Public employes work usual shifts Dec. 25

TWIN FALLS — Public servants, for the most part, will work routine shifts Christmas Day.

Both Twin Falls police and county sheriff's deputies will work regular shift schedules.

The law enforcement agencies both follow a six days on and two days off work schedule. According to Police Chief Frank Barnett and Sheriff Paul Corder, officers will treat Christmas as a normal day on the shift schedule with no cutback in staff or other special operations.

Skylab views eclipse

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 3 astronauts got an early Christmas present today in the form of a rare partial eclipse of the sun, a research task squeezed between study of Comet Kohoutek and preparation for a spacewalk.

Astronauts Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue used their array of solar telescopes to watch the moon creep in front of the sun, blocking all but the outer ring.

Clouds blocked the view of the annular eclipse for many people in the eastern United States, but the northern part of South America and Northwest Africa afforded the best views anyway.

Valley churches plan Christmas services

Christians gather at churches throughout Magic Valley tonight and tomorrow to celebrate Christmas.

Caroling, candlelight processions and musical performances will highlight many of the Christmas Eve celebrations.

Catholic students will meet at 11:40 p.m. at the St. Benedict's Student Center, Twin Falls, for Christmas morning prayers, a light service and carols, blessing and lighting of the Yule tree and a midnight mass. On Christmas, students will celebrate mass at 9 a.m.

A candlelight communion service will be held at the Disciples of Christ Valley Christian Church at 7:30 p.m. A sermon titled "The Light Has Come" will be given and soloist Joyce Anne Geyer will perform.

Christmas services at the Ascension Episcopal Church include the Blessing of the Creeche at 5 p.m. this evening, the midnight Choral Eucharist starting at 11 p.m. and another celebration of the Eucharist Christmas day at 10 a.m.

The First Presbyterian Church of Twin Falls will hold its traditional candlelight service at 11 p.m. The celebration is titled "A Service of Carols and Candles."

St. Edward's Catholic Church plans 7:30 p.m. and midnight masses tonight. Christmas Day masses are at 8 a.m., 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

At 8:30 tonight members of the Twin Falls Eastside Southern Baptist Church will gather

Nixons return

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and his family completed a weekend at Camp David today and headed back to the White House by car. He scheduled a Christmas eve meeting with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on the Middle East.

Nixon arrived at the White House in a three-car motorcade after a 90-minute, 70 mile drive through the Maryland countryside. Kissinger was waiting to meet him.

The Nixon's planned to spend Christmas in the White House where they will open gifts in the morning and then eat a turkey dinner.

Chesley spending Yule in Holy Land

BURLEY — Capt. Larry Chesley, the Burley native who returned to the United States in February after seven years as a prisoner-of-war in North Vietnam, is spending Christmas in Israel.

The former POW flew to the Holy Land Saturday with a tour group from Brigham Young University according to his father, Verl Chesley, Burley. Accompanied by his wife, Annette, Capt. Chesley will visit Christian shrines in Israel for 10 days. Verl Chesley said his son "had made up his mind that if it was feasible he would go over there this Christmas."

Capt. Chesley was in Burley last week and ate a Christmas supper with the family on Thursday, according to his father.

He currently lives in Tempe, Ariz., where he attends Arizona State University and is working toward a master's degree in business administration.

Arab ministers hone oil weapon

KUWAIT (UPI) — The six oil-producing Persian Gulf states more than doubled the price of petroleum at a meeting Sunday in Tehran. Today oil ministers from all the Arab oil producing states met in Kuwait to see how else they could use their oil weapon against Israel.

The ministers of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) were meeting for the fourth time since Oct. 17, the date they announced they were using their oil weapon in support of the Arab countries fighting Israel.

Many of the ministers attending today's meeting flew in from Tehran, where they had attended a two-day meeting of Persian Gulf members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

The six Persian Gulf states, including non-Arab Iran, decided to more than double crude oil prices as of Jan. 1, 1974. The posted price of the marker crude, Arabian Light, will jump from $5.11 to $11.65.

"It is the end of the former empire of western oil companies," the Shah of Iran said after the meeting. "The era of terrific progress of western countries based on cheap oil has ended. Oil is no longer going to be cheap."

The top item on the agenda for today's meeting was a report from Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, and Algerian Oil Industry Minister Belaid Abdesselam on a tour they made of western capitals.

The two ministers, acting as representatives of all the OAPEC states, went to Western Europe, the United States and Japan to explain the use of the oil weapon.

The Arab oil producers have stopped deliveries to the United States and Holland and have cut production by around 30 per cent in an attempt to pressure the West into forcing concessions from Israel in the Middle East conflict.

The OAPEC states have said they will continue their boycott and production cuts.

Credit effects mullied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) is considering a notice to public companies for fuller disclosure of the effects of high interest rates.

With the stock market in a two-month slump and many companies facing difficulty in raising capital from issues of securities, more firms are being forced to turn to banks where the prime rate has been swinging between 9 and 10 per cent.

"We would like to know what the effect of this high cost money is going to be on operating costs and profits now and in the immediate years ahead," a high SEC official said.

The notice would be similar to one last week in which the SEC said the "timely disclosure" rule requires companies to estimate the "actual or potential impact" of possible fuel shortages would have.

Some companies had been providing information on the energy situation in proxies, filings with the SEC and public announcements. But others had been quiet on energy.

SEC officials said the effect of borrowing money could also be profound on many companies. So far, however, companies have been slow to provide information to investors.

There was no firm date for the disclosure notice on interest, but officials noted that four-day federal holidays for Christmas and New Year's would cause some delays.

Venezuela sets price hike

CARACAS (UPI) — Venezuela will follow Persian Gulf oil producers in decreeing a major hike in its oil exports prices beginning next month, oil sources said today. Observers predicted that prices will soar over the $10 per barrel mark.

Venezuela, which ships almost 1.7 million barrels of oil daily to the U. S. East Coast, now sells its oil for an average $7.74 a barrel and has announced it will hike prices for the 12th time this year at the end of the week.

Extras defeat energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes said Sunday Congress didn't pass the emergency energy bill because it was "loaded down like a Christmas tree" with excess provisions.

Rhodes, of Arizona, also said in a television interview that he doesn't notice any "gloom and doom" feeling among GOP colleagues about their reelection chances in 1974 as a result of the Watergate scandal.

Bangladesh president quits

DACCA (UPI) — Bangladesh President Abu Sayeed Chowdhury resigned unexpectedly today, saying he was too limited by his office and wanted a wider scope of work. He was succeeded by Mohammad Ullah, speaker of the Bangladesh parliament.

Wyoming well spewing gas

GLENROCK, Wyo. (UPI) — Oil company officials have established a two-mile "no man's land" around an oilwell which continues to spew 200-300 barrels of oil and natural gas each hour.

A fire at the well was extinguished Saturday after burning for 17 days. Officials say they hope to have the well capped and sealed by Christmas Day.

Sovjets set publication bar

MOSCOW (UPI) — Boris D. Pankin, chairman of the new Soviet copyright agency, said today the Soviet Union will try to block publication abroad of works it considers anti-Soviet. Singled out were the works of Nobel prize winner Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn. His agency was established after the Soviet Union joined the world copyright convention earlier this year.

More rockets hit Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Soviet-built 122mm rockets hit Phnom Penh today for the second consecutive day, and both sides poured reinforcements into a growing battle for the rocket-launching area five miles northeast of the capital. The latest attack occurred between midnight and noon today. Three of the rockets exploded, one within 100 yards of the city's chief water pump which escaped damage.

Monique given lighting advice

RICHMOND, Calif. (UPI) — With President Nixon's ban on outdoor Christmas lighting, 13-year-old Monique Waldron, an eighth grader at St. Paul's School in nearby San Pablo, wrote to the Richmond Independent for help.

Instead of help, though, the newspaper replied with some timely advice. The exchange, printed on the Independent's front page, went as follows:

Dear Richmond Independent,

Recently you had a news bulletin on the front page. It is enclosed 'tis about outside lights being out. Since my mother saw this, our lights were turned out. Since we don't have inside lights on our tree, couldn't we have our outside lights on? If it's all right with your editor, couldn't you put another news bulletin in the paper, anywhere so my mother will know its all right to have them on. You see we already have them up.

Yours truly,
Monique Waldron

Dear Monique:

Your letter is quite similar to one a little girl named Virginia O'Hanlon wrote in 1897 to the editor of the New York Sun.

Virginia's letter also contained a question about Christmas: "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

Editor Francis P. Church was able to answer her: "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

And right now it would put a warm feeling in the old back's heart if the answer to you could be: "No, Monique, there is no energy crisis."

But that would not be a true answer.

When the editor brought your letter to this desk, the first emotional response was that it is a sad world in which something like an energy crunch could get between a child and her Christmas happiness. It was tempting to urge your Mom to turn on those lights.

But then this thought came: There are hundreds of thousands of families which are saving energy cutting back on such things as outdoor lighting, gasoline, home heating and appliance use.

From this viewpoint, perhaps it is a good thing. It means that many people have decided as individuals to work together on this problem.

A partial solution may be for your mother to move a few of the lights inside the home, if possible, and turn them on only now and then.

A second solution could be the perfect one, but it will take a lot of imagination. But then, imagination is a good quality for which you kids are famous.

When evening comes and you begin to feel sad because it's dark around your house, just look toward the sky. On an unclouded night you will be able to pick the brightest star in the heavens and make it your own Christmas light.

It will be a light-energy crisis or not that will be there whenever you want to brighten your Christmas.

Live shell

MOSCOW (UPI) — A visitor to the historical museum at Pyramu, a town in Estonia, peered into the barrel of a World War II mortar and found himself looking at a live shell.

Museum officials, who did not know the shell was there, called in experts to remove it, the army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said today.

The experts found the shell would not budge, so they took the mortar to a safe place and blew it up.

Berlin, author cited

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Irving Berlin, who wrote "White Christmas" and Johnny Marks, the "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" author, nosed out Charles Dickens today for spirit of Christmas awards.

Berlin and Marks were named by the International Society of Santa Claus as the first recipients of the society's annual awards to persons who have contributed greatly to the spirit of the Christmas season.

The society's bewhiskered 8,370 members picked the two men over 11 others on a list of possible recipients.

Runners up included Charles Dickens for his "Christmas Carol" and Clement C. Moore who wrote "Twas the night before Christmas."

The awards to Berlin and Marks will be given in January in New York.

Papal masses mark Christmas season

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI, hopeful of lasting peace in the Middle East as he marks his 10th Christmas as Roman Catholic pontiff, celebrates Midnight Mass tonight in St. Peter's basilica.

His sermon from a small throne in front of the main altar was being televised around the world, the Vatican said.

On Christmas Day at 11 a.m. the spiritual leader of more than 600 million Roman Catholics will celebrate another Mass in St. Peter's, then go to the basilica's main balcony overlooking the square to deliver his annual Christmas blessing to the city of Rome and the world.

It was the pope's first Christmas Eve Mass in St. Peter's in more than five years. Last year he donned a white hard hat and went into the depths of a railway tunnel to celebrate the arrival of Christmas among construction workers. In earlier years he celebrated Midnight Mass in the Sistine Chapel for members of the Vatican diplomatic corps.

In his Christmas address to the College of Cardinals on the same day the Geneva talks began, Pope Paul said "the Geneva peace conference is opening the way to negotiations that allow one to hope for positive developments for the definitive settlement of a long conflict."

Skylab trio finds hidden Yule gift

HOUSTON (UPI) — On the second day before Christmas Mission Control wished the Skylab astronauts three sexy ladies, two working gyroscopes and a package in a pear tree.

The three sexy ladies couldn't make it up to the space laboratory though and neither could the gyroscopes. But the package turned out to be a carefully wrapped Christmas present hidden for Skylab pilots Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue in a locker in their Apollo command module.

"Now we've got a present to go under our tree," Pogue said after he was tipped by ground controllers on where to look for the gift.

If all goes according to plan, the pilots will also discover sometime today a 36-inch tall green cloth Christmas tree buried in a box beneath the gear needed for their Christmas day spacewalk. The pilots have not been tipped off about the tree. They announced Saturday they had built their own makeshift tree out of odds and ends they found in the space station.

Flight controllers also planned to transmit a Christmas card to the crew tonight over a teleprinter circuit used for sending the daily planning messages. The two-foot long card has pictures of the sun, Skylab itself, several gifts and Santa's sleigh, all formed by different patterns of regular teleprinter letters.

Mission Control worked up a list for the astronauts for each of the 12 days of Christmas: 12,000 pounds of stabilization fuel, 11 Playboy magazines, 10 bottles of Christmas cheer, nine solar flares, eight Christmas cookies, seven home cooked meals, six camera filters, five fruit cakes, four pairs of new shoes, three sexy ladies, two working gyros and their package hidden in the locker.

The astronauts are the second space crew to spend Christmas away from Earth. The Apollo 8 crew, the first to fly to the moon, beamed back a Christmas Eve television show five years ago today that included readings of the story of creation from The Bible.

While the astronauts spend Christmas Eve searching for presents, Christmas Day was expected to be a heavy work day with five hours spent outside the spacelab to assemble data on Comet Kohoutek.

IRA bomb goes off early; toll heavy

BELFAST (UPI) — An Irish Republican Army bomb exploded prematurely in the hands of an IRA gunman today, killing and maiming two dozen Irishmen celebrating Christmas eve in a border town pub.

An army spokesman said at least four persons died and 20 were injured in the blast at the Malachy Clarke bar in Newry. Five of the wounded were reported to have lost limbs.

One of the survivors said two IRA gunmen had just entered the pub with the bomb and ordered everyone to leave when it exploded.

"One of them had just said we had five minutes to run when it went up," he said. "It blew the two gunmen to smithereens."

An army spokesman said

Traditional Yule

Pittstown, N.J. (UPI)

"I just plan on spending a traditional American Christmas with my family," says former Air Force Capt. Joseph E. Milligan, who will celebrate his first holiday season at home after 5 1/2 years in a North Vietnamese prisoner of war camp.

"It's going to be great," the 32-year-old Milligan said Sunday.

As a prisoner he was served turkey each Christmas, Milligan said, "but we didn't get all the trimmings that went with it. I used to think about the food most of the time—some of the traditional American food like pumpkin pie and cranberry sauce. We're planning to have all those this Christmas."

Milligan and his wife, a former Air Force nurse whom he married six months after his release from prison, were busy Sunday making a gingerbread castle.

"I saw it on the front of a magazine and I decided to give it a try," Milligan said. "It's coming out really fine—it looks like it's going to be successful."

Milligan, who is attending Rutgers University to prepare for veterinary school, said his only disappointment this year is that there may not be snow for Christmas.

"I was hoping we'd have a white Christmas," he said, "besides not spending Christmas at home I haven't seen a white Christmas in quite a while. It looks like all the snow is melting right now."

Christmas Day Milligan and his 35-year-old wife plan to serve dinner to his parents, his grandmother and his two sisters and their families.

Renteria was listed in fairly good condition at Caldwell hospital.

Stickers not read

BOISE (UPI) — Buyers and dealers are paying very little attention to the mileage stickers affixed to new cars to indicate the kind of gas economy that can be expected from the new automobiles.

A survey by the Idaho Statesman Newspaper Sunday said dealers in the Boise area are leaving the stickers on but have found the car-buying public really do not read the stickers.

The dealers feel the stickers give only a vague approximation of what mileage the cars will get because so much depends on the driver involved in each case.

But Eric Stork, director of the environmental Protection Agency's Mobile Source Pollution Control programs, feels the stickers really are an accurate account of what kind of economy the cars can get.

Rehabilitation possible

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil Andrus announced Sunday the Len B. Jordan state office building will be dedicated in ceremonies beginning at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

There will be remarks by Andrus and the unveiling of a commemorative plaque in honor of the former governor and senator.

"As I said in my State of the State message earlier this year, Sen. Len B. Jordan is a man of wisdom and courage, a man who exemplifies the best there is in Idaho," said Andrus. "As a senator, and before that, as governor, Len Jordan placed principle before politics, the people before himself."

Liquor target

BOISE (UPI) — Boise police have reported almost daily occurrence of liquor being stolen from automobiles while the drivers were in a grocery store purchasing potato chips and mix to go with the liquor.

Boise Police Lt. Harold Nash said he believes the culprits are under-age drinkers. He said he thinks they are watching cars leave the liquor stores and when one stops nearby, they go over and remove the liquor while the driver is in a store.

He said liquor on plan view is an easy target, especially if a car is not locked.

Scholarship established

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — The College of Idaho's establishing a science scholarship in the name of Willis E. Fry.

Fry bequeathed $50,000 to the college for scholarship use. He had studied physics and paleontology at the college from 1945 to 1947.

Fry was a native of Nyssa, Ore.

Part of claim dismissed

BOISE (UPI) — A federal district judge has dismissed part of a claim filed by an inmate from Idaho State Prison, saying the prisoner cannot collect $10,000 for each alleged violation of his rights.

Dan Goodrick filed the suit against Prison Warden Raymond May and the State Board of Corrections alleging violation of his rights when he was transferred to the prison's maximum security section. He charged this was done without due process and that his rights also had been violated in other ways while in prison.

He asked $10,000 for each violation and or immediate release from custody.

Judge J. Blaine Anderson dismissed the complaint as it related to the money claim but left the case open for further filing on other allegations had the plea for release.

150 families get baskets

TWIN FALLS — Christmas baskets were being delivered today to needy area families.

About 150 Twin Falls County families will receive baskets of food and toys through a co-ordinated program of the YMCA-YWCA. Mrs. Sally Molyneux is director of the Y-program.

The Twin Falls Elks Lodge delivered food baskets to 83 families this morning, according to Bob Skredteru, chairman of group's Christmas committee.

The baskets will feed "from 3 to 11 people in each family," Skredteru said. "There's enough food for about one week."

He said the food included two chickens, bread, sugar, canned goods, pinto beans, candy, flour, lard and butter.

The Twin Falls Fire Department distributed baskets of toys to 45 families this afternoon. Lt. Roger Bolton said the new and used toys were donated by Magic Valley residents and merchants throughout the year.

Off-duty firemen used their personal vehicles for the deliveries, Bolton said.

The St. Edward's Catholic Church donated 40 food baskets and Boy Scouts from Troops 65, 67 and 100 collected food from several schools in the area and assisted in distribution.

A similar Christmas basket program was conducted in the Buhl, Piler, and Castleford area under the direction of Mrs. Pauline Warner, Wendell.

The Twin Falls Jaycees sponsored a shopping tour for 14 Twin Falls children Saturday. The children received clothing valued at about $1,000 and gifts from downtown merchants.

Church class aids TF family

BUHL — Thanks to the Young Adult class of the Buhl Christian Church, a needy Twin Falls family will have a more comfortable Christmas.

Darcy Farmer, Buhl, learned of the family's plight and told members of the class about them.

The family, which has six children, was living in a house with no stove or refrigerator and no furniture of any kind. They lacked clothing and essential housekeeping items.

The class members solicited donations from the Christian Church congregation and were able to provide them with a stove and some furniture items plus clothing, food and bedding. In all, two pickup loads of donated items were delivered with an estimated value of about $1,000.

Three juveniles arrested in TF

TWIN FALLS — Three juveniles were arrested by Twin Falls police Saturday after a Twin Falls man surprised them burglarizing his home.

According to police reports, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Grover returned home from Christmas shopping about 1:10 p.m. Saturday and saw the juveniles running from their house.

Upon entering their house, the Grovers found several boxes of items ready to be carried out. Appliances had also been collected in the middle of a room, presumably to be taken, the couple reported.

Police officers, responding to the call, located the vehicle in which the juveniles escaped and, after a car chase, took the juveniles into custody.

Chief of police Frank Barnett said the youths were all from Burley. They were turned over to the Burley police department for further action, Barnett said.

In other police action over the weekend: Twin Falls police arrested Ernest Gergory Woesner, 26, Twin Falls, for grand larceny in connection with the theft of a car a few hours earlier from the parking lot of a Twin Falls bar.

Woesner remains in the county jail in lieu of $1,000 bond. Investigated a break-in at Gem State Oil Co., 1319 Highland Avenue E. Gem State employees told police the company was entered between 4 p.m. Sunday and 7 a.m. today. Every room in the firm's headquarters was reportedly ransacked. Gem State officials are inventorying to determine what items, if any, are missing, police reports said.

TF man accepts foreign role

TWIN FALLS — Dr. Richard Ohms, University of Idaho extension potato specialist at Twin Falls, will leave the United States about mid-January on a six-month foreign assignment.

Ohms has been granted sabbatical leave to serve as a regional leader for the International Potato Center. Although the center's headquarters are at Lima, Peru, Ohms will be stationed at Beirut, Lebanon, he said. He will be joined there by his wife and two sons in May.

From his Lebanon headquarters, Ohms will travel throughout his home base country plus Algeria and Egypt and possibly Syria, Jordan and Morocco.

His assignment is to develop a regional potato seed program to better meet the needs of the various countries. He will explore the requirements of such a program, document the situation in relation to the program, and recommend solutions to the problems standing in the way of development.

Ohms said the potential for improving potato production in the part of the world he will visit is excellent. He noted that people in those countries prefer yellow-fleshed potatoes rather than the white-fleshed tubers popular in the United States.

He will be working closely with Dr. John Niederhauser of Mexico, associate head of the International Potato Center's outreach (extension) program.

The center's work is funded through the World Bank.

Women candidates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, by voice vote and with no audible negatives, has voted to allow women candidates into the nation's military academies.

In brief debate, several senators said women candidates they had suggested for the academies had been rejected. "I'm pretty burned up about it," Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said. "I nominated two women this year."

"They passed the examination. But there were 'regulations,'" Mansfield said. However, he was not giving up.

Holiday traffic reported light

United Press International

The gasoline situation apparently prompted motorists to make their trip home for the holidays early or wait until today.

In some areas, the decision not to travel on Sunday may have been unnecessary since service stations planning to close Christmas stayed open.

The Automobile Club of Southern California found about 30 per cent of the gasoline stations in its area open on Sunday—much more than on recent Sundays. They were opened because they planned to close Christmas.

Traffic out of Los Angeles was unusually light, however, apparently from fear motorists could not find open stations.

A survey by the Automobile Club of Michigan found that 92 per cent of the state's stations would close at 9 p.m. Monday and 90 per cent would not open at all on Christmas. This compared with 85 per cent closed on Sunday.

"It's really light for a Sunday on a holiday weekend," a dispatcher for the New York Thruway Authority said. Thruway stations were closed Sunday. "If you want my guess, I'd bet most have already gone, knowing they couldn't get gas on Sunday."

"If anyone is making a Christmas trip and they haven't left yet, they'll probably wait 'til 10 o'clock tonight (Sunday)," the dispatcher said. "Then they can drive a few hours and get gas after the stations start selling gas again at midnight."

Bob Myers, radio operator for the West Virginia State Department of Highways, reported traffic Sunday "fairly light" for this time of year.

Maryland and Delaware reported light traffic because of station closings. The Maryland Automobile Association said most Maryland stations would close Christmas Eve and Christmas day.

Florida police reported traffic was deflated because of Sunday closings.

Bus, train and air stations offered a contrast to the uncrowded highways. Hundreds of travelers lined up at departure gates at New York's Grand Central Terminal.

Bus and train service out of Washington, D.C., was heavily used, although National and Dulles airports serving the capital reported passenger volume died down Sunday morning.

Bus stations and the airport in Nashville, Tenn., were packed.

Airlines and buses in Albuquerque, N.M., reported travel had slackened off but Amtrak was full.

Bus, air and train travel out of Indianapolis, Ind., was limited.

Christmas poem printed in 1823

NEW YORK (UPI)—One hundred fifty years ago Sunday the Troy, N. Y., Sentinel printed a poem by Clement C. Moore. It began "Twas the night before Christmas."

It was that poem that depicted Santa had "a broad face and a little round belly that shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly" and that his "droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow and the beard of his chin was as white as the snow."

Moore also noted St. Nick's "miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer."

In an introduction to the poem, which was printed anonymously on Dec. 23, 1823, the Sentinel said:

"We know not to whom we are indebted for the following description of that unwarlike patron of children — that homely but delightful personification of parental kindness — Santa Claus, his costume and equipage, as he goes about visiting the firesides of his happy land, laden with Christmas bounties; but from whomsoever it may have come, we give thanks for it."

Moore wrote the 56-line poem in 1822 for his nine children. A spokesman for Columbia University, Moore's alma mater, said he used as his model for Santa a handy man who delivered the Moore family Christmas presents by sleigh to their friends and neighbors in New York City.

He meant the poem for use only within the family, the spokesman said. It was a friend, Harriet Butler of Troy, who heard the poem from one of the children, wrote it down and mailed it to the Sentinel.

Once in print, the work became an annual Christmas-time feature in the newspaper. Reprint requests poured in, and the poem was soon a national favorite.

Moore was a Columbia trustee, and the university library holds his diary and several letters, along with early copies of the poem.

Honesty proven

Mike Mingo, 16, and Spencer Smith, 15, of Twin Falls found a money bag lying in a parking lot. The bag contained $772.

There must have been a strong temptation to keep the cash. By their own account, the boys counted the money "three or four times." "I hadn't held that much money before," Mingo said.

Then the boys gave the bag to police who returned it to its original owner.

The two deserve credit for being honest. They are among a large number of people who would have done the same thing if given the chance.

In one respect, however, the boys are more fortunate than most other people.

Few others have had such a clear-cut chance to demonstrate to themselves their own honesty. People who have never faced such a choice often are nagged by the question, "What would I have done?"

Mike and Spencer will carry within themselves, once and for all, the knowledge of their own character.

That knowledge is worth more than a bag of money.

Watergate backlash

Editor and Publisher

The memory of the American public is notably a short one. On the evening of April 30, President Nixon in his nationwide televised address said: "It was the (American) system that has brought the facts to light and that will bring those guilty to justice. A system that in this case has included a determined grand jury, honest prosecutors, a courageous judge, John Sirica, and a vigorous free press." He was talking about Watergate.

Since that time, newspapers all over the country have been receiving and printing letters from readers accusing the press of carrying on a personal vendetta against the President. Some editors have joined the fray charging others with this sin. This has been in spite of the new revelations upon revelations that have come to light in the case. The public doesn't have the full and complete story yet about who did what to whom during the Watergate bugging and subsequent cover-ups. What's more, a large part of the reading public doesn't seem to care. There is political partisanship in all this, it appears, but the press is right back in the doghouse.

The trend is to isolate the press as a third party in the debate. Statements out of Washington about whether the press will be allowed to do this or that, what the press is doing, etc., foster that trend. Only Senator Ervin and his committee seem to appreciate the true role of the press as the communications link to keep the public advised.

If newspapers don't continually explain their role, in their own columns, as the bringer of good and bad tidings to their readers, it will be their own shirts that go to the wringer. Editors should not allow themselves to be put in the position of the mythological bearer of bad news who had his head cut off. It could happen.

BERRY'S WORLD

"O.K. wise guy! If it's Christmastime — where's Bob Hope?"

Reader reaction harsh

I have here, addressed "An Open Letter to Mr. Buckley," a communication reminding me that, in this imperfect world, I am not everybody's favorite analyst.

The gentleman in question, who is from New York, says that once upon a time he admired me. "No more. Damn you, Buckley, and your friends, Schultz and Nixon, and your whole goddam arrogant 'elitist' club of very fat cats. I want some gas for my 1965 Falcon, so I can get to work, do the shopping, take my kids to the games they play, ride out to the beach before the oil slicks move in. By forcing the price of gas up to perhaps a dollar or more a gallon, the rich and powerful will price the rest of us out of the market, leaving just enough gas for the rich and powerful."

One can only hope, and in the heat of so categorical an anathema, that there is an energy crisis in hell. And wonder, sadly, at the sad estate of economic understanding.

Here, I would judge, are the salient figures, and the irreducible minimum in economic analysis.

1. Nobody believes that that which is scarce can, by the process of rationing, be made plentiful. Even John Kenneth Galbraith, the principal enthusiast for wage and price control, gives up at this level.

2. Although rationing is clearly justified when there is a dire physical shortage of an essential commodity, that is not now in prospect. In the first quarter of 1974, petroleum supplies are expected to fall by about 3 million barrels a day short of the projected demand of 19.7 million barrels. That is still 2 million barrels per day more than the average use throughout 1970. The population of the United States has not risen significantly since 1970. So that at worst, we are facing a situation in which we would have to get along with a little more than we got along with in 1970.

3. The average American family spends 22 per cent of its budget on food. When food became scarce last spring, there was no serious lobby for rationing — because of the universal experience with rationing, as a useless, and counter-productive, means of coping with scarcity. Besides, the farming community is not an easy villain.

By contrast, the average family spends about 2.7 per cent on gasoline — about one tenth what it spends on food. A rise in the price of gasoline by the same amount as the rise in the price of food will make much more of an economic difference to the typical American family.

4. Professor Philip Gramm of Texas A & M has collected a set of projections. "Estimates of how much the demand for energy sources would decline in a period less than one year, if prices rose by one per cent, range from roughly 0.2 per cent to 1.2 per cent. Estimates of how much the quantity supplied would rise in the same period, if prices rose by one per cent, vary from roughly 0.6 per cent to 2 per cent.

5. Like steak, plumbing, and ballet teachers, the price of gasoline is a function of supply and demand. Apparently there are those who do not know this, and while not wishing that they be damned, one hopes they will not propel Congress or the executive into economic absurdity.

Laird departure grave WH loss

(c) Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON — The White House will lose a shrewd political intelligence and a skilled conciliator when Melvin R. Laird leaves his post as a presidential counselor on Feb. 1.

Despite President Nixon's expression of "deepest personal regret" over Laird's departure, however, Laird's experienced advice on political matters will scarcely be missed. And the reason is a simple one: his advice was sparingly solicited and rarely used.

The former Wisconsin Congressman who served as defense secretary in Nixon's first term understood, when he went to work for the President that he was not the most welcome addition to the staff.

He had retired to private life and looked forward to private pursuits. He was prevailed upon to postpone his plans by House Republican leaders, notably Gerald Ford of Michigan and John Rhodes of Arizona.

His former House colleagues believed Laird could move into the devaluation caused by the Watergate-related departure of H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, and rehabilitate a shattered political entity at the White House.

Laird was a reluctant recruit, but his party loyalty and acute sense of public service apparently overtook his personal doubts. He knew that Gen. Alexander Haig, Haldeman's replacement as Nixon's chief of staff, would comfort the President with uncritical agreement while he, Laird, was dispensing hard-headed political recommendations which a beleaguered chief executive might come to resent.

PETER LISAGOR

Laird decided early to avoid the Watergate mess. Upon later reflection, he concluded that perhaps he ought to have weighed in anyhow.

Laird kept to his task, working on legislative compromises, giving Congress a sense of high-level contact at the White House, and, after Spiro Agnew's fall, promoting Ford to vice president.

But he had no easy, informal relationship with

Scrooge scores Dickens

(c) New York Times Service

Christmas almost here again, and I suddenly remember Ebenezer Scrooge. Must visit him. "You never think of me until Christmas rolls around," he always complains.

This is foolish, of course. The last time he complained in this vein was at the beach, Fire Island. I had been invited for a weekend in July. "May I bring Ebenezer Scrooge?" I asked. We sat in the sand. He was rubbing suntan lotion on his abdomen. "People never think of me until Christmas rolls around," he complained.

He likes to bathe nude in the ocean. "Skinny-dipping," he calls it. "I should have been horrified by the idea of skinny-dipping had anyone suggested it to me before the famous character transformation celebrated by that monstrous hack, Dickens," Scrooge once observed.

"Was it his closer contact thereafter with Cratchit that led to a more hedonistic lifestyle?" I asked.

"Don't say lifestyle," he said. "Dreadful as Dickens was — a vicious distorter, I might say — nevertheless, he would never have used such a barbarism as 'lifestyle.' As for Cratchit, he hadn't an ounce of capacity left for pleasure once Christmas dinner was ended. Saved it all up, all year long, for Christmas dinner. That was Cratchit. From then to the next Christmas he was a pleasureless as a paper bag."

Christmas is a melancholy time now for Ebenezer Scrooge. He lives in a trailer park. Children who have been inflamed by unflattering television representations of Scrooge throw snowballs which make a fierce racket inside the metal walls of his trailer.

We sit by the television set. He speaks vilely about Dickens.

I ask if he does not fear that one of the ghosts of Christmas may overhear his abusive language and subject him to more terror therapy. "Don't talk nonsense," says Scrooge. "You haven't heard vile language until you have heard the Ghost of Christmas Past go to work on Dickens after a few bourbons."

It appears that the Ghost of Christmas Past despised the Ghost of Christmas Future and has never forgiven Dickens for forcing them together in the same story.

"Dickens was utterly lacking in sensitivity," Scrooge says. "He destroyed me, you know."

As Ebenezer Scrooge tells it, he was not the misanthropic painted by Dickens, but merely a typical 19th-century business man.

"But didn't you say 'Humbug!' whenever you were wished a Merry Christmas, Mr. Scrooge?" "Of course not. I never said 'Humbug!' in my life. It is an absurd word concocted by an absurd writer of children's tales."

RUSSELL BAKER

"But Dickens' account of the incident states — 'Dickens! Bah! Humbug! That's what I say to Dickens!'"

It was thirty years ago in Passaic, N.J., I first met Scrooge. He had emigrated from England a dozen years before. He gives various reasons. "The taxes were becoming confiscatory," he says at times. "I was afraid I would fall under the pen of Evelyn Waugh and be subjected to humiliation even worse than Dickens gave me," he sometimes says.

We are seated in his metal trailer. He is confidential.

"It was too much goose," he whispers. "Every Christmas, there was no way out of it. Another goose to be eaten. I had always disliked goose and now I had reached a state where I couldn't look another goose in the quill. I emigrated."

First snow just right

SCRABBLE, Va. — The first snow of the winter began falling in Rappahannock County a little before two o'clock on the morning of Sunday, Dec. 16.

It kept on falling until 10 o'clock Monday night, and meanwhile, a wind blew out of the north in gusts up to 50 mph. We awoke to brilliant sunshine on Tuesday, snow bound in beauty.

The high meadows that last week were brown-stubbed and sedge-whiskered were suddenly as smooth and white as wedding cakes. Nothing remained of the stone walls. They were frosted over in mounds of icing. The wind, like a master baker, had rinded garlands of hedge-rows and turned stumps into rosebuds. At the crest of White Walnut Hill, in white mustache and dark posts, the summer house stood like a stiff and aging bridegroom.

One writes of the first snow with a small sense of diffidence, out of respect for those who have too much or too little. This is the way it is with mixed blessings.

Here in the Blue Ridge mountains, the season's first snow is always just right. It is perfect — rarely too much, seldom too little. Monday's blizzard came on like a fine fairy tale, filled with terrifying sound effects, the wind shrieking in the eaves and the birds fleeing for cover.

So we emerged with a wedding-book morning, the hills white-skirted, satin-shining, the rippling fabric edged in frosty lace and stitched in spirital hems. For hours, almost nothing moved. From the kitchen we could see only the birds in ribbon flight — red cardinals and blue juncos, titmice and grosbeaks, a ragged band of urechin sparrows. After awhile the two colliers ventured out, blonde Katie and dark Lorenzo, romping like children in the scalloped drifts.

It is no bad thing, for a while at least, to be literally snowbound. With the roads blocked and the driveway blocked, the outside world cannot intrude.

Soon — too soon — the road crews come, orange-beetled, sharp-beaked, crawling inexorably through the cotton drifts. The road opens. Somewhere, far away, a weary lineman throws a switch, and power is restored. All the perils of civilization once more descend.

But there are sweet perils also — lusty sons who come stamping and tromping, a granddaughter dressed in Christmas red, the rousing din of well-loved carols.

Christmases ought to be this way. God knows they are not for much of mankind, but even where the snow is not so perfect, and the fires not so warm or the loved ones not so close, perhaps the spirit of Christmas survives as bravely as the plump cardinal just beyond my office window.

He sits, Santa-scarlet, on a snowy branch, beautiful and enduring, asking to be remembered as a part of Christmas, like the star, like the silent sheep, like the Child.

Santa poses December dilemma to Jewist parents

By NADINE BROZAN

(c) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — To many Jewish parents, it's "the December dilemma" — the question of what to do about Christmas in a land that reveres the holiday not only at the altar, but in the marketplace, the office, the classroom, in every lobby, on every street corner.

To buy a tree or not? To hang the wreath, the tinsel and the stockings? Or to deny children what their peers enjoy? In short, to partake of the day or forswear it? So go the questions.

"Basically, we live in an affluent society and haven't denied our children anything and suddenly we must," said Judith Blumberg of Riverside, Conn., who wrote a column on the subject for this month's Temple Shalom Bulletin. The temple is a conservative congregation in Greenwich.

Even Orthodox Jews, who, of course suffer no turmoil over Christmas, cannot entirely avoid its baggage.

Mrs. Myriam Altman noted that despite the fact that her sons, Michael, 7½, and Daniel, 4½, wear Yarmulkes marking their faith openly visible, "people impose Christmas on them."

"It's assumed we celebrate Christmas," she said. "On the bus, strangers often ask, 'And what is Santa going to bring you?'"

Michael was so flustered by such an approach when he was 3 that he blurted out, "I'm not Christmas, I'm Hanukkah."

"It is a problem, and it's difficult, to explain how this minority does not participate in what appears to be an American folkway, a folkway that has made Santa Claus rather than Jesus Christ the central symbol of Christmas," said Isaac Toubin, executive vice president of the American Association for Jewish Education and a former rabbi.

Indeed, it is the way Jews perceive Christmas — as a secular festival or a holy commemoration — along with the extent of their religious conviction, that seems to determine whether they embrace Christmas or eschew it.

There are a goodly number of Jews who set up trees and give their children yuletide gifts without feeling that their fidelity to Judaism has been diluted or compromised.

"We observe Christmas with a tree and presents, and we light the Hanukkah menorah and give gifts every night (of the eight-day holiday which began Wednesday evening)," said Gail Levensin, who has two daughters, 8 and 5, and a son, nearly 2. "My children feel no confusion whatsoever. There is simply no Christ in our Christmas."

To many Jews — Orthodox Jews in particular but by no means exclusively — any degree of capitulation would be heresy. As Myriam Altman put it, "Christmas is a Christian holiday. I respect people for their beliefs, but it's simply not our holiday."

While there are few tangible data available, rabbis and other leaders are beginning to sense a renaissance in Jewish commitment, which is manifested, among other ways, in revitalization of the holidays.

The change is attributed in part to the ethnic pride movement, in part to the decline of the drive to assimilate.

"More Jews than ever before are not buying Christmas trees for the same reasons they're no longer bobbing their noses or changing their names," said Richard Cohen, associate executive director of the American Jewish Congress. "Now it's all right to have a larger nose or a name that doesn't sound Anglo-Saxon."

Laws prohibit access to list

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's secretary of state is required to make available upon request voter registration lists. But there's a catch — laws to provide him with a means to obtain them.

Secretary Pete Cenarrusa said he is obligated by statute to make these lists available for a fee to anyone who wants them.

Headed, however, "we don't have any legal way to get them."

Cenarrusa said there should be an amendment to the present statutes making it compulsory for the clerks in each county to forward them to his office.

As it is now, the secretary said, "I'm just like a private citizen. I would have to compensate the counties for the lists."

On the other hand, he admitted that clerks, as a whole, were cooperative in supplying him with items that his office requested.

Cenarrusa said thought had been given to microfilming all the registration cards from all the counties, "but we don't have the staff, room or the money."

He noted that as long as his office was obligated by law to be the central depository for voter registration lists, "we will have to have some way of providing them."

Although Chief Deputy Secretary of State John Croner did not foresee any problems by not having the lists available, he said, "We should have the provisions to fulfill our statutory obligation."

Cenarrusa said there had been some talk about having a computer list.

However, Croner said this would have to be studied further "because we are not sure it would be economically feasible."

New fad—'Toes Hose'

16-MONTH-OLD Melissa Capuano, Everett, Miss., looks up curiously at the newest fad in stockings called the "Toes Hose," which could be the latest thing to hang over fireplaces this Christmas. With the innovation of sewn in toes, children may find a little extra in their stockings this year. (UPI)

Legislative hopes eyed

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Veterans Affairs Commission said Saturday legislation has been drafted to restore Memorial Day in the Gem State to May 30 and to provide tax relief for hardship cases.

The commission said it had met with Gov. Cecil D. Andrus earlier this week to appraise the chief executive of legislative desires of the commission and the Idaho United Veterans Council.

Primarily the two groups, said

Col. Walter J. Angers, council chairman, discussed with Andrus the need for state supported nursing home care for veterans, the tax relief for disabled veterans involving hardship and Memorial Day.

Under the nursing home care proposals, Angers said the council was concerned only with those veterans requiring care who cannot pay the cost of private nursing home care.

Other problems discussed with the governor were:

—Completion of the Veterans Memorial Park on State Street in Boise.

—Need for additional county service officers and more competent ones in several areas in order to obtain the best service possible for veterans.

—Hope the next session of the legislature would require public buildings to comply with the code to provide easy access and movement for disabled and wheelchair persons.

—Concern for the place of the commission and veterans' home in state reorganization.

Angers said the commission and home should not be placed in agency with a "welfare" connotation, or that the reorganization of state government take away the prestige and identity of the Idaho veterans.

He said Andrus assured the group that he was aware of some of the desires of veterans organizations and suggested areas in which veterans could help themselves.

Most Idaho roads good for travel

Student police force organized

POCATELLO (UPI) — Birth of the Mindome sports arena at Idaho State College has brought about creation of a student police force to provide increased security.

The force originally was created in 1970 and has now grown to 18 students, according to Ron Binglell of Pocatello, a senior student majoring in government, who is in charge of the unit.

The force is divided into two squads headed by Lt. Jerry Olson of Rupert and Sgt. Dave Harwood of Idaho Falls. Binglell is assisted by a deputy commander, Lt. Bill Lake of Los Angeles, Calif.

Primary function of the force is crowd control during events at the Mindome, which is done in close relationship with the Pocatello Police department.

The student officers receive training in crowd control, first aid, public relations, firearms safety, self-defense, behavior and juvenile delinquency.

Binglell said the trend toward student security forces is nationwide.

He said the purpose of a security force was threefold:

—To give service to the university community.

—To educate the academic community, students and others in self-defense.

—To enforce the rules and regulations of the university and the larger community.

North Korea renews demand

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UPI) — North Korea renewed its demand today that all South Korean ships get advance permission from the North in order to sail to five South Korean-held islands in the Yellow Sea.

North Korea reiterated that waters around the five islands are under its jurisdiction, and warned that a serious situation would result unless its demand is met.

It was the second time since Oct. 1 the North laid territorial claim to the waters and demanded that vessels from the South get prior Northern approval to sail in the area.

The United Nations Command (UNC), as it did on the previous occasion, rejected the North Korean claim and demand and said UNC will honor its obligation to support the people living on the five islands.

The exchange took place at the 347th meeting of the Korean Military Armistice Commission (MAC). North Korea called the meeting.

North Korean Army Maj. Gen. Kim Pung-Sop, Communist spokesman, said UNC should honor the North Korean claim and demand to ensure safe naval passage in the area.

"I admit the five islands are under your military control but the waters around them are under our jurisdiction," Kim said. "Therefore I demand the withdrawal of all military vessels from the area."

Since North Korea raised the claims, South Korea has been continuing ferry service under heavy naval escort to support 15,000 residents of the islands.

The five islands are Yonpyongdo, Saehongdo, Daechongdo, Paengnyondo and Wodo, located 75 to 135 miles west of Seoul. They are South Korean—military outposts overlooking the sea adjacent to the western tip of the military demarcation line dividing South and North Korea.

Storm hits Denver

DENVER (UPI) — Metropolitan Denver was immobilized today by a wind-whipped snowstorm that piled up three-to-10-foot drifts, virtually shut down Stapleton Airport and left police, fire and ambulances stranded along with other motorists.

"Nothing is moving," said newsmen Bob Scott of radio station KHOW in a telephoned report to United Press International. "It took me two hours in a four-wheel drive vehicle to cover my normal 12-minute trip to work."

"The two east-west runways at Stapleton are closed and they have given up trying to clear them with snowplows because of the drifts until the wind dies down," Scott said.

"All major east-west highways are closed and those to the north and west are just marginally open to only the most urgent emergency travel," Scott said.

"The snow plows have just quit trying to operate in Jefferson County (just to the west of downtown Denver) because they were losing too many of them."

Committee meets

TWIN FALLS — The annual mid-year Idaho FFA Executive Committee meeting in Twin Falls was attended by representatives from throughout the state, officials of the Association said today.

Delegate action recommended at the 1973 State FFA Leadership Conference was reviewed. All recommendations were approved and appropriate action is to be taken.

Plans were made for the 1974 State FFA Leadership conference. The theme of the conference will be "FFA — Achieving the Impossible Dream."

State FFA Executive Committee members attending included Marvin Stokes, state executive secretary; Ralph Edwards, state advisor; six state FFA officers and eight district presidents.

POWs plan 'first'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the POWs this will be the first Christmas at home and a far different Christmas from those spent in Hanoi singing hymns while the North Vietnamese took propaganda pictures.

As the men tolerantly sang out "Hark The Herald Angels Sing," others holding song books in front of their faces sang different words, exchanging information to be fed into the prison network; for Christmas was the one time groups of POWs were brought together from scattered camps.

Air Force Col. James F. Young spent last Christmas at Dogpatch, a bleak maximum security prison in the mountains. This year most of the voices will be quiet as Young spends a quiet Christmas at home with his wife, mother and three daughters.

"It's the first one at home in eight years," Young said. "We'll go to midnight services Christmas Eve and then spend Christmas day eating and talking and reminiscing."

Navy Cmdr. Hugh A. Stafford remembers many Christmas services during his five and a half years in North Vietnam.

"Those Christmas services were really a good thing because they let us communicate with other camps," Stafford said in an interview. "I'd get up close to a strange face and he'd sing in tune with the hymn. My name is Tom McNish. I live in the Zoo."

"The North Vietnamese preacher sounded just like the interrogators. He spouted the same party line about this 'illegal, immoral and unjust war,'" Stafford said.

On Christmas and New Year's, the Vietnamese, New Year, the POWs got one special meal—turkey, potato soup with onions and egg roll and salad. "The turkey was the strangest thing I'd ever eaten," Stafford said. "But it was seasoned food unlike the usual bland meals we got."

As soon as they got their plates, in front of the cameras, the POWs were herded back to their cells to eat, and the day was once again just like all the others in captivity, Stafford said.

Young said their captors went to considerable trouble to get the turkeys each year—"It seemed to be a face saving gesture."

The first Christmas Young and the other men in his camp were allowed to mingle was 1970. About half of the 55 POWs in the cell block put together a Christmas play with Young as producer-director.

"The comical part was that the play was in German," Young said. "The Vietnamese couldn't understand what was going on and besides we made a lot of noise. So they banned plays then and after New Year's all the senior officers were put in irons."

Young recalls being herded back to his cell last Christmas day. "As we walked outside the senior guard told me about the B52s bombing Hanoi. I couldn't believe it. He said, 'I'm having difficulty controlling my guards. Do you understand?'" "I asked him if he thought the war would soon be over, but he just snapped, 'go inside.' I knew the end was near."

Young, 44, is now a student at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in Washington. Stafford, 38, seven weeks ago became the staff administrative officer for the Weekend Warriors of the Naval Air Reserve unit at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington.

Stafford and his wife, who have no children, were spending Christmas eve together at their home at Andrews.

Low income groups suffer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Walter W. Heller, economic adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, says lower income groups have "taken an awful beating" recently and country is tired of having wealthy people — including President Nixon — using tax escape hatches.

Heller, president-elect of the American Economic Association, said America is "heading for an 8 or 9 per cent rate of inflation in the first half of next year ..." and this will hit lower income groups hardest.

He was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Heller said the country needs an easing of money policy, interest rates and budget policy "particularly for the lower income groups who have, to put it mildly, taken an awful beating in the last two years, especially with food prices rising."

Tax reform was called for, he said. "As the President's papers case indicates, I think the people of this country are tired of having wealthy people use various and sundry escape hatches. This is one that the President got through at the very last moment, and I think that is going to dramatize it and put steam behind a real tax reform movement next year."

Heller referred to the controversial donation of Nixon's vice presidential papers to the National Archives on which he claimed tax deductions of $76,000, shortly before Congress outlawed such deductions.

He urged gasoline rationing and scrutiny of the tax structure of oil companies, including oil depletion and double deductibility provisions.

Heller said he considered it a "national scandal that we have to rely completely on the oil industry for our data" that go into making energy policy.

Pilgrims gather for Yule service

BETHLEHEM (UPI) — The spirit of peace pervaded the war-weary Holy Land today for pilgrims trekking to the hilltop town of Bethlehem for Christmas Eve services at the site where Christ was born.

Soldiers in combat gear guarded all entrances to the ancient settlement nestled in the Judean hills, allowing in only those with special invitations or passes to guard against possible Arab guerrilla attacks during the two-day Christmas celebration.

The Roman Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem, Msgr. Giacomo Beltritti, led a procession of altarboys and priests that set out in sunny weather from the Jaffa Gate of the old walled capital.

To the chiming salute of bells in the tower of the Church of the Nativity, the two columned procession reached Manger Square at 1:20 p.m. Beltritti was greeted by Mayor Elias Freij, city officials and other church dignitaries.

As the line of cassock-clad figures entered the square, the security personnel kept a wary eye on visitors. Some police whispered into walkie-talkies as they patrolled.

A Jewish police band struck up "O Come All Ye Faithful."

Because of the October Middle East war and its tension-filled aftermath, city officials estimated only 5,000 persons would crowd into the square during the day and evening for the services—far below the crowds of 10,000 and 12,000 in previous, more peaceful years.

"Things are different here," said Issa Lama, a 24-year-old Arabic and history teacher who lives in the town. "I can't put my finger on it exactly. I guess it's just that people aren't as happy as usual."

Culmination of the celebration will be the midnight Latin mass in the Church of the Nativity, which has just undergone extensive restoration.

The signs of Christmas were all around this occupied town, whose population of 25,000 is half Christian and half Moslem. Arab workmen spent the past week asphaltting Manger Square and installing red and green strings of lights and Christmas trees. A special closed-circuit television screen was put up on one side of the square for pilgrims unable to get into the 1,000-seat church for the midnight services.

Carlton said that arrangements will be made for the event during the January meeting. He said that anyone knowing the addresses of out of town classmates is asked to get in touch with him.

Poor gets burden

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights says the administration's fuel allocation plans will fall most heavily on the poor.

"Poor and minority children and the 12.7 million working mothers of all children under 18 will bear the burden of fuel allocation policies which fail to keep the schools open and warm," the commission said in a statement issued Sunday.

It said school closings would affect poor children most severely and put a tremendous burden on families headed by a single parent, particularly a woman, or households in which both parents must work.

It said plans for allocating home heating fuels, fuel oil and kerosene would hurt the poor because distributors would hike retail prices and possibly eliminate buying on credit.

Graham scores Nixon 'isolation'

(c) N. Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — The Rev. Dr. Billy Graham, world friend and occasional adviser to President Nixon, has criticized the President for errors in judgment and for his "isolation" in the White House.

In an interview in the Jan. 4 issue of Christianity Today released Saturday, the evangelist said "Until there is more proof to the contrary I have confidence in the President's integrity—but some of his judgements have been wrong and I just don't agree with them."

"I think many of his judgements have been very poor," Graham added, "Especially in the selection of certain people."

The wide-ranging interview was conducted by the editors of the magazine, which describes itself as an "interdenominational, evangelical publication," when Graham came to Washington last weekend to conduct a worship service at the White House.

The White House, the evangelist said: "Mr. Nixon has made mistakes, and this is one of them: You cannot, as President, isolate yourself." Everyone, he added, "needs some friends around him who will just say, 'You are wrong.'"

Graham also expressed surprise about the small size of Nixon's contributions to charity, which amounted to only $295 last year and $2,524 the year before. A possible explanation, he said, was that the "finances and contributions were left to other people."

"I believe that every Christian should give 10 per cent of his income to his church or charity, and above that if the Lord prospers him," Graham commented.

The North Carolina evangelist rejected the notion that his appearance at the White House constituted a kind of benediction or vote of confidence in the Nixon administration.

"I preached before Johnson more than I have preached before Nixon," he said, "and had longer and more frequent conversations with him. But I did not agree with everything Johnson did. Since then, I have tried to make it a point . . . that I go to the White House to preach the gospel and that my preaching visits have absolutely nothing to do with the current political situation. It is obvious that I do not agree with everything the Nixon administration does."

"I can make no excuses for Watergate," Graham continued. "The actual break-in was a criminal act, and some of the things that surround Watergate, too, were not only unethical but criminal. I condemn it and I deplore it. It has hurt America."

But he said he would not go into the White House "like a Nathan"—the biblical prophet who accused David of sinning — to censure the President publicly for Watergate.

"As far as I know," Graham said, "the President has not been formally charged with a crime. Mistakes and blunders have been made. Some of them involved moral and ethical questions, but at this point if I have anything to say to the President it will be in private."

Graham said he had not met privately with Nixon during his recent visit to the White House. He also said that he thought Nixon had erred in leaving his tax returns to others to handle.

"I know that I told the people who handle my own tax affairs to always pay the tax if there's any question. I think this ought to be the attitude of all taxpayers, but especially one in such a sensitive office."

Discussing reports he had helped to select Spiro T. Agnew as Nixon's running mate in 1968, Graham said he had attended only a preliminary meeting on the subject at the Miami Beach republican convention and never "heard the name Agnew mentioned. His own candidate, he recalled, had been Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, a liberal Republican."

Holiday switch

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — A Miami couple tired of seeing their Christmas present reduced to half price immediately after Christmas have decided to fight back by switching holidays.

"They will celebrate New Year's eve tonight with their family here and then have their children and grandchildren to their Miami home Jan. 1 for 'Christmas'."

"I have a feeling that Ebenezer Scrooge got the way he was by reading the after-Christmas ads in the paper," explained the husband, who asked that his name not be used.

Secret Suez talks slated Wednesday

By United Press International today on what the talks will ultimately achieve.

"(Israeli troops) withdrawn to the borders of 1967 should be the last stage" of the disengagement talks, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy told the Cairo newspaper Al Gomhouriya. He said the Geneva talks will be "completely different" from the Israeli-Egyptian disengagement talks that broke down Nov. 29 at Kilometer 101 on the Calro-Suez road inside Egypt.

The Middle East peace conference in Geneva was suspended after two days Saturday and is not expected to resume until Israel's national elections Dec. 31. But secret talks on separating Israeli and Egyptian troops on both sides of the Suez Canal are planned for Wednesday in the Swiss capital under U.N. supervision.

Israel and Egypt decided separation of their forces still facing each other in the aftermath of the October war should be the conference's first order of business but disagreed

Controls on commodity futures trade offered

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — Four senators have introduced legislation that would impose tough new controls on the trading of commodity futures.

The bill, whose principal author is Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., would create an independent federal regulatory agency that would have full powers to track moment-to-moment action on the trading floor.

In its section requiring floor brokers to give complete data on the time and parties involved in their sales on a given day, the bill goes beyond similar new regulatory legislation now before Congress.

"This would allow the commission to examine who had made what transactions during a given day and might well alert it to a potential manipulation of the market," Hart said.

Pointing out that only futures trading in some agricultural commodities is now under federal regulation by the Commodities Exchange Commission, an Agriculture Department agency, Hart asserted that trade in all commodities should be included.

"This is an industry which has grown to half a trillion dollars in volume — a size which would seem to make it merit a special agency to deal with its problems," he said.

The Hart bill, also sponsored by Sens. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., Clifford Case, R-N.J., and Dick Clark, D-Iowa, would totally rewrite the Federal Futures Regulation Law, first passed by Congress in 1922. The law, Hart said, "has been amended 18 times and is now almost incomprehensible."

It would also permit the commission to monitor transactions with or by foreign agents, to decide the contract terms under which a commodity can be traded, and to charge commodity exchange fees that would support up to 25 per cent of the cost of the regulatory agency.

Trading by floor brokers for their own accounts and similar trading by others who also handle customer orders would be totally banned. Hart said such a measure would prevent manipulation resulting from conflicts of interest. Currently, he added, "it is almost impossible to secure evidence of such abuses — other than by admission."

Under the present system, much of the day-to-day regulation of markets that come under federal supervision is left to self-policing by commodity exchange committees.

Hopeful

POPE PAUL VI offered prayers for world peace Sunday in a blessing to about 2,000 gathered in St. Peter's Square. "Christmas is a holiday generating peace," the pontiff said. He also said he was hopeful that the Geneva conference on the Middle East would be successful. (UPI)

Police question 4 in Rembrandt theft

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Four men were held by police under "investigative detention" today after a second stolen Rembrandt painting was returned and nearly all the $100,000 ransom was recovered.

Because $4,000 of the ransom money was still missing, police were tight-lipped about some details of the weekend chain-of-events which ended five days of bizarre negotiations and late-night rendezvous aimed at recovery of the Rembrandt masterpiece.

Nine persons, seven men and two women, had been held at first, but five were released after day-long questioning.

Assistant Police Chief John McLaughlin described some of the suspects as "key subjects" in the theft of the works of art from the Taft Museum here last Tuesday.

McLaughlin said the suspects were "young" in age, but he would not elaborate. However, they were not believed to be teen-agers.

The 33-year-old "Portrait of an Elderly Woman," was returned free by the thieves last Thursday night, but they demanded $200,000 ransom for the 323-year-old "Man Leaning on a Sill."

After long and tedious negotiations Friday and Saturday, the thieves agreed to a $100,000 offer from museum officials. The money, in small bills in two white sacks, was taken late Saturday night to the thieves' requested "drop off" spot — a propane gas tank alongside a road about 25 miles northeast of downtown Cincinnati.

About three hours later, following instructions from an unnamed caller, police found the painting under a rural house several miles from the money "drop" point.

Police said the arrests were made about two hours later and $50,000 of the $100,000 ransom money recovered. Later Sunday another $46,000 was recovered.

Police refused to elaborate on how the arrests were made and where the money was recovered.

Spanish hunt Basque team

MADRID (UPI) — Spain's mountain border with France was sealed off today as thousands of police fanned out high in the Pyrenees seeking six Basque separatists accused in the assassination of Prime Minister Luis Carrero Blanco.

Border guards Sunday turned back Basque travelers to France, confiscated their passports and said they could pick them up from police in a few days. Police by the thousands searched known smuggler trails in the Pyrenees, the mountains that border France, in what police sources said was the largest manhunt in modern Spanish history.

In France, however, the separatist organization "Basque Homeland and Liberty" (ETA) said the assassins were already "in a

Authorities named the six as suspects Saturday and said all had records as political criminals. Sources said the six were identified when three alleged associates, among them two women, were picked up in a roundup of hundreds of suspects and told what they knew.

Carrero, 70, his bodyguard and chauffeur were killed last Thursday when a bomb exploded under their limousine and hurled it over the roof of a church.

Police said the assassination team was composed of five students and one worker, all between 23 and 27, and all had participated in previous bombings, bank holdups, kidnappings and other politically motivated violence.

Moroccan mountain jet crash toll 106

TANGIERS, Morocco (UPI) — A search party using mules today cutted bodies and the burned-out wreckage of a Belgian charter jet down a treacherous mountain where the plane crashed, killing all 106 persons aboard.

The twin-engine Sobelair Caravelle jet slammed into the mountain only 20 miles from touchdown at Tangiers Saturday. Besides the seven-member crew, the plane carried 99 Moroccan students and workers and French Christmas tourists on a flight from Paris.

Air officials said the pilot of the Sabena Airlines charter jet had just received permission to land when he dipped below the normal landing pattern and flew into 2,400-foot Mount Malhayan.

Tangiers tower had given the pilot its customary warning to stay above 3,000 feet in the landing pattern, officials said. Weather and visibility were poor at the time, and the jet lost radio contact with the tower just before the crash, they said.

Fire toll 8

FLINT, Mich. (UPI) — Eight persons died early today when a fire of undetermined origin raged through their mobile home in suburban Clayton Township.

Early reports from the Genesee County Sheriff's Department said nine persons died and later they put the toll at six. But when the charred bodies were finally recovered from the rubble, authorities said eight had perished.

One sheriff's deputy said the blaze may have been caused by faulty Christmas tree lighting, but authorities were not certain and the state fire marshal was called in to investigate.

The fire was reported at around 2:30 a.m. at the Woodland Mobile Home Court near Flint.

Economists favor control end

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Association of Business Economists (NABE) says its approximately 900 members favor an immediate end to the administration's wage-price controls by a two to one margin.

The group said Sunday a survey of selected companies indicated that intense domestic demand coupled with controls was responsible for shortages of materials and supplies.

Some companies were also forced to buy unwanted materials in order to receive needed supplies.

NABE said 70 per cent of the companies surveyed plan to seek cost-justified price increases in the near future.

Canada's French-speaking province of Quebec spans 504,800 square miles, almost three times the area of France itself.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks responded to the latest price increase on Persian Gulf oil by moving lower in moderate trading Monday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average at noon EST was off 9.07 at 809.66. The breadth of the decline increased as the session continued, and at midday declines outnumbered advances 836 to 479 among the 1,685 issues traded.

Volume after two hours of trading was 6,240,000, compared with 7,100,000 at the same time Friday.

Brokers said activity was light because of the single session sandwiched between the weekend and Christmas Day holiday.

Oil was among the hardest hit issues, although most of the major groups declined.

Among the oils, Atlantic Richfield was off 2, Phillips 1 1/2, and Texaco, California Standard, Indiana Standard, Mobil and Halliburton 1/4 each.

Bangor Punta was the most actively traded stock by midday, up 1/4 at 4 1/2 on turnover of 104,100 shares.

Ford was second among the actives, off 1/4 at 49.50. Shares, Curtiss-Wright was third at 10 1/2, off 1/4 on 46,000 shares.

Prices also were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Persian Gulf states announced Sunday after a meeting in the Iranian capital of Tehran that they were more than doubling the price of oil effective Jan. 1, and they indicated another price increase might be imposed next April or May.

The move struck particularly at the economies of Western Europe and Japan, which are more dependent on Arab oil than the United States. In response, the Japan Fund was off 1/4 at 6 1/2 and Sony was off 1/4 at 22 1/2 on the Big Board.

Along with the oils, chemicals also moved sharply downward. Eastman Kodak was off 2 1/2, Champion 1 1/2, Minnesota Mining 1/4, and Monsanto a point among the bigger losers.

Burroughs was off 5/4 at 187, and International Business Machines lost 4 1/2 to 220 1/2. Computers and electronics, Xerox was off 5.

MV Christmas may be white

Twin Falls, northside area, Burley-Rupert: Cloudy with a little light rain and snow mixed tonight and Christmas day. Low temperatures tonight in the mid 20s. Windy and a little cooler Christmas day with highs in the mid 30s.

Hatley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Intermittent light snow and gusty winds tonight and Christmas day. Low temperatures tonight 10 to 20. Highs Christmas day 20 to 30. Synopsia: High pressure predominates over Idaho today, but enough moisture continues to cause partly cloudy skies. Tonight another Pacific weather system will spread increasing clouds into the state followed by a little rain or snow late tonight and Christmas day. Present indications are that the snow level will be between 3500 and 4000 feet, just right to give Magic Valley a little melting snow. We may have a white Christmas briefly between snow melts.

Also, wind will be gusty at times on Christmas day. Temperatures will be a little cooler, with highs in the mid 30s. The extended outlook is for clearing Christmas night and Wednesday and little or no precipitation for the remainder of the week. No important change in temperatures.

Worry erases euphoria

(c) N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — The Christmas-New Year holiday season is usually a time of euphoric spirit, when it is easy to overlook the problems posed by major issues of the day and find reasons for optimism.

Somehow, this year, the ability to override the mammoth problems confronting the nation is much more difficult because the changes that have taken place this year, plus the ones that loom for 1974, appear to be so complex and so overwhelming.

Yet, it always seems darkest before the dawn — and it might well be that the pessimism that has permeated the economic and political atmosphere has been overdue.

That is not to say that the nation's troubles and worries on the virtual eve of a New Year are illusory or insignificant, but rather to suggest that the American people — government, business and the public — might be exaggerating them and underestimating the ingenuity of our society in coping with such difficulties.

A month ago the mood in the business world was much more gloomy than it has been in recent days, and sentiment in the deeply depressed stock market has improved somewhat, too.

So it has lately because of a single development — the Mideast War that started early in October, apparently reducing sharply the world's supplies of oil and throwing the economies of Japan, European nations, the United States and other lands into a state of shock.

It has also strained many international relationships, created immense political problems in many countries, changes lifestyles, jeopardized world trade and prosperity, dissipated confidence everywhere and seriously eroded the value of securities in major stock markets.

In the case of the United States alone, the effects so far have been considerable even though this country is less dependent on Arab oil and therefore better able to weather its absence than other leading industrialized countries.

The loss of this major source of energy here, however, has accelerated the general economic slowdown, exacerbated inflationary pressures, reduced travel, caused greater unemployment, affected production, changed many modes of doing things and lopped off some $100 billion from the value of securities on the New York stock exchange.

The realization that those direct effects were being seen in the energy-short economy and that the impact could become much worse than the domino effects come later on — had been spreading a blanket of gloom in business, economic and investment circles. But the cover is being lifted a bit.

Why? The surprising cooperation of the public and business in conserving energy is one reason.

Another reason is the swiftness of Washington's reaction in dealing with the problem, though the administration might be faulted for not adopting a coupon-type gasoline rationing system.

Cowboys defeat Rams to enter NFC finals

DALLAS (UPI) — Roger Staubach, with Dallas struggling to hold on to what once had been a 17-point lead, rescued his club with an 83-yard touchdown strike to rookie Drew Pearson Sunday that vaulted the Cowboys past Los Angeles 27-16, and into the National Football Conference championship game against Minnesota.

The Cowboys, making the NFC title game for the sixth time in eight years, will meet the Vikings here next Sunday in a match of scrambling quarterbackbacks — Staubach and Fran Tarkenton of the Vikings. And although it was Staubach's scrambling ability that helped Dallas convert two Ram turnovers into touchdowns in the first seven minutes of the game, it was the former Heisman Trophy winner's arm that preserved the win.

Dallas had seen its 17 point lead reduced to one at 17:16 with 10 minutes left to play and the Cowboys were facing a third down and 14 situation from their own 17. Until then, Dallas had made only two first downs in the second half.

back, pumped once and then let fly with a throw that Pearson caught at midfield between cornerback Eddie McMillan and safety Steve Preece.

Pearson, a free agent who began training camp on the fourth string, sailed untouched into the end zone, strutting the final 10 yards.

Until then, the tide had surged Los Angeles way despite a disastrous beginning in which the Rams had turned the ball over on their first two plays.

Cowboy middle linebacker Leroy Jordan intercepted a John Hadl pass on the opening play of the game at the Ram 26 and Calvin Hill scored three plays later from the three.

However, Hill's status for next week became doubtful when he suffered a dislocated elbow in the fourth quarter.

Ram running back Larry McCutcheon fumbled at his own 35 on the first play after the kickoff, and, with Staubach scrambling for two first downs, the Cowboys quickly moved to the Ram four from where Staubach hit Pearson in the corner of the end zone.

Pearson's two scoring receptions were the only passes he caught during the game.

Toni Fritsch kicked a 39 yard field goal in the second period for Dallas but that was it for the Cowboys until the deciding Staubach to Pearson pass.

David Ray, who missed field goals of 41, 39 and 35 yards, kicked field goals of 33 and 37 yards in the second quarter to reduce the halftime margin to 17-6.

Ray kicked another of 40 yards early in the fourth quarter and the Rams drew to within one point when Tony Baker scored on a five yard run following a fumble by Hill.

After Pearson's game-clinching reception, Fritsch added a 12 yard field goal.

When the same two teams met during the regular season, Hadl had thrown four TD passes to Harold Jackson in the first half, but Jackson was never a factor in this game. Hadl threw only four passes in Jackson's direction and completed only one.

Hadl completed only seven of 23 passes for 133 yards while Staubach hit on eight of 16 tosses for 180 yards and two TDs.

Shula's talk helps Dolphins

MIAMI (UPI) — Don Shula told his Miami Dolphins at halftime Sunday they had to play the second half of their playoff game against Cincinnati like it was a new ball game.

"It wasn't a chewing out session or anything like that," the Dolphins coach said. "We just talked about the errors we had made in the second quarter, giving them some cheap points, and I told them they had to go back and start playing like it was 0-0 ball game."

"It paid off," Shula added. Miami gave the Bengals 10 points on a pass interception run back and a bobbled kickoff that Cincinnati recovered at the five yard line and gained a field goal in the last four seconds of the half.

But Miami came back after leading only 21-16 at halftime to score 13 points in the last two quarters while holding the Bengals scoreless for a 34-16 victory that put the Dolphins into the American Football Conference championship game against Oakland in the Orange Bowl next Sunday.

"This was a game we had to have," Shula said. "We looked good in that second half. Dick Anderson intercepted a pass and after that we played good solid football. I'm proud of our team for keeping its poise."

Shula said he watched Oakland smash Pittsburgh in the other AFC playoff Saturday and said, "they looked awesome. They had it all going for them. I'm sure the battle for the AFC championship is going to be very interesting."

Paul Warfield, who caught four passes for 95 yards and a key 48-yarder that led to a touchdown, said, "we had confidence all along that our passing game would come together sooner or later and these past two games proved it."

Warfield caught four touchdown passes in the regular season finale against Detroit a week ago. He said he hurt his shoulder trying for a pass against the Bengals, "but it only hurt momentarily. They X-rayed it and it's okay."

"Oakland beat us pretty good earlier this year," Warfield added. "They beat us in every phase, on offensive football and defensive football. So we're really looking forward to having another chance at them."

Fullback Larry Csonka, who rushed for 71 yards, said he was glad the game with the Raiders would be in Miami this time because, "I think having the fans rooting for you makes a lot of difference. We're gonna need them next week."

Mercury Morris said the ball he bobbled on the kickoff that led to Cincinnati's fumble recovery "wasn't a fumble at all. It was just a loose ball. I tried to field it but it took some crazy bounces. It was just a muff."

Morris was the game's leading rusher with 106 yards in 20 attempts.

Irish practice for Sugar Bowl

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Notre Dame's football team worked indoors for the third straight day Sunday, concentrating on kicking and kick return defense in preparation for its Sugar Bowl meeting with Alabama.

The Irish defense practiced against Alabama's punt and kickoff returns and Coach Ara Parseghian noted the Crimson Tide has one of the strongest kick return games in the country and has consistently broken open games with punt and kickoff returns.

Griese leads Dolphins over Cincinnati 34-16

MIAMI (UPI) — Bob Griese, ice water cool under a fiery Florida sun, threw for two scores and engineered two other touchdowns drives Sunday as the Miami Dolphins overwhelmed the Cincinnati Bengals 34-16 to move into the American Football Conference finals.

The Dolphins play the Oakland Raiders Sunday at Miami's Orange Bowl for the AFC title and a shot at an unprecedented third Super Bowl appearance.

Griese, unflappable after Cincinnati pulled to within five points at 21-16 with a touchdown and two field goals in the last 4 1/2 minutes of the first half, threw seven yards to tight end Jim Mandich early in the third period to break open the game. The TD pass came after Dick Anderson's 30-yard return of a Ken Anderson interception to the Cincinnati 28.

Griese also had a 13-yard TD pass to Paul Warfield and set up Larry Csonka's one yard run and Mercury Morris' four yard sweep by taking apart Cincinnati's secondary with surgical precision.

Morris had 106 yards in 20 carries to lead the Dolphin rushing attack while Griese completed 11 of 18 passes for 159 yards.

Calvin Hill is lost for game

DALLAS (UPI) — Calvin Hill, who suffered a dislocated elbow in the fourth quarter of Dallas' 27-16 playoff victory over Los Angeles Sunday was pronounced "almost assuredly out" of next week's National Football Conference title game between the Cowboys and Minnesota Vikings.

A club spokesman said there was only the remotest chance Hill would be in the lineup against the Vikings but if Dallas should advance to the Super Bowl, there was a good chance Hill could play.

Hill injured the elbow while trying to recover his own fumble deep in Cowboy territory. Cowboy doctors rushed onto the field and placed a temporary sling on Hill's left arm even before the Cowboy running back walked to the sidelines.

Garo Yepremian added field goals of 50 and 47 yards for the Dolphins and Miami's walking wounded defense held Cincinnati's offense without a touchdown. The lone Bengal TD came on Neal Craig's 45-yard run with an interception.

Miami scored the first two times it had the ball. After taking possession on the 30 following the opening kickoff, Griese took the Dolphins 80 yards in 10 plays for a TD, capping the drive with a 13-yard pass over the middle to Warfield.

Griese also threw a key 24-yard pass to Warfield on a third and six on the 50 to keep the drive going.

Cincinnati, taking advantage of the loss of injured Manny Fernandez, Miami's star defensive tackle, blasted over his replacement, Maulty Moore, and picked up four first downs on four plays. The drive stalled at the 17, however, and Horst Muhlmann kicked a 24-yard field goal.

Griese then marched Miami 80 yards in 13 plays, hitting key passes of 8 and 14 yards before Csonka batted 12 yards to the one and then plowed over for the score and a 14-3 lead.

Late in the second period, Griese threw 48 yards to Warfield who made a leaping catch at the Bengals' nine and two plays later, Morris sped around left end for the score and a 21-3 lead.

The Dolphins, who make error-free football their trademark, were stunned by 13 points in the closing minutes of the first half.

Shortly after, Ken Anderson's 22-yard scramble during a two minute drill late in the half moved the ball to the Miami 39 and Muhlmann's 46-yard field goal reduced the lead to 21-13 with eight seconds remaining before intermission.

Cincinnati players didn't show dejection after playoff loss

MIAMI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Bengals held their heads high in defeat Sunday.

To a man, they figured it had taken world champions to beat them.

There were no tears and no dejection in Cincinnati's dressing room after the Miami Dolphins had eliminated the Bengals from the American Football Conference playoffs, 34-16.

First, gentleman coach Paul Brown "thanked the guys for a fine season" and wished them a merry Christmas.

"I didn't discuss the game with them," Brown said. "I said we'd had a pleasant go at it. Really, no regrets."

Relaxed and smiling, Paul wished the news media a happy holiday then stated, "Obviously, we were soundly beaten. We weren't any match for them. They defeated us in every aspect of the game."

Brown said the injury to running back Essex Johnson early in the game "changed a few things, but not the football game."

"Brown passed up every chance to offer an excuse although he said, "I didn't think this could happen to this degree."

Brown complimented his former pupil, Miami coach Don Shula who played for him on the Cleveland Browns.

"He (Shula) is a splendid man with a wonderful team. They gave us a good lesson in football," Brown said.

Brown's coaching assistants circulated through the quiet locker room telling each player that he had played a good game and a great season.

Cincinnati quarterback Ken Anderson summed up the players' feelings: "They're (the Dolphins) not the world champions for nothing. They've been to the Super Bowl twice.

"They've got a great football team and they showed it today."

Anderson made it clear to newsmen, as did the other players, they did not want to discuss the details of their loss.

Asked why, when the Bengals were so far behind, he didn't try to pass deep more often, Anderson snapped, "They've got eight guys playing pass defense when they get ahead of you, that's why."

Safety Neal Craig, who figured he had been burned on a long pass to Paul Warfield which set up Miami's first touchdown, said he had been going for the ball.

"They do everything so well as a team," Craig said. "I wouldn't want to play them every week."

Defensive tackle Mike Reid said the Dolphins didn't surprise him.

"They don't have to pull any tricks," he said. "They execute."

Filer family chosen district FHA winner

BOISE (UPI) — The Gaylord R. Drown family of Filer is the District III Farmers Home Administration farm family of the year for 1973, Idaho-FHA director Donald L. Winder announced Saturday. Winder said the Drowns will compete against winners of three other FHA districts for the title of Idaho State Farm Family of the year. State winners will be judged on a nationwide basis late this winter and the national winner will be awarded a trip to meet with President Nixon at the White House, Winder said.

"The Drown family was chosen as the family that best exemplifies the purposes of the FHA farmers program by making effective use of all resources and FHA credit to contribute a substantial economic and social contribution to their community," Winder said. Winder said the Drowns started with a minimal net worth and have progressed over the past 10 years to a commendable asset position. He said in 1965 when they borrowed money to operate a farm. Before that Drown was engaged as a farm laborer. In 1971 Drown bought a 40-acre farm. Since then he has constructed a modern dairy barn, corrals, two stock sheds, a silage pit and completed needed leveling of the cropland. Drown's 85-cow dairy herd has been culled and bred-up to near a 500-pound butterfat herd average. The herd size is increasing yearly with the addition of farm raised heifers, he said.

Jerome's FB sets dinner

JEROME — The Jerome County Farm Bureau annual dinner will be Jan. 18 at the Elks Club in Jerome. Bob Smith, a declared candidate for Sen. Frank Church's Senate seat, will be the guest speaker, according to Gordon Hollifield, president of the Jerome County Farm Bureau. Hollifield said a no-host cocktail hour will be from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. A dance will follow the banquet with live music provided by Slim Dossey and the Gem State Gems. He noted that a full-color, 30-minute documentary film presentation entitled "Multiple Use in Action," will be shown on KMVT, TV on Dec. 26 at 9 p.m. "The film was produced by the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation in cooperation with the KMVT news department," Hollifield said. The film was shot on location throughout southern Idaho during the summer and fall of 1973 for the purpose of acquainting the viewer with the importance of multiple use of public lands.

Record seeding

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho farmers have seeded a record 1.06 million acres of winter wheat for the 1974 season, an increase of 18 per cent above the seedings last year. The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service Friday reported the seeding from the 1974 crop are 12 per cent above the previous high of 950,000 acres set by the 1969 crop. Based on conditions Dec. 1, production in the state is indicated at a record 45.6 million bushels, above the 32.8 million bushels produced in 1973.

Weatherwax elected

JEROME — Denn Weatherwax, Hazelton, was elected chairman of the North Side Soil Conservation District. Mrs. Mary Rose was elected vice chairman; Gordon Hagler, secretary, and Carl Montgomery, treasurer. The new board decided to dispose of all the equipment owned by the district. The items will be sold at an appropriate farm sale some time in January, according to Dave Mitchell, soil conservationist. "A two and one half yard carryall, the motor off a deep plow, a hydraulic pump off a deep plow and a small gasoline motor and pump, which has been used to dewater construction sites, will all be sold," Mitchell said. New agreements have been signed with Donald Gaunguot, Thomas A. Rudy, Reservoir Land Co. Inc., Joe Salisbury, Dan Adamson and A. A. Flowers. Other members of the board of supervisors, include Albert Lickley, Roy Murphy and Roger Flala.

Man capitalizes on frustration

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — It's that time of year when people are wondering what they are going to get for Christmas.

But Darrell Finjord, owner of the Whatzit Assembly Co., says "They don't think of the secondary aspect-how to put the thing together."

"Whatzit Assembly is just that," he said from his small shop. "We put anything together that comes in a carton."

Finjord, who also holds down a job at Multnomah Plywood Corp. in St. Helens, Ore., got into the business 10 years ago after becoming irked at floor displays in stores that were only half assembled.

Four years ago he moved into the neighborhood shop, and immediately Fred Meyer Inc. gave him 87 bicycles from a railroad shipment to repair and assemble.

Now he assembles all kinds of bicycles, tricycles, toys, furniture, patio and lawn furniture, garden equipment and between 200 and 400 barbecues yearly for those who can't do the assembly jobs themselves. Prices are generally under $10 per assembly.

"People will buy a lawnmower with an attachment and then find they can't put the darned thing together," he said. "Each of these things can be a personal calamity."

"It's not so much the instructions that foil the parent-assembler," he said, as bad tools used by persons who aren't mechanically inclined. And most Americans aren't, he said.

"There are more than 470 screws, washers and seals in a 5-by-7-foot aluminum utility building," Finjord said. "Can you see some guy trying to put that together in his back yard on a windy day?"

"Many people don't know how to put things together. Then they get frustrated."

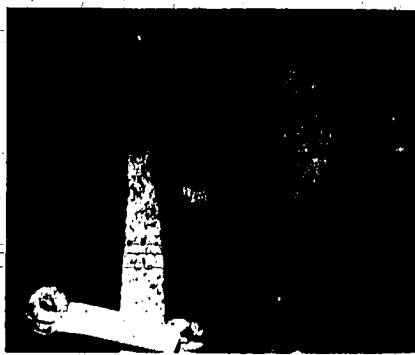

"The clutter of bikes, wagons and barbecues at Whatzit Assembly show just how much frustration there is."

For $7 you can get the three-speed bike you bought as a Christmas present assembled. It costs $2.50 for the plastic sidewalk bicycle, $4.50 for the single-speed bicycle and $2.50 for the tricycles and wagons. Ten-speeds, the most common bike brought in, cost $10 for assembly.

Finjord said the 10-speeds are the biggest headaches for parents because they are complicated an often come with metric sized nuts and bolts.

"Now, how are you going to put together a metric 10-speed bike? It'll be a mess. And think how unsafe it will be to ride," he said.

"I think that merchandise has gotten to a point where a person is wiser to go to someone who can assemble it," he said. "When you lose the part, you don't have the toy."

TWIN FALLS — A $100 scholarship has been presented to the College of Southern Idaho by the Civitan of Twin Falls Service club. Henry Cardinale, president of the club, made the presentation. Paul E. Ostyn, chairman of the scholarship committee reported the scholarship will be awarded to Joyce Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd B. Lewis, Twin Falls. Miss Lewis has done outstanding work at the College of Southern Idaho the past three semesters, and is a business major specializing in secretarial science. She also is a secretary of the City of Twin Falls Youth Advisory Council.

Hope spends first Christmas at home

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Comedian Bob Hope, spending one of his first Christmas seasons at home since the Berlin airlift in 1948, brought his yuletide bag of one-liners to applauding patients of an Army hospital Friday.

"I remember seeing you," cracked one greying retired colonel from his hospital bed at Letterman General Hospital, "On my way back from the Spanish-American War."

Hope, who's been playing a wise-cracking Santa to U. S. troops since before Pearl Harbor in 1941, said this year he was visiting only handful of service hospitals in the U.S.

"We've been doing it for so long," he said. "The Vietnam war is over. We decided to pull out, to wind it down. I'm so happy there's no reason to go again."

The Hope troupe, smallest in years, included entertainer Jim Nabors, Miss World Lexie Brockway and former Miss World Linda Carter. They toured wards after a one-hour show.

He later told an audience of 300 patients, mostly military dependents but including two Vietnam ex-POWs, "The President has had a rough time. When he was sick, the Democrats said it was just a tape worm. I happen to know it was a staff infection."

He also quipped about women's liberation, the energy crisis and the high cost of food. "Women want to be equal with men," he said, "and I think it's nice of them to want to give up all that power."

"I handed a dollar to a gas station attendant the other day," he said, "and he wiped off my face with a damp sponge."

"Food prices have gone so high," he added, "that there's a supermarket near us that rents meat. The other day for lunch I had pork chops."

"I went to a restaurant and had a $7.50 steak," he said, and the air conditioner blew it off the plate."

Gem service directory has omissions, slipups

BOISE (UPI) — Would you believe Gov. Cecil D. Andrus' new guidebook to state government omits the services of such agencies as education, employment, finance, insurance and labor?

Well, it does. It also omits those of the mines inspector and the land department.

And the man who developed it says some of the omissions were deliberate and some inadvertent.

Tuesday, the chief executive announced his administration was mailing out the "first" state services directory to local units of government and libraries.

He said it provided a guide to the many services the state performs for the "citizens of Idaho" and their local units of government.

It appears, however, there were some "oversights."

"I'm not going to say this is a perfect thing," said R.J. Bruning, the special assistant who developed the booklet. "This is meant primarily as a guide book for local officials in the smaller towns."

Bruning said most areas of the state already have employment offices. So he left that agency out. He said local school officials should be knowledgeable about the Education Department and its services. So he omitted that.

Lumber companies know about the forestry division of the Land Department, he said, and mining companies have a lot of expertise on mining.

Transplant may cure diabetes

(c) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — A transplant procedure that eventually may lead to a cure for diabetes has been tested for the first time on a human.

The test at the University of Oregon medical school failed to produce the desired result. However, one of the Oregon researchers and spokesmen for the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the Diabetes Association say the technique is so promising that it may be acceptable procedure within five years.

Between one and two percent of all Americans suffer from diabetes because their pancreases do not produce enough insulin to break down carbohydrates in the diet.

Under the new procedure, insulin-producing cells, called islets of Langerhans, are removed from the pancreases of cadavers and injected into the diabetic patient in the hope that they will thrive and produce the insulin the patient needs.

In the first human experiment at the University of Oregon, the patient rejected the transplanted cells.

The experiment was directed by Dr. Russel Lawson, who injected the insulin-producing cells in a small intestine blood vessel that leads directly to the liver. He wanted the cells to lodge in the liver "because it is often a favored site. At least in experimental animals, where rejection of transplants is less likely to take place," said a research assistant, Sandra Poutala, in a telephone interview.

She said Lawson may revise his technique and implant the cells in muscles or the lining of the abdominal cavity in future tests.

At first Lawson planned to select candidates for the procedure only from diabetic patients who had suffered total kidney failure and were undergoing a kidney transplant.

These patients were already taking drugs that suppress the auto-immune mechanism of the body — the mechanism that destroys any foreign bodies that lodge within the body — to prevent rejection of the kidney transplant. The same drugs should work to protect the transplanted insulin cells.

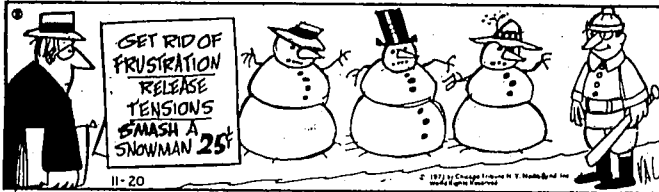

Researcher Poutala said that one problem that may have led to the failure of the first transplant was that not enough of the insulin-producing islets of Langerhans were used. In animal experiments cells from eight to 10 pancreases were used for successful transplants.

The breakthrough that will make the transplants practical, she said, will be the development of a cell culture — the insulin producing cells growing in a test tube, reproducing themselves and creating an unending supply for transplants.

Rehearsals begin

TRYOUTS for the March 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18 Dilettante production of "Fiddler on the Roof" are over and director Fred Schiebe, from left, and cast members Gary Dalton and Diane Hickerson get down to business by going over the script.

Dilettantes pick cast for 'Fiddler'

TWIN FALLS — Auditions were held Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 for the Dilettante group of Magic Valley's spring production of "Fiddler on the Roof." The cast members totaling 65 were selected the largest audition turnout in years. It has been said that you don't have to be Jewish to enjoy "Fiddler." This statement has been verified all over the world. "Fiddler" was the longest running Broadway play ever. Showing for 3,242 performances in New York, and winning The Drama Critics award. The book "Fiddler on the Roof" was written by Joseph Stein, with music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick.

The Magic Valley production of "Fiddler" will go into rehearsal Jan. 3, with Carson Wong, Jerome, chorus director. The music and lyrics of the numbers are to be known and ready to go when Fred Schiebe, Lewiston, the director, arrives the third week in January. Orchestra rehearsals will start sometime in January also, under the direction of Del Slaughter.

Production dates for this year's musical are March 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. The Dilettante group is trying something new this year by running five consecutive performances instead of two weekends. Performances begin March 14th, running through March 18th with a Sunday matinee.

The story of "Fiddler on the Roof" is set in the little Russian village of Anatevka, but it could be anywhere. It is the story of Tevye, the village dairyman, and his five daughters. Although Tevye's world often threatens to collapse, he manages to keep his sense of humor, his family, and his God.

The people in the Magic Valley playing leads and villagers in this show are: Tevye, Jim Lubin; Golda, Joan Ratolford; Tzeitel, Dianne Hickerson; Hodel, Charm Peterson; Chava, Peggy Quesnell; Shpigelze, Tara Barton; Bielke, Debi Fournier; Yente, Helen Gee and Motel, Mark Galny.

Chorus mamas are Helen Allen, Barbara Annett, Pat Curtis, Lynda Dunn, Jean Fagan, Arlene Kyles, Ila LaGrone, Jenne Soares, Evelyn Staudaher, Lillian Sullivan and Patti Whitehead.

Reliable sources say Santa Claus coming to your town tonight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Santa Claus is coming to town tonight. From the North Pole, according to reliable sources, and there is no viable reason to doubt this claim. He moved his factory and home office three years ago for sound economic reasons.

Elf labor is cheaper there. Picket lines are nonexistent. He made his peace with the central committee of the Benevolent Order of Arctic Wolves — once a union bent on encirclement at first whiff of human odor — long, long ago. Energy is dear but durable.

But where did the old gent come from originally? Santa is a native of New York. Would you believe? Everything nice happens here — once in a while. Savants who have conned history Clausewise tell us that the Santa we know in America was born 164 years ago in the mind of Washington Irving, a New York writer who had an office at No. 3 Wall Street and who has been called "first American man of letters," "father of American literature," and "inventor of the short story."

The short stories included "Sloopy Hollow" and "Rip

Van Winkle" but the book that got Santa airborne and prototyped the 1809 "Diedrich Knickerbocker's History of New York."

Our Santa was lovingly boosted through his formative years by two other New Yorkers. Clement Clarke Moore on Christmas Eve, 1822, wrote for his children the poem beginning "Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house . . . in his farm house near what is now 23rd St. and the Hudson River in Manhattan. And Thomas Nast, the New York newspaper political cartoonist, in 30 years of illustrating beginning in 1863 changed Santa from the European scraggly elf to the fat and boppety fellow we all know, but still kept him rather small.

But Irving was pivotal. Dr. Charles W. Jones, an authority on the St. Nicholas legend as it grew over the centuries in Europe, once observed that the dwarf European St. Nick was a "parasitic germ" in the United States until Irving's book came along.

"Without Irving there would be no Santa Claus," Jones said. "The Knickerbocker History contains no less than 25 allusions to him . . . Here is the source of all the legends about St. Nicholas in New Amsterdam." That's what this burg once was, Nieuw Amsterdam.

Irving wrote that Santa wore a "low, broad-brimmed hat" and a "huge pair of Flemish trunk hose" and that he "suppered jolly over the rooftops" in a horse-drawn wagon, plopping presents down chimneys.

Irving recorded that when Santa "had smoked his pipe, he twisted it in his hand, and laying his finger beside his nose gave a very significant look, then mounting his wagon he returned over the treetops and disappeared."

Moore copied from Irving and had Santa "laying his finger aside his nose" before waiting up the Chimney, and he kept Irving's vision of a pipe-smoking Santa: "The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth, and the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath."

Cartoonists and illustrators for many decades had St. Nick with his finger beside his nose, pulling a pipe. But now he has grown from a dwarf into a bubbly, hearty fellow, rosy-gripped and rosy-cheeked. And he stopped smoking long before the surgeon general issued his warning. Ho, ho, ho!

She is a senior at Richfield, having completed her high school education in her country.

She will be here until the end of the school year, having come the first week in September.

Lincoln gets 45 phones

SHOSHONE — More than 45 telephones have been added to those in service within the Lincoln County area through Mountain Bell system, Leo Alfin, has reported.

By the end of 1973 there will be over 1,200 phones in the Shoshone-Dietrich area, a gain of the 45 over a year ago.

New underground cables, central office, local and long distance facilities have been among the new services offered by the company during the year. Continued services along these lines will be emphasized during 1974.

Yield gains

WASHINGTON — Raw sugar production for 1972-73 in Panama increased 14 per cent over last year's level to 102,500 tons, a USDA attache in San Jose reported.

Sill, production was lower than expected due to a prolonged drought.

Exports jumped to about 52,500 tons against 40,600 tons during 1971-1972. Virtually all exports continue to go to the U. S. Market.

1971 vintage Idaho wine aged, bottled in Troy

By DWIGHT JENSEN
Special to the Times-News

TROY — The wine has been flowing like — well, like wine here this week.

Not that anyone is getting high on the stuff. That comes later. What's happening this week is that the first batch of Idaho wine is being bottled.

The bottling was to have been done in September or October, right after this year's grape crop was crushed and put into barrels for two years of aging. But when the crush was complete the special Idaho-shaped bottles had still not arrived. They came in early this month.

Five thousand bottles, into which Bruce Higgins and Harvey Cook, the college professor and the truck operator who run the Idaho Wine and Grape Growers Inc., are pouring the 1,000 gallons of wine harvested from 1971 grapes. That wine has been aging in wood, and it got a little extra aging thanks to the delay in the bottle shipment.

Some of the 1972 vintage was consumed at a tasting party a few weeks ago. Some of the tasters thought it needed a little bottle aging before it would be fully ready; others, especially those with a taste for dry wine, thought the new stuff was okay.

It had better be okay if it's going to satisfy first-edition buyers. The 1971 crop is being poured into special bottles that are intended as collectors' items, and the price is $22 a fifth. In future years, as supply goes up, the price will no doubt go down.

And the supply will go up. This year, instead of crushing enough grapes for 1,000 gallons, the Troy Winery put almost 20,000 gallons into barrels. Furthermore, grape growers in the Lewiston area and elsewhere have decided to risk the high investment necessary to get their own vineyards going, so there will be an even larger crop in future years.

So the question is, will the Troy Winery be able to put down that irreverent songwriter who penned the words, "We go together like California potatoes and Idaho wine?"

Good gift givers are considerate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rich Uncle Louie sends his little nephew, seven, a 10-speed bike for Christmas. A nitwit salesman told him the lad will grow into the bike. Christmas the poor boy cries, pouts and kicks the bike.

In another living room this Christmas day there's more of the same. A little girl opens a surprise package from a distant, doting relative. It's very expensive perfume, skin moisturizer, cheek blusher, eyeliner. A saleslady said little girls verging on teen-age would be delighted with such a gift.

White elephant gifts to children at Christmas or any time leave no traces of delight in their eyes or hearts. To avoid being the giver of a useless gift to a child, all you out there — uncles, aunts, friends and grandparents — bone up on interests at varying ages. To wit:

For babies under 18 months. A baby needs brightly colored, lightweight toys. They should be washable, too big to swallow and free of sharp corners. When baby creeps or walks it's time for push and pull toys, musical or chime toys, animals on wheels, little wagons and the first small doll carriage.

From 18 months to three years, the toddler age, the Toy Institute suggests: clay to poke, pat and roll. Simple musical instruments from tambourines to toy pianos. Simple photographs and blocks of different sizes and shapes. Big hollow blocks make wonderful play houses and forts.

From three years to six years. Children like to act out grown-up roles. Young housekeepers need toys resembling the more complicated appliances such as a vacuum cleaner or cooking sets—for boys or girls, to avoid sex-stereotyping. Transportation fascinates boys and girls. Trains, trucks, cranes, planes and boats. Tractors, ditch diggers.

The six to nine age. Suggestions: racing cars, work benches with real tools, construction sets, indoor games of chance or skill, board games of all kinds. Handicraft sets with weaving or beadwork are suitable for boys and girls. Kits of all kinds—ships, car engines, planes. These are days when sports interests bud. Anything in the baseball, football, tennis line goes over big. The same for roller and ice skates and bigger bikes. But no 10 speeds yet, please.

Grown children are in the nine-to-12 age groups. They go for real hobbies. Science toys stimulate their natural curiosity. Careers in the making can be nurtured through model building or harder construction sets. Knitting, cooking and making clothes for themselves intrigues the girls. Painting, sculpting, ceramics, playing musical instruments, and reading from an enormous range of books are other ways older children show their deep interests.

After the age of 12, to be sure you don't fall in the role of good gift giver, ask the boy or girl for a list of things. To keep the surprise element, select one. To avoid disappointment, repeat: ask for a list.

Lumber firm adds debarker

NORTH FORK — A $200,000 debarker has been put into operation by North Fork Lumber Co., Neph and Lynch, company president, advised.

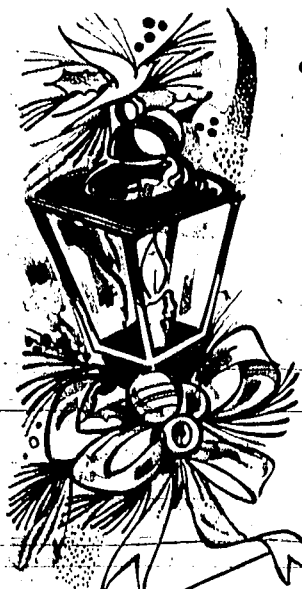

The unit, manufactured in Portland, was installed by Lynch and Neph Lynch Jr., company vice president. The project took seven months to complete and resulted in considerable savings.

Lynch said the unit is the first step toward the manufacturing of chips which requires that all bark be removed from the logs. Slabs and edgings can be used to make chips. That material now goes into the burner.

Plans call for starting installation of a chipper next spring if there is a chip market available. The chips could go to the Hoerner-Waldorf pulp mill at Missoula.

Lynch said the company is investigating the possibility of obtaining an outlet for the chips.

(c) N. Y. Times Service
LONDON — "I didn't have time to wait for women's lib," said Mary Quant, the designer who helped revolutionize British fashion and set an international trend.

Along with such people as The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, David Frost and David Bailey, the photographer, Miss Quant turned London into the "swinging" capital of the 1960s. They were the "trendies" who took style away from the rich and privileged and gave it to youth.

Her role in helping wipe out British swartr drabness at the London Museum. It comes at a time when the British public, seemingly depressed by recurring economic crises and inflation, is looking nostalgically back at an era of hope and enthusiasm when change was in the air.

"The revolution was vital," Miss Quant said. "Our generation was still buttoned down by the war. Our clothes were just poor pastiches or what our parents wore."

1955 and the very first miniskirt. The final exhibit is the complete Quant girl today, whose clothes, cosmetics, underwear, shoes, sheets and boyfriend's tie all carry the Quant label.

"Being the subject of a retrospective exhibition makes it sound as though you're dead," the 39-year-old designer said. "But I had a great time digging out old designs, clothes and pictures." More than 700 people wrote to her offering to send garments they had kept for 10 to 15 years.

Those pioneer days were not her happiest, she recalled in her Chelsea offices. Her only formal training was an illustration course at a London printing school and before she learned how to grade sizes she used to buy paper patterns and cut her own designs over them.

"It was hard work and such a fight," she said. "There was never enough capital to buy more fabric. We were always wobbling on the edge of total bankruptcy."

The clothes she created for Bazaar, her first and the King's Road First Boutique, were simple, aggressive and emancipated. Miss Quant describes them as "very come-on, very look-at-me." The colored tights, low-slung hipster pants, no-bra bras and miniskirts stopped Chelsea traffic and were grabbed by the city's youth.

"But old gentlemen would come and shake their sticks outside the shop window and yell 'degenerate,' and 'obscene,'" she recalled. Since that first famous Chelsea boutique the Quant venture, run jointly with her husband and business partner, Alexander Plunkett Greene, has mushroomed into a multimillion-dollar business. The boutiques are gone, but the clothes and cosmetics are manufactured under license throughout the world.

"I've always wanted to design on a vast scale," admits Miss Quant, who was awarded a top-civilian honor, the order of the British empire, in 1960 for her contribution toward British exports.

"We live in a mass production age — even the Paris couturiers are doing ready-to-wear — and clothes must be Democratic."

"Ten years ago each country was recognized for its specific fashion style. Today fashion is international. Women everywhere are wearing the same clothes and the same make-up."

"English designers," she insisted, "are still ahead with new ideas — they have a flair for invention — but designers from San Francisco,

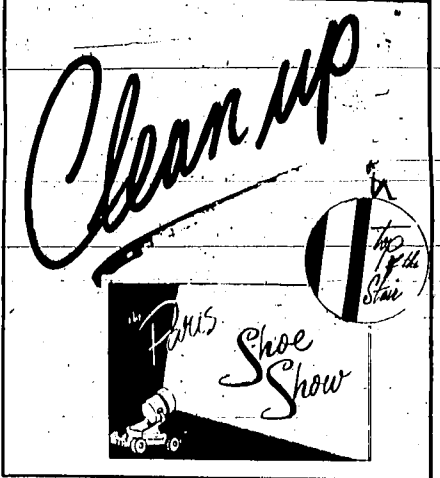

New York, Tokyo and Sydney now have a worldwide effect.

Miss Quant said it is no longer fashionable to wear clothes "that sock you in the eye."

"Women are realizing the problems of emancipation," she said, "and the mood is gentler, complex, with more detail, more jewelry, more colors and more garments. Coordinating patterns are important because fashion has become lots of different pieces that make up a look."

Miss Quant insisted that it doesn't matter to her that her designs are frequently pirated "as long as they get on the market."

"It's all part of the movement," she said. "The revolution of ideas is won and we must have more and better of them."

Jim: "The hand caused considerable comment at New York's Cavendish Club where it was played. West, an expert, was the first to say that if he had stopped to think he would have led a low club. He also said that if East had not doubled, he would have opened a spade. This would give South time to draw trumps and set up dummy's king of clubs."

Oswald: "If East had just bid hearts instead of his fancy three notrump call there would have been no story at all. South would not have bid the slam and would have played and made a mild five diamonds."

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "With the year end approaching rapidly we might discuss some of the most interesting hands of the year."

Jim: "Here is one from a free swinging rubber bridge game. West opened the ace of clubs, whereupon there was no way for the defense to expect another trick. North and South scored a total of 2130 points made up of 750 slam bonus; 700 for the two game rubber; 50 for making the contract; 480 below the line and 150 for the honors."

Oswald: "Quite a haul considering that if West had opened a low club as he

Energy crisis major issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There can be no doubt that the most significant consumer issue facing consumers next year will be the energy crisis. It will affect virtually every aspect of our daily lives — how and whether we work, how we relax, how we get to work, the price we pay for goods — even the food we eat and the clothes we wear. Putting it bluntly and succinctly, no matter who we are and where we live, the energy crisis will affect what we do and how we do it.

This drastic change in our living and working habits will answer a fundamental question about the American people. There are those who claim that Americans are soft and easy people — unwilling to sacrifice and unwilling to forego past patterns of unlimited energy consumption. As evidence they point to those few who are now hoarding, who are now threatening drastic action if their patterns of life are altered.

I don't agree with that analysis. I have another view of the American people. I believe that the vast majority of Americans will do as much as they can to conserve energy, whether it be joining car pools, turning the thermostat down, or driving 60 miles an hour on interstate highways.

Americans are a generous people. Starting with the first Thanksgiving, we have shared our harvests, our labors and our good fortunes. Today we need to share our available energy supplies just as the pilgrims and pioneers shared their limited resources.

I believe that most Americans will be willing to sacrifice in their use of energy so that all Americans will have energy.

DEAR ABBY: You seem to have all the answers so maybe you can help me. I want to get into show business. I know I don't have the talent to be a big star, but I'd be satisfied with bit parts as long as it's show business. How do I get started?

I'd gladly be an errand boy, or park cars, or run an elevator in a television or movie studio.

I'd do anything just to be where the action is. I don't have any contacts, but I've had this hangup about Hollywood ever since I can remember. I'm 18 now, and want to do something about it.

I live in New Jersey, but I'd be willing to move to California.

STAR STRUCK

He's star struck

DEAR STRUCK: An 18-year-old with no talent, no contacts, no experience, and no special training shouldn't head west without a round-trip ticket and enough bread to keep him going for six months. But if you decide to go to Hollywood, buy yourself a Sunday Los Angeles Times. It has an enormous want ad section, and it's thick enough to use as a mattress, if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think I'm a monster, but here goes. I am a 24-year-old woman with a 5-year-old son from my first husband, and a 1-year-old son from George, to whom I've been happily married for two years. George legally adopted my older son (Junior), but now he wants me to give the boy back to his real father, who is also remarried, and who would dearly love to legally adopt this boy. (So would his new wife.)

My husband says he can't help favoring the younger boy (his own) and I fully understand, because the older one is the living image of his real father. Junior has expressed a desire to live with his real father, and he cries when he has to come home to us after spending the weekend there.

I confess, I also favor the younger boy, and I honestly cannot give him the love he needs.

My problem is what will people say about a mother who gives her own child away? I know he'd be better off with his natural father, but I'm afraid if I let him go, I'll feel guilty. Can you help me?

TORN IN TEXAS

DEAR TORN: Under the circumstances, Junior would be better off with his natural father, who wants him. You don't and neither does your present husband. The boy wants to go. So let him, and don't feel guilty. You'd be doing the right thing.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who really gets my goat. Sometimes when I've been on the phone for a long time she will call and shout in a very angry tone: "I have been trying to get you for an hour—who in the devil have you been yakking with for so long?" And like a fool, I apologetically tell her.

Or if I come home after having been gone all day, she'll phone and bark: "I've been trying to reach you all day—where the heck were you?" Not knowing what else to say, I tell her.

I don't think I have to account to her about where I've been or to whom I've been talking. Other than coming right out and telling her it's none of her business, can you suggest a more subtle way of telling her off?

ANNOYED IN DENVER

DEAR ANNOYED: Say: "If anybody asks you . . . just tell 'em you don't know." She'll get the message.

Openings for women to increase in '74

Monday, December 24, 1973, Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 23

(c) Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — Job opportunities in business and industry for women college graduates will increase significantly in 1974 but still will represent only about one-fourth of the opportunities for men college graduates.

This forecast was made in the 29th annual Endicott report on national employment trends, released Thursday. The copyrighted study by Frank S. Endicott, director of placement emeritus at Northwestern University, surveyed 100 well-known companies throughout the nation. Of these, 140 indicated they planned to hire 54 per cent more college women in 1974. The report shows that employment of women graduates will equal 24 per cent of the number of men graduates hired — compared with 11 per cent five years ago and seven per cent 10 years ago.

The range of starting salaries for women is only slightly lower than that for men in these same fields. Endicott said that discrepancies result more from "different positions" than unequal salaries for the same position.

Endicott said that with business and engineering schools accepting more women and with companies hiring "all the women they can find" with the qualifications they seek, the burden for increasing the ranks of women in business and industry rests on the women themselves. The lack of women in career fields the industries need is the main problem, he explained.

The report shows that overall the demand for persons with bachelor's degrees will be up 13 per cent from 1973; the demand for persons with master's degrees, up 10 per cent. Endicott noted, however, that companies submitted their estimates before the impact of the energy crisis had been felt.

As in recent years, the demand for engineers and accountants will be the greatest. The report forecasts a 22 per cent hiring hike over 1973 for engineers with bachelor's degrees; 13 per cent for engineers with master's degrees.

Lights heat building

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — If Idaho Power Co. here were to turn down the thermostat on its building this winter, energy would be wasted.

According to Idaho Power southern division manager Earl Haroldsen, the Twin Falls office is so well insulated that the heat radiated by lights and employees keeps the building warm.

In fact, in temperatures above five degrees below zero, the building needs cooling, Haroldsen said.

He said that down to this temperature more heat is generated by the lights and people in the building than is lost to the cold outdoors.

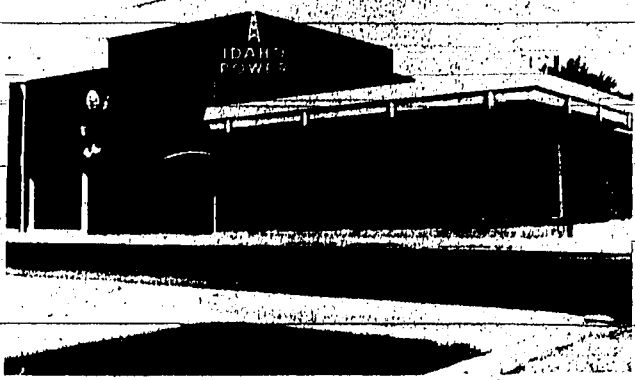

Thermal, double-paned windows and plentiful insulation make the building's winter cooling necessary, Haroldsen said. The walls of the building have 3.5 inches, the ceiling 10 inches and the floor 3 inches of insulation.

When the weather is above 45 degrees, air conditioning cools the building and when it drops below that temperature, air, vented through a purifier, is blown in.

In case of a long, abnormally cold streak, the building has a 30-kilowatt electric heater.

However, during the nine years that the building has been used, the heater has never been turned on except for test purposes, Haroldsen said.

The Federal Power Commission recently ordered Idaho Power thermostats turned down to 68 degrees. But Haroldsen does not plan to comply: it would mean a waste of power.

Holiday season brings depression to persons

MOSCOW — Christmas is not necessarily a joyful time. To those who see a great contrast between their own feelings and the happiness of others around them, the holiday season can be a time of depression.

Dr. Mary Prescott, an assistant professor of guidance and counseling and a student counselor at the University of Idaho, said the client load at the university's Student Counseling Center dramatically increases just before the Christmas recess and during the spring each year.

Both the warm spring weather and the pre-Christmas joy and excitement emphasize any depression felt by an individual, Dr. Prescott said, and on a national basis suicides and cases of severe depression increase before Christmas and during the spring, further, she said, both times are "super heavy" for university students who are also coping with tests in addition to other pressures as semesters end.

"We have to strike a balance between being supportive and understanding, and at the same time being confrontive enough to help the person mobilize his resources," Dr. Prescott said.

There is little pattern to the pre-Christmas depression in that it does not necessarily hit one specific group of students more than others. Rather, Dr. Prescott said, depression has a "scattergun" effect.

The Student Counseling Center exists to help students with personal and vocational-educational problems, although in the last couple of years there have been increasing requests for "couple" counseling. If a student's concern indicates a need for consultation, students are referred to two consulting psychiatrists who visit the Student Health Center twice each week.

Dr. Prescott said there are several problems which seem to hit university students just before Christmas. The pressures of final examinations intensify scholastic competition and often heighten a feeling of failure in a student who feels he or she must live up to someone else's expectations of achievement. Some students push themselves very hard, experience extreme worry about grades and feel their marks are not as good as they "should" be.

Dr. Prescott said difficulty in interpersonal relationships is another contributing factor. A broken romance during the holiday season can lead to strong feelings of personal loss and rejection, Dr. Prescott said, and persons who are shy or reserved may feel sad and "down" because they seem to have no one to confide in and find themselves on the outside looking in, merely observing the whirl of holiday activities.

Chicago man defies government

By LES HAUSNER
(c) Chicago Daily News
CHICAGO — Former Rep. Roman Pucinski, D-Ill., will be busy stringing outside Christmas lights at his Chicago home.

"Then I'll turn them all on and dare the government to arrest me," Pucinski said.

"This talk about saving power by turning off outside lights is plain nonsense," Pucinski said.

"What do they want us to do, reduce this Christmas and Hanukkah season to a degree of darkness and despair not equalled even in Russia?"

Pucinski, who gave up his seat in Congress in a futile bid last year to unseat Sen. Adlai Stevenson and who is now a Chicago alderman, urged all Chicagoans to switch on the outside lights for the holidays. "I say 'Bah, Humbug' to Washington. The amount of electricity used would be only 3 per cent of the entire Christmas season load," said Pucinski.

He called President Nixon's energy chief, William E. Simon, "a Grinch who's trying to steal our Christmas" by ordering cutbacks on electric Christmas decorations.

"Here's a guy who is so mixed-up that his office has to admit that it goofed by first ordering a 25 per cent cutback in gasoline when it really planned to cut production by only 5 per cent," Pucinski said.

"It is somebody who is that mixed up who is telling us to have a dismal Christmas."

"If we ever needed to lift our spirits, it's this time of Christmas and Hanukkah after the depressing year our nation has suffered," he said.

Shoshone library benefits

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone City Library has two dozen new Zane Grey books, all of them but two given to the library recently by the Rev. and Mrs. Wesley Johnson and family. The books belonged to Mrs. Johnson's grandmother, Mrs. W. S. Baird, Hazelton, who gave them to the Johnson family about a year ago. Because the family wasn't using them to a great extent, they decided to donate them to the city library where they could check them out when they wanted them, and others, too, would have access to them. A number have already been checked out, according to Mrs. Marx Nielsen, librarian.

This year's yule shopping mixed

(c) N. Y. Times Service
NEW YORK — In one of the most mixed Christmas shopping seasons in years, millions of Americans have demonstrated their anxieties and pinched wallets by buying cautiously and sparingly. But others, in affluent circumstances, ignoring the county's problems, have bought lavishly. Across the nation, with the shopping season drawing to a close, many shoppers have been buying basic necessities as gifts. Worried by the energy crisis, some purchased electric heaters, electric blankets, and warm sweaters. The $4 to $5 gas-tank lock became probably the season's biggest best-seller. Concerned by constantly rising prices of food and services and increasing taxes, the public watched prices closely and disconcerted merchants by spurning big-ticket items. Nevertheless, frilly, expensive nightgowns, raincoats lined with fur and $130 electronic mini-calculators sold well in quite a few stores. This week 35 small merchants in neighborhoods of the metropolitan New York area met informally, and 34 of them reported that holiday sales were the worst in a decade. An David Antebi, one of the group, put it, "most said their sales were down between 30 and 40 per cent from last year." In Houston, at Sakowitz Brothers, one of the southwest's best-known stores, the season is expected to wind up with a gain to 5 to 8 per cent

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1973

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is your day to be sure you do nothing that can upset the position you have carefully organized and built up with another individual for there are potential estrangements. Maintain peace and tranquility throughout the day.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure not to criticize others or there could be serious arguments. Be grateful -- it's the spirit that counts. Do civic duty well.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have a good day to study new aims that fascinate you, and you may find that you are more content with present set-up instead.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you keep promises you have made to others and not get sidetracked by new developments. Show your true devotion to close ties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show that you are poised in the face of unexpected emergencies that may arise today. Express affection in a tangible way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may awake unenthused for the day's activities, but rightful thinking can change this. See as many good-friends and associates as you can.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Although you want to have a ripping good time, settle for a safe, sane and thoughtful one. Show a cooperative spirit toward others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Control your temper at home and show more thoughtfulness for everyone and then this becomes a most delightful and happy day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good day for being too extravagant or putting on airs that you may regret later. Take time to make your surroundings neater.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans for adding to your present abundance today and you will then know how to proceed intelligently. Think of your relatives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may awake feeling irked, but if you meditate you soon turn this into a feeling of happiness. A spirit of kindness is important.

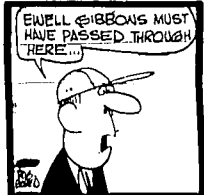

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are in the mood to make radical changes, but it's better to count your blessings instead. Assist a good friend who is in trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid an older individual who is in an irate mood and could spoil this fine day for you. Make this a day for better understanding with all.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be one of those overly active young people who should have the energies channeled in the right directions where real progress can be made. Send to the right schools and be sure to direct the education along lines that include trouble-shooting work. Teach to be diplomatic and tactful.

"The Stars Impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!
