

Maryland kickback scandal hits Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spiro T. Agnew allegedly received $1,000 a week from contractors when he was a Maryland official and a $50,000 lump sum after he became vice president, a newspaper group has reported.

Knight Newspapers published the report Tuesday as new details emerged of the federal investigation into allegations of a Maryland kickback scandal involving private firms and politicians.

The startling news that Agnew, former Maryland governor and Baltimore County executive, was a target of the investigation came late Monday night when the vice president issued a statement acknowledging that he was being investigated for "possible violations of the criminal statutes." He protested his innocence and said he was confident he would be vindicated.

Spokesmen for President Nixon, who is himself besieged by the Watergate scandal, had no comment Tuesday on Agnew's troubles. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said he had "nothing to add" to Agnew's statement.

The U.S. District Attorney's office in Baltimore is handling the probe, and its officials have made no public statements. The Washington Post reported today that District Attorney George Beall met for an hour in Washington Tuesday with Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and was told he should proceed with the probe and promised the Justice Department would not interfere.

The Post also reported the investigation was centered on allegations that during both Agnew's terms as vice president and Maryland governor private engineering and architectural firms were improperly awarded federal or state contracts in Maryland.

The Washington newspaper also said the scope of the investigation has mushroomed to focus, in addition to Agnew, on prominent politicians in both major parties, at least two Maryland county executives, political fund raisers, and private firms in both Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Quoting sources, the Post said investigators are trying to tie Agnew to an alleged scheme in which prominent Republicans influenced the awarding of federal contracts in exchange for kickbacks or political contributions.

The New York Times said today the probe involved allegations of 5-per-cent kickbacks.

Knight Newspapers said that investigators "with help of at least one close friend and former aide" of Agnew were following "three strands of an investigation into allegations of bribery and kickbacks said to have been paid by contractors to Agnew."

Record prices due

United Press International
New government predictions indicate food prices will jump higher this year than they have in any year since 1947. As the Department of Agriculture released its predictions Tuesday, the price of wheat rose to record levels.

A bushel of wheat which sold this time last year for $1.75, went for $4.14 on the commodity market in Chicago. Agriculture officials said 1973 food prices would be 20 per cent over 1972 levels—the biggest jump since prices climbed 21 per cent 26 years ago.

In more bad news for the consumer, the Department of Agriculture said meat prices in the second half of the year will be well above the first six months.

At present, beef prices are protected by a government freeze until Sept. 12, but consumers have found meat counters empty or understocked, and producers have blamed the price ceiling.

In Texas, for instance, the Neuhoff Brothers Meat Co. of Dallas said the cost of processing has increased—but the firm cannot pass on the increases to the consumer because of the price freeze, and so loses $100 on each head of cattle slaughtered.

"We're not buying any cattle and won't resume slaughtering until the ceiling prices are taken off," said J.B. Neuhoff, the vice president.

The situation has caused several packing houses to close, laying off thousands of meat cutters, while supermarkets have had to ration what beef they have to sell, some restaurants are sold out of beef, and cattle rustling and wildlife poaching is on the increase.

Thousand Springs park status axed

By RICHARD G. HIGH

Times-News managing editor

HAGERMAN — A National Park Service study will not recommend the Thousand Springs area be made into a national park preserve.

The study had been requested by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to determine whether the Thousand Springs area, including Box Canyon, should be preserved as part of the National Park system.

But a park service regional planner said Tuesday that a study of the Thousand Springs area did not recommend park status because of "problems" with such a classification.

"The problem is it doesn't fit conveniently into any type of area that the National Park Service now manages," according to Donald W. Campbell, park planner for the Pacific northwest regional office of the park service.

Campbell, who prepared the report, said its findings were tentative, and had not yet received final park service approval.

Instead of taking a position in support of a park, as local environmental groups had hoped, the park study outlines three alternative proposals for the springs area. None of the three is recommended for approval.

According to Campbell, the three possibilities are:

1. An industrial park, similar to one in Napa Valley, Calif.

2. A state and local officials who would recognize the area as having industrial values on one hand and scenic and recreational values on the other.

3. A state-federal cooperative park. Such a park would be administered by the state with the cooperation of federal agencies.

Primary emphasis in this case would be on the scenic and recreational values of the area.

Campbell said the study does not express a preference on which approach to take. The department did not recommend the national park approach, he said, "because it simply does not meet the criteria for National Park designation." (continued on p. 13)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than half the gasoline stations surveyed by the American Automobile Association were operating normally this week, the AAA reported Tuesday.

The AAA said 53 per cent of the stations reported normal operations, the best showing of the summer and four percentage points higher than the previous week.

McClure asks public probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, wants the Senate Watergate committee to conduct its probe of wiretapping charges against committee investigator Carmen Bellino in public.

McClure said Tuesday the investigation should be made in public if the committee wants "to maintain its reputation for integrity and fairness." He pointed out the Watergate hearings have been carried out "before the eyes of the nation."

Republican National Chairman George Bush last month charged that Bellino wiretapped President Nixon's headquarters in New York during the 1960 presidential campaign. Bellino, who worked at the White House during John F. Kennedy's administration, denied the charge.

End war bid denied

BOSTON (UPI) — U.S. District Court Judge D. Joseph Tauro today turned down a suit brought by U.S. Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., seeking to halt the U.S. air war over Cambodia.

In a 26-page decision, Tauro found that the Aug. 15 deadline set by Congress had resolved the issue of whether to continue the bombing attacks.

Cassia farmers due loans

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Half devastated farmland in Cassia County has been declared eligible for emergency loans by the Farmers Home Administration (FHA).

Lynn Schodde, county supervisor for the FHA, said he and Donald Winder, state director of the FHA, toured the approximately three mile wide and 30 mile long strip of land which was hit by a severe hailstorm July 23 and met with the Cassia County commissioners Tuesday before making the decision.

The designation runs until May 9, 1974, for those applying for loans on crop losses and until Oct. 9, 1973, for physical damage claims. Farmers are eligible for the loans only if they have no other credit and were hit with at least a 10 per cent loss for total farm operations, or a 20 per cent loss on a single crop, Schodde said.

Winder was able to declare the emergency loan status because the FHA expects 25 or fewer farmers of the 250 or about 20 per cent of the total farmers in the county who were hit by the storm to apply for the loans.

If the figure were expected to be greater, the designation would have to come from the secretary of agriculture or the President of the United States.

Schodde said he and Winder had checked with other credit agencies in the area who all said they would "continue with their people" in providing loans. Those with local credit are not eligible for the FHA loans.

"People are starting to come in and indicate they have substantial losses," Schodde said.

The storm hit farms ranging in size from 80 to 700 acres and "a lot of small farms were involved," Schodde said. It is the small farmers who received the greatest losses, he said.

"Some people right in the storm center who grew basically beans and grain would have substantial losses," he said.

Crop loss estimations were about 25 per cent for beans, potatoes and alfalfa, 20 to 100 per cent for beans and grain, 10 to 30 per cent for corn and 30 per cent for dry peas.

Those who apply for loans, which are strictly for farm operating expenses, should know within a week of application if they will receive the loan, Schodde said.

Gem federal office eyed

By DAVID ESPO

Times-News writer

BOISE — The increase in National Park Service responsibility in Idaho may lead to the establishment of a state coordinating office for the federal agency.

The Park Service's regional director, John Rutter, is reported to have "some proposals in mind" for such an office in a letter written to Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus by Nathaniel P. Reed, an assistant secretary for National Parks Department of the Department of Interior.

Andrus first proposed the opening of an Idaho office for the Park Service in remarks he made over a year ago to a gathering of department officials in Boise.

He underlined his request in a June 7 letter to Reed, drawing attention to the development of the Box Canyon region of the Hagerman Valley. In the letter, Andrus blamed "the unfortunate delay in National Park Service planning" as an indirect cause of the development of the Box Canyon area, and said the delay was an "emphatic reason justifying" the establishment of the Idaho office.

But Glenn Gallison, acting assistant regional director for cooperative activities, said Tuesday there were "no immediate plans" for the establishment of the office. "There has been some discussion as to whether it would expedite our mission," Gallison said, but also noted "fairly tight constraints on staffing" within the Service.

Park Service activity within Idaho has expanded considerably in recent years.

Watergate committee takes break

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the Senate Watergate Committee resumes hearings after Labor Day, it will pursue the suggestion that Watergate was only an incident in a far broader campaign using secret agents and secret funds and manipulating the government's resources to retain political power.

The committee ended its first phase of hearings Tuesday and adjourned until September.

Through 37 days of testimony from 39 witnesses, the committee concentrated on the break-in at Democratic National headquarters last summer and the effort after it went awry to conceal from public attention who planned it, approved it, learned of it and financed it.

But always there was an undercurrent of testimony and documentation suggesting that Watergate was one piece in a larger pattern. Its purpose apparently was to keep informed on Lawrence P. O'Brien, an old Kennedy ally whose competence as Democratic national chairman, documents showed, drew the White House's concern.

The evidence and testimony touched on but hurried past much more—the employment of at least one undercover spy who looked into the sex and drinking habits of political opponents; the attempt to sabotage the political fortunes of potential rivals; the instructions to make the IRS a political weapon; the "enemies list" and the suggestion that all administration actions, contracts, grants, permits, inspections, audits and the like, be taken with an eye on their political fallout.

That investigation is called the "dirty tricks" aspect of the committee's business. Also to come is an investigation into whether political favors were promised—or coercion used—in the effort which succeeded in raising $50 million for Nixon's reelection fund, the largest ever amassed.

There have been suggestions, for example, that dairymen gave money through their political action committees in promise of an increase in milk price supports. American Airlines has admitted it gave money out of corporate funds, in violation of the law, and special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has suggested other firms were also guilty.

The recess which sent the senators home created an empty stage which Nixon is expected to fill with a "white paper" responding to the testimony against him. It will be made public next week, officials said, either in a news conference or a televised address and will be longer than the 4,000-word statement of May 22 or the April 30 speech in which Nixon pledged there would be "no whitewash in the White House."

In the April 30 speech, he said he had been misinformed about the acts of over-zealous aides. In the May 22 paper, he said fears that a full FBI investigation would uncover secret CIA activities prompted him to restrict the scope of the FBI's activities limited.

Uncle Sam offers dollars for law

BOISE (UPI)— Uncle Sam is dangling thousands of dollars in highway money in front of Idaho legislators in an effort to produce a compulsory motor vehicle seat belt law.

Pat Ehrlich, director of the Traffic Safety Commission, said new federal legislation includes a monetary incentive for states to require the use of seat belts.

During the next three years the federal government plans to allocate $94.5 million to those states wanting to force seat belts on reluctant motorists. Mrs. Ehrlich said.

Such legislation has been suggested in Idaho in the past but never has been enacted.

Mrs. Ehrlich said the latest attempt will be discussed by the Traffic Safety Commission at its September meeting.

"Whether the incentive will interest them, I don't know," she said.

"In the past they have not been too interested but they might change their minds," she said.

Mrs. Ehrlich said she felt the sum for Idaho could be "very sizable," depending on how many states qualify and whether the administration decides to spend the full amount.

Should the moneys be allocated in the same manner as interstate highway funds Idaho could get one half of one percent or about $472,500 over a three-year period.

Watergate resumes in September

The senators received much contradictory testimony. Former presidential counsel John W. Dean III was Nixon's chief antagonist. He said the President revealed in conversations on Sept. 15, 1972 and March 21, 1973 that he was a coconspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

Advisers H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman were the President's foremost defenders. They said information about the administration's involvement in the cover-up was kept from them by Dean. Haldeman said he listened to the disputed conversations and found Dean had misinterpreted what was said to support his story.

Both Cox and the committee went after the tape recordings which, since the spring of 1971, have taken down every word spoken in two of Nixon's offices and over four of his telephones.

The White House has been adamant about refusing to release the tapes and has shaken off compromise proposals, such as private review by a highly regarded outsider. Tuesday, White House lawyers declared that neither the courts nor Congress can force Nixon to release the tapes — even if keeping them secret would undermine either the prosecution or the defense of future Watergate defendants.

Under pressure to render some sort of judgment while Watergate hampers the President's conduct, the committee may in September issue an interim report, drawing conclusions from what it has heard.

But in the next round of hearings, its focus is expected to expand beyond the break-in and into an array of maneuvers cloaked in secrecy and only barely surfaced during the testimony heard so far. These include:

—The employment of former New York policeman Anthony Ulasewicz as a fulltime political spy. He testified only slightly about his activities, gathering information on the sex lives and drinking habits of both foes and friends. Within a few days of the incident in which a girl drowned in a car driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Ulasewicz testified, he was in Chappaquiddick, posing as a newsmen and asking the most embarrassing questions.

—The attempts to sabotage the presidential primary campaign of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, who, in the polls of the spring of 1972 led Nixon by a considerable margin. One aspect involved a smutty phony letter under the signature of Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., accusing two of his rivals in the Florida primary, Muskie and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., of sexual misbehavior.

—The purposes of the White House "enemies list" of 200 or more names.

The "black advance" project of White House lawyer Charles W. Colson. This was a schematic program of disrupting the scheduled appearances and plans of political opponents.

—The effort to manipulate public opinion by presenting Nixon as besieged by Communist-financed demonstrators. Former White House chief of staff Haldeman admitted in his testimony that he wrote "good" and "great" on the margin of a memo reporting there would be obscene and violent protest when Nixon attended a Charlotte, N.C. rally honoring evangelist Billy Graham.

—The attempt to revise the public image of Daniel Ellsberg, defendant in the Pentagon Papers trial. The attempted burglary of the office of Los Angeles psychiatrist Lewis Fielding apparently was part of this plan.

—The wiretaps on the telephones of aides to Dr. Henry A. Kissinger and newsmen suspected of receiving news leaks from his staff.

Even if public opinion turns against the committee—and there are mixed indications that it may—the senators may hope that exposure of the entire pattern of political subversion may reverse such a reaction and make possible fundamental legislative reform.

Head Start sets tutoring service

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Tri-County Head Start program has initiated a home tutoring service for low-income, rural pre-schoolers under a $75,000 federal grant.

Called Home Start, the new program is aimed at 4 and 5-year-olds in disadvantaged families.

Modeled on the Head Start program, Home Start differs from Head Start in that teachers go directly into homes rather than working out of centralized classrooms.

The purpose of Home Start is to provide education skills for the pre-schoolers in part through the development of teaching skills for parents.

Health services and nutritional education are also stressed.

Home Start families are now being recruited in the Filer, Buhl and Castleford areas.

Three home teachers and one community assistant are now working under the direction of newly-appointed Home Start Coordinator, Michael Brown. Brown is a graduate of the College of Idaho psychology department and holds a secondary teaching degree. He was formerly on the staff of the Child Development Center in Nampa.

According to Brown, Home Start will serve about 75 pre-schoolers in the same number of families.

He said emphasis will be placed on language development and social and mathematical skills.

One of the most important elements of the project, he said, will be the training of parents as teachers.

"We try to give the parents materials they can use themselves as the child's teacher," Brown said. "Our basic goal is to get the parents not to be dependent on the home visitor, but gradually to work into being the teacher themselves."

Brown said home visitors will contact families once a week for teaching sessions lasting an hour to an hour-and-a-half. In addition, parent meetings on home safety and other subjects will be held. Children in the program will receive physicals and dental checkups.

Hopefully, Brown said, once the mother has learned to see herself as the teacher, children subsequent to those in Home Start can be taught by the mother without aid. The training of the mother while the child is being taught also should have a positive integrative effect upon the family, Brown added.

Applications from low-income families in the Filer, Buhl and Castleford area are now being taken. Those interested should pick up application forms at the Head Start office, 139 6th Ave. W., Twin Falls, or call 734-5550 for more information.

The complaint filed in District Court alleges the application was done in a "reckless, careless and negligent manner."

TF man named delegate

TWIN FALLS — Johnnie York, Twin Falls, Idaho Commander of the Disabled American Veterans, will attend the national DAV Conference, scheduled to be held in Miami, Beach, Fla. Aug. 12-16.

York will be a delegate from the Twin Falls Stradley Chapter 5 as well as a representative of the state group. Primary topics of concern for the delegates at the 52nd annual conference will be threatened cutbacks in federal funding for medical care, research and hospitalization for veterans and the problems of Vietnam veterans in finding employment after discharge from the service.

The Disabled American Veterans is a single purpose organization chartered by Congress to concern itself with the welfare and rehabilitation of war-time, service-connected disabled veterans and their families.

Concert set

TWIN FALLS — The program for the weekly Twin Falls Municipal Band concert at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Twin Falls City Park has been released by Del Slaughter, conductor.

The program will begin with "Grand Processional" by Don Haddad, followed by "Glory and Honor" by Sergei Rachmaninoff, "The London Symphony," first movement, by Franz Joseph Hayden; "The Song from Moulin Rouge" by Georges Auric; "Sharpshooter's March" by G. Metello.

Following intermission, the band will play "La Mascarada," Paso Doble, by Harold L. Walters; "Bright Eyes" by Walter Alan Finlayson, featuring a trumpet trio by Dave Tippet, Bob Buane and Jim Brill; "Cole Porter Symphonic Portrait" arrangement by Wayne Robinson; and close with "America" arrangement by John Cacavas.

The program will be concluded with the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Details emerge in Agnew probe

The story said: "One strand involves allegations that about $1,000 a week was funneled to Agnew from contractors when he was Baltimore County executive (1962-68), governor of Maryland (1967-69). The payments possibly continued after he became vice president."

"Prosecutors also have information that a sum of $50,000 in cash was paid by a contractor, in 1970 or 1971, for past and possibly future favors."

And investigators are looking into information that leading campaign fund-raisers for Agnew sought contributions from contractors in exchange for state and federal contracts. Some of the contributions, according to one source, may have been put to personal, rather than political use, by Agnew."

Reporter Saul Friedman said in the Knight dispatch that at least one close friend and former Agnew aide, Jerome B. Wolff, 55, a Baltimore contractor, "has given federal prosecutors details of alleged payments to Agnew amounting to $1,000 a week."

Wolff was Maryland State Roads Commission chairman while Agnew was governor and later worked on Agnew's vice presidential staff, leaving that position in 1970. Wolff, according to the Knight dispatch, was instrumental in the award of "a huge contract in 1967 to the J. E. Greiner Co. to build the $130 million Chesapeake Bay bridge." Shortly after leaving the vice president's office, the story said, Wolff went to work for Greiner.

On June 29 Knight Newspapers reported that Wolff "was desperately seeking immunity from prosecution and could implicate Agnew." But the account said Wolff was not granted immunity and "decided to talk anyway after receiving verbal assurances" from District Attorney Beall that he would take Wolff's cooperation into consideration in any future prosecution.

The report said another target of the investigation was Lester Matz, partner in a Baltimore engineering firm.

Federal investigators probing the records of Matz and his firm have found evidence that he borrowed about $50,000 from several sources, which allegedly was passed on to Agnew in 1970 or 1971," the newspaper group said.

Chilly To Yanks

A border is a border is a border, so it once seemed, with the notable exception of the United States-Canada version.

For 4,000 unfortified miles (actually 5,500, counting Alaska in) it has long been among nations a monument to peaceful continental coexistence and, for individuals, largely a formality. Unhindered access to each other's domains, involving little more than a courtesy slowing at customs posts, has been taken for granted by citizens of both the United States and Canada.

Mostly the more numerous former visitors from the south pour millions of tourist dollars into the Canadian economy annually. Many have stayed on to invest in Canadian business, buy Canadian property and, in increasing numbers in recent years, settle in Canada.

But times do indeed change. From the Canadian side, the border is becoming much more a legal reality. Tourists from the south are still acceptable — dollar devaluation and balance of payments problems so far notwithstanding.

But Americans intending to make new homes in Canada have been finding to their surprise that it is no longer almost as easy to move to Toronto or Vancouver as to Atlanta or San Diego. Entry requirements have been stiffened. Many unprepared would-be immigrants have been stopped or have experienced lengthy delays at the border.

On another front, several Canadian provinces have been moving to restrict land sales to U.S. citizens.

The issue in Canadian eyes is more than self-preservation. A problem with U. S. immigrants is that they run heavily to white-collar professionals whose skills are not in short supply in an economy where the unemployment rate is generally higher than in the United States. On the contrary, newcomers tend to settle in the larger cities and compete with native Canadians for not-so-numerous jobs.

And land, as Canada's prime asset, should be reserved first for Canadians. Americans, however, in increasing numbers have been buying choice sites for recreation and investment. Prices in preferred areas such as Ontario's hill and lake country have been forced up too rapidly, often beyond the reach of Canadians themselves.

There is nothing new in Canada's apprehension of the over-whelming economic power of its neighbor to the south. Needing the capital but fearful of forfeiting control of its own economy, Canada has long carefully monitored and specially taxed U. S. investment in Canadian enterprises.

But to many alarmed Canadians, actual physical possession of the land, particularly for speculative purposes, is something else again.

It has not yet come to "American Go Home!" And in any case that would be nothing new to Americans after all the experiences of the postwar decades of superpower.

But what makes this situation special is that it is so very close to home.

ART BUCHWALD

Yes, Yes! The President Blew It

WASHINGTON — John Ehrlichman testified before the Senate Watergate committee two weeks ago that it was "well within both the constitutional duty and the obligation of the President" for White House aides to break into the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's former psychiatrist.

Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. of North Carolina disputed this interpretation of the President's power and argued there was nothing in the law which gives the President the right to suspend the Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Since this is a great constitutional issue, I sought out my old law professor, Heinrich Applebaum, who holds the Chair of Jurisprudence at the Watergate Technical Institute of Perjury. "Professor, who is right in the constitutional dispute between Sen. Ervin and John Ehrlichman?"

"They're both right, and they're both wrong."

"What kind of answer is that?" "Well, Ehrlichman is right in saying the President of the United States has the duty and obligation to break into anybody's psychiatrist's office that he wants to. But he's wrong in saying that White House aides could do it for the President."

"Do you mean if the President wanted Ellsberg's psychiatric records, he had to break into the office himself?"

"That is correct. He had to perform the burglary personally. Otherwise it would be considered illegal."

"But isn't that kind of hard for a President to do?" "The writers of your Constitution didn't want to make it easy. They knew that every President of the United States at one time or another would have a desire to break into a psychiatrist's office."

"It's something that no man in power can resist. So they provided that the act itself had to be committed only by the President. The writers of the Constitution assumed that this would keep most Presidents from using the power unless it was absolutely necessary."

"Now, had President Nixon borrowed a wig and a camera and tools from the CIA and gone to Dr. Fielding's Beverly Hills office, broken into the files and retrieved the Ellsberg records, he would be acting within the law. But the fact that the President turned over the mission to two White House plumbers was his undoing. As a lawyer he should have known that."

"John Ehrlichman's lawyer, John Wilson, has argued that the President has a vast reservoir of power given to him by Congress which makes it possible for the President to commit what would otherwise be an unlawful act for national security," I said. "Do you agree with this?"

"I certainly do. When it comes to national security, the President can mug, steal and commit arson as long as he is protecting American citizens."

"How do you arrive at that?" "Because, as Ehrlichman's lawyer has so well pointed out, the courts have never ruled that he couldn't do it. Now the President cannot commit these unlawful acts willy-nilly. He has to prove that in some way they have to do with a threat from a foreign power."

"How can he prove it?" "In the case of Ellsberg's psychiatrist, it's quite possible that Dr. Fielding had made studies of Freud."

"But Freud isn't a foreign power."

"Aha, but where did Freud practice?" "In Vienna."

"Then I hear you right, Dr. Applebaum, Nixon's only error in the Ellsberg affair is that he did not burglarize the office himself."

"That's the only constitutional issue they've got him on. In fairness to Nixon, though, any President could have made the same mistake."

LESTER KINSOLVING

Inside Religion: Jesus Caricatured

As if by fate (or, more appropriately, as if by epidemic) Hollywood has released not one, but two groovy gospels in the same summer: "Godspell" and "Jesus Christ, Superstar."

The former, "Godspell," according to America magazine's film critic Richard Blake, has:

"The veneer of religiosity" of "a youth-cult Christ and his swinging disciples."

Moreover: "The musical gospel is not Christ, but a nostalgic escape into lost childhood...As for the resurrection, there is none...According to this gospel of today, the memory of a dead Christ lives on only in the childlike spirit of his followers."

"Superstar" is a similarly tasteless travesty, which begs the question as to when the movie moguls will be fair enough to give Christianity a break by leaving Jesus alone. They might, in fairness, consider producing such epics as "Mohammed the Swinger," or "Gautama Buddha Deserts His Wife and Children For A So Tree," which productions should market well in Saudi Arabia and Ceylon.

Hollywood's hippie Christ, however perverse, appears the lesser of two contemporary evils. The other: The current plethora of books, articles and even bumper stickers (Jesus: The Greatest Revolutionary In History) which attempt to reintroduce the Prince of Peace as the Pancho Villa of Palestine.

For example, an Episcopal attorney named William Stringfellow has written:

"I say that Jesus was, according to the testimonies of the Gospels, a criminal...the most dangerous and reprehensible sort of criminal...so far as the established authorities and, in the end, so far as the people were concerned, the most loathsome of criminals...Never has a man been apprehended, accused, tried, convicted, sentenced and executed of whom it may be more certainly avowed: He was guilty."

This extremist nonsense was published by a magazine called Christianity and Crisis, originally founded by famed theologian Reinhold Niebuhr. Of late, it has become so far-left and so pro-Arab and anti-Israel, that Niebuhr's widow Ursula recently asked that her husband's name be removed from the masthead.

A refreshing antidote to this Jesus as Gungliger guerrilla theatre has been provided by Professor John T. Pawlikowski of Chicago's Catholic Theological Union. Writing in Christian Century magazine, Dr. Pawlikowski notes:

That the theory of a General Jesus leading an armed insurrection in Jerusalem is hardly new — having been advanced by an Austrian scholar named Eisler, 44 years ago.

That while Jesus may well have been mistakenly executed by the Romans as a supposed revolutionary, Jesus was dedicated not to the hopelessly impractical task of rebelling against Rome, but to reforming Rome's subordinate authority, the Temple priesthood of the Sadducees ("A total religio-political system which oppressed the common man.")

That Jesus can hardly be imagined (and quite definitely not proven) as among the violent revolutionaries called Zealots, who, "Were slitting (Roman) throats in the alleys of Jerusalem as the forerunners of a new, humane society."

Professor Pawlikowski's contentions appear plausible in view of the fact that the only violence ever attributed to Jesus (which is mentioned in all four of the Gospels) was beating (not killing) of Sadducean Temple money changers — not Roman soldiers.

Moreover, Jesus does not appear to be remembered so much for wielding a whip as in being nailed to a cross. Here most of his followers believe that he won an eternal battle over the fear of death, rather than trying simply to win an ephemeral victory over one of the many (and comparatively humane) conquering armies who occupied the Holy Land.

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

The Doctor Says

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it harmful for children to eat dog food? Our 18-month old son eats one of the dried dog foods and loves it.

People tell us we shouldn't let him eat it, but the ingredients don't look harmful. What do you say? — D. P.

I see no harm in it, except that it could be a bit embarrassing for you if one day a neighbor innocently asked him what he had that morning for breakfast.

I read not long ago that a group of college students decided to beat inflation by going on a dog food diet, and they fared pretty well until they grew tired of the monotony.

Just for the heck of it, I checked the ingredients on a bag of dogfood and found that, in part, it included:

"Ground yellow corn, soybean meal, meat and bone meal, corn gluten feed, animal fat, ground oats, wheat, dried whey, dried meat solubles, ground wheat, brewer's dried yeast, wheat germ meal, iodized salt, vitamin A and B-12 supplements, niacin, calcium, thiamine, riboflavin supplement," and a lot of other additives too numerous to mention and none of which would cause any harm — very well balanced, actually.

Without trying to "push" dog food as a baby — or adult — food, I can say that it has been told to me that, for some strange reason, dog food sales in poverty areas of large cities seem inordinately high for the known-pet populations there.

A lot of the animal parts used in such foods, of course, aren't what you would brag about having on a dinner plate.

I know of one case where a man came home rather late from a party and decided to have a snack before going to bed. He made himself a well-decorated sandwich in the darkened kitchen from what he thought was his wife's meatloaf.

It wasn't until the next morning he learned it was some left over dog food.

That either speaks a lot for the dog food or very little for his wife's meatloaf.

Seriously, I would not recommend letting the child continue eating the dog food, but only because it could become a source of mild embarrassment.

That's my advice — unless and until food prices ultimately do make such foods attractive as acceptable family fare.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 33, can't seem to digest protein. A couple of hours after eating she vomits wretchedly with pains through the abdomen that last up to seven hours.

No medication helps. She has had X-rays and nothing shows up. Doctors say it is severe colitis, but she still can't eat and is losing weight rapidly, and I am worried. If she doesn't get the proper food her body will deteriorate. This has been going on two years. Is there something she can do to relieve this condition? — Mrs. A. J.

Has the condition known as anorexia been investigated? This is an emotional disorder which prevents patients from eating, and they can waste away until they are as gaunt as inmates of the concentration camps in Germany years ago.

Not having examined your daughter, I naturally do not say this is her trouble, but it seems a possibility. And it is curable.

Note to S.L.F.: An ectopic, or "tubal" pregnancy appears to be somewhat more prevalent in women using I.U.D., but I couldn't say that means you necessarily will have another ope.

You can lose weight if you really want to! Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level that best suits our individual needs. For a copy, write to him, care of this newspaper, enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

MR. SPECTATOR

It's Really Pretty

Was on a picture taking expedition, assignment or whatever you want to call it Sunday morning. The locale was on the grounds of the College of Southern Idaho.

You know, really, I was struck with the beauty of the place. The landscaping is really outstanding, the grass looks wonderful, the bushes and shrubs are trimmed just right and the flowers are all in the right place for the desired effect.

You ought to go out that way and stroll around early some Sunday morning. We were the only one on the campus when we went and we couldn't help but think — in spite of the negative thoughts some nit-pickers have about the school — how fortunate we are to have such an outstanding institution in our midst.

A BIGGER SLOT

We have been thinking of asking for this for a long time — so here goes.

Why can't the airmail slot in the Twin Falls postoffice lobby be bigger so you can get something in it? Sure, it will take a letter, but that's just about all.

Every try to put a roll of film through the thing? Well, we do quite often and we emit a few choice words each time it will not go in and we have to end up putting it in the large first class slot.

Now, if you have a roll of film and you are sending it airmail then the slot should be large enough to take it. Put it in the box outside? Not on your life. Those steel boxes, standing there in the sun, can get hot enough inside to fry an egg — so you can imagine what the heat would do to a tender roll of film. It would be ruined — and sometimes a little roll of film represents hours and hours of work and travel.

So how about it Postmaster Lloyd Libert? Can't you take a saw and do something about it?

14-CARAT STEAK?

If you are under the impression that beef is approaching the point where it will be worth its weight in gold — when you can find it — be advised that they are literally feeding the cows gold in Missouri.

Real gold. On the Columbia campus of the University of Missouri.

It has nothing to do with grain shortages or beef freezes, however.

It's just that Dr. Fredrick A. Martz, associate professor of dairy husbandry at the university, has found that gold is the best substance to be used as a radioactive tracer to determine how a dairy cow's innards utilize its feed.

To make the unique fodder, the gold is mixed with discarded newspapers flavored with molasses — which itself suggests a subject for commentary. Mr. Spectator will discreetly refrain from pursuing right at the present time.

Nixon home purchase details readied

Wednesday, August 8, 1973 — Times News, Twin Falls, Idaho

Blockade-eyed

By JAMES R. POLK
(c) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — After two months of steadfast silence, the White House says it is almost ready to explain the rest of the details behind multimillionaire Robert H. Abplanalp's financing of President Nixon's San Clemente estate.

That public airing could come at the end of this month, the White House promised Monday.

Abplanalp, a wealthy friend and campaign backer of Nixon, is now recognized as the man who loaned the President $625,000 for his purchase of the California estate four years ago.

then lifted the burden of debt from Nixon in a $1.2 million secret takeover of most of the property in 1970.

But since disclosing this in an announcement just before the Memorial Day weekend, the White House has repeatedly refused to answer the questions that linger.

What is the name and nature of the holding company that Abplanalp used to buy the San Clemente land? Who are the other investors, if any? How was the money raised for the original Nixon loan? Is there any significance to the overlapping roles of the two California custodians of secret cash campaign funds that later figured in the Watergate scandals? Under the public pressure of unspoken suspicions, the White House now seems ready to spell out the details of the San Clemente dealings — to an extent never done before on presidential properties ranging from Eisenhower's Gettysburg farm to Johnson's Texas ranch.

In itemizing the $10 million cost to the taxpayer for security and communications at San Clemente and Key Biscayne, the White House Monday said it would disclose within a month the remaining details of Nixon's purchase of the two homes.

These questions await the White House answers:

Where did the original money come from? Abplanalp is thought to have put up the entire ante of $400,000 for Nixon's downpayment in buying the $1.4 million estate in 1969. The White House statement earlier this year listed a total of $625,000 in loans from Abplanalp without furnishing a breakdown. It is believed the remainder of the loan total went toward $200,000 mortgage payment, plus interest, that Nixon was hard-pressed to meet in mid-1970.

Abplanalp could easily afford to bankroll the presidential purchase.

SAIGON — South Vietnam and Thailand are considering a naval blockade of Cambodia's one deep water seaport if Communist rebels succeed in capturing the country, informed diplomatic sources report.

A communist insurgent victory in Cambodia would give North Vietnamese ships access to the port, Kompongson on the Gulf of Thailand, for the first time in more than five years.

Some military officials, both Vietnamese and Western, believe free use of the port by North Vietnamese and Western ships would be the biggest single threat to the future stability and security of the Saigon government.

It would give the Hanoi regime its only deep water harbor south of the demilitarized zone and enable it to supply Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops in the Mekong Delta and Saigon regions of South Vietnam without moving war materials over hundreds of miles of jungle roads.

US to buy crime facts

(c) 1973, Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The federal government is going to use a radical new system for assessing the crime picture.

Donald E. Santarelli, newly appointed administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, said his agency will buy crime statistics from consulting firms which have polled citizens victimized by crime.

"Our goal is a short-term program to get quick answers (on the extent of crime) without having to spend millions," Santarelli said in an interview in Washington.

"We're not going to get lost in a massive sea of (crime) statistics," he declared.

"We're going to use the 'spare' approach. In urban areas, consulting firms have already gathered crime figures and sold them to private companies."

Watergate counsel says detection of tape tampering nearly impossible

By MORTON KONDRACKE

(c) 1973, Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — It would be nearly impossible for investigators to detect editing or tampering with President Nixon's secret White House tape recordings, according to the Senate Watergate committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash.

An expert on electronic surveillance, Dash is known to believe that alteration of tape recordings cannot be discovered by ear or by oscilloscope, even when wave forms are photographed for minute examination.

Dash has refused to speculate whether President Nixon's tape recordings have been tampered with, although Sen. Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii) has raised the possibility during committee sessions.

Inouye's questions were prompted by testimony of former White House Chief of Staff H. R. (Bob) Haldeman that he took some tapes out of the White House and left them unguarded for several hours.

Committee sources said there is evidence that Haldeman was permitted to listen to Presidential tapes on three separate occasions, and not only two, as Haldeman testified.

According to Dash, courts have compensated for the technical inability to spot doctored tapes by establishing a "chain of evidence" test that involves showing that authorities knew the whereabouts of recordings from the time they were made until they were played as evidence.

Dash is known to believe that the chain has been broken in the case of Mr. Nixon's White House tapes, because Haldeman left them unattended at home during a three-day period in early July when he had them checked out of the White House. Haldeman has said that "he does not believe it likely that the tapes could have been tampered with, but he could not prove that they were undisturbed."

A book that Dash wrote in 1959, "The Eavesdroppers," discusses tape alteration at some length and concludes that "a skillfully edited tape cannot be detected with equipment readily available."

Kissinger power boost reported

By CHARLES BARTLETT

WASHINGTON — Responsible sources report that Henry Kissinger will climb later this month to a plateau of foreign policy power John Foster Dulles never attained.

Kissinger is in line to become secretary of state without relinquishing his present role as Mr. Nixon's adviser on foreign policy. He will thus preside over the department's machinery while he keeps his proximity to the President's ear. His hammerlock on foreign policy will be tighter than ever.

Kissinger has no administrative skill to assist his prospects of presiding successfully over the intricate machinery of the National Security Council while he represents the 25,000 employees of the State Department. He has no zeal for administration, so the aplomb with which he wears two hats will depend on the quality of his deputies. His NSC operation was organizationally chaotic until Gen. Alexander Haig put it in order.

He will bring an initial boost in morale to the State Department where he will have a chance to soften the chagrin of the career service over its exclusion from the councils where policy is made.

Jews reject Israel

(c) Chicago Daily News
JERUSALEM — More Soviet Jews are opting out of the U.S.S.R.-Israel immigration pipeline than at anytime since their exodus began two years ago.

According to statistics compiled by the Jewish Agency for Israel, 5.4 per cent of the Soviet Jews reaching Vienna — the main way station en route to Israel — chose not to go on to Israel compared with only 1 per cent in 1972.

The data show that Moscow Jews lead in rejecting Israel and that Leningrad Jews are second — percentages are 21.5 and 17.7 respectively. Jews from Kiev, capital of the Soviet Union, are least reluctant to be resettled in Israel. Their rejection rate is only 4 per cent.

A spokesman for the agency, which sponsors immigration to this country, offered several explanations:

— Difficulty finding suitable jobs for Soviet immigrants, with potential social problems for the couples involved and especially for their children.

— More profound, is the apparent fact that the current wave of Soviet-Jewish immigrants contains fewer Zionist idealists than the original influx in which the Kremlin was releasing "troublemakers" — Jews who risked imprisonment or worse in their campaigns to reach Israel.

The early arrivals included many intellectuals who had been alienated from Soviet society by the Communist regime's anti-Israel policies and propaganda during and since the Six-Day War of June, 1967.

Some of these people had been Jews in name or by descent only, but were fired with Zionist feelings in reaction to the widespread criticism of Israel and its unleashing of latent Russian anti-Semitism.

Now that the Kremlin has given in to the extent that an average of 2,500 to 3,000 Jews can emigrate monthly, some Jews apparently have been using this concession as a way to get out of the U.S.S.R. — not necessarily to reach Israel.

UFW, police clash

LAMONT, Calif. (UPI) — Sickling United Farm Workers Union members and sheriff's deputies clashed in Southern California Tuesday. Six officers and some strikers were hurt.

Deputy Carroll Chendon was hospitalized with a broken arm and other deputies were hit by flying rocks. Police said about 275 pickets at a struck grape ranch tried to ruin the fields to drive out workers.

The California Highway Patrol sealed off roads around the area and arrested about 30 persons before the strikers dispersed.

A UFW spokesman said it was believed one woman picket was injured badly and that arrested pickets who were hurt were not getting medical attention.

Attorneys for the UFW argued in court Tuesday for the release without bail of about 400 persons arrested on picket lines in recent weeks, mostly for violating a court order limiting the number of pickets in the union's dispute with the rival Teamsters Union.

Farm workers attorneys said county officials set arbitrary standards for release from jail pending trials.

Several hundred union supporters, including Daniel Ellsberg, folk singer Joan Baez and Roman Catholic Bishop Jimmy McGuire of El Paso, Tex., held a "rally and vigil" in the park outside the courthouse.

Fresno County sheriff's deputies have arrested 1,697 persons for violations of injunctions, trespassing and other charges in the past three weeks.

Revolt crushed

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The navy said Tuesday it had crushed a revolt aimed at President Salvador Allende by civilian extremists and some crew members of two warships.

The announcement came several hours after the military assumed command of law enforcement in Santiago and other areas to combat what it called an "alarming" wave of violence.

Political sources said Allende, in another move to solve crises confronting him, plans to once again place some military men in his cabinet. They said the move was "imminent."

In its announcement, the navy did not identify the warships involved in what it called a planned mutiny against Allende. Nor did it identify the "civilian extremists." Navy sources said 20 non-commissioned officers and two enlisted men were arrested.

It was the first sign of military unrest since June 29, when loyalist troops crushed an uprising by a rebel tank regiment outside the presidential palace. Twenty-two persons died in the fighting then.

US serious crime down 2% in 1972

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Serious crime dropped 2 per cent in the United States last year in the first actual decrease in crime in 17 years, an FBI report issued by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson said today.

The annual report also showed, however, that violent crimes—murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault—increased 2 per cent in 1972. And it showed the risk of becoming a victim of a serious crime has increased 47 per cent since 1967.

Richardson issued the report in his name although he has expressed reservations about the accuracy of the FBI statistics. Recently, he offered the opinion that the FBI Uniform Crime Reports—compiled from law enforcement agency statistics around the country—measure only a portion of the crimes committed in the United States.

The attorney general noted that many crimes are never reported to police. He said he hoped a better system of measuring crime could be devised, perhaps using polling techniques.

The most numerous property crimes, such as burglary, larceny and auto theft, were down 2 per cent, accounting for the overall decline of 2 per cent, the report said.

The 1972 drop in overall crime followed a 7 per cent increase in 1971. There was an 11 per cent increase in 1970, a 12 per cent gain in 1969, and a 17 per cent increase in 1968.

The FBI report showed that during 1972, 94 major cities reported actual decreases in serious crime, compared to 54 cities in 1971, 22 cities in 1970, and 17 cities in 1969.

The report said there was an 8 per cent decrease last year in serious crime in large core cities, those with populations in excess of 250,000 residents. This drop compared to increases of 2 per cent in 1971, 6 per cent in 1970, 9 per cent in 1969, and 18 per cent in 1968.

There were increases in serious crime in both suburban and rural areas—2 per cent in suburban and 4 per cent in rural.

In the violent crimes category, forcible rape rose 11 per cent, aggravated assault increased 7 per cent, and murder rose 5 per cent.

Nixon silent on Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House spokesman has declined to say whether President Nixon still has confidence in Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in light of news Agnew is being investigated over allegations of a kickback scandal in Maryland.

Gerald L. Warren, the White House deputy press secretary, also would not say Tuesday when Nixon and Agnew had met last.

Warren was questioned intensely by reporters who wanted to know if Nixon still has confidence in Agnew, who has said in response to the allegations that he is "innocent of any wrongdoing."

One exchange between Warren and questioners went like this:

Reporter: Sometime ago the vice president had a press conference in which he expressed his confidence in the President.

Watergate in recess

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In its rush to join vacationing members of Congress, the Senate Watergate committee brushed aside explosive testimony by a tough-talking government lawyer who complained the Watergate probe was "snatched" away from the Justice Department.

Henry E. Petersen, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, testified Tuesday he deeply resented the appointment of a special Watergate prosecutor because it delayed indictments and was an indication by the Senate that the Justice Department could not be trusted.

"Damn, I think it's a reflection on me and the Department of Justice," exclaimed Petersen. "We would have broken that case wide open."

He joined Tuesday's other witness, former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, in praising the department's efforts on the case.

Petersen's dissatisfaction with the Senate's insistence on the appointment of a special prosecutor by the President surfaced during just two hours and 46 minutes of questioning as the seven-member panel hurried to adjourn for the summer recess.

Domestic matters concern astros

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 2 astronauts train their powerful Earth resources cameras on the western United States and Latin America today, but their thoughts seem to be about much more domestic matters.

Commander Alan L. Bean told Mission Control Tuesday he and his crew have found that trying to keep the cavernous, 118-foot space station clean makes one "really appreciate your wife. It's just fantastic the total amount of housekeeping you do."

Bean talked about some of the things he's learned since the start of the two-month voyage.

"The living up here has been a lot different than I first imagined," the Apollo 12 moonwalker said. "It's been a lot more fun. I've personally had more fun on this thing than on the lunar mission."

"Flying around inside this workshop is really a ball."

Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma also planned to turn their solar observation instruments toward the sun again and do more biomedical experiments to test their adaption after 11 days of living in weightlessness.

"We were feeling awful poor for about three days," he said, referring to the queasy stomachs all three astronauts experienced as they adapted to zero gravity. "But we knew it was bound to get over with and it did. We're having a ball."

Garriott spent his first full day manning the Skylab solar cameras, after he and Lousma put fresh film in them during the spacewalk.

Guru with pie on his face

Indian guru hit by dissenter pie

DETROIT (UPI) — A bearded young man pulled a shaving cream pie out of a bouquet of roses and slapped it into Guru Maharaj Ji's face, then said, "I always wanted to throw a pie in God's face."

The 15-year-old Indian guru was appearing before the Detroit Common Council at the time of the incident Tuesday. The council was considering a special testimonial resolution for him.

The shaving cream dripped down the guru's broad face and onto the front of his suit.

"This was probably nothing like the nails through Jesus Christ," the guru said.

The pie thrower identified himself as Pat Halley, 22, a reporter for the antiestablishment Detroit newspaper Fifth Estate. "The Guru is just a slick businessman," Halley said.

"I always wanted to throw a pie in God's face," he said. "God represents the ultimate in authority and I represent the ultimate in disrespect for authority."

The guru, Halley said, "was radiating dollar signs of peace and love."

Maharaj Ji said, "I just want to apologize to that person who did that to me. I do not want him arrested or hurt. If someone doesn't understand something, he cannot be responsible for what he does."

Halley escaped from the grasp of guards.

Town destroyed by bombs

(EDITORS' NOTE: UPI's Frederick H. Marks, heading a pool representing several news agencies, accompanied Cambodian authorities today on a tour of Neak Luong, scene of Monday's accidental U.S. bombing. His report follows).

By FREDERICK H. MARKS
NEAK-LUONG, Cambodia (UPI) — This Mekong River town, most of it lying in rubble, is a grisly testament to the destructive power of American bombs.

The sun had yet to rise Monday when a U.S. warplane released its payload by mistake over the sleeping town. The American Embassy estimates at least 137 civilians and soldiers were killed and 282 wounded.

Sections of Neak Luong today are heaps of battered mattresses, shoes, pillows, twisted sinks and broken helmets.

Some of the buildings still standing have gaping holes in their walls. Others have entire sides blown away. The bark has been ripped off of some trees. In the center of town, there is a market place. The south end of it is destroyed.

"Beware of unexploded," reads an incomplete warning off to one side. Some live bombs remain on the ground.

In the center of the destroyed market section, a badly battered helmet dangles on the end of a pole, marking the spot where a soldier died.

"There is still the smell of death here," said one Neak Luong resident, one of several hundred who chose to remain in his battered town.

Interior Minister Hem Keith Sana flew to Neak Luong today with five newsmen to survey the rampant destruction.

When he arrived, about 100 small children ran out to greet his helicopter and crowded around him as he walked up a street that runs along the Mekong River. Soldiers who remained to defend the town suddenly watched the minister as he walked along, a U.S. Embassy official at his side.

The highest ranking soldier in the town is Col. Prum Chhun.

His headquarters were partially destroyed in the bombing. Chhun talked quietly with Hem Kath Sana, holding a bandaged hand wounded from exploding bombs.

One of the men who survived the bombing said he was asleep with his wife and child when he first heard the explosions.

"Myself, my wife and the baby ran to our sand bunker and just held each other tightly," he said. "When it was all over, I ran out and helped carry some of the wounded away. Many died in our arms."

A soldier said he heard the explosions first and then the plane. From his description of the sound and from the way bombs fell in clusters, it appears the aircraft that made the error was an F4 fighter-bomber, not a B52 bomber as some reports have said.

As the interior minister took off for the 30-minute flight back to Phnom Penh, a U.S. F4 fighter-bomber flashed by after delivering an air strike four miles north of Neak Luong on the opposite side of the river.

Meat shoppers warned against shady dealers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Shoppers were warned today to be extra cautious at meat counters—and to beware of shady—but legal—tactics by some dealers taking advantage of the beef shortage.

Jack B. Smith, former chairman of the Columbus Consumer Protection Commission, now owner of Smith's Freezer Meats, said some shoppers faced with nearly barren meat counters are "easy prey for the dealer out to make a fast buck."

Smith, former chairman of the Columbus Consumer Protection Commission, listed these "less-than-above-board" methods used by some dealers:

— "The bait and switch sell," usually tried on buyers of whole sides of beef. The customer is baited by an advertisement for

"USDA Choice beef." Being unaware there are various yields (or quality) of that grade, the customer is ushered into a cooler and shown a low yield of meat. The customer looks at the fatty meat, sees better looking and leaner cuts and orders the latter—at a much higher price.

— "The switch." A dealer takes a box in which imported beef—not controlled by ceiling prices—came in, empties it and refills it with U.S. beef which does come under the controls. He then offers the meat at prices some $2 or $3 above the ceiling.

— "The name-changing game." Smith said ceiling prices only apply to specific cuts of meat. Some dealers, therefore, take a very cheap cut of meat which, if sold under the ceiling price, may go for 75 cents a pound. The dealer calls it by another name, such as "backyard steak" or a "cook-out steak," and sells it for $2.29 a pound.

"I could sell a chuck steak—which normally goes for about $1.09 a pound—and call it a 'Smith Steak' and sell it for $2.29 a pound," Smith said. "The ceiling price would not apply, since I didn't sell it by that name before the freeze. And that goes for a wide variety of things."

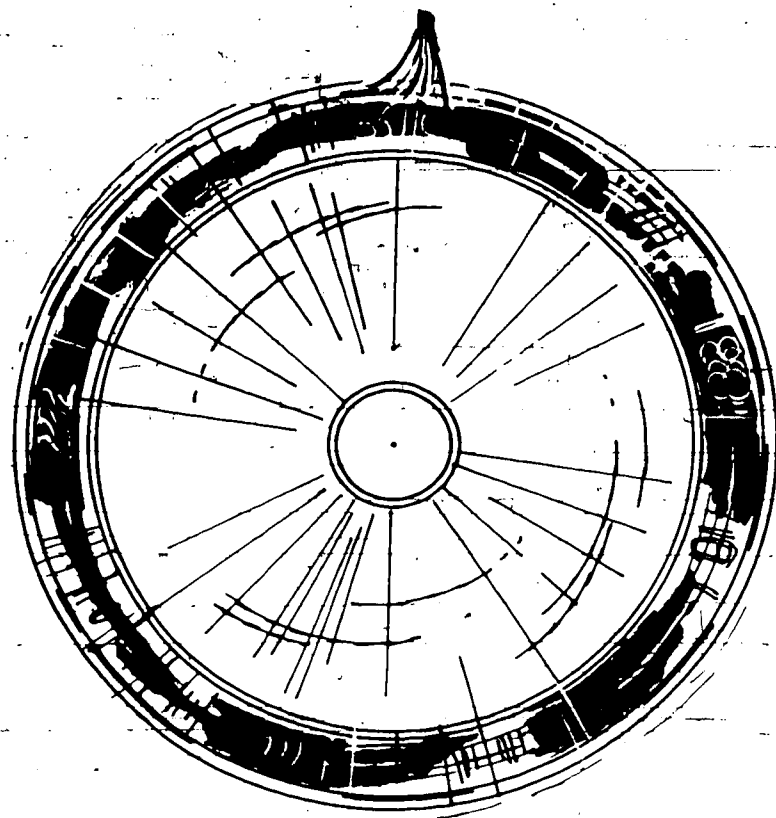

"Shoppers should be wary of pieces of beef selling under strange names," he said. "For example, I defy any butcher to give me an exact definition of a 'backyard steak,' or a 'barbecue steakette,' or a 'pushcart roast' or any other name dreamed up in a back room."

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe I'm actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but a friend has just put me on the spot, and I don't know how to handle it.

Sarah is a 59-year-old widow who "fell in love" with a 72-year-old widower she met on a cruise last winter. They are being married soon. She was just here and is as excited as a then-ager. I think she's flipped her lid. She wants a bridal shower! Abby, Sarah has everything she needs, and she can afford to buy anything she wants, but she insists it's not the gifts, it's just the idea of having a shower.

She said when she was married the first time things were rough, and she never had a shower, and now she'd like one: Sarah is such a dear and generous person I hate to let her down, but Abby, how can I invite women to a bridal shower for a 59-year-old bride who has everything?

ON THE SPOT IN PASSAIC

'Shower' expected

DEAR ON: Easy. Make it a gag gift shower. Ask everyone to bring a cute little inexpensive present for the 59-year-old bride of a 72-year-old groom. The possibilities are endless. [Also hilarious.]

DEAR ABBY: There's this dude named Nicky I really dig. We are both nearly 16. The other night I called Nicky up because he was home just getting over [of all things] the chicken pox.

The time passed so fast I didn't realize we'd talked for four hours, but this is what I want to say. Nicky said: "Hey, wait a minute, I think somebody's at the front door." Then he came back and said: "My dad is out of town on business and he's been trying to call the house for four hours, and he got so ticked off he called our next door neighbor long distance and asked him to come over here and tell whoever was on the phone to get the h— off!" Naturally, we got off fast, but here's the problem.

Nicky's dad put Nicky on restriction for a whole month: That means we can't go anywhere. Do you think this is a fair punishment for a little thing like that?

FEELS AWFUL

DEAR FEELS: It's a bit stiff. But I'll bet in the future, Nicky either gets his own telephone, or limits his conversations to 10 minutes.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson has been engaged to a lovely girl for a year and they are now making wedding plans. He is 24, and she is 22.

I know that both my grandson and his fiancée would like more than anything else in the world to go on a nice honeymoon, but they can't afford it because they have been buying appliances and household furnishings together.

I told him to let his friends and relatives know that they would rather have a donation toward their honeymoon than a lot of wedding presents, but he says he just couldn't tell them that as it would sound cheap.

What do you think?

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: He's right. He can't ask for money instead of gifts, but as his grandmother, you could suggest it to the relatives.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 63700, L. A., Calif. 90006. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Couple recites vows in outdoor rites

KETCHUM — The bridge over Trail Creek, near Trail Creek Cabin, was the setting for the July 28 ceremony uniting in marriage Tammie J. Smith and Kimberly K. Crofts.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Alden M. Packer of Hailey Ward LDS Church.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Keith Smith, Ketchum. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Merle Crofts, Hailey.

The bride was escorted from the cabin by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of ecru cotton designed with an empire waist line trimmed with a band of tiny orange, yellow and green flowers featuring an apron of antique lace. The Juliet sleeves were trimmed at the wrists with antique lace as was the stand-up collar.

Her veil of antique lace was handmade for her by her maternal grandmother and was trimmed with flowerets of green, orange and yellow to match the trim on her gown. To complete her bridal attire she wore a 75-year-old amethyst necklace and carried a lace handkerchief given her by her paternal grandmother. She also carried a single long stemmed Forever Yours rosebud tied in pale green ribbon.

Roxanne Smith, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Laura Keefer, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid.

Dan Litzinger served as best man. Kirk Smith, brother of the bride, and Lonnie Linderman were ushers.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Alga Arndt.

The reception was in Trail Creek Cabin where the bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Irene Dunbar, sister of the bridegroom, assisted by Patty Shaw.

Punch was served by Vickie Sabala; Kristy Bennett, Glenda Stelma and Andy Stoddard. Valerie Sabala was in charge of the guest book.

After the ceremony, the couple left for a honeymoon in the Sawtooths at the summer home of the bride's grandmother. They will reside in Ketchum.

Gray, Ogden; Mrs. Irene Dunbar and family, Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Crofts, Salt Lake City.

Filer miss, Barron say vows

TWIN FALLS — Mary Catherine Drew became the bride of Andrew Ashley Barron July 21 at the Church of Christ, Twin Falls.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester G. Drew, Filer. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barron, Buhl.

The double ring ceremony was performed before a background of yellow gladioli and white Majestic daisies. The wedding ceremony was performed by Don Wilson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of embroidered nylon organza featuring a semi-empire waistline banded in dainty trim of Venise lace, which also edged the deep skirt flounce, the high neckline, and the double flounced short sleeves.

The bodice was designed with a flattering ruffled square yoke and tiny covered buttons. A chapel-length bridal illusion veil, edged in matching Venise lace, was held by a flattering fan shaped crown. She carried a tiffany styled bouquet consisting of yellow golden garnet roses, white daisy pompons, baby-breath and natural green foliage.

Susan Barron, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Her bridesmaids were Barbara Garner and Sylvia Stephenson, both friends of the bride.

The best man was Louis Hurst. Groomsman were Joe Leach and Jerry Dunne. All were former teammates and friends of the bridegroom at Idaho State University.

Wedding music was provided by an a cappella choir who sang selections of modern and traditional wedding songs.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn after the ceremony. Guests were registered by Deanne Schneider. Gifts were cared for by Lynn Hennig.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding-cake with miniature yellow rosebuds and yellow and white daisies surrounding the bottom. The table was covered with a white lace drape. Crystal candelabra with yellow candles completed the table decor.

Punch was served by Jenny jack at trick one. Why not force dummy to ruff? East led his ace of spades.

South had a chance to trump in dummy and play trumps. If trumps broke 2-2 South would wind up making a slam. If they broke 3-1 South would wind up with a headache so South discarded a heart.

East led a third spade and South was careful to ruff in his own hand with the 10-spot. Three leads pulled the trumps. He cashed the ace and king of clubs, led his carefully preserved six of trumps, overtook with dummy's seven and made the rest of the tricks with the good clubs.

Mobile home law passed in Jerome

JEROME — Following eight months of controversy, the Jerome City Council Tuesday night passed a zoning ordinance specifying restrictions on mobile homes and livestock in the city.

The ordinance divides Jerome into three zones, the boundaries of which are defined in 10 pages of complex specifications.

Mobile homes and livestock are restricted from Zone 1. Only double wide mobile homes may be put in Zone 1-A from which cattle are also restricted. Zone 2 is open to all types of mobile homes and to livestock.

Impatient with the issue, which has dragged on for months, councilmen moved to suspend rules requiring three readings of the ordinance before passage and passed it after one reading.

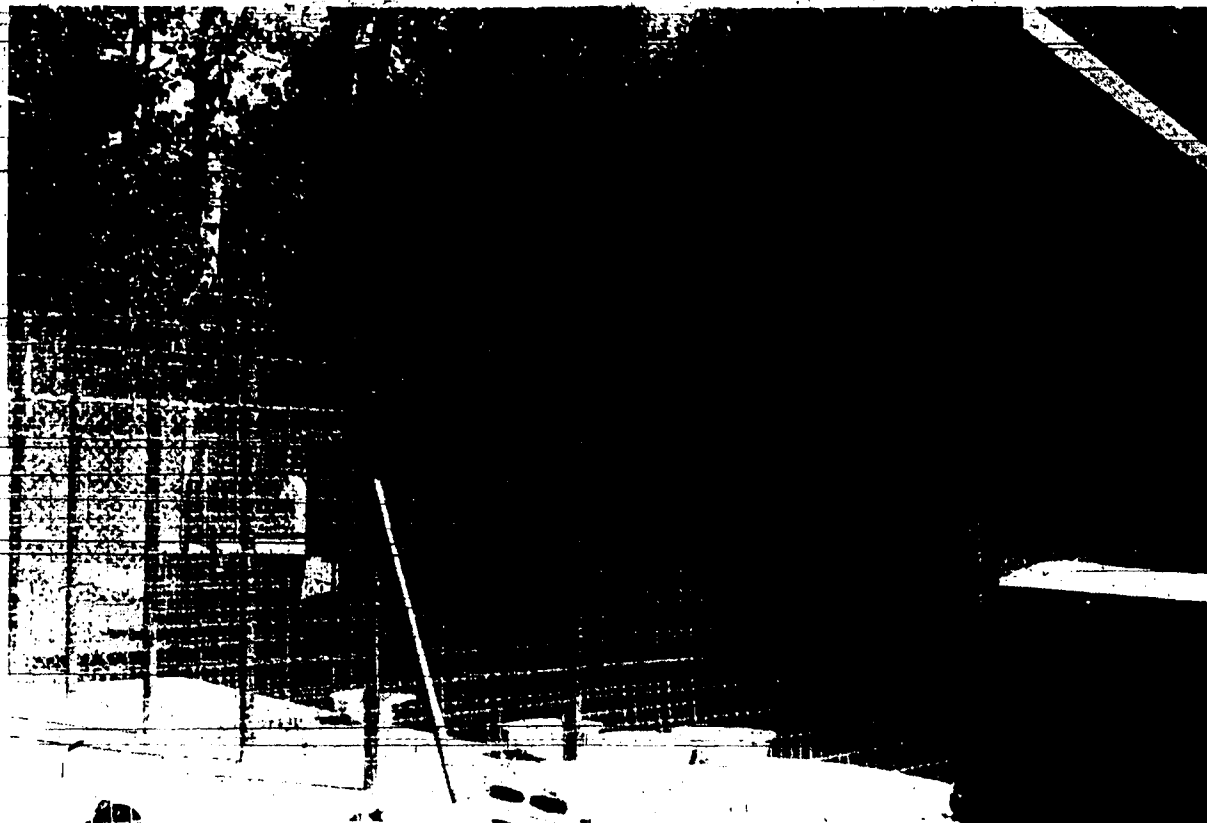

Councilman Marshall Everheart said that the ordinance had been published six times in the paper and had been presented on eight different occasions in council meetings. No one at the meeting protested the ordinance's passage.

The council also took a step towards the first pay increase for councilmen and the mayor in eight years. Ordinance 513, providing a yearly salary of $1,680 for the mayor and $1,200 for each councilman, underwent its first reading at the meeting.

Since 1966 the mayor's salary has been $1,500 per year and the councilmen's $10,080.

Everheart said that the salary increase should reflect the salary increase of all city employees since 1966. He maintained that councilmen's work load has more than tripled during the past eight years.

If passed, the ordinance will not take effect until Jan. 1, 1974, after city elections.

Hailey pound

THE NEW HAILEY dog pound is open for business. Constructed by city employees, the pound can house a maximum of 20 average sized dogs. According to councilman Claude Porter, the pound was needed to control an increasing dog problem within the city.

Fire, smoke damage Filer buildings

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — Fire Tuesday evening partially destroyed a building and caused extensive smoke and water damage to several Filer business houses.

The Filer City fire department was called at 6:10 p.m. to the former bank building at the corner of Main and Yakima in Filer. Jim DeVall, fire chief, said he saw the flames when he was driving home from his business office in Buhl.

The fire presumably started from trash which was burning in an incinerator in back of the building which houses Dorothy's Beauty Salon and the Magic Mill, Inc. Flames from the fire reached a pile of boxes and started to spread through the buildings.

Both the Filer fire department and the Twin Falls County Mutual truck which is kept in Filer, were put in service, as were the Buhl city and mutual trucks, Kimberly Mutual, and the truck from the Twin Falls labor camp.

Firemen kept the blaze from breaking through to the front of the buildings. Power lines, as well as telephone and Cable Vision cables, were burnt through and service was disrupted for a short time.

Mrs. Johnny Kuest, wife of the owner of the Magic Mill, Inc., said the company lost $1,600 of boxes alone, besides materials for 3,000 mills which were to be shipped this month. A number of the made up mills, stones and hardware were ruined by water or smoke. The company was preparing to ship a load of the mills on Thursday and were already five weeks behind on sales, Mrs. Kuest said.

Dorothy's Beauty Salon received extensive smoke and water damage. The former bank building was empty as the offices had moved to the new bank building across from the Fairways Shopping Center this spring. The library which is in the back of the building, was not damaged.

The four apartments on the second floor of the bank building suffered smoke damage causing two of the tenants to move out Tuesday evening. The other two apartments had just been vacated and new tenants were planning to move in this week.

Fire chief DeVall said firemen would be stationed at the site of the blaze all night to watch for flareups.

Simplot plans operating agreement

BOISE — J. R. Simplot Co. may enter into an operating agreement to run currently idle potato processing plants owned by Western Farmers Association in Idaho Falls and Aberdeen.

Western Farmers president O. R. Wiede announced today that the company has leased the idle plants to Inland Terminal Warehouse, Inc., Boise, effective Aug. 1.

Inland president, John Dahl, in turn announced his company hopes to enter into an operating agreement with J. R. Simplot Co., one of the nation's largest food processors, to take over management of the Western Farmers plants.

Western Farmers will continue to operate its Nampa plant. According to the Inland Terminal announcement, the Aberdeen and Idaho Falls plants of Western Farmers have been idle for some time and Western Farmers has been trying to dispose of them for several months.

Dahl said both plants are now being thoroughly examined by employees of J. R. Simplot to ascertain what modifications are required to put the plants into operation.

Should the survey indicate the plants can be operated this year, Dahl said, then Inland hopes to make arrangements with Simplot to run them.

Inland's agreement with Western Farmers also includes the leasing of fresh potato warehouses at Moreland and Thornton and a fertilizer facility at Moreland.

Support denied for area park

Campbell said the failure to recommend a national park preserve status for the area would not necessarily doom the national park concept.

"Congress can do anything it wants to. The National Park Service has standards. The area might not fit exactly into a park category, but Congress could write special legislation," he said.

"What we're doing is we're developing alternative possibilities for congressmen, the Park Service and the public to come to agreement on."

The Park Service study's failure to recommend placing the Thousand Springs area under National Park control contrasted sharply with another section of the report made public in the Times-News Tuesday.

That section recommended strongly that the Hagerman Valley fossil beds be designated a national monument.

According to Campbell, "The Hagerman Valley fossil sites meet all the criteria for a park. It's a very solid park proposal."

"One is a very clear-cut park issue and the other is not so clear."

Campbell said study did not list as an alternative use Sen. James McClure's, R-Idaho, proposal that the Box Canyon area be given a "wild river" designation.

TF man charged

TWIN FALLS — Nels E. Nelson, 47, Twin Falls, was arrested Tuesday on charges of assault and battery and malicious destruction of property.

Nelson was arrested about 6:30 p.m. by Twin Falls police officers on a warrant issued Aug. 5. He was accused of attacking another man with his fists.

Nelson remained in the county jail today in lieu of $300 bond on both charges.

In a second arrest, Jill Alicia Lawson, 22, Twin Falls, was charged with possession of a controlled substance. She was arrested about 3:30 p.m. Tuesday by Twin Falls police. No further information was available.

City employees demand pay hike

SHOSHONE — Shoshone city employees besieged a city council meeting Tuesday night with demands for wage increases to meet their financial responsibilities in the face of rising costs.

Four of the city's six employees attended the meeting to complain about inadequate wage scales, and inconsistent compensation relating to job responsibilities and titles.

Some of the employees indicated they are being forced into debt because of the low salaries and would leave the city jobs if salaries are not increased.

Figures read at the meeting indicated the Shoshone salary schedule is one of the lowest in the state. Salaries in the city with a population of 1,241 persons range from $431 per month for the assistant police chief to a high of $583 a month for the city overseer.

Assistant police chief David Swanner told the council the trash collector recently hired for the city draws a higher salary than the assistant police chief on the two-man police force and that the salaries need to be adjusted according to job responsibilities and seniority.

The council devoted most of the meeting to the salary problem, then tabled further action on the matter, promising to give the employees an answer at a meeting Tuesday.

Water problems cited at Blaine meet

HAILEY — Flood plain development, highways and waste water disposal were among area problems cited Tuesday in a meeting with Blaine County, municipal and federal officials.

The meeting was designed as an initial survey of water and related land problems in urban areas for a study sponsored by the Idaho Water Resource Board and the State Planning and Community Affairs Agency.

Focusing on Sun Valley, Ketchum, Idaho Falls, Pocatello and Burley, the study is being conducted by Roy Taylor and Cyrus Nims, CH2M Consulting Engineers, Boise.

The study is financed by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The study results will be incorporated in the Idaho State Water Plan and the Comprehensive Joint Plan of the Pacific Northwest River Basins Commission.

During Tuesday's session, Blaine County Commission chairman C. W. (Andy) Gardner said a private firm is presently conducting a cost survey for a major sewage trunkline to serve the Wood River Valley. He declined, as yet, to name the firm.

Gardner said the firm anticipates making a rough estimate of the trunkline costs to determine whether such a line is feasible. The proposed line, under study, Gardner said, would extend from Ketchum to a land disposal site south of Bellevue.

Gardner stated that the commission is researching a method of allocating to the various communities, a state imposed 1,000 pound BOD loading limit on the Big Wood River. He said the commission has conducted preliminary discussions on the allocation and will seek further aid from area and municipal officials as well as the state.

The commission chairman also cited a highway traffic problem from Timmerman Hill north. New sub-divisions and homes have resulted in an increase of access roads onto U.S. Highway 93, he said.

Doug Bishop, Hailey, Soil Conservation Service, expressed concern about the flood plane development and its effect on the character of the Wood River Valley.

"Intensive development in the flood plane is not compatible with the type of river we have now," Bishop said and stated that residents will have to determine a policy regarding further such development.

Bishop also stated that consideration must be given to the effect of upstream urban development on downstream agriculture. If residents favor retaining this agriculture, he said, measures must be taken to insure its continuance.

Hansen adopts code

HANSEN — The Hansen City Council adopted a uniform building code from the 1973 edition of the Idaho Building Code Monday night.

Speed zone and speed limit signs on the road north of town and the Rock Creek road south of Hansen have been installed, according to Harold Miller Jr., Hansen Mayor.

Hailey mayor Lawrence Heagle discussed underground water provisions for the 650 acre McCulloch Properties Inc., Woodside Development.

Heagle also recommended that county and city officials should determine the effluent carrying capacity for the river.

Gray Reynolds, superintendent of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA) and also representing the Ketchum Ranger District, said the newly formed SNRA will have a "big effect" on Ketchum, Sun Valley and the Big Wood River area.

Reynolds said a 20 year land use plan has been developed and will be released for public review and comment this fall.

The superintendent said the land use plan includes limits on visitor use which "can be maintained without degrading the environment."

County planning and zoning administrator David Vhay stressed the need for a basin wide, comprehensive waste water study.

Vhay also said that the state water administration study, which is presently in progress, will provide a valuable data base for planning. Such data, he said, will include information about ground water movements, soil types and the impact of urban development on river quality.

Basic changes outlined for MV school lunches

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Soybean burgers, cheese casseroles, hot dogs and peanut butter sandwiches are likely to occupy more prominent positions on school lunch menus this year throughout Magic Valley.

Squeezed between soaring prices and beef shortages, school lunch program directors throughout the area report that basic changes will be made in the program.

"The price isn't so bad, it's the idea that you can't get it," Betty Otto, Jerome district school lunch supervisor said, regarding beef.

Mrs. Otto said that she used to buy 4,000 pounds of beef at a time, but now only has enough on hand to last two weeks when school starts Aug. 28.

"I'm afraid the price of poultry is clear out of reach," she said.

To counter the costs Jerome schools will probably have more "turkey, wieners, soybeans and the like for protein," Mrs. Otto said.

Even so, as in other school districts, the price of the school lunch will be upped a nickel this year to 35 cents for the grade schools and 40 cents for the high school.

Besides rising food prices, one reason for the five cent increase is that the federal government is no longer providing many staples.

Last year the government supplied the Jerome schools with one-fifth of the total meat used during the year. This year the government will supply no meat since there is no surplus as there had been previously, Mrs. Otto said.

In fact, she added, it seems that only butter and flour will be provided by the government to the district this year. Previously the government had supplied a wide variety of staples totaling eight cents in value for each meal in the Jerome district.

Mrs. Otto, who recently returned from the American School Food Service National Convention in New Orleans, said that the government may provide nine or ten cents in money for each lunch in lieu of the staples.

However she added that "things are really undecided as far as the federal government is concerned" and concluded, "We'll have to make it on our own more."

James Muscat, superintendent of Gooding schools, said that his district is attempting to buy beef for the program, but that the shortage and the high price will have a "great effect" on the menu.

"In our regular class A lunch program you'll see a lot less meat. But we will try to maintain a nutritious lunch for the students."

"Throughout the country schools will probably have to improvise on school lunch programs," he added. "You'll probably see a lot more casseroles, wieners, soybean burgers and that type of thing."

Regarding staples supplied by the government he said, "There practically isn't any. So far only a bit of turkey, pineapple and sweet potatoes have been promised from the government."

Gooding students used to be able to get extra milk along with their lunch. Now, with the staple cut, if they want more than the half pint provided, they will have to pay a dime for another half pint.

Muscat concluded that the same situation is facing Americans everywhere. "It'll be no different than (the situation) for the housewife," he said. "My wife is changing; I've eaten more casseroles this summer than ever before."

"I don't think it will hurt the people. The average American eats too much anyway," he said adding a note of optimism.

Mrs. William Fultz, food supervisor of the Buhl School District, predicted both change in the types of foods served and cuts in the quantity served.

She said that Northland Lockers, which sells meat to the Buhl school district, has not been able to say whether it will be able to supply beef prior to Sept. 12 or at what price it will sell beef after the freeze is lifted that day.

Even without being able to buy beef yet, food prices have "really cut into the budget that we are allotted" she said.

"We'll probably have to serve more peanut butter and dried beans," Mrs. Fultz added.

Prices in Buhl will rise a nickel to 35 cents for children and increase a dime to 50 cents for adults this year. In addition, quantity will be decreased; previously, the district served a full cup of vegetables and a full cup of fruit with the lunch. Now, the quantity will be cut back to the minimum requirements of 1/4 a cup of vegetables and 1/4 cup of fruit, she said.

Poultry meals will be cut too, Mrs. Fultz maintained. Last year the government supplied all poultry meats, comprising 12 per cent of total meals served during the year. This year, no poultry can be expected from the government.

Beef shortages and rising food costs have also affected hospitals in the area.

Jim Rosenbaum, administrator for the Twin Falls Magic Memorial Hospital, said rising food costs are creating budget problems.

He explained that under wage-price rules of Phase II, which still apply to hospitals, Twin Falls Memorial cannot pass on food price rises to the patients without permission from the Cost of Living Council in Washington, D. C.

The hospital has asked for a two per cent rate increase, but has been denied it so far, he said.

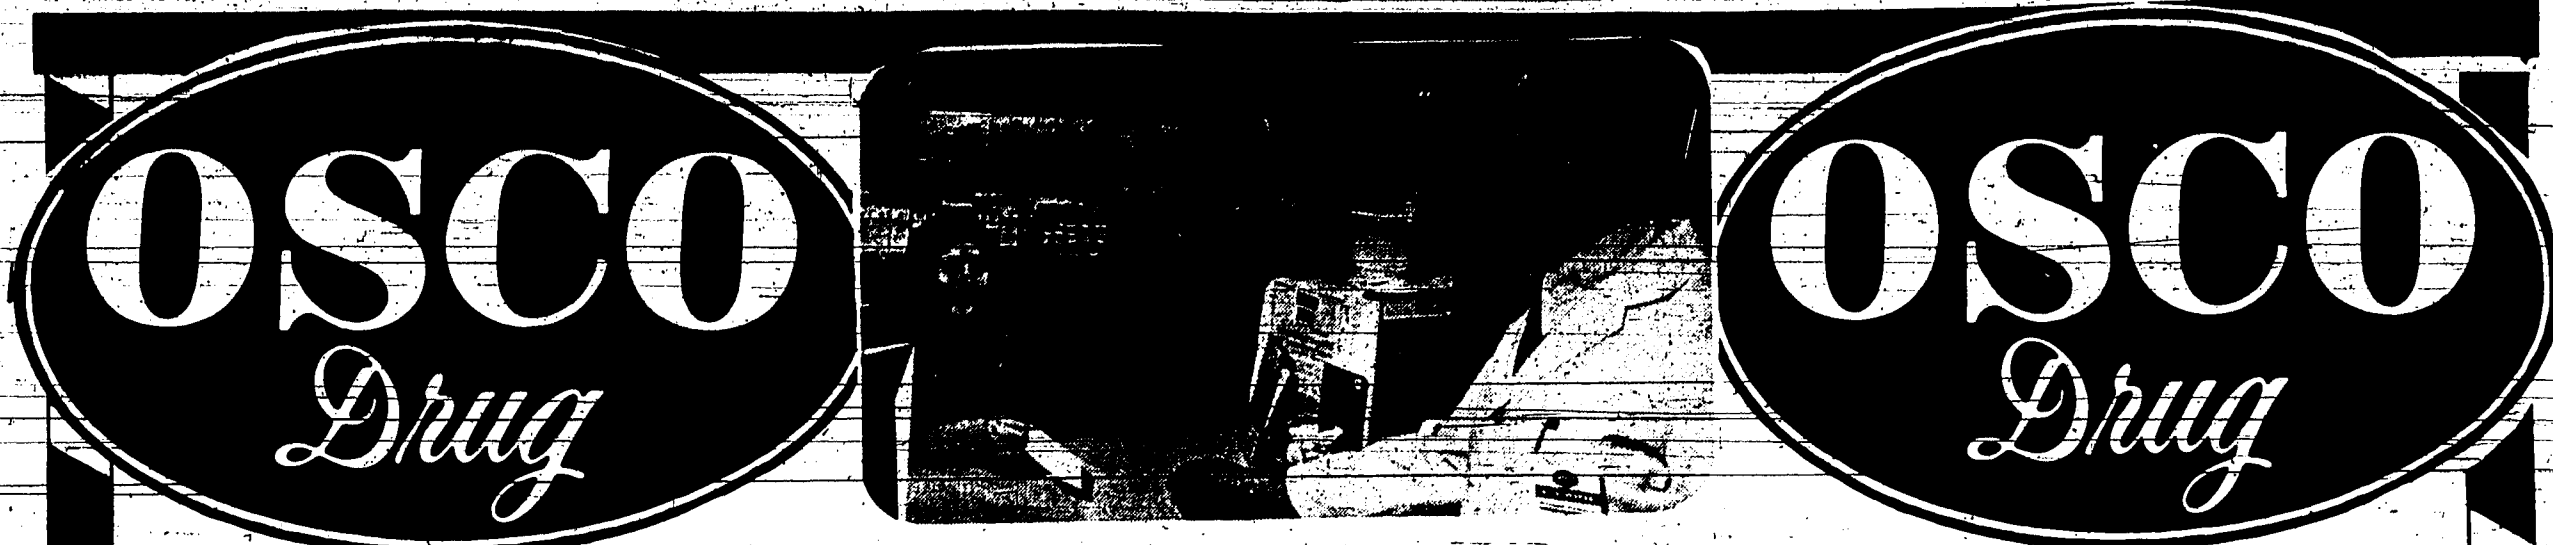

Although the hospital has not yet cut back on the number of beef and poultry dinners, Rosenbaum is "anticipating" beef shortages and corresponding modification of the menu.

"The biggest problem so far is having to substitute and wait longer for orders," Gary Steinbach, administrator of the Hailey and Sun Valley hospitals, said.

He added that even though the hospitals had not been short on beef yet, the food budgets were "going way over what we had expected."

St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome has had to cut back on beef and poultry meals in the staff cafeteria, according to Jerry Jacobson, the hospital administrator. The patients, however, are eating beef the same as before, he said.

But the future is uncertain. Jacobson said that SAGA, which supplies St. Benedict's with food, is having trouble obtaining beef and can't guarantee supplying it in the future.

DETROIT (UPI)—Jim Perry and John Hiller muffed the explosive Oakland bats, which had scored five runs in the last two innings to give the A's an 8-4 victory in the first game Tuesday night, on just five hits to earn the Detroit Tigers a 2-0 win and a split of their two-night doubleheader.

signed Jim Chones to a multi-year contract for a $1 million a year and put together a $4 million package for Julius Erving last week, shook some loose change out of their piggy bank Tuesday.

The change amounted to about $250,000 and Nets president Roy Boe used it to sign Billy Schaeffer, a St. John's University standout last season.

Schaeffer was the Nets' No. 2 draft choice and they outbid the NBA Los Angeles Lakers for his services.

Boe said that with the recent acquisition of Memphis State's Larry Kenon plus Schaeffer the team now has "the three best young forwards around."

"I think that the Nets are now competitive with any team in either league," said Boe. But later both Boe and coach Kevin Loughery declined to predict an ABA championship for the Nets.

Boe, hedging, said: "We're going to be an extremely young team this year."

Loughery then added that the average age of the Nets is now just under 24 and that "our only veteran players will be Bill Melchionni and Tom Washington."

"With these recent acquisitions, we have become a tremendous contender in just the last 10 days. But this is the beginning of August and it's much too early to predict anything."

Loughery said he plans to use Schaeffer at a forward position. "Billy is an absolutely super shooter," he said. "I don't say that he has tremendous speed but he's like Bailey Howell, he has the ability to get down on the break."

Loughery added that he feels Schaeffer has the "desire and attitude of a Mike Riordan."

Schaeffer, a native of Bellrose, N.Y., said that he signed with the Nets because: "New York is my home town and I thought that this was the best opportunity for me."

Schaeffer said the Lakers offered him a three-year, no-cut contract but he insisted that this was not a factor in his decision to go with the Nets.

The victory lifted the Royals, who rallied from a five-run deficit, into first place in the American League West, one-half game in front of Oakland which split a doubleheader with Detroit. The win also was the Royals' eighth in their last nine games and 15th in their last 19.

First-round draft choice in both leagues opts for Denver

DENVER (UPI)—All-America Mike Green of Louisiana Tech, the first-round draft choice of the ABA Indiana Pacers and the NBA Seattle SuperSonics, signed a three-year contract with the Denver Rockets of the American Basketball Association Tuesday.

Terms of the pact were not disclosed. Rocket general manager Alex Hannum said the team gave up a future draft choice and cash to Indiana for the rights to Green, who set virtually every Tech scoring and rebounding record.

"This is a milestone in the progression of the Denver Rockets," said Hannum. "I am personally proud not only in signing Mike Green but also to hear that Mike Green feels as enthusiastic about Denver as he indicated."

Green said his lawyer, Norman Blass, told Indians officials during early talks that Green preferred to play in Denver, but was willing to play for Indiana.

"I think the Denver Rockets are something like Tech," said the 6-10, 200-pound native of McComb, Miss. "They are building something and I want to be part of it."

Hannum said Green's weight, which made Seattle coach Bill Russell leery of Green, was a minimal problem.

"Mike has never missed a game so he is a sturdy player," said Hannum. "He starts me dreaming about the future and becoming the type of club that I like, one which runs most of the time."

"He is a super defensive player, a super shot spoiler and a super shot-blocker who can run," said Hannum.

Spencer and Packard named to Idaho team

Kevin Packard of Twin Falls and Bill Spencer of Burley will be part of the Idaho team representing Idaho in the Junior America's cup team matches Aug. 20 through 24 in Monterey, Calif.

The Magic Valley duo will join Carl Ayers, Boise who is playing out of Rupert this summer; Kurt Weitz of Caldwell, and Pat Marmo of Idaho Falls.

They are scheduled to leave Aug. 18 and arrive in Monterey in time for a practice round at the Bayonet Course at Fort Ord, Calif., Aug. 20.

They will meet teams from British Columbia, Northern California, Southern California, San Diego, Oregon, Utah, Nevada, Northern Mexico and Metropolitan Mexico.

Lee Chatterton, president of the sponsoring Idaho Golf Association, said the team would be presented with golf bags proclaiming "Idaho American's Cup" in white letters plus matching golf shirts.

Spencer won his spot on the teams by winning the state junior title while Ayers was selected for his third place finish in the USGA junior qualifying. The other three were selected as representatives of their areas.

Adderley released by Rams

FULLERTON, Calif. (UPI)—Former All-Pro defensive back Herb Adderley was released on waivers Tuesday by the Los Angeles Rams, who acquired him less than two weeks ago in a trade with New England.

Adderley, a 13-year veteran who played with Green Bay and later with the Dallas Cowboys, was among five players released by the Rams to bring the roster down to 62 players, one under the club's limit.

Also released on waivers were rookie free agents Hugo Salcedo, a placekicker from the University of California.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange opened slightly lower Wednesday in sluggish trading. Minutes after the opening, the Dow Jones industrial average had dropped 0.07 to 911.88. Declines held a tiny lead on advances, among 354 issues traded.

On Tuesday, a general lack of buying enthusiasm stemming from the Agnew investigation, rising interest rates and inflation pulled stocks a shade lower. The Dow fell 0.83 to 911.95, but the index of 30 blue chips masked a fairly broad-based decline. Over 800 issues were lower during the day.

The questions of how much higher interest rates will soar before peaking, and to what depths the dollar will sink abroad still appear to be the main sources of uncertainty for most investors. There is growing fear the returns offered by such debt instruments as certificates of deposits have become more attractive to some investors than common stocks.

The dollar opened lower on Wednesday in early fixing in Paris and Frankfurt.

Rate reverse due

By PETER S. NAGAN
WASHINGTON — The current dizzy climb in interest rates could peak out and go into reverse sometime in the next two or three months. That's the prospect now emerging in the view of a number of government officials concerned with monetary affairs. They, like everyone else, don't know for sure when the turn will come. But they see some trends that point to a topping out sometime in October or November.

What's What

That concoction known as Angostura Bitters has been around for 149 years, but only four people know exactly how to make it. Two members of Trinidad's Siegfert family plus two hired hands. Every week one of the four, taking turns, locks himself in a room to mix up a seven-day supply. Remarkable. Know of no other recipe so successfully kept secret for so long.

Understand about 100 oldtime barbers a day now nationwide are closing up their shops. . . . Obsolete. A average fee in a routine maternity case is said to be about $285. . . . Trouble with elephants is they get stomach cramps when the temperature drops below about 35 degrees F. . . . Takes nine bottles of white wine to distill one bottle of good brandy. . . . Assuming you're an average healthy grownup, you can figure your blood in 24 hours travels 168 million miles.

Q "What's Secretariat's stud fee?"
A So far at least 32 citizens each have offered $190,000 for Secretariat's services once a year for the rest of his life. Quite right, great horses are the only athletes worth more in retirement than in competition.

Q "Wam'it Calvin Coolidge who said, 'For the first time in history, profits are higher than ever before'?"
A That was Lyndon Johnson. Calvin Coolidge said, "When a great number of people are not working, a state of unemployment exists."

Q "In what gambling games does the most money change hands?"
A Craps, poker and horse races. In that order.

HAIR
Are you certain your child is in dandy health? If not, pull his hair. No, not all of it, madam. Just one hair. If it comes out painlessly with ease, that's bad. Very bad. Dr. A. von Murali, a protein specialist in the Ivory Coast of Africa, contends: "If youngsters don't eat enough protein, their hair gets weak and easy to pluck out." But he says if the child yells "Ouch!" when said hair is pulled, that signifies proper nourishment.

Ever see an oyster with black meat? Neither have I. A Maryland packer has turned up such. A mutation, evidently. Shells are white. But just like the dark meat of a chicken, the black flesh of these fancy oysters is said to be rich and tasty.

You recall the fictional Mrs. Miniver no doubt, but do you know what miniver is? That's the snazzy term for ermine fur trim on the capes of judges, presidents and kings.

Under Nevada's original laws, a man could get life for stealing a horse, three years for murder.

Judges' pay low

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — Prosperous attorneys are turning down offers of federal judgeships with increasing frequency because the pay is too low, according to the Federal Judicial Center.

In the last year, more than 20 lawyers whom the Nixon administration sought to nominate to the federal bench have declined to be nominated, said a center spokesman.

Eleven attorneys in the New York City area alone have rejected the opportunity for a federal judgeship in the last 12 months.

And several judges have resigned from the federal bench in the last year because they found the pay to be unsatisfactory, the spokesman added without giving a precise number.

The annual salary for a judge on a U.S. District Court is $40,000. A judge on the U.S. Court of appeals makes $42,500 a year.

But many lawyers earn considerably more than this in private practice. In New York City, partners in many prominent law firms earn more than $200,000 a year.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger referred to this salary problem during his annual state-of-the-judiciary message Monday to the American Bar Association, which is holding its convention here.

"It is unfortunate, indeed, that federal judges have received no increase in compensation in the five-year period when salaries of private employees and classified federal employees have been increased by one third in addition to periodic increases based on years of service or promotion in grade," said Burger.

The failure to provide fairly for judges' compensation will make it more and more difficult to prevail on the best of our experienced litigation lawyers to take these appointments — and we must not settle for less than the best," he declared.

The chief justice also renewed his complaint that there are not enough federal judges to handle the burgeoning caseload. Currently, there are about 400 federal judgeships.

Scouts end jamboree week one boy shy

TWIN FALLS — Boy Scout Troop 1111 of the Snake River Area Council will wind up National Jamboree West activities at Farragut State Park one member short.

According to Tad Haney, troop reporter, James Brady, Twin Falls, was flown home this week from Fairchild Air Force Base, Spokane, Wash., after treatment for back muscle injuries. Brady is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brady.

Jamboree reporter for Troop 65 of the Twin Falls First

Christian Church, Brian Cloward, writes:

"Dear Mr. Times News:

"Troop 65 had the honor of 'having the Colonel' for supper this week. We served Colonel Sanders a dinner of mashed potatoes, chicken, green peas, milk, plus orange sherbet for dessert. Lee Leslie, senior patrol leader, and scoutmaster Keith Jensen greeted Colonel Sanders. Bill Burch presented him a carved medallion of himself. The colonel commented afterward that the chicken was good."

Colonel signs

JIM BOLTON of Boy Scout Troop 65 of the Twin Falls First Christian Church gets the autograph of Col. Sanders of Kentucky Fried Chicken fame. The colonel "dined" with the troop this week at the National Scout Jamboree West at Farragut State Park. About 160 scouts and 17 adult leaders from Magic Valley are attending jamboree activities.

Cassia kindergarten set

BURLEY — The school administration is going ahead with plans for a kindergarten program in Cassia County this fall.

Norman Hurst, instructional director, said Monday.

Over a month ago, the school board gave the administration its approval to go ahead with a kindergarten program "if it could be done at no cost to the district, since no funds had been budgeted for such a project."

A registration program was set up at that time to determine how many students would enroll and the locations of heaviest enrollment.

Registration figures have been low up to this point, but the administration has decided to attempt to organize a program anyway.

The program will be set up on the premise that at any point it becomes unsuccessful or too costly, it will be dropped, Hurst said.

Classes are tentatively scheduled to be set up in Malta, Springdale and Oakley, Hurst said. A minimum of 15 students will be needed for each class and $15 per student each month will be charged, he said.

At this point, there have not been enough requests from the area to set up a program in Burley, he said, and students from this area may have to go to Springdale for classes.

More aides than teachers may have to be hired to supervise the classes, Hurst said, to cut down the cost of instruction.

Opening day for the classes will probably be set around Sept. 15, when Head Start classes begin, he said.

Registration is still open and forms may be picked up at the central school office.
