Gem agency Heads roll

By DAVID ESPO

Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — A major shakeup in the state's largest agency—Wednesday abolished a dozen high-paying administrative positions and eliminated $200,000 a year in salaries.

Department of Environmental and Community Services administrator Dr. James A. Bax said in a policy statement the actions had "in effect, removed an entire bureaucratic layer from the department."

At the same time, Bax announced a series of 10 ambitious goals for agency in the areas of health and welfare service delivery and environmental cleanup. He also announced the expansion of responsibilities for a half-dozen remaining administrators in the central office in Boise.

The changes, he said, were in keeping with his previously announced policy of regionalization of the department. Bax and the department's seven deputy regional administrators also are reported to have met Tuesday to discuss the imminent changes.

Officials stressed that all of the 12 persons whose jobs were abolished would be offered other positions with the department. Among the jobs eliminated by the actions announced were:

- Deputy administrator, filled by Dr. John Cambareri, with a $2,180 monthly salary;
- Assistant administrator, filled by Jack Stennek, assistant administrator, $2,080;
- Assistant administrator, Richard D. Adams, $1,710 a month;

- Assistant administrator, Robert Des Aulniers, $1,710;
- Chief, health education and training, Don Bybee, $1,303 monthly salary.

Other positions eliminated were reported to be involving mental health and other service fields.

The announcement Wednesday followed several days of rumors that a shakeup of the large department was imminent.

Cambareri, who served as the deputy administrator for health and welfare, submitted his resignation to Bax in writing Tuesday, according to one official. Efforts to dissuade him were made unsuccessfully. Cambareri could not be reached by phone for comment Wednesday.

Several of the men whose jobs were abolished in the actions were informed by Bax in a series of individual conferences. The letters they received notifying them cited agency reorganization as the reason for the change. (Continued on p. 2)

European gold prices vary; dollar stronger

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold sank $1 an ounce in Zurich today, but buyers entered the market in London and pushed the free market cost of the metal up by $1.25 after the biggest one-day decline in five years Wednesday.

London traders said the market today was even more active than Wednesday, but today it was marked by buying, where the previous day most of the action was by selling.

The dollar gained or held its own on world money markets. Gold's price at the opening of London's pacesetting market was $90 an ounce, the same as its closing price Wednesday.

The price Wednesday represented a fall of $0.75 during the day, the biggest plunge since major government banks set up a two-tier gold price system five years ago.

Abandonment of that system forced gold's price down, costing millions of dollars in losses to speculators who forced gold above $120 an ounce earlier in the year.

Today's opening gold price in Zurich's big-volume bullion market also was $90 an ounce.

But this was a one-dollar drop from the Wednesday closing price there of $91.

In the currency markets, the dollar opened higher in London, but dropped marginally in Tokyo, Zurich, Paris, Frankfurt and Milan.

Tokyo's closing rate was 279.90 yen, a bare shade below Wednesday's 280.00.

In Frankfurt, the dollar dropped nearly one percentage point at the opening, but quickly recovered most of the loss. The opening rate was 2.5870 marks to the dollar, moving quickly upward in hectic trading to 2.60. Wednesday's closing rate was 2.61 marks.

London's currency traders priced the pound today at $2.39, cheaper than Wednesday's $2.3975.

In Milan the lira opened at 588 to the dollar, down from Wednesday's 593.2. Zurich's currency market priced the dollar at 3.1775 Swiss francs today, down from Wednesday's 3.1905.

The dollar also drifted fractionally lower in Paris, to 4.4175 francs for the official commercial dollar and 4.50 francs for the financial dollar tourists use.

today in brief

Gas ration order refused

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate refused today to order President Nixon to ration gasoline.

The move by Sen. Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., to impose rationing by Jan. 15, failed on a 48-40 vote. (Earlier story, p. 5)

The failure left the emergency fuels act with a discretionary clause that lets Nixon decide which fuels are scarce enough to warrant rationing.

Ford gives Nixon full backing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the first vice presidential nominee ever to face congressional confirmation, told his House colleagues today that President Nixon has his full support.

"I cannot imagine why people keep asking me this, and I am confident the members of this committee will not do so."

Percy seeks Jaworski OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told the Senate Judiciary Committee legislation to create court-appointed special Watergate-prosecutor would perpetuate the "national nightmare."

Percy called instead for the Senate confirmation of Leon Jaworski as special prosecutor. He said his bill for that purpose is the most effective way of avoiding more constitutional crises.

Henry hears plea for oil

TOKYO (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today heard anxious pleas from Japanese leaders for a quick settlement to the Middle East conflict and resumption of normal oil supplies.

Observers said his round of talks with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka and three other cabinet ministers ended with the Japanese gloomy because Kissinger was unable to assure them of prompt relief from oil cutbacks.

Rim panel starts work on problems

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With its members jockeying for position and unsure of their powers, the fledgling Canyon Advisory Committee barely got off the ground at its first meeting Wednesday.

The 12-member committee was created by the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission to offer advice on "this problem of the canyon rim and of development in the area."

Recommendations from the committee will probably be incorporated into the proposed new county zoning ordinance. The controversial ordinance was recently placed back in the laps of the zoning commission, along with recommendations from the hard-pushed county commissioners.

Only one major point of consensus surfaced at the meeting—Wednesday: Time is needed "to come up with a viable (land-use) plan for the canyon area."

The special committee agreed to "lay the groundwork" for a planning process introduced by member Dave Armstrong.

Armstrong said his plan could take "up to a year" to complete.

But most of the committee members felt they might not be given the time by the zoning commission.

They referred to a warning last week L. James Koutnik, chairman of the county zoners, that the special committee "better come up with something fast or we're going to bypass them."

The concerned committee members said Koutnik wanted results by Dec. 6, the next meeting date of the county zoners.

Many of the advisory members said that Koutnik was pushing too hard for a hasty answer to the canyon use problem.

"We should be allowed as much time to consider the problem as they (county zoners) have had to study it for the past couple of years," committee member Lee Barnes said.

Twin Falls banker Dave Mead, temporary chairman of the committee, said he had talked to Koutnik and "felt sure" that the zoners wanted some indication that the group had ideas and was working toward an end.

He suggested that even a request for more time to devise a plan might satisfy the zoners. (Continued on p. 2)

AF dam bill endorsed

WASHINGTON — Support for legislation permitting private financing for replacement of the American Falls Dam was reaffirmed at a hearing today.

The hearing was before the water and power resources subcommittee of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

Among those entering testimony was Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, whose letter was read by Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho. Andrus said the legislation has unified support in Idaho and pledged support of his office in obtaining necessary state legislation to start construction as soon as possible.

Andrus said differences of opinion between spaceholders and the Bureau of Reclamation over design of the replacement dam and the river crossing have apparently been resolved.

The hearing today followed field hearings in Burley in early October, conducted by Rep.

Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., subcommittee chairman.

The bill under consideration in the House would allow replacement of the dam by the spaceholders through a bond issue. Estimated cost of the new dam is about $25 million. A proposal under consideration provides that Idaho Power Co. would pay up to $10 million of the dam's construction costs through bond retirement.

The utility is also seeking rights to failing water from the dam to serve a new power plant to be built below the dam. Cost of that plant is estimated at about $30 million, to be paid by the utility.

At the Burley hearing, general support was indicated for both the legislation and the financing proposal. Similar legislation passed the U.S. Senate earlier this year.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told the Senate Judiciary Committee legislation to create court-appointed special Watergate-prosecutor would perpetuate the "national nightmare."

Mr. T-N says...

Driving 50 miles per hour on an Idaho interstate highway is enough to put you to sleep.

Travel firms hit hardest

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall predicted Wednesday gas rationing will cause a recession that will cripple the travel and recreational industry.

This part of the country with its big travel and recreation, automotive and petroleum-related industries will be among those hit the hardest.

Nearly ready.

SURROUNDED by gentries, Skylab III rocket is silhouetted against Florida sky as preparations for Friday launch proceed.

Astronauts Gerald Carr, Edward Gibson and William Pogue will spend 90 to 85 days in space. (Story, p. 8) (UPI)

Cox sacking said illegal

WASHINGTON — A federal district judge ruled Wednesday the discharge of Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor had been illegal.

Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said Robert H. Bork, the acting attorney general who fired Cox upon orders from President Nixon, had violated a Justice Department regulation prohibiting such a removal "except for extraordinary improprieties." "No one ever accused Cox of such acts."

While the decision did not order Cox reinstated, it appeared likely to strengthen the independence of the new special prosecutor Leon Jaworski against White House interference and to discourage Congress from placing the prosecutor's office under federal court supervision.

In an expression of personal opinion not required by the issues of the case, Gesell called proposals for giving the courts the power to appoint a new Watergate prosecutor "most unfortunate."

The Justice Department had no comment on the judge's ruling. A spokesman said that no decision had been reached as to whether the government would appeal. (Continued on p. 7)

Vow to stay repeated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon told an audience of 4,000 today, "I was elected to do a job. I'm not going to walk away until I get that job done."

It was the same message in essence that the President delivered to 78 Republican congressmen at a White House breakfast session, as well as to three previous groups of senators and House members who had been invited for Q-and-A sessions on Watergate.

Speaking at the convention of the National Association of Realtors at the Sheraton-Park Hotel, Nixon was interrupted six times for applause during a 30-minute appearance.

Mostly, he reviewed his 1973 accomplishments in both the domestic and foreign fields, and turned to Watergate only toward the end.

Sen. Baker in TF Friday

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., will speak at a fund-raising dinner for Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, in Twin Falls Friday.

Baker, who rose to national prominence as ranking Republican on the Senate Watergate Committee, is considered a possible presidential candidate.

Former U.S. Sen. Len Jordan and U.S. Mint Director Mary Brooks, co-sponsors of the Hansen fund raising affair, said Wednesday ticket sales for the $50-a-plate dinner at the Holiday Inn have gone "extremely well."

"Idahoans appear to be even more willing to aid Congressman Hansen's reelection effort this year than in the past," they said.

Dignitaries in attendance at the dinner, in addition to Baker, Hansen, Jordan and Brooks, will include Idaho Sen. James McClure, First District Rep. Steve Symms, Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy, Secretary of State Pote Cenarrusa, and several state legislators.

Also attending will be GOP state chairman Marjorie Miner and GOP National Committee members Ornette Sinclair and David Little.

Sen. Baker will conduct a press conference in the Pjone-Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho prior to the 7 p.m. dinner.

Sirica rejects tape offer

WASHINGTON — Judge John J. Sirica Wednesday rejected President Nixon's offer to give the court several non-subpoenaed tape recordings of Watergate-related conversations, saying that the offer, if accepted, would turn the court into a "depository" and "clearing house" for extraneous material.

The President, Sirica said, should not ask the court to take on so inappropriate a role.

All that the court should do and indeed "wisely" to do, he said in a memorandum, is "deal with the subject matter before it" — the enforcement of the grand jury subpoenas for recordings and other material relevant to nine particular White House conversations. (Continued on p. 7)

sought donation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The chief executive officer of American Airlines said today that an illegal contribution by the corporation to President Nixon's re-election campaign was solicited by Nixon's personal attorney Herbert W. Kalmbach.

George A. Spater, testifying before the Senate Watergate committee, said Kalmbach asked for a contribution of $100,000 in the fall of 1971 and the airline eventually donated $75,000, including $55,000 in corporate funds.

Camillo Fabrega, a vice president of Braniff Airlines in Panama, also testified in the committee's investigation of illegal corporate campaign contributions. Both airlines have been fined $5,000 each for making the contributions.

Spater said the $55,000 was raised through a phony invoice to a Lebanese firm for the sale of used aircraft.

Rita Hill and home

Woman defies authorities

LORDSBURG, N.M. (UPI) — Tiny, silver-haired, 71-year-old Rita Hill figures she's going to jail. She doesn't want to, but will do it for what she thinks is right.

Mrs. Hill owns 400 acres of southwestern New Mexico desert including the ghost town of Shakespear. The New Mexico Highway Department wants 59 acres of that land for a highway interchange but the stubborn woman refuses to give it up.

The department has condemned the 59 acres, written a check for $29,660 and gotten a court order Mrs. Hill to hand the land over. Mrs. Hill's response was to build an eight-by-eight shack right where an access road to the interchange would go and to move into the shack permanently.

The department's chief lawyer, E. E. Chavez, talked to Mrs. Hill Wednesday through her closed door trying to persuade her to leave. She refused.

Chavez asked District Judge Norman Hodges to have Sheriff Eugene Moore remove Mrs. Hill from her shack. Hodges ordered Mrs. Hill to appear in court next Monday to be cited for contempt of court and authorized the sheriff to arrest her if necessary.

Mrs. Hill doesn't object too much to the interchange itself but rather to an access road to the interchange she says will cut up her ranch. She also objects, in principle, to the condemnation procedure.

"If it's an American system, it needs reviewing," she said Wednesday.

"For years, I'd heard a lot about the highway department. They usually pick out one person to persecute. But unless you come up against them personally, you're inclined not to get excited.

"Shouldn't people have some control over where the roads are made or should it be left up to this group of all-powerful men to tear up and plow up land wherever they want?" Chavez said he was reluctant to force the issue with Mrs. Hill, but he had no choice.

"We have no desire to get her thrown in the clinic," Chavez said.

But Mrs. Hill understands she might wind up there anyway. "They're looking at me as a criminal. I guess it's a crime to balk the highway department."

Mrs. Hill has owned the land most of her life and has managed her ranch since her husband died three years ago.

"I hope that no matter what they do to me or my land, that this will encourage more people to fight the Highway Department and perhaps change things.

"They almost have the right of life and death. It's just not right to have power like that."

TWIN FALLS — The South Central District Health Department's budget, based on the $2.15 per capita assessment in the eight-county area, will require curtailment of some of the 1973 programs, Dr. Wayne Carte said today.

A public hearing on the budget will be held at 2 p.m. Dec. 3 in Jerome with the December meeting of the health board following the hearing.

"At that time the board will adopt the budget providing no major public objection is voiced.

Dr. Carte, district administrator, said the $2.15 assessment includes $1.00 basic budget. This figure is 15 cents higher than the 1973 figure of $1.75 per capita or an increase of 8.57 per cent. It will allow for an announced 5 per cent salary increase for all district employees, Dr. Carte said.

Another 12 cents per capita will go to pay rental costs of the satellite offices. In several outlying counties offices must be rented for use by district personnel working specifically in those areas. The counties now provide this rental.

"To make it a district-wide equally shared expense with all of the district costs lumped together and shared by all eight counties," Dr. Carte asked the rental fees be returned to the counties by the district. This policy change would also give the district matching state funds for this local cost.

Another 13 cents per capita will provide the same method for salaries of secretaries in the satellite offices. These are also currently borne by the counties and will now be paid by the district.

At the county assessment rate of $2.15 per capita in each county, the district will receive a total of $221,423 in local revenue. State revenue on a matching 54 per cent basis will provide $110,568 with district fees for clinic services, septic tank and other inspection and nursing and medical services to the Department of Environmental and Community Services providing another $34,083 and the environmental services and family planning clinic grant at $13,240. This gives the district a total 1974 budget of $389,314.

In 1973 the counties provided $180,228 under a $1.75 per capita assessment and a total of $351,497 from combined revenues including state matching money.

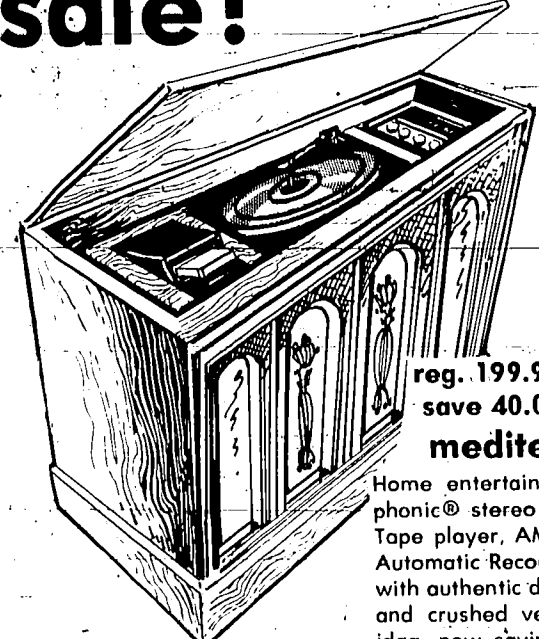

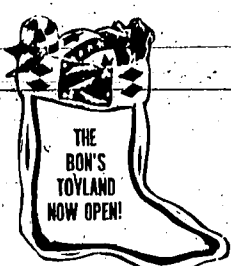

Originally Dr. Carte asked the board to approve a $2.25 per capita budget but this was reduced to $2.15 by the board members. This figure, recommended to the budget committee of the health district was approved Tuesday over strong objections of William Chancey, Twin Falls County Commission chairman.

Chancey contended Twin Falls, the population center of the district, would be carrying the "major burden" of the higher assessment ratio and said he feels Twin Falls County is already paying for more office space than the other counties. Twin Falls County will not receive revenue back for office rental and secretary salaries.

CSI report delayed

SEATTLE — The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare audit report on the College of Southern Idaho's work-study program apparently will not be made public until between Dec. 14 and Jan. 1.

On Sept. 4 HEW assistant regional auditor James Durnill said the findings of the audit should be made public by mid-October. He said that the audit was completed in late August and that draft findings would be presented to CSI by Oct. 1.

Then, the college would have two weeks to respond and make corrections before the department has to complete, for the delay. He said he was not familiar with the CSI audit. Durnill and other auditors working on the CSI audit were out of the Seattle office for the rest of the week.

HEW initiated the audit early in July, after CSI's own auditing firm showed that $1,400 in "unsubmittable payments" had been made to CSI college students for work-study when they were away on football trips.

Late in June the Times-News reported expenditures of work-study funds to pay for an extensive underground sprinkler system and a rock garden at CSI President James L. Taylor's privately owned Twin Falls home.

audit findings would become public, he said.

The draft findings were sent to CSI in entirety the last week of October and CSI responded the first week in November.

According to Paul Washatka, HEW assistant regional auditor, auditors are now working on the final report, which he expected to be complete between Dec. 1 and Dec. 14. He said the audit would be released to the public two weeks after the final report is drawn up.

Washatka could give no explanation, other than the many audits the HEW department has to complete, for the delay. He said he was not familiar with the CSI audit. Durnill and other auditors working on the CSI audit were out of the Seattle office for the rest of the week.

Sexy ads

LAS VEGAS, Nov. (UPI) — A proposed ordinance was presented to the city commission Wednesday aimed at eliminating sexy advertisements.

The proposed law said the city realized "its unique image and national reputation and likewise its economic dependence upon its renown for tourism."

But the proposed ordinance said sexually oriented advertisements "substantially detracted from such attraction to tourists."

Condition 'good'

TWIN FALLS — Linda Rudd, 14, 465 Morningside Drive, was reported in good condition Wednesday after treatment of injuries suffered in a car-pedestrian accident Monday.

City police said the young woman was crossing Blue Lakes Boulevard at Fourth avenue East when she ran into the path of a car driven by Rex Eugene Andersen, 16, Twin Falls.

Officers quoted the driver as saying he swerved in an attempt to miss the girl but could not avoid the collision. She was hospitalized at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

New member welcomed

KING HILL — Wayne Ickes of Glens Ferry was accepted as a new member of the King Hill Grange Tuesday evening.

A Thanksgiving dinner preceded the business meeting, with the Thanksgiving motif being used in the rooms by Mrs. T. M. Timbers.

Three members of the Mariposa Grange, Mountain Home, were guests. Birthday anniversaries of Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. Charles Finlayson, Mrs. John Davis, Mrs. Horace Lipe and Mrs. Timbers were honored. Approximately 50 people attended the dinner.

Nixon brings rebuttal directly to jury

Thursday, November 15, 1973
Member of Audit Bureau of Circulation and UPI, Official City, and County Newspaper pursuant to Section 60-108 Idaho code.

(c) Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 — President Nixon is taking his rebuttal campaign directly to those who would sit as a jury should the House vote impeachment proceedings against him.

Hospital spending

Now federal price guidelines issued last week should take some of the financial pressure off Magic Valley Memorial Hospital which has been caught in a classic cost-price squeeze.

The hospital's dilemma is evident in the new budget recommended this week by hospital trustees.

The $4.26 million budget, breaking with the trend of recent years, shows only a slight increase over the preceding year. It rose only about five per cent above current spending levels.

The new budget bears the impact of the heavy hand of the federal Cost of Living Council's hospital rate guidelines. Following repeated failure by the Magic Valley Memorial trustees to gain an exemption from price increase ceilings, the trustees have tightened their belts in the new budget.

Under the circumstances it is ironic that just before the local hospital approved its new budget the federal price regulators decided to relax the rules to permit higher price increases for hospitals.

Officials at Magic Valley Memorial have complained since controls first went into effect during 1971 that the hospital was being unfairly treated. They noted that hospital suppliers often were permitted to raise prices by much larger amounts than could be passed on to patients.

The complaint probably was justified. A torrent of such complaints led to last week's decision to relax the controls.

At the same time it must be said that some kind of effective control is needed to limit health care costs. These costs have been rising at a much faster rate than the ability of people to pay for needed medical care.

For example, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's spending has risen dramatically during recent years. The hospital, a subdivision of Twin Falls County, now spends more than the entire Twin Falls school system or the city of Twin Falls or the college or southern Idaho or even the remainder of the county's spending.

In fact, the hospital spends more than any other local governmental operation in Magic Valley.

The average patient's bill for hospital services, but not counting doctor's care, now is in the neighborhood of $100 a day.

If prices cannot be brought under some kind of control the day will come when market forces either reduce prices or see many people unable to pay for medical treatment.

The new Cost of Living Council guidelines appear to be a reasonable compromise.

They permit hospital spending to rise at a rate faster than the rest of the economy, but would hold hospital rates to within the reach of most citizens.

Gem sentiment

Idaho State Journal, Pocatello
No one who heard Sen. Barry Goldwater speak here Wednesday could fail to note the depth and breadth of the public feeling against President Nixon whenever his name was mentioned.

It might have been expected that many of Goldwater's views would be too conservative to set well with a crowd in Democrat country, but the Arizona senator drew surprising applause — until he mentioned Nixon. Then the reaction was one of harsh derision.

About the only thing the crowd liked in remarks concerning the President was Goldwater's suggestion that Nixon "should show up one morning before the Senate investigating committee, and say 'Alright, boys, I'm here — What do you want to know?'"

The crowd of 4,000 or so applauded that as an excellent suggestion.

Many others have offered the same idea as being about the only way Nixon can restore a measure of public confidence in his administration. It even has been reported that Sam Daah, chief counsel of the Senate Watergate committee, and his Republican counterpart will meet soon with top White House lawyers to discuss the possibility of a face-to-face meeting between the committee and the President.

But the initiative was on the part of the committee not from Nixon. No one expects the President of the United States to march into a Senate committee room, take an oath and testify. The idea would have been dismissed as a preposterous breach of executive privilege not long ago — but executive privilege hasn't much of a market these days.

Nixon may still feel it is too much to appear before the same committee he has castigated in the past, but there is some evidence he has been chastened by the tidal wave of criticism following his firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

The newly-appointed Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, says he has been told the President has changed his position since a press conference statement Oct. 26 that he would not provide presidential documents to a special prosecutor.

But would he tell Jaworski will make a special effort to test the President's position at once. With all the information still in the hands of Cox's staff, Jaworski should be able to find a suitable way to question Nixon which will have to answer. If there is no satisfactory answer, then Congress can get on with the business of impeachment.

Contrary to previously announced plans, the President invited seven southern Democratic senators to the White House late yesterday for a discussion of the situation. Invited were Senators James Eastland and John Stennis (Miss.), Russell Long (La.), John McClellan (Ark.), John Sparkman and James Allen (Ala.) and Harry Byrd (Va.).

These men, along with their GOP colleagues, under the constitution would serve as a 100-member jury in the event the House voted a bill of impeachment. On those grounds, they have been loathe to voice an opinion publicly about Watergate and other allegations now being investigated.

In these, as well as subsequent sessions with House and Senate members, the President will move to counter the barrage of charges made against him, ranging from Watergate and personal finances to an ITT antitrust settlement and alleged favoritism to the milk producers in return for hefty campaign donations.

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler, conceding that "Perhaps we've been somewhat late in addressing these questions head-on," said the President would respond "fully and publicly" to all the charges and was confident of clearing them up "once and for all."

But even before the campaign is fully launched, the President faces a new credibility snag.

He must convincingly rebut his own Watergate counsel, an Assistant Attorney General, and his Deputy Press Secretary, all of whom have testified or reported that a tape or dictation belt of the President's conversation with former counsel John Dean last April 16 was in existence.

The White House revealed recently that no tape recording of the April 16 conversation was made because the tape on the operating recorder had run out when Dean entered the President's office.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry Petersen had testified that Nixon told him April 18 that he had a tape of that meeting with Dean.

recorded his impressions of the talk with Dean in a dictaphone machine was conveyed by Counsel J. Fred Buzhardt. And as recently as Nov. 2, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren told newsmen that he "knew" the conversation was tape recorded. "It was dictated into a recording machine by the President," Warren said.

Moments after Buzhardt revealed in Judge John Sirica's court that no "dictabelt" existed, the White House released a 2,200-word statement by the President, explaining in detail why neither tapes nor a dictabelt of the Dean conversation for April 15 were in existence.

Nixon apparently was unable to find the dictabelt in his personal diary files. He did find "my original handwritten notes" made while talking with Dean, which he said would be submitted to the court.

Legal authorities here say the President's own version of his talk with Dean must be weighed against Dean's sworn account of the April 15 conversation. Only a brisk cross-examination can establish the validity of either account, they say.

Nixon appears to have anticipated this point by noting that he has the tapes of two meetings with Dean the next day, April 16, which cover much the same subject matter as covered by his notes. Although the April 16 tapes have not been subpoenaed, the President said he would voluntarily submit them to the court to substantiate his contemporaneous notes made of the 55-minute conversation with Dean the night before.

Ziegler said Nixon "is determined not to allow" charges and theories "to overwhelm us."

The senators invited to meet the President today were to be allowed to question him, according to the White House.

No time was left for questioning at a breakfast for the new GOP Co-ordinating Committee of party officials, elective and appointed, the White House spokesman said.

The President spoke for 45 minutes after breakfast, which took another 45 minutes, the spokesman said. The committee later issued a statement welcoming Nixon's pledge of full disclosure, though some members grumbled about the lack of "give and take."

The President has scheduled White House meetings with the entire Republican membership of the House and Senate. Later, he intends to subject himself to a similar series of meetings with Democratic members, the White House has indicated.

Zip along on BART

It's the new "in" thing in San Francisco — but you have a very strange feeling when you look up front and there's a guy doing nothing but sitting there with his arms folded across his chest and all the time you're zipping along at about 60 miles an hour.

We are referring to BART, the brand spanking new transit system in San Francisco which runs (at least part of the way) 60 feet under Market Street in a tube. As Mr. Spectator remembers it BART stands for something like Bay Area Rapid Transit.

But it's out of this world. It's a push button mass people mover that really moves. Only a part of it, of course, is operative but the miles are long enough that it will never be forgotten. For 60 cents (if you buy a round trip ticket) you can ride to Daley City and back from downtown San Francisco. It's automation at its best.

And that guy sitting in the cab of the lead car doesn't really need to be there — but it does give heart to some timid souls who just can't imagine anything going from Point A to Point B without some human being involved.

But it was wonderful and thrilling and all that. And it was a part of history because it had only been operating for a week and that 60 cents (come to think of it it cost $1.20 because Mrs. Spectator was along) was well spent.

But you know the problem now? They are going to hire 118 special policemen to guard the various BART underground stations. The fear is that juveniles will tear them apart — just for kicks.

And speaking of juveniles. The latest public fear in the "City" is caused by roving gangs of youngsters which the newspapers say are worse than wolf packs. Scores of people have been bent up, robbed had purses snatched. The age of the gang members? Average is about 12.

So San Francisco has the good side and the bad side. And believe me, you don't go out at night for a walk down the sidewalk. You ride — car or taxi — with the doors locked.

More reason why Idaho's nice to come home to.

DR. THOSTESON

Nibbler quits

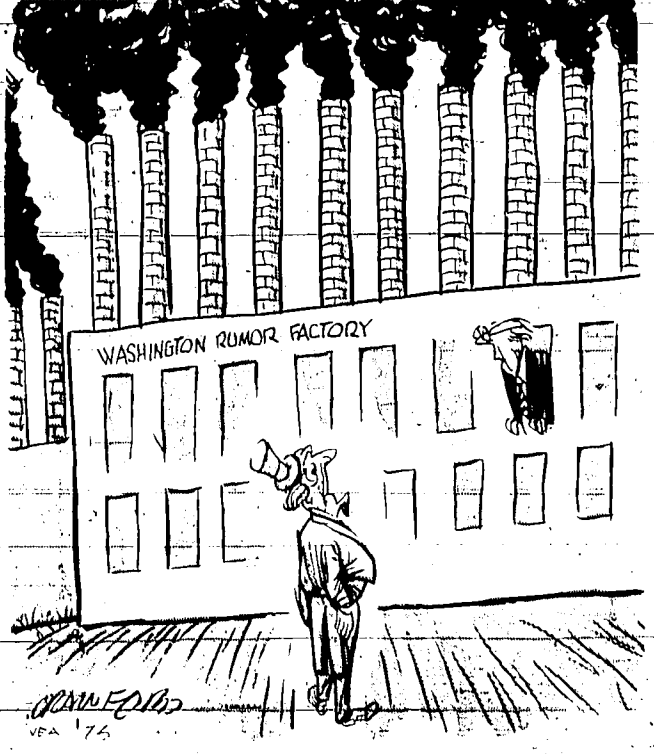

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Re your item about a person who can't quit nail-biting, you give us the reason: "He just doesn't want to quit badly enough."

I am 71. I bit my fingernails continuously until seven years ago. I certainly wanted to stop — except when I was biting my nails.

But I stopped the habit in two weeks. I was reading "Psycho-Cybernetics" by Dr. Maltz. He mentioned that one way to break a habit is to consciously make motions typical of the habit. So I would deliberately pretend to bite my nails many times a day. That — or something else I read in the book — stopped the habit in 14 days. — S. M.

If it worked, it worked. So I pass your thoughts along to anyone who wants to try them.

"What Energy Crisis?"

Impeach New York City

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, in a saucy editorial entitled The Planet of the Tapes, made light of the New York Times' ponderous concern over cosmic difficulties suggesting that there was plenty going on in New York to inveigh against.

Indeed that is the case, and the news is not merely infuriating, but deeply sad.

Last week in New York the firemen actually struck — literally refused to come to work. On yes, there was a complaint, and I do not pass judgment on it: let us assume that the firemen were indisputably correct, measured by any standard, in their demands against those who were negotiating in behalf of the city.

Still, they went on strike. It lasted only a few hours, as it happened, and during those few hours amateur city officials wrestled with a few fires — and the city capitulated.

It is not expected that any judgment by the courts will cost the firemen a nickel. Meanwhile, having struck for the first time in history, they discovered the joyous leverage exercised by the striker critically situated. It is nothing less than life and death that he has the power over.

It makes no difference that the strike is illegal. It makes no difference that firemen, like policemen, are required to take a pledge upon entering the service, that they will not strike under any circumstances.

Meanwhile, a strike had begun against the city's hospitals. Twelve years ago, the hospitals were organized. The unionization of hospital workers had been proscribed by law, but under the pressure of a strike, the law was changed to permit the hospitals to organize.

As a condition of unionization, it was written into the contract that no strikes would be resorted to under any circumstances.

Like the firemen, the hospital workers struck without consideration of the word they had given, and the story unfolds.

At Lenox Hill hospital — I cite it as presumably typical — the mood is fiercely ugly.

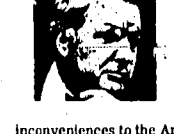

Having begun by defying the substantive law, the strikers proceeded to defy the procedural law; pickets surrounded the hospital so tightly as effectively to bar access to the hospital to anyone not protected by a phalanx of policemen. The police do not beseech themselves to protect individuals who seek to walk through the pocket lines, and the two ambulances of the hospital are immobilized.

Energy czar now gloomy

(c) N. Y. Times Service
HOUSTON — Gov. John Love, the President's energy assistant, is even gloomier in private than he is in public about the duration of the energy crisis. And even Texas is beginning to wonder about the future.

Governor Love has been down here talking to the oil producers and bankers, and instead of the 10 per cent fuel shortage foreseen by the White House, he has been talking about a shortage of 15 to 19 per cent.

His concern now is not mainly about

JAMES RESTON

Inconveniences to the American people through fuel rationing, but of serious effects on jobs, profits and the economy and unity of the nation.

Houston looks like an architect's model of the future, and this spectacular city was built on oil, but even Gov. Dolph Briscoe was saying privately that even Texas would have to import oil and gas by the 80s — and when Texas runs short, the crisis is obviously real.

In fact, Love came down here to appeal for the understanding and support of the oil industry, and conceded that if the shortage is not managed well "the result could be chaotic." Love is particularly worried about the growth of "regionalism" — gas areas like Oklahoma resisting an equal distribution system nationwide; remote farm areas or regions with particularly severe weather being discriminated against — all this leading to more divisions within the country and even to black markets, and pay-offs to evade the zoning regulations.

The substance of the Nixon energy policy, Love says, is to achieve the "capacity" for U. S. self-sufficiency.

Does not mean that the United States should not import oil from the Middle East and elsewhere, he says, but that it should do everything possible to avoid having to rely on foreign supplies in the future.

A vast education campaign is now on to persuade the American people that the crisis is not a temporary nuisance, but a basic problem which will affect American ways of living and even American world military strategy for many years to come.

For example, the Pentagon fears that the rise of Soviet Naval Power and of Soviet influence in the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean could leave the United States vulnerable to a naval blockade of oil resources in the Middle East, and thus cripple U. S. defenses if we were relying on middle east fuel we could not get.

It is, therefore, and has been for some time, a primary objective of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to achieve self-sufficiency in fuel at home, but it took the latest Middle East War and the ensuing embargo of substantial middle east oil supplies to make the Nixon administration take emergency action.

Love says the administration misjudged the will and ability of the Middle East states to organize an embargo of oil to states favorably to Israel, but now he observes they have proved they can and will do it.

Oregon energy crisis not sweetness and light

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS

(c) New York Times Service

SALEM, Ore. — Oregon has three months of experience with the kind of energy-saving program that President Nixon has proposed for the entire country — and Gov. Tom McCall has a cold.

When he instituted the program last August, one of the Governor's suggestions was that during cool weather everyone turn down the heat in homes and offices to 68 degrees or less. And now not only McCall but also his wife, his son and his dog all have the sniffles.

The experience of McCall and other residents of Oregon makes two points clear. Voluntary efforts can save small but significant amounts of energy; it is estimated that the state cut its consumption of electricity by 4 per cent last month.

But McCall's malady symbolizes the fact that such efforts can be difficult and disruptive. Oregon has learned that there are no easy answers. As a spokesman for an aluminum manufacturer told a local newspaper this week: "There's no fair way to curtail energy.

Someone is going to get hurt, and someone has to sacrifice."

If Oregon is any example, the fallout from the energy crisis could be a lot worse than a few colds. Shortages in electrical power have already caused the dismissal of almost 1,500 workers in the soft metals industry. A lack of natural and propane gas is threatening to close down 11 sawmills employing about 4,000 workers.

But this state has been a leader in concern for ecological values, and people are deeply worried that the current crisis will be used as an example to roll back the gains that have been made toward cleaning up the environment.

Oregon and the entire Northwest have long enjoyed an abundance of cheap power from the massive hydroelectric projects on the Columbia River. But after a light snowfall last winter and near-drought conditions in the spring and summer, officials realized that there was not enough water backed up behind the dams in the Columbia system to fill the power needs of the region.

In response to the emergency, McCall last summer ordered a wide range of conservation measures: state cars were driven at 55 miles an hour; state buildings here in the capital and in Portland were closed at 6 p.m. and cleaned during the day; heat, hot water and air conditioning were reduced. In addition, the Governor asked the public to cooperate by similarly reducing uses of power.

The state achieved savings of more than 20 per cent, but the public failed to respond. Consumption for the first month dropped only 2 per cent, considerably below the 7 per cent target.

To dramatize the problem, McCall in September instituted a ban on all outdoor and display lighting. Most businesses cooperated, and the darkened streets and buildings brought home the point. Customers pressured foot-draggers to get in line — and started making a few changes in their lives. While the average saving was 8 per cent, the rate has hit 12 per cent at times.

But there were problems. Businesses that depended on their signs to attract customers began to suffer. Ron Schmidt, the Governor's administrative assistant, says he tried to find a certain restaurant in the fog recently but could not.

A compromise has just been worked out, allowing establishments to keep one sign "reasonably necessary" to their business.

Another suggestion was that the public schools stay closed between the middle of December and the middle of January to save fuel and make up the time at the end of the school year.

But this drew protests from working mothers who panicked at the thought of leaving their children home for a month in the dead of winter, and it was quickly abandoned.

The future is as murky as a Salem street these nights. Not only has the soft metals industry cut back the almost 1,500 jobs, but there is also talk now that there will not be enough electrical power available to service a proposed aluminum plant in Warrenton that would have provided another 600 jobs.

Even if the sawmills get enough propane to keep going, their trucks might not be able to get enough diesel fuel to transport their products.

Quick approval urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate leaders urged their colleagues today to move with haste and approve a bill to grant President Nixon emergency powers to meet the energy crisis.

"This is an antifreeze bill," Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, said at the outset of debate on the measure. "The big thing now is to get going — so we can get wheels rolling in this country and get the heat we need."

Amendments were prepared by both Republicans and Democrats to the bill that would give Nixon power to conserve energy by such means as imposing lower highway speed limits, suspending clean air requirements and ration fuels, including gasoline. Scott urged that the amendments be to the point, with a minimum of talk. The first such amendment, which would call on the President to give special consideration in fuel allocations to those states or regions depressed economically, with high unemployment or lacking adequate transportation for fuel delivery, was adopted by voice vote.

A bill passed by Congress earlier this week authorizing construction of the Alaska pipeline will be signed by Nixon at 10:30 a. m. Friday. Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, who has been critical of what he said was Nixon's slowness in reacting to the energy crisis, also urged haste. He noted that the last tanker carrying Mideast oil prior to imposition of the Arab oil embargo would arrive at an American port next week.

Mansfield said there may be no more Mideast oil "for months." But he said the energy crisis would have occurred regardless of what happened in the Mideast. Mansfield opposed suggestions for a stiff tax on gasoline to discourage automobile travel, saying it would put the burden of taxation on the poor.

He said rationing was a better alternative.

Despite proddings of the leaders of both parties, a bipartisan effort to solve the crisis ran into some problems.

Republicans on the Senate Interior Committee issued an angry minority report saying they were not allowed to write any provisions increasing the energy supply into the emergency bill.

They said the bill as written by the Democrats deals only with conserving energy.

There are 13 species of the large seabirds or albatrosses, often called gooneys or gooney birds.

Deadlock

HOUSTON (UPI) — Five women and seven men deliberated the artistic merits of the motion picture "Deep Throat" for 14 hours and reported Wednesday they were hopelessly deadlocked. Judge Garth Bates scheduled a second obscenity trial for Dec. 4.

"They are hung up," Bates said. "I don't know on what. Maybe in the next trial we can find out. This needs to be disposed of."

Retailers strike

PARIS (UPI) — A million shopkeepers across France switched off their lights today and locked their doors, fulfilling a strike leader's promise to turn Paris and the major cities into ghost towns. Retailers declared a 24-hour shutdown to protest government price controls and Parisians faced the nearly unprecedented sight of a city of shuttered restaurants.

The government said last week it intended to slap escalating sales taxes on profits by retail food shops. It said the new taxes would have the effect of controlling prices because the higher the profits of a shop, the higher the taxes.

Among shops that closed were food stores, including bakeries, delicatessens, butchers, fish markets, and fruit and vegetable stalls. Also closed were jewelry shops, florists, gas stations, laundries, hairdressers, opticians, perfumeries, beauty shops, and tobacconists.

Athens students protest

ATHENS (UPI) — Students shouting "down with the junta" and "Americans out" took over an architectural college in Athens early today and called on all students to join them in massive anti-government demonstrations.

The protesters locked themselves in the architectural building of the Polytechnic School after a 200-student demonstration in the college courtyard Wednesday grew into a full-scale, 10-hour protest involving 4,000 students.

About 1,500 demonstrators were still on the street in front of the school early today when the students locked themselves in for the night.

It was the second anti-government demonstration in Athens in 11 days. Stone-throwing protesters clashed with baton-swinging police Nov. 4.

Judge denies request

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The judge in the Ellsberg burglary trial ruled Wednesday that the prosecution does not have to go "ringing the White House doorbell" to get presidential tapes as the defendants requested.

But he left open the possibility of the defense subpoenaing the President, and court observers said a ruling on that motion could come today. The defense maintains the defendants, all former high ranking White House aides, were acting as officers of the federal government protecting the national security, and were following Nixon's orders in investigating Ellsberg. The defense argued that tapes it said are available to the prosecution would show that. The judge turned down the request, saying "you're asking the prosecution to do a lot of doorbell ringing, without telling them which doorbells to ring." "It's pretty clear one of them is on the White House," interjected Deputy District Attorney Stephen Trotter, provoking laughter in the court.

Soviets to share

DALLAS (UPI) — Two Russian spacecraft have been targeted for landings on Mars this winter with the aid of American maps and in return the Soviets have agreed to share their scientific findings. Dr. Harold Masursky, chief geologist for the highly successful Mariner 9 Mars satellite, said the Russian mission could affect U.S. plans to land two large Viking spacecraft on the red planet in 1976. "If they successfully land and find conditions are very different (from what is expected), it will give us a chance to change our spacecraft," Masursky said in an interview Wednesday at the close of the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America. "We have made maps for them and in turn, they are supposed to tell us what their results are," he said. "It's a small investment for a very large return." Masursky, with the U.S. Geological Survey's astrogeology branch at Flagstaff, Ariz., said the two Russian spacecraft are scheduled to land in the cratered southern highlands of Mars.

Ontime launch set for Skylab

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Launch crewmen rolled smoothly through the countdown on a weather-marred but still reliable Saturn rocket today while three rookie astronauts took it easy before boarding a jam-packed spacecraft for a Friday takeoff on the Skylab 3 mission. Despite structural defects in the booster rocket that caused two delays in the launch, space agency officials and astronauts Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue were confident of an ontime launch at 7:01 a.m. MDT, Friday. "We have more than an adequate safety margin for the flight," said Kennedy Space Center launch director Walter J. Knipryan. Marine Lt. Col. Carr, 41, civilian scientist Gibson, 37, and Air Force Lt. Col. Pogue, 43, were due for a minus-one-day brief physical checkup today and then planned to relax in the afternoon, either visiting the launch pad or going flying in swift T38 jet trainers.

Their mission will last at least 60 days and perhaps as long as 85 days, aboard the Skylab space station in orbit around the earth, and will be America's last manned spaceflight before the joint earth orbital mission with Soviet astronauts in 1975. At Launch Complex 39, 42,000 gallons of high-grade kerosene, drained from the first stage of the Saturn 1B launch vehicle last week so that its eight crack-marred tail fins could be replaced, were poured back into the 22-story rocket late Wednesday. During the early hours today, the rocket's flight batteries were installed. Engineers also finished stowing 1,938 pounds of equipment in the modified Apollo spacecraft poised on top of the Saturn. The stowage list includes television cameras, lenses, film and 300-calorie emptylike food bars which Carr and his crew will use to supplement their meals if they get a go-ahead to extend their Skylab live-in from 60 to as long as 85 days.

Campaign spending law struck down

(c) New York Times Service WASHINGTON — A federal court struck down as unconstitutional today a key section in the campaign spending law that had the effect of limiting political advertising in newspapers, magazines and on television. The section of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 made the news media in essence the governmental censorship agents of the contents of advertisements on public questions and on federal political campaigns. The case before the court involved the New York Times. The opinion was delivered by a three-judge panel of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, and because it was a three-man panel, the government can appeal it directly to the Supreme Court.

In the ruling, the court declared unconstitutional that section of the law designed to implement the limitations placed on advertising spending in the media by candidates for federal elective office. The ruling said that the implementation of the law, imposed "impermissible prior restraints" and that their enforcement is enjoined. "The coupling of these first amendment impediments with the act's ill-defined standards leaves the court no choice but to declare (the section) facially unconstitutional." The doctrine of prior restraint, which has been previously declared unconstitutional under the first amendment, would mean that in certain circumstances newspapers or other printed media could be stopped from publishing certain articles or advertisements. The constitution concedes the right of the public to hold the media liable for what it does print. After it is printed, but does not allow the government to stop publication in the first instance.

Return of Vesco requested

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — U.S. authorities went before a Bahamian magistrate Wednesday to press their request for extradition of fugitive New Jersey financier Robert L. Vesco. U.S. officials, in briefs filed with the court, said Vesco was wanted for trial in New York on a charge of embezzling $50,000 from International Controls Corp., a firm he once headed. The New York indictment charges Vesco used company funds to buy stock for himself while pretending the money had been used to benefit the company. A treaty between the Bahamas and the United States specifies a defendant can be brought to trial only on charges for which he is extradited. Vesco also was indicted last May along with former U.S. Attorney General John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans on charges of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury.

Measure method

NEW YORK (UPI) — Scientists measure the height of mountains by comparison with sea level. Pikes Peak in Colorado is 14,110 feet above sea level. But, notes The World Book Encyclopedia, it rises only 9,000 feet above the nearby Great Plains. Special genetically pure mice from Bar Harbor, Maine, are being used for cancer research at the University of San Francisco.

SBA admits 'bum loans'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Small Business Administration director Thomas S. Kleppe admits that the agency's Richmond, Va., office made some "bum loans," but says accusations of widespread corruption. In the SBA are unfounded. Kleppe, at a news conference Wednesday, blamed two agency officials for negligence in covering up allegedly fraudulent loans in July. The Justice Department is now investigating possible criminal violations, he confirmed. The two men, Richmond office director Thomas F. Regan and regional director Russell Hamilton in Philadelphia, have been reassigned to the Washington headquarters.

Judiciary unit to obtain files

(c) Newhouse News Service WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee will have access to all records and files of the Senate Watergate Investigating Committee when it turns its attention to possible impeachment of President Nixon. An agreement has been worked out for the judiciary unit to use the senate group's files. It was reported, and presumably will include all secret testimony and unpublished materials. "It is a little like the Middle East cease-fire," a judiciary committee source said. "They made the agreement, now they have to work it out. But like the Middle East agreement, we hope it will stick finally." The judiciary committee, headed by Rep. Pexkoetter W. Rodino Jr. (D-N.J.), meanwhile has engaged a staff of 10 lawyers and investigators — five of them from the general accounting office — and has decided to hire a top-level staff director to head the investigation. The activity in the Rodino committee picked-up after members satisfied themselves that barring any unforeseen disclosures, the nomination of House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.) to be vice president would be confirmed routinely.

Cox sacking not legal

In an implied rebuke of President Nixon for ordering the Cox firing, Gesell said the special prosecutor "did not serve at the President's pleasure" but was "subject to congressional rather than presidential control."

Cox was discharged on Oct. 20, according to Gesell, "because he was insisting upon White House compliance with a court order which was no longer subject to further judicial review," the order to surrender secret tape recordings of conversations between Nixon and his aides.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson resigned rather than fire the special prosecutor. Then the deputy attorney general, William French Smith, was fired when he refused to fire Cox. Finally, Bork, the solicitor general, agreed to dismiss the special prosecutor.

Three days later, Bork rescinded the department regulation prohibiting the prosecutor's discharge except for extraordinary impropriety and attempted to make his action retroactive.

On Oct. 23, Bork issued an order abolishing the office of special prosecutor.

Re-establishment of the office three weeks later demonstrated, the judge declared, that its abolition had been "simply a ruse to permit the discharge of Mr. Cox" and the Oct. 23 order was "arbitrary and unreasonable and must be held to have been without force and effect."

Jaworski, who was named special prosecutor on Nov. 5, is serving subject to the same protection against discharge for anything other than "extraordinary improprieties," plus a guarantee that the president cannot remove him even for such conduct without the concurrence of congressional leaders.

The lawsuit decided today was brought by Sen. Frank E. Moss of Utah and Rep. Bella S. Abzug of New York and Rep. Jerome R. Waldie of California, all Democrats. Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, had originally been a plaintiff too, but the court said he had no standing to sue.

Fund bid hit

CHAIRMAN of Ashland Oil Co., Orin T. Atkins, told Senate Watergate committee Wednesday his firm took $100,000 from its Swiss bank account to make an illegal contribution to President Nixon's re-election campaign. Atkins said the request by fund raisers bordered on extortion. (UPI)

Apathy seen

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — Republican National Chairman George Bush says the Watergate scandal will not hurt Republican incumbents but will result in voter apathy.

"Our incumbents are pretty solid," Bush said of Republican members of Congress. "But one thing it (Watergate) did is to have an adverse effect on turnout...and created a voter apathy."

"It put a focal point on good clean candidates in the future. I think to a degree some incumbents feel threatened by the low turnout."

Sirica wants only 'Gate data

The White House now contends that two of those nine conversations were never recorded. Sirica said in a memorandum filed with the clerk of the United States District Court here, that the court's job was simply to determine "the possible justification for this response."

It wants evidence regarding the "failure to produce subpoenaed material," he said, not material that has not been subpoenaed.

Nixon made his offer on Monday in a statement as part of his effort to quell the disquiet and criticism brought on by the belated announcement of the non-existence of the tapes.

According to Sirica, Nixon is perfectly free to release, in full or in part, as much extra-material as he wishes. He is not free, however, in the judge's view, to enlist the court's assistance in the release.

"If the President thinks it advisable to waive any privilege and make tapes or other material public, he of course is free to do so at any time," Sirica wrote.

"Should he want to provide the grand jury with materials that do not relate to the president hearing or materials that have not been subpoenaed, he should do so through the grand jury's counsel, the special prosecutor and not through the court. It would not be appropriate for the court to usurp the place of the special prosecutor and act as a clearing house for matters relevant to the grand jury's investigations."

Saigon charges Reds ready offensive

SAIGON (UPI) — The government accused the Viet Cong today of issuing "a declaration of war" and said the Communists are ready to launch "a full-scale offensive" inside South Vietnam.

The charges came as the government tried to cope with a week and a half of fierce fighting in the southern Central Highlands, devastating floods along the central coast and a tropical storm heading for Saigon.

A government Foreign Ministry spokesman lashed out today at a Viet Cong threat last week to attack South Vietnamese bases if Saigon forces encroach on Communist territory.

"This is for sure a declaration of war," the government spokesman said. "Such a statement shows what we've been denouncing to public opinion, that the Communists are ready to open a full-scale offensive against South Vietnam."

Tropical Storm Thelma, packing winds of 60 miles an hour, zeroed in on the Saigon region today, jeopardizing an already skimpy rice crop just ready for harvest. The government warned residents to expect 55 to 60 m.p.h. winds early Friday when Thelma hits the capital.

A government battalion battled North Vietnamese forces at dawn today in the latest clash of a 10-day infantry, tank and artillery battle for control of the southern Central Highlands, the high command said. Military sources said government reinforcements were pouring into the area.

The South Vietnamese military command said government soldiers battled Communists near Highway 14, the key highlands roadway, about 110 miles north of Saigon. Spokesmen said there were no government casualties in the battle.

Communist probing attacks were reported around fallen outposts in the southern Central Highlands 110 miles north of Saigon, and the government poured more reinforcements into the area.

'Gate interest fades, Dem says

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — The American people do not want President Nixon removed from office and wish the Watergate affair would "go away," Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss says.

Strauss told a meeting of reporters that he did not regard discussion of the president's possible impeachment or resignation as "constructive for the nation or our party."

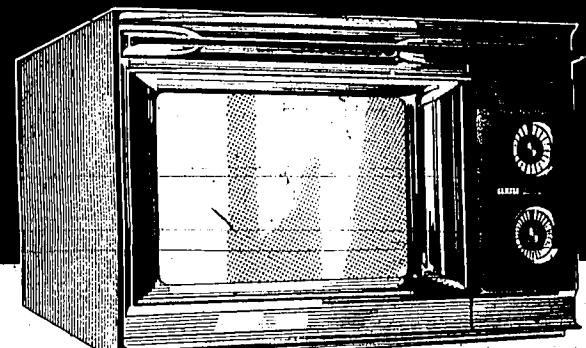

It would be wrong to permit "a partisan cloud" to be placed over the issue of Nixon's retention of his office, the leader of the opposition party commented. He noted that there has been some "attrition" in the public's interest on Watergate.

Strauss said he thought his fellow Texan, Leon A. Jaworski, would perform adequately as the special Watergate prosecutor.

"He (Jaworski) knows right from wrong," Strauss remarked, "and he's not going to sacrifice his professional reputation developed over a lifetime."

Guardsmen enter prison

Hawaii pen riot cools

HONOLULU (UPI) — Convicts at the Hawaii State Prison agreed to "cool it" Wednesday after taking over a building, exploding bombs made from matches, flooding the mess hall and breaking doors.

The Hawaii National Guard, ordered to the prison for the second time in six weeks, stood by as officials assessed the damage.

Six prisoners representing the 181 inmates in the main cellblock met with state corrections officials 18 hours after the riot started popping in the cellblock Tuesday night.

State Corrections Administrator Ray Behnap said the inmate representatives, members of a prisoner's council, told him that the 181 men "cleaned up their mess and did some housecleaning. They don't want any more hassling."

They've decided to cool it," Behnap said.

Comparing the situation to "a boiling pot that is cooling off," Behnap said he was certain the inmates obtained weapons during the time they controlled the prison, and it would be necessary to conduct a thorough search.

The prisoners told officials the outbreak was "a spontaneous reaction" to the long-drawn-out period of stringent regulations since the National Guard took over the facility Oct. 5 during the initial stages of a shake-down for weapons and drugs.

But they blamed the violence on the cutoff in visitation rights that accompanied the shake-down, reduced recreational periods and the removal of two inmates who decided to testify for the state in the death of a fellow inmate in the prison library.

The National Guard was alerted after the trouble started, and a barrage of tear gas into the building followed.

No one was injured and no shots were fired.

By early Wednesday, the inmates were pleading with officials "not to take any more overt action, such as tear gas."

The prisoners were assured that no more force would be taken and no one hurt as long as the situation remained cool.

Testing slated in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Army plans to test a new nerve gas in the open air unless higher authorities object, the Secretary of the Army said Wednesday.

Secretary Howard H. Callaway said the plans could be overruled by the President or the Environmental Protection Agency and no test schedule had been set.

Real tests of nerve gases were conducted at Utah's remote Dugway Proving Ground but in one incident killed 6,400 sheep.

"It's our intent now to test them because it seems to be far more reliable to have an open air test than just a test you might have inside some closed environment," Callaway told a news conference.

"But of course, the President, the EPA, a lot of people, might do things to make us change that," he said.

The new "binary" nerve gas consists of two relatively harmless gases which become deadly when they are mixed. They were laboratory tested at the Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland.

Callaway said nerve agents are an important part of the nation's deterrent force.

"You don't jump immediately into nuclear war," he said.

Postage hikes hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposed postage increases of about 25 per cent would have a harmful effect on the economy, and particularly on magazine journalism, according to Time magazine chairman Andrew Hekkel.

Hekkel Wednesday testified at Cost of Living Council hearings of a Postal Service request for across-the-board increases in all postage categories, including first class mail.

"The highly visible 10 cent stamp, if allowed to go into effect as proposed, would become a new and dangerous symbol of our sick economy," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., in a written statement.

Kennedy noted that the Cost of Living Council would give "short shrift" to a request by a major corporation for 25 per cent increases.

Benefit boost certain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A two-step, 11 per cent Social Security benefits increase for 20 million Americans today appeared almost certain of passage before Congress adjourns for the year.

The House began debate on its version of the increase Wednesday, and passage was considered a foregone conclusion, with Democrats and most Republicans supporting the bill.

The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved legislation almost identical to the House bill, except that the initial increase would come sooner.

Both bills call for an 11 per cent increase. The House bill would give an initial 7 per cent increase in April checks and the remaining 4 per cent in July checks. The Senate Finance Committee bill would give the initial 7 per cent immediately on enactment of the bill. Both bills also call for increasing to $13,200 the salary base on which Social Security taxes are calculated. This would have the effect of raising taxes on higher income groups; those making more than the 1973 base of $10,800.

The tax rate of 5.85 per cent of income would remain the same. The benefit increases would take the place of the automatic cost-of-living increases scheduled for next July and January, 1975.

The increases would go to all 29 million Social Security recipients — retired or disabled workers, or their widows and dependents.

In addition, both the House and Senate bills would increase payments to about 3 million aged, blind and disabled adults on welfare under the supplemental security income (SSI) programs.

Suspects questioned

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Three men and a woman were questioned by police for seven hours Wednesday night about the slaying of Grand Ole Opry star David "Stringbean" Akeman and his wife. They were later released.

"I really don't have any comment at this point," said District Attorney Thomas Shriver. "There's a lot more work to be done on this case."

Shriver declined to say whether the four were suspects. He said the evidence obtained at the murder scene — Akeman's farm house — and at other undisclosed places would be sent to the FBI in Washington for examination.

Hailey chamber supports probation officer program

HAILEY — The Hailey Chamber of Commerce has unanimously voted to send a letter to the Blaine County commissioners supporting a proposed county probation officer program.

The action came during a chamber meeting Monday after Mack Reynolds, acting president of the Wood River Peace Officers Association, discussed county juvenile problems and the probation officer proposal.

Reynolds said a "pretty severe" juvenile problem existed in the county.

Between October, 1972, and October, 1973, Reynolds said the various police agencies within the county recorded 232 contacts with juveniles. Of this figure, 73 contacts resulted in court petitions, with the offenses including larceny, possession of a controlled substance, liquor law violations, hitch-hiking, burglary, rape and fish and game violations.

Reynolds said State Youth Rehabilitation Officer Robert Schelske, whose services are shared with other counties, presently visits Blaine County once a week and supervises 30 probation cases. Reynolds said the workload was "physically impossible."

A second problem existed, Reynolds said, with repeated offenders and the lack of coordination of information between the various police departments. For example, of the 124 juvenile contacts recorded in Ketchum during the past year, 15 had been contacted at least two or more times; only 84 were from Blaine County; 12 were from Hailey; 16 from within the county, and 27 were truant or discipline problems at school.

Idaho Code provides that the court may appoint a probation officer within the county. Reynolds said, and estimated such a program would cost about $20,000 for the first year, with a reduced cost the following year.

Possible duties of a county probation officer, he said, may include pre-sentence investigation — coordinating information from schools, police departments and the family; assist police officers when requested; assist the schools in counseling discipline and truant problems; conduct direct, regular contact with juveniles on probation, and coordinate community services to aid the juvenile.

Chamber member Leo Stavros, commenting on the proposal, said "we have a problem here locally and we are trying to solve it locally."

E. V. McJannet said he didn't feel that if the county instituted the program that the $1,000 a month given to the state for youth rehabilitation services could be retained by the county.

However, he said, "We're not talking about money here" and stated that he felt that $20,000 was "incidental."

However, Blaine County Sheriff Orville Drexler said that his records showed that the number of vandalism cases as well as the monetary value of the destruction had been reduced by 50 per cent over the past year. He said he felt "we're on top of it."

Jerome's school board approves volunteers

JEROME — The Jerome School Board Monday night gave approval to the Jerome School Volunteers (JSV) to assist in the district where requested.

Supt. John Campbell reported a group of young married women in the community has been forming since December in an effort to place volunteers in the Jerome schools. They are seeking approval, cooperation and support of the school district, Campbell said.

"The Jerome School Volunteer program dedicated to helping teachers and other professional staff members to increase the effectiveness of education. Volunteers serve only on invitation from the principal and from the teachers. Their function is to assist the students and to implement school policy, not interfere with any school activity," according to information provided to the board by the JSV.

educational opportunities for all school children in the city. The program attempts to achieve this by offering services designed to supply added manpower for the teacher who needs and requests it, relieve the classroom teacher of non-teaching tasks, provide additional individual attention to youngsters with special needs," Mrs. Bonin said.

Boat landing set for Shoshone

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County commissioners decided Tuesday to use waterway commission funds to build a boat landing on the edge of town.

The landing, to serve small boats, will be located on the Little Wood River near the Gardner place at an iron bridge, according to Myrdon Johnson, county treasurer and Rotary Club president, who met with the commission earlier to suggest the project.

Work will not begin until spring and cost of the project has not been disclosed.

In other business commissioners approved a

106-month leave of absence for extension agent Ivan Hopkins to serve as potato specialist at large for the state, beginning Jan. 1.

Set a meeting at 8 p.m. Nov. 20 at the Lincoln County Courthouse to study a proposal for a gun safety program. Fish and game department personnel from Jerome met with the commission.

Approved painting restrooms in the courthouse. Appointed Mrs. Luella Kinsey as county representative to the South Central Idaho Mental Health board, with Commissioner Ward Mills as alternate.

TF police charge two in burglary

TWIN FALLS — Two 18-year-old Twin Falls men were arrested Tuesday night by city police and charged with first degree burglary.

Twin Falls Detective Capt. Tim Qualls said Wade Larson, 18, was arrested as he stepped from a candy truck parked in a driveway at 885 Sunrise Blvd. A companion, Roger Fisher, 18, was arrested as he sat in a parked automobile near the address where officers surprised the Larson youth.

The truck is owned by Don Keene, officers said.

SWENSEN'S UN-TRADITIONAL THANKSGIVING SPECIAL!

4,529 ONION RINGS for $1.89

50 lbs. YELLOW ONIONS

In truth, 4,529 is just a guess about how many onion rings can be obtained from a 50 pound bag of onions. Not wanting to mislead the public, Mr. Swensen began slicing onions and counting rings, but after 14 onions, he became so emotional (all choked up — crying like a baby), he couldn't continue. Anyway, 4,529 (give or take a few hundred onion rings) is enough to last for quite awhile, and though onions aren't a traditional Thanksgiving food, the Pilgrims probably would have been glad for a 50 lb. bag of onions when they first stepped on Plymouth Rock.

Boise chief gripes

BOISE (UPI) — Police Chief John Church says it's time to put Boise's meter maids back into civilian clothes.

"The trouble is that they think of themselves as career police officers," Church complained to the City Council Tuesday afternoon.

"They have their own police radios and answer calls and everything," he said. "They go out chasing robbers and fighting with drunks and trying to capture kidnapers rather than just doing what we assign them to do."

He told the council he feels the meter maids should be assigned to the city's parking ticket division rather than the police department.

Not only would this provide better fiscal control over the over-all parking ticket operation, he said, it might give the police department a better image.

"The majority of complaints to the police department are over parking tickets," he said. "I think many of these complaints could be eliminated just by not having parking tickets associated with police activities," he said.

"People ask me why we're so worried about parking tickets—why we aren't out solving crimes."

SUZANNE Shensky, Tacoma, Wash., may be the only 10-year-old in American whose parents ask, "May we borrow the car?" Suzanne won the new car, a trip to Disneyland and $500 in cash as first prize in a contest to name a new ice cream. She entered the name "Confetti Carousel." (UPI)

Patriotism brings traffic ticket

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI) — Seventy-year-old Jesse Lovin took President Nixon's appeal for slower driving speeds seriously and decided to do his part to help conserve gasoline.

Now he wishes he hadn't. Lovin received a ticket Tuesday from the Colorado State Patrol for impeding traffic. He was driving 46 miles an hour in a 60 mile-an-hour zone.

It was the first ticket Lovin has ever received. A spokesman for the patrol said the appeal for lower speeds has created a problem because slower-driving motorists have been holding up other drivers. Speed limits on Colorado highways can only be lowered by the legislature, which doesn't meet until January.

Allocation plan faulty

BOISE (UPI) — The federal government's new mandatory fuel allocation program in Idaho is falling — caught in a circle of buck passing.

"I would say the federal government's mandatory fuel allocation program has already broken down," said Robert Lenaghan, director of Idaho's Office of Energy, "especially when it gets to the point where someone has to make a decision on heating and diesel fuel oil allocations."

Lenaghan, a member of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, said his office has taken the brunt of the problem created by the new mandatory program initiated Nov. 1.

"I don't mind that, but I don't have any authority to solve the problems," he said.

Lenaghan described the situation as composed of people with legitimate problems calling the federal government coordinator in Boise and "that office refers the phone calls to my office."

Lenaghan said he in turn refers the problems to the Seattle Office of Oil and Gas. Then that office refers the problems and requests of allocations back to Idaho's federal coordinator Larry Davis where the initial request began.

Lenaghan said there are farmers who can't get their crops out of the ground because they do not have diesel fuel and loggers who cannot meet contracts because their trucks will not run without fuel.

"All they are doing is passing the buck," he said. "I don't know who is at fault, but it is evident the Office of Oil and Gas and the coordinator were not given sufficient work with that includes monitoring and expertise."

Other problems created by the program include new homeowners who get fuel allocations and Sun Valley Kees which cannot get fuel for its new community.

"It's a serious problem which is building into crisis proportions in Idaho," Lenaghan said.

He said fuel oil distributors are not sure who they can give oil to but they know a $5,000 fine if they make the wrong choice.

"You can't expect them (distributors) to have a chance like that," Lenaghan said, "while their surplus builds because the sure who can receive what."

Coordinator Davis' office said there are no forms for allocations.

"We don't have any forms yet," a secretary said, "but you might call Bob Lenaghan. I think he has forms." Lenaghan said he does not have any authority to allocate fuel under the new regulations. He said all he can do is recommend allocations to the federal coordinator.

"This puts it back in the vicious circle," he said.

Oregon cuts power usage

(c) Newhouse News Service
PORTLAND, Ore. — Oregon started a state-wide energy-saving program three months ago, and has cut its electric power consumption significantly.

The program began poorly. But now state officials estimate that Oregon's use of electricity during the last three weeks has run nine per cent below forecasts.

The savings is enough to halt the spread of unemployment due to power shortages across the state. It shows what cooperative citizens can accomplish. And it is an example that President Nixon wants other states to follow.

The President, in a televised speech Nov. 7, praised Oregon's actions, and asked the entire country to take similar steps to save not only electricity but also oil and gas.

Oregon's experiences, good and bad, suggest that problems that other states face.

The energy crisis hit Oregon early. Hydro-electric dams supply 80 per cent of the state's electricity, but for two years rainfall and snowfall have been unusually light. The water and melting snow behind the dams was not sufficient to generate the electricity that Oregonians normally use.

Republican Gov. Tom McCall decided that the state must cut electricity consumption by seven per cent or suffer disaster. On August 21, he declared a state-wide energy crisis. Lighting along freeways was cut 50 per cent (it still met federal safety standards), and decorative lights around government buildings, including the state capitol, were extinguished. Hot water in government buildings was shut off, and the offices closed at 6 p.m. Local governments took similar steps.

The next day, McCall announced some of the things the public should do — reduce home and office temperatures two to five degrees, shut off pilot lights on gas stoves, set hot water heaters at 120 degrees instead of 140, discontinue use of air conditioners or at least don't cool below 75 degrees, and operate home laundries or dishwashers only with full loads, even if this meant doing some dishes by hand.

The first month, state buildings cut their use of electricity 22 per cent in Portland and 28 per cent in Salem. But the overall decline was only two per cent.

"We were disappointed," says one state official. "We just did not see the proper response from the public."

To dramatize the situation, McCall, relying partly on his political popularity, announced on Sept. 22 a program with bite. He ordered all outdoor electric display and advertising signs extinguished. As the lights flicked off on Commercial Street in Salem and Broadway in Portland, the public suddenly realized the seriousness of the situation, and often compared it with the brownouts of 1943.

The nightly gloom of city streets constantly reminded citizens to save electricity at home, and they did. When they saw a merchant with a lighted advertising sign, they often told him: "Turn it off, or we won't buy here."

Some 30 businessmen went to court to challenge the legality of the order against advertising lights, but each backed down before trial.

Labor unions support the power-saving programs, warning that jobs in the aluminum, wood-processing and other industries might disappear if industry does not have power to run its machines.

Bob Davis, energy specialist in the governor's office, estimated that in September 1,100 to 1,500 persons were unemployed because of power shortages. Don Steward of the state employment division says that such manufacturing layoffs now total 550.

Early in the program, the state established an Energy Information Office to answer citizen inquiries about saving electricity.

Sedatives placed under control

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — After studies linking barbiturates' use to violent crimes and thefts, the Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Administration has moved to tighten federal controls over the three best-selling types.

Under the proposed regulations announced Tuesday, the three drugs — sodium amobarbital, sodium secobarbital and sodium pentobarbital — are to be shifted from schedule three of the Controlled Substances Act to schedule two.

The act provides that drugs subject to illegal diversion be placed in one of five categories according to their potential for abuse. Those considered most dangerous are placed in schedule one.

All three barbiturates are sedatives which alter the activity of the central nervous system and the brain. The new regulations will make it illegal for doctors, pharmacists, hospitals and others to purchase them from a manufacturer without using a federal order form, a copy of which will have to be filed with DEA.

Stricter limitations on prescriptions will also be imposed. Failure to comply with these and other regulations will result in a five-year prison sentence and a $15,000 fine for the first offense and double penalties if the violation recurs.

The Eli Lilly Co., Indianapolis, Ind., is the major manufacturer of sodium amobarbital which it sells under the brand name Amytal and of sodium secobarbital which it markets as Seconal.

The company also makes a product called Talnal which contains both sedatives. Sodium pentobarbital's principal producer is Abbot Laboratories of North Chicago, Ill., which sells the drug under the brand name Nembutal.

Antiwar novel ordered burned

NEW YORK (UPI)—Author Kurt Vonnegut Jr., whose "Slaughterhouse Five" novel was confiscated and burned by school officials in Drake, N.D., said Wednesday, "those children will have a ridiculous memory of adults. It's a rotten education for the kids to see."

Drake School Superintendent Dale Fuhrman and the town school board ordered three dozen copies of the antiwar novel burned last Thursday after a high school sophomore girl complained about profanity in it.

"I'm glad the freedom to make soldiers talk the way they do talk," Vonnegut said.

"The normal way to get rid of trash is to burn it," Fuhrman said in explaining the book burning.

Vonnegut said in his New York apartment, "The only effect of 'Slaughterhouse Five' is to make the reader a pacifist. Nothing in the book urges people to take any sexual action at all."

The novel, a strong antiwar statement, describes the Allied firebombing of Dresden, Germany, in World War II, through the eyes of five characters who survived the ordeal by taking shelter in a slaughterhouse meat locker. Vonnegut was among the five.

The school board of Drake, population 600, also ordered confiscated "Dolliverance" by James Dickey and "Short Story Masterpieces," which includes tales by Hemingway, Faulkner, Steinbeck, Joyce and others.

The other titles were included in the ban because "the board wanted to make a clean sweep," Fuhrman explained.

Vonnegut, asked for his reaction, said, "It's grotesque and ridiculous. It's like asking how do I feel about man-eating sharks."

Did he ever think his novel would be burned? "I didn't think anybody's books would be burned," he replied.

Opposing the School Board are English teacher Bruce Severy, many of his students and the Minot, N.D., chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"The issue here is denying students access to those books," Severy said. He said "Slaughterhouse Five" is a "moral" book—one that "addressed itself to current problems in an honest and straightforward manner."

High energy costs strengthen dollar

DONN (UPI)—Herbert Stein, chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, said today the world oil shortage will drive U.S. energy prices sharply upward next year but will also strengthen the dollar in world markets.

Stein said the U.S. government would probably control scarce energy resources more by allowing prices to rise than by "administrative methods" such as rationing, but that decision remained open.

Stein, addressing a meeting of West German economists and business leaders, painted a bright picture of immediate prospects for the U.S. economy—rising purchasing power for the dollar at home and abroad with inflation easing and devaluation partially reversing itself.

"He said the real impact of recent inflation and devaluation upon the dollar had been exaggerated by 'the hysterical reporting of our economic situation by some of our leading news commentators.'"

Civil rights laws pending

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — The Justice Department will soon ask Congress for new legislation to back up a nationwide crackdown against abuses of the civil rights of mentally retarded persons held in institutions.

"This is the new frontier in civil rights and an exciting one," J. Stanley Pottinger, assistant attorney general in charge of the civil rights division, said in an interview.

The department is now limited, he explained, to intervening in legal action initiated on behalf of the mentally retarded.

With new legislation, he said, the department will be able to choose cases that will build a good legal basis for protecting the civil rights of the mentally retarded — and many others held in institutions, against their will.

So far, the civil rights division's new office of institutions and facilities has completed two cases, one involving New York's Willowbrook Institution, the nation's largest facility for the mentally retarded.

Eighteen more are pending, Pottinger said.

Many of the cases involve mistreatment of children, who are held in "human warehouses," he said.

Pottinger, a 33-year-old San Francisco lawyer, also covered these other points:

— A decision will be made soon on whether to involve a grand jury in the new investigation of the death of four students at Kent State University in 1970. Pottinger reopened the case in August, but he said, exactly what happened in the campus clash between national guardsmen and students is still unclear.

— The civil rights picture has changed dramatically in the last decade — largely as a result of successes in protecting the rights of minorities. Civil rights questions have become more complex and more difficult to answer satisfactorily.

— In addition to the rights of the mentally retarded, the civil rights division is now concentrating its efforts against sex discrimination, on discouraging real estate firms from "steering" blacks to one neighborhood and whites to another, on blocking the complex ways of getting around the voting rights laws and on guaranteeing equal rights for those seeking jobs as firemen.

Salmon dogs kill 22 chickens, 47 bunnies

SALMON — Dogs have killed 22 chickens and 47 rabbits at three places south of Salmon.

Jed Wilson, Lemhi County deputy sheriff, said that 22 chickens belonging to George Smith were killed by dogs that broke into his coop by digging under the coop.

Forty rabbits belonging to Dean Helms and one were killed when dogs broke into their pen. And another seven rabbits were killed when dogs broke into a pen belonging to Steve Combs.

TF aides to ask medical coverage

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls teachers probably will seek hospitalization insurance for their families during next year's negotiations, a teacher representative said Tuesday.

Twin Falls Education Association President Gordon Armstrong told Twin Falls School trustees at a meeting Tuesday night that the hospitalization question would be one of several to come up next year, providing the TFEA is again chosen by teachers as their bargaining agent.

He said a teacher vote would be held soon to determine whether the TFEA or the American Federation of Teachers would represent teachers.

He would not say what other issues would be brought forth during negotiations, saying this would be left to the teachers to decide later.

He introduced the TFEA's new vice president, Dennis Sonius. In other business, the board hired 20 new teachers and aides for the federal Title I program, designed to help underprivileged students. Doyt Simcoe, district director of special services, told the board that through English-Spanish advertisements the district has been able to find one qualified bilingual teacher and two bilingual aides to work in the Title I migrant program.

Other personnel hinted with Title I money include a remedial English teacher, a resource room specialist, "home-bound" teacher (to teach students who are physically unable to go to school) and numerous aides to Bickel, Lincoln, Washington, O'Leary and the special education schools.

Twin Falls High School Principal Frank Charlton reported that 39 students are requesting early graduation this year. Only seven seniors made this request a year ago, he said.

Charlton said the students, all of whom will have completed their required course load this winter if they pass this semester's classes, fall into three categories; those who want to work to earn money for college; those who plan to start college next semester; and those who plan to get married.

District Supt. George Staudacher noted that 75 percent of the students making the early graduation request are girls.

He said the loss of students would have no effect on ADA money to the district.

The board voted to grant the requests if all class requirements are completed by the students.

Italian death list said status symbol

(c) New York Times Service
ROME — Judicial authorities are examining a "death list" of 1,617 Italians whom Neo-Fascist plotters had allegedly planned to assassinate.

The existence of the list is a matter of intense nationwide interest, and membership on it has become a political status symbol.

Four persons, including a lawyer and a doctor, were arrested in northern Italy in the last few days and a warrant is out for a fifth. They are charged with subversive activity with a view to committing a chain of crimes to prepare an ultrarightist take-over.

The investigators are looking into recent robberies to determine whether the alleged conspirators engineered them to raise funds.

The Communist party leader, Enrico Berlinguer, was listed for assassination, as was Pietro Nenni, the 82-year-old veteran Socialist. Hundreds of other prominent leftwing politicians were on the list.

Interior Minister Paolo Emilio Taviani, who is in charge of the police forces, is designated, along with some left-of-center members of his party, the Christian Democrats.

Yippies plan Expo session

SPOKANE (UPI) — Along with about 4.5 to 5 million other people, members of the Youth International Party may be coming to Expo '74 next summer.

Rik Smith, a spokesman for the local Yippies, said Wednesday posters were being put up all over the county, inviting members of the group to come here for a national convention during the six-month run of the World Environmental Exposition.

"We expect at least 10,000 and many of them will be here for the whole summer," Smith said.

A question has arisen about what to do with the influx of young people, many of whom would camp out while in the area.

"We're studying it," said Roy Wesley, assistant city manager.

Wesley said the park board and the park department were looking into the possibility of funding some kind of site for a large group of people who would want to camp together.

"However," he said, "we're not far enough along in the planning right now to make any recommendations."

City Manager F. Sylvan Fulwiler had said any services provided to youth by the city would be open to members of the group but it would receive no special treatment or privileges.

Smith said time was getting short for decisions by the city on whether or not to provide space for the yippies, who he said wanted no trouble with the city.

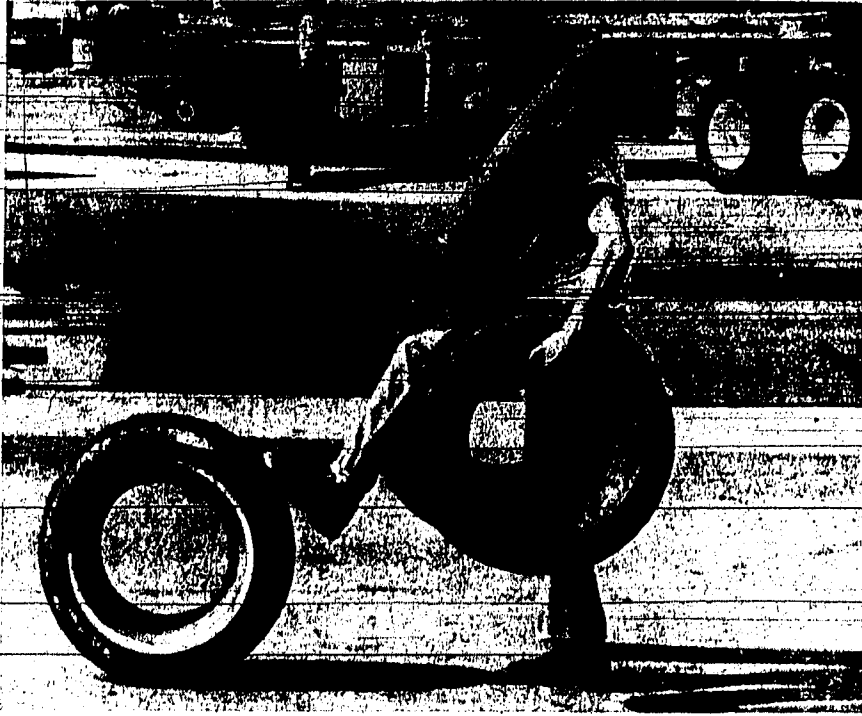

"But," he said, "they're going to have to either talk with us now or wait until May when we're all here."

He said the exposition was a logical location for a national convention of the group because of its theme, "man living in harmony with his environment."

Smith said most of the exhibits already announced for the exposition were aimed primarily at older people.

"We felt we could do a better job of exemplifying the theme than the Ford Motor Co.," he said.

Doug Davis, another representative of the local Yippies, added "besides that, we, the young people, are 50 per cent of the environment."

Utah oil yield up

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Petroleum production in Utah more than doubled during the 1972-73 fiscal year but natural gas production is down by almost 2 billion cubic feet, according to the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

The Survey said petroleum production on federal lands in Utah increased from 10.5 million barrels to 21.8 million barrels during the fiscal year. And production of oil and gas liquids increased from 51.9 million to 71.9 million gallons during the fiscal year.

However, the report noted natural gas production dropped to 24.5 billion cubic feet from 26.8 billion cubic feet.

The Survey said mineral income, royalties, leases and rentals on state land was $3,314,680 compared to $2,914,169 for the previous year.

Coal levy boost asked

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — A Natrona County state legislator said Wednesday he will try to introduce legislation in the 1974 session to increase the tax on coal mined in Wyoming and also the coal land lease fee.

Sen. Harry Leimbach, a Casper attorney and possible Democratic gubernatorial candidate, said Montana has a tax of about 55 cents a ton. The Wyoming tax on coal production now is one per cent.

"As it is now we're only getting a few cents per ton in taxes and we should get at least what Montana's receiving," he said.

Leimbach said he also favors "in place" taxes on coal but not oil.

Power loads above estimates

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A spokesman for the Northwest Power Pool said Wednesday that for the first time in several months actual loads were above estimates due to low temperatures for the week ending Nov. 8.

Merrill Schultz, coordinating engineer for the Pacific Northwest energy shortage region, said that during the week natural stream flow declined sharply despite the occurrence of precipitation over the entire region.

Natural stream flow capability was 1,326,000 average kilowatts below the preceding week. However, continuation of the heavy precipitation through the weekend, accompanied by higher freezing levels, will produce a significant rise in natural streamflows during the current week, Schultz said.

Colorado issues N-testing permit

(c) New York Times Service DENVER — The Colorado State Health Department has issued a permit allowing production testing of radioactive natural gas produced by an underground nuclear explosion on May 17 near Rio Blanco in northwestern Colorado.

burning will not be harmful. Water, air and ground samples will be collected in the area to determine how much fallout is produced.

If the experiment is a success, sponsors say, the well can produce about 17-billion cubic feet of natural gas over a 25-year period.

The current 10-day test is designed to lower the pressure in the cavity by burning off gas already collected there.

Nixon to speak in Memphis

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — President Nixon will address the Republican Governors Conference in Memphis next Tuesday, Gov. Winfield Dunn announced Wednesday.

In Washington, White House officials confirmed the plans for the Presidential appearance. They had said previously he was expected to visit Macon, Ga. Sunday.

"The President is expected to meet privately with governors who will attend the conference," Dunn's announcement said.

"Speculation is that the session will center around the same topics of discussion the President has had in recent days with congressional leaders."

At least 16 of the 19 GOP governors, including presidential prospects Ronald Reagan of California and Nelson Rockefeller of New York, are expected to attend the Nov. 18-20 meeting.

Dunn told UPI that he hopes the governors would show support for the President.

RUPERT — Another delay faces the Rupert City Council in its struggle to secure funds for a sewer and lagoon system that has been in the works for about two years.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is now requiring a second phase of the infiltration-inflow analysis to determine how much money should be spent in patching up sewer lines to stop leakage and how much should be spent in constructing a lagoon to treat the waste, according to Frank Leibrock and Danny Fouldpour to Hamilton and Voeller Engineers of Pocatello.

If the engineers complete the second phase of the analysis next spring when the subwater is high, it will be 1975 before the city can apply for a construction grant, Leibrock said.

The city could get a design grant in early 1974 and start construction sometime that year if the engineers can convince the EPA that they can complete the design and the analysis phases at the same time, Leibrock said.

According to the law, separate phases of a project may be combined "if time is of the essence," he said.

"I think we've got to have some kind of help or we're going to have a problem," Mayor Wendell Johnson said. In some areas people have to install pumps to lower the subwater enough to flush their toilets, he said, and in others sewage is flowing onto the ground.

"I think we're sitting here with a serious health problem," he said.

It will be "difficult" to convince the EPA that the two phases can be combined, that the engineers have had enough experience with the Rupert system to estimate how much sewage can be successfully eliminated from the lines and how much will have to be treated in the lagoon, Fouldpour said.

Even if the project is delayed, it will not affect Rupert's standing for receipt of government funds, Fouldpour told the council. "No matter what happens you are on top of the list."

Although the project may be delayed by the new EPA demand "you will really come out ahead; instead of behind," he said. "Because Rupert will have an efficient system which will be acceptable to future requirements."

The engineers will meet with EPA officials later this week to make their requests.

Nixon and patrolmen should get together

TRIMONTON, Utah (UPI) — Presidential suggestions seem to reach Northern Utah with the speed of a Southern drawl.

Bud Burnett of Ogden was stopped by the Utah Highway Patrol for going 10 miles under the speed limit on a two-lane road.

He explained he was trying to save gas, at the behest of the President.

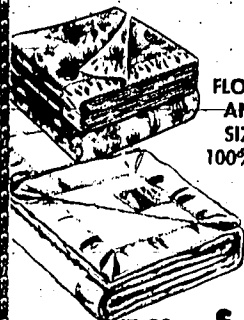

The trooper spared Burnett a ticket but warned him to "speed it up a little."

"I suggested that he and Mr. Nixon get together and come up with one standard policy for conserving energy," said Burnett.

today in brief

19-year-old injured

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old driver suffered cuts and bruises in an accident Wednesday at the intersection of Eighth Avenue East and Second Street East at about 10 a.m. Officers said a vehicle driven by Karl H. Korsten, 37, Twin Falls, and owned by Northrup King, and a vehicle driven by Johnathan Paul Brown, 19, Twin Falls, and owned by Ace Hansen Co., collided at the intersection. Brown suffered minor injuries and was cited for failure to yield right of way. Damage was estimated at $150 to the Keraton vehicle and $100 to the Brown machine.

Farm Bureau elects

BOISE (UPI) — Oscar Plaid, a Grand View area livestock producer, was elected president and Tom Geary of Burley vice president of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation. The 34th annual meeting of the federation also passed a resolution favoring land-use planning at the county level. Field replaces W. Dale Rockwood of Tonn as leader of the largest general farm organization in Idaho.

Supports dam

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus reemphasized his support for early replacement of the American Falls Dam in testimony he asked Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, to present at a congressional hearing today in Washington, D.C. The hearing was conducted by the water and power resources subcommittee of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. Andrus said the citizens of Idaho have not lost interest in replacing the dam.

Hagerman to open bids

HAGERMAN, Idaho (UPI) — Bids will be opened at the Hagerman High School Monday for construction of a new grade school. A $300,000 bond sale will be held during a meeting beginning at 8 p.m.

State group honors 2

BOISE (UPI) — The State Department of Parks and Recreation at its first annual awards banquet honored Gov. Cecil D. Andrus and Gay Davis, former greenbelt coordinator for Boise. Andrus received a life pass certificate to use at state parks and recreation areas. Mrs. Davis received a distinguished citizens award for her work with the greenbelt and as chairwoman of the task force to create a Boise State Park.

Information conflicts

BOISE (UPI) — A representative of the Environmental Protection Agency says the public has received conflicting information on the effects of the Douglas Fir-Tussock moth epidemic. Douglas C. Hansen, Seattle, regional director of the Hazardous Material Control Division, EPA, was a speaker Wednesday at the Intermountain Pest Action Council.

Hansen plans visits

GOODING — Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, will make courthouse visits in the Magic Valley Monday and Tuesday. He will be at the Gooding County Courthouse from 9 to 10 a.m. and will then speak to government classes at Gooding High School. Hansen will speak to government classes at Minico High School Tuesday morning and will be at the Cassia County Courthouse, Burley, from 1:30 to 3 p.m. and at the Minidoka County Courthouse, Rupert, from 3:30 to 4 p.m. He invites all interested citizens to meet with him during the two days.

Gold prices late

BOISE (UPI) — A mining expert says the new official U.S. price of gold at $100 an ounce is 20 years too late and will not make any difference to the Idaho mining industry. "To me it simply looks like recognition of an existing fact," A. J. Teske, executive secretary of the Idaho Mining Association, said. "Our government is finally recognizing the price of gold is nowhere near the old established price." Teske said the new price is an attempt to halt inflation and correct an adverse balance of trade. But he said it will not work. "We're not economists but it doesn't look like the nation's problems will be solved by a change in the official price of gold," he said.

Seattle firm hired

BOISE (UPI) — A Seattle-based firm has been hired by the State Board for Parks and Recreation to prepare plans for the Veterans Memorial State Park in Boise. Parks Director Steve Bly said the contract approved by the board will be subject to the approval of the State Budget Director. Bly said if everything goes well Richard Carothers and Associates will begin the planning process in December. The first phase of construction should begin in November 1975.

Contract awarded

SHOSHONE — WFO Ranch Inc., Jerome, has been awarded a contract for reseeding 5,175 acres in the Shoshone Bureau of Land Management district. The acreage, located about eight miles south of Shoshone, was burned in the Notch 2 fire. It will be seeded to a mixture of wheatgrass and bitterbrush or wheatgrass and saltbrush at a cost of $8,952.75.

Burglary probed

MURTAUGH — Approximately $130 in cash and a quantity of candy and soft drinks were taken in a burglary of the Henry's Produce building here, officers reported today. Sheriff's officers said the building was entered sometime Tuesday night through the back door of the building. They said either the back door was unlocked or the lock was slipped. The office area was entered by removing a window and the money taken from the office area. Two candy machines were pried from the wall in the lunchroom. From a storage area the burglars removed a quantity of soft drink bottles. County officers are continuing to investigate the incident.

North tower erected

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Within four to six weeks a 200-foot high cableway will be in position to hoist materials for the construction of the new Berrine Bridge.

The north tower of the cableway was erected by Allied Construction Co. ironworkers Wednesday.

Allied assistant manager for steel erection, Douglas Smiley, said the south tower will be erected Friday "weather permitting." He estimated the cableway will be operational by late December.

With the erection of the towers Smiley issued a caution to local pilots to be careful when approaching the construction site.

Although the cable and the towers will be marked to Federal Aviation Agency specifications, including lights and other identifying markers, Smiley said the cable is so small "as not to be apparent or obvious" at a distance.

Allied construction superintendent W. R. Roller said the concrete bases to support the 25-ton cableway towers were completed Oct. 29, two days later than predicted.

Roller said the north and south abutments for the new bridge are nearing completion to the point of erecting steel before more concrete can be poured. Workmen have also started excavation on the canyon walls for the approach span pedestals on either end of the bridge, he said.

Roller said the only difficulty at the bridge site so far has been that motorists are not slowing down to the 35 miles-per-hour going through the slight detour at the south end of the bridge. He urged drivers to let up on the gas pedal when driving through the construction zone.

According to Smiley, the cableway will span 2,050 feet and will handle a 31-ton payload. The hoisting trolley on the cable will hang 72 feet above the bridge at cable center, he said.

Smiley said the cableway is designed to "lift" or tilt east and west to move the hoist to either side of the bridge as it is erected.

The cableway towers are supported by four support cables on each tower. The cable trolley will be controlled from a hoist cab on the ground, Smiley said. He said the hoist will be used first for excavation of support pads in the canyon and later to hoist steel beams into place for bridge building.

New landmark

TOWER rises 212 feet above the rim of the Snake River Canyon as a part of the effort to build a new rim-to-rim bridge north of Twin Falls. The tower will support a cable which will be strung across the canyon for transporting bridge materials.

Jerome aides air cooperative plan

By CHIARLOTTE BELL
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County commissioners and City Council members met Wednesday to discuss a cooperative agreement for a new jail facility.

The commissioners are working on an expansion plan for the courthouse which will cost between $400,000 and $450,000. The proposed expansion calls for a joint county-city law enforcement facility.

Claude Bernard, commission chairman, said the city and county law enforcement personnel and equipment will be housed in the new addition in order to combine use of the equipment and to establish a centralized communications center.

Bernard said the two units would be run separately. However, in order for the county to obtain an estimated $100,000 from the State Law Enforcement Planning Agency in the form of a grant a mutual agreement on cost sharing for the new jail facility must be drawn up between the city and county and submitted to the law enforcement agency by Dec. 1.

Bernard said the City Council is expected to meet Monday to discuss the proposal the county presented. "The proposal asks the city to pay the county a lump sum of money to help pay for the cost of operating the joint facility. We are not asking the city to share in the cost of building the new jail, just to help maintain it after it's finished," Bernard said.

The council is expected to meet again with the county Wednesday to try and arrive at a workable agreement.

A public hearing on the agreement has been tentatively set for Nov. 28 at 8 p.m. at the courthouse. The public hearing will be for the purpose of giving county residents an opportunity to view the plans and express their views, Bernard said.

Bernard said the county also plans to meet with officials of Eden and Hazelton to inform them that the jail facility will also be available to them. "It won't cost Eden and Hazelton anything to use the facility unless they would like to contribute," Bernard said.

In addition to the joint law enforcement, the new addition will have a new court room, offices for the prosecuting attorney and public defender and a conference room where the jail is now located.

Also in the plans will be the renovating and expansion of some of the present offices in the courthouse. The design does not call for an apartment for a custodian. "With the communications system, officers will be on duty 24 hours a day," Bernard said.

No cost cut recommended

TWIN FALLS — A councilmen's subcommittee recommended no major cost cutting alternatives for the construction of a new fire station at an informal Twin Falls City Council luncheon here.

The subcommittee was formed last week after the council learned the proposed fire station would cost $420,000 or $120,000 more than the budgeted cost of $300,000.

"When we finally got through, we decided it would be kind of silly to cheapen a building that we would use for 50 years," councilman Henry Woodall said Tuesday. The only cost-saving alternative the committee approved was use of plastic instead of cast iron plumbing, he said. This should save the city $3,200.

Councilman Steve Lincoln said the subcommittee had determined that the building plan is a "whole entity" and that the council should either approve the plans as a whole or scrap them and start anew.

Woodall said that starting over again would mean a six-month delay. This would be costly, Lincoln said, considering a current building costs inflation rate of 15 per cent a year.

Councilman Paul Ostyn expressed dissatisfaction with city architect Harold Garber's planning. He said the architect has the responsibility to either stay within the budgeted costs or tell the council before hand that the budget is not adequate to build the desired structure.

However, Ostyn said most of the extra $120,000 could be raised from $80,000 as yet unallocated revenue sharing funds and from the sale of the fire station property which he estimated would be worth $25,000.

Concerned that costs for the planned new police station will also be way over the amount budgeted, councilman Winston Jones said he would not approve building the new fire station until costs for the police station had been resolved.

Rim panel begins work

The new committee survived nearly an hour of early circling by members Wednesday; they were trying to decide whether they should even accept the job offered by the zoners.

In his letter calling for the special committee, Koutnik said "Some of you are violently opposed to (canyon rim development), others feel that there should be unrestricted development and still others feel that there is probably room for both plans."

The committee members effectively decided that they all must adopt the "room for both" attitude if anything was to be accomplished.

Mead said the special committee was "definitely needed."

"Most of the zoning commission members don't have the expertise on the canyon, I believe, as us," Mead said. "We should seek answers because we think they (zoners) are more lost than we are on the canyon."

Committee member Ella Nelson, president of the Twin Falls League of Women Voters (LWV), said the LWV had made a "tactical error" in suggesting a scenic corridor along the rim during early stages of the ordinance.

"We were being a little idealistic," she said. She suggested that the committee work closely with rim landowners and "possibly hire a professional" in reaching a decision.

A motion by Eleanor Burkhardt was defeated late in the meeting. The 6 to 4 vote strictly along pro and con development lines.

Mrs. Burkhardt's motion would have recommended that the new zoning ordinance be approved, but leaving the canyon rim zoned agricultural until the committee developed a "viable" land use plan.

3 apprehended

BURLEY — Three juveniles have been apprehended in Cassia County in connection with property stolen from four local counties.

One juvenile was found in Deelo Saturday night in a pickup stolen from Blaine County, according to Cassia County sheriff's deputy Don Taylor. The youth apparently gave the officers information which led to the apprehension of two more juveniles in Albion Tuesday night.

With information supplied by one youth, officers located a cache of stolen property in Cassia County that had been taken from Blaine, Jerome, Twin Falls and Cassia Counties.

Charges ranging from grand theft to burglary are pending in all four counties. The three, all from Cassia County, were released by the judge.

Heads roll in Gem agency

The ten statewide priorities announced in Bar's statement include a reduction by one third of the error rate of the Aid to Dependent Children program by July 1, 1974.

Other priorities included:

- Strengthen services to people provided through the regional DECS offices and district health department;

- Improve the quality of care at the Youth Training Center, State Hospital North, State Hospital South and the Idaho State School and Hospital;

- Implement Old Age Assistance Aid to the Blind and Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled conversions by Jan. 1, 1974;

- Develop statewide comprehensive and quality child-care services;

- Establish statewide comprehensive mental health coverage by July, 1974;

- upgrade shelter homes to acceptable standards by Jan. 1975;

- Continue to define and quantify clean-up requirements for all major sources of pollution with orders, compliance schedules and discharge permits;

- Implement an agency-wide management by objectives system by July 1974;

- Provide one-door services for the citizens of Idaho to increase accessibility and to reduce costs.

Minidoka faces high subwater problems

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Flooded basements, sewage running into open ditches and impeded farming operations are problems facing Minidoka County residents yearly because of high subwater problems.

The problem has always been there, but has been coming increasingly into the spotlight as planners and zoners and county governmental units are getting concerned and trying to grapple with it.

Cassia County, just across the river from Minidoka County, doesn't have high subwater problems, though they do have some sewage problems brought on by lava rock beneath the surface. Lava is extremely porous and will carry bacteria and chemicals a great distance.

But Minidoka County has a high subwater base extending from a canal north of Rupert all the way to the Snake River. This area includes all the high density population centers in the county.

According to Gerald Hurst, environmental director of the South Central Idaho Health District, the county is blessed with a "good, filterable soil" which enables construction of septic tanks at a level four feet above the subwater table instead of having to go to the six foot level recommended by the state.

There is good bacterial growth in the soil which easily controls the harmful bacteria that enters from septic tanks and sewage disposal.

The real problem, according to Hurst, are the chemicals, such as nitrates and sulphates, which are being poured into the ground. "Bacteria will be decomposed in a few feet of soil," he said, "but chemicals will keep going down until they reach water," whether it takes a year or hundreds of years.

The nitrates and sulphates can build up to a point where they can cause illness in susceptible people, he said.

The Minidoka County commissioners recently imposed a one year moratorium on building in high subwater areas, except for those divisions already platted, in order to study the problem.

The county high school has sewage running into a nearby drainage ditch because its two septic tanks can't handle the load. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has given the school a deadline, which soon runs out, to hook up to a sewer system.

The two nearest possibilities for a hook-up are Heyburn, which is currently planning a new sewer system, and Rupert, which learned Tuesday that EPA funds for their new system have been delayed again until further study is completed.

Rupert is currently considering a plan for conversion from flood irrigation to sprinkler irrigation in an effort to lower the water table which is especially high during the summer months.

Currently, it is impossible to build homes with basements in some areas of the city and of the county.

In some areas, residents are installing pumps to lower the water table just to be able to flush their toilets. The sewage then runs into open ditches, which, according to Hurst, is illegal. "There are a lot of illegal procedures in the county," Hurst said. "We're taking care of them all the time."

The high school has sewage running into a nearby drainage ditch because its two septic tanks can't handle the load.

Hurst acts as an investigator in these cases, checking them out and advising the residents on changes in sewage disposal systems. If residents don't comply, he turns them over to a legal adviser.

"They've all cooperated voluntarily," he said. "There is always a way of working these problems out."

The system generally used in construction of new homes is that of mounding, or building the ground level up to an acceptable level above the subwater. Alternatives to this method, such as a total evaporation system and individual infiltration units are generally more expensive and less desirable, Hurst said.

"Anytime you have to pump sewage or treat it chemically, it costs money," he said.

"We're facing major problems. We're at the point now where we're going to have to start working together," he said.

Hurst recommended that the zoning board approve no new subdivisions in high subwater areas unless they can hook up to a central sewer system. Areas should be zoned so that no blue homes can be built in high subwater areas, he said.

Surveys have been made and are easily available showing problem areas in the county, he said.

"What we should be doing is looking forward to organized densities," he said, and an organized sewage disposal system in the area, conjunction with other communities in the area.

"I'd like to see a regional system with central pickup that wouldn't need below ground disposal," Hurst said. "The state is currently pushing for such regional systems."

Although communities are currently buying themselves with local sewage systems, Hurst said "in time" there will be regional lagoons. "Although the problem is still critical, the county is 'a lot better off' now than it has been recognized," he said.

Bids aren't out but bowls appear filled

BY FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

College football bowl bids will not officially be extended until Saturday, but there is very little speculation left as to which teams will be invited to participate in the numerous post-season classics.

There are 11 post-season bowls which cater to major college teams, and of those, only two—the Peach Bowl and the Fiesta Bowl—seem to be in doubt about prospective opponents.

The Peach Bowl, which will be played in Atlanta, wanted very much to pit North Carolina State against Kansas, but those two clubs have apparently opted instead for the Liberty Bowl at Memphis, Tenn., leaving Peach Bowl officials in sort of a quandary. A representative of the Peach Bowl is flying to Dallas this Saturday to watch Arkansas in action against Southern Methodist, and if the Razorbacks can defeat the Mustangs then they will be extended a bid. If the Razorbacks lose, however, then it's going to require some heavy thinking on the part of the Peach Bowl people to fill their bowl.

South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Maryland, Kentucky and Pittsburgh are other teams under consideration for a Peach Bowl bid.

The Fiesta Bowl committee isn't faced with as difficult a task. One berth in that bowl goes to the winner of the Western Athletic Conference, which will be either Arizona or Arizona State. Arizona currently leads the league, but the Sun Devils could tie for the championship and if they do then they would get the Fiesta Bowl bid.

Pittsburgh, which plays Army Saturday, is expected to be the visiting team in the Fiesta Bowl if it beats Army.

The other bowls pairings have been pretty much decided.

Rose Bowl—The winner of the Pacific Eight against the winner of the Big Ten. Eighth-ranked UCLA and ninth-ranked Southern California are currently tied for the leadership of the Pac Eight and they will meet on Nov. 24. The Big Ten race will likewise be settled on Nov. 24 when top-ranked Ohio State meets fourth-ranked Michigan.

Cotton Bowl—The Southwest Conference champion, probably Texas, against 10th-ranked Nebraska. Third-ranked Oklahoma, which leads the Big Eight Conference, is ineligible for post-season play because of recruiting violations, and Nebraska has the second best record.

Sugar Bowl—Second-ranked Alabama against fifth-ranked Notre Dame.

Orange Bowl—Sixth-ranked Penn State against seventh-ranked Louisiana State.

Gator Bowl—Tennessee against Texas Tech.

Sun Bowl—Auburn against Missouri.

Astro-Bluebonnet—Houston against Tulane.

Tangerine—Miami (Ohio) against East Carolina.

Simpson gets Hiekok award

NEW YORK (UPI) — O. J. Simpson's spectacular running earned him the edge over the World Series stars Wednesday in the October poll for the annual S. Rae Hiekok professional athlete of the year award.

Simpson polled 46 first place votes and 253 points, nearly matching the total of Oakland A's Bert Campaneris and Reggie Jackson, who finished second and third.

coaches. The veteran Orleto outfielder was named to the fielding team for the sixth time in the past seven seasons.

The 29-year-old centerfielder has made a total of just 10 errors in 420 games spanning the last three seasons.

Both Bench and Gibson had their effectiveness cut by injuries and ailments this season, but the National League managers and coaches selected the St. Louis pitcher for the ninth consecutive year and the Cincinnati catcher for the sixth time.

The East Division champion Orioles dominate the 1973 fielding award list in the American League, with the complete squad as follows: George Scott, Milwaukee, first base; Bobby Grich, Baltimore, second base; Brooks Robinson, Baltimore, third base; Mark Belanger, Baltimore, shortstop; Blair, outfield; Amos Otis, Kansas City, outfield; Mickey Stanley, Detroit, catcher; and Jim Kaat, Chicago, pitcher.

The National League defensive lineup is: Mike Jorgensen, Montreal, first base; Joe Morgan, Cincinnati, second base; Doug Rader, Houston, third base; Roger Metzger, Houston, shortstop; Cesar Cedeno, Houston, outfield; Bobby Bonds, San Francisco, outfield; Willie Davis, Los Angeles, outfield; Bench, Cincinnati, catcher; and Gibson, St. Louis, pitcher.

DU banquet tonight

The Magic Valley chapter of Ducks Unlimited will conduct its 44th annual membership banquet Thursday night at the Turf Club.

The banquet, designed to help raise money for preservation of wetlands and migratory waterfowl habitat, will start with a social hour at 6:30 p.m., with the banquet to be served at 8 p.m.

A special painting and one of the special Remington DU shotguns will be auctioned off as part of the fund raising affair. The banquet ticket includes a year's membership in Ducks Unlimited.

Snub of Ryan seen as major injustice

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Baseball has just pulled off its biggest slight of 1973.

Nolan Ryan, who pitched two no-hitters and struck out a big league record 383 batters, didn't win the Cy Young Award in the American League.

An incredible injustice. Here's a man who won 21 games for the California Angels; the worst hitting team in the league, losing out to Baltimore's Jim Palmer, who compiled one more victory with a club that won a division title.

"I don't know what a guy has to do to win the award," said Angel general manager Harry Dalton.

I have to admit it. I'm supposed to be impartial but I'm Nolan Ryan's biggest fan. As a person and a pitcher. But the decision by the Baseball Writers Association of America (two writers in each American League city voted) clearly ranked right there with Dick Williams' decision to leave Ryan off the All-Star squad.

Williams' decision was rectified by Bowie Kuhn. The Cy Young decision was irrevocable.

At first I thought I was being provincial. Until I talked to some baseball people closer to the situation than I am.

The general consensus: Palmer won the award because (1) he had been close but never first in the voting before and (2) he had won 20 games for four straight seasons.

The voting was for 1973, though. Not '70, '71, '72 and '73.

Ryan's reaction was typical. "I felt my statistics were strong enough to win and I'm kind of disappointed that I didn't," he said. "But I really figured Palmer would win it since he had more momentum going into the voting."

"What I mean is that he was pitching for a team that won its division. I really didn't become a candidate for the award until the last few weeks."

Then he added: "Lose sleep over it? No way."

Breaking Sandy Koufax's 1965 strikeout total of 382, Ryan struck out 10 or more batters 23 times. Another major league record.

Would the writers have voted for the Texas flamethrower over Palmer if he would have duplicated Johnny Vander Meer's feat of consecutive no-hitters?

Maybe. But, maybe not. Ryan was only six outs away from that achievement May 19 at Anaheim, Calif. Ironically, he was pitched against Baltimore that night and lighthitting Mark Belanger spoiled the bid by blooping a single to center that Ken Berry just missed catching.

Ryan went out to lose in 11 innings.

Then there was his one-hitter against the New York Yankees Aug. 29. Thurman Munson fisted a pitch behind second base.

No man has ever pitched three no-hitters in one season. Oh, well, there's always next year. As the nice guy with the friendly smile from Alvin, Tex., says, why lose any sleep over it.

Do-nothing czars hit by Chandler

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Former baseball commissioner Albert "Happy" Chandler said Wednesday current commissioner Bowie Kuhn and his two predecessors have been "stoooges" for club owners and what baseball needs is a strong, Pete Rozelle-type leader.

"It's a pity, because baseball can't continue to prosper unless someone has a strong hand like Rozelle in the National Football League," Chandler said in an interview with the Hollywood Sun-Tattler.

Chandler said owners wanted a yes-man when he was commissioner from 1945 to 1951 and they still want one now.

"Ford Frick was the biggest yes-man in sports and William Eckert was an American tragedy. Kuhn is smart enough not to make a decision until the owners tell him to," Chandler said. "Frick, Eckert and Kuhn are a bunch of stoooges."

McNeil cut

HOUSTON (UPI) — Coach Sid Gillman of the Houston Oilers Wednesday disputed reports he released veteran receiver Clifton McNeil because of a salary disagreement.

Marshall says Expos' defense enough to ask to be traded

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Mike Marshall, the National League's top relief pitcher last season, said Wednesday he didn't want to go back to Montreal next year and play behind the Expos' terrible defense.

"Last year ... second base, (Ron) Hunt, terrible," Marshall said in an interview in which he looked off the Expos' defensive shortcomings position, by position.

"Who the hell wants to go back and pitch for that any more?" asked Marshall, who is completing his Ph. D. in physiology at Michigan State. "That's how I feel. I've made that point clear to the manager and general manager and will continue to do so."

The right-handed relief pitcher was second in the league's Cy Young Award balloting after a season of 30 saves, a 14-11 record, and a 1.66 earned run average for Montreal.

"There's no way we can play another year with Ron Hunt," he said. "In fact, if I felt I had to go back and play with Ron Hunt next year that would be a very strong deciding factor of not going back."

"Third base? We have absolutely no defense. Zero. You can put a high school kid out there and get the same production out of our defense." Manager Gene Mauch of Montreal had Ron Fairly in right, Ken Singleton in center, and platooners Ron Woods and Bob Bailey in left. Bailey also played third base.

"I can get excited about playing with (shortstop) Tim Lincecum any day of the week and that can keep me excited for the whole season," Marshall said. "I got excited for the last month when Larry Lintz was playing second base."

"I can accept mistakes of aggression," he said. "But I can't accept lackadaisical defensive play or concern. That would drive me out of the game in a minute."

"I don't have to put up with that. I've seen it on other clubs. I had to play with it in Detroit ... in Seattle. They cared only about their offensive statistics."

"When I'm in there pitching them right to my defense — hand them right to them," Marshall said.

"I don't want to go back and go through that again where I perform and do everything I can do and I don't get defensive help."

Sporting News picks top defensive stars

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Baltimore's Paul Blair was a unanimous choice in the American League and Bob Gibson and Johnny Bench formed the battery in the National League, in the Sporting News' lineups for the leagues' all-star fielding teams Wednesday.

Blair was the only unanimous choice among the line players selected in the annual poll of managers and

Cougars cut Kentucky lead

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Steve Jones sank a 12-foot jump shot with 23 seconds to play Wednesday night to clinch a 107-102 victory for Carolina over Kentucky as the second-place Cougars cut the Colonels' lead to a half game in the ABA East.

Carolina, the only team to beat Kentucky this season, turned that trick for the third time by outscoring the Colonels, 8-3, in the final three minutes.

Playing without their ace, Billy Cunningham, in the final four minutes, the Cougars missed the lead at 101-100 on a basket by Jim Chones. Tom Owens then tapped in a bucket to send Carolina ahead, 103-102.

After Dan Iszel made two free throws for Kentucky, Jones came through with his clinching basket.

Age is the best experience.

Buckeyes rank first in U.S. on defense

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State, which already leads the nation in defense against scoring, has taken over the leadership in total defense as well, according to the latest football statistics released Wednesday by the National Collegiate Sports Service.

The powerful Buckeyes have allowed their opponents only 181.1 yards and 2.5 points per game in soaring to an 8-0 record.

Penn State, another team with a perfect record, ranks first in rushing defense with an average of only 85.7 yards allowed per game and Nebraska tops the nation in pass defense with an average of only 40 yards allowed per game.

Alabama has taken over the punting leadership with an average of 44.3 yards per kick.

Jackson will ask $150,000

OAKLAND (UPI) — Reggie Jackson, the Most Valuable Player in the American League, says he wants $150,000 for playing with the Oakland Athletics next season.

After it was announced that the slugger outfielder was a unanimous choice for MVP Tuesday, Jackson said he would ask his business partner and agent to start negotiations at $150,000 with owner Charles O. Finley.

Jackson said he expects to bargain somewhat with Finley but won't go below $125,000.

"I suppose I could ask for $200,000 if I were playing in New York," said Jackson. "But this is Oakland and we're never going to draw two million here, so I'll have to lower my sights and settle on something less."

"I want a one-year contract. A three-year contract for me would have to approach a half-million. I haven't talked to Charlie yet about the contract."

BYU end NCAA's top receiver

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jay Miller of Brigham Young continues to lead the nation in pass receiving by a wide margin, according to the latest football figures released today by the National Collegiate Sports Service.

Miller is averaging 10.1 catches per game, which gives him a margin of more than four catches a game over New Mexico State's one-eyed receiver, Hank Cook, and Pennsylvania's Don Clune.

Miller has grabbed 81 passes so far this season, which is 16 more than Cook, even though Cook has played in three more games.

Bill Davis of Alabama has taken over the lead in kick-scoring with an average of eight points a game and Tony Pawlik of Rutgers has tied Mickey Connolly of Holy Cross for the leadership in interceptions with an average of 0.8 a game.

Rick Kimbrough of Mississippi leads in punt returns with an average of 10.3 yards per runback and James Sykes of Rice is tops in kickoff returns with an average return of 30.8 yards.

Indiana nips Spurs 84-83

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Indiana's Freddie Lewis popped in the game's only three-point goal with 19 seconds left Wednesday night to anchor an 84-83 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

The Pacers and Spurs were close the entire game in which the score was tied 12 times.

San Antonio had a chance with one second left when 6-11 Coby Dietrick grabbed a rebound right under the Spurs' goal, but he was called for a rebound foul and Indiana killed the clock.

Kansas City tips Rockets

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Newly-acquired Jimmy Walker scored 16 of his 30 points in the last quarter and overtime period Wednesday night, leading the Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 118-116 victory over the Houston Rockets.

Walker, playing against his old teammates, scored the first bucket in the extra period and fed Butch Kormives on a fast break layup for a 110-104 lead that the Rockets never overcame.

Rudy Tomjanovich, who scored 35 points, missed a desperation 30-footer with one second to play.

Celtics ruin Bill's return

BOSTON (UPI) — Jo Jo White's 28 points paced the Boston Celtics to their seventh straight win, downing the Seattle Super Sonics, 110-104, Wednesday night.

The game marked the return of former Celtic great Bill Russell to Boston, this time as Seattle's coach.

Boston led throughout the first half and went to the locker room at halftime leading, 51-47.

The Sonics took advantage of the Celtic letdown to score eight straight points and pull to within one point at 9:47 of the third period. Milt Williams sent Seattle ahead for the first time, 78-70, seconds later.

Watson blows into six-stroke lead, ties Pinehurst record

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Tom Watson, young and winless in his second year on the PGA tour, admits that back in February when he held the Hawaiian Open lead he choked and blew it.

Now, with nine months more experience under his belt but still winless, he's back out front again—this time by six strokes going into today's sixth round of the $500,000 World Open Golf Championship. And this time he plans for things to be different.

The 23-year-old pro's nine-under-par 62 Wednesday tied the course record set by Gibby

Gilbert a week ago today in the opening round of the World and left Gilbert, in front of the field for four rounds, playing catch-up golf. Watson was at 347, eight under par, and Gilbert was second at 353, two under after a stumbling 73 Wednesday.

"I had a lead like this in Hawaii, but I choked and blew it," said Watson. "I hope I learned something from that and won't choke and blow it this time."

He led by four strokes after the second round in Hawaii, and by three strokes after the third round. But a fat 75 on the final day dropped him to third place.

His best lesson, he said, was learning not to "try and rush things" when in the lead.

Watson toured the front nine with three birdies Wednesday, added another on No. 10, then faltered with a bogey on No. 13, a 374-yard, par four hole on Pinehurst Country Club's 7,007-yard No. 2 course.

Then came the 438-yard par four No. 14 hole. His drive landed, by his estimate, 148 yards from the hole. His second shot, with an eight iron, took a couple of hops and rolled into the cup for an eagle.

"From then on, I guess I played sort of in a daze," said Watson, who graduated two years ago with a psychology degree from Stanford. "After that I thought I could make anything."

He did, finishing with four straight birdies on putts of 10, one, 20 and 14 feet.

It was the best round Watson had ever played and the eagle was his first ever on a par four hole.

"I don't think you can explain a round like this," said the Kansas City, Mo., native. "You just get a feeling and everything starts going right..."

"I drove the ball fine all day. I had a lot of good iron shots and my putting was OK. I just had everything together."

While Watson had everything together, things came apart for Gilbert on the back nine. He had an eagle and a bogey on the front side and made the turn one-under.

Then came bogeys on 10, 12, 14 and 15 followed by a single birdie on No. 18. In all, he lost 11 strokes to the surging Watson in 13 holes.

"I think on the back side maybe I tried to force things too much," he said. "But I've still got a chance to win."

Redskins deny drug problem on squad

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington Redskins coach George Allen denied Wednesday that there is a drug problem on his team, after the Washington Post quoted a veteran player as saying that about one-third of his teammates use amphetamines before games.

George Burman, an eight-year veteran guard who is not on the active roster this year, was quoted by the Post as estimating that about 13 Redskins players regularly use the pep pills and that he used them regularly from 1965 through last season.

"When I say 13, that's an estimate," he said. "I couldn't give you an accurate minimum other than myself as one. I don't know on a week-to-week basis... it's a private thing. Nobody goes out in the middle of the room and throws them up like circus peanuts and catches them and says 'there goes one down,'" he told Post writer William Gildea.

But Burman said the pills are not dispersed by the team's doctor or trainer on the Redskins or on most teams anymore.

"The league has gone 100 degrees on the subject," he said. "They used to provide stimulants through the club doctor and trainer. Now they will not be involved in any way in the use of stimulants. Amphetamines were available my first three years on the Rams but not my last two and not my three years with the Redskins," he said.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stock prices opened lower in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday.

Shortly after the opening, the Dow Jones Industrial average was off 0.60 to 869.28. Declines topped advances by nearly two-to-one among the 300 issues traded.

Stocks plummeted in stepped-up trading Wednesday in a session featuring heavy institutional selling. The Dow declined sharply for the fourth consecutive session, losing 21.15 to 869.88.

The 30 blue chip index has sunk some 117 points in a little more than two weeks.

Analysts said Wall Street continues to add up the probable economic difficulties likely to come in the coming months and years due to the energy crisis. They said the possible economic consequences have left investors badly shaken.

Commodity Futures

WASHINGTON—The Maritime Administration disclosed Monday the rate on Russian grain movements for the Nov. 10-Dec. 9 period will be $28.96 a ton, a more than 50 per cent rise from the current 30 day period.

The increase was attributed to the rapid October increase in Gulf lowlands. Commercial charter rates pushing up the US-UKR agreed index based upon last December being 100 to 314.8 per cent. For the 30 day period ending Nov. 9, the rate on grain to Black Sea ports was $18.68. The index stood at 205.2 per cent.

MORE SUGAR

HAPUR, India (CNS)—Sugar output in India for the current season 1973-74 is likely to reach 45 Lakh tons, sources indicated, an increase from last season's production of 38.72 Lakh tons and 31.10 Lakh tons in the 1972-73 crop year. A Lakh ton equals 100,000 metric tons.

Despite the increase in production last season, the current season stocks in the 1972-73 crop year were only 6 Lakh tons, or about the same level as in October, 1972.

SUGAR FIRM EARNINGS INCREASE

OGDEN, Utah (UPI)—Amalgamated Sugar Co. today reported net income of $7,102,000 during fiscal 1973, an increase of more than $1 million from the previous year.

The earnings, based on sales of $128.6 million, amounted to $3.44 per common share.

In fiscal 1972, Amalgamated earned $6,088,000, or $2.04 a share, on sales of $118.9 million, but took an extraordinary loss of $714,000 representing abandonment and disposition of its Lewiston, Utah, plant, dropping net income to $5,374,000 or $2.50 a share.

Amalgamated operates sugar beet processing plants at Rupert, Twin Falls and Nampa, Idaho, and Nysa, Ore.

Market report in brief

LOCUST THREAT

WASHINGTON—Unofficial estimates run as high as 15 per cent for the crops affected by the locust blight in the Australian states of New South Wales and Victoria—the U. S. agriculture attaches in Canberra reports.

This year has been a very bad year for locusts in Australia since it follows a drought which caused the locusts to spread widely in search for food and to lay their eggs over a very large area, rather than in the normal concentrations.

COPPER HIGHER

LONDON (CNS)—Despite soaring interest rates in the UK, which should normally have dampened the spot premium, cash copper firmed up sharply Tuesday afternoon. The backwardation widened out to around 1.03 alone stage, although the Bank of England's minimum lending rate was raised by 1/4 cent to a record 13 per cent. This was followed by a 2 1/2 cent hike in the base rates of the four major clearing banks in Britain to 13 per cent.

GEM SPUDS

CHICAGO—May Idaho Russet potato futures closed 18 cents per cwt. higher Wednesday in a moderate trade that saw 18 contracts change hands.

May opened 10 cents higher at 934 and climbed to a high of 942 where it settled. Good commission house demand and light short covering provided the major positive features.

North pointed out that South was only down 1300 and that East and West could bid six notrump and score 1440, but South was not mollified.

Neither were their East-West teammates. The hand occurred in an important team match and six spades became the contract. At the other table, South led the ace of hearts and gave his partner a ruff to set the slam and win the match for his team.

His teammates couldn't scalp North. That just isn't done in the American Contract Bridge League but they did the next worst thing. They never let him play with them again.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

♦ CARD Sense ♦

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
			1♠
Pass	3♦	Pass	?
You, South, hold:
♠ A 2 ♥ 5 ♦ A Q J 8 7 ♣ A K J 6 5
What do you do now?
A — You are going to bid at least six and are interested in seven. You can Blackwood—but the expert bid is four clubs.
TODAY'S QUESTION
You do bid four clubs and your partner bids four hearts, what do you do now?

Answer Tomorrow

Back in the '30s cartoonist H.T. Webster used to draw a daily comic panel. Upon occasion he drew some about bridge. One showed a teeped. The voice coming from inside said, "Ugh! Lone Elk bid one more psychic, I scalp him."

North—a well-known psychic bidder had promised his teammates he would not open psychics but the temptation of this hand was too much for him. The words: "One notrump" came out of his mouth. East's two spades, South's four hearts and West's double followed naturally as did a seven trick set and a near stroke of apoplexy by South.

Gift presented

MRS. WILLA FORD, Shoshone, left, receives an "unusual" gift from a neighbor, Mrs. Elizabeth Thorne.

Early holiday gift presented

SHOSHONE — An early Christmas gift was presented Mrs. Willa Ford, Shoshone, recently.

The receiving and the giving of this particular gift touches on a "human element that is touching and a bit faith promoting."

Mrs. Ford has arthritis and neighbors have in recent months observed that she might be in need of a telephone extension near her bed.

The desire to do something about it was put into action by another of the senior citizen neighbors, Mrs. Elizabeth Thorne. (Mrs. Thorne is 81 herself).

Mrs. Thorne took it upon herself to go door-to-door in the neighborhood and solicit funds to finance installing the phone for Mrs. Ford. Mrs. Louis Anderson, another neighbor, assisted with plans.

"The response was marvelous. All were more than happy to donate to the project and it was only a matter of contacting them until the entire amount, plus a little extra, had been collected."

FORTUNE COOKIES
Legg
1-3 cup sugar
2 1/2 tablespoons corn oil
2 tablespoons water
1/4 cup cornstarch
Beat eggs until fluffy. Beat in sugar, a little at a time, until mixture is very light yellow and thick. Fold in corn oil. Blend water and some of the egg mixture into cornstarch and gently stir into remaining egg mixture.
Heat a heavy seasoned griddle medium hot. Drop heaping tablespoons of batter on the griddle and spread to about a four inch circle one eighth inch thick. Cook until lightly browned, five to eight minutes, then turn carefully and brown the other side. Place strip of paper with fortune written on it in the center of each cookie and while still hot, fold sides to center. With fortune inside, bend cookie in half across folds with edges to outside. Set in small glass until cool. Makes one dozen.

OES chapter meets

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Chapter 29, Order of Eastern Star, met Tuesday night with worthy matron Mable Clark and worthy patron James Clark presiding. Mrs. Clark announced that the worthy grand matron would visit Dec. 1. She also announced that the chapter will accept donations on an Afghan. Proceeds will go to the OES International Fund. Balloting for new members was conducted. Reports were heard on shut-ins and ill members. A Thanksgiving reading was given by Sue Remaley.

Mrs. Al Robinson gave a report on her year as worthy matron, 1972. A few highlights of the general grand chapter meeting in Denver, Colo., were given by Geneva Mense. Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Walker, Mrs. Erma Tucker, Mrs. Louisa Montgomery and Mrs. Dorothy Carter.

ERA favored, but equality wins

By RICHARD CIARNOCK
 BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — While legislators debate the merits of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), work by an Idaho attorney and others is making the need for it unnecessary. That, at least, is the opinion of Allen R. Derr, Boise, who successfully argued the first of three breakthrough cases on sex discrimination before the U.S. Supreme Court.
 As the attorney for a Boise divorcee, Derr argued a case which invalidated a 19th century Idaho law that gave men preference over women in administering estates of the deceased.
 Since then other lawyers have won the right for an Illinois father to rear his motherless illegitimate children, and for a woman Air Force officer to have a dependency allowance for her student husband. And the high court now plans to hear arguments on a challenge to the widow's tax exemption.
 Derr, a former newspaperman who wanted to do more than just write about those who are unfortunate, favors the ERA which is now awaiting ratification of the states. But, regardless of what happens to it, he is convinced these three historic cases guarantee the same rights.

 "I'm still in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment because court costs are so expensive," Derr said, adding the courtroom route is a "piecemeal approach to the problem."
 "But the stage is set now where we can achieve equality without it — if that becomes necessary."
 In the step-by-step erosion of sex discrimination through the three court rulings, Derr said, the nation's highest court has shifted to the government the burden of proof that discriminatory laws are valid.
 "In terms of what the 'victim' of such laws must prove, he said, this makes a big difference.
 "It makes it so much easier for an individual male or female who is victimized by a sex discrimination law to challenge that law in the courts," he said.

 Although Derr strongly believes in equality of the sexes, under the law, he concedes there are times when the differences between male and female must be recognized at the bar of justice.
 "There should be sex discrimination in the area of forcible rape, for instance," Derr said, "because there are physiological differences."
 "Only a female can be the subject of an abortion," he said, adding he personally believes such decisions as those involved in abortions belong to the doctors and the individuals concerned, not society.
 Now 46, Derr has practiced law for the past 14 years. After a brief stint as an assistant state attorney general he hung out his shingle and began establishing his own law practice. Today, in partnership with a younger brother and others, he is the senior partner in one of the larger law firms in the state — one recognized especially for its work in criminal law and personal injury cases.

Altrusans welcome guests

DEAR ABBY: I write a syndicated newspaper column titled "Bernstein on Words." Recently I received the following letter:

Dear Mr. Bernstein: While celebrating my 45th wedding anniversary, I recalled that 40 years ago my wife had an affair with another man. My question—Was I, or am I, a cuckold?

Abby: all that came to my mind was that juvenile joke, "How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood," with a variation something like, "Just how old is an olden chuck when an olden cuckold's he?"

However, since this question seems much more up your alley than mine, how would you answer it?

TED BERNSTEIN, CONSULTING EDITOR, NEW YORK TIMES

Cuckold or old kook?

DEAR TED: If the wife had only one affair—even briefly—her mate was a cuckold briefly. If she had another one, he's a cuckold for sure. If she's had them off and on over the years, he's not a cuckold—quite the reverse. He's an old kook!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is nothing now. It's my mother in law. My husband and I are the proud parents of a new baby, and I have returned to work part-time. Since we didn't know a reliable sitter, I asked my mother in law if she would babysit while I worked half days, and I offered to pay her. To my surprise, she accepted!

Abby, my grandmothers would be insulted if they were offered money to stay with their grandchildren. This is the first grandchild.

My husband and I have been fighting about this ever since it came up, and he says I am wrong—and if I don't feel right handing his mother money, I should just stick it in her purse and not make a big deal out of it.

Abby, do you think I'm wrong? I wonder just how many grandmothers accept money for taking care of their grandchildren?

WORKING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You failed to mention an important factor. How well off is your mother in law? If she must work in order to support herself, obviously she can't afford to sit gratis. In any case, you'd have to pay another sitter, so why grieve?

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a chaser. I knew it when I married him, but nobody's perfect, and besides he has a lot going for him. For instance, he's a good provider and he's not stingy with his money. And he's also a wonderful father to our seven children, he's devout in his religion, and hasn't mis-ed mass in 13 years, no matter how hung over he was.

His last fling was with a girl who used to call here and try to disguise her voice, but I always knew it was her. She'd say it was a "business call."

Once this girl called and talked to ME. She said she was in love with my husband and he was in love with her, and she asked me why I didn't give him up. I told her I'd give him up, but she'd have to take our seven kids, their ages are 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 10, and 12. She hung up. I think she must have fainted. That's the last time she called here.

Just thought this might be helpful to other wives with my kind of problem.

MARY SUNSHINE

DEAR MARY: Thanks, but it's risky to make an offer you'd never honor.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TIGHT LIPPED AND EXASPERATED IN DETROIT": Whether you sell your kisses for a dollar apiece or a hundred dollars is beside the point. The principle is the same. Kiss that Lochinvar goodbye, with a handshake.

Newlyweds feted at Richfield

RICHFIELD — Open house was held Nov. 3 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Crowther for their son and his bride, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Alan Crowther.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neilson, St. Anthony. The wedding ceremony was performed Oct. 26 at the Idaho Falls LDS Temple by President Harrison Barrus.

Attending the couple at the temple were, in addition to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Neilson, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Fredericksen, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. David Williams, Salt Lake City, and Mrs. Dan Butler, Taft, Calif., sisters of the bridegroom; Bishop and Mrs. Delbert Tree, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Jaynes, Mr. and Mrs. Osmond Crowther, a great uncle of the bridegroom, Fountain Green, Utah; Dr. and Mrs. J. O. McMerkeley, Pocatello; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Neilson, Archer; Mrs. Chad Neilson, St. Anthony, and Robert Crowther, brother of the bridegroom.

A luncheon was hosted after the wedding by the bridegroom's parents at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin Weckon, Idaho Falls, a cousin of the bridegroom.

A reception, held at the Egin Bensch Ward cultural hall that evening, featured the wedding party before a pink lighted backdrop with large bouquets of pink and maroon at each end of the reception line.

The bride made her wedding dress, fashioned of brocade satin with lace-edged ruffles over the shoulders. Her long veil of net was held in place with flowers and lace. She held a bouquet of red, pink and white roses arranged with baby breath cascade.

Bridesmaids were Donette Neilson, Trudy Neilson, sisters of the bride; Kristen Birch, a friend, and Leanne Crowther, sister of the bridegroom.

Best man was Charles Holloway, and Robert Crowther, brother of the bridegroom, was usher.

The three-tiered wedding cake had a pink winding staircase to the bride and bridegroom on top. It was baked by Ricks College bakery.

The stage of the room was decorated in a garden scene, centered with a lighted fountain with picture in back shrubbery and on the sides.

Guests were served at round lace covered tables decorated with centerpieces of mirror and bouquet of pink and maroon flowers.

Ellen Neilson, sister of the bride, and Jill Crowther, sister of the bridegroom, were gift bearers.

Registering the guests was Lorna Holloway. The gifts were displayed on lace covered tables by Valen Orr, Olean Orr and Vanetta Rhodehouse.

At the open house at Richfield, gifts were displayed on pink lace-covered tables by Donette and Trudy Neilson.

Decorations of pink and maroon streamers and bouquet of pink and maroon flowers, were arranged by Mrs. Jerome Roesler, Richfield, sister of the bridegroom.

Refreshments were served by Letty Tree, Anita Tree, Ellen Neilson and Jill Crowther.

The newlyweds reside in Midvale, Utah, where the bridegroom is employed by the Caterpillar Co., Salt Lake City.

Acupuncture said cure for addicts

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — Several Washington drug control workers claim that they have found a nonaddictive alternative to methadone for curbing drug addiction — the ancient Chinese art of acupuncture.

In experiments conducted in September at the Acupuncture Clinic of America here, four addicts being treated with methadone were brought painlessly through drug withdrawal and now appear to have lost all interest in the use of drugs.

The experiment was conducted by Dr. Su Liang Ku, a China-trained acupuncturist who said he also has used the treatment successfully to detoxify addicts in Burma.

While acupuncture has been used to detoxify drug addicts elsewhere in the United States and in Hong Kong, the American Acupuncture Clinic experiment is the first known instance of its use in Washington.

(Acupuncture is most commonly used to detoxify medical patients who have become addicted through the use of pain killers.)

Now, officials of the Capitol East Drug Abuse Prevention and Education Center and RAP Inc. would like to see the expensive acupuncture treatments made available to addicts in the area under a Medicare arrangement.

In the Washington-area, acupuncture treatment cost about $50 for the first visit and $25 each thereafter.

The director of the American Acupuncture Clinic, Dr. Frederick D. Lewis, decided to conduct the local experiment after learning of Dr. Ku's work with addicts in Burma. RAP and the Capitol East Center were asked to provide addicts willing to undergo the treatment.

One of those who volunteered was Dr. James Diggs, 53, who has been an addict for more than 30 years. Diggs said he began using drugs during World War II in Persia.

About 27 months ago, Diggs said, he was put on methadone maintenance. "They told me then that it would take from 18 months to two years to cure my addiction," he said.

"But they knew when they placed me on methadone that they had no way of detoxifying methadone addicts," he said.

Diggs said the methadone affected his liver and kidney functions, and his body began to swell. He said he also began to suffer constant headaches and respiratory ailments. When he was taken to the Acupuncture Clinic of America in September, Diggs said, he walked stooped and with a cane.

Diggs said he went for four days without taking methadone before reporting to the clinic and was feeling extremely ill. "But once I got off that table, it felt as though I had never been sick. I have never felt as good in my life as I did on that table."

Diggs said he now not only physically feels better than he can ever recall, but that the acupuncture "took him over the hump" in developing a psychological resistance to drugs.

Singapore stops fuel supply to US forces

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore, the biggest refining center in Southeast Asia, has cut off all its hefty fuel supplies to American forces in the Pacific because of Arab threats to stop supplies to the island republic, industry sources said today.

The fuel and oil cut was expected to hit vessels of the U.S. 7th Fleet, land-based planes in Thailand and ground units throughout the area.

South Vietnam, Cambodia and Thailand also are likely to be hit by the ban, U.S. tax dollars pay for most of the fuel used in Cambodia and Vietnam, and some used in Thailand.

The Philippines already has cut back its supplies to U.S. forces by 25 per cent and a complete cutoff is probable. There have been press reports of the Japanese government cutting off jet fuel to the U.S. Air Force in Japan.

With Singapore closed as a source, U.S. forces in Asia "are running out of alternatives" for oil and gas, an industry expert here said.

Andrus seeks voice on fisheries panel

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus served notice on the Pacific Marine Fisheries Commission today trying for representation on the Columbia River Compact.

"We feel that the existing compact, established in 1918, is outdated and should include representation of the State of Idaho and of the sport fishing agencies of Oregon and Washington," he said.

"Our argument is simple," he said. "As an example, the harvest of upriver spring chinook in and upstream from the Columbia River was 143,000 fish in 1972."

"The ocean-chught harvest, both sport and commercial, is unknown," he said. "Idaho produces 56 per cent of the upriver spring chinook run—but our share of the harvest is only 4.5 per cent."

He said the story has been much the same for steelhead. "By virtue of the Columbia River fishery, are we not to a voice in the regulation of our own fisheries?" Andrus asked. "We hope to see a judgment in this matter based upon good faith rather than vested interests."

"We feel we are for a major share in an adromous fishery are entitled to an equal determining how the policy will be managed."

Andrus also urged mission to offer support of reclassification of the Idaho Primitive Salmon River Basin wilderness and in classification of the salmon river under the Wild Rivers Act.

Reducing speed to 50 leaves gas tank fuller

(c) Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — Slowing down to 50 miles an hour from 70 would make a 35-mile trip about 12 minutes longer, but it also leaves your gas tank fuller and your pocketbook heavier.

No one can make an accurate guess how much gasoline would be saved if the United States' 113 million passenger cars never traveled faster than 50 m.p.h., as President Nixon requests. But engineers agree the savings would be significant in conserving the fast-dwindling pool of gasoline.

Slowing down reduces auto fuel consumption mainly by lessening air resistance, which automotive engineer Dick Place says is the biggest single factor in energy consumption at 70 m.p.h.

Place, who heads Ford Motor Co. emission and power-train product planning operations in Dearborn, Mich., says a typical six-cylinder engine must draw on more than 10 per cent of its power at 70 m.p.h. just to overcome the resistance formed by the car plowing through the air.

But at 50 m.p.h., the car needs only about five per cent of its power to overcome air resistance and hold a constant speed.

Proper aerodynamic styling — such as the sleek, low profiles of many sports cars — would lessen the gasoline threat of most cars, allowing them to slice through the air instead of overpowering resistance with sheer muscle.

A 70-m.p.h. speed also puts a heavier work load on engine components, each of which requires energy to operate, Place said. The electrical system's alternator, the air pump, which is connected to emission-control apparatus; the power-steering pump and compressor for air-conditioning units can relax significantly when the car's speed slows to 50 m.p.h.

Place said, however, the owner of a typical four-cylinder compact car could expect to squeeze about three extra miles per gallon by slowing down. Owners of bigger cars may get an extra 1 to 1½ miles per gallon.

That kind of fuel conservation obviously can help bail the United States out of its energy crisis. More important is how motorists drive at lower speeds, where most driving is done in the United States.

No matter how well a car is tuned or how small the engine, fuel consumption can spurt by 50 to 75 per cent as a result of bad driving habits.

Here's what you can do to get more miles per gallon:

- Accelerate moderately. Engines soak up the most gas just in getting a car rolling from a dead stop. Once it's moving, Newton's well-known law of inertia keeps it rolling and cuts down on fuel consumption. By avoiding quick starts, you'll not only save gas, but wear-and-tear on engine, transmission and tires as well.
- Move into high gear as soon as possible while accelerating moderately. This is the most economical gear in a car. The lower the gear, the more gas is used. Drivers of cars with automatic transmissions need practice with a delicate foot on a gas pedal to get into top gear.
- Don't idle. A car's engine requires a much richer mixture of gas when idling to prevent a stall. If you're going to be stopped for a while, turn off the ignition.

Plastics cut auto weights

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — If plastics were used more extensively in today's cars, autos would contribute far less to the energy crisis because a lighter car generally consumes less fuel.

Stuart M. Frey, Ford Motor Co. chief car planning and research engineer, said this week at the national plastics exposition in Chicago that use of plastics in cars has risen from 22 pounds per vehicle in 1960 to 138 pounds in 1974 models. He forecast 1980 plastic usage of up to 300 pounds per vehicle with weight, subsequent cost savings and design flexibility as prime incentives.

Frey noted that a petroleum shortage inhibits automakers not only because the auto fuel supply is cut but also because they can't obtain enough petroleum derivatives to make plastic components. Auto industry suppliers now are having a rough time getting enough plastic.

Frey said Ford expects the supply of petrochemicals, which go into plastics, will "continue to be tight" until 1977 when he said a "sufficient number of petrochemical plants should have expanded" to alleviate the shortage.

Because of the energy crisis, cars of the future will be smaller, lighter and more efficient to operate, Frey said.

Ski, bike shop remodels

TWIN FALLS — A remodeling celebration will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Olson's, a specialty ski and bike shop located at 637 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The shop, owned by Jim and Jan Olson, has just completed a remodeling and expansion program which has about doubled previous show room and sales area. A former real estate office in the same building has become part of the shop by removal of a center wall.

There will be a number of ski films being shown including one on the National Hot Dog Championships held last year in Sun Valley and other resorts around the nation.

This year the store added lines of back pack equipment and bicycles.

The open-house which also will feature refreshments will run from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Farmer critics change

MOSCOW — People who formerly criticized farmers for "over-producing" are now urging substantial increases in U. S. agricultural output, the retiring president of the Idaho County Agents Association said here.

Frank H. Jacobs, Rexburg, said widespread concern over the possible development of food shortages has heightened the public's interest in the progress of agricultural technology.

"More than ever before, county agents are being challenged to help farmers increase food production," Jacobs told his fellow-workers in the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service.

The Madison County extension agent called for progress in four sectors of the farm front:

— Finding "new and better ways to increase food production without squandering our natural resources."

— Giving special attention to conserving materials which are in tight supply — such as fuel and fertilizer.

— Safeguarding water resources with water-stretching crop production practices.

— Protecting the environment through development of "new ways to combat the food-destroying menace of insects, weeds and disease."

Opinion leaders in Idaho are "beginning to realize that agricultural progress is a continuing process — and that it cannot be turned on and off at will," Jacobs said.

"Only through a stepped-up program of research and extension can the food demands of tomorrow be met," he emphasized.

Pointing to past achievements of agricultural technology, Jacobs asked: "What would the food situation be like today if agricultural science had not developed grain varieties resistant to smut, rust and other diseases?"

He continued, "Grain disease problems have been held under control through farsighted, long-continuing research and extension programs at institutions such as the University of Idaho."

"To a great extent, Idaho's potato industry owes its existence to the improved cultural practices and disease control methods initiated and pushed along by extension and research workers."

Jacobs served for one year as president of the county agents organization.

Protein source

PLASTIC WASTE is being broken down by microbial action to produce a protein that could be used as cattle food, in tests at Britain's Manchester Medical School. Dr. Bernard Brown said research has found a way to break down the plastic, then feed the resulting oxidation products to microbes, creating the form of protein. (UPI)

Feedlot odors rapped

BOISE (UPI) — A state task force investigation into alleged odors from the Harding Feedlot in Moreland concluded that there are odors from the operation that infringe on the rights of neighbors.

The task force noted there are odors that are a substantial infringement on the enjoyment of life and property of residents in the area but that there was no substantial evidence that the emission of the odorous gases, liquids or solids from the feedlot were injurious to human health.

The task force was appointed by the Department of Environmental and Community Services.

The feedlot is operated by former Congressman Ralph Harding.

The three-man task force was appointed after residents filed complaints about smells from the feedlot.

The investigators recommended that: — An odor monitoring committee be appointed to investigate reports of emissions; — The committee report to the DECS by Nov.

1, 1974, on its findings concerning odor emissions and the progress of the Harding Livestock and Land Co. to abate the odors;

— That the feedlot take steps to control the emission of odors from its potato slurry storage pit;

— That the pit be covered or chemical and biological inhibitors be used and the main storage area be relocated at a site approved by DECS;

— That before additional corrective measures be taken, DECS make a door-to-door survey of all households within a two-mile radius of the feedlot.

The task force report said all recommendations were based solely on the testimony received during hearings Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 in Blackfoot and statement sent in to the department.

The report concluded with a recommendation the temperature inversion be a factor of prime consideration in future site selection of feedlots and other odor producing industries.

Butz hints US eyeing food supply ban

(c) New York Times Service

ROME — Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz indicated Wednesday the United States has considered halting food exports to Arab countries in retaliation for their oil embargo, but would probably refrain from such a measure.

Butz, at a news conference at the headquarters of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, said that in view of the Arab oil embargo "there is a feeling that the United States should stop food shipments to that area." He added: "We have not done so yet."

A newsmen asked whether the secretary meant to say that a ban on U.S. food exports to Arab states was being considered.

"I don't wish to comment on that," Butz replied.

In an interview afterward, the secretary pointed out that the volume of food sales to Arab states — mainly cereals — was small and that to halt them would have an "adverse effect." Besides, Butz remarked, the Soviet Union could easily make up for embargoed U.S. food shipments. Soviet cereal crops this year are reported plentiful.

At his news conference and in an earlier address to the current FAO conference, Butz gave qualified support to proposals for internationally concerted stockpiling of farm products to ensure a minimum of food security for the world.

"Our feeling is that we need international machinery to identify needs and establish general guidelines for individual nations," the secretary said. "We feel that continual management of such reserves should be left to individual nations, whether they be sellers or buyers."

Butz said some quarters in FAO, which is a specialized United Nations agency, were advocating management of food reserves to this," the secretary declared.

He was referring to recommendations by Dr. Addeke H. Boerma, director general of the 130-member agency. The FAO chief has urged action to provide national stocks of cereals on a basis broad enough to tide countries over periods of crop failures and other natural disasters. Boerma, a Dutchman, also has called for a long-term international adjustment system to put world farming production on an "integrated rational basis."

Butz contended "the problem is not so much international control but encouraging production." The secretary said it was a matter of controversy whether this may be achieved by state controls or free markets, "but I am convinced that U.S. farmers wouldn't have responded so eagerly as they did, in a system of fixed prices."

Feed stock show gain, trail 1972

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Confirming earlier forecasts that consumers should get bigger beef supplies this fall, the Agriculture Department reported Tuesday the number of cattle and calves on feed for slaughter Nov. 1 in seven major states was up 4 per cent from a month earlier.

However, the total of 9.5 million head in the seven states was still 1 per cent below the number on feed the same date a year ago.

Department experts earlier had predicted beef production from October through December would be up more than 10 per cent from summer and about the same as a year earlier. Experts said Tuesday's report was basically in line with what they had expected.

Milk drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Milk production in 1973 is dipping to the second lowest level in 21 years, and consumers can expect another drop in supplies coupled with higher prices next year.

BOISE (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management has awarded Archie Sherwood, Clayton, a $5,070 contract to reseed the Pagari fire area in the BLM's Shoshone District about 20 miles northeast of Richfield.

Pubescent wheatgrass, Russian wildrye, crested wheatgrass and alfalfa are to be used in seeding the 2,600 acres, the BLM said.

Meantime, the BLM awarded a $8,952.75 contract to WFO Ranch Inc., Jerome, to reseed

5,175 acres eight miles south of Shoshone.

And the BLM has awarded Stamper Construction Co., Kuna, Shepherd Brothers, Garden Valley, and Ralph Lounsbury, Hemet, contracts worth a total of $10,292.

Nevermind that ancient argument as to whether a tomato is a vegetable, a fruit or a berry. Point here is that the pollsters asked citizens nationwide to name their favorite vegetable. And the tomato ranked No. 1 with more votes than all other candidates combined. Onions ranked No. 2. Old, in fact? Corn, on the cob, black-eyed peas and hashbrown potatoes certainly should have come out ahead of those dumb tomatoes.

CHARACTER

Ignatius Trebitsch was born an Hungarian Jew in 1879. At age 18, he leaped off to Germany where he was baptized a Lutheran. Then he sailed to England to become a Quaker. There, also, he was elected to Parliament, but a forgery conviction sent him to prison. After release, he appeared on the scene as an Anglican curate for awhile, served some time also as a German spy, and wound up as a Presbyterian missionary, to Canada. Wait, there's more. He returned to Germany after World War I, hoping to boost the militarists back to power. They didn't need him. So he fled to the Far East, took his vows as a Buddhist monk, traveled worldwide to win converts, and finally retired to a Shanghai monastery. He died in 1943. Unique character, what?

US, China change stands, move nearer to normal relations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major step has been taken by the United States and China to complete "normalization" of their relations, with disclosure today that Peking had abandoned some of its previous demands and that Washington responded by agreeing to a major reduction of forces on Taiwan.

assessment here by students of Sino-American affairs after carefully comparing the communique based on Henry A. Kissinger's new trip to Peking and the communique issued in Shanghai after President Nixon's February, 1972, visit. In today's joint statement the Chinese said "normalization of relations between China and the United States can be realized only on the basis of confirming the principle of one China."

The United States backed up its statement by a separate announcement in Taipei that it was beginning at once to withdraw 3,000 of the remaining 8,000 American soldiers in Taiwan. Peking obviously took this as evidence of good faith. It did not publicly restate its previous, more rigid demands.

In fact, Sino-American experts here pointed out that the new communique took the generalities of the Shanghai document and converted them into evidence that both sides have been acting in good faith. Thus, the establishment of full diplomatic relations to replace the present liaison offices now appear simply a matter of time — with no apparent sticking point on principle.

The Chinese statement was far less demanding as to what must be done about Taiwan before normalization of relations can be achieved. In the 1972 communique, the Chinese price was much higher. It called for withdrawal of all U. S. forces and dismantling of bases on Taiwan and rejected any right of the United States to interfere in "China's internal affairs" — meaning the status of Taiwan.

While Peking did not call for total troop withdrawal nor removal of all airbases in the new statement, this undoubtedly was promised privately by Kissinger, since it was announced publicly in Shanghai more than a year ago as the "ultimate objective" of the United States.

No draft plan for Pentagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite an anticipated Army recruiting shortage of 15,000 to 20,000 volunteers by next June, the Pentagon has no plans to seek resumption of the draft, a top Pentagon official said Wednesday.

William K. Brehm, assistant defense secretary for manpower, told a news conference the Army missed its recruiting goals for the ninth consecutive month in October.

At the present rate, the Army's goal of having 792,000 soldiers in the fold by June would fall considerably short, Brehm said.

"A 15,000 to 20,000 shortfall is not ideal but also is not serious enough to cause us to ask Congress to reinstate the draft," he said.

The Army achieved 78 per cent of its recruiting objective in October, Brehm said. Since the end of the draft was announced in January, it has never reached its monthly recruiting goals.

The Marine Corps made only 68 per cent of its October goal, but Brehm said the Marines' problem would be solved if they decided to take more recruits with below average scores on intelligence tests. He indicated the Army was already absorbing as many men with below average ratings as it could use.

Both the Air Force and Navy however, easily met their October goals and Brehm said the all-volunteer force had turned out very satisfactorily for those two services.

During October, 29 per cent of the Army's recruits were black, continuing a four month trend in which blacks have comprised about 30 per cent of the Army's volunteers. By comparison, only 13 per cent of the draft-age population is black.

GOP mail campaign under way

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., has launched a direct mail campaign to raise $90,000 to begin a possible drive for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination.

A letter soliciting contributions from $15 to $100 has been sent by Milton S. Eisenhower to 3700 past Percy supporters, 90 per cent of them in Illinois.

Eisenhower, 74, is a brother of the late President Eisenhower and president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University.

Percy has not announced as a candidate but has set up an "exploratory committee" to help him determine if he should run.

Eisenhower, noting the country "is in the midst of her deepest political crisis," said that to succeed in 1976 "we must begin to enlist concerned Americans in the cause... to convince them that the way to improve our system is to involve ourselves behind a man worthy of our trust."

"It is also necessary to have a modest sum of money, about $60,000, to get started."

"Many things need to be done, but what will help above all else is the election in 1976 of a President who possesses absolute integrity, moral leadership, courage, intelligence and a middle of the road philosophy... Senator Percy is that man."
