Israel, Egypt agree to split forces

By United Press International
Israel and Egypt agreed today in separate meetings in Cairo and Jerusalem that the separation of their forces along the Suez Canal must be the first order of business at the Geneva Peace conference opening Tuesday, but there was no assurance Israel would actually attend the talks.
The Israeli government met for more than four hours in Jerusalem in an inconclusive special session devoted to discussion on how Israel planned to approach the Middle East peace talks in Geneva. A spokesman said disengagement of forces was a principal topic discussed.

Yankees sign Williams

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees broke a two-month stalemate Thursday by signing Dick Williams to a three-year contract as their new manager.
Williams still has two years left on his managerial contract with the Oakland A's, but claims Oakland owner Charlie Finley released him on national television shortly after the A's beat the New York Mets in the seventh game of the World Series last October. Finley disagrees.

Kissinger due in Saudi Arabia

CAIRO (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger completed talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today and flew to the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh to meet King Faisal.
The Presidential jet taking Kissinger on a tour of six Arab capitals and Tel Aviv left Cairo airport at 4:05 p.m. (7:05 a.m. MST).
In Riyadh, Kissinger was expected to ask King Faisal to lift the Arab embargo on oil supplies to the United States if the Geneva conference opens on schedule Tuesday, Egyptian press reports said.

Busing supporters rally

WASHINGTON (UPI) — School busing proponents mustered their forces today in an effort to nullify a House vote banning gasoline allocations for school busing to achieve racial balance.
The 221-192 vote Thursday approving an amendment by Rep. John Dingell, R-Mich., came as the House continued work on a massive Emergency Energy Act designed to give President Nixon congressionally approved tools to fight the energy shortage.
The Dingell amendment would require that under any fuel allocation program gasoline must be denied to buses that transport students past their nearest school for purposes of racial balance.

Meany scores 'fat cats'

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, Thursday quoted large profits reported by the oil industry and urged that the burden of the fuel shortage be shared by industry as well as the public in general.
"We don't think it's fair that working people should lose their jobs to the energy crisis while the fat cats get fatter," he said at an Israel Bonds dinner.
"Just as we were willing to accept wage and price controls so long as they were fair and equitable, we will accept whatever energy conservation programs may be necessary, so long as they are fair and equitable," he added.
"But fair and equitable does not mean that workers must freeze in their homes while oil profits go through the roof."

Wallace daughter to wed

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Peggy Sue Wallace, soon to be married daughter of Gov. George C. Wallace, has received an engraved porcelain figurine as her wedding gift from President and Mrs. Nixon.
Although among the about 600 persons invited, the first family was not expected to attend the church wedding Saturday of Miss Wallace and Mark Kennedy of Greenville, Ala.

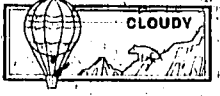

Indochina fuel cut off voted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate has voted to cut off Pentagon fuel shipments to Indochina, but the action Thursday was not likely to cause an immediate problem for U.S. Southeast Asia allies.
After a 60-33 rollcall vote on an amendment to a $73.2 billion defense appropriation bill, sponsor Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., said he left a loophole in the measure that would probably let oil shipments continue.

1 plummets; two die

NEW YORK (UPI) — A construction worker fell 30 floors Thursday, landed on a co-worker and killed him. The man who fell died three hours later.

Energy crisis broadens

United Press International
Repercussions of the energy crisis were reflected today on a broadening scale — from U.S. highway truck routes to the topmost levels of government in Washington, London and Tokyo.
The major manifestation in the United States was the spread of a work stoppage by independent truckers protesting increases in diesel fuel prices and lower speed limits on major highways.
In Ohio, some drivers who declined to participate in the stoppage reported their rigs were fired on. Near Dayton, 450 to 500 trucks were "corralled" on an interstate highway and not allowed to proceed.

In Missouri, protesters blocked exits at two truck stops in the St. Louis area but did not impede highway traffic.
On the government level, Vice President Gerald R. Ford presided at a White House meeting of top energy advisers to discuss the general situation and the need for further legislation next year.
President Nixon also met with economic advisers to consider possible options should the energy crisis precipitate a slump.

The President was studying reports of airline layoffs, closing of gas stations and other segments of the economy being hit by the fuel shortage. Some airline pilots were suggesting a pilot strike just before Christmas to protest what they said was inequitable government fuel allocations.
In England, the British people began bucking down to a program of austerity which may bring about unemployment and pay cuts for an estimated 13 million workers. Harsh energy conservation measures were ordered, ranging from a cut in the work week to three days and a ban on television broadcasting after 10:30 p.m.

In Tokyo, Japan's vice minister of international trade and industry, Hideaki Yamashita, warned the Japanese economy faces disintegration if the squeeze triggered by an Arab oil embargo and accompanying inflation continue into next year.
Yamashita said even if the Arabs and Israelis made peace, and the oil situation improved during the coming six months, "it would take three years for the Japanese economy to be fully recovered."

Fuel shortage threatens

BURLEY — Burley schools will only have two days of fuel left for the month after Dec. 21, district bus superintendent Kirby Wilson said Thursday night.
"We'd have been out by now if we hadn't had cooperation from the fuel suppliers," Wilson said. If projected allocations are not altered the district will not have enough fuel to carry it through January, he said.
The district had been cut back 15 per cent in allocations for the Burley schools and 10 per cent for schools in the outlying areas, according to Wilson. Burley schools are supplied by Texaco and the outlying schools are supplied by the Standard Oil Co.

The district was forced to put Burley schools on split shifts following a fire which gutted the junior high school in October. Fuel needs have practically doubled following the move.
Wilson said the district would be "around 4,000 gallons short of quota for January" unless the allocations were changed. Fuel suppliers won't be able to let the district know about the allocations until the beginning of January, he said.
Supt. Harold Bauer said the district may be forced to run buses on all north and south or all east and west routes to conserve fuel. This move would force bus students to walk further to bus stops.

Langley resigns

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Attorney William Langley has resigned his part-time position with the city effective Feb. 1, 1974.
The resignation comes in the wake of the city council's consideration of hiring a full-time attorney.
"It is impossible for me to consider serving as full-time attorney for the City due to my substantial and large private law practice," Langley wrote Mayor John Christoffersen Thursday.
The city currently retains Langley for a part-time fee of $562 per month and Harry Turner as deputy attorney at $300 per month. Langley handles civil cases and Turner criminal cases for the city.

'Corrective' action due

NAMPA — "Corrective measures are being taken on every one of the points that was mentioned" in a state report on the Idaho State School and Hospital, according to one top DECS administrator.
Elwyn Wenger, deputy regional administrator at DECS for point 31, said today "we are going right down the line" in responding to the points made in the report.
Some of the main points:
— A discipline committee and a child abuse committee have been established at the institution to guard against improper application of behavior modification techniques.
— Staff which employs the techniques is being trained in their use.
— The medical staff has been "boosted up" to provide more than the maintenance level care the report noted.
— State officials are working with federal officials to agree on acceptable salaries for former residents who work 40 hours a week at the ISSH for low pay. The report Wenger received on the program termed it "exploitation" and said the persons received $5 to $8 for their work a week.
Wenger said "exploitation was one person's reaction" to the program, but he acknowledged a waiver is being sought for the program for persons who might otherwise be unemployable.

Daylight saving voted in House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House approved by voice vote and sent to the Senate today compromise legislation to return most of the country to year-round daylight saving time as an energy-saving measure.
If the Senate acts quickly and the bill is signed into law before next Sunday, Americans will turn their clocks forward one hour on Sunday, Jan. 6. If enactment is delayed until next week, DST will go into effect Jan. 13.
The country would remain on year-round daylight time until the last Sunday in April, 1975.
The bill would allow President Nixon to exempt a state from the advanced time or to realign time zones within a state if the state's governor issued a proclamation saying the action was necessary to conserve fuel or to prevent hardship.
Such a request would have to be made before DST goes into effect. The President could ignore the request.

DECS report slaps Nampa hospital

By DAVID ESPO
Times-News Capitol Bureau
NAMPA — The Idaho State School and Hospital (ISSH) lacks skilled administration; trained staff; many acceptable services; adequate medical supervision and proper budget control for its more than 500 residents, according to a state report.
The report instead refers to exploitation, abuse and neglect of residents at the state institution for retarded persons. It is especially harsh on some of the behavior modification techniques in use at the facility.
One section of the report relays an unsubstantiated claim that 10 residents sustained injuries this year as a result of "cornering." Cornering requires a person to stand in a corner, protected by padding, with his hands held behind his back. The technique is used to subdue aggressive or destructive behavior.
One evaluator noted it might be "propitious" for a committee to decide when techniques of "adverse stimuli" should be applied to residents — and strongly suggested that each member of the committee subject himself to the same treatment before advocating it for another person.

The report is the result of an on-site evaluation by a Department of Environmental and Community Service (DECS) monitoring team. A 20-member team visited the hospital for three days in October at the request of deputy administrator Elwyn Wenger.
The giant department which administers ISSH, earlier this month made public a seven page summary of the report. It has thus far refused citing the "confidentiality" of some of the material to make public the individual reports that comprised the backbone of the material Wenger received. A copy of the entire volume has been made available to the Times-News, however.
The report is critical of numerous areas of operation at the state institution from admission of a client to discharge. Some of the harshest words are left for behavior modification however, as well as a program of conditional work release.

One person wrote that, "the use of behavior modification is under insufficient supervision and regulation." Another DECS evaluator noted simply behavior modification in one part of the facility "needs to be investigated."
One top DECS official wrote following his on-site evaluation "one program director told me there had been 16 injuries in the past year resulting from the cornering technique where there had not been sufficient padding in a corner."
"I recommend that this technique be discontinued immediately until further study has been made by professionally competent persons of the use of this technique in behavior modification."
The man also wrote, "Abuse and neglect of residents is intolerable and must be discontinued. Furthermore administrative staff who have allowed such practices to occur should be replaced immediately."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the expectation of new assurances from President Nixon on the independence of Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, the Senate Judiciary Committee has approved Sen. William B. Saxbe to a attorney general. The committee voted 15-1 to approve Saxbe after Republican Leader Hugh Scott agreed to seek "clarification" from the White House on the agreement under which Jaworski's independence and jurisdiction is protected. Earlier Thursday, committee liberals had demanded that Nixon submit written assurances to the committee before Saxbe was approved. Scott called their demand "a tempest in a teapot" but said he would try to obtain the assurances before the expected Senate vote to confirm Saxbe on Monday. "After the swearing-in," Saxbe said, "I'll tell you how I feel." The only vote "against the Ohio Republican" came from Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., who felt that a constitutional problem over Saxbe's pay had not been cleared up. Sons, Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Philip Hart, D-Mich., had threatened to delay Saxbe's approval until the written assurances were given, but Hart said later he was satisfied with Scott's offer to seek further clarification. At issue was language added last month by Acting Attorney

General Robert Bork to the special prosecutor's charter. It requires that Nixon obtain the consensus approval of eight congressional leaders before either dismissing Jaworski or limiting his investigation. Hart and Kennedy called the provision an "erosion" of Jaworski's authority but Bork testified that it was added as a "safeguard" to prevent any limitation of Jaworski's investigation. Saxbe also approved it. Kennedy maintained the Congress should "get these assurances written down on the dotted line."

Drug charges made

TWIN FALLS — Terry Glen Ochsner, 22, Twin Falls, was added to the list of 20 persons arrested in Magic Valley Thursday for drug violations. Twin Falls Police Capt. Tim Qualls said officers were holding a warrant for Ochsner when he voluntarily came to the police station to answer the warrant. He is charged with delivery of a controlled substance. Bond has been set at $2,000. County, city and state narcotics officers worked most of Wednesday night arresting 20 others including six juveniles. All are charged with possession or delivery of a controlled substance. The arrests were made by Twin Falls, Buhl and Jerome officers with the assistance of the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics authorities.

Canyon group tells position

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County can "have its cake and eat it too" if the Snake River Canyon is properly used, according to Canyon Inc.

The area can be preserved and developed to the betterment of all, according to Dave Mead, president of the private group.

He said the canyon is a "tremendous piece of real estate that deserves more than just the passing glance we've been giving it."

Canyon Inc. called a meeting Thursday night at the College of Southern Idaho to explain its position to the public.

Mead told the about 40 people in attendance that the purpose of his group is "to study, encourage and support the orderly development and preservation of land located in Magic Valley."

He said immediate goals include preservation of the county's agricultural base, preservation of scenic, recreational, historical, aesthetic, archaeological, ecological and geological portions of the canyon rim and comprehensive land use planning for the Snake River area.

In maintaining the county's agricultural base, "no subdivisions or planned unit developments should be allowed in the Agricultural zone," according to the group. Canyon Inc. proposed the following methods for reaching the goals: zoning, public education concerning land use, comprehensive planning, tax advantages for landowners, conservation easements to allow property to remain in private use but limit development, purchase of land for public parks and recreation, legal action and legislative action.

Mead said the group "hopes to articulate a study" of the canyon rim and fully supports the recent proposal by the Canyon Advisory Committee for a land use plan covering the rim area north of Twin Falls City.

"In essence, this whole thing (Canyon Inc.) boils down to land use planning," according to Mead.

Charles Brumbach, vice president and legal director, said the group incorporated to gain "unity of purpose" to save time when fast action is needed and to gain public attention.

Member Cal Butler explained the tax advantages of donating land or development rights to a non-profit organization for preservation. He described several groups that will take the donations, including the Idaho Parks Foundation and the Nature Conservancy.

The group presented a slide show of scenes along the canyon and a film on land use planning produced by the State Planning and Community Affairs Agency.

End registration

Lewiston Morning Tribune

Donneville County Clerk E. Keith Long has proposed a simple system for abolishing voter registration that would still fulfill the entire purpose of registration — avoiding abuses of the voting privilege.

Voters are required to register for elections now simply to prevent balloting by the unqualified and the deceased and to prevent anyone from voting twice. Long would substitute a system of requiring each voter to identify himself—by driver's license or other proof—at the polls. The voter would also sign as oath asserting his qualifications to vote, must as voters in school district elections do long.

Long proposes an extremely stiff penalty for anyone caught cheating—a $10,000 fine and five years in jail.

And the county clerk from Idaho Falls suggests a simple method of catching the cheaters—a spot check by computer of those who voted.

His plan should be at least as safe from voting fraud as the present system. In addition, it would eliminate the laborious and expensive procedures for registering all voters. Moreover, there would be no registration deadline before the election. Any qualified voter could simply show up election day and cast his ballot.

That would reduce the work of county clerks and ease the path of the voters to the polls. You can't devise a much simpler or more constructive approach than that. — B. H.

Presidential accounting

Christian Science Monitor

Up until last weekend President Nixon's Operation Candor had a record of much promised disclosure and precious little actual disclosure. With the release of documented income-tax data and other financial information, Mr. Nixon has taken a long-delayed but nonetheless welcome step in disclosing what he said he would disclose.

No one has been a stronger supporter of presidential confidentiality than Mr. Nixon. But, in accepting the court's ruling on his secret tapes and now publicly airing his finances, he seems to be showing a recognition of the limits of confidentiality when credibility has become such an urgent issue. As he said of his unprecedented disclosure of financial papers, "These documents are being made public because the confidentiality of my private finances is far less important to me than the confidence of the American people in the integrity of the President."

It was good to have the added assurance from Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott that "further statements, fully documented, are being prepared for subsequent release pertaining to other controversial allegations."

While asserting the legality of the taxes and transactions that have helped lift him to millionaire status, Mr. Nixon took the further conciliatory step of acknowledging there could be disagreement on some points. He said he was willing to abide by the judgment of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation as to whether he owes more taxes in connection with the controversial donation of his personal papers and the sale of property. In the latter case, his own accountants came to different conclusions on whether he was liable for a capital gains tax, according to the documents.

The finding of the congressional committee should be sufficient to lay to rest the question of legality. If it confirms the legality of his large deduction for his donation of personal papers, for example, then in fairness Mr. Nixon's right to the workings of the law in this case would have to be acknowledged by those of us who insist that he not be placed above the law in other cases.

There remains the political question of how sympathetic the public will be, whatever the legalities, now that the President has spelled out the previously alleged facts—that, in 1970 and 1971, the Nixons paid taxes of $792.81 and $878.03, roughly those of families with incomes of $7,500 and $8,500, not the President's basic salary of $200,000 plus $50,000 in expenses.

In the realm of fact, first reports of the new Nixon disclosures raise question of interpretation regarding previous official government disclosures on the amounts of public money spent on his real estate. They suggest the need for detailed study of the lengthy financial statement before rushing to judgment.

Meanwhile, if the Nixon accountants' version of his finances stands up, the lingering question will be why he did not speak out earlier instead of prolonging the public's ordeal of doubt. The hope is that he will now continue to bring out the facts on every front.

Ford turns down friends' advice

WASHINGTON — Vice President Gerald Ford, whose swearing-in evoked the only genuine political sentimentality in the capitol since the Watergate scandals, has dismayed supporters by rejecting important advice from long-time political intimates.

Advice No. 1: That Ford forego his annual skiing vacation over the Christmas holidays and stay in Washington, thus building the "take-charge" image of a vice president in a unique situation who is fully equipped to lead the country if Richard Nixon falls.

Advice No. 2: That Ford hire a sophisticated politician of wide experience as his chief aide to run a serious Ford staff largely independent of the White House and capable of tackling major issues.

Having been in office only one week, Jerry Ford has plenty of time to create the impressive staff his supporters envision.

One bright spot in the new Ford staff is Kenneth Belieu, a former Lyndon Johnson aide who served in high Pentagon jobs for both President Kennedy and President Nixon. Belieu will run Ford's legislative affairs office, and he has high prestige with Congress.

Ford's staff is just beginning to grow. Major changes—including the all-important spot of staff chief—cannot be ruled out in the future. Far more important to Ford, as the only vice president, is his political relationship with Nixon and the Republican party. It is here that and praising his release of personal financial data.

That is precisely what bothers Ford's political friends, and other Republicans, well to Ford's left, who see the party's only salvation in Ford replacing Nixon well before the 1974 general election. For these Republicans, Ford's first week was vaguely disquieting.

Perhaps more significant, despite his reputation for following the letter of any presidential command, Ford at least once in the recent past flatly refused to do the White House bidding in a matter involving high- and confidential national politics. The reason: Ford thought it would be personally dishonorable.

In short, despite Ford's seeming lack of guile, he has shown he can sharply circumscribe his obligations to Nixon.

Whether sharply enough remains to be seen. He is walking a tightrope as handpicked vice president to an all but fallen President.

To fulfill his obligations to his party and to the presidency (as opposed to the President), his closest political friends feel he must not become front-man for Nixon, but instead the No. 2 man in the nation.

EVANS & NOVAK

the decision not to postpone his skiing vacation until February may have cost Ford a symbolic advantage.

But Ford chose Christmas as usual, a hint that he will not allow himself to become a foil for Republicans who want the President to resign. Moreover, no sooner had Ford been sworn in than he began a major defensive sweep for the President, clearing him of Watergate blame

Incentives, price hikes backed

By PETER J. BERNSTEIN

(c) Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The effort to achieve energy self-sufficiency in the United States will require gasoline price increases of about 15 cents a gallon over the next few years as well as special financial incentives for the oil and gas industry to accelerate domestic production, says Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La.

In an interview, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who plays a key role in all oil legislation, indicated that it would be difficult to get any fuel tax measure through Congress soon.

He said a tax of 30 to 50 cents a gallon, which Nixon administration officials are considering as a tactic in battling the energy shortage, would be unfair to poor people and he would strongly fight it.

But Long said he might support a smaller tax increase if the additional revenues went into a special trust fund for energy research and development. Currently the federal gasoline tax is four cents a gallon. Long indicated it would take at least another four or five cents a gallon to provide the necessary $3 billion a year for a trust fund.

"We're going to need to raise enough new revenue," he said, "to provide private industry with subsidies and loans for investments to encourage a number of things they're afraid to risk capital on now"—gasifying and liquefying coal, harnessing solar energy, and producing oil from shale.

Such a trust fund, if based on a uniform tax on all conventional energy sources, could be used "to guarantee the investments and even pay for some investments of those who develop new sources of energy," Long said.

Among the potential new sources of energy

SEN. RUSSELL LONG ... defends oil views deserving government subsidy are projects to produce gasoline and artificial gas from coal, and efforts to harness solar energy and the great storehouse of oil in shale and tar sands, the Louisiana Democrat said.

Even drilling for oil along the Atlantic coast may require federal financial assistance, he said. "The cost of drilling wildcat wells in the Atlantic would be enormous—about $5 million for each exploratory well," he said. "The people who do that kind of drilling are going to need tremendous amounts of cash, and some arrangement ought to be made to assist them."

Some good may come out of the Arab oil embargo if it prods the United States into developing domestic fuel resources to meet the nation's energy requirements, Long said. "In that way, the Arabs are doing us a favor," he said.

The Interior Department estimates there is more oil and gas remaining to be discovered in the United States than the amount already tapped. In addition, there is at least 100 billion barrels of oil remaining in known fields that await the development of new technology to make its recovery commercially profitable. On top of that, untapped coal reserves could produce enough fuel for hundreds of years.

Long warned, however, that much of this fuel will not be mined until the government permits price increases for domestic crude oil and coal. "If the price goes up—from $4.50 a barrel of oil now to $6 or $7 a barrel—it will be economical to produce a lot of wells that are not economical now."

When prices reach those levels, it will become commercially feasible to produce gasoline and artificial gas from coal on a large scale, without leaving private investors in the lurch if the Arabs end their boycott, Long said.

Rather than pay excess-profit tax, Long said, the giant oil companies will sell their foreign subsidiaries to British, Dutch, and Swiss firms. "Not only want we get any taxes out of the companies—but we'll have no leverage over them," Long said.

"At least now we can make some of the oil from Africa, Indonesia, and Venezuela available to us and our allies."

Suspicion of Nixon persists

There is palpable disappointment that President Nixon's tax returns have not disclosed a secret million dollar fund, or a numbered account in Switzerland; nor ratified the published suspicions of Newsweek about lanky-panky with daughter Tricia's returns. Still, there is a sense that Nixon got away with something. The anti-Nixon fever is comprehensive and undifferentiating.

What is a President of the United States supposed to say to the man who fills out his tax returns? "Don't take any of the exemptions or deductions to which I would be entitled if I were other than President of the United States." One has the impression that only this would appease his critics.

Nixon has told us that an appraiser put the value of his papers at just over a half million dollars. In a matter of days, the appraiser was located. He's a reputable man. Yes, he said: that was the value he put on the vice presidential papers, and he would stick by it. Indeed, he thought the papers probably worth even more on the open market, but, he explained, any figure in excess of the figure he gave would not have been particularly useful to the President because of the carry-forward limitations of the relevant provision in the tax code.

Notwithstanding, the television commentators took lascivious pleasure in stating that Nixon, during the years in question, paid a tax about as high as would have been paid by a man whose entire income was $15,000. This is what students of rhetoric would call "an economy." It is quicker than saying the "thing whole. But note how differently inflected is the difference. As it stood, the demonstration had the effect of persuading everyone with an income in the range of $15,000 that Nixon had gotten away with something, somehow at the expense of people less well off than he.

So it is, really, with San Clemente, though the case is a little different. People are talking about whether the United States government paid for a stray rose bush in the San Clemente garden. So Nixon announced that he would give his San Clemente estate to the government of the United States after his death.

But this will not still the criticism. Because it will appear, or be made to appear, as though he thought to give San Clemente to the government for the sole purpose of stalling criticisms over the public money used in the redecoration of San Clemente. If it had been John F. Kennedy, criticized for improvements in a house he constructed, while President, on the West Coast, the talk, with the possible exception of Westbrook Pegler, would have been of the far-seeing de-regionalization of a Western White House.

Now the carpers are saying that Nixon—concentrate hard, or this one will escape you—should have paid capital gains on his New York apartment because the proceeds from the sale of it were not in fact used to purchase a primary residence in San Clemente because, if San Clemente really was his primary residence, why then he would be paying California taxes, which he isn't paying because he is in the White House.

That kind of malevolent pettifoggery is what Nixon is facing these days. Are you really supposed to call the White House your primary residence for "tax reasons"? When there is a Constitutional amendment that says you can't occupy it more than eight years running? Should Nixon have purchased the White House?

The anti-Nixon fever as I say is running strong, and he has of course been responsible for a lot of it. But if there is a silver lining in the future, it has got to be, as I have observed before, the excesses of his critics. They are too much.

"What Do You Think This Is — Group Practice?"

Tax law queries arise

By EILEEN SHANAHAN (c) New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Disclosure by President Nixon of his tax returns for the past four years has highlighted two questions about the tax laws and the way he has used them.

The first, is whether the President broke the law, as some have alleged, by failing to report a capital gain that he should have paid tax on, or by taking a big deduction that he wasn't really entitled to, or both.

Equally interesting, however, is what the returns disclose about the way people of means try to arrange their affairs so as to minimize their taxes legally, by bunching their charitable contributions in certain years, for example.

In addition, the Nixon tax returns tend to support the argument made by tax reformers that the "minimum tax" enacted in 1969 has a puny impact on wealthy persons who can arrange their affairs to achieve maximum tax avoidance.

The Nixons were subject to the minimum tax, as a couple with a high income and low tax, in both 1970 and 1971. In 1970, they had to pay a total tax of only $792.81 on an adjusted gross income of $202,942.56, because of the existence of the minimum tax. It was only the minimum tax that kept them off the notorious list of high-income persons who paid no federal income tax at all.

In 1972, the situation was somewhat different. Though the Nixons had about the same income as they did in 1970, $262,384.75, they had slightly smaller deductions and, as a result, owed some tax under the regular income tax. The amount owed was $878.03. With such a high income and such a low tax, they were forced to calculate their liability under the "minimum tax"—but it turned out that they didn't owe any more.

Perhaps the Nixons thought they were going to have to declare a capital gain on the sale of the San Clemente land and wanted enough deductions to offset the gain. By the time their tax accountant, Arthur Blech of Los Angeles, decided there was no taxable gain the extra contributions had already been given.

There is also some evidence that the explanation is the other way around. There has been some dispute over the actual date of the sale of the San Clemente land, which the White House says was in 1970. There is evidence, which has been examined by the House Committee on Government Operations, that indicates the sale was not actually completed until early 1971.

Is it possible, some tax lawyers are now asking, that the Nixons wanted to place the sale in 1970, because they had so many deductions that year that they wanted their capital gain in that year, too? As it turned out, their accountant ruled that there was no taxable gain.

Social security hike bogged in Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Social Security benefits increase that appeared to be breeching through Congress has become bogged down in an increasingly bitter dispute between the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee.

Unless someone backs down or finds a face-saving compromise before Congress adjourns next week, 30 million Americans will have to wait a few months longer to get their increased monthly checks.

The Social Security administration says it needs about four months to program its computers to handle benefit increases. If Congress waits until after it returns Jan. 21 to resolve the problem, no increase could be paid until this summer, although payments could be made retroactively.

Ironically, the increase itself is not a part of the dispute. Both the House and Senate have passed a two-step, 11 per cent increase for 1974. The only difference is that the Senate would give the first 7 per cent increase immediately, but the House would wait until April checks. Both bills would give the additional 4 per cent in July.

The dispute revolves around a raft of non-Social Security amendments added by the Senate, including a guaranteed "work bonus" for the working poor of up to $400.

Normally differences between the House and Senate bills would be worked out in a joint conference committee. But the House refused even to appoint conferees.

"Procedurally there is no way we could deal with all the complex matters the Senate put on this little technical bill," said Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., acting chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The "little technical bill" Ullman referred to is part of the dispute. Instead of amending the House-passed Social Security bill, the Senate attached its Social Security bill to legislation passed earlier this year making small technical changes in the Social Security law. Ullman took this as an insult.

Ullman said the Senate could settle the whole problem by simply passing the House bill, which technically is still pending in the Senate.

But Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he would wait for a House-Senate conference, and "I find it very difficult to understand why any House member would refuse to even talk about measures to help the poor, the aged, the sick and the blind of this country."

Ullman hinted Thursday that the House might be willing to accept a few of the Senate amendments if they were attached to the House bill, saying, "There are some matters we'd like to take care of and there are procedures available to the Senate."

Long said in an interview: "I don't think so. No."

Asked if any compromise was possible on his side, Long said, "Oh, I feel we'd do whatever we could to humor them, to make them feel important... anything to help the poor."

In a direct insult to Ullman, Long said, "I'm pleased to see that Mr. Mills is back. Maybe that will take care of the situation." Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., Ways and Means chairman has just returned to Washington following back surgery. But Ways and Means members say privately that Mills is backing Ullman.

Both sides realize the political dynamite they are playing with, and each side is attempting to keep the dispute low-key.

The Ways and Means Committee's private meeting Thursday was even closed to the press on the pretense that the committee wanted privacy while listening to a slide show on the energy crisis. The same slide show had been given 40 times before, over a period of more than a year, according to its creator.

Bank chief's nomination snarled

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — William J. Casey's nomination to be president of the export-import bank ran into trouble Thursday in the Senate Banking Committee because of allegations that he tried to conceal information about the relationship between the Nixon administration and the Inkbunwond and Telegraph Corp. last year.

The committee agreed unanimously this morning to delay action on the nomination indefinitely and staff members said then that the decision effectively killed the nomination. One staff member said that he understood that Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, the committee's ranking Republican, would ask President Nixon to withdraw the nomination.

By nightfall, however, the situation had changed, and aides said that the nomination could best be characterized as "in flux." These staff members said that White House officials, who hold Casey in high regard, were in the process of deciding whether to fight for the nomination.

If the administration makes a full-scale effort to win confirmation for Casey, the aides said, the nomination could probably be pushed through the committee and the full Senate.

A White House spokesman said Thursday that he expected the nomination to be approved by the banking committee tomorrow.

Casey, who is now under secretary of state for economic affairs, said that he had talked with Tower earlier in the day and had reason to believe that the committee would approve his nomination, probably Friday.

The committee is scheduled to meet today, but it is deeply involved in last-minute legislation on which it hopes to finish action before the end of this session of Congress. Senators said that they did not know whether the Casey nomination would be called up for a vote.

Casey's problems stem from when he was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a position he held until last January.

Local stores and businesses are looking for part time help.

Give a little, take a little

ENERGY-CONSCIOUS President Nixon will travel by train to his Florida retreat after Christmas, White House officials said Thursday. But they also indicated the Presidential jetliner, "Spirit of '76," would be flown to Florida in case Nixon should need it in an emergency. The plane consumes about 2,000 gallons of fuel an hour. (UPI)

Rose Mary's typewriter ruled out as tape 'buzz'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Technical experts don't know yet who or what caused an 18-minute "buzz" on one of President Nixon's Watergate tapes, but it wasn't Rose Mary Woods' typewriter or lamp.

Whatever happened, the experts told Chief U. S. District Judge John J. Sirica in a preliminary report Thursday. It appears that the obliterated conversation "probably will not be retrievable" even with the most advanced equipment. Their report ruled out as the culprit in the erasure the electrical equipment used by Miss Woods, Nixon's personal secretary for nearly 25 years, as she was transcribing the tape last fall.

"Neither the lamp nor the typewriter used by Miss Woods was a likely cause of the 18-minute buzz on the White House tape of June 20, 1972," Sirica said after meeting with the experts, White House lawyers and prosecutors.

Tests made with sophisticated instruments have failed to give any indication that the electric typewriter or the Tensor Lamp, if used in the arrangement described in testimony, would have produced the pattern of buzzing sounds observed on the tape.

The buzz obliterates a talk Nixon had just three days after the Watergate bugging arrests with H. R. Haldeman, then his closest adviser. Haldeman's notes of that meeting, introduced as evidence in Sirica's court recently, indicate the talk was of Watergate.

The White House theorized in court papers Nov. 26 that the gap was caused accidentally as Miss Woods was transcribing it, possibly by emissions from her electric typewriter or high-intensity lamp.

Miss Woods, testifying the same day, said she might have caused a 4- or 5-minute gap by mistakenly hitting the "record" button on the machine as she turned to take a telephone call. But she insisted she could not have been responsible for all 18 minutes.

He told reporters he was "not necessarily" surprised the experts had rejected his theory and said their findings were "not necessarily inconsistent" with his own. Buzhardt declined to elaborate.

JFK, Monroe romance told

NEW YORK (UPI) — Syndicated gossip columnist Earl Wilson reported Thursday that Marilyn Monroe had a romance with President John F. Kennedy. Just before she died of an overdose of sleeping pills in 1962, Wilson reported, she said, "Say goodbye to the President."

Wilson said he withheld the story for years but finally decided "to set the record straight" because of a book on Miss Monroe which dwelled on her friendship with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, written by Norman Mailer. Miss Monroe's relationship with President Kennedy is detailed in Wilson's own book on the life of the late actress, to be published early next year. He said he undertook a three-year investigation to establish a "folliance" between the blonde sex goddess and the president.

Nixon urged to fight back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Advisers close to President Nixon, both inside and outside of the White House, have been urging Nixon to make a forceful counterattack on critics of his financial record. "The President is being urged to make a public statement insisting that his political critics make their income tax returns public and that they provide an audit showing their personal cash flow," said one source. The sources said proponents were suggesting that Nixon single out some members of Congress, including Sens. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., who have questioned tax deductions Nixon took and the tax rate he has paid while in office. The sources said Nixon's challenge would ask critics to fully disclose their personal financial records to show "they aren't living in glass houses while they throw their rocks" at him, White House sources said Thursday. "The President at present is resisting the advice and I don't know exactly why," said one source. But he said Nixon was weighing the idea carefully and was "expected to make a decision shortly. Earlier in the day," a White House spokesman said Nixon "welcomes the examination" of his entire financial record by Congress' Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and that "if the competent authorities find that the President owes further taxes, he will pay them of course." Edgar Allen Poe's parents were an English actress, Elizabeth Arnold Poe, and an American actor, David Poe Jr.

FCC commissioner quits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Communications Commissioner H. Rex Lee said today he has submitted his resignation to the President, effective Dec. 31, 17 months before his term was to end. Lee, 63, is the second Democratic commissioner to resign within 10 days.

Commissioner Nicholas Johnson recently quit after serving six months past expiration of his seven-year term. "I have been in government for 38 years and I decided I wanted to do something else," Lee said. "I decided now is a good time to retire."

Harry Trump was the most reasonable of bridge guests. He demanded only two things. New cards and Early Times. Emil Frostbutt knew this. On September 28, 1972, the cards in Frostbutt's posh game room were still in the cellophane. But the bourbon..... for some never-to-be-determined reason, Frostbutt had not ordered Early Times. That night, for the first time in years, Emil Frostbutt played bridge without Harry. No Early Times. No Trump.

DEAR ABBY: I guess you could call me a "neglected wife." For eight years my husband has played week-ends in a country western band, here in town or towns nearby. We used to have fights because I wanted to go with him, but he'd never let me.

I got tired of fighting with him and just gave up. I know he couldn't be playing all night, but he'd never get home until 7 or 8 the next morning.

He never talks about his music jobs, and he has friends I don't even know.

He has another job during the week, but his country music weekend jobs are what bothers me. He just lives from weekend to weekend. Also, he leaves me without any transportation, so I can't check up on him.

We never do anything as a family. We have two sons, who are getting to be mama's boys because their father has so little time for them. I feel so all alone. I have no one I can tell my troubles to. Can you help me?

NEGLECTED

Immature husband

DEAR NEGLECTED: You need more help than I can give you in a letter. If you can't get your husband to agree to get counseling with you, go without him and get some pointers on how to handle an immature husband, because that's what you have.

DEAR ABBY: About a year and a half ago my sisters gave me a beautiful baby shower. I never did send thank-you notes for all the lovely gifts I received. I really meant to, but I never got around to it because so many things happened all at once. (For one thing, I got pregnant again.)

Anyway, I still want to send thank-you notes for the gifts I got at the shower for my first baby, but I don't want anyone to think I am sending them now to get a gift for my second baby.

I could say something like: "I'm able to use the first gift you gave me for my second baby, so I am sending you a double 'thank you.' Because of all the wonderful gifts I received at the shower I haven't had to buy a thing." [This is true.]

What do you think?

A LITTLE LATE

DEAR LATE: Since you put it that way, I doubt if anyone will think you are hinting for a second gift.

DEAR ABBY: Tonight was my wife's 30th birthday. I am 34. We've been married 10 years. I bought her a corsage and took her out for dinner. When we got home she kissed me and said she wanted another present which wouldn't cost any money, but would take about two minutes of my time. Then she led me to the bedroom and on my pillow she had the following clipping from your column. She said she had been "saving it" until she had the nerve to show it to me. And here it is:

"Dear Abby:

Once again, a letter in your column from a man complaining because his wife doesn't give him enough 'affection.' [I just can't get her into the bedroom.]

When a man says 'affection' he means sex. Sex is great, but what most women really want is affection. The reassuring words, the warm embraces, the loving looks.

In my case, I can't show my husband the least bit of 'affection' without his wanting to head for the bedroom.

He isn't the 'affectionate' type. And he doesn't want to waste time with preliminaries.

Women are advised to fake orgasms in order to please their husbands. Will you please advise me to fake a little affection in order to please their wives? It could save their marriage.

My wife's name is not "Jenny," but I know what she meant. Thanks for printing that letter. Sign me,

"WISED UP"

DEAR WISED: Maybe this will "wise up" others.

IRS probe 'favorable'

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators have reached a preliminary conclusion that the Internal Revenue Service successfully resisted pressure to harass the Nixon administration's "enemies," informed sources said today.

The staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue taxation reported to the panel at a closed meeting yesterday that Randolph Thrower and Johnnie M. Walters, who headed I.R.S. during the first Nixon administration, refused requests to go after the "enemies," the source said.

Thrower and Walters were backed up by Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Charles E. Walker, then deputy secretary, according to the investigators.

However, the sources said, the investigation has not been completed, and there still is a possibility that evidence of political misuse of the I.R.S. may be included in the written report early next year.

All the staff did yesterday was make a "preliminary, sketchy" oral summary of its findings so far, a committee member said.

John W. Dean '3D, former White House counsel, had told the Senate Watergate Committee that the White House pressured the I.R.S. to audit persons on the "enemies list" in an effort to dig up tax delinquencies.

Dean also said the I.R.S. was asked to give favorable treatment to some of the administration's "friends."

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the joint committee, ordered the staff to investigate.

Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, a member of the committee, said the staff confirmed that a list of enemies was sent to the I.F. S. Bennett said Dean, not the White House, proposed the harassment.

The staff investigation so far indicates that "when the list was presented, I.R. S. said no, and the thing was dropped right there," Bennett said.

Action by the I.R.S. on the administration's friends still is being checked out, Bennett said.

Federal budget eyed

(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — President Nixon's budget director says that next year's federal budget may go over $300 billion but would not be heavily out of balance, even at that figure, unless there was a recession that knocked the bottom out of tax collections.

Roy L. Ash, director of the Offices of Management and Budget, also said in an interview yesterday that Nixon had instructed him not to worry about "the optical question" of surpassing $300 billion.

In other words, Ash explained Nixon has told him, "Don't worry about what it looks like, worry about what it is."

Ash added that the president's attitude appeared to be that decisions on the spending programs for next year should be made without considering whether the total figure is just under or just over $300 billion.

The budget under discussion will cover the fiscal year 1975, which starts July 1, 1974. It will be sent to Congress in late January or early February, and the final decisions on the programs it will contain will have to be made in the next three weeks.

Spending in the current fiscal year is now expected to total about $273 billion, with a deficit of about $3 billion.

For 1975, spending is expected to be $2 billion or so on either side of $300 billion, and tax receipts are expected to be "in the $292-billion-plus range," according to Ash.

That estimate of receipts is based on the forecast of administration economists that the economy will experience a marked slowdown next year but not a recession.

If the official forecast turns out to be wrong, and there is a recession, the budget picture would change dramatically.

That is exactly what happened to Nixon's first budget, covering the 1971 fiscal year. In January, 1970, he estimated that the 1971 budget would show a surplus of $1.3 billion. A little more than half of the error was traceable to the lower tax collections caused by the recession that began late in 1969.

The deficit of $6 billion to $10 billion that is foreseeable without a recession constitutes about the right budgetary policy for next year, according to Ash.

Of the increase in federal spending that is foreseen for the 1975 fiscal year about $20 billion represents outlays considered "uncontrollable," Ash said. These are items for which spending is mandated by law or previous contract, such as Social Security payments of interest on the public debt.

CHURCHES

Nativity scene live

TWIN FALLS — The annual live nativity scene will be staged again this year at the First Christian Church, corner of Shoshone Street and Sixth Avenue North.

Many persons in the church are involved in the all-church project, according to Rev. Ray P. Jones, minister.

The Ferris Sweets provide the sheep and donkey for the scene and the shed was built and assembled by Marlon and Ted Hager. Lighting is arranged by Floyd Smith.

This year the music will be taken care of by Gerald Hayes. Each evening Mary, Joseph, the shepherds and the wisemen are portrayed by members. Costumes were made and are kept in order by women of the church.

This year the scene will be on display Dec. 21 through Dec. 24, from 7 to 9 p.m. each day.

This is the church's way of saying "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" to the entire community, the minister said.

Teenagers charged in car burglaries

TWIN FALLS — One adult and one juvenile were arrested by city police late Wednesday on charges of four separate counts of car burglary.

Twin Falls Police Capt. Tim Qualls said Jim Lee Koch, 19, Gooding, and a 16-year-old youth are charged with car burglaries at the Lynwood Shopping Center, including two burglaries reported late Wednesday.

Tribal council given grant

BOISE (UPI) — A $27,000 Law Enforcement Assistance Administration grant has been given the Coeur d'Alene Tribal Council to improve court services, LEAA Administration Donald E. Santarelli announced today.

By providing a tribal judge five days a week, a full-time probation officer, and improving court services, Santarelli said, it is predicted that reservation crime can be cut by 5 to 8 per cent.

The reservation is located near Plummer, Idaho.

Capt. Qualls said shoppers should lock their packages in the trunks of their automobiles because of the many instances of auto burglaries resulting when a burglar can see the Christmas packages through the car windows and break in and remove them.

Louise Schreckenberg told officers Wednesday someone broke into her station wagon and took $11.44 worth of Christmas decorations and lights. The items have been recovered, Qualls said.

Richard W. Clark, Twin Falls, said about $40 worth of packages were taken from his 1966 automobile, also in the Lynwood Shopping Center.

Qualls said two other burglaries also occurred and a number of items have been recovered although the thefts have not been reported to officers as yet.

He said the police department appreciates the assistance of citizens in helping apprehend the two suspects. He said an alert citizen reported what was believed to be a burglary in progress and officers were able to make the two arrests.

Richfield mayor seeks conservation

RICHFIELD — Richfield residents are being asked to become good neighbors and share rides to conserve gasoline during the energy crisis.

Mayor C. W. Ward suggested during Tuesday night's council meeting that persons going out of town check at Lemmon Hardware to see if anyone would like to ride with them. Many cars reportedly are going out of town with just one person and the drivers could purchase items such as medicine which cannot be purchased locally, thereby saving individual trips.

"If you are interested in being a good neighbor and helping with the gas shortage, call Lemmon and ask if anyone needs a ride or things you might purchase for them. It might surprise us to see how many gallons of gas we may save. Since this is the Christmas season it might help us to spread the Christmas spirit by doing a kindness for someone," the mayor said.

Officer plans speech

RUPERT — Stu Murrell, information officer for the Idaho Fish and Game Department, will address the Mindoka County Wildlife Federation here Monday.

Murrell will discuss his agency's proposal for use of public lands in Mindoka County, according to W. F. "Bill" Whitton, president of the wildlife group. He said the speaker will also report on current statewide hearings concerning proposed wilderness areas.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on the top floor of Rupert City Hall.

Interstate speeds 60

BOISE (UPI) — Until Congress takes final action to establish nationwide speed limits, the maximum permissible speeds on the Interstate highway in Idaho will be 60 miles per hour.

Members of the State Highway Board stood by their earlier decision to lower speeds to 60 on the Interstate and 50 on primary highways at a meeting in Boise Wednesday.

The Highway Department advised the board it was holding back on its sign changing program until it finds out what the national speeds will be.

Farm outlook for '74 less bright than '73

BURLEY — The overall farm picture for 1974, viewed in economic terms, is not likely to be as rosy as in 1973.

That is the belief of Dr. Robert Sargent, University of Idaho Extension agricultural economist.

In a talk here Thursday at a meeting of the Potato Growers' Association, Sargent said further inflation in the U. S. will erode purchasing power.

Some inflationary factors that will have a direct impact on farmers, he said, will be higher costs for fertilizer and fuel. Machinery and repair costs are also likely to continue upward.

"Fertilizer costs," said Sargent, "are likely to be up 75 to 100 per cent in 1974." He added that fuel costs are expected "to be up sharply."

Recent policy moves in Washington indicate higher prices rather than rationing are likely to allocate fuel, Sargent noted. If so, farmers will have to outbid other segments of the economy to assure adequate fuel supplies. He believes temporary shortages from time to time "are likely prospects."

Sargent spoke of other possible effects of the energy situation. If fuel availability is "reduced in many of the other (in addition to farming) important producing sectors of this country, it could result in greater unemployment and consequently, a decline in the demand for many of our products, agricultural and otherwise.

"It also appears that fuel availability will have some significant worldwide effects that may well reduce the purchasing ability of some of our foreign customers," he said.

Sargent, focusing on the potato outlook, said it is likely "we will experience little if any production expansion nationally and hence will have quite favorable potato prices yet in 1974."

One reason for the optimistic price picture — from the grower viewpoint — is his belief that low processor potato stocks will not be replenished during the current year; therefore, demand in that sector may continue fairly strong.

Secondly, with prices favorable for most all crops, there are attractive alternatives to growing potatoes. For this reason potato production may not expand as much as in some previous years.

Also, Sargent expressed some doubt there will be any substantial production increase in several major US potato areas which have been declining in production. He doubted there will be any sharp increases in production "even in the Pacific Northwest," which has not been among the declining areas.

CHICAGO — May Idaho russet potato futures continued to slide downward Thursday, with final prices down 21 cents from Wednesday.

After a new contract high of 9.90 on Wednesday, May opened at 9.70, down 6 cents from the closing and continued to fall as both locals and commission houses took profits from the recent runup following a friendly crop report.

May closed at 9.55, with only 14 cars changing hands.

Growers pick Parr

FARGO, N.D. — Clarence Parr, Burley, was elected president of the National Potato Council at its 25th annual meeting here.

Other officers chosen were Seth Bradstreet, Newport, Maine; Ed Stastny, Malin, Ore.; and Douglas Michael, Urbana, Ohio, vice presidents; Obed Tweeten, Hillsboro, N. C., secretary; and Joa Penzien, Mt. Clemens, Mich., treasurer.

Resolutions adopted dealt with fuel and fertilizer shortages, slow payments, transportation and potato contracting.

Growers attending the meeting appeared highly optimistic about favorable prices at the present time, but recognized there are shortages and other problems which will affect growers and possibly restrict potato production.

Contract penalties possible

KETCHUM — Project delays on the completion of the Ketchum sewage treatment plant modification project may result in contractor penalties. The project was discussed during a special meeting Wednesday afternoon attended by Ketchum Mayor Kenneth Richey; mayor elect Bill Brand; Clayton Stewart, clerk of the Sun Valley Water and Sewer District; Harold Cox, JUB Engineers, and Bill Saucerman, representing Hunter-Saucerman Construction Co. Inc., Idaho Falls, which holds the about $230,000 general project contract.

holdback be retained until the project is completed and it can be determined whether damages are due. Cox said he had been informed that the clarifier mechanism would probably not arrive until about Dec. 28. Completion of the project is estimated for about Feb. 1. However, Cox, Richey and Stewart said they felt the intent of the contract with Hunter-Saucerman was that all project construction, with the exception of the installation of the clarifier mechanism, was to have been completed Dec. 3.

The contract contains provisions for $500 in damages each day until Dec. 10. Cox said the piping and other modifications have been essentially completed, but termed progress on the clarifier structure "terrible." Saucerman said he felt the contract stated that the project would be completed on Dec. 3 or four weeks after the clarifier mechanism arrived.

Reagan upholds tax situation

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, who paid no California income taxes in 1970, says President Nixon is justified in not paying California income taxes.

And he disagrees with California congressmen who contend the President should pay a state income tax because they do.

"I can't agree with the congressmen," said Reagan, who paid no state income tax in 1970 because of "business reverses."

"They're not supposed to move their residences to Washington. They're supposed to maintain residences here. They're supposed to represent an area. The president is the one man who represents 50 states, all the people."

Both U.S. senators and all 43 congressmen from California pay state income taxes.

The White House disclosed last weekend that the native son-president, despite maintaining a voting residence and seaside villa at San Clemente, paid no California income taxes from 1969 through 1972. Presidential aides said California law exempted Nixon from state income taxes because his "domicile" was the District of Columbia.

Asked by a newsmen whether he could understand how Nixon would be immune from income taxes in his home state, Reagan replied: "Yes, I can."

The State Franchise Tax Board privately is investigating Nixon's tax status.

Gas $ decline not in sight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The proverb "what goes up must come down" doesn't apply to gasoline prices.

The cost of putting fuel in the family automobile is rising month by month and the end is nowhere in sight.

Consumers who struggled through months of soaring fuel prices were rewarded this fall when livestock supplies finally caught up with demand and prices at most supermarkets declined.

The situation is not likely to be repeated in the case of gasoline.

First, there is the matter of short supplies. A farmer can bring a hog or a steer to market in a matter of months but it takes years to discover new petroleum sources and to build the drilling rigs and pipelines required to bring the oil to a refinery.

The Arab oil boycott, which has temporarily bottled up the fertile Middle East oil fields, has simply aggravated an existing supply situation.

On the demand side, the administration feels that industry, public transportation, utilities and other essential services should get first crack at the oil barrel. The motoring public will have to line up for what's left over.

The administration, however, has taken steps to keep gasoline prices from exploding at the rate they might if left to free market forces. The Cost of Living Council has devised an elaborate plan that allows gasoline prices to increase, but at a restrained pace.

The rule, which could be revised as the Federal Energy Office takes on more responsibility for the oil allocation program, is keyed to the price of crude oil. It states that an oil price rise for producers, these added costs may be passed along to distributors, retail service stations and eventually to motorists, in the form of higher prices.

However, these increases can only be made once a month and cannot reflect higher costs for labor, capital and other rising business expenses.

The rule thus prevents a service station operator from immediately hiking his price to $1 a gallon.

IF couple files suit

BOISE (UPI) — An Idaho Falls couple has brought a $25,040 lawsuit against Western Airlines for being "bumped" at Salt Lake City by entertainer Johnny Cash and his troupe.

Ms. and Mrs. Sam Bennion allege they were flying to Pocatello, Idaho, from Ontario, Calif., last October when they were grounded in Salt Lake City when they tried to transfer to another flight.

The suit says the Bennions tried to board the Pocatello flight and were told the flight was oversold—11 persons were denied boarding.

Skyline nips foul-racked Minico in two overtimes

RUPERT — The Skyline Grizzlies broke away when Minico was reduced to four men on the court due to fouls Thursday night to edge the Spartans 60-61 in double overtime.

Minico started the game with nine men suited up. But a total of 37 fouls were whistled down on the Spartans and with about a minute left in the first overtime — and leading by two at the time — Minico lost the fifth man. The Grizzlies then tied it and had it pretty easy in the second extra session.

The Spartans led most of the game with the attrition starting when center

Faggetbakke fouled out early in the third period. Still Minico stayed up by six.

But when Nyle Keller, Virtue and Shaw went to the sidelines in the fourth period, Skyline, behind the scoring of Brad Chapple and Cary Ellis, moved ahead.

Minico then came from behind on last-second heroics by Head, who canned a field goal about 20 seconds from the end and then drilled two free throws with 10 seconds left to fashion a 51-51 tie.

In the first overtime, Minico protected that narrow lead but with four seconds left Collette drew a foul. Minico then miscued by calling an extra timeout, which cost the Spartans a technical foul. Collette hit both ends of the one-and-one situation — but then missed the technical foul free throw to bring on the second overtime.

All-star game uses experiments

MIAMI (UPI) — The Shrine North-South College All-Star Game will experiment with some rules changes Christmas night, including kickoffs from the 35-yard line and allowing a scoring team to receive the ensuing kickoff if it is trailing.

Game director Andy Gustafson said he had talked with NCAA rules chairman Dave Nelson of Delaware and with the National Football League about the changes.

"We feel the rules we have adopted will give the football fans and coaches throughout the country an opportunity to see how they will actually work in a game," Gustafson said.

The four rules changes planned are:

- All kickoffs will be from the 35-yard line.
- All kickoffs must be returned from the end zone, with the exception of kicks that go through the end zone. There will be no downing of a kickoff in the end zone for a touchback.
- Unsuccessful field goals will be returned to the original line of scrimmage if attempted from beyond the 20-yard line. Unsuccessful attempts from the 20 or less will be returned to the 20.
- A team losing by three points or more may elect to receive...the ensuing kickoff after it scores a touchdown or field goal.

Coaches for the North team are Don James of Kent State University and Dick MacPherson of Massachusetts.

BYU defeats Denver 97-87

DENVER (UPI) — Six-foot-nine freshman forward Mark Handy dominated the game with 15 points and 15 rebounds Thursday night to lead Brigham Young to a 97-87 win over the University of Denver.

BYU pulled away from its 40-38 halftime advantage using a zone defense and the best the Pioneers could do was fight back to the 10-point spread on which the game ended. BYU had 61 rebounds to Denver's 46.

Leading the scoring for both teams was DU's Len Orr with 38 points. Handy was high for BYU. Both teams are now 3-2.

Arizona topples Vandals by 101-80

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Seventeenth-ranked Arizona moved sluggishly past the surprising Idaho Vandals, 101-80, Thursday night after frittering away huge leads earlier in the game.

The Wildcats were depleted by the flu and foul problems, forcing coach Fred Snowden to go with seldom-used reserves for much of the second half.

Arizona, which saw a 45-28 lead cut to 47-42 in the half, played without freshman Herman Harris who was sidelined with the flu, and starters Al Fleming and Eric Money spent considerable time on the bench.

Idaho, led by guard Henry Harris, shot well from the outside, ending with 50 per cent field goal shooting for the game.

Freshman reserve Len Gordy was finally inserted in the game by Snowden and held Harris scoreless for several minutes in the second half as Arizona stretched out to a 69-54 lead.

Harris led Idaho scoring with 24 points while Steve Weist, with 18, and St Fitzpatrick, with 14, also landed in double figures for the Vandals.

Coniel Norman led Arizona with 30 points. Bob Elliott and Ron Allen both canned 10. Fleming had 15 and Money 10.

Bulls win in last 2 seconds

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Norm Van Lier sank two free throws with two seconds left in the game to give the Chicago Bulls an exciting 97-94 win over the Milwaukee Bucks in a National Basketball Association game Thursday night.

The win extended Chicago's winning streak to six games and snapped a 10-game Milwaukee win skid.

Memphis tops Texas 90-82

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Ninth-ranked Memphis State, playing with only limited help from foul plagued top scorer Wes Westfall, broke away from Texas in the final two minutes to take a tough 90-82 victory Thursday night.

Bulldogs' Dexter Reed and Billy Buford led the late surge during which Memphis State broke a 78-78 tie at 2:58 and scored 12 points to Texas' four. For the game, Reed and Buford scored 23 points each.

Texas, now 0-6, outrebounded the taller Bulldogs by six primarily on the strength of Larry Robinson, who gathered in 22 rebounds while getting 19 points.

The Tigers' biggest lead was 11 points and although Dietrich rallied back to within four points with time enough left to win it, the young Tigers refused to crack.

N.C. State eager for UCLA game start

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Norm Sloan has been getting advice and sympathy these days from basketball coaches throughout the land.

Sloan's North Carolina State players will meet one of the big obstacles of their young lives Saturday when they play UCLA, the No. 1-ranked college basketball power whose record winning streak has now reached 78 games.

"Some of those 78 victims have called me and told me what not to do," Sloan said.

Wooden's outstanding players had great fun the last time they played at the St. Louis Arena. In the NCAA tournament at the Arena last March the Bruins pulled away early from Indiana and coasted to an 11-point win in the semifinals, then in the finals battled Memphis State closely before blasting them in the second half for a 21-point win and UCLA's seventh straight national title.

The Bruins liked the huge Arena so much that UCLA Athletic Director J.D. Morgan suggested a match of the Uclans and N.C. State for early this season. The Wolfpack had a 27-0 season in 1972-73 but was barred from postseason competition by the NCAA because of recruiting violations.

"The dream game has been booked into the Arena since last May, and there will be a standing-room crowd of more than 16,000 for Saturday's game.

"I have made my decision to stay at Washington State," Sweeney said Thursday. "My discussions with university officials, including President Glenn Terrell and Athletic Director Ray Nagel, have caused me to reevaluate my commitment to WSU."

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Washington State football coach Jim Sweeney will remain at WSU next season.

Sweeney, who just completed his sixth season at Washington State, had been mentioned in connection with coaching vacancies at New Mexico and Iowa.

Boxers seek title shot

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jerry Quarry and Earnie Shavers will fight for comparative peanuts Friday night in Madison Square Garden with George Foreman a ringside spectator.

When the two 28-year-olds answer the bell, the man who can cut either of them in on a $1 million melon-heavyweight champion Foreman will be there, and he has a standing offer of that $1 million to defend his crown against the winner.

Also avid ringsiders will be Muhammad Ali and Joq Frazier. Foreman's predecessors in the biggest reward boxing can offer. It is unlikely either Ali or Frazier will become immediately involved with the Quarry-Shavers winner. They have their own date in the Garden on Jan. 20, and whoever comes out of that on top would be the logical man to meet Foreman or Jerry or Earnie. Fore the bout matchmaker Teddy Brenner hopes to make in early March of next year.

Kimberly nips Devils, joins Valley in finals

KIMBERLY—Holly Houfburg's rebound shot capped a game-long scramble by the Kimberly Bulldogs Thursday night when they stunned the Murtaugh Red Devils 58-57 in the opener of the Snake River holiday tournament.

Valley, getting half its points from Rocky Hagan, followed by dropping poor shooting Hansen 45-33 and the Vikings will meet the Bulldogs in the finals at 9 p.m. Friday. Hansen and Murtaugh matchup in the consolation affair at 7 p.m. in the Kimberly gymnasium.

Kimberly enjoyed a torrid second quarter to move ahead of Murtaugh and, although its production fell off in the third quarter, stayed five to nine points up in the third period.

They turned cold in the fourth, scoring only six points and Murtaugh still couldn't catch up. The final points of the game came with 2:02 remaining and from then on both teams had chances to win it or lose it before Murtaugh's last jumper. Just before the buzzer turned out to be an air ball.

Rod Malone paced the second quarter Bulldog blitz, hitting eight of his 16 points during that span. Tom Standley rang in with some timely shots from side court as Kimberly ran a 15-15 first quarter deadlock into 40-35 at intermission.

Houfburg's rebounding played a big part in the third quarter. Kimberly's last big lead came on standley's final bucket to open the last quarter, making it 54-45.

Then Talbot drove for a crumple and Rob Wright hit five points to cut the deficit to 56-55 with 3:32 left. Houfburg threw in his shot 30 seconds later and Murtaugh only had a free throw by Wright left in the arsenal.

The second game was a matter of someone getting the ball in the hole and Valley finally started doing that in the last three minutes.

After Hansen managed a 6-1 lead, Valley shut off the inside game pretty well and Hagan hit eight straight Valley points to send the Vikings ahead to stay.

Still they couldn't get far away as Hansen hurried at times to cut eight to 12 point margins to within easy reach.

The last time when Byron Stanger hit two free throws, making it 39-33. But Kim Beames replied with two free throws, then drove for a layup. Hohnhorst's follow shot broke it open to the final count.

Seven all-Americans named to north team for all-star game

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI)—Seven first-string All-Americans, including Heisman Trophy winner John Cappelletti of Penn State, have been picked for the North Squad for the Senior Bowl college all-star game to be played here Jan. 12.

Along with Cappelletti, also named by UPI as the top offensive player of the season, the North will have All-Americans David Jaynes of Kansas at quarterback; Lynn Swann of Southern Cal as a wide receiver; linemen Daryl White and John Dutton of Nebraska and Lucious Selmon of Oklahoma; and defensive back Artimus Parker of Southern Cal.

The 31-man North squad also has three men who made second team All-American, center Scott Anderson of Missouri, offensive lineman Booker

Brown of Southern Cal, and linebacker Ed O'Neil of Penn State.

The South squad, announced earlier, had only two first team All-Americans—center Billy Wyman of Texas and offensive lineman Buddy Brown of Alabama—and three second-team All-Americans—quarterback Danny White and running back Woody Green of Arizona State and defensive back Eddie Brown of Tennessee.

The North will be coached by Mike McCormack of the Philadelphia Eagles and the South by Don McCafferty of the Detroit Lions. The South, which holds a 14-8-2 edge going into the 25th Senior Bowl, was a 33-30 winner last year.

The North Senior Bowl squad announced Thursday: Quarterbacks—David Jaynes of Kansas and Mike Boryla of Stanford.

New grid loop opens operation by giving franchise to Detroit

DETROIT (UPI)—The new World Football League officially went into business Thursday by granting its first franchise to Detroit.

Gary L. Davidson, president and founder of the new league, said "Detroit" and "nine other teams were expected to start play next fall.

The new team still has no name, no players, no general manager, no coach and no playing site.

"But we are in business, that's for sure," Davidson said. "Detroit is in to stay."

He said the WFL would open a draft for all current professional players in January and another for amateurs—chiefly graduating collegians—in February. But he refused to say the new league would encourage "jumping" by National Football League players.

Yankees force Finley's hand, hire Dick Williams

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boldly breaking a two-month stalemate on their own, the New York Yankees defied Oakland A's owner Charlie Finley Thursday by signing Dick Williams to a three-year contract as their new manager at an estimated $70,000 per season.

In effect, the Yankees told Finley, who has Williams under contract in 1974 and 1975 and still calls him "my manager," to go to court if he doesn't like it.

Both the Yankees and the Athletics now have contracts signed by Williams and if Finley chooses to take legal action, it will eventually be up to the courts to decide which side is right.

At his LaPorte, Ind. home, Finley said the Yankees "declined to make a fast move" but declined further comment. He said he'd "prefer to stay mum this time." In the past, Finley has threatened to sue if the Yanks signed Williams without giving him compensation in money or players.

Williams resigned as Oakland manager on Sunday, Oct. 21 just 15 minutes after the A's had beaten the New York Mets in the seventh game of the World Series. Williams claims Finley gave him a verbal release from the last two years of his contract on national TV after he resigned.

Finley claims he didn't and the two sides have been negotiating for the last 7-12 weeks without being able to agree on compensation.

Gabe Paul, the president of the Yankees, said Finley "has not been notified" of the Yanks' action.

"We have waited long enough," Paul said. "Our club felt it was in the best interests of the Yankees to sign Williams as its manager."

An NBC-TV spokesman, after checking the tape of their Oct. 21 telecast, reported that Finley said on national TV, "even though you're not going to be with us next year, I want to thank you for the great job that you've done for the three years you've been with me."

Williams replied on the telecast, "Thank you Charlie very much and I'm going to miss not being with you but I've made a decision and I'm going to stay with it."

Did those comments by Finley and Williams constitute a verbal release by Finley from his written contract? That's what the courts will have to decide if Finley makes it a legal issue.

The Yankees learned Wednesday shortly after they agreed to terms with Williams that Joe Cronin, the American League president, has called a meeting in Boston next Wednesday to discuss the Finley-Yankees impasse. Cronin already has a meeting next Tuesday to discuss the Detroit-Yankee situation.

Former Yankee manager Ralph Houk resigned on the final day of the season and signed with the Detroit Tigers.

In October even though he had two years left on his contract with New York, Once Finley refused to release Williams, the Yankees brought up the Houk situation.

The Yanks have offered Finley money and players but Finley has refused their offers as inadequate.

Cahill fired as coach of Army

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Army today fired Tom Cahill, coach for eight years, after the worst season in 10 in the 84 years of West Point football history.

The decision not to renew the five-year contract which Cahill had had and which was to expire Jan. 31 was made by Lt. Gen. William A. Knowlton, Superintendent of the Academy, based on the recommendation of the Academy Athletic Board.

"I consider Tom a close friend and a fine person. He has been a great help to the academy during some difficult years, and has had some significant successes."

"In view of the won-loss record of the past season, we felt that if we were going to make a coaching change, the contract expiration time seemed to be the best time to do it. With new coaching leadership, we feel we can be competitive again."

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices opened higher in active trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Minutes after the market opened the Dow Jones industrial average was up 2.84 at 803.27. The number of issues advancing in price was higher than those declining by a margin of almost 3-to-2.

The market has declined steadily since Tuesday, when a three-day rally ended.

Analysts have attributed the latest decline, which resumed the long slide that began last October, to economic uncertainty brought about by the energy crisis, the Arab oil embargo, and the still troubled situation in the Middle East.

Only the gold stocks have consistently bucked the prevailing downward trend, which has hit the glamors and blue chips the hardest. The opening on Upjohn was delayed Friday. The stock had plunged 15 1/2 points in the previous session before trading was halted an hour before the close. The company reported adverse side effects from one of the drugs it is marketing.
