowel action is sluggish, the barium material may become impacted in the rectum, but your doctor can readily determine this, and the material can be easily removed. It doesn't happen to all patients, but does to some, and it is nothing to alarm you.

GOP plans for '74 adjusted in scandal's wake

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Milton R. Young has been a U. S. senator from North Dakota since 1945.

He is the senior Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, and is in the hierarchy of the Agriculture Committee.

He is known in the Capitol as "Mr. Wheat" — a formidable asset in itself for a politician from the Great Plains.

Young has "political clout" by virtue of his seniority. The federal government extracted $423 million in taxes from North Dakota in 1970 — but returned well over $1 billion in federal assistance.

At 75, Young is getting on in years and he faces a tough potential Democratic opponent in former Gov. William L. Guy when he stands for re-election in 1974.

But Young has held elective office continuously since 1924, and never has been defeated for re-election. In seven state-wide elections, he carried every county in the state.

So, ordinarily, Young could expect to breeze through next year. North Dakota voted for Richard Nixon by ever-widening margins in 1960, 1968 and 1972, and Young has been a loyal Nixon supporter in the Senate.

But his re-election calculations were made before the Watergate revelations burst forth and the scandal flared up as a hazard to Republicans everywhere.

When Young went home over the Memorial Day recess, he anticipated there would be questions about Watergate, even though his mail had not been unusually heavy on the topic.

He says he was overwhelmed. "Everybody was talking about it," he said upon his return. "Everybody."

And so this safe Republican has readjusted his campaign plans. He intends to campaign earlier and more intensely. He has never spent more than $50,000 on an election campaign but this time he figures he will be compelled to spend at least three times that. "It'll hurt," he says of the scandal. "It'll hurt the Republican party and to some extent all its candidates and all incumbents, whatever their party."

Small wonder, then, that Republicans have been some of the earliest, loudest and most vehement critics of the people in the White House who dreamed up the Watergate scheme. Even Republicans of the loyal ilk of a Milton Young or a Barry M. Goldwater have spoken out harshly.

They have two reasons to fume: condemning Watergate vigorously may shield them from some of the fallout — and, anyway, they genuinely are angry at what these "ad agency Republicans" have done to their careers. From the start, incumbent Republicans have pointed out that Nixon's two top lieutenants, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman — both employees of the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency — never had been elected to anything. To a politician, winning office is the same sort of litmus test as "having met a payroll" is to a businessman.

The scandal leaves Republican candidates vulnerable both to an anti-Republican turn of public sentiment and to a shortage of the campaign funds that could be useful in offsetting such sentiment.

Republicans save money for 1974 threatens to be short because: The big campaign donor now finds himself regarded publicly as a suspicious figure simply by virtue of his generosity.

Contributors, like other citizens, fume over Watergate — and fume over the uses to which their money was put.

Republicans historically have been more donors than Democrats on numerous small donors — the $100 variety.

Republican incumbents seem agreed that Watergate will hurt them in 1974, but that it is too early to judge 1976's effect.

"It may be forgotten by then, if everyone's in the penitentiary," one senator says.

They can't agree, though, on how deep it will cut Republican margins in the off-year 1974 elections.

Robert W. Packwood, of Oregon, at 40, the youngest Republican in the Senate, thinks incumbents able to establish an identity before Watergate may be sheltered from the fallout.

"It's like the guy who says, 'I hate the medical profession but my doctor's okay,'" Packwood said — hoping that Oregonians in 1974 will recognize his independence from the Nixon White House.

It is an independence that was thrust upon

Packwood, at least in part. In 1972, Packwood went to bat for the administration's bill providing last-resort arbitration to prevent railroad and other transportation industry strikes.

Any form of arbitration is anathema to organized labor. With the election drawing close and with the White House eager to have labor's support or at least its neutrality, the administration reversed its position — leaving Packwood stranded on a limb.

Packwood hasn't forgotten. Like so many of his colleagues in Congress, he shed no tears over the departure of Haldeman and Ehrlichman.

Packwood says new Republicans, running for office for the first time, may turn out to be the chief victims of Watergate. He thinks the scandal even could defeat GOP candidates for local office.

The Watergate revelation may become so widespread that even Democrats could suffer in a ripple of resentment against incumbents, Packwood says.

Another who welcomed the Haldeman-Ehrlichman departures is Sen. William Saxbe, an outspoken Ohioan. "I called them 'Nazis' back in 1969," he says. "They were impossible to get along with."

Saxbe is not expected to seek re-election, for reasons independent of Watergate. He doubts that the Watergate nausen will swing so wide as Packwood fears.

"Every 20 years you get a groundswell of 'vote the rascals out,'" Saxbe told a news conference in April. "But it's not based on something like this ... it's usually something that affects the pocketbook."

Adding to the Republican uneasiness about the political effects of Watergate is the uncertainty about revelations yet to come.

As Young learned in North Dakota, every member of Congress who meets with Scandal leaves GOP candidates vulnerable to both anti-Republican sentiment, lack of campaign funds constituents must expect to be asked what course he would advocate if the evidence points indisputably to Nixon as a conspirator either in the Watergate espionage or in the cover-up.

Senators have an out, of sorts. They can plead that since they would be called upon to be judges in an impeachment proceeding they must maintain a judicious objectivity.

Protecting their own hides, Republicans facing re-election so far have denounced only the people around the President, but stopped short of accusing Nixon of wrongdoing.

Whether they can maintain that posture depends on Watergate disclosures yet to come and how the GOP incumbents assess the impact.

Watergate paralysis gripping some critical federal units

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The impact of the Watergate scandal on policy-making in the top echelons of government is becoming increasingly evident. Some critical areas of the federal bureaucracy are suffering from near-paralysis.

That is the picture that emerges from a survey of conditions in various federal departments and much of the problem can be traced to the White House.

Turned into a sort of "super manager" of the executive branch by President Nixon, the White House apparatus has been stripped of many of its most important operators because of Watergate disclosures and their departure — as well as the President's preoccupation with the scandal — have produced widespread uncertainty in the executive mansion and elsewhere.

For cabinet departments and independent agencies, Watergate has meant reshuffling of top personnel, resignations and extended vacancies at crucial posts in some cases.

By most accounts, middle- and lower-level bureaucrats have been able to take care of routine matters — issuing federal regulations, providing aid to the poor and aged, producing periodic economic reports, processing countless forms and the like.

But it is similarly held that many federal agencies and departments have had to function without much guidance from the front office since the current wave of Watergate revelations and allegations began.

For instance: The Pentagon has operated in effect without a full-time permanent defense secretary for several weeks. Of the 32 top civilian positions there, 16 are vacant, five are occupied by persons awaiting replacement, eight are new to their jobs and only nine are holdovers. —The Health, Education and Welfare Department has several important high level slots unfilled and crucial HEW health insurance proposals have been delayed until fall.

The nation's intelligence gathering community has had to endure a succession of changes in command and remains without entrenched leadership. The FBI has not had a permanent director since J. Edgar Hoover's death 13 months ago and the CIA this year has had three directors, the latest still awaiting Senate confirmation.

The overall situation led Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona, an elder statesman of the Republican party, to observe recently that "we are witnessing a loss of confidence in America's ability to govern." Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla., and other GOP stalwarts have expressed similar fears since then.

At the State Department, operations appear to be normal on the surface, perhaps largely because the administration has had no major foreign crises lately and because it achieved major priorities in foreign policy before the scandal broke open.

However, it has been widely reported that many foreign governments are deeply concerned about the scope of the scandal and it probably is safe to assume that State Department officials have had to give a good deal of their time to efforts to reassure U.S. allies.

On the economic front, it is generally felt that Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz can claim justly that Watergate has not hindered the administration's efforts to slow inflation and reduce unemployment. But some observers question whether these problems have been getting sufficient priority because of Watergate and attribute erratic stock market conditions plus the rise in the price of gold to the scandal's impact. At the Justice Department, Watergate has raised questions about credibility, forced Richard G. Kleindienst to resign as attorney general, and led to William D. Ruckelshaus' appointment as acting FBI director.

Ruckelshaus' departure as head of the Environmental Protection Agency has left the EPA without a permanent director and left underlings wondering about future policies at the agency, although projects already in progress appear to be continuing fairly smoothly.

The Transportation Department has been touched indirectly by Watergate. Undersecretary Egil Krogh, a former White House aide, was forced to resign after it was learned that he had approved plans for the 1971 break-in at Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office. "All we did in the weeks before Krogh finally quit was to work on Watergate," said one Transportation official.

Watergate's impact also may be linked with Nixon's decision following his re-election to ask for resignations from all top-level administrators in the executive branch. At the time, the White House sought to tighten its control over the government bureaucracy in two steps — first, filling some jobs with presidential or campaign aides and then creating a super-Cabinet in which three or four secretaries would supervise all of the departments.

Now several of these persons are gone because of Watergate. Job Stuart Magruder, the deputy campaign manager, resigned as assistant commerce secretary-designate. Then Krogh quit, Gordon Strachan, former liaison between White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman and the Committee to Re-Elect the President, resigned as general counsel of the U.S. Information Agency.

At the White House, Nixon's top two aides, Haldeman and Domestic Affairs Adviser John D. Ehrlichman, resigned. John W. Dean III, counsel to the President, was fired.

Departing earlier were Dwight Chapin, the appointments secretary, and Charles W. Colson, a special counsel — both linked to a general pattern of political espionage and sabotage in the 1972 presidential campaign.

Sen. Ervin rejects Cox's request for postponement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate committee has rejected special prosecutor Archibald Cox's request for a three-month postponement and was prepared today to resume its nationally televised hearings to get at "the truth without further delay" in the political espionage case.

Cox called a news conference Monday to release a letter to Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., the Watergate committee chairman. Cox said the Senate probe presented a "grave danger" to prosecution of the case.

But Ervin promptly rejected the request and said the hearings would resume today with Sally Jackson Harmony, secretary to G. Gordon Liddy, mastermind of the Watergate bugging operation, as lead-off witness.

"We cannot afford the delay incident to awaiting further action by the Department of Justice," Ervin said. "The people of this land are entitled to know the truth without further delay and are entitled to have their government resume its operations in a manner to promote their interest."

Ervin was supported by his colleagues on the seven-member committee. The New York Times reported today that Cox and his special prosecution team have decided to investigate the conduct of Henry E. Petersen, the assistant attorney general who ran the Watergate investigation for nearly a year. President Nixon put Petersen, a Democrat, in complete charge of the investigation last April. Since then he has been succeeded by Cox.

The Times said Cox's team has concluded that Petersen was "at best totally misled by his superiors in the White House. At issue... is whether Mr. Petersen was involved in the cover-up."

Petersen was quoted by the Times as saying: "I did not compromise this investigation with anybody at all. The Times reported that Petersen was 'furious' at the administration's handling of the case and would resign from the Justice Department immediately, except that 'everybody would report that

'another Watergate figure left the government today.'"

Petersen was quoted as saying: "But did I feel the pressure in this case? The answer is yes."

Cox, a Harvard law professor and solicitor general in the Kennedy administration, took on the job of special prosecutor only 10 days ago. He said he was not looking for a fight with the Senate committee but felt the hearings would impede his investigation.

"The continuation of hearings at this time would create grave danger that the full facts about the Watergate case and related matters will never come to light and that those who are guilty of serious wrongdoing will never be brought to justice," Cox said. Cox's request drew strong reaction from other members of the committee.

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., said Cox was being "presumptuous" as a member of the executive branch in making a request to the legislative branch. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., said, "I cannot conceive of Congress becoming a subsidiary for Mr. Cox by bending to his will—well-meaning it might be."

"We should proceed in an orderly fashion," Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., said. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-

Mass., not a committee member, said, however, that "a reasonable amount of time to accommodate Mr. Cox would not be unreasonable."

Cox also told reporters that he would expose "any waffling" to keep him from gaining access to all papers relating to Watergate.

Asked about a White House statement that President Nixon would not release logs of his conversations with ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III about Nixon's own Watergate investigation, Cox replied:

"I have stated before and I would be glad to say it again that I have been assured of access to all papers, I intend to have access to all papers, and if there is any waffling on it, I intend to make the waffling plain."

Attorney General Elliot Richardson said Monday the courts may have to decide whether Nixon gives White House documents to Cox. Richardson said it would be a "great constitutional issue" because the President would have to use private counsel to defend the documents as Cox would be acting as a representative of the Justice Department.

The attorney general added, however, that an accommodation might be worked out because Nixon has expressed a desire to have all the facts in the case made public. Cox also said his dealings with White House Special Counsel Fred J. Buzhardt would be "at arm's length—in the same manner I would deal with opposing counsel."

Buzhardt telephoned Cox last week at Nixon's request to ask him to check the source of a published report that federal prosecutors had obtained sufficient evidence to call Nixon before the Watergate grand jury. At the same time the White House said that Nixon would "not submit" such questioning.

The Senate hearings, which started their sixth day today, have been in recess for a week. The star witness of the first round of hearings was James W. McCord Jr., former CIA agent and the electronics expert on the team that broke into the Democratic offices in the Watergate complex June 17, 1972.

McCord testified and former White House aide John J. Caulfield corroborated that Caulfield had carried to him a White House offer of executive clemency in exchange for keeping quiet about Watergate.

Other witnesses scheduled this week include former Commerce Secretary Maurice

N. Stans, Nixon's campaign finance director; Liddy; Hugh W. Sloan Jr., who said he resigned last summer as treasurer of the Finance Committee to re-elect the President in protest against what he was being asked to do; and Robert Reisinger, former administrative assistant to Jeb Stuart Magruder, the deputy campaign manager who quit in April as assistant commerce secretary designate during Watergate disclosure.

Memos confirm cover

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At 11 p.m. on June 28 six days after the Watergate arrests — Lt. Gen. Vernon A. Walters, deputy director of CIA, was summoned to the White House and told, as Walters recalls it, that "the investigation was leading to a lot of important people and this could get worse."

That, according to a series of memos written by Walters, amounting to a partial diary of events, was the beginning of repeated White House efforts to get both the CIA and the FBI to cover up the Watergate case.

Congressional investigators confirmed Monday that the nine memos were the same documents Walters earlier had furnished three separate committees investigating CIA's role in the case.

The memos show that White House efforts to halt the FBI's Watergate investigation on grounds that this would jeopardize secret CIA operations in Mexico were made despite the fact that Richard Helms, then head of CIA, said from the start that no such security problem existed.

Present at the June 23 meeting, Walters wrote, were John D. Ehrlichman, then President Nixon's chief domestic adviser; H.R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff; and Helms and Walters.

One memo said: "Haldeman said that the 'bugging' affair at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at Watergate Apartments had made a lot of noise and that the Democrats are trying to maximize it. The FBI had been called in and was investigating the matter. The investigation was leading to a lot of important people and this could get worse."

"He asked what the connection with the agency (CIA) was, and the director repeated that there was none. Haldeman said the whole affair was getting embarrassing and it was the President's wish that Walters call on acting director L. Patrick Gray and suggest to him that since the five suspects had been arrested that this should be sufficient and that it was not advantageous to have the inquiry pushed, especially in Mexico, etc."

In a covering memo to senators, Walters retracted his recollection of the phrase "It was the President's wish." He said Helms later "pointed out" to him that Haldeman had not used that phrase but that "the thought was implicit in my mind."

Nixon, press to meet on Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is weighing several possibilities of meeting with the press to discuss Watergate, White House sources said today.

Meanwhile, there were conflicting reports on how long the President's press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, will remain in his job. Some said a talent search for a replacement was going on. Other sources said Nixon continues to hold Ziegler in high esteem and noted that Ziegler has become a much more important adviser to Nixon since top aides H.R.

Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman were forced out by Watergate. Nixon has not held a full question-and-answer news conference since March 15. The bulk of the Watergate allegations affecting the White House did not begin until March 23, when Federal Judge John J. Sirica made public a letter from convicted bugging conspirator James W. McCord charging that persons higher up were involved.

The President has been under pressure from both reporters and politicians to submit to questioning on Watergate in news conferences. Last Sunday, Virginia Gov. Linwood Holton, chairman of the Republican Governors Association, and Robert Strauss, Democratic national chairman, urged this publicly.

Holton said he doubted the President could be called before a grand jury or Senate inquiry, and therefore the proper forum for him to tell his story and be "cross examined" would be a series of news conferences.

One idea put to the President by his staff is an interview with one TV commentator. Another suggestion is that the President be interviewed for one hour by the anchormen of the three main TV networks.

Still another staff suggestion is that Nixon permit five selected White House reporters to question him.

A full-scale news conference was viewed with some uneasiness by aides who fear the cross-examination would be so intense as to sound like a trial.

Ziegler has said that Nixon was considering various forums in which to meet the press "in the near future," but no time has been set. Ziegler's departure for Paris today with Henry A. Kissinger for Vietnam talks appeared to put any Presidential appearance before the press on the back burner—at least for this week.

Ziegler has been under increasing fire from congressmen, columnists and other correspondents as to his credibility on Watergate. He began by denying high White House involvement, then was forced to declare some of his own statements "inoperative."

But he has shown both coolness and resilience under Watergate questioning, and this is a major plus in Nixon's eyes.

Cox investigates 1st investigator

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Times reported today Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has decided to investigate Henry E. Petersen, the assistant attorney general who supervised the original Watergate inquiry for nearly a year.

The Times said Cox and his investigation team were undecided as to whether Petersen was involved in any coverup, but that the investigators had concluded that, at best, Petersen was "totally misled by his superiors in the White House."

Petersen was named by President Nixon to take over "a new investigation" of Watergate last April 17. Before that time, he had supervised the Justice Department's Watergate inquiry.

Petersen denied that he had any involvement with any coverup.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has held up three State Department appointments for the second time. All three men have been associated with U.S. Indochina policy.

Red Cross disaster funds depleted

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Disaster reserve funds of the American Red Cross have been depleted to absolute zero by unprecedented demand, the ARC national chairman said Monday.

Dr. Frank Stanton told the opening session of the ARC's 48th national convention that $33 million was distributed in the past 40 months, primarily to flood victims.

Efforts to reduce federal assistance to disaster victims, dating from the 1964 Alaska earthquake, "has compounded the problem," Stanton said.

A bill signed by President Nixon last April 20 eliminated the 1-per cent interest federal loans with a $5,000 forgiveness feature.

"This wiped out the major recovery resource that had been available to disaster victims without providing an adequate substitute for those disaster victims who could not afford to go further into debt," Stanton said.

Attempts to at least partially restore federal benefits were under way, he said, but the ultimate solution might be "federally subsidized flood or all-risk insurance priced at a level within reach of most families." Frequent and severe disasters already had strained the Red Cross budget while federal help was available in the past nine years, he said.

"I am deeply concerned with the problems of how the Red Cross will finance its disaster relief program," he said. "Several years of severe catastrophes affecting hundreds of thousands of families have reduced our disaster reserves to absolute zero."

Seepage creates slick

GOLETA, Calif. (UPI) — Oil and natural gas welled up from ocean bottom in the Santa Barbara Channel Monday, creating a light oil slick about 4 miles long and 25 yards wide one mile off the coast.

The U.S. Coast Guard and state oil pollution investigators said the natural seepage was occurring off Coal Oil Point several miles north of the scene of a massive oil blowout in January, 1969. Then, a Union Oil offshore drilling platform leaked hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil into the sea and onto beaches.

Officials said the Coal Oil Point area has had a history of oil and gas seepage dating back to the time of the early Spanish explorers, who noted it in their journals.

The slick extends parallel to the Santa Barbara County coastline and is being monitored by both federal and state officials to determine if it will reach the beach or endanger wildlife.

The Coast Guard said the upwelling appeared more vigorous than seepage normally visible in the area—and that bubbles of natural gas were evident.

Representatives of the oil industry have volunteered to send divers under the slick to determine the source, the Coast Guard said.

Drilling in the channel has been prohibited by the federal government since the 1969 blowout.

A thought for the day: American statesman Benjamin Franklin said, "Experience is a dear school, but fools will learn in no other way."

Spacewalk plans told Skylab crew

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's astronauts were told today how to perform a risky spacewalk to cut open a snagged power wing Thursday but NASA ruled out an extension of the planned 28-day mission.

Project director William C. Schneider said a review of the problems and potentials of the earth-orbiting lab "has resulted in the conclusion that there is no justification for any extension of the mission at this time." Officials had considered lengthening it 10 days.

Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz received permission late Monday to proceed with the bold spacewalk. They welcomed the news by saying it would break the monotony of space station life.

Flight director Charles Lewis said the spacewalk was tentatively scheduled to start about noon EDT Thursday and last as long as four hours. He said Kerwin will assist Conrad while Weitz remains inside to monitor Skylab systems.

The astronauts in the meantime turned to more scientific work today. Their schedule included a photographic sweep over the southwest United States, more than 3 1/2 hours of solar observation, plus additional medical tests on how man withstands weightlessness.

The astronauts offered to give up two days off to make up for the experiment time lost by the repair work.

After awakening the astronauts were told that some members of Congress had sent the space agency a congratulatory message for the way the mission of Skylab had been handled so far.

NASA said all spacewalks involve risks because a man only has one spacesuit to protect him from the vacuum of space. Thursday's repair operation is even more hazardous because the pilots have not rehearsed it on the ground. Their handholds are makeshift and they will be moving over a damaged surface.

Conrad, described Schneider as "a pretty smooth and cool cat," will lead the extraordinary attempt to repair Skylab and boost its failing power supply. The extra electricity is needed if Skylab is to be able to support two full 56-day missions later this year.

ABRAHAM BEAME front runner

HERMAN BADILLO contender

Beame, Badillo face vote test

NEW YORK (UPI) — City Comptroller Abraham D. Beame finished first in the Democrat primary Monday but will have to face Rep. Herman Badillo in a runoff to determine who will be the nominee to succeed Mayor John V. Lindsay.

With 99 per cent of the vote counted Beame, 67, a middle-of-the-road party regular, had 203,014 votes or 34 per cent. Badillo, 43, a liberal, received 222,466 or 29 per cent of the vote. The runoff election will be June 20.

To win nomination outright, a candidate needed 40 per cent of the primary vote. The turnout was considered light. Only about 25 per cent of registered Democrats voted.

Another congressman, Rep. Mario Biaggi, came in third and Assemblyman Albert Blumenthal, assistant Democratic leader in Albany, finished last.

On the Republican side, State Sen. John S. Marchi was unopposed for the mayoral nomination. Biaggi, although he lost the Democratic primary, is the Conservative party candidate in the November general election.

If Beame ultimately wins, he would be the city's first Jewish mayor. Badillo, if successful in the runoff and in November, would be the first Puerto Rican mayor of any major city in the country.

Underground broken up in Libya

LONDON (UPI) — A Libyan underground organization opposed to the policies of Libyan leader Muammar Khadafi in seeking union with Egypt has been exposed and many of its members arrested, diplomatic reports said today.

The arrests took place last month near Tripoli. Persons involved were charged with membership in Al-Fabrie Al-Islami, a radical organization that opposed the projected union of Libya with Egypt, the reports said.

Equal fuel split voted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted to require President Nixon to implement within 30 days a strict fuel allocation program to distribute gasoline throughout the nation equitably to small, independent stations and those dealing in major brands.

The Senate also approved a "sense of the Congress" resolution urging the states to lower their speed limits by 10 miles per hour in an effort to conserve fuel.

Both provisions were attached to the fuel allocation bill during debate Monday. The Senate did not give final consideration to the bill Monday.

Originally, the legislation required the President to formulate a "fair" allocation program, but did not call for mandatory implementation.

But amendments offered by Sens. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., would direct the President to put a distribution plan into effect within one month to insure that smaller independent terminals and dealers are equitably supplied by the major oil firms.

The resolution offered by Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., urges the states to reduce speed limits in excess of 50 miles per hour by 10 m.p.h. or to 55 m.p.h., whichever is greater.

"It would have no mandatory effect but calls on each state to take the step in an effort to save gasoline."

Also approved was an amendment by Humphrey and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the bill's floor manager, which would require a strict monitoring of the allocation plan by the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department.

The amendment would require that any meetings between two oil firms on implementation of the fuel act be held in the presence of a representative of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division.

"We're not out to get anyone," Jackson said. "We're only out to get the facts."

The amendment also calls on the FTC to make a study of the structure and corporate practices of the petroleum industry.

The other contenders are believed to be Roy W. Moore, who heads the FBI office in Jackson, Miss.; William A. Sullivan, agent in charge of the Philadelphia office; and Charles Bates, agent in charge of the San Francisco office.

and report its findings to Congress within six months.

Humphrey said the tougher antitrust provisions were necessary "to prevent any backdoor deals to lessen competition."

Another amendment by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would require that priority be given to fuel firms who supply "essential public service agencies."

Also approved by voice vote was an amendment by Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., which would urge the administration to use economy cars for government officials "wherever practical."

Choice 'soon'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson says a permanent FBI director is expected to be named in the near future.

Richardson made his comments after the White House acknowledged that Kansas City, Mo., Police Chief Clarence M. Kelley was under consideration.

Kelley is one of at least four candidates apparently being screened to fill the post that the late J. Edgar Hoover held from its creation in 1924 until his death May 2, 1972.

The other contenders are believed to be Roy W. Moore, who heads the FBI office in Jackson, Miss.; William A. Sullivan, agent in charge of the Philadelphia office; and Charles Bates, agent in charge of the San Francisco office.

Viet clash toll heavy

SAIGON (UPI) — Government spokesmen today reported the bloodiest fighting in South Vietnam since the Jan. 28 cease-fire, a two-day battle 20 miles southwest of Saigon that killed at least 130 persons on both sides. Military sources said the Viet Cong started it by trying to cut off Saigon from its rice supplies.

Clashes along Highway 4, about 50 miles southwest of Saigon, erupted Sunday and continued Monday, government military spokesmen said, involving government battalions from two infantry divisions and four battalions or more from two Viet Cong regiments.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, spokesman for the South Vietnamese command, listed a total of 102 Communists and 26 government soldiers killed and 52 government troopers wounded in the two clashes between the district towns of Cai Lay and Cai Be. There was no count of wounded Viet Cong but the casualty toll of dead and wounded presumably was well over the 200 mark.

Hien said 59 Communists and 26 government soldiers died in the Sunday fighting and that 43 Viet Cong and two government soldiers died in the Monday fighting. Another eight government soldiers were missing.

A well-informed government military source said it is believed the Communists from the Dong Thap 1st Regiment and the 215 Regiment were attempting to cut Highway 4 between the two towns, thus cutting off Saigon from the rice-rich Mekong Delta.

The heaviest single day's death toll previously recorded since the Jan. 28 cease-fire came May 16 near Phu My in Binh Dinh province, along the Central Coast. Fifty-three Communist soldiers died and two government soldiers were wounded in that action, in which the government had artillery support, Hien said.

The battle on Saigon's rice route coincided with a barrage of more than 100 rounds of artillery and mortar shells against government positions less than 30 miles from Saigon. It was described as the closest Communist shelling to Saigon of the entire Vietnam War.

UPI correspondent Kenneth F. England reported from Cu Chi today that the Communist 105 mm guns were believed to be hidden in the Hobo Woods.

TF couple exchanges promises

TWIN FALLS — Jane Lewis became the bride of Kenneth Smith in a ceremony May 10 at the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church.

Rev. Herbert Morris and Rev. Kenneth Davis conducted the double-ring ceremony before two baskets of white crysanthemums mixed with blue baby's breath tied with blue bows and candelabra holding blue candles. The candelabra were trimmed with white crysanthemums and greenery. The altar was decorated with white candles with an open Bible.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Lewis, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smith, Twin Falls.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length satin gown trimmed with rose lace and had a flowing train. The dress had an empire waist line and V-shaped, fitted sleeves. The waist-length veil and headpiece were designed and made by the bride's mother and sister.

She carried a bouquet of blue waxations surrounding a white orchid which was attached to a small white Bible, a gift from the bridegroom. The orchid detached to make a going away corsage.

Joyce Lewis, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Dennis Anlauf, friend of the bride, and Susan Hamilton, cousin of the bride.

Dave Enstman was best man. Bob and Jerry Smith, brothers of the bridegroom, were groomsmen.

The couple was honored at a reception after the ceremony. The three-tiered wedding cake featured a park theme with a miniature bride and bridegroom seated on a park bench adorning the top. The theme was carried through with a fountain surrounded by swans. The cake centered the reception table which was covered with white lace and trimmed with blue bows.

Mrs. Richard Stauber and Mrs. Larry Vickers, cousins of the bride, cut and served the cake. Mrs. Brad Blumer and Dianne Parrott served the punch and coffee. Women of the United Methodist Women's Group assisted with the serving.

Diane Hamilton, cousin of the bride, registered guests, with Michelle Smith, niece of the bridegroom distributing thank-you scrolls.

Marilyn Sutterfield and Carrie Stauber, cousins of the bride, carried gifts which were later opened by the couple.

Special guest was Mrs. Nettie Sutterfield, grandmother of the bride. Other guests attended from Buhl, Ketchum, Boise, Jerome, Pocatello and Idaho Falls; Ogden, Utah, and St. Louis, Mo.

After a wedding trip to the Oregon and California coasts, the couple will reside in Boise, where the bridegroom will attend Boise State College.

The bride was honored at two pre-nuptial showers given by Mrs. David Hofland, Sharon Stahlacker, Sherry Ruberry, Kathy West and Mrs. Alf Job, and by Mrs. Dennis Anlauf, Mrs. Brad Blumer and Joyce Lewis.

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you never do another thing for humanity as long as you live, you should go down in history for taking a stand against prolonging the life of the terminally ill by means of gadgets and tubes. The "Living Will" which permits a person to express his wishes concerning his own fate should be made before recovery was never more needed than it is today.

It is a shame that some of these doctors can't see those patients each day after they are transferred from the hospital to nursing homes to die slowly, and also see the families day by day as they sit helplessly and watch their loved ones go thru the painful slow-dying process. Sometimes the patient is reduced to a vegetable, while the physical, emotional, and financial strain on the family is devastating. I just can't believe that God ever intended that anyone should be put thru this kind of ordeal, or that doctors should practice this type of medicine.

Euthanasia 'sound off'

I write this letter after watching a long drawn out death-in-my-own-family, and I want to say that your letter could do untold good in the prevention of such tragedies. Bless you for publishing information that may start people thinking about the plight of these pitiful old people whose lives are prolonged by tubes, and the families who become destitute during the process.

YOUR FRIEND IN DURHAM, N. C.

A BELIEVER IN BUFFALO

DEAR ABBY: In response to your views on death and dying, as a member of the clergy, I would like to say one thing: AMEN! God love you.
TED S. SPONSEL, Pastor Bayshore Baptist Church, Daly City, Calif.

DEAR ABBY: Dying with dignity is important, but there are greater values. One of our sisters is dying a slow and painful death from cancer. I picked up her Bible to read to her and it fell open to Paul's letter to Colossians where she had marked the passage: "It makes me happy to suffer for you, as I am suffering now, and in my own body to do what I can to make up all that has still to be undergone by Christ for the sake of his body, the Church."
Abby, that sister is doing more for us now by patient suffering than she did even as an outstanding superior and administrator. Suffering can be redemptive. God will give us the strength to bear whatever He permits to happen to us, if we but trust Him.

Real flavor

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — A little pinch of that and a dash of that can add a "something special" flavor to the most everyday type of meal.

But the real key, according to Ethel Diodrichsen, foods specialist at the University of Nebraska, is knowing how to use spices and herbs. And the main rule is to use them sparingly.

One rule of thumb is to add one-fourth teaspoon herbs or spice to four servings of food or to two cups of sauce or to one pound of meat. About one-fourth teaspoon dried herbs is equivalent to one tablespoon fresh herbs.

Miss Diodrichsen said whole spices are best in slow-cooking dishes like stew. She said they should be added at the beginning so the long simmering can extract their full flavor and aroma. The flavor of seeds like poppy and sesame is enhanced by toasting before being used.

A few special care rules should be followed to get the best flavor and aroma from spices.

First of all, she suggested keeping spices in a cool, clean, dry place to prevent evaporation of oils and flavor. Another suggestion: Keep spice containers tightly closed after every use.

She said herbs tend to lose flavor a little faster than spices.

A Lovelier You PATCH FOR ELBOW PUNCTURE

By Mary Sue Miller
Seen Around Town: Elbows that look as broken down as a flat tire.

The elbow takes an enormous amount of abuse and it shows. It's leaned on until it turns blue from the strain.

From contact with dust and grime, the little crevices in the skin deepen and discolor. Owing to the abrasive action of clothes and weather, the surface scuffs and roughens. No wonder elbows look ragged and in need of patching, now in the sleeveless season.

One method of restoring clarity and smoothness actually involves a patch. You apply it at bedtime. But before you do, several steps are necessary. First you cleanse the area with a thick lather of complexion soap. Then, after rinsing and drying, you rub in creamy lotion or scuff remover. This dislodges hard, dry skin and ground-in stains.

Now you are ready for the patch. Two sterile gauze pads are excellent for the purpose. Spread the pads with medicated dry-skin cream and fasten them to your elbows with long strips of pink hair-seal tape. And so to bed.

The special ointments in the cream work while you sleep. In the morning you simply zip off the taped pads. Never fear, taping leaves no mark. What you see are tidier-looking elbows. Keep up the treatment and they soon become entirely see-worthy.

Unless, that is, you constantly lean on them.

Burglary tied with Watergate

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — The FBI is investigating a possible link between the burglary at the Dallas home of Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss last year and the Watergate break-in.

Strauss said Sunday that he had given details of the break-in at his home to the Senate committee investigating Watergate and the U.S. Attorney's office in Washington. He said he also gave a deposition about the incident in a suit filed by the Democratic Party against the committee to re-elect the President.

Strauss told newsmen that his home was broken into by apparent "professionals" shortly before the Democratic convention last July. He said the home was "rifled" but nothing was stolen.

"It was no big deal," said

Strauss, here to attend the National Governors Conference. But he added, "It seems kind of strange that they would break in and not steal anything."

At the time of the Dallas break-in, which occurred about 2 1/2 weeks after the Watergate break-in, Strauss was treasurer of the Democratic party, but he said he kept no financial records in his home.

He said he had no evidence of who might be involved.

Strauss was in Miami Beach attending the Democratic convention at the time of the incident, which he said was reported to police by his children.

Strauss said that until about six weeks ago he did not think anything of the incident. Then his wife, Helen, raised the question of whether it might be connected with the Watergate break-in.

Receives wings

BONNIE Linda Tiburzi, 24, is shown in a cockpit of an aircraft shortly after receiving her wings Monday. She becomes the first female pilot of a major airlines passenger service and has been assigned to American Airline's 727 fleet. She will be based out of New York's LaGuardia Airport. (UPI)

Machinists walk out on airline

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada machinists walked out today at Montreal International Airport, Canada's busiest field, in the second round of a 24-hour rotating strike action against the government-owned airline.

The airline reported that in the first few hours of the strike nine flights had been cancelled. All involved short-range flights to and from New York, Toronto, Ottawa and Quebec city.

"We're expecting a number of delays throughout the day, but we're hoping to minimize them as much as possible," an Air Canada spokesman said.

"We're hoping to keep as close to schedule as possible on long-haul flights."

Air Canada negotiators met again today with a team from the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers (IAM) in a fourth round of talks under the mediation of a federal conciliator, Winnipeg lawyer R.E. Gallagher.

"Hard bargaining" and some progress was reported by the airline in the talks to date.

In a show of force to back their contract demands, the machinists launched a series of rotating day-long strike actions against the airline at airports across the country. The first action Saturday affected Vancouver, Calgary and Edmonton, causing such limited disruption as cancellation of two flights and delays to a series of others.

Air Canada said supervisory personnel were being used to fill the void left by the machinists, who are expected to return to duty at 6 A.M. Tuesday.

The 6,900 IAM membership covers Air Canada's machinists, baggage handlers and ramp crews.

The talks so far have been stymied by such issues as wages, use of parttime employees, promotion practices, work schedules, lay-off procedures and bilingualism questions.

Passenger jets get woman pilot

DALLAS (UPI) — Bonnie Tiburzi got a kiss and a hug and a case of the giggles Monday.

The "half-Italian, half-Swedish" beauty also got her silver flight wings as the first woman pilot who will fly passenger jetliners for a major U.S. airline.

Her shapely 5-foot-7, 126-pound figure was well hidden under a Navy blue uniform but she told it all with a grin that stretched the freckles on her tanned nose and cheeks.

"I don't think you can ignore the fact that I'm a woman. I think people are kind of used to having women in aviation," said the new American Airlines pilot.

"Women fly no differently than men."

First Officer Tiburzi, 24, of Miami, graduated from the airline's 10-week pilot school in Fort Worth, Tex., and will be based at LaGuardia in New York City. She said it would take three years to advance to the co-pilot's seat of a jetliner and 10 years to become a captain.

"I've been waiting for this a long time," Miss Tiburzi said as American Airlines Capt. Ted Melden pinned her flight wings on the front of her blue tunic.

Then pilot kissed pilot and the giggling started.

Miss Tiburzi's father, a former Trans World Airline pilot, taught her to fly when she was 12.

The only thing American had to change, she said, was the uniform. "They took a little in here and a little out there."

Sea area polluted by man

BEIRUT (UPI) — A French environmental expert told a conference on pollution today that the Mediterranean is suffering from "mansickness."

"Demands on the Mediterranean are growing by the day," said Andre Chaudieres, a town planning specialist. "It is expected to satisfy the increasing vital needs of a continuously expanding population."

Chaudieres made his remarks to 1,000 delegates at the opening of the World Inter-Communal Conference for the Protection of the Mediterranean against Pollution.

Chaudieres listed the various causes of pollution of the Mediterranean and warned, "If the peoples of the Mediterranean wish to survive, they will be compelled to find a formula of effective and organized solidarity of action."

Chaudieres said the 18 countries of the Mediterranean should conduct joint research programs "if we want to prevent it from becoming another Dead Sea through the fault of man."

Armond Fruchart, of the Biological and Oceanographic Research Center at Nice, France, followed Chaudieres with a warning that pollution could no longer be ignored.

"Man, in the year 2,000, probably will not die of hunger but of suffocation, for lack of clean air, or of thirst, for lack of pure water."

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you have stayed in the sun too long, don't expect a quick cure for the burn. Relief is possible though.

Ointments, wet compresses and lotions are helpful in treating the sunburn. Lightweight mineral oil soothes. Authorities say caution is necessary when using commercial sunburn medications. Some contain ingredients which may cause allergic skin reactions. See a doctor if pain is excessive. The same, if ointment blistering occurs.

Court upholds rulings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court let stand today lower court rulings that meprobamate, a widely used tranquilizer known by the trade names of Miltown and Equanil, is not patentable.

The Court in a brief order rejected an appeal by Carter-Wallace Inc., which markets Miltown. Carter-Wallace obtained a patent on Miltown in 1955 which expired last November.

The patentability was questioned in a lawsuit for infringement filed in U.S. District Court in New York by the company against the bankruptcy trustee of Davis-Edwards Pharmaceutical Corp.

District Judge John P. Dooling Jr. and the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that meprobamate was chemically obvious as a compound and thus not entitled to patent protection.

Carter-Wallace complained that the courts refused to give any weight to Miltown's tranquilizing property and relied only on its use as a muscle relaxant and anticonvulsant.

But the 2nd circuit said the company had not mentioned the product's use as a tranquilizer when it applied for the patent.

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Murders of four men found riddled with bullets during the weekend were attributed Monday to the vigilante "Death Squad" by the local press.

The bodies were found in three Rio suburbs and one had a sign attached which read,

The "Death Squad" is believed to be formed of policemen who execute petty thieves and criminals instead of submitting them to justice.

TODAY is circus day at the Eller Fairgrounds. At 10 a.m. this morning the William Kay Shrine Circus unveiled its 1973 repertoire for Magic Valley residents. A second performance is scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight.

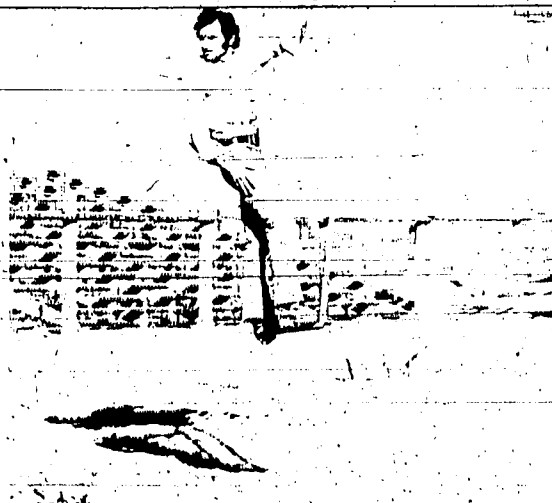

Sponsored by the El Korah Temple Mini-Patrol of Twin Falls and the Magic Valley, the circus features the only caged wild bear act in the world. Famous high wire performer Karl Wallenda, leader of the lately ill-starred Flying Wallendas, is another star of the show.

Kansas coyote caller brings in predators

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Tim Sanders hunkered down in the tall grass and put what looked like a plastic whistle to his lips. Its bleat, uncannily like a human child's cry, soon produced a coyote yoping in from the distance. The fans applauded and the judges at the first Kansas Championship Predator Calling contest unanimously pronounced Sanders the state's best, calling his cries the most realistic of the 12 contestants.

The event was just for sport, but for Sanders, who has spent most of his 32 years herding cattle or studying agricultural economics at Kansas State University, it's often a very serious business.

Kansas has one of the highest concentrations of coyotes in the nation. Ranchers say the animals play havoc with sheep and cattle herds. Coyote calling is one way ranchers keep the predators at bay. Callers like Sanders will be hired to spend a day in the fields making the child-like sound coyotes believe is a wounded rabbit. The animal will be greeted by a shotgun blast when he comes in for the feast.

"It helps a lot in curtailing losses," Sanders said Sunday in an interview. "I use it mostly for sport, but today I went out to two fellows with complaints. I called up two coyotes that were probably killing their sheep. We shot one and the other got away."

Sanders has been calling coyotes since he was 16. He learned the technique from Bob Henderson, a specialist in wildlife damage control at Kansas State's extension office.

The sport has its own peculiar mixture of fear, excitement and humor, Henderson and Sanders said.

"It's just kind of exciting to see a coyote come loping in to you," Sanders said, "especially when you don't see coyotes that often. It's kind of scary at the same time, and funny and exciting. If you're with other people, it's a real kick to watch the expression on their faces. It's a lot of fun."

"But I won't forget the first time I tried it. I called one in to about three feet in front of me. Scared me to death. He went one way and I ran the other."

Proposed water regulations draw fire at Boise hearing

BOISE (UPI) — Only one witness had a kind word to say Monday about proposed new water quality standards for Idaho.

Even he had some bones to pick. Jay Sherlock, speaking on behalf of the Potato Processors of Idaho, said he felt the Department of Environmental and Community Services (DECS) was making a "valiant effort" to improve the water quality standards.

But he suggested some of them be rewritten in the interest of clarity and gave specific illustrations of how they could be confusing.

J. R. Brown, State Springs, speaking for the Associated Industries of Idaho, said the proposed regulations are over-restrictive. He expressed concern about the agency's ability to enforce them.

He also asked that adoption of dissolved gas standards be delayed until studies on the effects on aquatic life are completed.

A. J. Teake, executive secretary of the Idaho Mining Association, said that a state such as Idaho which starts out with a pure level of water is discriminated against. He said it makes future development difficult.

L. N. Barr, Kellogg, representing Sunahine Mine, said the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene River and its tributaries should be reclassified. Without reclassification, Barr said, future production from the area will be limited. Jack Barnette, Boise, speaking for the Idaho Water Users Association, expressed concern about how the proposed regulations might apply to agriculture.

Barnette asked that DECS not adopt the regulations until it fully assesses the economic impact of implementation. He said the taxpayer has no idea of the cost of implementing these regulations.

Implementing these regulations. He also objected to inclusion of all the Bear River Valley and its reaches in recreational waters, saying it is a working basin.

The state winners in national showmanship competition in Lexington, Ky., will give demonstrations.

Newest Nixon aide sees food prices leveling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suggestion that because the current round of inflation started at about the time the government switched from the mandatory Phase II to the voluntary Phase III program that the sky-rocketing prices were a result of the switch in government policy.

Severus, 36, lives in McLean, Va. Prior to joining the council staff in 1970 Severus was an assistant professor of agricultural economics at Oregon State University.

Severus has been a member of the council's staff since 1970.

In a brief appearance before reporters at the White House, Severus said the outlook "is for some expansion of supply" of food during the rest of this year. This, he said, should ease the run-away inflation which has plagued the supermarket check-out counter most of this year.

Severus succeeds Ezra Solomon on the three-member council.

Solomon had been the council's expert on trade and international economic affairs. That specialty apparently will be assumed by Marina V. Whitman, the council member who has been concentrating on food prices and similar consumer-oriented issues.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the council, defended the administration's Phase III wage and price controls. He said the largely voluntary program has been effective, adding he could not accept the

Unspent food stamp funds to treasury

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department said Monday it was returning $180 million in unspent food stamp funds to the Treasury although Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said many millions who ought to be getting either food stamps or commodities are not getting them.

Clynton K. Yeutter, assistant agriculture secretary, told the Senate Nutrition Committee that the money had been appropriated as "a reserve fund in case we ran short" during the 1973 fiscal year ending June 30.

Kennedy, presiding at the hearing, said a committee report on hunger a week ago showed food needs were still widespread.

Yeutter insisted that the Agriculture Department had fully funded the food stamp program's needs.

He said the Department was conducting an aggressive outreach plan to provide more of the poor with the program's benefits.

Participation in food assistance programs has more than doubled from 7 million in 1969 to over 15 million people in 1973, Yeutter said, and said almost 9 million needy children were provided free or reduced price lunches this year.

Under questioning from

Kennedy, Yeutter said that an estimated 1.3 million needy children had still not been reached by the school lunch program.

Idaho meat gains told

BOISE (UPI) — Red meat production in Idaho during April was two per cent of 400,000 pounds below a year ago, the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

Total output was 19.6 million pounds. Beef production was down slightly with 500 fewer head slaughtered than a year earlier. Hog slaughter was 7,900 compared with 10,300 head in April of 1972.

Bureau claim challenged

BOISE (UPI) — The reclamation bureau is telling two different stories to two different parties about who is responsible for publication of a flood report of the Montour area, the chairman of the Montour Flood Committee said Monday.

"The bureau of reclamation is telling Sen. James McClure one story and is telling his constituents in the Montour area another," John Curtis, committee chairman, said.

Curtis said the bureau wrote McClure May 19 that the Soil Conservation Service was responsible for publishing the report. He said the exact work of the letter, signed by then Acting Director W. H. Keating, said "the report which was to have been prepared by the Soil Conservation Service has not been published."

Some of the farmers at the meeting said that the new regulations would ruin what they said was an effective voluntary spraying control program.

Farm organizations across the country have hinted that they will press lawsuits sometime before the deadline for the new regulations to take effect.

Chavez claims UFW harassed

CHICAGO (UPI) — Cesar Chavez, head of the United Farm Workers Union (UFW) which is battling the Teamsters Union for representation of California agricultural workers, said Sunday some of the Teamsters hired Los Angeles motorcycle club members to harass the UFW.

"What the Teamsters are trying to do is not simply take one local from us, but to try to destroy the United Farm Workers Union completely," Chavez told some 600 to 700 people at a rally.

Chavez and Magr. George Higgins, consultant to the U. S. Catholic Bishops Committee, said the motorcycle members have assaulted a Catholic priest, Rev. John Banks, who came to help the UFW.

Higgins said the attack was "absolutely disgraceful and must not go unthought." The continued silence of the Teamsters officials raises the suspicion that they condone these tactics.

When contracts with the UFW and California growers expired last April, the growers signed contracts with the Teamsters Union which reverted to a labor contract system of hiring. UFW contracts required all hiring be done through union halls, which the UFW claimed prevented hiring abuses of farm workers. The union farm workers have been on strike since April.

Chavez called for a the resumption of a grape boycott as well as the lettuce boycott.

"We are experiencing more support today than we had in 1970 at the peak of the grape boycott," Chavez said.

The AFL-CIO recently pledged $1.6 million to aid the strike.

The rally was attended by several Chicago-area labor leaders and representatives who supported the UFW strike.

A UFW spokesman said the union lost 40 per cent of their contracts when 158 contracts expired last April. He said 35 other contracts were to expire in July.

Fighter bombing accident

BANGKOK (UPI) — There have been at least two accidental bombings of Cambodian troops by U.S. F111 fighter-bombers since a civilian and military procedure of reviewing targets for the supersonic planes was dropped, according to information from well-informed sources.

The latest incident occurred last Friday, when bombs from an F111 fell on a government position on Highway 5 north-west of Phnom Penh, killing the wives of three soldiers and wounding 12 Cambodian military personnel.

Cambodian military sources have disclosed that a similar incident took place at a government post north of the capital in early May, although full details were never disclosed.

U.S. military and civilian officials generally decline to discuss operational aspects of the "stepped-up" air war in Cambodia, but it is known that until late April strikes by the F111s were considered "strategic" and reviewed in the same manner as raids proposed for the bigger B52s.

Under this system all targets proposed for the F111s as well as the B52s went before a board of civilian and military officials at the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh for approval on a daily basis. The panel rejected about 40 per cent of the proposed targets before they were forwarded to the U.S. 7th Air Force headquarters at Nakhon Phanom Air Base in northeast Thailand, which rejected approximately another 5 per cent.

On April 28, according to well-informed sources, a decision was made to return control of air operations to a greater extent to the 7th Air Force.

Dr. Utterback retires from Valley schools

School superintendent observes 37 years

By CHARLOTTE BELL, Times-News Writer VALLEY SCHOOL — Attitudes of students and parents reflect the greatest change in education observed by Dr. Tom Utterback, in 37 years of school administration.

Dr. Utterback retired this spring as superintendent of the Valley school system. He has served in that post since 1962.

"The greatest change is in human values and attitudes of students and parents," he said.

"Today's elementary student is larger, healthier, more intelligent, has greater maturity, is more demanding, and has less interest in preparation for high school."

Dr. Utterback said this "knowable maturity" is the result of information carried by various news media, as well as parental influence.

Likewise, secondary students are "an older and more advanced edition of elementary students," he said. They demand their "rights," seek involvement in school administration, and support their peers in areas of protest and unrest, he said.

"They are cohesive in their thinking and general attitudes. They sometimes feel regulations are for other people. They have their own society and groups within this society. There is a definite opposition to accepted conformity," Dr. Utterback said.

"The secondary and elementary student can in many cases be the alter-ego of their parents. What we see of the young people is usually an image of parental action. Sometimes parent criticism of a young adult could be criticism of self," he said.

Parents have become more involved in school planning and administration, and seem to show less cooperation with, and more resentment toward teachers, Dr. Utterback said. This has resulted in weakening the image of authority once held by school principals and superintendents.

Dr. Utterback said he feels there has been advancement in subject, offerings and improvement in general vocational training rather than offering an entirely academic program. This gives students the opportunity to qualify for college or to prepare for a vocation.

"I feel there is a definite overemphasis of athletics in today's high school. The success of a high school seems to be measured by the success of its athletic team. This I do not agree with," Dr. Utterback said.

In keeping with his belief that sports should benefit a person throughout his life, Dr. Utterback was instrumental in introducing a "lifetime sports" program at Valley High School.

Looking ahead, Dr. Utterback sees several changes apparent in education. One trend is toward the "open campus," with attendance not required. He said an open campus for seniors at Valley High School has been successful.

"This permits seniors to leave the school campus or grounds when registration and graduation requirements are met. They are also permitted not to attend any first or sixth period study hall," he said.

He also believes the time is nearing when each school will have a student lounge and that six-week "mini-courses" will be regularly scheduled. Those courses allow students to work at their own speed. Linked to those courses will be open-media centers for students wishing to use them on their own initiative.

Dr. Utterback also believes the time will come when a central school board will regulate all schools on a state level, replacing the local school board. "Under our present system, we have much overlapping of authority, which hinders the operation of a school district," he said.

Dr. Utterback began his career in school administration in 1935 in Missouri, heading a district with a three-teacher high school and a three-teacher elementary school.

Press strikes for rights

ROME (UPI) — Journalists began a 24-hour strike Monday to protest "suffocation of freedom of the press" in Italy. Newspaper reporters and editors, supported by composing-room workers, walked out at 2 p.m. with television newsmen scheduled to follow at midnight. The strike will effectively block out all television news coverage on Tuesday and halt publication of Tuesday morning and afternoon newspapers.

The news blackout comes on the eve of the Christian Democratic party congress, a session that could prove decisive for the country's center-right coalition government.

The strike stemmed from the announcement May 25 that a right-wing magazine publisher had bought a 50 per cent interest in the large circulation daily newspaper Il Messaggero of Rome and Il Secolo XIX of Genoa.

The journalists' unions said the strike was a demonstration "against the suffocation of freedom of the press and the concentration of (newspaper) ownership" in Italy.

A government crisis has resulted from another communications controversy.

A ban by the government on private cable television competing with the state broadcasting corporation, RAI-TV, already has cost Premier Giulio Andreotti the vital support of the Republican party. Political sources said the loss of the 15 Republican votes a week ago seemed to doom Andreotti's minority coalition.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz told the House Ways and Means Committee Monday that he would plunge into the stock market if the law did not forbid public officials from investing.

"I can't explain why the stock market is as bad as it is," he said, taking note of the recent sharp plunge in prices which drove the Dow-Jones industrial average below 900 last week.

"I believe myself there are some bargains galore. I almost wish I weren't in my present position so I could get my hands on some money and invest it."

Private Stemper will be assigned to Germany for two years duty with the U.S. Army in June. He is the son of Mrs. R. E. Stemper, Boise.

U. S. denies intervention

BEIRUT (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy denied reports Monday in a pro-Palestinian newspaper that the United States has threatened to intervene in Lebanon if new clashes break out between the army and Arab guerrillas.

The Beirut daily Al Moharrer cited unidentified Lebanese "official sources" as saying the United States issued the warning in the form of an "ultimatum" last week in an unidentified Arab nation capital.

Officials in that capital "informed Lebanese higher quarters" about it, Al Moharrer said.

U.S. embassy spokesman Boulos Malek described the Al Moharrer report as false.

"The United States did not deliver an ultimatum either to Lebanon or through any other Arab state," he said. "This story has no basis in truth."

Al Moharrer said the U.S. threatened "to intervene directly" if the army-guerrilla clashes resumed in Lebanon "and if some specific Arab quarters supported the guerrillas in a way that endangered the Lebanese situation."

Strikers fired

HANCAGUA, Chile (UPI) — The leftist government Monday fired 65 striking miners who defied an order to end the 47-day walkout at the nationalized El Teniente copper mine.

The dismissal was the first punitive action against the strikers, whose walkout is the longest and costliest labor dispute in President Salvador Allende's 31-month administration.

The government ordered the 15,000 strikers to return to work last week and warned they would be fired if they refused to do so. Strike leaders rejected the ultimatum.

Site of new Idaho Fish and Game department regional office

Survey starts at Jerome site

JEROME — The Idaho Fish and Game Department said Monday a formal groundbreaking ceremony will be held at their new regional office site east of Jerome.

Survey crews with the Fish and Game Department were busy this week surveying the area for the new regional office. Work is also underway for construction of a storage shed and parking area at the rear of the new office.

Construction of the new office is expected to begin after the survey work is completed. Fish and Game officials indicated that a formal opening of the new office will be held with Gov. Cecil Andrus officiating after the office is completed some time in late September or October.

Ullman construction company of Twin Falls was awarded the contract for the construction of the new office, a tri-level design and will accommodate 14 office personnel.

Filer sale set

FILER — A Filer Community Benefit auction sale is scheduled Thursday at 6 p.m. at the Filer City park.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the community swimming pool fund. The pool project is scheduled for completion sometime during the summer, according to Robert S. Ford, publicity chairman.

Donated items for the sale may be taken to the site Thursday, or may be left at 714 Union St. Those having items to be picked up should call 326-4921 or 326-4460, Ford said.

Fixtures, furniture, appliances, tools, cooked food, merchandise and labor will be auctioned by the donated services of Messersmith Auction Service, and Filer Key Club will operate concessions at the sale, Ford said.

Filer bank opens

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — A tree-planting ceremony and open house marked opening of the new Idaho First National Bank in Filer Monday.

Ceremonies began with the planting of a green ash tree at the corner of the bank site on Fair Avenue and Highway 30. Taking part in the planting ceremony were Filer Mayor Dan Knuffman; Thomas C. Frye, Boise, bank president, and Barney Carlson, Filer manager.

A special guest was Mrs. Guy Shearer, Twin Falls, whose late husband had begun his banking career in Filer many years ago. The Idaho First National banks of Twin Falls, Filer and Hazelton, were known as the Fidelity National Banks until their merger three years ago, and Mr. Shearer had served as president and chairman of the board of the Filer and Twin Falls banks. Mrs. Shearer was presented a bouquet of red roses by the Filer bank officials.

Bookstore owner cited

BOISE — Denise Atkins, 39, Boise, owner of the Pussy Cat II, adult book store in Twin Falls, has been arrested in Boise and charged with distributing obscene literature there. She owns and operates an adult bookstore in Boise and charges there are in connection with the alleged violation of the city ordinance prohibiting sale of hard-core pornographic materials.

A court injunction against the Twin Falls store has been modified to allow the store to operate for business so long as hard-core pornographic material is not displayed or offered for sale.

Mrs. Atkins and the operator of the Twin Falls store have filed a complaint in federal court in Boise against Fifth Judicial District Judge Theron Ward and Twin Falls County Prosecutor Robert Galley. The two officials attended a preliminary hearing there last week.

The operators are charging the action of the court to close the store in Twin Falls is unconstitutional. City and county officials arrested the operator and owner in Twin Falls about a week after the store opened, charging them with display and sale of pornographic material.

Judge Ward ordered the establishment closed, but later modified the order to allow it to open for business providing pornographic material was not displayed or distributed.

Galley said his office and city and county officials will check periodically to determine if the Pussy Cat II is operating within terms of the injunction.

Following the preliminary hearing in Federal Court in Boise last week, the court declined to issue a restraining order against Galley and Judge Ward and set June 27 as the date for a hearing before three federal judges in which further arguments will be heard from both sides.

Store damaged

RUPERT — A fire this morning caused extensive damage to a small Rupert grocery store.

The fire was reported at about 5:30 a.m. at Russell's Grocery at the corner of B Street and Highway 25 in Rupert.

The fire, which began in the store's attic, was believed to have been caused by faulty wiring.

The amount of fire and water damage to the store is not yet known.

Reservoir Ranch part of $1.75 million sale

JEROME — Reservoir Land Co., Inc. has acquired substantially all of the outstanding capital stock of Bacon Livestock Inc., including the Reservoir Ranch, in a $1.75 million transaction finalized today.

Clyde R. Bacon, Jerome, and D. L. Berger, San Francisco, Calif., are the principals involved in the transaction with the Clyde R. Bacon family selling the remaining stock to Reservoir Land Co., an Idaho corporation recently formed with Berger as president.

Other investors in the corporation purchasing the stock include Gerwin Woodland, Hagerman, vice president and manager; Tomomi Tsuchitani, San Francisco, secretary-treasurer; and J. C. Hawley and J. P. Murphy, both San Francisco, directors.

The principal asset, the Reservoir Ranch in Jerome County, is one of the oldest continuous operating ranches in southern Idaho and has been owned directly or indirectly by the Bacon family for 60 years.

Clyde R. Bacon said the ranch involves about 2,500 acres of land, 2,000 of which are cultivated and irrigated. He said the ranch has been owned and operated by his family since about 1916 and was acquired by his father, the late T. Clyde Bacon and his grandfather, O. F. Bacon.

The Bacons were running sheep in the area and lambing along the reservoir shore in about 1904 and 1905 when an attempt was made to maintain a storage reservoir for the Jerome farm tract. The plan was given up, however, after two years because of many natural crevices in the land which allowed the storage water to be absorbed.

Bacon said his father and grandfather reasoned the top soil washed into the area while attempts were made to maintain water storage would provide excellent farm land and they acquired the 2,500 acres.

At one time the ranch was a major Idaho sheep producing enterprise. The sheep operation was discontinued in 1964 after reaching a 12,000 head peak.

Bacon said the ranch is currently producing about 400 to 450 acres of potatoes, 400 acres of mixed grain, some 450 to 500 acres of hay and the remainder in corn and grain silage.

Principals of the Reservoir Land Co. are currently active in the ranching business in Hagerman, operating the Bar S Ranch there. The new owners intend to operate the ranch in the same fashion as in the past, emphasizing both farming and cattle activities.

Long range planning includes further improvement and development of the ranch property as a cattle operation.

The sale of the stock was arranged by Western Farm Management Co., Reno, Nev.

South Park gets KEEP

Although public testimony was taken two weeks ago concerning the KEEP annexation, the council heard another round of pro and con discussion Monday night.

Balleisen said, "There seems to be a lack of effort by the city for better development in the South Park area."

He questioned the legality of the zoning to permit the radio tower. Zoning ordinances provide that the "welfare of the people in the area" must be served, he said.

He also questioned the Federal Communications Commission study of the proposed radio station site.

"Independent, unbiased FCC engineers must be brought in for the study," he said.

Balleisen also pointed out possible air trafficway interference by the tower. He said aerial surveillance of a petroleum pipeline in the area might be hindered, as well as flights of crop dusting planes.

John Hepworth, a Buhl attorney, also opposed the KEEP development. He presented the council a petition of objection signed by 75 area residents.

He listed five complaints against the radio tower: the area in question should be strictly residential, the tower will reduce property values, the commercial development will curtail proper use of the surrounding property, the tower may interfere with radio, hi-fi and telephone reception in the area and adjacent athletic fields could place children dangerously close to the "high voltage" tower.

Defense of the project was left to David Enpps, general manager of KEEP.

He read a statement acknowledging KEEP's "obligation" to correct any problems created by the radio station. He said the obligation includes financial responsibility.

"The tower is not dangerous," Enpps said, "except at the base where a burn something like touching a hot stove" might be inflicted. KEEP will build a high fence around the tower for this reason, he said.

Capps also read letters from several residents surrounding KEEP's current station on Blue Lakes Boulevard North. The residents denied any radio interference and in most cases said the station added to the attractiveness of the area.

Capps called on Twin Falls realtor and property appraiser Joe Hackney to describe the effect of a radio station on property values.

Speaking personally, Hackney said he liked to see the tower lights reflecting on his car at night.

The Evergreen and Green Acres subdivisions were constructed near the KEEP station yet sold very well, Hackney said.

After the council vote, Ostyn questioned the legality of the tower construction under zoning laws. The ordinance provides for a "radio station" without mentioning a tower.

City Atty. William Langley said the council, in approving the KEEP request, had "interpreted" the word "station" to include a tower or antennae.

Ketchum firehouse ruled out

By TERRY CAMPBELL
Times-News Writer

KETCHUM — A new Ketchum firehouse, without an accompanying office complex, was ruled out during the Ketchum City Council meeting Monday night.

After reading a letter from the Ketchum Valley Chamber of Commerce, which stated that the membership had voted support for a new firehouse, Mayor Kenneth Richey said, "I would be the first to agree that we need a new firehouse."

However, Richey said, "there is no way the city can afford" a firehouse without a new complex to also house city trucks and the police department.

In other action, the council: — Requested Earl Reeves Answer-All, to submit a contract to furnish answering services to the city at the next meeting for council consideration.

Reeves had earlier requested renewal of a five year franchise, which expires in August. However, city Atty. Robert St. Clair said because of the nature of an answering service business, the city could not grant an exclusive franchise. Reeves' business presently serves the police and fire departments, the city clerk's office, and the dog pound.

— Approved a one-year contract with Sun Valley transfer and storage to house eight Lewis ore wagons with the stipulation that either party could terminate the agreement with reasonable notice.

City Clerk Betty Cotes said the new contract would cost the city $208 a month for storage, based on 20 cents per square foot of floor space. The previous contract, which expired May 31, was based on 15 cents per square foot and cost $156 per month, she said.

The ore wagons were gift deeded to the city by Palmer G. Lewis, with the provision that they be properly housed.

— Moved that the city attorney draw up a $30,000 tax anticipation note.

— Approved a variance for C. E. Atkinson, Spruce Street, to construct a garage and den sixteen feet from the property line.

— Approved the plat plan, contingent on the city engineer's signature, for the Wood River Racquet Club, Williams Street. The plat included conversion of existing apartments into condominiums; an outdoor living area, and a volleyball court.

— Approved a variance by Ned Loomis to construct a tennis court at the Racquet Club with the stipulation that wind screening, which would impair vision along the street, would not be allowed.

— Adopted the city Planning and Zoning Commission's recommendation not to approve a variance request by Gordon Pogorelec to construct a six foot fence within 30 feet of the Warm Springs Road.

Hearing scheduled

GOODING — Preliminary hearing is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Thursday for William Trowbridge, Wendell, on charges of receiving stolen property.

Trowbridge is free on $2,500 bond after being arrested in connection with receipt of stolen cattle his brother, James Trowbridge, 26, Shoshone, allegedly stole.

Bond of $10,000 was posted Monday for James Trowbridge, who has been held in the Lincoln County Jail, Shoshone, on charge of grand larceny. He was hired by the Star Lake Cattlemen's Association as a range rider.

Final arraignment for James Trowbridge will be announced, pending agreement of the prosecutor and public defender.

Study funds

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — The College of Southern Idaho has received notification of work-study funds for the 1973-74 school year.

Sen. James A. McClure Monday announced that more than 2,000 Idaho students in nine different institutions are scheduled to receive funds totaling $929,818.

CSI is scheduled to receive $158,241 for 341 students. This is less than the amount received this past year, according to Jerry Meyerhoffer, director of admissions.

Gasoline prices jump

Sam Thomas, owner of the Sam Thomas Chevron station at 465 Addison Ave. W., said he had increased his gasoline prices only one penny in the last year. He said he had not had a tankwagon price hike in that time. Thomas said his station has not had to shorten its hours or close certain days to conserve gas.

Howard Nielsen, lessee of Howard's Conoco, 911-Blue Lakes Blvd. N., said the 2 cent increase in his prices during the last three months was necessary "to conserve gas." He said he had not shortened his hours, nor had he had an increase in tankwagon prices.

Roy Marcellus, co-owner of Butch and Roy's Arco Service Center, 1301 Kimberly Road, said his three cent price increase in the last three months was mainly a result on increased tankwagon prices.

"Whatever they raise, we raise," he said. He said he was on a quota of less than 70 per cent of what he pumped last year. He said all customers had been put on a 10-gallon maximum delivery.

Asked if he knew if bootleg gas was coming into Twin Falls as rumored, Marcellus said he didn't know of any, but "I wish I could find some."

Jerry Clark, co-lessee of Larry and Jerry's Lynwood 76 Service, 509 Blue Lakes Blvd., N., said he had raised his prices one cent in the last three months. Further price increases would probably be forthcoming, he added, since his tankwagon prices went up the first of this month.

Clark said he didn't know how much the tankwagon increase was yet since he had not been billed. "Whatever it is, it's too damn much," he said.

Clark said he was on an allocation of 80 per cent of his last year's monthly sales. He said he had not yet shortened his hours. "As long as we've got it, it's for sale," he said. "A guy can understand you being closed if you're out of gas, but he can't understand you selling him five gallons."

Keith Harrell, foreman, Eastside Texaco, 1310 Addison Ave. E., said the station's prices have gone up two cents since the company put it on allocation sometime in the last three months. Harrell said the station was now closing Sundays to conserve gasoline. "If you run out, that's it folks, and it's getting a little tighter."

The station has also shortened its hours and shut down its self-service pumps entirely, Harrell said. He said he didn't know if there had been a recent increase in tankwagon prices.

Jerome club sets 55th observance

JEROME — The Canyonside Club will observe its 55th anniversary on 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Canyonside Hall.

The Canyonside Community Club was first organized in 1918, with 10 charter members, according to Mrs. Leo Burks, club secretary. Charter members included Mrs. Anna Adams, who was the club's first president; Mrs. Clara Brayton, Mrs. Elnora Buck, Mrs. Louise Burk, Mrs. Margaret Haggitt, Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, Mrs. Deborah McCabe, Mrs. Edna O'Harrow, Mrs. Margaret Thurgood and Mrs. Lulu Reil.

In 1919, membership in the club was increased from the 10 charter members to 20. White and gold were chosen as the club's colors and its flower was the rose.

The first name for the club was Home Science Club, then Southside Country Club. In 1923 the club adopted its present name, Canyonside Community Club.

Early records of the club show a great variety of programs including readings and musical selections by members of the club and roll call, which is still conducted at their regular meetings. Topics were varied, but the one used most often was "Labor Saving Devices for the Home."

From its beginning, the club has contributed to the needs of the community. For many years the club packed barrels of fruit for the Boise Children's Home until they could not accept them any more because of health and safety regulations. Today the club actively supports with contributions the Cancer Fund, American Red Cross, Girl's State and Boy's State, Crippled Children's Fund plus many other worthy causes. The club raises its funds mainly by operating a chuckwagon at the different farm auctions held in the valley.

The club became associated with the state extension service in 1938 and one meeting each month since that time has been given to those programs. Also the club and its members are very active in the Jerome County Fair, taking many honors for their outstanding work.

Members of the club when it was first organized met in the homes of different club members each meeting. Today the club also has its own meeting hall, the Canyonside Grange Hall. The hall was donated to the club by the Canyonside Grange.

In 1968 when the old Canyonside School was sold, the club bid on the grange hall which was located on the same property and obtained it with a $400 bid. While most of the regular meetings are still held in the homes of the hall is used for different functions of the club such as the yearly potluck and card party the women hold for their husband.

Mrs. Burks said the 55th Anniversary will be celebrated with a tea followed by entertainment. She noted that all the old members of the club plus the present members are welcome to attend.

Recall plans resubmitted

BOISE (UPI) A group seeking the recall of Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, resubmitted recall petitions on Monday, rejuvenating the movement believed to have died last week on a technicality.

Secretary of State Pete T. Conrussa said the petitioners arrived at his office at 5:05 p.m. with the petitions. He said the petitions were date stamped and lodged but not examined.

"We'll look at them in the morning. In all likelihood, we will ask the Attorney General for legal counsel," he said.

The recall movement was assumed dead when 2,230 of the 2,559 signatures submitted on the petitions last Wednesday were scratched because they failed to include the post office address as required by law.

Conrussa said he assumed some of the petitions were from the batch submitted last week.

"At the time those names were submitted, those names were stricken. But they would have come in again," he said.

"It would be something for the Attorney General to analyze for the legality of it, whether this is a new filing or not."

Stanley D. Crow, Boise, attorney for the petitioners preceded the Pocatello group to the Secretary of State's office when they were delayed in arrival at the Boise airport.

Miss McDermott, in a telephone interview Monday night said: "We have absolute evidence they did not acquire 2,100 new signatures during the week."

"The only way they could have filed new petitions in sufficient number is to supply their own information after some of the signatures," she said.

"She said she will be consulting with her attorney."

"The people purporting to be recallers have accused me of being above the law. I don't believe in a double standard and am going to insist that the law be followed," she said.

The petitioners seek the recall of Miss McDermott in part because of their vote in favor of ratification of the women's rights amendment.

Social service program backing urged by Andrus

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus Monday told a national governors conference committee that most social services programs operate "after the fact."

Andrus, vice chairman of the conference committee on Human Resources, urged the governors to work for the passage of new federal legislation to aid states in improving the delivery of social services.

He said that because of federal restrictions placed on the programs it is no longer possible to operate the programs in such a way as to prevent the entrance of additional persons onto public welfare rolls.

Andrus said that as a result of extreme cutbacks in federal social service program spending, as well as new restrictive regulations, there is often little chance that such programs will have much of an effect by the time many persons become eligible for social services.

The Human Resources Committee later approved a policy statement submitted by Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia calling for the governors to actively support new legislation which will again make it possible for a state to assist individuals before they are placed on state welfare rolls.

At a meeting of the committee Sunday, Andrus and two other governors engaged in an exchange with assistant secretary of labor for manpower, William Kolberg.

Andrus maintained that new guidelines proposed for the administration of Manpower program funding the state governments will be bypassed in terms of authority and funding.

Andrus said the bypass of state governments will occur despite the fact that many states are charged with the responsibility of developing and coordinating a statewide plan.

"Where will the state's responsibility be if a city deals directly with the federal government? The state will be held responsible for a program which it does not administer. This hardly seems fair," Andrus said.

remarks aimed at Kolberg were Human Resources Committee Chairman Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, R-N.Y., and Gov. Dale Bumpers, D-Arkansas.

Kolberg told the committee the new guidelines will enable states or counties of 100,000 or greater population to enter into contracts with the federal government for Manpower funding.

"Who would be the responsible party if three counties and four cities around a 100,000 person population unit wanted to see a plan carried out directly with the federal government?" Andrus asked.

Kolberg said the local unit would have to work such a dilemma out among themselves.

"If the state is to develop a coordinated, statewide plan for the administration of Manpower funding, then the state must have final approval over all Manpower plans within the state," said Andrus.

Kolberg insisted that the new guidelines would not give governors such coordinating authority.

Governors avoid gambling tables during national meet

STATELINE, Nev. (UPI) — Gambling, the life-blood of Nevada's economy, is lucky it doesn't have to depend on the nation's governors.

In fact, governors here are avoiding the 21 and dice tables almost as often as they dodge questions about Watergate.

The National Governors Conference opened here Sunday in the Sahara Tahoe Hotel and receipts from the gambling tables dropped 30 per cent.

Occasionally a governor can be seen wagering one or two silver dollars but none is leaving this Lake Tahoe resort accused of being a "high roller."

"This may help the state of Nevada, but it doesn't help us here," says one 21 dealer named Mary Ann.

Another card dealer, Sherry said, "One governor sat down last night, played for a while and lost $3. When they closed down the hotel to everyone but the conference, that leaves you pretty much with just the conference people, which means the press and the cops."

Steve, who makes change for slot machine play, said he expected some of the governors and their wives pulling the handles on the "one armed bandit."

"I thought they might sneak up and play some of the slots but I haven't seen any. They must be playing it straight," he said.

Besides the gambling play dropping, the bar business also declined, according to hotel sources. But this apparently doesn't worry the officials of the hotel which is owned by the Del Webb Corporation.

"We didn't bring them (the governors) in here for gambling," said Tom Atchley, public relations executive for the hotel. "It was a prestige event."

until Wednesday when the conference ends.

The heavy players are also being discouraged, according to the spokesman, because of the heavy security. He explained, "Gamblers don't like a lot of fuzz around. They are particularly worried about the tax men."

There are exceptions to every rule. A member of the Oklahoma official party, a trucking executive, won $15,000 at the tables after a near all-night fling.

Of course, he hasn't got home yet, and the cusion is waiting with open arms hoping he will run into the law of averages this time.

Contract codes not contested

POCATELLO (UPI) — Attorneys for Pocatello School District 25 in Sixth District Court Monday did not contest codes for contract negotiations.

The district previously contested teacher contracts disputes ought to be treated as labor matters rather than education codes.

The district waived action on codes and instead asked for outright dismissal of the case in which the district is to show cause why preliminary injunction should not be granted against its issuing 1974 teacher contracts before teacher administration negotiations are complete.

Judge Arthur Oliver instructed Robert Huntley, Pocatello Education Association attorney, to file a brief in a dismissal action.

Huntley said he expected to file a brief Tuesday and the case probably will be decided Friday in a written decision by the judge.

If Oliver dismisses the case, Huntley said the teacher contracts will be issued. If not, the district must appear at the show-cause hearing which has been postponed pending the outcome of the dismissal ruling.

Nastase posts victory to gain French finals

PARIS (UPI) — Ilio Nastase of Romania and Nikkii Pille of Yugoslavia scored straight set victories Monday to set up an East European men's singles final in the $133,000 French Open tennis tournament.

Nastase dined Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash., 6-3, 6-4, 6-1 in a one-sided contest, while the unseeded Pille, a 33-year-old veteran, gave one of his best performances to upset favored Adriano Panatta of Italy 6-4, 6-3, 6-2 to reach his first major tournament final.

Nastase, 27, broke Gorman's service eight times in the match and lost his only twice. The Romanian mixed drop shots and mid-court volleys to control the pace of the game.

Gorman looked dangerous only in the second set. Down 1-4 games, the American swept the next three when Nastase's strategy of slowing play to force errors backfired.

But Nastase, the 1972 U.S. open winner, quickly corrected his miscalculation and came back to win the set 6-4.

Gorman, who hit as many as five balls long in a single game could never make the long road back. His only game in the final set came with the help of a questionable line call.

The Pille-Panatta encounter started as a tight match with both players holding their perches on booming serves. But with Pille leading 4-4, Panatta suddenly faltered, making two unforced errors to drop his service and the set.

With Pille leading 4-3 games in the second, a dispirited Panatta faltered again, double-faulting once and sending an easy return into the net. Pille served out with a love game to take the set.

Then came a complete collapse for the eighth-seeded Panatta, who had eliminated Sweden's 16-year-old sensation Bjorn Borg on his way to the semi-finals. On his serve, Panatta hit two backhands into the net and missed a smash to give Pille a 3-2 lead. A long deuce game that saw two disputed line calls, went to Pille and from there the Yugoslav took two five-games to finish out.

This will be the third time since 1970 that Eastern European players have dominated the French finals. In 1970, Kodes defeated Zeljko Franulovic, Yugoslavia, and then beat Nastase the following year.

Pille competed in the French tournament despite being suspended by his national tennis federation for not playing on the Yugoslav Davis Cup team. The International Lawn Tennis Federation (ITF) allowed Pille to play by voting to take no action on the suspension which normally excludes a player from international events.

The women's singles crown went to Australia's Margaret Court, who won a close match with 18-year-old Christ Evert, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., 6-7 7-6, 6-4 on Sunday.

Two racers vie for world honor

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — The race for the world drivers' championship has come down to a straight fight between Scotsman Jackie Stewart and Brazil's Emerson Fittipaldi.

Stewart Sunday won his second consecutive formula one event when he drove his Tyrrell to victory in the Monaco Grand Prix. His edge of 1.3 seconds over the John Player Special (JPS) of Fittipaldi indicated how close the battle has become.

Stewart, twice the world champion, is now only four points behind the Brazilian, who currently holds the title. Between them they have won all six Grand Prix held this year. Nine more events remain on the championship calendar.

Stewart won the 158.3 mile race in one hour, 57 minutes, 44.3 seconds at an average speed of 80.9 M. P. H. But Fittipaldi established the lap record for the new modified two-mile course in one minute, 28.1 seconds (81.1 M. P. H.).

It was a landmark victory for the small Scot. It allowed him to equal the outright record of Jim Clark of Scotland with 25 grand Prix wins in a career.

Stewart led from the eighth lap and kept Fittipaldi a regular 11 seconds behind until the last four of the 78 laps. Then the Brazilian put on the heat and closed to 1.3 seconds.

"I let up at the end to be sure to win," Stewart said. Said Fittipaldi: "Stewart deserves to win but the race would have been more interesting perhaps if there had been five more laps."

Third place went to Ronnie Peterson of Sweden whose JPS was plagued throughout by fuel pressure problems which denied him the chance of getting on terms with the leaders, who eventually lapped him and the rest of the field.

Only 10 of the 25 starters finished the punishing round-the-houses race in the center of Monte Carlo, with fourth place going to Frenchman Francois Cevert in a second Tyrrell, and fifth spot to the McLaren of New Yorker Peter Revson, who showed no ill effects from last week's Indianapolis smash.

Americans survive matches

PORTRICAWL, Wales (UPI) — Ed Tutwiler and Dale Morey, two of the three former American Walker Cup Internationals in the British Amateur Championship at Portcawl, survived the first hurdles today.

Tutwiler, from Indianapolis, beat Joel Hirsch, from Holmwood, Ill., 2 and 1.

Morey, from High Point, N.C., had to work hard for his victory, being taken to the 20th by Frank Kaminski of Delaware Water Gap, Pa.

The third Walker Cup man, Dick Sidorow, from Easton, Conn., received a first round bye and goes into action in the second round against England's Peter Hedges on Tuesday.

Of the 29 Americans in action, 11 moved through for the next round.

First American out was 47-year-old Miami Caroling Dinkler Jr. who crashed out 8 and 6 to teenager John Downie from Northumberland. Dinkler, winner of the U.S. Southern Amateur title in 1950, made a bad start by playing the wrong ball at the first and never won a hole.

Two Americans making their first appearance in Britain were soon knocked out. Bill Schappa, 55-year-old New Jersey textile sales director found Charlie Green of Scotland in top form and was whipped 5 and 4.

Weiskopf advances on list

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf and Lanny Wadkins have become the fourth and fifth golfers on the PGA tour to surpass $100,000 this year.

Weiskopf, winner of the Kemper Open, moved from fifth to fourth place on the money list, picking up $40,000 in the Kemper for a year's total of $121,822.

Wadkins, finishing second to Weiskopf, brought his earnings to $114,522. In 1972, when he was rookie of the year, Lanny won $116,616.

Jack Nicklaus, who skipped the Kemper, is still on top of the list with $176,064, followed by Bruce Crampton, $167,938 and Lee Trevino, $146,178.

Pele scores for Brazil

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fabled soccer millionaire Pele scored a goal and assisted on another Sunday as the touring Santos football club of Brazil beat seven-time Mexican national champion Guadalajara 2-1.

A crowd of 16,984 at the Los Angeles Coliseum watched the Brazilians run their two-week U.S. tour record to 5-0.

Gordie Howe may become first father to play with sons on major league team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gordie Howe has never heard of such a thing happening before.

Neither, for that matter, has anyone else.

Nobody can remember a father ever playing on the same major league team with his two sons, so it is entirely likely that 45-year-old Gordie Howe will become the first man ever to have that distinction if present negotiations work out with the Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association.

In the event they do, Gordie Howe, the most prolific scorer in all hockey history during his 25 years with the Detroit Red Wings, but working for them only in an executive capacity the past two years now, will play on the same line for Houston next season as his two boys, Marty, 19, and Mark, 18.

"But there are many, many things to be considered before it can happen," says Howe. "We're thinking about mother, too, how she would have to be appointed from our home in Michigan, and how this would affect our other boy, Murray, who's 12. Right now, I'd say there's a good chance that Marty and Mark may go with Houston, but as for myself, I still don't know. A number of things have to be ironed out."

Should Howe decide to go with the Aeros, he'll be the second NHL superstar to move over to the WHA.

The first one was Bobby Hull, 34-year-old former Chicago Black Hawks winger, who had a big year for the Winnipeg Jets after they gave him better than $2 million to make the jump. He had 51 goals and 52 assists for 103 points and made the all-league team in a breeze.

"I was very happy for him," says Gordie Howe, "but what he did has absolutely nothing to do with my thought of coming back. For me, the whole thing started as a dream. Maybe you'd call it a pipe-dream."

"Anyway, about five years ago, when Marty and Mark started showing promise and I was still playing with Detroit, a lotta people and well-wishers said to me 'do you think you can hang on long enough to play with the boys?' I told them I didn't know.

"I started me thinking, though. I figured by the time they'd be available for the draft, I'd be 47 years old, and they'd both have to be drafted by Detroit anyway. I knew that was extremely unlikely, so I just put the whole thing away, like I say, as some kind of pipe dream."

A year later, however, something happened to get Gordie Howe thinking positively again.

An exhibition game was arranged in which a team made up of himself, his brother, Bern, his two older boys, Marty and Mark, and his youngest one, Murray, only eight years old then, were to go against the Red Wings.

"The five of us looked like a bunch of Indians — you know, Howe, Howe, Howe, Howe," says Howe, "I was the six-foot, 205-pound six-time MVP. "The Red Wings went only half speed against us, just the way I like. We tied 'em, 5-5, I think."

Since his retirement as an active performer following the 1970-71 season, Howe has been serving as a vice-president with the Red Wings. The job is all right, he's "not totally happy."

"I'm in a little bit of everything and not in a lot of it," says Gordie Howe, a man used to being in the thick of it all. "I just hope they don't think I'm turning my back on Detroit. I have a great deal of admiration for Bruce Norris, Jim Bishop and many of the people with the organization."

Mark and Marty Howe both played with the Toronto Marlboros, this past season and Mark, voted MVP in the recently concluded Memorial Cup championships, is said by some to be the best looking hockey prospect since Bobby Orr.

"Don't ask me about that," says Gordie Howe. "I'm biased about both my boys."

Naturally, Mark and Marty Howe are more excited about playing big league hockey than their Dad is. He's done it already for 25 years with Detroit.

But Gordie Howe has no doubt he can do it again.

The Houston people asked him what he thought about playing only half the Aeros' games next season.

"If I sign," he told them, "I'd like to play them all."

George Foreman agrees to bout

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — World heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman has agreed to make his first title defense with a bout Sept. 1 in Tokyo against 10th-ranking Joe "King" Roman of Puerto Rico.

Roman is rated the No. 10 contender by the World Boxing Council (WBC) whose sanction will be needed for the title bout.

Plans for the fight were formally announced in Tokyo by the Nippon Education Television Co. and Foreman had a news conference scheduled a few hours later Monday in San Francisco, but the conference was abruptly called off with the explanation that principals from abroad were unable to attend.

A Foreman spokesman said the Tokyo announcement was "a bit premature" because the WBC had not yet advised Foreman of its sanction. However, the spokesman said, "I don't see any problem."

According to the spokesman, Foreman had advised the Japanese of his willingness to meet any of several contenders whose schedules might permit an early match — Ken Norton, Larry Middleton, Jose Urtaola and Joe Bugner — as well as Roman.

That Roman is only 10th rated shouldn't take away any drama from the fight, the spokesman said. After all, he said, nobody gave Ken Norton

"a shadow of a chance" to beat Muhammad Ali, and nobody gave Foreman himself a chance against former champion Joe Frazier.

In Tokyo, promoter Muneo Mizoguchi said he signed a contract with Foreman's manager, Dick Sattler, May 25 in Foreman's home in Hayward, Calif.

The match will be the first world heavyweight title bout in Japan. It will be held in the 15,000-seat Nippon Budokan Hall at noon Tokyo time (11 p.m. EDT) on Aug. 31 for television showing via satellite.

On the same card WBC junior lightweight champion Ricardo Arrendondo of Mexico is scheduled to defend his title against Japan's Morito Kashiwaba, the sixth-ranking lightweight.

Both promoter Mizoguchi and the Foreman spokesman declined to answer specific questions such as whether Foreman would get a $1 million purse. Mizoguchi said $2 million has been earmarked for all expenses, including the purses for the two world title matches.

Although the Japanese Boxing Commission has a rule prohibiting a match between two foreigners, a commission official said the Foreman-Roman bout would be approved anyway on grounds that it would promote boxing interest in Japan.

Carlos Monzon may retire from boxing

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — After successfully defending his middleweight world boxing title for the sixth time, Argentina's Carlos Monzon says he may retire from the ring with his crown intact.

"I was so tired at the end, I am not really sure that I will fight again," said the 31-year-old Argentinian after his unanimous decision against New Yorker Emile Griffith Saturday night.

"If I do fight anybody it will be against Jean-Claude Bouttier here in September. But I am not sure, I will have to wait and see."

Monzon did say, however, that he would not fight Australia's up-and-coming middleweight champion, Tony Mundine. "It is very, very unlikely that I will fight Mundine," he said.

Monzon, now 31, admitted he had trouble getting down to the 160 pound weight limit. He had to go on a strict diet which appeared to sap his strength in the middle of the fight and he was lucky that he was not fighting a younger man than the 35-year-old Griffith.

It was only at the end of the fight that Monzon made sure of retaining his title when Griffith began to tire.

Griffith said he was astonished that he lost the fight.

"I thought that for the first 10 rounds I had a clear decision and I expected to be declared the winner."

"The only thing that floored me was the decision," he said.

Monzon first won the title from Italy's Nino Benvenuti in 1970. His first defense was against the Italian here and then he knocked out Griffith, American Denny Moyer, Frenchman Jean-Claude Bouttier and Denmark's Tom Boggs over the next two years.

In November, 1972, he had to go the full distance before outpointing American Bonny Briscoe.

Booming Idaho water traffic brings increased safety need

Idaho has over 30,000 numbered boat owners (31,456 in 1971) and more clean, cool water for recreational use than any state in the Intermountain West. Responsibility for the safety of all water-based recreationalists depends largely on their own conduct and that of their passengers.

With over 10 million pleasure watercraft in every bay, river, gulf, estuary and lake around the United States, boating, tacking, trimming, roaring, racing, cruising, catapulating, smoking, sinking, flaming, becalmed, on sandbars, towed, dead, out of control, and at least one skipper throwing out the anchor without securing the end of the line, boating is a billion-dollar business.

It is big and getting bigger.

There is one thing wrong with it — boating, like other outdoor recreations, attracts a few idiots. In Idaho, enforcement is the responsibility of county sheriffs, in cooperation with state law enforcement. The law provides authority to stop and board any watercraft in the state.

Since the increase in boating activity has been so rapid, and more people of "limited" experience in the operation of boats and equipment are using Idaho lakes and rivers, added emphasis must be placed on enforcement of regulations concerning safety and registration.

Public safety requires that the operator of a boat observe courtesy and common sense in the use of his craft. The most common causes of death, injury and property damage are those which could have been eliminated if the person operating the vessel had observed basic safety precautions. Collision with another vessel is the cause of most accidents in the United States, according to the Coast Guard, followed by capsizing, falls overboard, collision with fixed object, fire or explosion of fuel and grounding.

Among the leading factors in any water safety program are boat capacity and load. Most boats show the recommended maximum horsepower and load, in pounds. This means that boat and motor must be balanced. An underpowered boat will be sluggish and an overpowered boat will be tricky to handle and may lead to trouble afloat. Local marine dealers should be able to figure the maximum horsepower and load capacity for any boat which does not carry a plate giving this information.

Following is the minimum safety equipment required under Idaho law for motorboats under 16 feet (Class A), and for motorboats 6-26 (Class D). Outboards must carry a lifesaving device for each person aboard; proper lights and a fire extinguisher if of closed construction. Larger boats must carry, in addition, a hand, mouth or power whistle or horn audible for at least one-half mile and must be numbered by the Coast Guard.

Nothing is said in the regulations about anchor, compass or other boating gear, but common sense afloat dictates that equipment should be aboard which may be vital in unexpected circumstances.

The following equipment — and the know-how to use it — is recommended: extra line, paddle, anchor and tool kit. Other recommended items — compass, flashlight, gas can, bilge pump, first aid kit, distress flare and extra sheer pins.

One of the greatest boating fatalities is that storms hit without warning. Heavy weather sometimes overtakes the unwary suddenly, whipping a calm surface into huge whitecaps, but storms always send advance warning to seasoned boaters. Some of the surest omens of oncoming weather changes are cloud formations.

Especially dangerous are the cumulonimbus, a heavy, tall mass of clouds whose summits rise in the form of mountains or towers of a fibrous texture and a content of ice crystals. The first signs will appear on the horizon from the west, southwest or northwest. It will be a high cloud formation with a dirty bottom that has a tall, thin and stringy cirrus anvil top. This type of storm may be light or very severe. Wise boatmen always expect the worst and prepare accordingly.

Seaver named player of week

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1973

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Your mind should now be preoccupied with the various odds and ends connected with the duties facing you. Make sure you do not get involved in any discussion of a romantic or emotional nature, or you will become very confused and unable to accomplish work that could be well done otherwise.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get busy at tasks at hand and stop worrying, then you get rid of your problems easily. Plan some time for improving your health. Avoid the social in p.m. and get a good rest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan time for a new hobby, (fishing, or whatever else can make you look more charming, feel more sure of yourself. Getting out for recreation is fine, but don't go beyond your budget. Show you have imagination.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to please kin today and get rid of whatever it is that makes discord with them. Fine p.m. for entertaining, but make sure arrangements are just right. Don't be too extravagant. Dress well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) More care in driving is wise today, or trouble could develop. Handle practical affairs in a wise way, and be sure to doublecheck for errors. Don't waste time with gossip.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Building up your holdings is most wise at this time, since the planets are favorable. Don't be secretive with a business expert. Use your good judgment and forget your intuitive perceptions, which are apt to be wrong right now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Once your important work is done, be sure to do something constructive about your health and appearance. Show you are a perfectionist where social matters are concerned. Think.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you are careful about little things, you find more affection and romance can be yours. See to it that your home is immaculate. Plan time to be of assistance to a good friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Forget working so hard and do something to deepen present friendships. Make better plans to gain your personal aims. Avoid some situation that could get you into trouble, however.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good day for doing well whatever work requires exactness and neatness. Show bigwig that you support his ideas. Loyalty can bring you the backing you want and need.

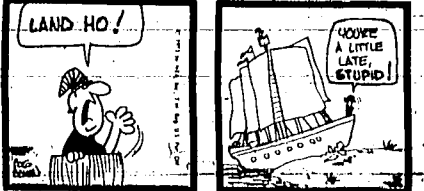

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal day to be with delightful persons at charming places and to understand better how to improve the future. A talk with a philosophically minded person helps you gain your ambitions more easily. Avoid one who gossips too much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan how to get along better with creditors and debtors. Use your intuition and know how to have more understanding with mate. Stop being to self-sacrificing, if that is your trouble. Think.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Conversing with close ties and associates can bring about more understanding and better ideas for the future. Don't put up with one who nags. Quietly absent yourself. Take it easy tonight and be happy with mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those delightful, young people who early in life will require more rest than most others since the nature is sensitive and cannot take too much noise, etc., around. Teach early to complete whatever has once been commenced, then this can become a successful habit in whatever the forte may be. Teach to reach decisions more readily, also. The lighter sports are good here and religion is a must and a joy to your offspring. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
