Agnew airs troubles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew reviewed Agnew's legal and political troubles for two hours Saturday, and reportedly there was no talk of the vice president resigning. "They're really pulling together," an Agnew aide said. At the vice president's request, he and Nixon met alone at the White House for the first time since Agnew personally informed Nixon nearly a month ago he was under federal investigation in connection with an alleged kickback scheme involving Maryland contractors. Afterwards, the White House described it as a "thorough discussion" and "a good session." An Agnew spokesman said it was a "very, very satisfactory meeting" in which they reviewed the way the vice president and his lawyers were handling the affair. "The vice president brought the President up to date on current matters involving himself," White House deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said. "It was a good session." Nixon and the vice president met Agnew in the Oval Office starting at 10:30 a.m., about nine hours after Nixon returned from a 12-day working vacation at San Clemente, Calif. Warren refused to give any details of their discussion, saying it was "a private meeting."

There was no discussion of Agnew resigning, Warren said, nor was there any review of constitutional questions about Agnew's legal status as vice president while under criminal investigation. Agnew's press spokesman, Marsh Thomson, confirmed Warren's remarks and said they had a very, very satisfactory meeting together. Thomson said there was nothing of a major, special nature to the meeting.

Rail unions defy back-to-work law

OTTAWA (UPI) — Union officials representing 18,000 of Canada's 50,000 striking railway employees refused to order their members to obey government back-to-work legislation Saturday, jeopardizing the scheduled general resumption of service. Leaders of the other unions involved in the nine-day national strike had earlier recommended their members comply with the legislation and return to work at midnight. However, officials of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CBRTGW) abstained from the back-to-work order and instead told members to hold local meetings in the next 48 hours to decide whether to obey the legislation. Workers on ferries in Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland were exempted from the union order. The CBRTGW said its members were asked to return to work to evacuate thousands of tourists stranded in the island provinces when railway-operated ferries were shut down. The union also represents clerks, truckdrivers and janitors employed by Canadian National Railways (CNR). CBRTGW national president Don Secord said he expected members would throw up picket lines, which are illegal under terms of the legislation. Secord said he also expected other non-picketing railway employees would refuse to cross the lines. However, other CBRTGW executives said there would be no picket lines. National vice president Eddie Pelletier said he had instructed the union's 5,000 members in Montreal to "withhold all picket lines and just not show up for work." "I can tell you right now that in most of the large centers there will be no picket lines tomorrow," he said.

Gem meat production up
BOISE (UPI) — July red meat production in Idaho commercial slaughter houses totaled 25.6 million pounds. This was a 14 per cent increase above the same month a year ago. According to the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, both the number of cattle slaughtered and the average live weight were above a year earlier, resulting in a 17 per cent increase in the total live weight. Red meat includes beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton.

Former Utah solon dies
OREM, Utah (UPI) — Arthur V. Watkins, the white-haired conservative from Utah who led the U.S. Senate's censure of Joseph McCarthy in 1954, died Saturday. He was 88. Watkins, who served two terms in the U.S. Senate from 1947 to 1969, and later was chairman of the U.S. Indian Claims Commission, died of cancer at his daughter's home in Orem.

Landslide buries 12
NEW DELHI (UPI) — Twelve laborers were buried alive and 40 others injured in a landslide at a highway construction site about 300 miles northwest of Simla, the Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency reported Saturday. It said two bodies were recovered from the slide, which occurred Friday.

Skylab crew 'awfully good'
HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 2 astronauts said Saturday they felt "awfully good" and were eager to extend their record two-month space journey five or 10 days beyond its planned spin-down Sept. 25. The space station crew charged through a heavy work schedule, shooting pictures of earth's natural resources to help farmers in South America and weather scientists studying tropical storms.

Proxmire asks cautious press
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., urged the news media Saturday to take special care in reporting the criminal investigation of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and said use of leaked allegations subverts the U.S. system of justice.

Christine not so windy
MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Christine yielded some of its strength to a low-pressure system Saturday that cut the storm's top winds to 50 miles an hour. The National Hurricane Center said Christine's center had shifted slightly left of its previous course and that the storm might present a threat to the northeastern Leeward Islands by late Sunday, about a day sooner than previously expected. At 4 p.m. EDT, the storm's third tropical storm was located near latitude 15.5 north and longitude 54.8 west, or about 750 miles east-southeast of San Juan, P.R. Christine was reported moving west-northwest at 16 to 18 m.p.h.

Sihanouk to shun Kissinger
PEKING (UPI) — Exiled Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Saturday he will not meet Henry A. Kissinger when the U.S. Secretary of State's aide comes to Peking after Senate confirmation of his cabinet appointment. "I shall go to Hanoi and stay in Hanoi all the days Kissinger spends in Peking and in China," Sihanouk said in the second of a series of exclusive interviews with United Press International.

Trapped mini-sub crew survives 75-hour ordeal

CORK, Ireland (UPI) — Two British submariners landed in Cork Saturday en route home from their harrowing 75-hour ordeal in a minisubmarine. They said they felt "great" after what officials described as the deepest underwater rescue in history. The two men, Roger Mallinson, 35, and Roger Chapman, 28, were brought to the surface with the aid of an American robot submarine which finally succeeded in attaching a stout rope to their trapped submarine after several fruitless tries by other minisubs. Drinking champagne, the two sailors played down their ordeal. "I feel great!" Chapman said as he and Mallinson clambered unaided from their disabled craft 75 hours and 50 minutes after it sank Wednesday while trying a transatlantic telephone cable. During a brief stopover in Cork, where they were taken by helicopter en route to a reunion with their families in England, the two men said their only anxious moments came while they were being winched up from the sea bed. "It was rough," Mallinson said. "We were swinging back and forth." "It was very pleasant and very comfortable down there," Mallinson joked. Asked whether he and Chapman were worried at any stage, he replied: "No, no. We knew we had a pretty good team on top." Mallinson denied earlier reports that he had little more than an hour's supply of oxygen left when they reached the surface. He said there was about a day's supply of air remaining.

Gray to resign

TWIN FALLS — Mike Gray will resign early this week from the Twin Falls City Council for personal and business reasons, he said Friday. Gray was elected to a four-year term in November, 1971. He is the second councilman to quit in the last five months. Tom Nelson resigned this spring when he moved outside the city limits. "I have four children I'd like to spend some time with," Gray said, "and I have a new business operation that demands a lot of my time." He expressed his appreciation to the voters, saying, "I would like to thank the people of Twin Falls for the confidence they seemed to have in me. I sincerely appreciate the confidence the community has shown in me and also appreciate the confidence of fellow councilmen." Gray coupled the announcement of his resignation with a warning against what he said was a tendency of "newspaper people and the community sometimes" to be overly critical of the people who serve in public life. Citing the recent resignation of John Rosholt from the city zoning commission because of a recent Idaho State Bar ruling on disclosure of clients, Gray warned against "overreacting" to the question of conflict. Juveniles escape; one comes back

TWIN FALLS — One of two juvenile escapees from the Twin Falls county jail turned himself into county authorities late Saturday night. A second escapee was still at large early Sunday morning. Authorities said one of the juveniles surrendered voluntarily after apparently having a telephone conversation with a deputy. The pair apparently escaped Friday night by cutting a hole in the ceiling of their cell and using workmen's scaffolding on the building's exterior to lower themselves from the fourth floor. The escape took place only weeks after the Twin Falls county commissioners approved a contract for the construction of two new juvenile cells and a watchman's station in the county facility. Sheriff's officers said the two, both 17-year-old boys, pried a metal bar from one of their beds and used it to punch a hole in the corner of the ceiling. They worked their way through the hole and entered the rafters of the building, then climbed onto the roof through an air vent, authorities said. The jail is on the top floor of the county courthouse. Once on the roof, officers said, they were able to climb onto scaffolding being used by crews currently cleaning the outside walls of the courthouse. Ropes on the scaffolding were belayed and used to lower the two to the ground or to a window on a lower floor from which they could walk down the stairs and out a door. Officers said the two were reported missing about 8 p.m. Friday and had apparently escaped just shortly before that. The two boys, both from Twin Falls, were being held on separate juvenile proceedings. One was arrested recently by city officers and the other by county officers. Last November two juveniles broke out the plumbing in a cell and out through a wall into the sheriff's vacant apartment and onto a ledge which they followed to a window on the fourth floor outside of the jail area. They then dropped from the landing to the third floor and walked from the building.

Libya grabs oil firms

BEIRUT (UPI) — The Libyan government of Col. Muammar Khadafi announced Saturday its takeover of controlling 51 per cent interest in six foreign oil companies operating in the country, five of them American. Tripoli Radio, broadcasting from the Libyan capital and monitored here, identified the five American companies affected by the latest nationalization decree as Esso Standard Libya, Mobil Oil Libya, Ltd., Texaco Overseas, Asian Standard Oil Co. of California, and the Libyan-American Petroleum Co. The sixth was the British-Dutch Shell Co. for Exploration and Production, Libya.

County rejects funding for TF Humane Society

By GEORGE WILEY, Times-News Writer
TWIN FALLS — The financially beleaguered Twin Falls Humane Society will apparently get no assistance from Twin Falls County until at least the first of next year. "This despite the fact that, according to society director Babbi Glazmann, about 50 per cent of the organization's animal control work is done in Twin Falls County, outside the city." County commissioners Thursday told Mrs. Glazmann no money was available in the current county budget. They also questioned the legality and appropriateness of using revenue sharing — the most likely source of assistance — to aid the society even after entering a new fiscal year next January. Twin Falls City already had a contract with the Humane Society providing $150 per month for animal control but other services, and the city pays the money out of its revenue sharing funds. In meeting with the county commissioners Thursday, Mrs. Glazmann was seeking funds to help the society meet its immediate debt obligations. At issue was about $1,031 in county revenue sharing funds which Commissioner William Wiseman had earlier indicated might be available to aid the society. Wiseman said Thursday, however, that he had "had entirely the wrong interpretation" on the availability of the money. Wiseman said the $1,031 was part of $247,000 in revenue sharing funds which has accrued to the county but which can't be budgeted until January 1974. The commissioners suggested that Mrs. Glazmann return to their office in December with a proposal for assistance outlining the society's reasons for seeking county financing. "This year's request, initially made several months ago, they said, had come too late to be included in the present budget. Any emergency revenue sharing funds they added could not be released without the approval of senior Fifth District Court Judge Theron W. Ward as well as the commissioners themselves. While indicating that they would like to assist the Humane Society, the commissioners questioned the legality of using revenue sharing money for that purpose. Citing mandatory federal priorities of public safety, environmental protection, public transportation, health, and capital expenditures among others, Commissioner Merl Leonard said he would want a "judicial interpretation" of the legality of using revenue sharing funds to aid the Humane Society before taking action. Meany says Nixon should be impeached

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said Saturday Congress would have to impeach President Nixon if he defied a Supreme Court order to turn over his White House tapes on Watergate.

But Meany declined to speculate whether an impeachment move would succeed in the House, in such eventuality, or whether the Senate would convict Nixon.

The 79-year-old union leader, discussed Watergate and a wide range of other subjects at a 10-minute pre-Labor Day interview with eight reporters invited to lunch in his office at AFL-CIO headquarters across Lafayette Park from the White House.

In previous public statements, Meany shied away from saying whether Nixon should be impeached or should resign because of Watergate. "But this time, he said in defiance of the Supreme Court by the President, 'I would create a chaotic condition (and) I think the Congress will have to impeach him.'"

Because of the Watergate affair, he said, "unless there is some change, we now have a President that the American people, by and large, have lost confidence in." But he said he didn't expect Nixon to resign unless his fellow Republicans urged him to.

Meany said the Senate Watergate hearings had led him to conclude that Congress should pass a reform law limiting political spending and contributions.

"What these people were doing was extortion," he said of Nixon campaign solicitors, linking their activities to the oil protection racket. "The morals of this Committee to de-elect was not any better than the morals of the gangsters," he said.

Meany said he believed Nixon's uppermost concern "from the time he gets up in the morning until he goes to bed at night" is what he can do to better his image. And he predicted Nixon "will go down in history as one of our poorest Presidents on the basis of the economic picture and before we get through" on the international picture.

The labor leader, puffing on his ever-present cigar, predicted the nation would have a recession by the end of the year. "He also forecast that unions will begin reacting to more strikes if piecework continues to rise sharply while wages are rigidly controlled.

"The only solution, he said, is to let the nation return to a completely free-market economy.

On other subjects, Meany said:

Organized labor hopes to reassert its influence in the Democratic party.

Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan probably would stay in office throughout Nixon's second term and that the former union leader would be "just as effective as he has been this last six months — blah."

He would not oppose Henry A. Kissinger's nomination as secretary of state, but added: "I don't think Henry is going to be secretary of state. I think Nixon is going to be secretary of state."

Early project

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bushnell Park was Hartford's first city park and one of America's earliest urban beautification projects.

It was established in 1854 on land purchased by the city along the Connecticut River. When the city bought the land, it was an industrial slum and dump. The park was named after the Rev. Horace Bushnell, whose work led to the purchase.

Trees by air

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twentieth century tree farmers are using helicopters to reforest the high slopes of the Cascade Mountains in Washington state.

Foresters with Burlington Northern Railroad, which uses aerial seeding to supplement its hand planting of more than 2 million trees each year in four Western states, employ specially equipped helicopters to spread seeds over 1,000 to 2,000 mountain acres annually. There are about 40,000 Douglas fir seeds to a pound, and it takes about three-quarters of a pound to cover one acre.

Italy fights cholera ills

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — Police called in reinforcements Saturday night to control a noisy crowd demanding vaccinations against a cholera epidemic which was spreading across the southern part of Italy.

Police officials said 100 men were dispatched from Taranto southeast of Naples to bolster local police in the congested port city of 2.5 million residents.

A total of nine persons have died and 282 have been hospitalized with cholera or cholera-type gastrointestinal disorders in the Naples area since the start of the outbreak early this week, health officials said.

Cholera also has spread to Bari, an Adriatic port east of Naples, and two dozens suspected cases were reported Saturday night in the province of Casertano to the south.

Naples officials promised that all residents would receive vaccinations by Thursday, but operations were slowed by the discovery that necessary syringes were missing and by the limited force of only 200 doctors.

Hundreds of thousands of doses of vaccine and tons of fresh lemons were shipped to Naples and Bari to fight the epidemic.

At Portici, 1,000 persons snatched the mayors car and beat on it with their fists as he tried to enter his office. Later a crowd of 3,000 public housing residents burned tires, furniture and bags of garbage in the street.

A motorcade drove through Naples with horns blaring, displaying signs demanding vaccine.

In Rome government officials announced the shipment Saturday of vaccine and lemons, a fruit believed effective in countering the cholera bacillus.

Throughout the country provincial governments provided vaccine for port and airport workers and advised against eating sea food, raw fruits and vegetables and unboiled milk.

TF County refuses aid to animal group

Leonard also suggested that the commissioners would try to explore the equitability of allocating funds to the society so as to be "to the benefit of everybody in the county."

"We're going to proceed cautiously," said Leonard, noting that the penalties for misallocating revenue sharing funds are severe.

Twin Falls City Manager Jean Milar said later Thursday he felt the city's use of revenue sharing funds under its contract with the Humane Society was appropriate both from the standpoint of public safety and public health.

"Maybe they've got a different set of rules than anybody else," he said in response to the commissioners' hesitancy. He said the city of Halley, for instance, had budgeted almost all of its revenue sharing money to animal control.

Milar said the city's $150 monthly contract with the society is based on an eight-point agreement to assist the city pound officers in picking up, vaccinating, spaying, and neutering animals for operation public education programs on animals.

Milar said the city's $150 monthly contract with the society is based on an eight-point agreement to assist the city pound officers in picking up, vaccinating, spaying and caring for animals and for operating public education programs on animal control.

Milar said the revenue sharing funds budgeted to the Humane Society are "analyzed" as a supplement to funds budgeted through the public safety division of the city.

The only expenditure not allowed (under revenue sharing), said Milar, is to match that money up with money from other federal programs. "Our counsel feels that this (budgeting to the Humane Society) is certainly an appropriate use of funds to the benefit of the entire community."

Mrs. Glasmann said the society's picking up of wild and stray dogs is a significant health and safety factor. "Wild dogs kill as many cattle and sheep as coyotes do," she said.

She said the society processes between 500 and 1,000 animals per month on a budget which "just barely meets" monthly payments.

The $1,000 requested of the county, she said, would have been used to make payment of about $8,000 in outstanding debts for veterinary care ($1,200) and for pens and kennels constructed for the society (over $4,700).

She said the society gets some revenue in adoption fees

Question...

I am saving several government bonds as a burial fund. Can I have those bonds put into your name for this purpose?

Answer...

Series E Bonds may be titled only three ways, and making them payable to you your burial is not an approved form of registration. Bonds may be registered in your name alone, in your name with a joint owner, or in your name payable upon your death to a beneficiary.

There is no way Series E Bonds can be positively earmarked for funeral purposes. If they are titled in your name alone, the funds would eventually be expended for funeral purposes through your estate, but this would subject them to the costs of probate.

Since you have acquired these bonds for funeral purposes, it would be wise to discuss with us or your bank an alternative which would work better for you.

Present station

THE PRESENT Twin Falls fire station will be replaced by a new building to be constructed adjacent to the present city hall.

New station plans near review stage

TWIN FALLS — Final plans for the proposed new Twin Falls Fire station are expected to be ready for review by early September, City Manager Jean Milnar said Friday.

The building design, being prepared by architect, Harold Gerber, Twin Falls, Milnar said the building will be erected on city owned land adjacent to the present city hall. He said the city council is hoping to issue a call for bids early in September and open by early in October so construction can begin yet this year.

Milnar said he plans to ask the city council Tuesday night for authority to proceed with the purchase of one of the two remaining homes on Third Avenue East behind the city hall and the other purchase will follow. Milnar said this will give the city the entire block with the exception of a small corner property on which a church is located.

Estimate says 500 to need aid

FILER — About 500 persons attending the Twin Falls County Fair this week will probably use the services of the American Red Cross First Aid station.

The station is established at the opening of the fair each year and will be located at the edge of the midway, just past this antique building. It is in operation daily from 10 a.m. until the midway closes at night.

Common ailments, ranging from headache to a broken bone can be anticipated; first aid personnel, Hazel Wilder, Red Cross Chapter, said. The first aid crews remain on duty during rodeo performances in case of injury to cowboys or fans.

A resolution is expected to be adopted on an agreement with the Twin Falls Highway District for sharing the maintenance and improvement of streets which form the boundary of the city and are in the city and half outside of the city.

TF city sets Election set by soil group

TWIN FALLS — Three district supervisors of the Twin Falls Soil Conservation District will be named Sept. 11 in the annual district election.

Voting will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the County Agents Meeting Room of the old hospital, 634 Madison Ave. W. Those whose terms expire include Glenn Nelson, Tom Kunkel and Lawrence Still.

Nominating petitions for election candidates must be circulated and returned to the district office prior to the election. Nominating petitions can be obtained at the district office.

FRUITLAND, Idaho (UPI) — Police have seized the movie "The Swinging Stewardesses" from Pay-Off Drive-In Theater on grounds it violates Idaho's new obscenity code.

Judge Bill Jordan issued a search warrant and officers confiscated the film.

2 reasons why the price of silver may rise steeply

Two powerful forces are at work today which make a steep rise in the price of silver almost inevitable.

- 1. First, the demand for silver surpassed new production for each of the last 20 years. And for each of the last 11 years the demand for silver surpassed new production by more than 100 million ounces. This excess demand over supply is exerting a strong, steady upward pressure on the price of silver. During the 1960s, the price of silver rose 85%.
- 2. Second, soaring federal budget deficits, record balance of payments deficits, and 37 years of inflation have brought the dollar to the brink of collapse. Henry Browne, whose book "How to Buy Gold and Silver" is being distributed accurately predicted the first dollar devaluation in 37 years, and the record gold price, warns: "The alternatives are narrowed to either a monetary inflation or a full-scale depression."

Hearings set

TWIN FALLS — Five zoning matters will be heard Tuesday night during a public hearing conducted during the regular city council meeting.

Needham city zoning administrator, said three zoning variances have been requested as well as two conditional uses.

Title Fact Inc., Twin Falls, has asked a zoning variance to allow for a reduction of off-street parking spaces required for their business and located at Fourth Avenue North and Second Street North.

Tom Kohn, 367 Ostrander, Twin Falls, has requested a zoning variance to allow him to construct an airport on residential property on Wiseman Avenue, just west of Ostrander Street.

The other variance is for John E. Davis, 2155 Interest Drive who requests a variance to allow a breezeway connecting a family room and the main portion of a residential building.

Conditional use requests include one from Nancy L. Atix, 1426 Falls Ave. E. for location of a knitting shop in her home on Falls Avenue just east of the Entomology building, and another by Elysa C. Knowles, 102 Tyler Street. Mrs. Knowles requests a conditional use to allow a beauty shop in her home on the west side of Fillmore Street between Addison and Shop Avenue.

Murphy asks group reject federal land

BOISE (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Jack M. Murphy spoke out Friday against proposed legislation by the state of about 3,500 acres of federal land around Anderson Ranch Reservoir in southwestern Idaho.

Murphy said he will recommend his Land Grants Study Committee reject the proposal when it meets in Boise Sept. 14. The committee is studying possible land selections by the state to replace lands taken from the state by the federal government.

"I am recommending to the committee that we do not accept this one because it has such a high potential recreational use that it would not be in the interest of the state," Murphy said.

He said the Bureau of Land Management ground primarily is in high mountain terrain in an area where the flats are used almost exclusively for recreation.

Other subjects for discussion at the meeting, Murphy said, include selection of 2,000 to 3,000 acres of federal ground with mineral rights.

He said the state's "in-lieu" selections — those in lieu of lands taken by Uncle Sam — include that much land with mineral rights.

People needed

TWIN FALLS — At least two more persons are needed to take Education 315, Secondary school methods, to make the ISU Continuing Education class go, according to Marvin Glascock, director of continuing education.

He said a few more students also are needed in two other ISU courses, which will be given on the CSI campus if enough students register.

These are Behavior Modification and the Emotionally Maladjusted child, he said.

Offices closed

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls, city and county offices will be closed Monday for the Labor Day holiday and will also close for one-half day Thursday.

City hall and county courthouses will close at noon on Thursday for Twin Falls day at the county fair. Because of the holiday, a city council meeting this week will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Postal survey shows Low TF vacancy rate

TWIN FALLS — There are 9,880 residences in Twin Falls to which mail deliveries are possible and only 3.6 per cent of these are unoccupied.

These figures were reported Friday by Charles L. Holley, Boise, Insuring office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. His office has just completed a review of figures obtained in an April 26 postal-vacancy survey of the Twin Falls area in cooperation with E. E. Libert, Twin Falls postmaster and his staff.

The survey shows 9,580 of the residences are homes of which 169 are vacant or a 2 per cent vacancy rate. The vacancy figure includes 44 newly completed homes which have not yet been occupied. In addition the survey shows 97 new residences under construction.

Units included in survey figures and 9.6 per cent of those were vacant. There were 52 new apartment units among the total 73 which were vacant as of survey date. Another 27 apartment units were reported under construction.

Survey figures show 541 mobile homes on the "mail delivery possibility" list, also with a 2 per cent vacancy rate. This included 11 vacant units not including new mobile homes on sale lots in the area.

HUD officials consider apartment units any residential building where more than one mail delivery is made or is possible and a single family home any such dwelling where only one mailbox is posted or only one mail delivery would be made. Homes or residences listed in the survey would include duplexes, side-by-side housing or an owner-renter occupied home.

Because of the nature of the survey coverage, Holley said, the figures may differ from those of the Bureau of Census and they will not reflect as high a rate of occupancy as the census data.

Free tickets

TWIN FALLS — Free bus service and free fair admission tickets are available for interested senior citizens of Twin Falls Thursday.

Officials of the Senior Citizens Center say interested senior citizens may take the free bus to Filer at 1 p.m. Thursday from Sears' parking lot. Free tickets will be available at the fair office. The regular Thursday luncheon will be served at noon at the Center, across from the Sears lot.

Possible injuries

TWIN FALLS — A Portsmouth, Va., woman suffered possible injuries Saturday afternoon when her vehicle and another collided at West Five Points here.

City police said the accident occurred at 12:10 p.m., blocking traffic in the intersection for a brief time.

Cathy Johnson Krom, 21, driver of a 1972 small sedan, complained of possible injuries after her vehicle collided with one operated by Gregory Joel Denny, 10, Twin Falls. City police said Ms. Krom was making a left turn to the right and was traveling east. The Denny vehicle was turning left when they collided. Denny was not injured. His vehicle was damaged approximately $300.

The ban on the products by the commission was based on findings of Dr. J. Rodman Seely, a researcher with the University of Oklahoma.

Park urged consumers in the state who have purchased the products to discontinue their use and turn the products over to the office of the attorney general.

State seeks banned sprays

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Attorney General's Office Friday announced it is looking into whether aerosol spray adhesives banned by the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission are on sale in Idaho.

The illegal spray adhesives, "Foil Art Spray Adhesive," "Scotch Brand Spra-Mont" and "Krylon Spray Adhesive" have been recently found in retail stores in the Seattle area.

Attorney General W. Anthony Park said the spray adhesives have been associated with chromosome breaks which could cause multiple birth defects.

The products have been banned and declared imminent hazard by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. The manufacturers have voluntarily halted production and distribution of the products and are taking steps to stop retail sales.

Park said the Consumer Product Safety Commission has asked manufacturers and retailers of all aerosol spray adhesives to voluntarily discontinue production, distribution and sales of the products.

Late pickup

TWIN FALLS — All trash and recycling collections will be a day late during the coming week due to the Labor Day holiday. Joe Koon, city sanitation officer, said there will be no pickups on Monday. Koon said, and those normally made on Monday will be on Tuesday.

Students drive safely

BOISE (UPI) — Only 39 of the high school students enrolled in drivers education courses this summer were involved in accidents.

Duane Kirk, director of driver education, said 17,411 students took the course in driving. None of the reported accidents involved an injury to the students.

He said the few reported mishaps mostly involved rock chips hitting paint or windshields.

Kirk said an adequate number of teachers are being trained and certified to teach drivers education, although in some areas teachers are reluctant to work for the wages offered.

He said an increase in the cost per student of the program could affect the available money for the program for next year. A balance of $345,362 remains for the 1974 program.

Kissinger Is Wrong For Job

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Nixon's appointment of Dr. Henry Kissinger as secretary of State was a mistake.

Kissinger is a genius. As White House adviser, his ideas have been of great assistance to the President. If the breakthroughs to China and Russia maintain their promise, this nation will be in his debt for a long time to come.

But geniuses do not make good administrators. Kissinger is noted among his friends as one of the world's worst. He is and has been a "one-man operation." He has overwhelming disdain for the rank and file of men who operate in his field. He is loath to bring others in on his thinking. He prefers to work and deal with a few men he regards as equals. And he often treats even these men abominably personally. He has maintained his position only by the strength of his ability as a thinker and his great capacity for work.

The State Department is a super organization. It is, first of all, a mammoth administrative agency. There are men and women at State of surprising ability, a rank and file whose work is necessary to the smooth operation of foreign affairs — and some time-servers getting by. Handling this varied and diverse group of sensitive human beings is a monumental task.

But what does Kissinger face when he arrives at State? His chief deputy, Kenneth Rush, is a political appointee, named to the post, say White House sources, more for his past association with the President

(as a teacher) than for his ability to administer. He did not make any particular showing at the Department of Defense, where he was deputy secretary. He has not been impressive since arriving at State. U. Alexis Johnson, a workhorse and one of the ablest career administrators, replaced Johnson, has considerable personal ability. But he has not shown a great capacity for administration in responsible posts abroad these past few years.

William J. Porter, who replaced Johnson, has considerable personal ability. But he has not shown a great capacity for administration in responsible posts abroad these past few years.

undersecretary for management is vacant as of this writing, being filled temporarily by Curtis W. Parr.

Undersecretary for security assistance. The post of assistant secretary for administration is unfilled. So who is going to run the shop?

The State Department had a similar experience a number of years back when headed by John Foster Dulles, a man of great talents, in my opinion, but no executive. Those responsible for running the intricate affairs of the department, including men involved in the most crucial problems at the highest levels (including the undersecretary of State) did not know what was going on.

This reporter, who was at State every day during those crucial Dulles years, was shocked at the breakdown in operations. Dulles, in his way, was a genius. He should have been foreign affairs adviser to President Eisenhower at the White House, not secretary of State.

To make matters worse, Kissinger these past few years has shown a strong personal disdain for economic problems in relation to foreign affairs. Yet it is clear that today international economics has a major influence on U. S. prosperity or lack of it.

International influence, worldwide food shortages and the Russian and Chinese need for American technology have great bearing on our future relationships with the great powers and other countries and with our own national security.

Fourth Entity

With all the Watergate-inspired interest in the constitutional system of checks and balances among the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government, surprisingly little note has been made of the growing importance of a fourth entity — one that was never dreamed of by the Founding Fathers.

It is surprising because so much of our daily news diet and our information about what is going on in Washington emanates from this source.

For want of a better name, call it the Department of Leaks.

Unlike any other branches, agencies, bureaus, etc., whose functions are spelled out by the Constitution or by public law, who are tied to yearly budgets and whose offices can be found at definite geographical locations, the Department of Leaks is a ghostlike thing.

It has no chief of secretary, no staff, no headquarters. Yet it operates everywhere within the government and is feared and respected by the lowliest clerk on up to the president himself.

There are White House leaks, congressional committee leaks, State and Defense Department leaks — you name it.

They may be quasi-official, as in a high-placed administration spokesman said today that. . . Or they may be more suspect, as in informed government sources speculate that. . .

They may be petty: Who is being considered for an undersecretaryship. Or they may be world-shaking: The details of our fallback position on a nuclear disarmament treaty with the Soviet Union.

That the Department of Leaks has as much power to change history as a president or a Supreme Court is shown by one of its most famous, or infamous, jobs of this century, the Pentagon Papers. This case was unusual, however, in that it was one of the rare times that a leak has been associated with, and admitted by, an identifiable person.

It was frustrating White House leaks that helped create the climate of paranoia that led to Watergate (so testify the would-be "plumbers"), and it is Justice Department leaks that are currently being blamed by Vice President Agnew for what he calls trial by newspaper over his difficulties with his home state of Maryland.

Several newspapers have agreed that the vice president has a point, though none has apologized for printing the leaks.

Which underscores the fact that powerful and pervasive as it is, the Department of Leaks would be as impotent as a lame-duck junior congressman if it did not have somewhere to leak to.

Thus it is actually the press, not the Department of Leaks, that has come to exercise the function of a further check and balance over government. The press is not only the Fourth Estate; it is in many ways the fourth branch.

This may be both good and bad, and some journalists may be reluctant to accept the responsibility for the latter. But that does not change the fact of it.

The Founders, to be sure, recognized the vital function of an unfettered press in a free society and took steps to guarantee it in the First Amendment.

But the press must not only be mindful of its traditional role as a watchdog over the nation's welfare. It must be ever alert to the danger, through its close working relationship with the "Department of Leaks," of becoming a lapdog for those who would use it for their own purposes.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK

The Satrapy Of Elliot Richardson

WASHINGTON — Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson's politically charged decision to reopen the Kent State killings without consulting a highly skeptical White House reflects the Justice Department's sudden separation from presidential direction.

Since his appointment as Attorney General in the crisis atmosphere of April 30, Richardson has not only been independent of the White House but effectively disembodied from it. He runs his own satrapy, proclaiming decisions that often totally surprise the White House. In lesser degree, the same process is taking place in other departments.

This partly stems from deliberate decentralization policies by President Nixon's new domestic counselor, Melvin R. Laird. As such, it is welcome, long overdue corrective to the centralism intended by John D. Ehrlichman, to disincorporate the cabinet-level departments leading to Watergate. But some Republicans fear decentralization, particularly at Justice, reflects a dangerous turning away from domestic problems by President Nixon in the wake of Watergate.

The Justice Department is the most important showcase of this both because its activities are politically vital and because it was intimately tied to the Nixon White House until April 30. In his early years as Attorney General, John N. Mitchell was Mr. Nixon's closest political adviser. As his influence faded, an increasingly powerful Ehrlichman began poking around in Justice Department business. Mitchell's successor, Richard C. Kleindienst, fought to keep Ehrlichman from running the Justice Department, but nevertheless was constantly in touch with the White House.

Richardson has operated on his own from his first big decision: selecting Prof. Archibald Cox as special prosecutor without consulting the White House. Astondeed presidential advisers correctly predicted that Cox, a Kennedy-McGovern Democrat, would not be content with prosecuting the Watergate scandal but would reopen old Nixon cans of worms, such as the TFE affair.

This pattern had become set by the time of Richardson's Aug. 8 speech pledging to take the Justice Department out of politics. Despite the political impact, Richardson did not discuss it in advance with the White House.

The operation of the Justice Department as a separate fiefdom is best shown in reopening the fatal shooting of four Kent State University students by Ohio National Guardsmen during the 1970 student disturbance. As part of a Nixon hard line, Mitchell ruled out a grand jury investigation. Kleindienst, taking over in June 1972, had no inclination to reverse his former chief.

The recommendation to reopen the case came this summer from J. Stanley Pottinger, Assistant Attorney General for civil rights. Had Kleindienst still been in charge, he unquestionably would have conferred with White House senior aides. They would have advised that reopening Kent State would damage the President without furthering the national good.

These presidential lieutenants would have given the same advice to Richardson. But Richardson did not ask before approving Pottinger's proposal. On Aug. 2, Pottinger traveled to the White House to inform counsel Leonard Garment that a resumed Kent State investigation would be announced that day.

What makes such independence critically important is Richardson's instinctive desire — the antithesis of Mitchell — to accept proposals for Justice Department offensives from Pottinger, 33, an aggressive liberal whose appointment last February was secretly fought by conservative Republicans. — Clarke Reed, powerful Republican state chairman of Mississippi with intimate ties to the Mitchell-Kleindienst Justice Department, complained that Pottinger was too liberal as civil rights chief at the Health, Education and Welfare Department. Reed was reassured by Frederic V. Malek, the administration's personnel chief and a lieutenant of the then mighty H. R. Haldeman. "He (Pottinger) does what he's told," Malek told Reed.

Whether Pottinger would have done what the White House told him is now moot, because nobody there is telling him anything. Accordingly his decision has turned aggressive. Pottinger pushed for all-out investigation of the Collinsville, Ill., narcotics raids, resulting in indictment of 11 law officers. Reversing the old Mitchell policy of hands off the Deep South, a voting rights suit was filed in Mississippi Aug. 7. The next possible target: racial discrimination on state police forces.

MR. SPECTATOR

Really? They Called It Twinland?

Today most everyone believes they know what is going on in this land of ours. They read newspapers, magazines, books and listen to TV and the radio.

That takes care of today. But not all interesting things are current. And we find that out again and again while rambling around through old books and old newspapers — those "born" before TV and radio.

Latest "findings" came to light while scanning a copy of The Idaho Citizen, a twice-weekly newspaper which used to be published in Twin Falls. The issue we got to look over is owned by Frank Dormier of the Canyon View. It was dated Tuesday, July 10, 1928. That's just over 45 years ago.

Right off we must point out one interesting thing the paper revealed — without the writer back then having any idea he was going to do something like this. We now know this valley of ours as "Magic Valley." Well, back then it was referred to as "Twinland" and knowing how some citizens of surrounding areas feel toward Twin Falls, we can well imagine that designation went over like a lead balloon. We just mention this in passing, of course.

Let's see what else we ran into in that July 10, 1928 edition of a newspaper now departed.

Topping our find was that two famous springs had been sold to the Idaho Power Co. for $68,700. The springs? Niagara and Crystal described as being located north of Peavey, a community west of Twin Falls and Filer which no longer exists.

The springs were bought, a Page One article said, by Frank A. Reid who represented the Idaho Power Co. R. B. King, general superintendent of the power company and James Boone, company attorney, attended the sale which was private, being held in the office of Sutphen and Sutphen in Gooding. They were (the story related) attorneys for A. S. Benson and Walter T. Ivey, executors in the estate of the late James H. Mays, former United States Congressman from Utah. At the time of his death in 1926, the Congressman was developing Niagara Springs as a power source. A commercial fish hatchery operated at Crystal Springs.

So there's one thing we found out by reading.

Other things?

In that same issue we found the Democrats had nominated Alfred E. Smith as their candidate for President, and the Republicans picked Herbert Hoover. And a few of the local candidates: Democrats — T. J. Lloyd for State Senator; W. F. Brewer, State Representative; O. W. Witham, prosecuting attorney; Sheriff, Frank M. Kendall, E. F. Prater and M. E. Finch. Republicans: M. J. Sweeley and E. C. Graves, State Senator; J. L. Hodgkin, F. T. Parish and E. N. Pettigrove, State Representative; H. M. Holler and S. Claud Stewart, Assessor; E. V. Larson, O. P. DuVal and O. C. Hall, prosecutor; Jess Husted, B. M. Gilbert, R. F. Redmon, George W. Bice, Del. C. Kennison and A. E. Toney for Sheriff; Caryl J. Han for treasurer and C. A. Bailey, probate judge.

And more?

A 10-year-old Murtaugh girl (Phyllis Lee) was killed in a motorcycle mishap and a 18-year-old Twin Falls boy (Maynard R. Davies) was killed in an automobile mishap.

Asher B. Wilson, Democratic committeeman for Idaho and a Twin Falls resident, was in New York City for the National Committee meeting.

A. W. Tingwall, a merchant of note, was enroute to New York for a three-weeks buying trip. J. J. Brennan of Buhl had purchased 100 farmed rats from Pocatello and was starting a muskrat farm.

J. W. Banbury, owner of Banbury Hot Springs, announced he was a candidate for State Senator from Gooding county.

Browning Auto Company at Second Avenue and Second Street West in Twin Falls, announced the Willys-Overland was the greatest car ever and that Willys-Knight and Whippet sales already exceeded total sales for 1927. The price? A 4-cylinder Whippet sedan for $610, a Whippet Six sedan for $770 (this featured a seven-bearing crankshaft) and the Willys-Knight Six (with double sleeve valves) at $895 in the coach style.

A marriage license was issued to William Wayne Parish and Eva Mae Franklin and also to Melvin Barney and Sarah Clawson.

Word from California was that C. S. Walgamott, Idaho Historian from Twin Falls and Hock Creek, was improving after a illness and was resuming his historical sketches.

And the front page columnist of that day — and in the Idaho Citizen was none other than Arthur Brisbane.

So like we said — you can gather knowledge by reading!

Mass Transit

At this point, it is not so much the money — although $1 billion for starters is going to come in very handy — as the principle that is most important.

For the first time, mass transit is being cut in for a direct share in the billions pouring into — and out of — the Federal Highway Trust Fund, the kitty set up a decade back to finance the interstate road network and one of the most fantastically productive revenue-raising programs ever devised.

Under the new highway bill, municipalities beginning next July will be able to tap the trust for $200 million, with expenditure initially limited to bus purchases. The following year, however, $800 million will be available for rail and subway systems as well, with the promise of more to come.

To those in the land who have been crying out in alarm at the steady deterioration of public transportation facilities as private autos and superhighways proliferated, it is the realization of an idea whose time actually came years ago. The allocations fall short of meeting even the most pressing immediate needs of transit systems and are a $23-billion bill which still emphasizes asphalt and concrete.

But it does set a precedent, opening the door to a treasure house long barred. Their argument is that the trust, fed by gasoline and road-use taxes, should be reserved for the direct benefit of those paying for it — motorists.

Until recently, most of the public — which not so coincidentally is also mostly motorists — seemed to agree. But signs of changing attitudes on transportation in general abound. After thinking big is best for so many years, car buyers are turning to smaller, more economical models. Here and there around the country public opposition has halted freeway construction. And now in San Francisco, there is a movement to demolish one, the Embarcadero.

President Nixon has been heard to murmur that in the preoccupation with political scandals, not enough attention is being paid to the "public's business."

He may have an excellent case in point in the muted fanfare with which signature of the highway (transport might now be the better word) bill was received. It is likely to have more influence on the future conditions of life in these United States than any number of Watergates.

The More You Make, The Less It Costs To Eat

By O. A. (GUS) KEELER
Editor, Times-News

The more money you make the less it costs you to eat — we mean percentage-wise, of course. A family existing on $100 a week will, on the average, spend one-third of that income for food. The same family moving up to the $300 a week income (just as an example) will spend only one-fourth of that amount for food. As you can see, they actually will spend more because they have a tendency to buy higher priced food. But, based on the income they get, it costs them less of that income to eat.

And how about the "budget" for a Western family? That includes what it takes for a so-called "moderate" living.

The intermediate (that's moderate) budget for an urban Western family of four amounted to about $11,700 the fall of 1972, and by spring of 1973 had gone up to about $12,180. These figures come from business review material acquired from the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

These figures are population-weighted averages based upon Labor Department budget estimates for major metropolitan areas in the West.

Breath easy, folks, because in Twin Falls it costs less to live than it does in a lot of other places.

In the major metropolitan areas the budget cost for lower income families amounted to $7,925 last fall, while the "higher" budget costed out at $17,260. This spring the comparable figures came to $8,170 and $17,850 respectively.

These Western budget figures were about five per cent higher for all metropolitan areas nationwide, but the averages for intermediate and higher budget are almost identical for the region and the nation.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics computes these budget estimates for an urban family of four, a 38-year-old employed husband with considerable work experience, his non-working wife, a boy of 13 and a girl of 8. The budgets are illustrative of three different levels of living and provide for different specified types and amounts of goods and services. Like we said, the data show that food spending declines relative to income.

The late-1972 budgets for the lower group were above the national average in most of the major Western metropolitan areas. The figures for San Francisco - Oakland was 9 per cent higher than the $7,510 average for all metropolitan areas, while Los Angeles - Long Beach exceeded the average by 4 per cent and Seattle - Everett by 2 per cent. In the intermediate and higher categories, San Francisco - Oakland was substantially above the national average but other major Western cities paid less than the average.

Food spending patterns last year varied somewhat from the national pattern in all three budget categories. Seattle paid higher than national food costs, and San Francisco was about average while Los Angeles and San Diego paid somewhat below average costs in all categories.

On the other hand Honolulu was the highest cost area in the nation, paying 12-20 per cent more for food at all income levels. Anchorage was also considerably above average.

Housing spending was much higher in the West in the lower budget, but generally in line with the national average at intermediate and higher levels of living.

In the lower category, Los Angeles was 10 per cent more costly and San Francisco 20 per cent more expensive — and Anchorage was twice the national average. In other budget categories, San Francisco homeowners paid somewhat above average and Anchorage and Honolulu far exceeded the national average, but homeowners in San Francisco, Seattle and Los Angeles remained closely in line with the national housing figures.

Families in San Francisco paid somewhat more than average for clothing and personal care, in all budget categories, but the Los Angeles and Seattle figures were roughly in line with the national averages. As for transportation costs, families in the largest Western centers paid somewhat more than average in the lower budget category, but little if any above average in other categories except again for San Francisco.

Medical costs were another story. In all three categories, Los Angeles families paid about 20 per cent more than the national average for medical care, and San Francisco and San Diego families paid about 10 per cent more.

But like we said to start out this article, the more you make the more you spend to eat — and for everything else — but it amounts to a less percentage of the total income. So it must be better to be "well-off" than "poor-off."

Story Of El Nino

WASHINGTON — There is a warm and unwelcome current of water that flows down from the Equator past the coast of Peru, every year around Christmas time — that the fishermen call "El Nino De Navidad." The Christmas Child, the warm current is unwelcome because it is bad for the fish.

Six years out of seven, the warm El Nino Current is pushed out to sea and made useless by the Humboldt Current, an icy cold stream from the South Pacific that flows northward up the coast of Peru and makes the huge anchovy catch proliferate happily and leap into the nets with joy.

But on the seventh year, El Nino cannot be denied, for as long as any of the old fishermen can remember, on the seventh year El Nino defies the Humboldt current, making the waters warm and the fish sluggish. The anchovies huddle together unhappily, do not breed so well, and the fishing is bad.

Last year was one of those seventh years. But the young, modern fishermen saw themselves not as mere men of the sea who pay respect to the cycles of nature, but as industrialists providing the world two million tons annually of protein-rich fishmeal. So they equipped their boats with electronic fish-finders, located the unhappy schools of anchovies, and fished them heavily, and laughed at El Nino. Suddenly there were no more fish off the coast of Peru. In the old days, on the seventh year the anchovies that survived El Nino could hide from the fisherman and spawn for the next year. But thanks to the electronic fish-finders, the schools were decimated. The fishermen are now in a depression and it serves them right because they lost their sense of pride and courage and respect and it's tempting to slip into Ernest Hemingway-style writing about the Old Men and The Sea.

Perhaps by coincidence, two other great sources of protein in the world were hard hit: droughts of West Africa and India, and in the United States, 75 million bushels of soybeans rotted on the ground.

What happens when you have a bad year for fishmeal and soybeans and peanuts? As night follows day, you have higher prices for cattle feed and chicken feed and hogwash, and you have homeowners in supermarkets infuriated by higher prices and blaming it all on Herb Stein and George Shultz, which is unfair because neither one of them ever insulted E. Nino de Navidad.

To find out what might happen next in current events, this essayist ventured to the headquarters of the central intelligence agency in McLean, Va. The protein experts of their bureau of economic research brilliantly foresaw the worldwide consequences of the fishermen's refusal to submit to El Nino (in intelligence memorandum er-im 72-149, "Peru's Fish Problem," which has come into my possession.)

The soybean and anchovy man at the CIA insists on anonymity because his friends and neighbors think he is a proper spy and not just a soybean and anchovy expert. He sees some hope in the situation: although there are not the usual 14 million tons of live fish off Peru right now, there are about four million tons splashing about in the Humboldt current and reproducing with great glee under the protection of a lock-the-barn-door Peruvian government fishing ban.

How the CIA has found out there are four million tons of fish out there they will not say — the picture of an intrepid agent in a rowboat with a can of worms and a sudden transmitter comes to mind — but their soybean and anchovy man was correct before and the agency has earned a certain credibility in this matter.

So chances are that next year there will be plenty of fishmeal; if the law of averages holds up, there will be a normal peanut crop in Africa, a decent grain harvest in Russia and an improved corn crop in the United States with our soybeans sprouting determinedly on increased acreage. When feed prices come down, food prices will stop going up so fast.

An increase in supply to meet the increase in worldwide demand will come about not because Peruvian fishermen have discovered better fish-finding gimmicks, or because the phlegm-makers of American economic policy have lifted the lucky number.

A secure, growing supply of anchovies for fishmeal will be achieved because the fishermen have been taught humility by El Nino: when the warm current comes back strongly in 1979, it will be respected; there will be a downturn, sometimes called a recession, in the fishing industry that year, but the self-correcting process will provide stability in the years ahead.

In the same way, we will be able to moderate price rises and raise the average man's real income if we show respect for our own El Nino. A periodic slowdown is not a happy time, and its effect on unemployment might be lessened by better manpower training programs, but we must not let the economic slowdown likely to come next year panic us into using tax and monetary stimulants that would do the symbolic job of electronic fish-finders.

Let the economic currents turn away in their cyclical way. We should help lessen their effects on people's lives, but before we start confidently lampering with fundamental forces, let us remember what El Nino taught the fishermen.

Editor, Times-News:
The following is an open letter to John C. Cox whose public forum letter appeared in the August 26 issue of the Times-News:
Dear Mr. Cox:

Unfortunately, I was inadvertently misquoted in the August 10th edition of the Times News. However, your comments do permit me the opportunity to correct some misconceptions that you have regarding regional councils of government in general and SIRPDA in particular.

First of all, SIRPDA stands for South Idaho Resource Planning and Development Association; not Agency, The Association membership is comprised of four counties (Columbia, Jerome, Minidoka, and Twin Falls) and twenty-one communities within those counties. The governing body of the Association consists of seventeen individuals serving on a voluntary basis. Of these seventeen individuals, twelve are elected local officials (city councilmen and county commissioners), four are at-large members selected by the county commissioners and one member represents seven local Soil Conservation Districts. And, incidently Mr. Cox, SIRPDA was created by the concerned and concerted action of those seven Soil Conservation Districts: not by the federal government. The Association is advisory in nature; it has no taxing authority, no regulatory powers, and no authority to operate public facilities.

The purpose of the Association is to strengthen the individual and collective power of local governments; to make joint regional decisions and develop the means to implement them. I hasten to point out that the Association does not implement these decisions. This is left to the discretion of the local governments.

As to federal funding, it is true that two thirds of SIRPDA's operating funds come from the federal government. That is due to the fact that local governments are generally unable to totally fund organizations such as SIRPDA, not because they are unwilling.

It is not true that Environmental Protection Agency funds go through SIRPDA. It is true, however, that there is an interagency agreement between the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the EPA which states that an area wide planning organization, such as SIRPDA, has to be in existence in order for communities in our area to be eligible for water and sewer construction grants. This policy was not formulated by SIRPDA. It is also true, by the terms of this interagency agreement, that county comprehensive plans had to be completed by October 1, 1973 in order that communities in our area be eligible for those same construction funds.

Unfortunately, space does not permit me the opportunity to discuss the merits of comprehensive plans.)

SIRPDA requested, and was granted, an extension of those dates so that cities such as Kimberly and Twin Falls would be eligible for construction funds without a comprehensive plan. I consider that to be a service performed by a local organization; not a favor granted by a federal agency.

I sincerely hope that this letter will allay some of your fears concerning SIRPDA. I will be happy to provide you additional information concerning SIRPDA. If you will call at our office at 634 Addison Avenue West, Twin Falls.

Editor, Times-News:
The Genocide Convention is raising its ugly head again and will soon be up for ratification by the Senate.

This treaty was first adopted by the United Nations General Assembly in December, 1948, when the word genocide brought up visions of Hitler's attempt at exterminating the Jewish race. Like a lot of other words, it doesn't mean what you think it means.

Genocide under this treaty's definition means "any of the following acts committed with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group as such: (a) Killing members of the group; (b) Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group; (c) Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring its physical destruction in whole or in part; (d) Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group; (e) Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group."

Under this broad definition, a policeman who arrested a member of one of these groups, the members of the jury who convicted him, the judge who sentenced him, and the governor who refused pardon would all be subject to trial before a United Nations international court. Our constitutional laws and freedoms will be null and void if this treaty is ratified.

As a congressman, President Nixon stated, "Let me make this perfectly clear, the major objection to the treaty is that its provisions would not apply to the persecution of political minorities of the Soviet Union. In addition, the treaty, in its present form, grants far more power to the international organization (United Nations) than the United States should agree to particularly in view of present world conditions. You can be sure that in view of these objectionable features, I shall continue to oppose the approval of the Genocide treaty in its present form."

All conditions are now as they were — then (or worse), including the fact that anything President Nixon says he won't do today, he does tomorrow.

He is urging ratification of this convention as did Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson. The members of the Senate have changed and there is a definite threat that this unconstitutional treaty will be ratified.

Write your Senators and express your opposition to the Genocide Convention.

Really Unfair?

Editor, Times-News:
Your paper on Aug. 20 this year under the heading of COMMENT carried an article titled "Helpless Feeling," in which it was mentioned.

Criticism for the most part of the Houston Police was unfair. I wonder if it really was unfair.

We just moved here from Coeur d'Alene and I would like to tell you about a runaway, a 17 year old girl.

Jane (not her real name) left Coeur d'Alene, approximately 2 1/2 of July 23 with two hippies and their girlfriend of her own free will.

Her mother contacted my wife and I to see if we could help find her daughter, so we took the mother to the Coeur d'Alene Sheriff's Office and reported what happened. They had a picture of the girl plus a good description, later we had by good authority that Jane was in Seattle.

My wife and sister in law notified the Coeur d'Alene Sheriff's Office who took a little interest.

Later Jane called our home, about the 25th of Aug. wanting to come home her mother did not have a phone so we got in touch with the girl's mother and a bus ticket was sent to Seattle.

Even though the girl was wrong in running away I thought you would be interested in what took place.

After arriving in Seattle the men held her against her will and kept the door to their place locked. In spite of this she managed to escape and found some people to stay with a few days while she called us.

We received a letter a few days ago from her, to quote her, she had this to say about the Police in Seattle.

"I went to the police and tried to turn myself in, but the cops wouldn't believe me. It makes one wonder if any of the kids in Houston, Texas, had the same problem!"

Editor, Times-News:
Recently my family and I took a few days vacation. I did what I usually do when I leave, call the Police Department and tell them that I am leaving and asking if they would keep my house under surveillance.

However, I did not know to what extent our great Police Force goes to watch the property. I believe our Police Department should be commended for their outstanding work in this area as well as in their other duties.

Here is my experience. When I called telling them I was leaving, I gave them certain information. The usual. When I returned home, in fact the very same day, an Officer stopped at my home and inquired about the condition of my property. Asked if everything was as I had left it and then asked if we had a good vacation. Now that kind of police work is highly commendable and appreciated. If that were not enough I received a letter from Chief Barnett enclosing the report of the times that various officers checked my property.

I find this whole operation very praiseworthy and thankful that I live in a City which has a Police Department that is concerned for the welfare of my property while I am away from the City.

GOP leaders say Agnew hurt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many state Republican leaders believe Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's 1976 presidential aspirations have been hurt by allegations of wrongdoing. But nearly as many believe he could turn the affair to his advantage should he prove his innocence.

A majority of the GOP state chairmen responding to a UPI survey expressed confidence that neither the Watergate scandal nor the investigation of the vice president in connection with an alleged kickback scheme would seriously affect Republican chances in next year's congressional and state elections.

Of the 47 chairmen who replied, 13 said they thought Agnew had been damaged by the charges, and declined further comment; 13 expressed support for the vice president and said he would not be hurt — or might even be helped — if his innocence is established; 13 thought it would be premature to speculate on the effects; and 10 declined to comment.

Agnew has vehemently denied allegations that he received kickbacks from state contractors while he was Baltimore County chief executive and governor of Maryland, and he has protested leaks to news media of the federal investigation of his activities.

Even so, the latest Gallup Poll found Agnew's support down from 35 per cent last April to 22 per cent in August, putting him in a tie for the lead with California Gov. Ronald Reagan. Among the other 10 prospective candidates listed were New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and former Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

Vermont GOP Chairman Stewart Smith was among those who foresaw only adverse effects for Agnew as a result of the investigation, saying: "I think he's probably been hurt to a degree, whether he's guilty or not guilty. The implications of accusations tend to hurt a candidate."

Said Oregon Chairman David Green: "I think it probably has very definitely affected Agnew's chances. He's no longer the obvious front runner."

Florida Chairman L. E. "Tommy" Thomas: "Just the fact that he has been charged definitely will hurt him. Even if he comes out completely clean, just having been accused will hurt him."

Chairman Herman Brown of Delaware agreed Agnew was politically harmed "even if he is cleared completely."

On the other hand, Oklahoma State Chairman Clarence Warner said that if Agnew is not indicted, publicly about the affair "will probably help him. People have a low tolerance toward the attempted persecution of those in office."

"If all the charges are proved unwarranted, I don't think it would damage him, and it could help," said Richard Bennett, Alabama Chairman.

Await rescue
FLAMES leap from the Hafnia Hotel in Copenhagen Saturday as guests wait on ledge to be rescued. At least 35 persons, including 19 Americans, were killed in the blaze. A police spokesman said, "We're still finding bodies." (UPI)

Flames gut hotel; death count climbs

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Denmark's worst hotel blaze in a generation gutted the 10th century Hafnia — described as a "fire trap" — before dawn Saturday, killing at least 35 persons, including 19 Americans. Another 20 guests were still missing, police said.

Police refused to identify the victims until their relatives were notified. Many of the victims were burned so badly it was difficult to identify them.

Police said 17 persons were hospitalized for burns, smoke poisoning or injuries received when they leaped from windows in panic.

Only 13 of the hotel's 85 registered guests escaped unscathed. Officials said it was the worst hotel fire in Denmark since the World War II.

An unidentified family of four Americans perished despite the father's efforts to save his wife and two children by putting them in a bathtub filled with cold water. The father was found lying across the tub over the bodies of his family, police said.

The Danish Fire Brigade and officials had been warned repeatedly that the 75-year-old hotel was a hazard because it lacked elementary fire prevention equipment.

"The hotel was a fire trap and we have several times warned Danish authorities about this as well as other hotels in the old-fashioned style here in Copenhagen," Jan Annizboel, chief of the Copenhagen fire brigade, told UPI.

"They have no fire alarms, no iron doors, no sprinkler water pumps and no sufficient emergency doors."

Police managed to identify 15 victims by late Saturday and set about the task of discovering their relatives. In addition to the 19 Americans, police said the victims included one Belgian, two Italians, four Austrians, one Singapore national, two Japanese, two Dutchmen, one Canadian, one Mexican, two Brazilians and one Irishman.

One of the survivors, Jules Fine of Honolulu, said he was told he spent the extra money for a room with a bath. All rooms with baths were in the front of the building.

Fine, an assistant inspector with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said: "I think the reason we were so lucky was that we had a room with a bath, which is in the front of the hotel. The people in the back weren't so lucky."

He and his wife fled the thick smoke to a balcony, closing the French doors behind them.

"All above us on the fourth and fifth floors it was absolute pandemonium," he said. "We could hear people screaming for help... shouting, 'Help us! Save us!'"

"I think most of them at that point were suffocating rather than burning," he said.

The fines were lowered to safety on a ladder.

A fire officer said the fire broke out about 2:30 a.m. It apparently started on the main staircase between the second and third floors. The cause was not immediately determined.

Pot users shun 'harsh' drug law

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 50 youngsters shouting "We want our pot back" lit up marijuana in Central Park Saturday in defiance of New York State's new "toughest in the nation" drug law, but they threw their "joints" away before police could make any arrests.

Police found about a half pound of the illicit drug on the ground when they arrived. Not one of the youths, mostly teenagers, was smoking at the time.

Under the harsh new law, which went into effect Saturday, possession of marijuana could result in a jail sentence for violators with possible probation for first offenders but mandatory imprisonment for those with previous felony convictions.

Aaron Kay, 23, of the Youth International Party (Yippies), was smoking marijuana when interviewed by reporters.

"I'm ready to go to jail," he said. "Just let me blow my dope. We're here to show them that this is a repressive law. I would rather be busted than live under this kind of oppression."

But when mounted police approached Kay shouted, "Here comes the cavalry," and threw his cigarette on the ground. Police said no arrests were made in the park because no one was seen in possession of marijuana.

About 25 of the youths marched to the New York City office of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, who has described the drug law as "the toughest in the nation."

Rockefeller wasn't in and the protestors were turned back by police.

In Uniondale, Long Island, a suburb of New York City, a teen-ager was arrested on drug charges only five minutes after the new law went into effect at midnight.

Narks boo-boo

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police reported Saturday city narcotics agents, posing as utility company repairmen, broke down the door of an apartment by mistake as they attempted to execute a no-knock night-time search warrant.

Police said that Max Ruby Baker, 56, of upper Manhattan, who was alone at the time, refused to open the door and became hysterical. She attempted to jump through an apartment window and broke the glass with her bare hand, police said. She received severe lacerations.

The incident occurred about 1 a.m. when two members of the seventh precinct district, attempting to execute a warrant at the apartment building where Mrs. Baker lived, made the error and knocked on Mrs. Baker's door.

Gainesville Eight free but confused

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — The last of the government's conspiracy cases against anti-war activists ended with one leader of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War weeping, "Who really won?"

Peter P. Mahoney, a seminary student who went to war as a first lieutenant, was still quietly angry, although he and seven other defendants were set free.

"At first blush, you say we won," said the 24-year-old former national coordinator of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW). "But did we really? For the last 14 months the government completely controlled my life. It was 14 months of hell."

A predominantly under-30 jury of seven women and five men deliberated less than four hours Friday before finding the eight VVAW members innocent of charges they conspired to disrupt the 1972 Republican national convention in Miami Beach with riots and armed attacks on police.

The case was the seventh in a series of federal prosecutions of peace activists which included the trials of the "Chicago Seven," the "Harrisburg Eight," and Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo in the "Pentagon Papers" case. All were unsuccessful, overturned or are under appeal.

From the time they were indicted and jailed in Tallahassee last summer during the Democratic national convention, the defendants maintained it was an attempt by the Nixon administration to discredit the VVAW and draw attention away from the Watergate scandals.

The long legal ordeal no doubt left the VVAW weakened and some of its leaders disillusioned.

(c) New York Times Service. NEW YORK — Director John Ford, winner of Academy Awards for his films "The Informer," "Grapes of Wrath," "How Green Was My Valley," and "The Quiet Man," died Friday at his home in Palm Desert, Calif. He was 80 years old.

broke the rules that Hollywood went by — and also broke ground for film-makers who, along with Ford, were to turn the motion picture into more than just a pastime, into an exciting, fluid art form.

Internationally acclaimed to this day, Ford's "The Informer" holds down its place on every major list of "The Greatest Films of All Time."

(c) Chicago Sun-Times. WASHINGTON — Samuel Dash, chief counsel of the Senate Watergate committee, says his staff is investigating reports that vice president Spiro T. Agnew was involved in a political kickback scheme with Maryland contractors.

Dash told reporters Friday that reports from the Justice Department were being examined by members of his staff. He said that no independent investigation was under way, but implied that if kickbacks were involved in the 1972 Nixon-Agnew campaign, the committee might assign its own staff.

Dash also indicated that Martha Mitchell, who has said she should be called to testify in executive session before the Senate Watergate committee, may get her chance to do just that.

Although there are no plans to call her to testify publicly, a "discreet meeting" might be sought by staff investigators to "find out what she does in fact know," according to Dash.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been a faithful Abby fan ever since you started writing your column in 1956.

Whenever I would leave the city, I'd ask my housekeeper to save the newspapers, because I didn't want to miss even one of your articles.

To my mind, the best thing you ever wrote was "The Ten Commandments for Wives." Then a few months later, you topped yourself with a companion piece titled, "The Ten Commandments for Husbands."

Today we desperately need to be reminded of some old-fashioned rules for making a marriage work. Will you please publish those articles again?

SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SAN FRANCISCO: I still receive requests for copies of the items you mention. A surprising number of readers have asked for permission to reprint them in their church bulletins. In all humility and with no intended irreverence to Moses, here are my TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR WIVES:

1. Defile not thy body neither with excessive foods, tobacco, nor alcohol, that thy days may be long in the house which thy husband provideth for thee.
2. Putteth thy husband before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter, and thy son, for he is thy lifelong companion.
3. Thou shalt not nag.
4. Permit no one to tell thee that thou art having a hard time of it; neither thy mother, thy sister, nor thy neighbor, for the Judge will not hold her guiltless who letteth another disparage her husband.
5. Thou shalt not withhold affection from thy husband, for every man loveth to be loved.
6. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness, and modest attire.
7. Forgive with grace, for who among us does not need forgiveness?
8. Remember that the frank approval of thy husband is worth more to thee than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers.
9. Keep thy home in good order, for out of it cometh the joys of thy old age.
10. Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

(Next weekend, "The Ten Commandments for Husbands.")

DEAR ABBY: Am I normal? Or am I ready for the funny farm? I look for bugs and insects in my house, garden, furniture, rugs, and even on my kids. If I should spot an insect in the house (say an ant or a spider), I immediately start a thorough search for more, and I go berserk cleaning, scrubbing, and spraying wherever I think they might be coming from.

If I find an insect I'm not familiar with, I get out my encyclopedia and look up everything I can find on it. I then become even more interested in bugs, and start on another crusade to get rid of bugs I'm not even sure I have.

I take beds apart and inspect the box springs and mattresses. I even examine the pile in my carpet with a magnifying glass. I'm constantly checking our dog for fleas, and my kids' hair for lice. (I never found any.)

Do normal people behave this way? Or am I?

LOSING MY MARBLE?

DEAR LOSING: Since you question your stability, I'd say you have a problem. Ask your doctor to recommend a therapist who can give you a psychological de-bugging.

CONFIDENTIAL TO E. L.: Forget it, forget! "Hating people is like burning down your own house to get rid of a rat." (Harry E. Posdick)

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90068

Forest camping facilities open

TWIN FALLS—Camping facilities continue to open in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and Sawtooth National Forest with demand for campsites showing some decline.

Sawtooth Forest officials say they expect Labor Day week to again increase camping traffic with areas filling in the most popular locations by Friday afternoon or evening.

Vacancies can be expected north of the Red Fish Lake area, along the Salmon River. No charges are made for family camping although some areas make charges for large group reservations. Permits are required for groups of over 10 persons and may be obtained at Sawtooth National Recreation area offices.

Temperatures are getting cooler in the high elevations. Officials report and persons should take along warm clothing for night time activities and early morning.

Some areas are reporting frost in the mornings.

The Red Fish Lake visitor center will continue open on a daily basis but this is the final week end for scheduled guided tours and viewing programs.

The Custer Museum at Custer on the Yankee Fork, will close for the season after Labor Day.

Visitor information in the Ketchum area is available from the Ketchum Ranger Station throughout the week end and during anytime hours. Slides depicting points of interest which persons may wish to visit can be projected on a screen by the receptionist to assist visitors.

Generally all other camp grounds are open but Bungalow on the South Boise River area has no water. The kokanee or redfish are beginning to come up the South Boise River.

In the South Hills and Basin division all camping facilities are open but no water is available at Postmon Campgrounds.

Trail cyclists are urged to watch for closure notices on some areas, especially in the White Cloud mountains.

All visitors are reminded of the extremely high fire hazard which prevails in all areas of the forest and NRA.

Idaho Register now independent

BOISE—The "Idaho Register", Idaho's Catholic news paper and the largest paid-circulation weekly has become an independent publication.

Rev. David J. Kundtz, editor, has announced the church publication which was formerly printed by the Register System of All-Church Press, Ft. Worth Tex., is now being printed by the Messenger-Index—Press, Emmett.

"There is basically a two-fold motive for the move," Kundtz said, "It is an attempt to save money in printing costs and to have more direct control over what appears in the paper."

He said under the new system the paper is produced and mailed in Idaho and all subscription and advertising revenue will remain in Idaho.

The Idaho Register was inaugurated in 1958 by Rev. Nicholas E. Walsh, now in Caldwell. It has a weekly circulation of just under 12,000. Publisher is Bishop Sylvester Trinen.

South wasn't worried about a 2-2 trump break. Only four trumps in one hand could hurt him and if anyone was going to hold four trumps it would almost surely be East. West had bid hearts. He had also shown up with a club suit headed by ace-king. It would be a warm day in January at the North Pole before West held all four spades.

South should have led a spade to dummy's queen. As suming East continued clubs. South would discard a heart. He would have to lose it later in any event. Then he could ruff the next club in dummy with the nine of spades. Lead spades twice through East to pick up the 10 and eight and wind up making his contract in spite of the bad break.

Administration would start draft

By TOM LITTLEWOOD
 (c) Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON—If Army enlistments continue to fall short of monthly quotas long enough for a pattern to be established, Defense Sec. James H. Schlesinger says, the administration would reluctantly request a resumption of the draft.
 Schlesinger said he was worried about the U.S. ability to sustain a 13-division army at a time when Soviet testing of multiple-warhead missiles make a verifiable arms control agreement considerably more difficult to achieve.

At a meeting with reporters last week the Pentagon leader denounced the campaign in congress to cut the defense budget.
 "Know-nothingism, phoniness, a deliberate obscuration of the facts and mindless backstabbing from the Vietnam War were among the terms directed by Schlesinger at the advocate of less military spending.
 Soviet defense expenditures are rising by five per cent a year, he said. And it is an "enchanted illusion we can ill afford" to think that substantial reductions can be made without cutting into military muscle.
 He considered it especially unfortunate to be talking about pulling U.S. troops out of Western Europe just before balanced force reduction talks are to begin with the Warsaw Pact nations. Unless a balance of military power is maintained in Europe, the administration official foresaw the prospect that the western alliance would collapse and the separate European nations would "make their accommodations" with the Communist East.
 Senate Democratic Leader

Mike Mansfield and others have been pressing for unilateral withdrawal of some of the 300,000 servicemen stationed in Europe at a cost of $17 billion a year.
 "The Soviets have a mailed fist now enclosed in a velvet glove," Schlesinger remarked, the glove being Leonid I. Brezhnev's expressions of friendship for the United States.
 Earlier this month it was revealed that the Russians are flight-testing several variations of a mirrored missile—that is a rocket with several warheads that can be independently directed at different targets. The United States already is developing its own MIRV system, although mechanical failures were reported in the Poseidon submarine launched missiles.
 Verification—checking whether the other side is cheating—was a problem during the first round of Strategic Arms Limitation Talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, and is expected to complicate the second stage now under way. The soviet won't permit on-site inspection, Schlesinger said Thursday that an extended series of MJRY tests would make verification far more difficult. Brezhnev and President Nixon have set in a guideline of next year for agreement on limiting offensive nuclear weapons.
 Turning to the volunteer army, Schlesinger said the administration was prepared to take the time to see if the experiment can be made to work. Enlistments have been running about 2,000 a month below the Army's manpower requirements, and 35 per cent of the recruits in June were Blacks, compared with an over-all percentage of under 20 per cent.

 "We're going to work damn hard to make the volunteer army succeed," the secretary emphasized, "even though some members of Congress who are most enthusiastically in it don't want to pay for it (with better military wages)."

Truck leader says law suit "harassment"

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

PAUL — A suit filed by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) against Green and White Trucking Co., Paul, is "some type of harassment" by the company's president said Friday.

Joe Taylor, president of the trucking firm, said he received notification of the suit Thursday and was told the firm had 30 days to reply to the charge that it was engaging in business without a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

The ICC charged that the company was involved in hauling 15 shipments of goods from California to Idaho and sought an injunction against further interstate commerce by the firm without authority of the ICC.

"We're operating legally and with proper authority," Taylor said.

"The firm has been checked annually by the ICC, he said, and apparently accepted. The suit, he said, "came out of the blue."

According to Taylor, the firm operates under a special cooperative authority which does not require a certificate for interstate commerce.

Green and White Trucking Co. was organized "because we found it impossible to get our produce moved," Taylor said. The firm hauls local produce, mainly grain, to markets providing the best prices, and often brings loads back from out of the state to provide financial support for the program, he said.

The 15 shipments referred to in the ICC suit were loads of building materials being brought back from California following delivery of grain in that state, Taylor said.

"The firm is not very concerned" about the suit, Taylor said, and didn't feel it would "jeopardize" operations.

The injunction sought by the ICC "would prohibit us from hauling grains so far away from the area, but we're not doing that right now anyway," Taylor said.

Currently the firm is shipping to markets that can be reached by rail or selling locally, Taylor said. The pattern of movement changes from year to year, according to market prices, he said.

"If the injunction would remain in effect for a long period of time, it could be a problem in the future," Taylor said.

Since the trucking firm had been organized, he said, it had been "constantly harassed." Other trucking companies fought the establishment of the firm and local buyers feel farmers should accept local prices for their grain, Taylor said.

"What we're doing is stepping on the toes of a lot of people with money," Taylor said.

The trucking company was organized in November, 1971 by 150 stockholders, all of whom were members of the National Farm Organization, with its headquarters in the NFO district office in Paul. The trucking firm is formally classified as an entity separate from the NFO, however.

Reclamation sets tour in Minidoka

IDAHO FALLS — The Minidoka Project Office of the Bureau of Reclamation will hold its annual Minidoka Project Reservoir Tour Sept. 27 and 28.

Minidoka Project supervisor Carlos Randolph last week extended special invitations to the Reservoir District's Committee of Nine and also invited all interested waterusers and others who wish to attend the two-day event.

He urged those intending to go on the tour to notify the Minidoka Project Office in Burley by Sept. 20 to assure adequate space on the tour buses.

The two-day tour will leave Idaho Falls at 10 a.m. Wednesday Sept. 27 bound for Ripley Dam. A box lunch will be served at Teton Dam, the day's second stop.

Tour participants will spend Wednesday night in Jackson, Wyo., with an early morning visit Thursday at Jackson Lake Dam which will include a snow measurement demonstration and a discussion of outlet works repair.

Thursday's box lunch will be served near Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park, and participants will tour the Park before departing for Island Park Dam by way of West Yellowstone's Madison Junction.

At Island Park Dam tour members will inspect the Dam control and gate house and attend a discussion on repairs underway on outlets.

The tour will then return to Idaho Falls.

Bus fare for the tour is $7.25 per person. Box lunches are $1.75 each.

CSI invites counselors

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho will sponsor a Counselor Day for Magic Valley high school counselors Thursday, Sept. 20.

The purpose of the day-long session, according to CSI high school relations director Paul Ostyn, will be to acquaint high school counselors with the offerings of Idaho's various colleges and universities.

Representatives from all the state's institutions of higher learning will attend the conference, entitled "Know Your Idaho Colleges and Universities," to meet with high school representatives and discuss school programs, student financial aid and other related topics.

"We would like to have all the high school counselors from Magic Valley present," Ostyn said. "We think it will be very informational."

Ostyn said that although the program is designed for high school counselors, high school principals are also welcome to attend.

The conference will begin at 8:15 a.m. in CSI's Voc-Tech Auditorium.

TF joint planners sift applications for professional

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Merl Leonard was elected chairman of the new Twin Falls Joint City-County Planning Council at a noon meeting Friday.

As a County Commissioner, Leonard represents the county on the Joint Council.

City Councilman Paul Ostyn, who represents the city, was elected vice chairman.

City Manager Jean Milar was elected secretary. Treasurer Milar is not officially a member, but will likely be named an ex-officio member once the group's bylaws are drawn up, with the question of whether or not Milar gets a vote to be decided at that time.

Milar told Council members Friday that nine applications have been received for the professional planning job the Council hopes to fill soon.

Included in the applications was one from present City Engineer George Michael. Milar said Michael has been City Engineer since Dec. 1963 and was assistant engineer for about 24 years prior to that. Milar said Michael will complete a degree in planning soon. He told Council members that Michael felt his knowledge of the Twin Falls area would bring his qualifications to a par, or better, with those of applicants with greater experience in planning itself.

No commitment was made by the Council on the application of Michael or any of the other eight applicants for the professional planner's job.

Chairman Leonard suggested that Milar, County Zoning Commission representative G. M. Lanting, and farm representative Alvin Harris get together to screen the applicants down to two or three candidates from which the Council would make its selection.

The Joint Council is the result of an agreement between the City and the County to develop a comprehensive land use plan.

The Council will direct the professional planner it will hire in the formation of such a comprehensive plan.

The impetus for the Joint Council came from Milar, who wrote County Commissioners last spring that the City would budget $20,000 from its revenue sharing funds for such a planning effort. The County Commissioners have indicated that they will likely budget a matching amount from County revenue sharing monies.

For now, the County's share of the costs are being paid out of a $10,000 administrative fund. The salary for the planner the Council will hire has been estimated in the range of $15,000 to $18,000 annually.

Council member Ostyn emphasized Friday that the Council has to organize itself as a first priority and then establish bylaws and guidelines for establishing a comprehensive plan.

"We've got to get going," said Ostyn.

Council member Joseph Fehrenbacher agreed. "Everybody knows we're about 10 years behind on this," he said. Fehrenbacher represents County municipalities at large.

Farm representative Alvin Harris said the Farm Bureau, NEC Gange and Cattlemen's Association which he represents were willing to compromise on a comprehensive plan where possible. "But, there may be a few instances where we have to hold our ground."

TF fair pace increases daily

By MARJORIE LIEBERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — The pace of activity at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds increases daily as preparations are completed for the fair opening Wednesday.

Workers were busy this past week installing new wiring, watering the entire grounds and grading the areas around the livestock buildings. The new water system is now in and all the pipes have been covered.

Livestock for the large beef shows began arriving Saturday. Angus, Charolais, Shorthorns and Herefords have shows scheduled during the four days of the fair. A first for Idaho is the Big Western Standard of Perfection Show for Polled Herefords set for Friday.

Exhibitors also have started bringing their entries for the livestock feeds department, antiques, home arts, and kitchen and pantry. Art guild entries are nearly complete and judging will take place today.

Exhibitors will have today and Monday to complete entries in most departments with Tuesday judging to follow. The fair will officially open Wednesday with an 8 a.m. American flag raising ceremony under direction of the Elmer American Legion Post. Fast End Day will get underway with residents from Murtaugh, Hansen and Kimberly arriving for their day.

Members of 4-H clubs will have their annual parade into the arena Wednesday before the rodeo events begin in the evening. People planning to attend the rodeo are looking forward to the special opening ceremony which Cotton Rossler, rodeo producer, has pronounced "extra special."

Ezra Taft Benson

Benson to talk at Gooding stake

JEROME — Former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson will be the featured speaker at the LDS Gooding Stake Conference to be held Sept. 8 and 9 in Jerome.

Benson, an Elder and a member of the Council of Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, will present a film entitled "Meet the Mormons," which details worldwide activities of the Church. He will also speak on the meaning of Church teachings to those who accept and practice them.

The conference session with Benson will be held Sunday, Sept. 9 at 10 a.m. at the Gooding Stake Center, 200 North Lincoln Street. Jerome visitors are welcome.

Benson served as Secretary of Agriculture during the Eisenhower Administration. He has been an official in the Boy Scouts of America for many years. He formerly was president of European missions for the LDS Church.

Agency studies Bruneau River

BOISE — A study to determine if the Bruneau River is to be part of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968 is being conducted by the Idaho Fish and Game Department, Water Resources Board, Department of Parks and Recreation, U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management holding a meeting.

A three-day reconnaissance of the Bruneau River followed. The BOR is now collecting additional information from state, federal and local agencies.

Lundy said public information meetings will be scheduled this winter to give citizens of Idaho an opportunity to participate in the study.

The Bruneau River was identified in the Radoral Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968 as one of 27 rivers in the country to be studied for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Two other Idaho rivers, the Clearwater and the Middle Fork of the Salmon were included in eight rivers designated for instant inclusion on the system.

Large group gives Miss Idaho send-off

JEROME — A large delegation of Jerome residents turned out Friday evening to wish Sharon Davis, Miss Idaho, the best of luck as she left for the Miss America Pageant at Atlantic City, N. J.

Jerome residents, city officials and members of several Jerome civic organizations were on hand Friday night to give Miss Davis her royal send-off. Miss Davis and her family left Jerome Friday night for Boise where they took a plane Saturday for Atlantic City, where Miss Davis will compete this week for the title of Miss America.

Tom Prescott, president of the Jerome Rotary club announced at the send off that the Rotary club voted to set up a music scholarship. "The scholarship, which will be called the "Sharon Davis Music Scholarship" will be awarded to a Jerome high school student to take voice lessons for year, who would not normally be able to afford them," Prescott said. He noted that the scholarship recipient would be chosen by the high school music instructors and that it would be $75 a month for nine months.

Jerome Mayor J. A. (Jack) Russell wished Miss Davis the best of luck on behalf of the city and the residents of Jerome. Following the ceremony Miss Davis and her family were escorted by Jerome Chief of Police, Howard DuBois, in a motorcade through downtown Jerome to the city limits.

Students at Jefferson elementary school each wrote a letter to Miss Davis wishing her the best of luck in the pageant.

Blaine schools open

HAILEY — The Blaine School District will begin the school year Tuesday with a full day of classes.

Assistant Superintendent Ray Jefferson said indications are the district will have an increased enrollment this year. He said exact figures on the increase will not be available until after the first day of classes.

Jefferson said the school lunch program will be in full operation Tuesday and bus schedules will be as announced.

Starting and dismissal time for each school will be as follows: Wood River Junior and Senior High School, 8:45 a.m. and 3:20 p.m.; Homingway Elementary, 8:15 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.; Bellevue Elementary 8:50 a.m. and 3 p.m. and Carey school, 8:40 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Inquest rules suicide

BURLEY — After about an hour's deliberation a coroner's jury declared Friday that the death of Delilah Mae Bowden last June was a suicide.

Mrs. Bowden, 46, was found dead in her home with three gunshot wounds in her chest on June 7.

Cassia County Coroner C. Bruce Young said that earlier reports of FBI findings indicating the death was not suicide were premature.

The reports were based on incomplete FBI studies, he said.

Preliminary hearing sought

GOODING — Juan Ruiz, 62, has asked for a preliminary hearing on charges of first degree murder and receipt of a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

An arraignment in Magistrate Court was completed Friday with Ruiz asking for a preliminary hearing on the two charges. He is accused of the fatal shooting Thursday morning of his son-in-law, Don Wooten, 18, and the gunshot injury of his daughter, Eva Wooten, also 18.

Mrs. Wooten is in good condition in the Gooding Memorial Hospital where she is being treated for her wound.

Ruiz, who owns and operates a cafe in Gooding, is in county custody without bond. He is represented by Phillip Becker, public defender in Gooding County.

Magistrate Court Judge Charles Shaw has not set a date for the preliminary hearing.

MIKE GRAY to resign

Resignation expected

But he said the decision to resign his council post was not prompted by any similar conflict. Gray is a realtor.

Nevertheless, he said, if communities continue to be overly critical, qualified people will shy away. "I feel because of it we'll have people who are nice people but don't have any ability (in government). You don't have the injector running the bank," he said.

The resignation means four vacancies will exist on the council for the November city elections. Gray said he would not recommend a successor.

The council has the authority to name a successor, who would have to seek election to the remaining two years of Gray's unexpired term.

"I don't intend to recommend any specific successors. I would like the appointee to be someone who will fit with the makeup of the council. He also said he hoped the position would be filled prior to the election because of the heavy council work load that needs attending."

Gray's resignation also means city voters will have an opportunity, for the second time in two years, to elect a new four-man majority on the council. Aside from his term and that of Nelson's successor, Hank Woodall, two others expire this fall.

They include Mayor John Christoffersen, who has said he will not seek re-election, and councilman Paul Ostyn, who announced last week he would run for another term.

Gray won his council seat in 1971 by placing third in a field of 13 candidates. He received over 1300 votes.

Jerome needs group sets Tuesday meeting

JEROME — Members of the steering committee conducting a "Needs Assessment" for Jerome school will meet Tuesday night to further plans for the survey.

Toy Parton, who was recently appointed chairman of the survey by the Jerome school board of trustee, said Friday that members of the steering committee attended a workshop sponsored by the State Department of Education last week. "The workshop dealt with the needs assessment project. Dr. Wayne Phillips, director, Planning and Development with the State Dept. of Education and Ruby M. Liverette, consultant, both Boise, conducted the Needs Assessment workshop," Parton said.

He noted the purpose of the program was to familiarize local committee members with the organization and procedure for implementing the district's Needs Assessment study.

Members of the steering committee include Betty Craig, businessman, Bill Hart, Mrs. Forrest Cheryl Hyman, Mickey Miller, Madge Stangnitz, Jerry Clout, Mrs. Dudley (Verna) Stroud, Mrs. Leroy Weigle, and Scott Hyder.

THE Twin Falls Fair begins Tuesday at the county fairgrounds in Filer, with a four-day rodeo scheduled as part of the annual event.

Booming interest rate due to peak

By PETERS NAGAN
(c) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Though bond markets are still erratic, the record-shattering interest rate rise could be coming to an end despite the current all-time high for some banks' prime lending rate.

Fears of government, corporate and municipal bonds have been rising irregularly for nearly three weeks now. This means their rate of return to new investors has been falling. There also has been signs of an end to the rise in so-called short-term rates — an obligations due in a year or less.

Some money-market analysts are puzzled over the behavior of bond prices and yields. They see no sign of the credit-controlling Federal Reserve Board will ease the severe restraint it has been generating for nearly a year now. Indeed, the latest available figures suggest a little further tightening.

But the experts don't argue with market trends. Despite considerable doubt, they concede the possibility the turn in interest rates has, in fact, come — and maybe has come to stay.

The general feeling on Wall Street and at the FRB in Washington had been that the rise in interest rates would continue for another month or two or more, though at a slower rate than in the last quarter. And many market professionals see no fundamental reason for changing their view.

But obviously, quite a few bond dealers and investors see the outlook differently. And they are willing to plunk down their dollars to bet their judgment. Their optimism is based on considerations such as these:

— Many of those now buying bonds feel that, even though the economy may not be heading for a recession, business activity will slow measurably. It will then be incumbent upon the federal reserve to ease its tight money, high-interest rate policy, to make sure the restraint does not bring on a slump. A let-up in monetary tightening will bring lower interest rates and higher prices for bonds and other fixed-income securities.

— The dollar's growing strength also takes some heat off FRB. High interest rates are always a help when a currency is weak because they tend to attract funds to offset outflows resulting from trade deficits and so on. The need to attract such rate-sensitive funds is ebbing as the dollar recovers.

— Many investors have decided not to wait for the actual turn in Federal Reserve policy and the actual easing of the monetary indicators. They are increasingly aware of the fact the bond markets are "thin" these days — that is, the supply readily available is very limited, so that a slight increase in demand can produce a sharp increase in price.

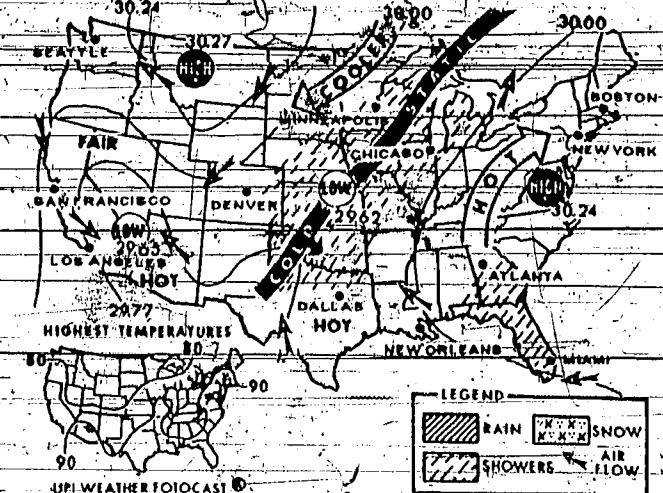

— Even if they could spot the very top in yields — and many are humble enough to admit they can't — trying to buy a sizable amount of fixed-income securities at a time when everyone else has the same idea would force them to pay premium prices.

— "We won't all be able to get through the door at the same time," is the way one manager of a large institution's portfolio put it. "If I wait until the absolute peak, I'll probably find that I can't get all the bonds I want. So I am beginning to buy now — even though the turn may come later than I think, and bond prices may go lower before a sustained upturn gets underway."

Bank aide says dollar will climb

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The U.S. dollar, generally past the shock of its most recent devaluation (in February) and the Watergate scandal, will climb in value the remainder of this year and next, bank money expert Vilim Othman told a press conference here.

But Othman, vice president of Thrifts Trust and Savings Bank's international money management division, had few encouraging words for the American tourist planning a vacation in Western Europe.

Vacations in Europe this spring and in mid-summer have been "atrociously expensive," the Chicago banker who just returned from abroad. On average, the dollar had sunk 25-35 per cent in the last several months. Against

FTC to ask profit lists

By BAILEY MORRIS
(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — The Federal Trade Commission has unveiled a program designed to require the nation's 2,000 largest companies to report profits to the government by product lines. Currently breakdowns of profits by company subsidiaries are not required, or available.

In documents filed with the Office of Management and Budget, the FTC argues that its proposed program "which would require conglomerates, for example, to report profits by product line — will be extremely beneficial to the American economy in general."

Profitability data to be extracted from the companies and made available to the public will be useful to small businessmen, labor and government policy makers, the agency says. "Individual company names and data will not be made public, under the FTC corporate reporting program, the agency stressed."

Utah firm bids on space motor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thiokol Chemical Corp., Brigham City was one of four companies to submit a bid to manufacture the large, solid fueled motors that will help propel the space shuttle rocket plane.

One of the competing firms, Lockheed Propulsion Co., said the motor program could eventually cost $1 billion.

The contract, to be awarded in November, is expected to be the last major piece of new rocket business from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in this decade.

The four-man space shuttle, a combination rocket and spaceplane, is scheduled to make its first test flight in late 1978 or early 1979. It will use two of the 2.5 million pound thrust solid rocket motors in addition to three liquid fueled engines.

"Contracts for the shuttle itself and its liquid fueled engines have already been awarded."

The other three companies submitting bids were Lockheed, Aerojet Solid Propulsion Co., Sacramento, Calif. and United Technology Center, Sunnyvale, California.

Wheat, corn exports up

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The volume of wheat and corn under contract for shipment abroad in the new marketing season rose in the week ending Aug. 10, but soybean export plans declined, an Agriculture Department report showed Thursday.

Administration farm officials, still resisting pressure for export controls, say the totals are misleading because they include large quantities of grain for "unidentified" destinations. Officials say much of the grain has been booked on a speculative basis and may never actually be shipped.

Prospective corn exports in the season opening Oct. 1 showed the largest gains. According to reports filed by exporters, shippers had contracts to send 1,264 billion bushels, up 83 million from the figure listed a week earlier and more than 100 million above the total the administration estimates will be shipped during the season. The corn report showed 269.4 million bushels listed for unidentified destinations, leaving 935 million for specific countries. That figure was up 120 million bushels from last week's report but below government forecasts for the total 1973-74 season. The increase from a week ago came largely in added sales to the European Common Market.

For wheat, Thursday's report showed 1,174 billion bushels, up 83 million from a week earlier. It listed 147 million bushels from July 1 through Aug. 10, the total wheat export commitment would rise to more than 1.3 billion bushels, or about 200 million bushels beyond government predictions. Undelivered wheat exports listed for specific destinations as of Aug. 10 totaled only 881.4 million bushels, up 72.8 million from a week earlier.

Food donations may resume soon

By BERNARD BRENNER
WASHINGTON (UPI)—Administration officials hope to resume soon, perhaps as early as next week, contracting for foods for donation in developing countries under the food for peace program.

Spokesmen predicted, however, that the donated shipments will be down from a year ago because supplies of grains are tight. One official said to priority in allocating reduced supplies would be given to "humanitarian" programs such as aid to the Sahel drought zone in Africa and feeding programs for needy people in Latin America and Asia. But overall, another expert added, "There are going to be substantial reductions."

Earlier, after contracting for donation supplies scheduled for shipment from July through September, officials at the Agriculture Department and Agency for International Development (AID) temporarily suspended purchases for the grant programs pending a review of available U.S. supplies and prices. When buying resumes, purchases will be made for shipments beginning in October and a spokesman said special effort will be made to prevent any interruption in supplies to high priority projects.

any actual suspension of distributions abroad," one official said.

Spokesmen declined to say how much they have decided to allocate for overseas donation during the rest of the fiscal year which runs through next June 30. One official said that while the administration has decided how much can be put into the overall food for peace program, it has not yet settled on final breakdowns between the donation phase and a larger section of the program in which farm commodities are sold abroad under low-interest, long term credit arrangements.

Ironically, one official added, U.S. taxpayers may well wind up spending more than originally planned on the donation phase of the program even though the volume of foods shipped will decline.

Originally, the administration had intended to donate about $100 million worth of foods abroad under food for peace in the fiscal year which began July 1, down about $20 million to $40 million from last year. But with commodity prices up sharply from the levels of early 1973, an expert said today, "we may end up spending over $100 million in the current fiscal year" for a smaller volume of donation shipments.

"I think if we take those that are in the worst shape (in pipeline stocks) first and make a special effort, we can prevent

Wheat markets reported erratic

Wheat

DENVER, Colo. — Wheat markets showed considerable up and down price movement during the week ending Aug. 23, according to a report of the USDA Agricultural Marketing Service, Denver, Colo.

The report said prices for the week were 35 to 45 cents per bushel above last Thursday.

Country elevator prices swing with export and mill bids and showed some shifting between the various outlets as farmers looked for the strongest market. Selling fell off sharply toward the end of the period, but exporters and mills bought only needed amounts as port facilities continued jammed.

Lack of adequate rail transportation facilities hindered movement from country elevators and restricted trade somewhat.

Farmers and elevators were busy cleaning seed wheat and readying plant equipment. Most areas reported a little planting. Top soil moisture is depleted and drilling is slow to reach subsoil moisture which is adequate at the present time. General planting is a week to ten days off.

Feed grain markets weakened considerably at Denver with decreases in corn prices of 50 to 70 cents per hundred weight and 30 cents for grain sorghum. There was little trade because of the tight supply of old crop grain. Country prices held firm or fell off slightly.

Prices paid to farmers for No. 1 hard winter wheat at country elevators and in Denver was reported at 210 for ordinary, 411 for 12 per cent protein and 415 for 13 per cent protein.

Prices in cents per bushel for ordinary wheat were reported for nearby Denver: east, 390; southeast Colorado, 434-456; east central Colorado, 398-410; northeast Colorado-southwest Nebraska, 400-425; southwestern Kansas, 442-446; western Nebraska-southeastern Wyoming, 405-425.

Prices in cents per bushel for ordinary protein domestic wheat are reported for Denver, 425; Kansas City, 500; Omaha, 489-490; and Portland, 500.

Prices for 12 per cent protein domestic wheat, Denver, 425; Kansas City, 502; Portland, 500.

Prices for 13 per cent protein domestic wheat, Denver 430; Kansas City, 506; Omaha, 496; Portland, 505.

Ordinary export prices were quoted at 509-531 at Fort Worth. Feed grains prices were given in cents per hundredweight for U. S. No. 2 corn, yellow, Denver 525-440; Kansas City, 457-465; Fort Worth, 520-536; Omaha, 435-455; Portland, 525; California points, 585-590; grain sorghum, yellow, Denver, 520-530; Kansas City, 470; Fort Worth, 512-525; Omaha, 464-474; California points, 580-585; barley, Denver, 450; Omaha, 271-281; oats, white, Omaha, 380-401.

More cigarettes bought than ever

WASHINGTON — The Federal Trade Commission reports Americans bought more cigarettes than ever before in 1972 — despite the health-hazard warning on the pack and the ban on television advertising.

Total cigarettes sold hit 561.7 billion in 1972, topping the previous high of 547.2 billion set in 1971, FTC said in a supplementary report to Congress required under the Public Health Cigarette Smoking Act.

The statistics backed up unofficial predictions made last Dec. 31 that domestic sales would reach a new high. Confirmation came from figures provided by the industry.

While per capita cigarette consumption is down from its peak in 1963, it is continuing an upward trend begun in 1971. Americans and overseas military personnel, 18 years and older, consumed 4,018 cigarettes per person last year — slightly more than 200 packs.

Consumption had started to fall off in 1968 but climbed again beginning in 1971.

"Clearly defined trends to increased sales of filter varieties and increased sales of mentholated cigarettes continued in 1972," the commission said.

For example, in 1963, 42 per cent of the market was non-filter cigarettes; by 1972, that figure had dropped to 16 per cent. Menthol cigarettes have increased their share of the smoking market from 16 per cent in 1963 to 24 per cent last year.

Cigarette advertising spending is higher than it was 10 years ago — but not at the peak it was in the late 1960s when more than 200 million a year was pumped into TV commercials. Newspapers and magazine cigarette advertising more than doubled after smoking commercials were legislated off radio and TV. Of $257.6 million ad dollars spent in 1972, $159.2 went to those print media.

Judge in middle of probe

(c) Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — Federal Judge John J. Sirica, an apostle of law and order whose nickname is "Maximum John" because of the severity of his prison sentences, has kept himself in the center of the Watergate prosecution by his latest ruling.

Sirica ordered President Nixon or anyone else who has custody to turn over nine tapes so Sirica could listen to them in his chambers and decide whether the federal grand jury should do the same.

His 23-page opinion was a strong rejection of Nixon's argument that he alone could decide whether to divulge the tapes to anyone and the courts had no power to tell him otherwise.

But the canny Sirica stopped short of rejecting the President's claim of executive privilege until he has heard the controversial recordings.

A short, good-natured man with a full head of graying black hair at the age of 60, Sirica seems to enjoy the attention he has received since presiding over the Watergate trial.

As reporters lined up Wednesday in his tiny antechamber, the judge stepped out to assure them that his ruling would be available shortly. He admonished them to walk through his office in a single file and leave by another door to avoid congestion.

He wrote the opinion within a week after hearing arguments in the case. On other occasions, Sirica has seemed to be a man of few doubts and he has told attorneys that he does not care whether he is reversed by the appellate courts or not.

A Republican who once served as counsel to a house investigations subcommittee, Sirica was named to the bench in 1957 by the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Nixon has called him a "courageous" judge.

As chief judge, he had the power to assign the Watergate trial to another judge but he decided to try it himself. His unusual sentencing procedure — making the length of the sentence hinge on whether the convicted man co-operated with the prosecutors — was credited with helping to crack the Watergate cover-up.

The son of Italian immigrants was typically blunt in his opinion.

"In all candor," Sirica wrote, "the court fails to perceive any reason for suspending the power of courts to get evidence and rule on questions of privilege in criminal matters simply because it is the President of the United States who holds the evidence," he said.

For Sirica, who must step down as chief judge when he reaches 70, the Watergate case is the capstone to a career that began in 1926 (with his graduation from Georgetown University Law School).

He once was an amateur boxer and seems to relish the conflict in this historic legal battle.

Alexander Graham Bell was 29 years old when he patented the telephone.

Controversial punch puts pall over Foreman's win

TOKYO (UPI) — George Foreman was the "victorious" Roman Saturday, shoving off the back of a controversial punch that rocked him to a successful first defense of his heavyweight title.

Foreman's two-minute knockout of Joe "King" Roman was the swiftest decking in heavyweight title history, but it was "virtually accomplished without" his Puerto Rican opponent laying a glove on the powerful American.

For the time involved, Foreman probably raked in more money than any athlete for a comparable span. He made about $3,333 per second in earning his one million dollar

Roman threw the first punch of the fight and missed. Foreman then struck his first blow, a powerful right to the body that staggered Roman. Another right to the same spot floored the challenger.

Foreman, weighing 210 1/2 to 195 1/2 for his opponent, sent Roman down for the count again with body combinations and it was at this point that the challenger's manager Bill Daly claimed his fighter was fouled.

Daly said that Foreman's follow-up right caught Roman before the Puerto Rican batter got off the floor.

"Foreman is strong, but he's the dirtiest fighter I ever met,"

Buchanan wins

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland, who helped capture two robbers a night earlier, scored a seventh round technical knockout over game but untested Chan Chai Mye in a bloody, nationally televised junior welterweight bout Saturday.

Both fighters' faces were mired with blood when the bout was stopped, with Malove bleeding from cuts in the mouth, the nose and from over the eye. Buchanan ran into an unintentional butt in the fourth round that opened a cut over his left eye and left one side of his face a pool of blood for the remainder of the fight.

Bengals tip Falcons on two late scores

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Veler name for Cincinnati. The Bengals scored earlier on touchdowns by Kenny Anderson to Clark and Isaac Curtis, another rookie. Curtis, the team's top draft choice, caught his first pass in pro football for a 22-yard touchdown and Clark received a one-yard touchdown loss.

Horst Muhlmann booted a 13-yard field goal to round out the Bengals' scoring.

Germany, a second-year safety out of Morgan State, rushed into the end zone in both the first and second quarters to recover punts and turn them into touchdowns. Bengala-Klecker and Dave Green had both punts blocked near his end zone.

The two touchdowns made the defensive player the leading Atlanta scorer in preseason play. Germany scored a touchdown against Cleveland this year by jumping on a blocked punt in the end zone.

Staubach-sparked second-half punch lets Cowboys drop K.C.

DALLAS (UPI) — Staubach ignited a second half surge that carried the Dallas Cowboys to a 27-10 victory over Kansas City.

Although Dallas dominated the opening half, the Cowboys forced the ball over four times in the first 30 minutes and the game was deadlocked at that point, 13-13.

But Staubach came in to guide the Cowboys attack in the second half and directed two third quarter drives that ended in touchdowns by QB, one of five yards and another on a one-yard plunge.

Pastorini guides Oilers past Colts

HOUSTON (UPI) — Dan Pastorini threw one touchdown pass and engineered another scoring drive to lead the Houston Oilers to a 20-9 victory over the Baltimore Colts Saturday night in a penalty-plagued, fight-marred exhibition game.

Pastorini, playing only the second half, hit Mack Alston with a 17-yard touchdown pass on his first drive. Fred Willis scored on a 2-yard burst and Jim Seeman kicked field goals of 13 and 9 yards and two conversions.

The sluggish Colts never managed a touchdown drive. Defensive tackle Jim Bailey forced a safety and a blocked punt and George Hunt converted for the Colts' points.

The victory was the second straight exhibition triumph for Houston against three losses. The Colts dropped to 1-4.

John Matuszak, the No. 1 choice in this year's college draft, ravaged the Colt running attack and the Oilers' Bob Gresham sprinted for long gains to spark the attack.

Matuszak blocked a 12-yard Hunt field goal attempt late in the fourth quarter and Willie Alexander ran it back for 66 yards. But the Colts' Tom Mitchell clashed with Fedy Smith and the drive was wiped out.

Ban hardly cows Martin

DETROIT (UPI) — Manager Billy Martin of the Detroit Tigers, who was suspended Friday for three days for ordering two of his pitchers to throw illegal pitches, broke a day of silence Saturday and commented on his plight.

"If Cronin (American League President Joe Cronin) can suspend me for telling the truth, they're going to have to dig up George Washington for admitting he cut the cherry tree," Martin said.

The Tigers' outspoken manager was suspended by Cronin for ordering pitchers Joe Coleman and Fred Schermer to gouge up the ball during the final two innings of Thursday night's 3-0 loss to the Cleveland Indians.

Bradshaw, Steelers rock Packers 30-22

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Terry Bradshaw, putting his passing game together, threw for one touchdown and scored the go-ahead TD himself to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 30-22 National Football League pre-season victory over the Green Bay Packers Saturday night.

The Packers, suffering their first loss of the exhibition season, were able to score only one touchdown against the stubborn Steeler defense and had to rely on the foot of defending scoring champion Chester Marcol for five field goals.

Glen Edwards took the Packers first punt of the game and raced 70 yards for a touchdown with less than two minutes gone.

Green Bay scored the next five times. Marcol booted a 24-yard field goal to make it 7-3 at the end of the first quarter, and MacArthur Lane ran five yards for a touchdown with 45

Interceptions help Bears thump Cards

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bears' defense intercepted three of Jim Hart's passes and turned two of the thefts into touchdowns and a 31-20 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night.

Charlie Ford caught one Hart pass on the Bear's four and galloped 44 yards down the sideline. Two plays later, Carl Garrett danced through the middle of the Cardinal line on a 45-yard run for the Bears' first touchdown.

Then, when Hart was trying to pass the Cardinals back into the game in the second half, Doug Buffone pulled off his second interception of the night, setting up quarterback Bobby Douglass' seven-yard touchdown sneak on the first play of the fourth quarter.

Hart had passed 71 times this summer without an interception before Buffone stole his 42nd

Wiechers takes Hartford tourney lead; Palmer closes to two shots

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Chunky Jim Wiechers shot a steady but unspectacular five-under-par 66 Saturday for a one-stroke second-round lead in the Greater Hartford Open. Arnold Palmer blasted out his best round of the year, a 65, and moved within two shots of the lead.

Wiechers said the mid-day heat, which again was in the mid 90s, helped him concentrate on his game. "I find that I force myself more to concentrate in the heat than I do on a cool day."

Trevino, the defending champion, went six under par at 65 to move within one stroke of the top with 132. His biggest shot of the day was a 3-wood that left him 30 feet from the hole for an eagle 3 on the 497-yard 14th hole.

Palmer's best birdie putts came from 30 feet on the 11th hole, 45 on the eighth and 50 on the 11th.

Youngsters stun veterans to gain finals in U.S. amateur TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — Craig Stadler and David Strawn, a couple of young underdogs, advanced to the finals of the 73rd U.S. Amateur Championship Saturday with semifinal victories over two of the tournament's former champions.

Wiechers, who dropped in five putts of 20 feet or more in the opening round, said he did nothing spectacular on his second trip around the course, but shot a steady game in which he "was a lot closer to the hole."

Snead-led Giants rip Eagles

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — Norri Snead, showing the play-calling mastery of a 13-year veteran, passed for two touchdowns and scored a third on a bootleg Saturday to drive the New York Giants to their fifth straight exhibition victory, 42-21, over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Roman Gabriel replaced John Reeves as the Eagle quarterback in the second half and threw touchdown passes of 25 and 27 yards to Harold Carmichael. Tom Sullivan capped a 71-yard drive with a one-yard burst for the first Philadelphia score.

Randy Johnson, who replaced Snead in the third quarter, threw a 13-yard scoring pass to Bob Grim. Clements scored his second TD later in the period on a one-yard burst after Johnson drove the Giants 71 yards in nine plays.

Thomason's sprint lifts Jerome past Wendell 14-6

JEROME — Ted Thomason broke a 38-yard scoring spring late in the third quarter to safely pull the Jerome Tigers past the scrappy Wendell Trojans 14-6 Friday night.

Although Jerome's defense held Wendell to only two first downs for the night, the Tigers could do no better than even at 6-8 until Thomason, better known for his middle line backing, came up with the clincher.

Jerome's first touchdown came as a result of a costly Wendell miscue. Norm Cochran drilled a high punt deep into Wendell country where the Trojan receiver dropped the ball. Jerome recovered on the two-yard line and seconds later junior halfback Byron Lyons burst into the end zone. The point after attempt failed.

But the lead lasted just a few seconds. On the ensuing kickoff, Wendell worked a reverse with junior halfback Tracy Scott lugging the ball down the left sideline for 75 yards. Wendell's conversion try also failed.

Jerome racked up considerable yardage in the middle of the field but Wendell always was able to hold at the right time.

After Thomason's burst up the middle, Dwight Hurd tackled on the two-pointer and Jerome's defense went to work protecting it.

Wendell had one chance in the final minute when it took over near midfield and Sinsor completed a pass to the Jerome 30. But Jerome picked off a deep throw on the final play to end any hopes of closing heroics.

FILER LINEBACKER Tony Niece goes for an airborne fumble that popped out of the miles to the left during Filer-Shoshone action Friday. The play led to a Filer safety as the Wildcats claimed an 11-0 victory.

Beavers nip Wood River in last minute

AMERICAN FALLS — American Falls clocked on a 30-yard touchdown pass with 1:20 left to play Friday night to edge the Wood River Wolverines 14-6 and ruin the debut of Coach Dale Blakely. The touchdown came just a couple minutes after the Wolverines had appeared to pull themselves out of deep trouble. With the score standing 6-6 from early in the third quarter, American Falls fumbled away chances at Wood River's goal line. The first time came on a third and one-foot situation and Wood River immediately pointed out. American Falls ground right back to the one-yard line and fumbled again. This time Wood River pieced together a drive that carried the Wolverines. It seemed out of trouble and made the tie seem the logical conclusion. But a fumble gave the ball back to American Falls at about the 40-yard line.

Raft River blasts Cowboys on defense and Harper's passing BANCROFT — The Raft River Trojans exploded on the passing arm of sophomore Rick Harper and a stout defense to rip the North Gem Cowboys 44-0 Friday night.

Harper threw for two touchdowns and set up another score with a 40-yard strike as Raft River's defense proved itself in the opening minutes and had full control by game's end.

North Gem surprised early when, using a series of end sweeps, the Cowboys marched to a first down at the Trojan three-yard line. But Raft River held there on four downs and started coming back.

A 40-yard pass from Harper to Carl Erickson set up a five-yard scoring burst by Ted Tracy. Minutes later, Brian Hanson blocked a punt to set the Trojans up at the Cowboy four and on the first play Charlie Hutchinson scored. Harper threw to Erickson for the two pointer. Marline Sheridan hiked the lead to 20-0 when he scored from 35 yards away in the second period.

Raft River hit on two bombs to open the second half. The Trojans took the kickoff to the 40-yard line and two plays later Harper's pass to Hutchinson covered 55 yards. On the next possession, Harper turned to Erickson on a 65-yard scoring play and Tracy added the two points.

Stolen pass carries Valley by Devils 6-0

MURTAUGH — Frank McDonald's touchdown off an intercepted pass provided the only points of the night as the Valley Vikings downed the Murtaugh Red Devils 6-0 in a typical gridiron season opener for both.

McDonald made the decisive play with 5:18 remaining in the third period and late in the final period the Valley defense turned back two Murtaugh penetrations to preserve the victory.

Valley, which had a 50-yard scoring run killed by a penalty, and Murtaugh weren't able to move each other much until late. But at the midpoint of the last period, Murtaugh moved to the Valley eighty-yard line before running out of downs.

The Devils came right back to the 10 on their next possession but that chance was thwarted by a Valley interception.

Brasswell, Kimberly drop Pirates 35-0

KIMBERLY — Quick Tony Brasswell stunned Hagerman for three touchdowns and a couple of two-point conversions in leading the Kimberly Bulldogs to a 35-0 victory Friday night.

Brasswell, a 145-pound senior halfback, broke Kimberly on top on a short burst up the middle and Tom Standley bogged the point after. Minutes later Brasswell scored again on a 20-yard spring and came back for the extra points.

After a scoreless second period, Brasswell scored again early in the third on a dive play but Hagerman stopped the conversion try. Gary Garner added the fourth Kimberly score when he picked off a Hagerman pass and returned it 30 yards. Brasswell converted. Holly Houbberg wrapped up scoring in the last period when he scored from 22 yards away.

Harvey Brauberger sent Richfield ahead with a three-yard off-tackle smash and added the two-pointer. Before halting, Robinson threw a five-yard strike to Phil Ah, with Brauberger converting, and then hooked up with Ken Piper for 25 yards and the third Richfield score.

Declo defense stops Pilots for 8-0 win

GLENS FERRY — The Declo Hornets' defensive unit pretty well controlled the game Friday night as Coach Mike Matthews' charges defeated the Glens Ferry Pilots 8-0.

Declo got its winning touchdown in the second period when Rob Riding capped a scoring march by getting the last seven yards off tackle. He also got the two-point conversion after taking a lateral on what appeared to be a broken play.

In the second half, Robinson scored on runs of three and 37 yards. Brauberger ran for the first conversion and Robinson threw to Dave Brown for the final two points.

Mackay shuts out Hansen

MACKAY — The Mackay Miners took advantage of a big weight advantage Friday afternoon to wear down the Hansen Huskies 20-0.

The Miners drove for a touchdown seven minutes into the game, sending Randy Tivie over from the five. Mackay was stopped on the point after and it stayed 6-0 through halftime.

In the varsity division, the Tigers had 43 while Twin Falls had 40 and Buhl 33. Gooding State did not enter enough individuals to qualify. In the jayvee portion, Jerome had 22 and Twin Falls 34.

Buhl's Mark Tappen took the varsity individual prize with an 11:55.7 clocking, followed across by John Hunter and Peter both Gooding State and Doug Larsen, Twin Falls. Power of Twin Falls won the jayvee individual in 12:07.7.

High-flying fumble Filer blanks Shoshone 11-0

FILER — Field position and defense provided the keys Friday afternoon when the Filer Wildcats opened their 1973 season with an 11-0 rain-splattered victory over the Shoshone Indians.

Two opening punts by Filer's Lon Thaele kept the Wildcats deep in Shoshone territory throughout the first half and although Filer blew a couple of scoring chances, the defense saved the opportunities by twice pulling out two-point safeties.

The Wildcats moved out of reach in the third quarter when Rocky Lammers hooked up on a 12-yard pass to Long Thaele for the game's only touchdown.

Shoshone was unable to muster any consistency on offense and only twice moved the ball for more than one first down. The first came late in the first half, but Filer forced the punt on the final play before intermission, and then a couple of pass plays late in the game moved the Indians to the Filer 28 before running out of downs.

Thaele opened the game with a booming 58-yard punt that pinned Shoshone on its own 20-yard line. The Wildcats then recovered a fumble and drove to a third and goal from the three before fumbling that chance away. Three plays later Shoshone mishandled a reverse handoff in the end zone and while the Indians recovered the bounce, Filer benefited by two points.

Only a few plays later Thaele kicked a 38-yard punt that fell on the Shoshone five and Jim Hatt then broke through to nail the Shoshone ball carrier for the second safety of the first period.

After the game, Filer's defense was praised for its ability to stop the Shoshone offense. Coach Tom Jensen said his team was "very satisfied with the way we played today."

Although the ball wound up bouncing five yards away, Thaele beating his hands off the turf in frustration. Fresh Ron Bean booted the point after. The game was the first played on the new Filer field, which proves to be the best in the valley with solid turfing and amazingly well crowned.

Packard grabs Magic Valley amateur lead

Rugged three-day title battle looms

High school senior Kevin Packard went three-under-par to take a narrow lead in a tight battle of talented championship flight golfers Saturday in the opening round of the Magic Valley amateur.

Packard posted a 65 (10-under) one-stroke lead over Idaho State amateur champion J. P. Howard of Boise but with two days of play remaining, a host of players were still in contention.

A field of about 220 turned out despite the lousy windy, rainy weather. Most of the good scores were posted in the afternoon when a rarity for the Magic Valley zephyr, the wind died down about 2 p.m. The course had dozens of standing water pools as a result of a pre-dawn deluge and that hampered the morning squad. However, the same rains proved a blessing for the afternoon troops which found the green softened and accepting approach shots well.

In all, 13 men stayed within five strokes of the lead and all 13 will participate in the elimination derby which should start about 5 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

Larry Malone, Twin Falls, in the first group teeing off, shot a fine 69 to hold the lead through most of the day. His 69, considering conditions, was perhaps the best round of the day. Conversely, defending champion Mike Mooney of Pocatello, also in the early tee-off times, fell out of contention with an 81.

But in the afternoon, Howard immediately under-par. Howard egged the first hole while Packard opened immediately under-par. Howard egged the first hole while Packard opened immediately under-par. Howard egged the first hole while Packard opened immediately under-par.

Jets ride Joe's arm by Saints

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Joe Namath, lacking a running game, uncorked 73 and 85 yard touchdown passes to Rich Caster to give the New York Jets a 20-17 preseason win over the New Orleans Saints Saturday night.

Namath, playing all but the last four minutes of the game, also threw a 58-yard scoring strike to Ed Bell and handed off to Jim Nance on a one-yard touchdown run to round out Jets' scoring, giving New York a 3-2 preseason record.

Mann's field goal in last 15 seconds lets Lions tip Browns

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Errol Mann kicked a 21-yard field goal with 15 seconds left Saturday night to give the Detroit Lions a 16-13 win over the Cleveland Browns in an NFL pre-season game.

The winning kick was set up by Greg Landry's 48-yard pass to Ron Jessie, to the Cleveland 23. Runs by Steve Owens, Albie Taylor and Landry moved the ball to the 14, setting up Mann's field goal, his third of the game.

In the third quarter Landry threw an 80-yard touchdown pass to Jessie, giving Detroit a 10-7 lead. Jessie took the pass at the Cleveland 35 and went in untouched.

Mann missed four field goals, including one from the 50-yard line with five minutes to play which also would have been the winning kick.

Landry completed seven of 23 passes for 155 yards while Cleveland's Mike Phipps hit six of 12 for 51 yards. Landry also ran eight times for 69 yards as Detroit had a decisively better running game.

The victory gave Detroit a 3-2 pre-season record and Cleveland slipped to 2-2-1.

Billy Lofour opened the scoring with a five-yard touchdown run for Cleveland in the second quarter after a long punt return by Greg Pruitt to the Detroit 5.

Mann then hit his first field goal, a 29-yarder, with time expired in the first half when there was a roughing the kicker penalty against Cleveland on the final play.

After Jessie's scoring play, Don Cockroft kicked field goals of 38 and 24 yards in the fourth quarter to give Cleveland a 13-10 lead with 13:47 to play. Cleveland held that lead until Mann kicked his final two field goals.

Mets knock Cardinals out of loop lead with 4-1 decision

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Felix Milian's run-scoring double in the fifth inning and clutch relieving by righthander Harry Parker Saturday night paced the New York Mets to a 4-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The loss, coupled with Pittsburgh's 1-0 victory over Chicago, dropped St. Louis out of first place in the East Division by .001 behind the Pirates and two games back on the last side. This was the first time the Cardinals have been out of the lead in the East Division since July 21.

Milian's two-run double in the fifth inning gave the Mets a 2-1 lead. Parker pitched a scoreless eighth and ninth to seal the victory.

Agreement near on monetary deficit

By LEE M. COHN
(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Negotiators are close to an agreement in principle on new international rules requiring reduction of balance-of-payments deficits and surpluses, according to Nixon administration officials.

They predicted more progress on drafting those adjustment rules than on other key issues of monetary reform will be reported by the negotiators to next month's meeting of the International Monetary Fund at Nairobi, Kenya.

Treasury Sec. George P. Shultz and other officials briefed an advisory committee on the negotiations and sought guidance at a closed meeting here yesterday.

Shultz, announcing establishment of the committee last week, said he wanted to keep in close touch with experienced and expert members of the private financial and business community to help assure that reform is realistic, practical and effective.

Honry W. Fowler of Goldman Sachs and Co., New York, who was treasury secretary in the Johnson administration, is chairman of the advisory committee, which also included mostly leading bankers and business executives. Former treasury secretaries Douglas Dillon and John B. Connally also are members, but Connally did not attend.

One big issue in the reform negotiations is the question of rules or guidelines for prompt corrective action by countries with excessive balance-of-payments deficits or surpluses.

These limits, which will underline monetary stability and trade, result when a country spends more money than it earns abroad.

The United States reform plan proposes the use of formulas, based on gains and losses of monetary reserves, to signal the need for changes in currency values or other corrective action in all but the most exceptional cases.

Most other countries until recently have favored the use of formulas only to signal that consultations are called for, not to trigger corrective action more or less automatically.

U.S. officials said the issue is between a loose system of consultation, which would permit long delays in balancing international accounts, and a system relying on a strong "presumption" that action will be taken promptly as this country wants.

Progress toward agreement on other major reform issues probably will be slower, officials said. For example, they said, European suspicion about U.S. intentions are complicating negotiations on convertibility—the obligation of a country to redeem amounts of its currency held by foreign central banks.

What's What

L. M. Boyd

All unfaithful wives are motivated by revenge. That was the claim of the great Alfred Adler, one of the original psychiatrists. Will you buy that? Our Love and War man will not. Most wives who jump the traces, avers he, do so to prove to themselves convincingly they're ready for divorce, when and if the opportunity arises. Mostly, infidelity is a commitment to quit, even more so than the slam of a door, he intones, sagely. It's the real goodby.

Am I asked how many striptease dancers nationwide are working the clubs these days: About 7,000. Is it noteworthy, too, to report that those scholars who insist on explaining things say most of these young ladies were unmoved by their fathers? No, probably not.

The Washington Monument is sinking about one foot every 200 years. Calculations by the National Geographic Survey show that this means it will have sunk completely out of sight by the year A. D. 113,073.

HANDS

Average glove size of men in recent years has shrunk from 10 to 9. Average glove size of women has increased from 6 to 7. No, glove makers insist they've not changed their size systems. They say men's hands are getting smaller, women's larger, definitely interesting, if true.

Q: "Louis, how come you never talk about your family? Too baneful?"

A: You've got that right. Don't dare start. Might not stop. Besides, what do you mean never? Five years ago I made mention here of daughter. There's known-by-associates as Bird. Seven years ago came a quick reference to son Jim. Fine fellow, that one. Plan to discuss Clara, Martha, Mary Anne and Frances in 1978, 1984, 1991 and 2003, respectively. Stand by. Have I told you about my cow?

THE BLUES

Song writers suffer the blues. More than most, evidently. Take Sammy Gallop. He wrote, "There Must Be A Way." And he killed himself. So did Felix Powell. He wrote, "Pack Up Your Troubles In Your Old Kit Bag." Tragic patterns.

It was just 61 years ago that the trottoir became the rage of dancers. And you've heard about it, young lady, no doubt about that. But ask your granddad to name those other "animal dances" of the time. Certainly he'll remember at least half of those: Horse trot, crabstep, kangaroo dip, camel walk, fish walk, chicken scratch, lame duck, snake, grizzly bear, turkey trot and bunny hug.

Horoscope

Carroll Righter

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1973
 GENERAL TENDENCIES: One of the best Sundays in a long while to decide the overall aims for your talents, the breadth of mind and spirit in working out a new plan of action whereby you can broaden your horizons and enlarge your consciousness. Show your open-mindedness.

ARIES (Mar 21 to Apr 19) You have fine hunches today that will help you tune in on the highest philosophy of life and know how to govern your life better in the future. Cooperate more with mate and get better results.

TAURUS (Apr 20 to May 20) A good day to talk over with associates how to have better understanding between you. Seek to improve harmony with the public in general, also. Avoid one who does not have your best interests at heart.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find some opportunity to help those whose loyalty is unquestioned. Plan time for improving your health. Evening can be very interesting from the social standpoint. Avoid one who is unfriendly to your interests.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) This can be a particularly delightful day and pm if you improve your thinking along philosophical or cultural lines. Please good friends by complimenting them. Show kindness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug 21) Plan just how to improve family life so there can be more happiness and prosperity in the future. Make the home smoother-running and charming and please all who dwell with you. Avoid one who gossips too much.

VIRGO (Aug 22 to Sept 22) State your ideas to others and have far better communication with them. Attend the services that inspire you. Get into the studies, that are really enlightening. Have fun tonight.

LIBRA (Sept 23 to Oct 22) Ideal day to plan how to add to present prosperity so you need not have to worry so much about yourself or family. Listen to what financial experts suggest. Attend some worthwhile social affair in p.m.

SCORPIO (Oct 23 to Nov 21) You are particularly charming today and should get about socially to the right places where you can get the results you desire. Make new friends who are talented. Silver clear of one who wants to cramp your style.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 to Dec 21) Good day to converse confidentially with those who can help you have a more prosperous and happy life in the future. Listen to the voice of your conscience and be prompted about what to do. Avoid one who argues too much.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22 to Jan 20) Listen to what a determined pal has to suggest on your life's horizon. More profitable and satisfying in all ways in the future. Attend social affairs so you make worthwhile new acquaintances. Learn to be a good conversationalist.

AQUARIUS (Jan 21 to Feb 19) Others give you ideas, backing and suggestions that can be most helpful to you and make the future more successful. State your aims honestly and clearly. Avoid one who wastes so much of your valuable time.

PISCES (Feb 20 to Mar 20) Attend the services that most inspire you and then be with persons of great wisdom and knowledge and learn much. Make friendships that are worthwhile. Loftiness of aim and purpose is the keynote now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those charming, young people full of all kinds of ideas, so it behooves parents to teach early to accept only the best ideas and put them to rest. Otherwise your child could become a jack of all trades and a master of none, and could even upset higher-ups everywhere, as well as your household. Some wise and kind discipline early is important as well as teaching to work by giving small duties to perform while young. Religion a must here.

"The stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

What You're Saying

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT GOING BACK TO SCHOOL?

— JULIENNE HANSEN, Twin Falls, 2nd grade
Happy. I just like to go to school.

— JOHN ROYCE, Twin Falls, 3rd grade
I don't really want to. I've had fun all summer. I don't feel like it. It's yucky.

— TOM WALTERS, Twin Falls, 8th grade
Oh, it's okay as long as I'm in O'Leary. It's funner than grade schools. You don't have the same old teacher all the time to put-up-with.

— ROBERT LANCASTER, Twin Falls, 4th grade
I'm ready. I'm glad to go because it gives us something to do. The summer is sort of boring to me.

— DEBBIE HAMILTON, Twin Falls, 8th grade
I like it cause I can get away from home awhile.

— SCOTT NELSON, Twin Falls, 4th grade
Awful. They make you do so much work.

Chicago Wonderboy High In The Rockies

NEDERLAND, Colo. — (NEA) — Caribou Ranch is high up in the Rockies — 8,600 feet high — but it's not only the altitude which makes you gasp. Nor is it just the beauty of the place, the mountains and lakes and meadows covered with wild flowers.

It's the idea that all this is owned by a 28-year-old Chicago-born wonderboy named James William Guercio. He bought the 3,000-acre spread two years ago and has turned the barn into what he proudly hollows is the best recording studio in the U. S.

Others agree with him. He has recorded such current greats as Chicago, The Nitty-Gritty Dirt Band and more. They come up here, relax in the magnificent guest cottages and record in Guercio's studio. It also has oxygen on hand for singers and horn-blowers who need a whiff because of the altitude.

It wasn't only to show off the studio that Guercio invited me up. He's gone into the movie business and he wanted to see his first production, "Electra Glidá in Blue," a fascinating film which stars Robert Drake as a motorcycle cop with a conscience.

The recording studio doubles as a screening room. The curtain rolls back and there is a screen. You sit on the carpeted floor and watch. Outside, you may hear a coyote. It beats Hollywood screening rooms.

"Electra Glidá in Blue" was the surprise smash at the recent Cannes Film Festival. The story of its making would make a movie.

Guercio found the property and was all set to produce, with Rupert Hitzig directing. Ten days before the start date, Guercio says, Hitzig split — some disagreement over the script. Even though Guercio had never even shot a home movie, he took over and directed it himself. He got the top assistant director (Tom Shaw) and a crack cinematographer (Conrad Hall) and went to work.

"By the end of the picture," the slim, fair Guercio says, "Shaw and Hall told me they had created a monster — me. I made mistakes, but I learned. The ranch is a family enterprise. Guercio's parents see to the day-to-day operation. His wife, Lucy, a top New York model, decorated and did it spectacularly. His five younger brothers and sisters are around — Jeff is a sound engineer, Mark rides motorcycles, Gary, 11, scoots around on a minibike or rides a horse.

Guercio says he'd been looking for a ranch for a long time.

All This And Cary's Comments Included

By DICK KLEINER
SUN VALLEY, Idaho (NEA) — If you have to have a film festival in Sun Valley, it is as good a place as any to have it. In and among four films featured in the Brut Film Festival — "A Touch of Class," "Night Watch," "Welcome to Arrow Beach" and "Count Your Bullets" — the stars and other guests swam, rode bikes, jog, skated, went horseback riding and Cary Grant even tried his hand at soaring in a glider. Among those present, Grant, James Garner, Laurence Harvey, Stephen Boyd, James Brolin, Gene Hackman, John Ireland, Ann Sothern, Tisha Sterling and Sammy Cahn. Naturally, I asked Grant if he'll ever make another picture. He snorted his famous snort.

CARY GRANT snuggles into a glider for a flight during film festival in Sun Vally, Idaho.

"I don't have a crystal ball," he said. "I might — if it's something very interesting. But I doubt it. I'm too wrapped up in what I'm doing."

"What is he doing?"

"Breathing in and out."

While sitting at dinner with Grant one night — the conversation skipped hither and yon — now to and — a successful businessman — he sits on the board of directors of Fabergé, Western Airlines and is involved in building a new town near Shannon, in Ireland. He is as opinionated as always. He energetically defended the Nixon administration. He talked about how unsanitary it is to keep dogs in the house. He discussed one of his pet hates — artifice in women — and a lady guest promptly removed her false eyelashes. He discussed the lack of lethies among designers who put their names on products (scarves, ties, handbags) you buy, thus getting free advertising when customers use them.

"When I first met Barbara Hutton (Woolworth heiress and a former wife)," he said, "she was wearing a suit that had the number five on the buttons. It was a Chanel suit and the designer was getting free advertising for Chanel No. 5 perfume. I made her get new buttons."

Laurence Harvey, who costarred with Elizabeth Taylor in spunky "Night Watch," and both directed and starred in the scary "Welcome to Arrow Beach," wore an orange jump suit — most of the weekend. He had "877 L.H." on the pocket.

"That was the number of the airplane I had when I indulged myself," Harvey explained. "I no longer have the plane — or the wife who went with it — but she left me the overalls. I thought that was very nice of her."

Jim Brolin, Marous Welby's right-hand scalpel, did a lot of athletic things. But he said that Robert Young never does any exercising and never has. He even cut gym classes as a boy. But, Brolin says, Young is in great shape anyhow.

I also learned in Sun Valley that Sammy Cahn thinks he has a possible Oscar winner in the song, "All That Love Went to Waste," from "A Touch of Class."

Energy

A three-hour documentary on energy, produced by NBC News, will be aired over KUTV in Salt Lake City, Tuesday, Sept. 4 starting at 7 P.M.

The program, titled "NBC Reports: The Energy Crisis — An American White Paper," will have one-third of the program devoted to electrical energy while the remainder will explore other phases of the overall energy story. Presidents of six large electric utilities in various parts of the United States gathered in New York City recently to define and discuss aspects of the energy problem for the documentary.

DEMONSTRATING use of decibel meter in checking motorcycle noise level is Robert Hoag (right), recreation officer for Sawtooth National Forest. Cycle owner is Jerry Clark, Twin Falls. Noise level checks are part of pilot project involving forest service, riding groups aimed at improving riding opportunities on Sawtooth forest.

insize from 70 cubic centimeters to 100 cc.

Steve Miller, project chairman for the MVTMA, said the noise levels — checked with a decibel meter — were well below the levels specified by Idaho law for motorcycles in either road or trail use.

"Any concerned, reputable rider would be using a machine within legal and acceptable levels," Miller said. "A machine would have to be modified to be noisy."

Forest service personnel will be using decibel meters in checking on noise levels from cycles, chain saws and other recreational equipment like chainsaws on forest lands. "Noise checks" will also be made with saw machines as a means of helping users of those vehicles avoid areas where excessive noise could cause snowslides.

Miller said the riders' associations are attempting to inform their members and other unaffiliated riders of the evaluation studies being made on the Sawtooth forest, since similar studies probably be made elsewhere in the state.

With trails available, riders are making use of them but expert riders prefer more challenging terrain than beginners. Miller said one objective of the evaluation may be rating for trails both as to condition and whether it will appeal more to a novice or to a skilled rider.

"Modern cycles are available to prospective riders offering safety, comfort, and reliability," Miller said. "They also cause minimal damage to the environment if they are properly operated."

He said the cycle riders or organizations accepted the offer to help with the inventory of trail conditions so that both the riders and the land administration agencies would know exactly what is needed in order to provide trails which would offer riding conditions which would challenge the skill of the rider as well as the opportunity to enter scenic or otherwise attractive country.

Tony Bennett Has Had Few Of His Dreams Broken

Bob Hope had come to see his friend Pearl Bailey at the old New York Paramount on Broadway when he first heard Anthony Benedetto sing. Impressed by the young singer, and by the audience response to him, Hope announced, "He doesn't know it yet, but I'm taking him along with me on a tour of the United States. He doesn't know this yet; either, but from now on his name is going to be Tony Bennett."

Tony Bennett, formerly Antonio Dominic Benedetto, will star in an ABC Television Network special, "Sonty Presents Tony and Lena," co-starring Lena Horne, on Thursday night, Sept. 6.

commercial art, but his father's liking for Al Jolson instilled show business in his heart. Says Tony, "My father was a real Al Jolson fan and I was only 3 years old when he took me along to see those early talkies." Tony began imitating Jolson.

It was the combination of his love for music and World War II which finally led to his decision to make art a hobby and singing a profession. He spent much of his three years in the military singing with the Army band, and later toured Germany with a jazz group he formed. He also took advantage of Germany's musical heritage and studied at the University of Heidelberg.

After the Army, Tony entered the American Theatre Wing's school to study drama and music theory.

But time has a way of occasionally going backward, and today Tony is getting a great deal of happiness from his hobby of painting. He recently sold my first painting, he proclaimed proudly. "In fact, I sold three in the one day."

"The satisfaction that goes with that sort of thing just can't be expressed in words. It goes right down inside you. Now I've got to guard against the temptation to let a pastime take over from work, which has happened to others I know. Zero Mostel, for instance. These days he works only so that he can afford to paint."

Tony's painting of the Brooklyn Bridge was the first to be sold. "I paint nature, and try to catch the atmosphere." During the taping of "Tony and Lena" the singer found many moments to sketch his co-star whom he called a "fascinating and beautiful subject."

The man who was discovered along "The Boulevard of Broken Dreams," and introduced that street to millions of people, has had very few dreams broken. More than most people, Bennett has many of his dreams still intact, and many others fulfilled.

Pearl Bailey first hired him for a night club act in Greenwich Village; Bob Hope introduced him to fame; Mitch Miller, on hearing demonstration record of "Boulevard of Broken Dreams," gave him a recording contract; and "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" and a lifetime pass for the Golden Gate Bridge. Tony Bennett's success story has a Horatio Alger ring to it.

Tony is the son of a poor Italian tailor from Calabria, with a nose that, in Tony's words, "looks as if it's been stepped on by the Brigade of Guards" at — Buckingham Palace. But he was fortunate, he had a choice of two talents to pursue — singing and painting.

Trail Machine Pilot Project

By DALE STEWART
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Trail machine riders and Sawtooth National Forest personnel have launched a pilot project which may produce better riding opportunities on forest trails.

The first major effort was a "show me ride" over two trails in the Bear Creek and Goat Lakes areas of the South Boise River drainage north of Fairfield early in August.

Four US Forest Service officials and six members of the Magic Valley Trail Machine Association made the 40 mile trip. It was planned to evaluate trail conditions and recreation opportunities available to trail machine riders in the South Boise River area, and also learn more about other related factors including noise, soil conditions, fish and wildlife habitat, vegetation and machine capabilities.

Similar trips will be made in other areas and probably more trips will be made in the same area as the Aug. 10 ride.

According to Robert Hoag, recreation officer for the Sawtooth National Forest, a full evaluation of the possibilities for recreation and effects of machine uses on the Sawtooth forest will probably require several years.

Trailtrippers now use trails in many of the Sawtooth forest districts now, and both the forest service and rider organizations — the Idaho Trail Machine Association and the Idaho Motorcycle Association — are interested in developing loop rides and routes which will offer challenges to the skill of the riders while keeping environmental damage to a minimum.

Hoag said the forest service recognizes that trail use by vehicles is legitimate where it does not damage resource values or is not a public safety hazard, or is not prohibited, such as in a wilderness area.

"Trail vehicles, such as trail cycles, provide an exhilarating form of outdoor recreation," he said. "They also provide safe, convenient transportation for recreationists and for forest service employees on work projects."

If properly used, cycles can be accommodated in many places with little or no physical damage to resources, Hoag said. He said machines at moderate speeds on reasonable grades, normally cause less impact on trails than horses.

Presently, land areas and trails are being evaluated to determine where mechanized access can be accommodated without unacceptable damage to the land, and the help of cyclist associations is being sought.

"These guys understand bikes a lot better than we do," Hoag said.

During the Aug. 10 trip, noise level tests were conducted, trail conditions were examined to determine where maintenance was needed for improvement, and machine capabilities on grades and under various conditions noted. The machines used were powered by engines ranging

Dixon Makes Nixon Look Like A Security Risk

By Tom Tiede

NEW YORK — (INEA) — Remember Richard Nixon has had pleasant and unpleasant consequences for James LaRoe.

When he graduated from college with ambitions of becoming an actor, he was told down flat by his parents. Well, how can you make love on a stage with a face like mine? So he settled into a routine existence of regular toil, interrupted with boring repetition by neighbors who brought relatives over to meet the guy who looks like Tricky Dick.

Then when Nixon became President, LaRoe's fortune changed. He left the workaday world (commercial artist) and finally got into Show Biz. He adopted the name Richard M. Dixon, got an agent — and with the help of makeup and audiences who will laugh at anything — he began an impersonation career which has, he says, "taken me all over the world."

Alas, however, things have recently turned sour again for the man with the flukey face. Allegations emanating from the Watergate investigations indicate that Richard M. Nixon was one fellow who was not laughing at Richard M. Dixon. Sources say that Dixon (LaRoe) was one of the people whom the White House had investigated for "security reasons."

It has happened, of course. The White House investigations have not been exactly shattering to the victims. The list of White House "enemies" includes many entertainers, as well as businessmen and politicians, who have profited from the publicity of being on the enemy list. Paul Newman, for instance, was an "honorary" recipient only to the Academy Award.

But James LaRoe has been crushed. "Me, investigated? M. God, he sighs, in earnest, let me make this perfectly clear, it strike someone has taken the flag pin from his lapel.

"I'm the damndest patriot you ever saw. I think this is the greatest country in the world. I'm one of those guys who walks down the block in the Fourth of July parade."

His jaws fairly tremble.

"I remember once in Vienna, or was it Berlin, no, it was Vienna. I was being interviewed by some reporter and they had to drag me off the guy when he made snide remarks about America. I was ready to haul him. They had to drag me off."

Investigated. By his own country. God!

Bear in mind here, LaRoe says, that it hasn't been easy being Richard Dixon. "I've had people spit on me. I've had hippies come charging up to me with blood in their eyes. One time at the University of Miami, I was doing a homecoming gig. I was striding around the stadium on a car feeder, you know, with my hands waving over my head, and this kid ran up before all those people and tried to get me. Four big football players stopped him cold."

But LaRoe adds, he takes the risks. Besides the money (a reported $1,500 an appearance), he also feels he is doing a service to the country. He says that his act, speeches, films and dances brings Richard Nixon a little closer to the people. "When I get through people say to me well, we know you're not really the President, but watching you and laughing at you, well, maybe Nixon's a human being after all."

LaRoe, to be sure, does not have to play the clown. Indeed, he "could have taken the easy way." Listen, I could double my income if I wanted. Look what guys like David Fries are making — and most of the time they knock Nixon like hell. If I wanted to knock him, I could make the money too. You can't believe the things I've turned down. One time a guy wanted me to do a pornographic film. That would have been nice, huh? Heard Nixon make that?

But no, LaRoe says, he accepted only nonpolitical gigs. That is to say, "I wouldn't want to earn my living hurting the President." A few years ago he did make an anti-Nixon film — a dud called "Richard" — but he insists he did not read the full script and was unaware of its critical nature. That film, perhaps, embarrassing to Nixon, was the impetus behind the White House probe of LaRoe.

"What kind of probe took place?" LaRoe says he doesn't know and tears to contemplate the White House investigation of Thomas M. Arvey in Kopechuk (the victim in Ted Kennedy's 1973 accident on Chappaquiddick Island) is alleged to have attempted the gathering of "secret" recording recordings. LaRoe doubts such procedures in his own case. "I've been happily married for 24 years and try to attend church on Sunday."

Whatever the spying, it was adds LaRoe, inappropriate, insulting, illegal and injurious. "The ironic thing is that if the FBI would have come to me and said, Mac, we're checking up on you, I would have said, fine, do your damndest. But going behind my back? I'm stunned. I'm sick."

"It is, says LaRoe enough to make a man wonder. And in his case he says he's wondering about getting out of show business and in politics. "I've had people from both parties tell me I could do it. Well, perhaps. With his face after Watergate, voters would at least have to admire his courage."

WHO HAS a high position in the U.S. government and who is his impersonator? James LaRoe, alias Richard M. Dixon.

The Days Of Dr. King And Dr. Abernathy

By ELLIS COSE
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968 much of America became obsessed with "making his dream come true." For some, the obsession became a religion, with Dr. King replacing Jesus Christ and nonviolence replacing God; and scores of "leaders" deciding they were going to pick up Dr. King's mantle.

With the recently announced resignation of Dr. Ralph Abernathy from the presidency of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which Dr. King headed, some concluded that Dr. King's dream had finally died.

In a highly emotional statement, Dr. Abernathy said his time had come to bow out. The black middle class, he said, would not support the organization, forcing reduction in staff to a point where it was impossible to carry on a "live and vibrant program." And he added, as a minister and a father, it was time he gave more time to his congregation and his family.

Finally, said Dr. Abernathy, he could not function in an organization forced to accept its binding from the federal government and large corporations: "You cannot beg a man and fight him at the same time."

Some observers called the resignation inevitable. Dr. Abernathy, they charged, was a man of limited vision and unimaginative leadership whom time had left somewhere in the mid 1960's.

Much of the criticism, from movement colleagues, was based in envy. Perhaps some was rooted in truth. In any case, Dr. Abernathy returned the criticism, lashing out at what he described as black leaders interested only in "trickery, scheming" and getting rich.

Some wrote the attack off as cries from a drowning man. But the points raised in his statement of resignation could not be written off so easily.

The movement has always been largely funded by whites, and though some blacks have been conspicuous in their support, the great outpouring of funds from the black middle class seemed to never materialize.

In PUSH (People United to Save Humanity), which claims to receive 98 per cent of its financing from blacks, some argue that a reversal in that trend has come about. Asked for an explanation, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, PUSH national president, said PUSH had managed to keep pace with the times, to maintain its usefulness, to become "necessary."

The Rev. Bernard Lee, executive assistant to Dr. Abernathy and the man most likely to end up with the presidency of SCLC if Dr. Abernathy cannot be convinced to remain, credits "black capitalism" with bringing some black money into the movement. More is not forthcoming, he said, because blacks "generally have never been taught stewardship."

Another factor in SCLC's present financial plight, said Mr. Lee, is the enfeeblement of the Nixon administration.

SCLC's opposition to President Nixon, the Vietnam War and poverty, said Mr. Lee, "played havoc with us financially," and scared off a lot of white money which otherwise would have poured into the organization.

Still, he maintains, SCLC's future is "very promising," adding: "I don't believe people of good will will allow SCLC to suffer a financial death."

At any rate, said Mr. Lee, the guilt felt by the black middle class will bring in funds.

It could easily be argued that depending on black middle-class guilt is opening the door to disillusionment - for the Carl Devenay, in his 40s, seeks satisfaction outside his marriage when he is unable to find it with his wife, Janet. Unhappy, she asks Carl to seek professional help from Dr. Welby. The situation is further complicated when the pal's daughter, Peggy, stuns her father with another woman, has a severe asthma attack.

Robert Young stars as Dr. Marcus Welby. Also starring same reason that dependence on white middle-class guilt opened that door during the early stages of the movement. People simply get tired, of feeling guilty and soon find a way to rationalize their guilt away.

The emphasis would perhaps be better placed on making the black middle class realize that its destiny is somehow tied in with the destiny of the black poor. For, like it or not, self-interest has always been a stronger motivating force than an intangible feeling of guilt.

A Monument In Crabgrass And Weeds

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
KENT, Ohio (NEA)
Dean Kahler will always have to live with the memory of the early afternoon of May 4.
At noon on that epic day in 1970, just after the invasion of Cambodia, when the Kent State University campus erupted in turmoil and the National Guard was called in, Dean wandered up to the vicinity of Parking Lot H-50. It was his last walk.
Dean Kahler will be in a wheelchair the rest of his life. Hundreds of milling students taunted uniformed guardsmen, who backed warily up a knoll next to Taylor Hall, the architecture building. Dean wanted to see what was going on. He was on his way to a 1 o'clock class.

Dean was then a 20-year-old freshman. He had been on campus exactly five weeks. But he was passionately committed to the antiwar movement. A year earlier, he had registered for the draft as a conscientious objector.
He got caught up in the emotional fervor of the shouting unruly crowd of students. He remembers throwing a couple of rocks himself in the direction of the guardsmen. "I wish I hadn't," he says in reflective embarrassment — but he was so far away that all he hit was a couple of students.
Dean was on the fringe of the crowd when he heard the first burst of rifle fire. He immediately hit the ground.
"It was a natural instinct," he recalls. "I grew up around guns and did a lot of hunting."
Then he felt this strange clap in the upper left side of his back and a numbrress spread through him.

"It was like instant novocain," he says.
That was also the last time he felt — or would ever again feel — a sensation in the lower part of his body. To the kids who hovered over him, he said "I can't feel anything. I probably have damage to my spinal chord." Dean had been deep into a zoology class studying anatomy.
The bullet from the M-1 rifle is still in his body, a slug of steel that's his personal plaque of remembrance for May 4.

as it is known simply on this bucolic, rolling university campus with its stark modern concrete buildings.
He is still a student at Kent State, where they're trying desperately, almost self-consciously to forget that four unarmed young students were struck down fatally by rifle fire and — this is less well known — that nine others were also hit by bullets.
Dean, the most seriously wounded, is the only one left on campus at a time when the Department of Justice has just decided, after three years, to reopen the investigation of the shootings.

He is junior in the School of Education and has done a remarkable job of self-rehabilitation, of reconciling himself to a life as a paraplegic. He was once an athletic 6-3 and 180 pounds and wanted eventually to play on the football team. He wanted most of all an education at Kent State.
After graduation from high school in East Canton, Ohio, just south of here, Dean had tried stinices as a third helper and janitor at Republic Steel. Working double shifts, he had saved 40,000 in nine months to finance his schooling.
The money is almost all gone. He is $15 away from being broke. "I'm down to zero," he grins through the thick red beard he has grown the last two years. He is bright and alert and optimistic.

campus in Tri-Towers and gets along very well by himself.
"I'm happy. I'm alive," he says curiously. "I'm bitter only at the inefficiency of government in covering the whole thing up."
"I'm sort of indifferent to those who did the shooting. In a way I feel sorry for them. They have to live with it, and their nightmares. Mainly, I want people to know what happened because of the distortion of the news. They even ask me, 'What about the guardsmen who got hurt?' They also think only the four dead students were shot."
After the shooting on that fateful Monday, Dean was unconscious until Thursday. When he woke up, the first man he saw was an FBI agent in the corner of his hospital room, waiting to question him. He brought his hands up, relieving the memory.
A few hundred yards from where Dean sits in his wheel chair in the University Center, a black squirrel is foraging under an oak tree, on the knoll where harassed National Guardsmen once opened fire on students.
Just below it on an island in the parking lot under a braced young oak, a simple metal tablet lies on the ground, surrounded by crabgrass and weeds. The inscription reads:
"In Living Memory of Alison Krause, Jeffrey Miller, Sandra Schuler, William Schroeder, May 4, 1970."
Dean Kahler, who didn't know any of them personally, drives past it almost every day. With "little feeling, although he felt there, too.

DEAN KAHLER'S personal memento of May 4, 1970, is the slug from an M-1 rifle still in his body.

Vacation Still Coming? Read This!

By RUSSELL BAKER
(c) New York Times Service
Following are the necessities for a full vacation and instructions for their use:
1. Station wagon and turnpike.
Place the children in the station wagon and drive the resulting ensemble over 500 miles of the turnpike. If the children are not (A) crying (B) fighting, (C) screaming or (D) arguing the suitcases through their windows after the first 50 miles of the turnpike, you are doing something wrong. Return home at once and start again.
2. John Dillinger's secret cave.
Actually it doesn't have to be Dillinger's, or even a cave. It might be Betty Boy Floyd's childhood home, or Sitting Bull's hidden buffalo lick. It might be anything that can be advertised on roadside billboards every two miles and cost $3 a ticket to be visited. A suspicion of fraudulence should lie upon it like a miasma. It should bore the children instantly and leave both parents in a rotten mood.
3. Motel, hamburger, television, air conditioning and turnpike road.

After driving the 500 miles of turnpike and spending $15 at John Dillinger's secret cave, just the crying, fighting, screaming or suitcase-throwing children into the Motel, staffing them first with the hamburger. Turn on the television to drown the turnpike roar, and start catching a cold from the air conditioning.
4. Sand.
Pascal wrote that there is no vacation without sand, and how right he was. Place the sand in the bedsheets shortly after retiring, so that it will not be discovered until you are just about to drop off to sleep.
5. Sunburn.
Many vacationers rush right out on the first day and get their sunburns immediately, only to find that they have very little use for them. It is true that there is not much a person can do with a sunburn except talk about it, but certain people cannot feel they are on vacation until they have their sunburn. They get it as soon as possible, perhaps because their four all the sunburns will be gone if they wait too long. If you are not one of these manic types you may find it wiser not to get your sunburn until the last day of vacation.

6. Athlete's foot.
Athlete's foot has an advantage over sunburn in that you can at least give it to other people. If you want the satisfaction of seeing them use it, you must get it early in the vacation. This is sound practice in any case since you will have to listen to a great deal of dull boasting about sunburns from your fellow vacationers who will be less likely to expect you to reply with a snappy riposte if you are busy scratching your toes.
7. Three inches of rain.
Do not use up all three inches of rain right away, for you will have nothing left to justify a satisfying wallow in self-pity as your vacation progresses. If you are on a two-week vacation, three inches of rain can be stretched to rain 10 or 11 of your 14 days, thus strengthening your awareness of the injustice of life and reminding you once again of the mule's conspicuous helplessness against you, yourself, personally. It never hurts these days to be on guard, especially after vacations.
8. Rusty nail.

This is a sunny-day necessity. If the sun is threatening to shine, place the rusty nail somewhere where you can easily puncture yourself accidentally with it before the last cloud has disappeared. This will give you an afternoon discussing sunburns, athlete's foot and rusty nail punctures with other vacationers in a doctor's crowded waiting room. If you have been clever about your three inches of rain, the sunny day will have gone before the tetanus needles arrive.
9. Camera.
Immediately upon arriving at your very first motel place the camera conspicuously on a table in the restaurant where thieves will see it and go away for three hours. This will spare you the necessity of recording any of those precious vacation moments for your memory snapshot album. Some people cannot do this. They want at least the roll of snapshots before getting the camera stolen. These people invariably regret it. Years later, in their dotage, browsing through old snapshot albums, there it all is. Sunburn, athlete's foot. Mother getting a cold in the motel air-conditioning. Twelve days of rain.

And as the memories, memories, of how they spent their youths, come flooding back, the emotion comes with it, and they cry for the long ago.

Fake Cops With Real Guns Upping Chances For Death

By TOM TIEDE
NEW YORK (NCA) — Recently in New Jersey a reporter in a bank was chatting with the security guard. The guard, in his early 60s, was discussing his responsibilities and pointed to his .38 cal. revolver to make a revealing point. "I guess I'm supposed to use this, but I don't have to," I couldn't hit the broad side of a barn.

The admission, numbing by itself, is not unusual in America, which has for generations condemned the proliferation of guns in the erratic hands of criminals, now is beginning to worry about the numbers of weapons in the erratic hands of anti-criminals.

New York has of late begun to weed out its "gun-happy" policemen. Boston is trying to tighten up rules for arms use by law enforcement personnel. There are demands in several cities that off-duty cops leave their weapons in the station house.

But the far greater danger, too seldom considered, comes not from official police forces. Today all manner of non-official security people are strapping guns to their hips, often without proper training, often without psychological clearance — and very often without any real need other than prestige and bluster.

The bank guard in New Jersey is one example. A retired Army clerk with no combat experience, he was hired mainly as a pistol packin' deterrent. But not only is he not a deterrent according to professional security men who believe bank guards are outdated, he is a danger. If panicked, who's to say how he'd act?

There are no reliable statistics on the matter, but evidence suggests the bank guard is one of hundreds of thousands of grossly inept yet legal gun-wearers in the country. New York's Port Authority police carry weapons while they direct bridge and tunnel traffic. Private detectives carry sidearms while they tail and investigate playboy husbands. All of the nation's estimated 220,000 plus professional security guards are eligible for gun duty. Many amateur security people, most of whom are hired off the street, also carry guns. Today, armed men work in churches, in buses and at baseball games.

Most distressing of all, perhaps, are the legions of "auxiliary" police across the nation who are being issued increasing numbers of weapons. These men — numbering about 500,000, mostly volunteers — were originally assigned simple clerical, traffic or crowd control duties. But in many towns, they have acquired many of the same responsibilities as official police officers and posse members.

The situation, says former anti-gun Congressman Abner Mikva (D-Ill.), is out of control. "Guns beget guns, violence begets violence. We are approaching in this country what the Kerner Commission in 1968 predicted — our cities have become armed camps." Not only must a citizen fear the bad guys today, Mikva suggests, he must fear the good guys too.

To be sure, a factory owner hiring an untrained retiree for late night security can, in many states, arm the man with a cannon. An agency security guard, low paid and bored, can and often will draw his revolver to shoot at noises in the night. Recently in New York City a Housing Authority sentry shot two teen-agers for simple trespassing. And — not long ago — an auxiliary cop in Dallas killed a burglar with a shotgun he kept under the patrol car seat.

Mikva says such indiscriminate gun-use, even if legal, is unacceptable. And many security authorities agree. John Horan of the Pinkerton Detective Agency says his men are discouraged from having weapons except when they are experienced and in hazardous duty. Otto Vohle, national director of the Reserve Law Officers Association, says no auxiliary officer should be given a weapon unless he has passed mental as well as physical requirements. "It's not enough to know how to shoot. A man with a badge must also know when and when not to shoot."

Mikva believes gun-banning and "de-escalation" would reduce the proliferation of legally carried firearms.

Race Of Champions Feature Of ABC Sports In 1974

International Race of Champions — one of the most unusual concepts in the history of automobile racing involving 12 of the world's greatest drivers — will be telecast by ABC Sports during the first quarter of 1974. It was announced today by Ronnie Arledge, President of ABC Sports.

Arledge said that three races of the four-race series will be taped Riverside International Raceway on Oct. 27th and 28th and will be telecast over the ABC Television Network beginning in January.

He said the fourth race in the series will be broadcast Feb. 16 from the Daytona International Speedway on the weekend of the famed Daytona 500 Stock Car Race.

The 12 drivers, representing the four major branches of auto racing, will compete against each other in identical Porsche Carrera racing cars for prize money totaling more than $100,000.

Eleven of the drivers have been selected. They are Jackie Stewart, Emerson Fittipaldi and Denis Hulme, all from Formula 1 racing; Mark Donohue, Peter Hesson and George Follmer of American road racing; Richard Petty, David Pearson and Bobby Allison of stock car racing; and Bobby Unser and Gordon Johncock, both of U.S. Auto Club (USAC) racing.

Penske Productions, creators of the series, have ordered 15 special 1974 three-liter Porsche Carrera racing cars from the Porsche plant in West Germany. Each car will be checked by racing officials before their bonded shipment to the United States.

The cars will be identical in every way, including fuel, oil, tires, spark plugs and shock absorbers. The only exception will be adjustments to the driver's seat. Drivers may not make mechanical changes on the cars.

The three races to be run at the Riverside International Raceway will feature purses of $25,000. The fourth and final race in the series is worth $65,000.

Here is the format for the International Race of Champions:

Three of the 15 race cars will be used alternately by the 12 drivers during practice sessions prior to the first race. They will then become backup cars for the series.

Drivers will draw for car assignments for the first race and the starting grid will be determined by two-lap qualifying time trials.

Starting driver lineups for the second and third races will be exactly opposite the order of finish of the previous race, meaning the last-place driver of one event starts the next one from the pole position.

The cars, however, will be lined up according to their exact order of finish in each previous race.

Points will be awarded in order of finish, 10 for first, 11 for second, and so on.

The top six drivers in the point standings after the first three events will move on to Daytona for the championship.

Adam's Rib

Madeline Kahn and Arthur O'Connell have been signed by producer Peter Hunt to guest-star in a two-part story, "The Unwritten Law," for the ABC Television Network's new comedy series, "Adam's Rib."

Blythe Danner, who portrays attorney Amanda Bonner, defends her and Ken Howard, who stars with Miss Danner as her husband Adam, is the prosecuting assistant D.A. Veteran actor O'Connell is seen as the judge.

The two-part teleplay was written by Peter Stone, creator of the series, and is being directed by Ary Nelson.

"Adam's Rib" premieres on ABC Friday, Sept. 14.

National Geographic Series

Bows On ABC Television

In New Series September 6

An incredible 1,600-mile trek by land yacht through the forbidding western Sahara is the subject of "Wind Raiders of the Sahara," the premiere presentation of the popular National Geographic color documentary series moving to the ABC Television Network Thursday, Sept. 6.

To film the one-hour program narrated by Leslie Nielsen, National Geographic dispatched a team of eight international pilots under the leadership of Gen. Jean Du Boucher, a retired French Army officer with 20 years of Sahara service.

From knowledge gained from his first trans-Sahara land yacht expedition in 1967, the general prepared for this second attempt using a more sophisticated type of yacht and chose a shorter but more arduous course.

In strict survival terms, the inhospitable Sahara is adventure enough. Attempting to traverse its western region—the most desolate portion in—a wind-driven vehicle increases the prospects of adventure all the more, as recorded by the cameras.

The expedition sets out from Tindouf, deep in western Algeria, the last outpost of civilization on the old caravan route to Timbuktu. Although caravaneers are part of the past, dancing girls, such as those who once entertained them, remain and their talents are viewed by the land yacht pilots.

Chief guide for the expedition is Ahmed oud Zoumoun, a Reguibat Moor who formerly served as a French Army Scout and has survived many desert episodes. With him, Gen. Du Boucher and the pilots encounter the desert people: an itinerant musician of a low social caste who follows the nomadic tribesmen from camp to camp; and Reguibat tribes who migrate south during the winter in search of grass for camel herds.

Gen. Du Boucher is moved to reminiscences when the group reaches Fort Ain Ben Tili. This post, built during the days of the French Colonial empire in West Africa, was once under his command.

The expedition encounters nomad encampments. Here, a closer examination of life is made, including the role of women, and the rote education based on the Koran. Here, expedition members celebrate Christmas Eve.

Crossing the great Rihlhamane, land of no people, the land yachters are halted when the winds fail. Vividly seen are the effects of weathering and erosion on the great gulches which Morish tribes say are inhabited by spirits.

Zouirat, an old village which has grown into a town, is reached. Here, huge iron mines are operated by MIFERMA, a consortium of European countries in partnership with the Mauritanian government. At nearby old salt diggings in extensive beds over a 60-square-mile area, the story of Ahmed, a 12-year-old boy who works in the mines with his father, is told.

The expedition continues westward into the Spanish Sahara, then turns south and makes a stop at station Kilmator, 100 on the only railroad within 500 miles. The daily wear and tear on the pilots is evident, but the camaraderie is also evident.

Nearing the sea they approach the territory of the Imraguen, simple fishing people who were driven out of the Sahara by powerful Moors long ago. As a result, these Imraguen were forced to change their life-style from herding to fishing, and traditionally paid tribute to those warrior tribes who drove them to the sea.

The expedition has succeeded in opening up a new era in the sport of land yachting. There is no need to remain on the crowded beaches of Western Europe. It will be possible to find new experiences, new adventures in the sands of the Sahara.

"Wind Raiders of the Sahara" was produced by the National Geographic Society in association with Wolper Productions. Narration was written by N. H. Cominos, who also produced and directed the documentary presentation. Dennis B. Kane is executive producer for the National Geographic Society, and Nicholas Glapp and Jack Kaufman are executive producers.

The pilots are all experienced sailors on ice, sea or sand. Stan Wymond, an automobile assembly foreman from Canada, got his start in ice boats. Garry Benson is a printer from England. Uwe Schroder is a six-time world sand sailing champion and was a member of the 1967 Trans-Sahara Rally. Bertrand Du Boucher, the general's son and a student at the University of Paris, is one of the great sailors of France. Ronald Rowcock is an electronics engineer and champion ice boat sailor from Poland. Cornelis Kortenoever is an architect from the Netherlands, who designs and races ice boats and land yachts. He also was a member of the 1967 expedition. Donald Rypinski, an interior designer from Newport Beach, Calif., designs land yachts. Alain Houtsager, world champion in Class II sailing, is an architect from Belgium. Hans Dekkers, from the Netherlands is chief designer of the yachts for this expedition. The expedition doctor, an expert in desert medicine, is Dr. Gerard Chatter.

Will Direct

Emmy Award-winning producer Carolyn Raskin and Emmy Award-winning actress Lee Grant will make their television directorial debuts as co-directors of the comedy special "The Shape of Things" to be broadcast Friday, Oct. 19 on the CBS Television Network.

The signing of Miss Raskin and Miss Grant by executive producer George Schlatter marks the first time two women have been named to co-direct a major television special.

In explaining that the show will be television's first all-comedy special made chiefly by, with and about women, Schlatter stated that Miss Raskin and Miss Grant will perform "interchangeable" directing chores, with each directing at various times from the control booth and on the stage.

In addition, Miss Raskin will produce and Miss Grant will take on an acting assignment in the satirical revue. "The Shape of Things" will be taped in mid-September at CBS Television City in Hollywood.

Sneak Peek, Set For Youngsters

Comedy stars Jack Burns and Avery Schreiber will host "ABC's Saturday Morning Sneak Peek," a preview of the new Saturday morning shows, airing on the ABC Television Network Friday evening, Sept. 7.

The half-hour children's special introducing the shows premiering Sept. 8 is a dramatization of what happens when Jack promises to help Avery throw a surprise party for his young nephew by inviting some of his TV celebrity friends.

Jack's "friends" turn out to be Saturday morning's cartoon stars come to life.

Among those arriving in person for the surprise party are a 6' rabbit named Bugs Bunny, Superman, Batman, Yogi Bear, Lassie, and Rick Springfield. Also Gabor, the invisible dog.

Frank Sinatra In Private Eye Role Sept. 10

Frank Sinatra is back as private-eye Tony Rome, dealing with killers, blackmailers, ex-mafia chiefs and Raquel Welch on a wild ramble through the seamy underside of Miami that tourists don't see in "Lady In Cement," the "ABC Monday Night Movie" on the ABC Television Network Sept. 10. "Lady in Cement," which provided "Bonanza's" Dan Blocker with his first movie role, also stars Richard Conte, Martin Gabel, Lanie Kazan and Pat Henry.

The film was shot in 28 different locations in the Miami area, with a sandspit known as "Shrimp Road" providing the background for the peak of the action.

In "Lady in Cement" Tony Rome has set aside his private detective's license long enough to indulge in a popular local sport—diving for buried treasure off the Florida coast—when he finds the water-logged and shark-bitten body of a woman with her feet encased in cement. While attempting to find out who the dead woman was, Rome meets a hulking convict named Gransky (Blocker), who believes the victim was his former girlfriend and hires Rome to pinpoint the woman's identity. His search then leads to an alcoholic waitress, Kit Forrest (Raquel Welch), and former racketeer chief (Gabel), who has led Kit into believing that she has murdered the lady in cement.

Non-stop action follows as Rome tried to reconstruct the past, with both the help and hindrance of his police detective friend (Conte) and the unpredictable Gransky. "Lady in Cement" (1968) was produced by Aaron Rosenberg and directed by Gordon Douglas from the Marvin H. Albert and Jack Guss screenplay based on Albert's novel. 20th Century-Fox released the film by Arcola Millfield Productions.
