Hunt claims Viet coup link phony

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House, trying to woo the Catholic vote for President Nixon in 1972, tried to prove falsely that the Kennedy administration had arranged to kill South Vietnamese President Diem in 1963, E. Howard Hunt Jr. testified today.

Hunt, one of the original Watergate bugging conspirators, was leadoff witness at the nationally televised Senate hearings on the scandal resumed after a seven-week recess.

Gaunt and pale from six months in prison, Hunt testified that he had been "directed" in 1971 by Charles W. Colson, then a special counsel to Nixon, to fabricate government cables to implicate Kennedy in the deaths of Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother-in-law, Ngo Dinh Nhu. "I believe it was desired by Mr. Colson, or at least some of his colleagues, to demonstrate that a Catholic United States administration had in fact conspired in the assassination of a Catholic chief of state in another country," Hunt said.

Hunt, a former CIA agent and prolific spy novelist, also testified that:

— He was told by fellow bugging conspirator G. Gordon Liddy in late November 1971 that John N. Mitchell, then the attorney general and later Nixon campaign manager, "required the establishment of a large-scale intelligence, counter-intelligence program" for the campaign and that presidential assistants John W. Dean III and Jeb Stuart Magruder also "were active in its formulation."

— He believes Colson, who has vigorously denied any role in political espionage, "was aware of the overall intelligence plan" as early as January 1972.

— After the five-man Watergate bugging team was arrested June 17, 1972, Hunt went immediately to the White House and stuffed a briefcase loaded with electronic gear into a safe in the office he maintained as a $110-a-day White House consultant.

— He, Liddy and an aide to billionaire recluse Howard Hughes plotted to steal sensitive documents from Las Vegas, Nev., publisher Hank Greenspan but that the raid was never carried out.

Speed review, council told

United Press-International

A presidential spokesman, Gerald L. Warren, said the council had promised to make an upward adjustment in retail gas prices after reviewing data filed by Tuesday.

Italy 'discovery' planned

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Adam Nordwall, 43, American Indian, left for Rome today wearing full tribal dress to "discover" Italy as Christopher Columbus did America.

Nordwall, a member of the Chippewa tribe, said "if it is a valid statement Columbus discovered this country even though Indians had been here for thousands of years, then I can go to Italy and claim myself as discoverer."

'Soft' Mars landing scheduled

It was Kosygin's first visit to Yugoslavia since he became Premier in 1964 and reflected the steady improvement in relations between the two countries during the past three years.

Prince Charles engaged?

LONDON (UPI)—"Pace speculation" has been the Buckingham Palace reaction to a report that Prince Charles heir to the British throne would announce his engagement later this year.

A newspaper report has linked the prince to Lady Jane Wellesley, 22, the only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Wellington. It said word of the engagement is circulating among their friends.

Army preparing new nerve gas

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Army plans to produce a new kind of nerve gas, composed of two relatively harmless chemicals which become lethal only after they are fired in an artillery shell and mix together on their way to a target.

The United States has renounced the use of nerve gas and other chemical weapons, but maintains a "deterrent stockpile" in case another country uses them first.

Burley aide seeks seat

Mr. T-N SAYS

The trouble with weekends is they're followed by Monday days

BURLEY—Jerry Vegwert, manager of Mountain Bell in Burley, announced today he will seek election Nov. 6 to the City Council seat he now holds.

Vegwert, 37, was appointed to the council earlier this month to replace Rex Stanley who resigned when his son joined the Burley Police Department.

Vegwert said his main goal is to keep city government as efficient as possible.

Hunger, inflation given first place

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI)—The United States and other Western nations today gave the twin crises of hunger and inflation priority over world monetary reform at the first meeting of their five-day summit session.

The meeting brought together 3,500 delegates from 126 International Monetary Fund (IMF) member nations—the biggest financial session in history. It opened in the heat of African drums, the cry of Kenyan dancers and a warning from Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta that "the world cannot continue on its present course" without disaster.

Monetary reform had been expected to take up most of the five-day meeting.

No-war pact proposed

MOSCOW (UPI)—Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev said today the Soviet Union proposed a nonaggression treaty with China last June, but has received no response.

Brezhnev said in a speech in Tashkent that the Chinese leadership proclaims its desire for peaceful coexistence, but continues to ignore the Soviet proposal and "make a noise all over the world about an alleged Soviet threat hanging over China."

Brezhnev said the previously secret Soviet proposal contained concrete provisions in which the Soviet Union and China would agree to refrain from the use of weapons on land, sea and in the air against each other, and refrain from threatening each other with such weapons.

If the words of the recent Chinese Communist Party 10th

Congress about peaceful coexistence have any value, Brezhnev said, "then concrete deeds should follow."

In his speech, carried live by Soviet television, Brezhnev roundly condemned Chinese policy.

"The Chinese leaders, contrary to reason, are continuing as before their line of frenzied anti-Sovietism and resistance to the relaxation of tension in the world," he said.

Whooping it up

US goal world peace, Kissinger advises UN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today the United States "seeks true peace, not simply an armistice," and called upon all members of the United Nations to abandon their hickering and join in a cooperative effort for a more harmonious world.

Kissinger, the first foreign-born U.S. secretary of state, made his maiden address to the U.N. General Assembly almost exactly 48 hours after being sworn into office at the White House.

Kissinger's speech was a broad philosophical outline of "the spirit of American foreign policy" in which he pledged U.S. efforts and influence in settling such regional issues as the Middle East and southern Africa, but he made no specific pledges beyond promising that the United States would not abandon its traditional allies in carrying out its policy of detente with the Soviet Union and China.

Kissinger acknowledged that the U.S. people and government "have sometimes been disappointed because this organization has not been more successful in translating the hopes for universal peace of its architects into concrete accomplishments."

While he has in the past generally been scornful of the ability of the United Nations to deal with major political issues in a troubled world, Kissinger said that "despite our disappointments, my country remains committed to the goal of a world opportunity. We will continue to work in this Parliament of Man to make it a reality."

The secretary of state expressed continuing satisfaction over the successes of American diplomacy in dealing with Moscow and Peking, and also spoke with gratification of the tension-easing efforts of the two Germans and North and South Korea.

The world must decide, Kissinger said, this fateful question: "Are we prepared to accept the imperatives of a global society and infuse our labors with a new vision? Or, shall we content ourselves with a temporary pause in the turmoil that has wracked our century?"

"The task the United States wants the world organization to undertake is to 'move from hesitant cooperation born of necessity to genuine collective effort based on common purpose.'"

While declaring the United States would never make a deal with Russia or China to try to dominate the world, Kissinger warned against the neutral nations forming their own bloc.

"Others suspect the emergence of a two-power condominium. And as tension between the two original blocs has eased, and the third grouping increasingly assumes the characteristics of a bloc of its own—the alignment of the non-aligned."

He said that the United States truly hoped the other U.N. nations would "move with us from detente to cooperation."

Lava or burning trash? Blaze sparks question

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — An impending volcanic eruption or burning refuse?

That's the question raised by smoke wafting forth from crevices in the broken lava plain near the Shoshone Ice Caves several weeks ago. But no fumes have arisen since mid-August. When it appeared, it promptly sparked conjecture that a possible revival of volcanic activity was at hand. Lava flows thousands of years ago shaped much of the present topography of the Snake River Plain, including the area around the Ice Caves and the Craters of the Moon region.

Russell Robinson, owner of the Ice Caves, believes the occurrence might be related to subterranean lava activity. But geologists have said they think it is due to burning sagebrush or other refuse below ground — though they don't say how it may have been ignited.

"Starting July 29, Robinson said, a foot wide hole on the west flank of a long dormant volcano came a mile and a quarter north of the cave began puffing steamy gas "just like a steam engine." The emissions lasted several days, stopped for three, and then a tan colored gas emerged for seven days.

"The fumes smelled somewhat like burning crude oil."

After rising from the ground for 10 to 20 inches, the gas dissipated, Robinson said.

Even so, at one point during the seven days the gas covered an area 150 yards wide and 800 yards long, he said. During the activity the rocks by the hole and cracks in the earth reached temperatures up to 100 degrees.

Although he found no evidence of fresh lava at the surface, Robinson believes combustible substances might have been ignited by lava underground. "Nobody is going to go out there and set a match to it," he said questioning how the fire could start underneath the desolate beds.

Shoshone woman 'critical'

SHOSHONE — A Shoshone woman is listed in critical condition at Magie Valley Memorial Hospital, Twin Falls, following a car-train collision in Shoshone this morning.

Mrs. Bob (Pam) Norvel, about 20, was taken by ambulance to the hospital for treatment after being thrown from her car when the vehicle was struck by a westbound freight train at the U. S. Highway 93 crossing in Shoshone. The accident occurred about 9:15 a.m.

Mrs. Norvel had just filled her car's gas tank at a service station on the north side of the railroad tracks and was crossing the track when the accident occurred. She was found lying on the first set of railroad tracks to the south. The train was stopped at the depot, about a block from the accident site.

She was a former resident of Missouri, having lived in the Shoshone area only about a month. Her husband is from the state of Washington and is employed by Harold Huyser. The couple lives at Young's Motel, Shoshone.

The Norvel vehicle received extensive damage in the collision.

Reactions differ on magazine ban

By United Press International — This is how the nation is reacting three months after the Supreme Court ruling that movies, entertainment, books and magazines can be banned for violating "prevailing community standards."

San Francisco go-go dancers wore pasties.

Arizona authorities cracked down on the sale of "blue" material and forced the closing of a number of bookstores. Movie houses are continually raided.

A jury in Little Rock, Ark., ruled "Deep Throat," a film that attracted wider audiences than previous sex movies, obscene under state statutes.

In other localities, however, the response was not as decisive. In Los Angeles and Jacksonville, Fla., "Deep Throat" was ruled acceptable. In the Los Angeles case a suit filed by State Sen. John Harmer claiming the film was a "public nuisance" under the California red light abatement law was turned down by a judge who ruled the law did not apply to movies. It was originally aimed at closing down brothels.

The Supreme Court ruled June 21 that movies, entertainment and reading material could be judged on "prevailing community standards." The immediate, but often short-lived, response in many places was to try to shut down the "dirty movies" and close down the magazine racks.

In New York, however, a judge ruled the state obscenity law unconstitutional. The Indiana Supreme Court Aug. 21 said that state's law was too vague, and a Rock Island, Ill., judge used the same reason for throwing out charges against two adult movie house operators.

Times Square in New York continues to glare with lights advertising sex movies, but films that can be shown in Manhattan may not be acceptable in other boroughs.

Three movie houses in Honolulu's seamy Hotel Street district were shut down for two days after police raids, but they re-opened later the same week with little change in their programs.

In Washington, D.C., Friday, a jury delivered an innocent verdict in the case of a New York distributor charged with carrying the movie "Distortions of Sexuality" across state lines.

Despite the minimal clothing the San Francisco dancers have started wearing, the bookstores and movie houses are still open, and the dancers still aren't really wearing very much.

"If there's a crusade going here, it's pretty well hidden," one San Francisco said.

Quints breathing on own

DENVER (UPI) — The five surviving Stanek sextuplets, 8 days old today, are breathing on their own and drinking mother's milk: Oki, John, is wearing a diaper.

A hospital spokesman said John, Jeffrey and Catherine are in good condition and Nathan and Steven are satisfactory and improving.

Doctors said three of the infants, Catherine, Nathan and Steven, apparently won't have a long battle against a lung disease which killed their sister, Julia, last week.

The infants, born Sept. 10 seven weeks premature, are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stanek. Mrs. Stanek was taking a fertility drug prior to her conception.

Dr. Tibor Engel, an obstetrician, said he expected the children to be hospitalized at least through the end of October.

Hospital spokesmen said John was eating almost three-quarters of an ounce of mother's milk every three hours and the other four infants were receiving under half an ounce on the same schedule.

Vietnamese base thought wiped out by communists

SAIGON (UPI) — A battalion-sized government ranger base under heavy Communist attack lost radio contact with headquarters Saturday and is believed to have been wiped out, a government spokesman said today.

If so it would be the first battalion-size base lost to the Communists since the Jan. 28 Vietnam cease-fire, the spokesman said.

Military sources said the Central Highlands base was manned by 300 to 400 men. It was a so-called border ranger battalion made up of mountain tribesmen commanded by South Vietnamese officers.

The base, called Le Minh, is 20 miles west of Pleiku and eight miles east of the Cambodian frontier. Pleiku is 210 miles north of Saigon.

It is the closest base in Pleiku province to the frontier and addresses Communist infiltration routes into the Central Highlands.

The Viet Cong truce delegation quartered at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport said it had no information on the government report but said "we would like to draw your attention to the fact that the area mentioned by you has been in the area controlled by the Provisional Revolutionary Government (Viet Cong) and has been subjected to land-grabbing operations by the Republic of Vietnam."

Each side has been accusing the other for months of trying to seize territory in the Central Highlands in violation of the Paris peace agreements.

South Vietnamese government spokesman Col. Le Trung Hien said Le Minh came under heavy shelling and ground attack at noon Saturday.

"A number of facilities on the base including the (radio) antennae were destroyed," he said. "By 1745 (5:45 p.m.) the same day, radio contact was lost."

He said reconnaissance planes spotted some government troops near the base the following day, but declined to say how many were seen or in which direction they were moving.

The nearest base of similar size is Plei Mroty, about 15 miles northeast of Le Minh.

On the diplomatic front, Assad Sadri, Iran's ambassador to the international truce team, arrived in Saigon today to complete the first step in getting the organization back into activity following a two-month suspension.

Canada's Michel Gauvin left July 19, declaring that the formation-International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) was ineffectual. Iran is replacing Canada. The other three ICCS members are Indonesia, Poland and Hungary.

Warehouse bombed in Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen bombed a sugar warehouse in a Belfast suburb today. The explosion wrecked the warehouse but caused no casualties, police said.

Four gunmen drove a bomb-laden car into the loading bay of the Tate and Lyle sugar warehouse in the Belfast suburb of Glengormley, shouting a warning that sent workers fleeing, police said.

The bomb exploded 10 minutes later, wrecking the warehouse and setting it afire. But no one was hurt.

In violence Sunday, a bomb blast shattered a pub in a small town south of Belfast.

Question...

Our son was attending his fourth year of college on a student loan when he passed away. Are my wife and I responsible for the repayment of this indebtedness?

Answer...

It is very possible you may be responsible. If your son was under legal age when he first secured this loan and you co-signed it with him as a personal obligation you are involved. More probably he borrowed money from a federally insured state or private agency. If this should be the case 100% of the unpaid balance of the principal will be paid, but not the interest.

It is almost certain the lending agency carries credit life insurance. If your son borrowed from his bank, credit union or savings and loan company, and the amount is not federally insured. In this situation the unpaid balance of the note will be paid. In any of these situations you will need a certified copy of the death certificate which we can get for you.

Airline route exchange aired

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The State of Utah, Salt Lake City and other interests want American Airlines to take over Salt Lake to Los Angeles air route now controlled by Hughes Airwest. A coalition of Utah agencies issued a joint statement today backing a proposed route exchange between the two airlines as "being in the highest public interest." Hughes Airwest and Western Airlines hold the rights for daily nonstop flights between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles. But Hughes discontinued its service to Los Angeles in May 1972 claiming a financial loss and leaving Western with a monopoly on coast flights from Utah. Hughes and American asked the Civil Aeronautics Board Sept. 17 to grant a route exchange. Under the agreement American would obtain Hughes' Los Angeles-Salt Lake City and Las Vegas-Salt Lake City routes as well as routes between Los Angeles and Palm Springs and Las Vegas. In exchange Hughes would get American's nonstop rights between six pairs of major cities in Arizona and Texas. The statement issued today was signed by Attorney Gen. Vernon Romney and representatives of the Salt Lake City, the Salt Lake Area Chamber of Commerce and Pro-Utah Inc.

He said cause of death appeared to be "homicide" but that an autopsy would be conducted to find the exact cause of death. He said the man had been dead since about last Tuesday or Wednesday.

Western finalist Kimberly horsewoman will ride at Cow Palace

KIMBERLY — A young horsewoman from Kimberly is making a name for herself in barrel racing circles around the Northwest. On Oct. 26, Deanne Bell, wife of Zeb Bell, will go to the Cow Palace, San Francisco, to compete in the Rodeo Cowboy Association western finals. This year Deanne, riding a horse nearly as old as herself, has competed in 85 different events in Nevada, Utah, Montana, Oregon and Idaho. Toby, her 17-year-old horse, qualified for three national high school rodeo finals with three different riders including Deanne Bell, in 1970; Larae Gilster, in 1972 and Debbie Frute in 1971. The horse was also selected 1972 state barrel champion. In three months time Deanne and Toby have earned $2,200 plus a championship saddle, trophy buckle and suede leather coat (for Deanne). Deanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ricketts, Jerome. When her father purchased Toby, he told her she could not barrel race on the horse. She practiced when her father was not around and used the horse to run around weeds and other objects on the family farm. At the age of 12 she entered her first gymkhana and won the barrel racing event. She has been "chasing the cans" ever since and plans to continue following the rodeo circuit with her rodeo announcer husband.

Employment up

BOISE (UPI) — Employment reached 319,960 in Idaho during August — the highest level of the year — as a result of the expansion of major seasonal industries. According to the Idaho Department of Employment the unemployment rate for the state was at its second lowest level of the year in August. There was a reduction of 3,400 unemployed Idahoans during the month resulting in an unemployment rate of five per cent. One of the factors in the decrease in unemployment was the return of students to the state. One of the factors in the decrease in unemployment was the return of students to their school withdrawing from the labor force.

McClure charges federal judge

By LESTER KINSOLVING Times-News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, has charged District of Columbia Federal Judge John Sirica with "extorting statements with the threat of harsh sentences." In a statement for the Congressional Record, Sen. McClure went on to charge "That same judge demands this of those who are released on bail, but not of their accusers. We must be concerned about the right of free speech and the right to a fair trial." Judge Sirica, when asked by the Idaho Senator's charges, declined to comment. Senator McClure also charged that he was misrepresented and that "truth wound up on the cutting room floor" when he appeared on a recent television show, which the Times-News has learned was on NBC. "In response to a question about whether Mr. (John) Connally might be acceptable as replacement for the vice president, I responded that it was inappropriate for me to speculate since I feel that Mr. (Spiro) Agnew will not and should not resign," replied Sen. McClure. He went on to pose: "In response to a further question I did express the feeling that Mr. Connally was one of several persons who might be acceptable to me. I expressed my admiration for him and welcomed him to the Republican Party." "I was startled and dismayed to see myself presented on a morning news program supposedly indulging in speculation as to who our next vice president might be." "I think our judicial processes are gravely threatened. An individual's right of due process is violated by idle gossip and malicious rumor in direct proportion to the importance of his position, for the latter has become an accurate gauge as to how much exposure it will receive in the press — particularly if the press does not agree with him politically. A president, a vice president and even a senator have little or no chance of achieving the impartial trial that protects the average citizen by a simple change of venue." The Idaho Senator also asked: "What of the sickening spectacle of the self-righteous criticism of President Nixon for 'putting himself above the law' when he raises the very serious question of the President's powers within the law under the separation of powers expressed in the Constitution — that criticism coming from some of the very same people who held themselves above the law in publication of documents stolen from the Pentagon in violation of the law?" "Another area of concern is that of bargaining for immunity by cooperation, a cooperation which inevitably takes the form of implicating others. The bigger the people you can deliver, the greater the chance of immunity for yourself." But it helps the little criminal. He has nothing to lose, his reputation is gone in any case. He may have to grovel in guilt to satisfy this strange new notion of public punishment. "Our Republic was founded on a principle that no man — no matter what his stature or public position — is above the law. But with the events of recent months, a deeply troubling question has been raised whether a citizen — because of his stature — and public position — is considered outside the protection of the law." Sen. McClure was asked by the Times-News whether this last statement should apply to President Nixon. If the Supreme Court orders him to produce those tapes which the White House has refused to allow Judge Sirica to hear, even in private.

don't be left in the cold on the season's first cold night

Get your gas turned back on now. If your gas has been turned off for the summer, call the gas company today to come turn it back on. Because by the end of the month you'll probably need the use of your gas furnace. And while you're at it, have your furnace dealer check that furnace so it will work properly all winter. Filters should be changed and the fan motor oiled. Check the fan belt to make sure it's not about to break. Clean out the air vents. To get the most out of your heating dollar, check to see if you have enough insulation. Storm doors and windows can save about 25% on an average heating bill. Don't be left in the cold on the season's first cold night. Call the gas company today to come turn your gas back on. That way you'll know you'll be warm and comfortable from the very first cold autumn night.

Idaho reclamation program funding

By CLAUDE NAFFZIGER

Almost a year ago in October, 1972, the Salmon Falls Division was authorized for construction by the Congress in an omnibus bill including four other projects. This was a successful conclusion in the first step by local people to get additional water supplies for that water short area. Normally, this is cause for rejoicing, but no more!

It was routinely announced recently that President Nixon had signed the Public Works Appropriation Bill which provides $420,000,000 for the Bureau of Reclamation in fiscal year 1974, ending next June 30. Although this represented an increase of $33 million over the Administration's initial budget request, Idaho's participation in the increase was meager indeed.

The Teton Dam already under construction received a small increase over the $13 million originally requested. In northern Idaho, the 3,500-acre Post Falls Irrigation District received a "write-in" authorization in the Appropriations Act thereby making the District eligible for use of Emergency Funds.

Of the five projects authorized on October 20, 1972 (P. L. 92-514) Brantley Dam, New Mexico, received lead-off funds. The Salmon Falls Division remains on the growing list of authorized but unfunded projects. Spaceholders in American Falls Dam were so discouraged about the prospect of Federal reclamation that they are awaiting the outcome of action on S-1529 which would permit the spaceholders to replace the dam in cooperation with the Idaho Power Company. If anything, the emergency is far greater at American Falls Dam than is so with the New Mexico Project authorized last year.

The Congress has not been unresponsive to the needs of our western projects in approving the Public Works Appropriation Act for the current fiscal year. To mention a few, funds were provided to take care of emergency conditions of the Tumalo Irrigation District in Oregon and the Cascade Irrigation District in Washington.

Shasta View and Ochoco in Oregon as well as the San Luis Water District in California were covered by the FY 1974 Appropriation Act. The great Central Arizona Project, which will ultimately cost more than one billion dollars, had an appropriation request of $2 million increased by the Congress to $19,500,000.

We are all familiar with the practice of withholding the expenditure of funds appropriated by the Congress. The courts have taken an exceedingly dim view of this. All of this leads me to see a much brighter future for Federal water development in general and also for the State of Idaho which has many and very real needs for assistance under the Federal Reclamation Act.

I've just finished reading William E. Warne's new book, "The Bureau of Reclamation." Mr. Warne is a man of impeccable credentials, now a private consultant. His career has included tenure as Assistant Commissioner of Reclamation, Under Secretary of Interior, and Director of California Department of Water Resources. In the latter position he supervised the rapid acceleration of the multi-billion

California State Water Project.

Those of us who know the Colorado River are well aware that it has a seldom mentioned problem. This problem is dramatically emphasized by Mr. Warne. It can be stated in a single word: "SALT." Congressional authorization of a desalting plant costing more than one hundred million dollars is required to implement an agreement recently reached between the United States and Mexico.

Some of you may ask why we should be concerned about the quality of water reaching Mexico. It all stems from a Treaty executed with Mexico in 1944 under which Mexico received an entitlement to 1,500,000 acre feet of water from the Colorado River. In recent years there have been disputes over water quality and construction of a plant desalting salt is just another step to be taken in alleviating the problem of deteriorating water quality.

Continuing study of the water quality problem is going on but we are talking about a problem of great magnitude. Last year Western Water News, a publication of the Irrigation Districts Association of California, mentioned as a possibility forming a giant seven state Conservancy District in the Colorado River Basin. The purpose would be to help meet costs expected to run into billions of dollars.

The day may come when costs of cleaning up the Colorado, now only estimates, may exceed the cost of dilution. Where is the water to be used in improving quality of the Colorado to come from? It seems to me that the mouth of the Columbia is an unlikely source.

What does all of this tell us? Others can and do get Congressional Appropriations for worthy and needed irrigation projects. We can and must put our Snake River water to beneficial use.

The Salmon Falls Division must not be allowed to sit so long on the drawing board that it ends up being withdrawn and revised. Or, what could be worse, abandoned!

The author has over twenty-five years experience in the water resource field. This includes not only the Northwest States, but also the Colorado River Basin. At present he is a private consultant.

1974 economy looks healthy

(c) Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Though 1973 still has more than three months to go, government economists have already begun drafting tentative, preliminary forecasts of the economy in 1974.

What emerges is a relatively reassuring picture, on the whole, considering all the talk of recession that has been so prevalent for so long. In a nutshell, the forecasters see a pronounced slowing in the rate of "business" expansion — especially in the first half of the coming year — but not an absolute decline in total output of goods and services.

Few analysts will rule out all chances of a recession next year. Most concede that unexpected weaknesses can suddenly develop. Or the credit-controlling federal reserve system can overstate its current tight-money policy.

But most would put the probabilities of a true recession — defined as two quarters of declines in real, as distinct from dollar-inflated, growth — as less than 50-50.

The experts don't see eye-to-eye on every aspect of next year's picture. They don't all see the same changes in spending by consumers of businessmen, for example. But the differences are not very great. There is a clear consensus, and it shapes up like this:

Real gross national product — total output of goods and services — will rise 2 to 3 per cent next year, as against 4 to 5 per cent this year. (GNP is the best single over-all measure of the economy's performance.)

Quarterly changes give a much clearer picture of what's going on than the yearly measures. They show successively smaller gains — from a dizzy first-quarter peak — as 1973 moved along and a slow recovery from a soft first-half in 1974.

The actual dollar GNP, which reflects all the price changes recorded and projected, will be up 8 per cent in 1974, as against 11 per cent this year. But there is a 4 per cent price deflation in the 1974 outlook, as against the 7 per cent that seems likely for this year.

Industrial production — the output of factories, mines, and public utilities — is expected to rise 3 per cent next year, down substantially from the 9 per cent shaping up for 1973. It slowing will be most pronounced in durable goods activity.

Consumer spending is expected to rise 7 per cent next year, compared with 11 per cent this. The fact that loss of the next year's total will reflect price increases suggests that the decline in the physical amount of goods bought won't be quite so great. Consumers will cut back most on buying of autos, appliances, and other hard goods.

The increase in business spending for new plant and equipment is expected to fall from this year's 15 per cent to 11 per cent in 1974. It will still be a supportive factor in the outlook — one reason why, it is hoped, a recession can be avoided.

Some 1.6 to 1.7 million new homes will be started in 1974, down more than 600,000 from this year's record or near-record total. Home-building will be one of the weakest sectors in the economy.

Percy wants meet

By THOMAS B. ROSS (c) Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — Sen. Charles H. Percy R-Ill. has requested a meeting with President Nixon to discuss his presidential plans for 1976, administration sources reported yesterday.

Nixon has not yet responded, and the sources declined to predict whether or not the meeting will be arranged. The request was viewed as unusual and in the "pre-Watergate" period it would have been unlikely that the President would have entertained it.

Now, however, with Nixon seeking to open up the White House to Congress and his political opponents, the meeting with Percy could not be ruled out.

Percy incurred the President's wrath by proposing shortly after the Watergate scandal broke open last spring, that a special prosecutor be appointed to pass independent judgment in the case. Subsequently, Nixon appointed Archibald Cox to the post.

Later, the president invited Percy to accompany him to Pukin, Ill. for the dedication of the Dirksen library in June. The two men conferred aboard the presidential jet, and Percy indicated that they had patched up their differences. The White House withheld comment.

Troops burn books in Chile streets

Ads banned

(c) Chicago Daily News
SANTIAGO — Hundreds of troops sealed off more than a mile-square section near the center of this capital in an all-day search yesterday for "extremist" leaders, clandestine arms, a reported hidden radio transmitter, and sniper hideouts.
The pre-dawn blitz started while the nightly curfew was still in effect — It concentrated on hundreds of apartments and houses of suspects on government lists.
In an unusual display, hundreds of books were burned in street bonfires outside the San Borjas complex, a high-rise apartment building known to house supporters of the former Salvador Allende government.

Soldiers hauled the books — mostly paperbacks — from the apartments, while persons watched sullenly or expressionless from windows. Memoirs of Ernest (Che) Guevara, quotations from chairman Mao, Karl Marx's "Capital," and John Kenneth Galbraith work on controlling the military, as well as posters and record albums, were consigned to the flames.

The military-controlled radio reported today that a quantity of arms was confiscated, including what were described as two Soviet-made rocket launchers, three anti-tank mines, and a quantity of ammunition.
Discoveries of arms caches have been announced almost daily since Sept. 11, when a junta of the Army, Navy and Air Force, along with the National Police, overthrew Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Later reports said it had exploded in the vicinity of the U. S. installation.
Trucks and jeeps crowded with troops and weapons, including light artillery, concentrated in the Plaza De Italia area.
Machineguns were set up at many intersections, streets were blocked and rifle-bearing soldiers demanded safe-conduct passes from reporters at nearly every turn.
Civilians were forced to remain indoors, or at best, stand in doorways — unable to attend church, shop, or visit friends. One man offered to purchase the Sunday paper from a passing reporter and was overjoyed when it was given to him.
Sheets, pillowcases, towels — anything white — hung in the cold, damp air from the windows of many apartments to indicate, an Army lieutenant said, that the living quarters had been searched. Beside the U. S. Consulate, the Plaza De Italia also includes the San Borja Complex, apartments constructed when the 1972 Assembly of the United Nations conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) was held here in a building constructed especially for the meeting. It is now the new government's headquarters.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cigarette shaped cigars will no longer be advertised on television or radio under legislation signed by President Nixon Saturday.
The bill amended the 1965 Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, to include banning commercials for little cigars, judged by the Public Health Service to be as dangerous as cigarettes if the smoke is inhaled.
The legislation bans broadcast advertising of any roll of tobacco wrapped in leaf tobacco or any substance containing other than cigarette tobacco which weighs not more than three pounds per thousand units.

Demo undecided about post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Walter F. Mondale, one of the Democrats' "new faces" of the 1970s, says he may run for President in 1976. But he says he hasn't really decided yet.
"Are you going to run for President in 1976?" he was asked on a UPI-Washington Window interview Sunday.
"I don't know, and I'm not trying to be coy," Mondale replied. "I've been doing more speaking around the country than I've done in the past; I've talked to some of my friends and others about it, but I don't know yet. I might, but I'm not sure."

Severe beatings, deaths told about Chile coup

By United Press International
Americans who were in Chile at the time of the military coup told this weekend of severe beatings and as many as 25,000 persons killed during the uprising.
In Miami, Adam and Pat Garrett-Schesh, graduate students from the University of Wisconsin, said they saw 400 or 500 persons executed by firing squad and numberless brutal beatings during their imprisonment "as suspected foreign agents."

They said the police arrested them a few days after the death of President Salvador Allende on suspicion of being either Communist or CIA agents. They were held with thousands of others at the National Football Stadium.

"We heard the beatings and saw the beatings," said Garrett-Schesh. "We heard and saw between 400 and 500 persons executed by firing squads. Right out on the playing field. They were led out in groups of 10 to 30."
He said they were released after the U.S. consul showed authorities telegrams from officials in the United States who demanded they be let go.
Dr. Phillip I. Potakoff of New York, a medical officer with the U.S. Public Health Service, said, "A physician told me he saw two corpses on each of the four street corners outside his home one morning. The daughter of a wealthy merchant said a group of military men 'asked' her if they could temporarily leave a truckload of corpses on her patio."
Potakoff said that a few days after the Sept. 11 coup, soldiers pointed a gun at his throat and questioned him for three hours before they let him go. He said he saw no bloodshed himself, but he was told of beatings and executions. "I think the bloodshed is just starting in this country," he said.
Steve Tallman, 18, of Ventura, Calif., a member of the touring U.S. swim team that was trapped in Chile during the revolt, said he and two others were pinned down in the Santiago YMCA for three days, while troops and Allende supporters fired at each other in the streets.
"When we tried to leave, we were repeatedly shot at," he said. "At that point we realized we would have made great hostages, and we began to get scared."
They finally got out and flew home Thursday.

House speaker raps message

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Speaker Carl Albert calls President Nixon's criticisms of Congress "foolish attempts to disguise the administration's own glaring failures."
Albert went on nationwide radio Sunday to answer the President's Sept. 10 State of the Union Message, which accused the Democratic-controlled Congress of foot-dragging on key programs.
Albert spoke on behalf of his fellow Democrats as the Senate began a second week of debate on the Pentagon's $21.9 billion procurement request and as the Senate-Watergate committee resumed televised hearings.
"The President's message reached Congress two-thirds of the way through the year and contained an embarrassing lack of new initiative," the Oklahoma Democrat said.
He said that of 50 priority bills requested by Nixon, 40 were already in the legislative process when he delivered his message.
"Overall, the President's attacks on Congress were little more than feeble attempts to disguise the administration's own glaring failures," Albert said.

He criticized Nixon for impounding congressionally appropriated funds and for his veto of three bills providing aid to the handicapped, expanded emergency medical services and an increased minimum wage.
Albert said Congress' achievements have included a 5.9 per cent boost in Social Security benefits, a farm bill that encourages production, crime control assistance to local communities, a highway construction bill that also allocated funds for mass transit, extension of 12 major health programs and an Older Americans Act expanding services to the elderly.
A farm appropriations bill was expected to reach the House floor Wednesday with a controversial provision $3 million to Cotton Inc., a private firm that promotes the sale of cotton products. It also contains $97 million for a school milk program, nearly four times the amount the administration requested.

Enlistment not enough

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Armed Services Committee chairman John C. Stennis is telling the Pentagon to go out and recruit girls if the Volunteer Army is not filling its quota.
The Mississippi Democrat was one of the few in Congress who resisted the enthusiasm for an all-volunteer Army. In a speech prepared for delivery today, he said he will not consider any legislation to restore the draft for at least two years.
"I have no patience for those in the military uniform two years ago who were beating the drums for the all-volunteer concept, and who are now saying it won't work," Stennis said.

Skylab crew set for splashdown

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab-2 astronauts stuffed the accumulated booty of two months of orbital research into the close quarters of their ferry spacecraft today and made final preparations for a Tuesday-afternoon splashdown off the coast of California.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Louma also fiddled for the final time they hoped with a space station systems problem prior to unhooking the Apollo ferry ship for the short trip home.

The three astronauts were expected to land at 6:20 p.m. EDT Tuesday in the Pacific Ocean 224 miles southwest of San Diego.

Sunday was packing day and the space fliers crammed 77,600 pictures of the sun and 18 miles of photographs of the earth into the small Apollo craft. It wasn't an easy job.

Kind of like this stowage business. If you are going on a six weeks vacation and you're going in a Volkswagen and you had to pack the whole family and had to do it by remote control, flight director Noll Hutchins said Sunday.

Cambodia force hits Red posts

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government troops pushed out of Phnom Penh Sunday in a four-pronged drive to smash a ring of insurgent forces around the Cambodian capital.

Field reports said the government counteroffensive touched off day-long battles on four fronts within a dozen miles of Phnom Penh.

The military command, however, said the Communist-led insurgents appeared to be backing away whenever possible to avoid major clashes with the advancing troops.

A command spokesman reported a sharp drop in the number of guerrillas around the capital from a peak of 200,000 in early summer to 5,000 now.

He said the insurgents had apparently pulled men away from Phnom Penh for their unsuccessful attempt earlier this month to capture Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city 30 miles northwest of the capital.

Field reports said Cambodian government forces launched counteroffensives to the south, east, northwest and southwest of the capital in a drive to ease rebel pressure on Phnom Penh.

On one of the fronts, a column of government troops, backed by prop-driven fighter-bombers, battled through heavy guerrilla territory in a drive to reach besieged Cambodian troops at the village of Vihear Snor, 12 miles east of Phnom Penh.

"On the enemy side many were killed and wounded," the high command said.

Good news?

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mission Control had some good news — and some bad news — for the three Skylab astronauts, who return to earth Tuesday after 59 days in orbit.

"First the good news," read a teleprinter message Sunday to Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Louma. "In preparation for returning to earth you get to change you underwear."

"Now for the bad news. Jack, you give yours to Owen. Owen, you give yours to Al. And Al, you give yours to Jack."

heard coming from the outside of their eight-room space home. The controllers turned off a pump for the cooling system of the spaceship solar observatory and turned a backup system on.

Bean reported the strange gurgling the went away.

"If you put your head to the wall you can really hear it," the mission commander said as he and the controllers puzzled over the sound. "It woke Jack up and that's near impossible."

Voting for whom?

FORMER ARGENTINE President Juan Peron casts ballot in Sunday elections which returned him to power in that South American nation. Chief bodyguard Juan Esquer looks on. Ruffler it was announced Peron wouldn't vote. (UPI)

Peron wins in landslide

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Juan Domingo Peron, the aging symbol of strongman rule in South America, piled up more than 60 per cent of the vote Sunday to regain Argentina's presidency 18 years after he was ousted in a military coup.

The 77-year-old Peron, who served as president from 1946 to 1955, scored a landslide victory over a four-man field, winning more than twice the votes of his closest rival.

Peron collected 61.5 per cent of the vote, nearly matching Argentina's greatest presidential victory margin in 1951 when he defeated a five-man field with 62.4 per cent.

Jubilant followers of "El Lider" went on a night-long spree of horn-blowing, chanting and singing to celebrate the charismatic Peron's return to power after nearly two decades of enforced exile.

Thousands of young supporters filled the Plaza de Mayo in front of the Casa Rosada presidential palace in the heart of Buenos Aires chanting, "Peron! Peron! Peron!"

Peron and his wife, Isabel, 40, his vice presidential running mate, will be inaugurated Oct. 12 to fill out the unfinished four-year term of resigned President Hector Campora.

Official results with more than 97 per cent of the polling places counted, Peron and his Justicialist Liberation Front 7,183,390 votes (61.48 per cent).

Ricardo Bulbin of the Radical Civic Union 2,866,780 (24.53 per cent), Francisco Manrique of a center-right coalition 1,438,440 (12.29 per cent) and Juan Carlos Corral of the Socialist Workers Party 185,921 (1.59 per cent). A fraction of one per cent were void ballots.

Peron's percentage of the vote far surpassed the 49.5 per cent his stand-in, Campora, received March 11 in a nine-man race. Campora resigned last summer to make way for Peron's return to power.

Nixon holding fuel allocation plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has on his desk a contingency plan for mandatory allocation of fuels and may have to put it into effect, says White House domestic counsel Melvin R. Laird.

"I personally feel that it may be necessary to go forward with a program in this area, and we may not be able to wait for action by the Congress," Laird said in a Sunday television interview (CBS "Face the Nation").

Laird did not spell out the scope of the plan, but the administration is known to have developed a contingency plan for allocation of supplies of crude oil, petroleum products including gasoline and fuels such as propane and butane.

While Laird did not mention any such drastic measures, the basic contingency plan being developed was known to have several possible stages, leading up to ultimate consumer rationing of gasoline similar to that in World War II.

The administration has already announced a plan for mandatory allocation of propane fuel to assure that industry does not use up scarce supplies, leaving too little for farmers, who use propane to dry crops, and rural homeowners, who use it for heating.

Golda takes party office nomination

By United Press International Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir Sunday accepted her party's nomination to run in next month's general elections and predicted a tough fight against demands for concessions in the Middle East dispute.

In London, the Sunday Times said Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan has worked a plan for a partial settlement of the Mideast conflict in which Egyptian troops would be allowed to cross the Suez Canal for the first time.

A spokesman for Dayan denied he had offered any new plan.

In Beirut, the newspaper, An Nahar quoted King Hussein as saying he was opposed to the return of Palestinian guerrillas to Jordan as a fighting force.

Hussein released 750 political prisoners, mainly Palestinian guerrillas, last week under a sweeping amnesty aimed at reconciling differences with his Arab neighbors.

Hussein said he would welcome a guerrilla contribution to this country's stability and strength but said he would not let them "jeopardize the accomplishments of this country."

Price protests close stations

United Press International. Many filling station operators closed in protest of Phase 4 price controls today, but there has been no nationwide shutdown. In Chicago, gasoline station operators from 41 states met to discuss the price controls but stopped short of calling for a general boycott.

Getting gasoline meant waiting in line in some parts of the country during the weekend because of protest closings, but even on the hard hit West Coast, where the shutdowns caused a 50 per cent reduction in traffic in parts of Northern California, there were some gas stations open in all communities.

In Baltimore, Maryland independent service station operators voted Sunday night to close indefinitely beginning today because of what the Maryland Eastern Shore dealers said were unfair price controls.

Alight 65 Mobil dealers in Syracuse, N.Y., voted to close today to protest a one-cent-a-gallon wholesale price increase they say they are unable to pass on to customers.

An abandoned gasoline station in Gleneden Beach, Ore., was taken over by national guardsmen to assure a fuel supply for governors and officials at the Western Governors Conference. But a spokesman for Oregon Gov. Tom McCall said the arrangements were made "months ago" long before the gas station closures by operators protesting the government's price freeze.

The owner of the station, Hugh Grandin, said, "The government, men in National Guard uniforms, is coming in to man a service station for the important people. To me, that stinks to high heaven."

In Chicago, dealers attending a National Congress of Petroleum Retailers "war council" complained about the Phase 4 controls and said they will no longer try to keep member stations from closing in protest shutdowns. But the group stopped short of calling for a nationwide shutdown at this time.

Job guards asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., proposed legislation today to require defense contractors to plan for continued employment of their workers in the event their contracts are terminated.

A McGovern amendment to the $21.9 billion military procurement authorization bill now before the Senate, would make such advance planning a condition for receiving government business.

McGovern said "severe work fluctuations" in defense industry were a major problem. In recent years, cuts in defense programs have ended thousands of jobs, hitting particularly hard on the West Coast.

"It is entirely appropriate for the arms contractors to focus on what happens to their workers and their communities when military contracts are phased out," McGovern said.

His amendment also would require the Pentagon to give advance notice of future closings of military installations.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was alarmed when I read an item in your column encouraging your readers to send for "A Living Will," instructing one's clergyman, physician, attorney, and some appointed family members (or friends) to let him die with dignity when all agreed that death was inevitable. I failed to write at the time to express my horror. But now that I hope that you were responsible for distributing hundreds of thousands of these Living Wills, I can no longer remain silent.

Mercy killing is an unspeakable evil, and our country must not permit such a crime. We should respect the gift of life and preserve and protect it. The plan that would be "merciful" to end a life should signal a second look to be sure the desire did not stem from a weariness of the persons caring for (and paying for) the one who is ill.

Mercy death said evil

Suffering is difficult to watch, but it oftentimes leads a person to a deeper awareness of his human destiny. It builds strength and character.

I am sorry to see you pushing this Living Will so hard. You have millions of readers and could be a force for good instead of this type of thing.

People should trust in God, and let HIM decide when life should end. Who would YOU trust to decide when ABBY shall die?

You have given the Living Will enough publicity. Please, be fair, and print this to show the other side.

AGE 64 IN ALBUQUERQUE

DEAR 64: The Living Will is simply a document instructing my OWN clergyman, physician, lawyer, and selected members of my family for even a few trusted friends to allow me to die when they all agree that there is no hope for my recovery (physical or mental). I am not saying that YOU, or anyone else should express this wish. I am saying that this wish is MINE, and I would hope that those who love me would respect my wishes. This doesn't suggest that I be "killed." It simply means that I do not want my life to be prolonged by artificial means when my physicians agree that all hope for life is gone, or should I lose my sense of reason.

This letter from a Fort Myers reader illustrates my point more graphically:

DEAR ABBY: My husband was in and out of hospitals for 12 years. The last 10 months I was at his bedside every day from 10 a.m. until midnight.

I watched him being kept alive with blood transfusions, needles, tubes, and drugs; while he prayed for God to take him. He couldn't swallow. I gave him water with an eye dropper.

This handsome, husky 200-pound man became an 88-pound vegetable when God finally took him home.

May the day come soon when everyone will be able to die with dignity. Don't let people tell you that you have no right to interfere with God's decision by suggesting that they sign a Living Will. It's those folks who permit tubes and needles and machines to prolong life artificially when death is inevitable who are interfering with God's will.

I will take the word of my clergyman, doctors, lawyer and the selected members of my own family when they agree that my life has run its course.

I am not afraid to die, but I never want to put my loved ones thru what I went thru with my husband. Keep up the good work, Abby. And God bless you. MR. W. L. A.

Problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 18725, Los Angeles, Cal. 90040.

Sex not real issue in tennis meet

(c) Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — About half way through the match, I started pulling for Bobby Riggs, even though my money was on Billie Jean King.

It was when his legs got heavy and all those perky smile-lines in his face started sagging into creases of age.

And up in the TV booth, a female commentator was snarling as if she wouldn't be satisfied until he turned blue and pteched over on his face.

Sitting a couple of stools down from me was a young sports writer, trim and fit in his mod clothing. He chortled: "He had it coming, the big mouth. He asked for it and he got it."

"Nah," I said. "He's just a guy who sees 60 around the corner and he doesn't like it."

The young man snorted: "Then an old guy like him ought to sit down and shut up."

"That's when I realized what the real issue was on that tennis court. And it wasn't the hoked-up battle of the sexes that had captured the limited imagination of the sports experts."

I saw that if there was a victim of social injustice in the game, Ms. King wasn't the only one.

Bobby Riggs represents many men who have somehow been deprived of the traditional rewards for honorable service to their country — including the right to a graceful old age.

Take a man of 65. Not necessarily Riggs, but any man about that age.

When they became teenagers — a privileged term not even used then — they found themselves in the worst depression we ever had. Everybody ate potato pancakes and was nervous.

By the time they were young men the depression ended — just in time for the biggest war we've ever been in.

Next came a deluge of social changes, bigger, faster and more complex than any we've gone through.

And what was their reward for struggling from one trouble decade to another — and another? Were they permitted to enter their mature, mellow years with respect for a job well-intentioned, if not always well-done? Could they take their places as pillars of society, admired for the wisdom of their years?

Of course not: They woke up one day and found themselves being pounded on the head with surfboards and accused of having goofed everything up because they were insensitive, materialistic and their values were all wrong.

They hardly got over the shock of that, when something even worse happened: the youth cult came along and they were made to feel ashamed of the natural aging process.

Instead of being permitted to develop a respectable case of gout, or to sit back and become prosperously fat, they had to get out there and jog in order to remain vigorous and vital!

Everything they picked up a paper, there was a headline for a new series — that said something like:

"Can a man over 40 ever find work again?"

Or: "How to prevent your husband from being depressed after he loses his job and has his first cardiac."

Everytime they turned on the TV, that damned Tommy Harmon and his wife were leaping around the patio, telling them how to avoid getting another day older by eating turkey luncheonettes.

Many men remained calm and, quite reasonably, said: "Go to hell. Mean and old is beautiful."

But many others didn't. Under the barrage of stay-young propaganda, they began wolfing down powdered goat horns (for virility), vitamin J. (to ward off red-neck veins), extract of shark liver (for even more virility), and vitamin Q (for a rakish grin).

They had their hernias corrected, slipped into their body shirts, hot-combed their eyebrows up over their naked scalps, and went frugging and hip-bugging into the swinging new society. They grabbed at the new values because the old were gone, flattened under the tires of a thousand bonds.

Thus, a generation that muscled its way out of a depression and axed the axis, also produced the nation's biggest crop of silly old men.

So there was Bobby Riggs, who should have been in a tweed jacket, puffing a pipe, sipping his brandy and walking his trusted dog through the autumn countryside while humming "September Song."

Instead, he combed his hair into a pixie-prune style and took to nuzzling California starlets.

And with the world watching, he pointed his racket at Billie Jean and boasted: "I can still do it!"

But he couldn't. She even called him an old creep — it couldn't have been more humiliating if his false choppers had fallen out in Butch McGuire's dating bar.

I explained all of this to the chortling young sports writer. He just sneered. But someday he'll have a prostate problem, and I'll send him a get-worse card.

Jim: "Knowing you, I also assume that you were the first man to start modifying it."

Oswald: "It may be so. The first Blackwood modification was to use the five-club response to show no ace or four, as it seemed that anyone could tell which holding was being shown. It also seemed that when five clubs showed four aces there was room to ask for kings."

Jim: "Today's hand which I made up illustrates how this works. South checks for aces and finds that North holds all four. He checks for kings, finds North has the missing one and bids seven no-trump with surety of success."

Oswald: "They might get there without this modification but it was a cinch with it."

I am probably the first Easterner to start using it and I know I am the first to attempt to admit the existence of Stanley Blackwood and his excellent convention."

FCC appointment touches off fuss

(c) Newhouse-News Service
WASHINGTON — When the White House announced the long-rumored appointment of retired broadcast executive James H. Quello to the Federal Communications Commission, it touched off phase two in a campaign by public interest groups to beat the nomination.

The groups spurred on by the man-Quello would replace, outspoken commissioner Nicholas Johnson — had already tried to head off the nomination through a flurry of letters, a leaked memo casting doubt on Quello's commitment to black interests and tips to news columnists.

For example, Jack Anderson, wrote Wednesday that Quello contributed 2,200 to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign and associates had "poured $120,000 into the Nixon campaign coffers."

But this strategy failed. On Thursday the White House announced nomination of Quello, 50, who retired last September as station manager of WJR in Detroit and vice president of the parent Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp. Now the public interest groups shift their fire to the Senate, which during the summer rejected a Nixon nominee for the Federal Power Commission, Robert Morris, on grounds that he was an inveterate Standard Oil-No confirmation hearing date for Quello has been set by the Senate communications subcommittee, chaired by Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I.

Quello reportedly has the support of Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., a member of the full commerce committee which must also pass on the nomination. Opposition, first developed among groups who felt a career broadcasting executive should not regulate that industry, especially succeeding one of its leading critics, Johnson.

The nominee served with WJR 25 years. He was also a member of the Detroit Housing and Urban Renewal Commission for 20 years and is a past president of the Michigan association of Broadcasters. The FCC job pays $38,000 a year for a seven-year term. Johnson's term expired June 30 but he plans to serve until a successor is confirmed.

As part of the continuing effort to block confirmation, Tracy Westen, director of the Stern Community law firm wrote on Wednesday to the head of Capital Cities broadcasting corp. Asking for information on political contributions by corporate officials.

Little cigar ads no more

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon signed legislation Saturday banning broadcast advertisements for so-called little cigars.

The bill amends the federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act of 1965 to bring little cigars under the prohibition on advertising of cigarettes over radio, television and other broadcast media.

The "little cigar" was described by Congress in the legislation as any roll of tobacco wrapped in leaf, tobacco or any substance containing other than cigarette tobacco which weighs not more than three pounds per thousand units.

The bills was passed on the basis of a report to Congress on the consequences of smoking, in which the Public Health Service warned that little cigars are as dangerous as cigarettes if the smoke is inhaled.

Allende killed, says wife

(c) New York Times Service

MEXICO CITY — The widow of President Salvador Allende Gossens of Chile said that on the basis of new information she had received since her husband's death, she now believes that he did not commit suicide but was "murdered" by the military forces that overthrew his government eleven days ago.

In an exclusive interview, Mrs. Hortensia Busji De Allende said she had learned that there were "several bullet wounds" in Dr. Allende's stomach and chest in addition to the one bullet hole through his mouth that was reported by the military junta that overthrew him.

"I am absolutely sure he did not commit suicide," Mrs. Allende said. "I think he was murdered because of the bullet wounds he received."

Mrs. Allende had at first confirmed the army and police reports that Allende had killed himself saying she believed he had shot himself with a submachine gun given to him by Fidel Castro. She said that Allende had talked of suicide and had said that he would "kill himself rather than betray all his ideals."

Mrs. Allende said she learned of the additional bullet wounds and other details of the final events at La Moneda, the presidential palace, from "eyewitnesses," including her daughters and doctors and reporters whom she said she could not name for fear of jeopardizing their safety.

Mrs. Allende also said that she believed the United States bore some responsibility for the coup that overthrew her husband's government.

Israeli importers favor Aqaba

(c) Chicago Daily News

TEL AVIV — Israeli importers have been using Jordan's Red Sea port of Aqaba as an alternative to Eilat on the Israeli side of the cease-fire line.

The trend toward favoring Aqaba over their own Red Sea port for receipt of goods made in the Far East is based on purely economic considerations: Aqaba is cheaper and faster than Eilat in off-loading cargo.

The importers' preference was reported by the afternoon daily Yediot Aharonot.

Since the Israelis do not have direct access to the Jordanian seaport, they operate through West Bank Arab merchants. The Arabs place the Israeli orders and transfer the imports to the Israeli dealers.

This means that the Israel-bound goods are offloaded at Aqaba, are trucked up the desert highway to Amman and across the Jordan River bridges to the West Bank.

Progress on 4 projects reported

SHOSHONE — Work on four highway projects within the Shoshone-Jerome-King Hill areas is progressing well at this time, Howard Johnson, Shoshone state district engineer, said.

At the west Bliss interchange and east Bliss interchange projects, falsework and installing hardrail on the west Bliss section is being done and work on concrete deck placement is continuing on the east Bliss section.

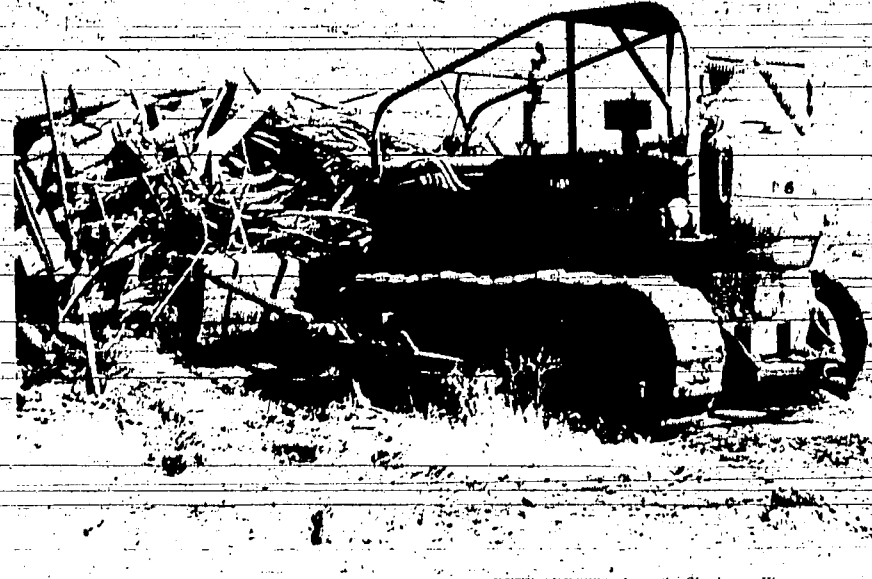

On the west Bliss interchange project, the work is virtually complete except for concrete slope paving.

The remaining work on the underpass on I-80N will commence upon completion of the UPRR tracks, Johnson said. The work of constructing a road way subgrade will commence upon completion of the tracks, which is currently being done by railroad crews.

West-bound railroad traffic should be over the structure within a week.

Steel girders on the east side of two bridges over Snake River near King Hill are being put in and concrete columns and pier caps on the west side of the river completed at this time. Work of forming for concrete is underway on the east side.

Plant mix pavement overlays on 0.9 miles of US 20, and 26 and 93-A from junction of US 93 East is now complete, and excavating and placing concrete for bridge abutments is being done over the Malad River in Gooding County.

Alaska expects pipeline action

(c) Newhouse News Service

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska — For three years now, Alaska's famed north slope oil field — squatting over at least 10 billion barrels of oil on the desolate shore of the Arctic Ocean — has been in a curious state of semi-hibernation. But now the pace is quickening.

Soon — probably very soon — Congress is expected to pass a law that in effect exempts the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline from legal efforts by conservation groups to prevent its construction.

That would give the Secretary of the Interior the green light to issue a construction permit for the 789-mile pipeline that would carry the north slope oil south to the ice-free port of Valdez, Alaska, where it would be shipped by tankers to the West Coast of "the lower 48."

No one, not even the conservation groups who have blocked the pipeline by court injunction so far, and certainly not the big oil companies which have plowed billions into the field's development, doubts that this will come about sooner or later — probably sooner.

There are still some potential hiccups, including a possible constitutional issue raised this past week by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, who suggested congress be careful not to infringe on the jurisdiction of the courts.

But the pressures for the pipeline — ranging from the simple fact that Americans use more and more oil each year to the enormous political clout of the "big three" oil companies involved — appear to be far stronger than the fears of conservationists over ecological damage, wandering caribou herds, and potential oil spills on land or at sea.

Meanwhile skeleton crews have huddled in their barracks on this barren, desert-like coast, building gravel roads and drilling pads raised above the marshy tundra, driving a few oil wells nearly to completion — and waiting for the pipeline.

It will take a while to crank up the construction effort, but the major oil companies — Atlantic Richfield (ARCO), Exxon and British Petroleum — are ready. Already 165 miles of 48-inch pipe sections are neatly stacked here, scoured of rust and coated with green and gray plastic.

BLM crews keep busy on many projects when not fighting fire

SHOSHONE — What does a fire crew do when it is not fighting a fire? It is pretty well recognized just what needs to be done when the Shoshone District, Bureau of Land Management, fire crews are called upon to suppress fires.

However, fortunately there are not always going fires. In the interim the crews keep busy working on projects which individually don't look big, but when viewing the total picture, comprise a rather impressive achievement, BLM officials say.

During the past summer the type of project work undertaken was as variable as the type of fellows who undertook it. The work varied from the installation of signs, which tell us where we are and where we're going, to the construction of gates which allow us to get there. Additional signs were installed to remind us to "Please close the gate"; that was just opened.

Garbage and litter clean-up was another big item. Rocks and rip-rapping were done along the face of the dam at Maggie Reservoir.

The list of projects is endless: catwalk repair, fence maintenance, painting, water trough and pipeline maintenance, new fence construction, salvage of abandoned fence materials.

When you report a fire, remember that the crews are not just sitting in the compound waiting for the fire whistle to blow.

When you go to the field this fall you might find your favorite campsite around Maggie Reservoir a little neater, or the gate which was so hard to open and close, now might not be quite as difficult to handle.

A paid crowd of 51,928, largest of the season at Shea Stadium, saw the Mets post their 10th win in 12 games and their 21st in 28 games for a 750 pace. Ticket sales were halted at 1:15 pm, nearly 50 minutes before the 2:05 scheduled starting time. Many of the fans unable to buy tickets watched the game from atop the subway rotunda behind the rightfield bullpen.

Athletics win division title

The A's scored three runs in the third inning against Wilbur Wood, who lost for the 20th time this season against 24 victories. Sal Bando's two-run single was the highlight of the inning. The Sox loaded the bases in the eighth with none out on singles by John Jeter and Luis Alvarado and a walk to Jerry Hairston.

Nothing runs like a Deere

One drop a second, 700 gallons a year.

Never let a faucet drip. One drop a second can waste 700 gallons a year. If it's hot water, you're wasting fuel energy as well as money.

Today, 77% of our energy comes from oil and natural gas. Domestic supplies of both are falling far behind demand. America can't afford to waste energy — and every American can help save it. Write today for a free copy of "A Consumer's Guide to Efficient Energy Use in the Home." It's packed with ideas that can save the nation's energy and your money.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices, riding last week's powerful upward momentum, gained broadly Monday in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Minutes before noon, the Dow Jones industrial average was up 3.32 to 931.27. Advancing issues led declines by more than two-to-one among 1,500 traded.

Turnover came to more than 8,500,000 shares through noon, compared with 8,700,000 in the same time Friday. Analysts noted the market's recent strength has attracted fairly heavy buy orders from foreign sources.

The list continued to ride a wave of buying enthusiasm which last week carried the market to its strongest performance in more than a year.

Observers said much of the optimism stems from tentative signs late last week the Federal Reserve might be easing its restrictions on the nation's money supply.

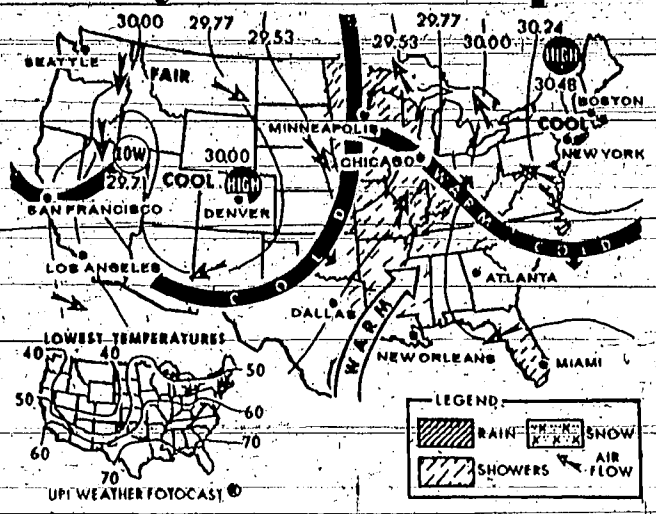

On the Big Board, Chrysler added to, after the company announced all its facilities were back in operation following the end of United Auto Workers' nine-day strike.
