Solzhehtsyn refuses summons

MOSCOW (UPI) — The state prosecutor's office issued a summons Friday ordering author Alexander I. Solzhehtsyn to appear for questioning, but it was refused, the author's wife said Saturday.

It was the first known action of a judicial nature against the Nobel laureate since the publication in Paris Dec. 29 of his latest book, "The Gulag Archipelago."

The work, a depiction of life in Stalinist concentration camps, has been labeled by authorities as a slander against the Soviet Union.

Percy wants to join race

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said Friday he "would like to be a candidate for President in 1976," and will be encouraged by voters and fellow party members in Illinois.

Percy made the most straightforward declaration of his political ambitions before several thousand persons at a Lincoln Day dinner sponsored by the United Republican Fund of Illinois.

Bomber crashes; flames kill 7

MARYSVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — A giant B52 stratofortress veered off the runway during a night takeoff at Beale Air Force Base, flipped over in a muddy field and was blown to bits by four massive explosions. Seven of the eight crewmen burned to death.

The plane skidded through the field for 1,500 feet before the explosions were triggered by fire in an abortive takeoff late Friday.

Henry almost quit

CHICAGO (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, almost resigned in 1971 because he thought President Nixon was blaming him for the leak of secret White House documents to the press and the Pentagon, the Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday edition.

The newspaper quoted sources close to Kissinger as saying he was ready to quit when the President refused to defend him publicly for four weeks after documents about the war between India and Pakistan were published.

Judge says California town cannot 'bar the gates'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Can the small towns of America, under assault by big city refugees in search of a simpler life, bar the town gates and cry "No more?"

The once rural hamlet of Petaluma, Calif., an egg and dairy center about 45 minutes drive from the bustle of the San Francisco Bay area, watched with alarm as its population doubled over ten years with more on the way.

Petaluma straddles the busy main highway midway between the Golden Gate Bridge and the California wine country, and auto traffic poured only to buy country eggs, fat broilers or perhaps to find a yard that could be postmarked "Petaluma," the town that's fun to pronounce.

But as the bay area ballooned into an Eastern-style population corridor, one city overlapping the next with no visible boundaries, the flight to get away from it all began.

The urge for a plot of land, a little elbow room and the sense of restored identity a small town seemed to offer attracted increasing numbers of urban-weary newcomers to places like Petaluma.

Long ignored rural towns, it was discovered, were often no farther from the job, in terms of travel time, than crowded city buildings or featureless suburban tracts.

By 1973 the "Poultry Raising Capital of the World," as Petaluma once proudly boasted, had grown from 14,000 to 30,600 persons.

An 70 per cent of the newcomers were commuters to the big city, driving the 38 miles to San Francisco or other large suburbs near the Golden Gate Bridge.

The pattern became all too clear to Petaluma officials and the city gates came crashing shut in 1970. A two-year moratorium was imposed on all new housing until a plan to stem the rush was developed.

By the time the moratorium ended, the city council had come up with a temporary solution. New construction would be limited to 500 housing units a year for five years. Meantime, a long-range plan to limit growth would be formulated.

But pressures mounted from the perturbed home-building industry and last June city officials, seeking public reinforcement, called for a plebiscite among residents. They got overwhelming approval.

What sign?

NEW YORK CITY pedestrians ignore "Don't Walk" light at a busy sidewalk, snow-filled street Friday. Thousands of commuters slashed through 45 inches of snow and bitter freezing winds as the storm closed highways throughout the metropolitan area. (UPI)

Hospital improvement costs listed

By CRICKET BIRD Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — What will the modernization and expansion of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital mean to Twin Falls County taxpayers in dollars and cents?

The $4.6 million bond issue, which will be paid for over 20 years, will bring an estimated tax increase of 4.6 mills.

The mill levy may increase or decrease depending on the interest rate obtained and future growth of the tax base. The estimate was based on a five per cent interest rate, with a starting tax base of $62,993,765 for 1973, increasing approximately $2 million a year.

The assessed value of property is currently running below the 70 per cent level of market value according to County assessor, Ron Taylor. The 80 per cent figure used for calculation of the assessed value was a predicted value.

County property is being reassessed now, with the new appraisals to be complete by 1975 and on the tax rolls by 1976. The 80 per cent figure provides some leeway for a possible increase from the present 70 per cent level, Taylor said.

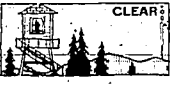

For the larger property owner, the tax increase might be based on figures like this: A farm with market value of $100,000 would be appraised at $80,000 using the predicted 80 per cent level, and assessed at $12,000. Multiplying the assessed value by .0046 (4.6 mills), the total yearly tax increase works out to $58.80, or $1.90 a month.

When the county organization is ready to take out a bond, it advertises for a month that it will take sealed bids on a certain day. Banks, insurance companies, trust organizations and municipal bond buyers are potential bidders.

Because Twin Falls County has a poor credit rating, interest on the bonds should run in the neighborhood of 4.8 to 5.2 per cent, according to hospital attorney, Fred Decker.

The discussion of costs inevitably brings up the question of who uses the hospital. More than one fifth — 22.9 per cent — of the patients at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in 1973 were not residents Twin Falls County. (Continued on p. 18)

Crash claims Bliss man

BLISS — Eugene Finch, 83, Bliss, was killed Friday afternoon when his car collided with a vehicle driven by Fred Henderson, 20, Bliss.

Finch, travelling east on Highway 25, was making a left turn when he collided with Henderson's west-bound vehicle. Finch was dead on arrival at Gooding County Memorial Hospital. Henderson and his wife, a passenger in the vehicle, were listed in fair condition at the hospital.

The accident is under investigation according to investigating officer Bill Boyer, Gooding County deputy sheriff, no citations have been issued.

'Snoop' report

SEN. JOHN STENNIS, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, talks with newsmen Saturday after a two-hour meeting with Navy Yeoman Charles Kadford, rear. Kadford Saturday said he was specifically instructed by two Navy admirals to pilfer top-secret documents from the White House.

Bond backers cited

TWIN FALLS — Getting a bond issue passed can be an expensive project. But Magic Valley Memorial is forking out very little in its own behalf.

A dynamic group of Twin Falls businessmen has arranged almost all the promotion.

The Concerned Citizens Committee, headed by James Sinclair, a local banker, is basically interested in making people aware of the need for the hospital expansion program.

"We thought the public wasn't backing it strongly enough, and being interested in what takes place in Twin Falls, we felt it was our duty to awaken the public to the need," Sinclair said.

The other Concerned Citizens are Earl Frazier and Jack Muldoon, with advisory members John Hepworth, Hult and John Breckenridge, Twin Falls. (Continued on p. 18)

Oil profit records allow varied story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil profit reports for 1973 show the oil giants are either recovering from earlier doldrums or continuing to "make out like bandits" with fat profits—the interpretation depending upon the interpreter.

A look at the records of the biggest oil companies shows that some of them had a dip in their profit charts in 1972, and that 1973's upswing could be considered for them a strong recovery year.

Others, however, had a profit year that merely continued an upward trend of income in recent years.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who wants the law to force oil prices — and thus profits — down, said the profit figures were out of line.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said of oil companies' profits: "They're making out like bandits."

But Maurice F. Granville, chief executive officer of Texaco Inc., told an audience recently, with a look at his company's profits chart: "These income figures, both net and gross, are the highest the company has reported... in its history. Nevertheless, we consider this level of earnings to be 'yielding' an 'inadequate return on our present investment.'"

After Robinson — who was later killed in southeast Asia — was reassigned in March, 1971, the yeoman said, he continued to pilfer documents at the urging of the admiral's successor, Welandor.

(C) New York Times Service DENVER — Navy Yeoman First Class Charles E. Kadford, publicly named as the key figure in the alleged military snooping activities, declared Saturday that he was specifically instructed by two Navy admirals to pilfer top-secret documents from the White House.

In an airport interview here, the yeoman named the officers as Rear Admirals Rembrandt C. Robinson and Robert O. Welandor. He began taking documents, he said, shortly after he was assigned in September, 1970 as a stenographer-clerk to the military liaison unit in the White House.

Elks lodge kills proposal

TWIN FALLS—Members of the Twin Falls Elks Lodge have turned down a building remodeling proposal which would include adding a supper club to their Shoshone Street building.

In a vote Thursday night, exalted ruler Clayton Rudd said the membership turned down the original proposal. Many of the members, he said, felt getting into the food business at this time could mean an expensive undertaking.

On Feb. 28 the membership meets again and at that time will vote on a new proposal.

The second proposal calls for complete remodeling of the Elks building on the corner of Shoshone Street and Second Avenue North. Remodeling and modernization of the lodge area, present second floor lounge and office area will be suggested, Rudd said.

On the first floor, just vacated by Shane's Furniture Co., the lodge proposes a gymnasium, sauna, bath, exercise facility, ping pong and pool area for members only. There may also be one commercial area on the first floor, Rudd said.

Plans for some office rentals on the second floor are planned, he said.

Army officer sees no peacetime draft return

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS—The army will never return to a peacetime draft system, Lt. Gen. E. B. Roberts, commander of the sixth army said Saturday.

General Roberts added that in case of a large-scale war, a draft would be necessary. The general was at the Twin Falls armory on a staff visit to the Headquarters of the 116th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

"The volunteer army is going to succeed, it has to succeed," the three-star general stated. After some initial trouble during the period of transition from draft to volunteer army enlistments are up. For the past two months, the enlistment rate met the quotas, the general said.

Enlistments in the National Guard are running at a good level and the reserves, which were "initially have a few strength problems, are steadily improving," Gen. Roberts said.

The 1943 West Point graduate said he saw no "reduction in quality" in the army resulting from the new volunteer system. Though it is likely that the service would include fewer college graduates, the quality level and the requirements for enlistment are high, according to Gen. Roberts.

High school graduates make up 50 per cent of the force. Fifteen to 17 per cent of army personnel fall in category four, the lowest level of qualifications and test scores, the general said.

"Re-enlistment bonuses for the National Guard are one aid to enlistment rates now being considered at the Department of Defense, the general stated.

The two-hour morning visit by Gen. Roberts included a briefing by the staff and a tour of the facility.

The company is touring southern Idaho, giving performances in Boise, Sun Valley, Arco, Shoshone and Grand View as well as in Twin Falls.

Draftsmen work out school race

Times-News Capital Bureau BOISE

Draftsmen are at work trying to permit a realistic race for superintendent of public instruction in 1974.

Twin Falls School Supt. George Staudaher and a deputy attorney general told members of the State Board of Education Friday current law virtually prohibits candidates from seeking the post.

Recodification of the state's election law has left a contradiction in the code about the qualifications a person must have to be a proper candidate for the post.

"If the most recent statute is adhered to, Hargis said, the candidate must possess a life state certificate. But the state stopped issuing the certificates during the 1930s. Staudaher, a possible candidate for the superintendent's position in 1974, told the board he would have had to make application when he was 5 years old for the life certificate.

Hargis said an election law attorney in the office of the secretary of state, John Croner, was attempting to draft amendatory legislation to correct the apparent oversight.

D. F. Englekirk, the current superintendent, is not expected to run for re-election when his fourth term expires in November.

Data about hospital clarified

TWIN FALLS—Clarification was made Saturday on information given in the Times-News for the hospital bond election series. Hospital officials inadvertently reported in Friday's story $60,000 as monthly cost of the commercial laundry service. The correct figure is $6,000.

In Thursday's story it was reported the hospital pharmacy would be open for public use. The pharmacy will be open for hospital outpatients only, primarily during non-business hours.

Vote Yes Tuesday

The practice of medicine has changed dramatically in the 23 years since Magic Valley Memorial Hospital first opened its doors.

But during that generation span the hospital has not changed enough to keep pace with improvements in medical practice. The hospital has been asked to provide services it was not designed to provide.

Moreover, the rate of change in medicine is accelerating. Clearly the time has come again to build for the community's future health.

A $4.6 million construction program has been proposed by the hospital's trustees and endorsed by the Twin Falls County Commissioners. Twin Falls County voters will vote Tuesday, with two-thirds approval needed to authorize the building program.

The proposed construction program is a sound one. We urge you to support it.

A fair question is often asked, "The care at the hospital is good. Why then spend so much money?"

The answer is that the hospital's job has changed. When Magic Valley Memorial was built its primary function was to house sick people. Although there were small specialized departments, the emphasis was on providing enough beds. The hospital tended to be more a patient storehouse than a specialized treatment center.

Today, new trends in medicine have changed hospital priorities.

A movement toward intensive, specialized treatment is suggested by the following figures:

While the number of patients treated has grown fairly slowly, the number of specialized procedures has grown rapidly:

Two and one-half times as many surgical operations were performed in 1973 than in 1956. The number rose from 2,111 to 4,812.

During a shorter period, from 1965 to 1973, the number of laboratory procedures showed explosive growth, jumping from 70,239 to 244,217.

From 1956 to the present, the number of emergency room visits jumped from 786 to over 4,800.

All this was taking place in a building nearly unchanged from that built 23 years ago.

The proposed building program is designed to provide the specialized services increasingly demanded by patients and doctors.

The issue would expand surgical facilities, expand X-ray and laboratory space, and improve the emergency room facilities.

Additionally, the number of beds available to surgery patients would be expanded by about 30.

A second area of proposed improvement is establishment of an outpatient center where people would be given treatment without having to be admitted to the hospital.

The outpatient department is one of the most attractive parts of the building proposal. By providing as much treatment as possible on a walk-in basis, more people can be treated at reduced cost.

In our judgment the building proposal reflects real needs of the community and deserves support.

And there on the seat with W.C....

When you get ready to fold your tent and silently steal away you get to remembering things which happened way back when. Like the time we interviewed the great comedian W. C. Fields.

We were tipped off that he was coming through town and happened in our own car and went out to the city limits and parked. Within a short time a big, black limousine came rolling along so we took off after it. Sure enough, it was Mr. Fields.

Believe or not, we chased that auto for more than a mile until it came to a stop sign. Then we drove in front of it and stopped so it couldn't continue. Jumping out of our car we hustled back to the big black auto.

You know, we can't remember what we ended up writing about the portly gentleman but we can really remember the circumstances.

The driver - in a chauffeur's uniform - was in the front seat. There were so many bags in the seat with him he hardly had room to drive. A wall of glass was behind him and behind that wall, and on the back seat, Mr. Fields sat. He had the entire seat to himself with the exception of an object he was holding on the seat beside him.

The object? A fifth of liquor!

MR. SPECTATOR

Recently mentioned in Mr. Spectorator that the sun was going to be used in the energy field. Well, here comes more on this. Engineers at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center will use sunshine later this year to heat and cool three parked trailers spaced to simulate a residence. They will demonstrate a system which will take from the Sun three-fourths of the thermal energy needed for the simulated living quarters.

The system is designed to furnish three tons of air conditioning during the summer and 20.5 kilowatts of heat during the winter. Only one trouble - we will eliminate electricity and gas as a heating and cooling source and then the Sun will go out.

Bending prolongs Nixon endurance

(C) New York Times Service WASHINGTON - Richard Nixon has endured all these years because "he bends but never breaks."

He likes to sound rigid and consistent in his rigidity, but in practice he makes a virtue of flexibility and inconsistency, and his new budget is just the latest evidence of the point.

His budget is not primarily an economic but a political document. A year ago, he was insisting Congress abide by strict spending ceilings and threatening to impound funds that broke through its limits or violated his priorities. This year he was not defying Congress but offering to compromise with it, indicating that he would spend whatever was necessary in order to avoid a recession.

A year ago, Nixon was emphasizing austerity, threatening to veto any money bills that would add to the inflation, reorganizing the executive to reduce the bureaucracy, but increase the power of a few men in the cabinet, and shaking his fist at the congress.

The reasons for his switch from fiscal austerity to fiscal flexibility, from defiance to cooperation with the Congress are fairly clear. The energy crisis, the inflation, the rise in prices and interest rates, the loss of jobs and the general loss of confidence in the government all created a new situation, so Nixon compromised.

When he appeared before both houses of the Congress in his State of the Union address, having served in both houses and presided over the Senate as vice president, Nixon told them that he was not going to resign the presidency, but that he would cooperate with the Congress.

This is still his strength and his hope. At one point in his career, he defied the Communists in Massachusetts; he refused his enemies and then negotiated with them as his allies in a "new world order." He is now doing the same thing with the Congress.

The Congress is exasperated by all this but doesn't know what to do with him. He is in terrible trouble, but he has given the democratic majority in a Congress a budget that is both liberal and ambiguous.

In short, what critics watch him carefully on the TV and wonder what he thinks in the night, Nixon keeps bending and compromising, and waiting. This is how he achieved the presidency in the first place, and this is how he is still holding on to it.

JAMES RESTON

Also, he had to send his budget to a House of Representatives which is considering whether to indict, and a Senate which may consider whether to convict him of crimes or misdemeanors against the republic.

No real excuse for February

WASHINGTON - February is no good. There is no excuse for February.

It was invented by Numa Pompilius, successor to Romulus as king of Rome, to get his name in the papers. If that wasn't a dirty enough trick, Numa also added January to the calendar, and anybody who has ever paid a pile of Christmas bills knows what kind of a month that is.

February derives its name from the Latin verb, februa, meaning to purify. On the 15th day of the month the Romans held a festival at which a goat was sacrificed.

The Sanskrit called February "Srotas-kala" because kala was supposed to sprout at that season. Later, they changed the name to "Sol-month," to greet the returning sun.

As if February weren't bad enough just being February, the month also brings St. Valentine's Day. That bit of commercial come-on was invented by European merchants, who apparently felt the pinch after the profits of Christmas.

ANDREW TULLY

At any rate, Feb. 14 was decreed to be the day on which lovers sent tokens of their affection to one another. Naturally, the word "token" was broadened to include mink coats, diamond necklaces, sports cars and a month in the Bahamas.

The ancient Romans invented a feast called Lupercal, possibly after intense lobbying by spinsters. Anyway, the names of young men and women were put in a box and were drawn by chance. The law said the man was required to become the boy friend for the next year of the girl whose name he drew. You know what a woman can do, marriage-wise, if she's got a year to work on some poor joker.

Feb. 1 is the feast day of an Irish saint named Bridget, or Brigid, who by all accounts was both holy and personable. She was born of princely ancestors in County Louth, but became a nun and lived with seven other virgins at the foot of Croghan Hill, doing good.

Lincoln and Washington both were born in February, a circumstance which may be the month's only excuse for existing. But if Numa hadn't meddled with the calendar, they'd have been born anyway in a nicer month.

Besides, our reigning clowns have capitulated to holiday seekers and travel agents by decreeing that the latter's birth date be celebrated the third Monday in February. Any day now, Congress will shift both birthdays to a jolly Fourth of July weekend, when the weather's a little better.

In fact, February bah! Also humbug.

Foreign trade cuts into US grain supply

By NEA-London Economist News Service WASHINGTON (LNS) - Six months after allowing foreigners to buy up more soybeans than the United States could supply, the Department of Agriculture has now done the same with wheat.

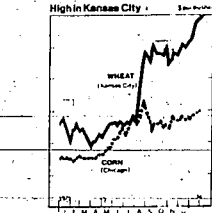

So something will have to give. The Kansas wheat price has already risen 20 per cent in the past two months to a record $2 a bushel and many midwest dealers are prophesying wheat at $2 before the season is over.

LENS

By the end of last month the department has agreed to the export of 1.3 billion bushels of wheat. If no more export orders come in, and American consumption stays static at 755 million bushels, there will be 29 million bushels left in America's granaries when the new harvest begins to trickle in this June.

This is only 10 days' consumption. America would face bread shortages if anything went wrong, or, as is probable, more export orders filter in meanwhile.

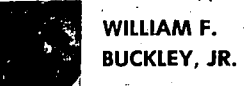

Zero hour nearing in Britain

Zero hour approaches in Great Britain, and they are reminding nowadays about the Great Strike of 1926. The differences outweigh the parallels.

In 1926, the mines were privately owned. But anti-monopoly laws never having been much of a European specialty, the mine owners spoke as if with one voice. The mine owners were insisting that in order to meet competition from abroad, the mine workers should agree simultaneously to reduce their wages, and to increase their hours.

There was a trial run a year before, even as now they speak of the miners strike of 1972 as having been a trial run for what is now in prospect. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin gave in and provided a subsidy for the mine workers. But what he was really doing, he confided to his biographer later, was simply buying time. He predicted the mine workers would strike, that the Trades Union Congress was such that a general strike might well follow. What then? - if no surreptitious preparations were made?

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

These, then, saved England, that is, from hunger, perhaps pestilence, perhaps serious armed conflict. Hundreds of thousands of volunteers - students, storekeepers, socialists, old people - did what they could to keep in motion that which was absolutely necessary to the public health. And the British Navy trained its guns on strikers who attempted to keep ships from offloading food and other relief material. In 10 days, the leadership of the unions went to Number 10 Downing Street and capitulated.

It was however the great Pyrrhic victory of the century in industrial relations. The intransigence of both sides had sickened everyone. The result was nationalization of coal 20 years later; an increase in class resentment; and a cynical toleration for the kind of demagoguery that continues to corrupt the public dialogue.

The great difference this time around is of course that a) the mines belong to "the people," as the Socialist cliché puts it, so that there are no capitalists to kick around any more; b) far from any attempted retrenchment, the government has already promised a 16 per cent rise in wages which the miners have rejected; and c) although there were Communists here and there in 1926, the Communist grip on the mine workers union in some regions powerful, such as the Communist leadership has forthrightly admitted they want chaos, and a collapse of parliamentary democracy.

Poor Mr. Heath. He is now musing about a thing called Helixities.

The idea is that an agency, in which government, labor and management would be represented, would declare on the subject of "wage" relativity. The whole notion is preposterous; Heath knows it is preposterous.

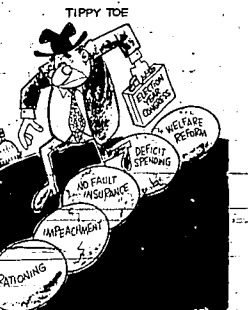

If the crunch comes, he wants the public to understand that he tried everything. But the public might conclude his trying everything had the effect of encouraging the mine workers from obduracy to terminal obduracy.

Meanwhile, unlike 1926, there are no serious preparations for handling a general strike, should the miners strike evolve to that point.

BLM completes use plan for TF County lands

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bureau of Land Management has completed a land use plan for 250,000 acres it administers in Twin Falls County.

The BLM's Twin Falls Planning Unit — all county lands east of Salmon Falls Creek — includes 242,511 acres controlled by the federal agency — about 30 percent of the total area.

Some highlights of the BLM land use plan are:

- Establishment of a natural area, including an "adequate" buffer, along the left side of Salmon Falls Creek from Balanced Rock Park to Salmon Dam (Area 4 on map). The natural area designation will prohibit livestock grazing and off-road vehicle travel in the canyon bottom and off-road and trail access into the bottom to existing sites.
- Current temporary licenses for livestock grazing above authorized levels will be extended on a permanent or "continuing" basis. Sheridan Hansen, area manager for the BLM, said the "carrying capacity" of several BLM grazing areas "has been proven to be significantly above" current allowed levels.
- Retention of all BLM tracts on the Snake River Canyon rim and bottomland until local or state governments are ready to develop them for public recreational use (Area 7 on map). The tracts may also be traded for lands which have a "higher public value."
- Possible inclusion of Twin Falls County west of Salmon Falls Creek in the Burley BLM District. The land is now in the Boise district.
- Establishment of a scenic corridor along Highway 93 in Area 3 (from Rogerson to about four miles south of the Nevada border).
- Provisions of the land use plan which apply to the Twin Falls area are:
- Development of management plans for all grazing allotments.
- Consider and provide for wildlife needs, all water developments.
- Reconsideration of several small tracts which have been classified for disposal by sale or transfer. Those tracts having wildlife value would be retained.
- Identification of archeological and historical areas and establishment of their significance.
- Where feasible, establishment of cross-country trails for off-road vehicles, horses and hiking.
- Establishment of a transportation corridor following Highway 93.
- Establishment of a power line corridor along existing power line rights-of-way.

A breakdown of land use provisions in each of seven areas in the Twin Falls unit follows (refer to map):

Area 1, South Hills: 1. Brush removal will be banned in crucial wildlife areas. 2. A grazing system and development plan will be initiated to promote steady or brush vegetation.

Area 2, Hollister: 1. Areas proposed for conversion to watershed and livestock forage development will contain at least 10 to 20 percent brush for wildlife cover and food. 2. Full restoration of gravel pits will be required after construction is completed. 3. Model airplane and trap shooting areas will be established and limited to 40 acres each.

Area 3, Berger: 1. Part of the Berger Tract will be established as a cultural area. 2. All new fences will allow for antelope crossings. 3. Forage and watershed projects will include islands and buffer strips of native vegetation.

Area 4, Salmon Falls Creek: 1. A recreation plan will be developed to provide five reaction sites along Salmon Falls Reservoir. 2. If power is extended from the Salmon Dam recreation site, lines will be buried at least until out of the recreation buffer area.

Area 5, Shoshone Basin: 1. Sagebrush removal will be banned unless it improves sage grouse habitat. 2. All fences must be "deer type," not exceeding 42 inches in height.

Area 6, Rabbit Springs: 1. Establish the grade area at Rabbit Springs as a public rock collecting area and reevaluate mining claims. 2. Develop Rabbit Springs as a real area. 3. Livestock grazing systems will be designed to provide 10 to 20 percent brush vegetation. 4. In the deer winter range area, livestock forage and watershed improvements which change the vegetation must improve habitat for deer and sage grouse. 5. Livestock management fences must allow movement of deer and antelope. 6. Projects which would harm esthetic values along Highway 93 will be banned.

Area 7, Snake River: 1. Land at the mouth of Rock Creek, near Ferrine Bridge and at Murtaugh Lake will be acquired, possibly through exchange. 2. Cauldron Linn area will be acquired, possibly by exchange, for designation as a national historic site. 3. Application of the Idaho State Parks Department for development of Buhl Downs recreation area will be approved. 4. Mining claims on tracts along the Snake River will be reevaluated.

Hansen said Monday a comprehensive land use plan for BLM areas in Cassia and Blaine Counties should be completed by June.

House printing panel may have passed time

UPI

BOISE (UPI) — The House printing committee is an idea that has outlived its time, an author in a new study says. The study, which was published in the House of Representatives, says the committee often tries to substitute its philosophical judgments for those of the entire House.

A case in point occurred Wednesday.

Rep. William Onwiler, R-Boise, appeared in the House to print his bill to phase out tax levies on improvements to real property over a period of 10 years and then tax the property at its highest use.

He said the bill — which this committee refused to print — appears to be correct technically and constitutionally. He said it contains a fiscal impact note and that nobody on the committee challenged to him the validity of that note.

Some members of the printing committee are strong conservatives and are out to block even consideration, if they can, of bills with which they disagree. The committee's consultation grounds if they can or look for technical flaws. But what they're really looking at is philosophy.

A legislature is supposed to be representative government — and, by that, government represents the people and not just the conservatives, the liberals, or, if you will, even middle roads.

That is why each member has but one vote. That is why it takes a majority of votes on the floor of each house to pass a bill and two-thirds majority of the membership of each to put constitutional proposals on the ballot.

If a member does not like a bill on philosophical grounds he can turn first to the germane committee considering that bill and request its defeat, outlining his own philosophy. If he fails there he can take the case to the floor where the entire house can consider it.

And, if he fails there, he can begin the process in the other house of the legislature. And, failing there, he can even take the case to the governor for a veto.

With all that protection it seems a shame nine members of a little clerical committee can make decisions for the entire House of Representatives. If this committee were to print a bill, it might, in the session, make some sense. But the committee is not composed of the leadership.

Some lawmakers defend this committee on grounds that it is a necessary part of the legislative process. They say bills will not be considered seriously if that were true the printing committee would stop all the cat and dog legislation.

But again, this committee does not represent the entire House of Representatives. Every philosophy has a right to be heard. It might help if some members of the printing committee re-read that constitution they so proudly cite all the time and discover this again for themselves.

Analysis

Therefore, he indicated, members of the printing committee are a group that should be screening bills for technical or constitutional flaws at best — were denying him the right to be heard on his bill.

He said he wanted the bill printed primarily so that he could be studied in the revenue and taxation committee of which he no longer is a member. He said he did not know if he was ready to vote for such legislation at this time but he felt it contained a concept worth study.

Rep. John Reardon, R-Idaho, a member of the printing committee, defended that group on grounds Onwiler's bill would have a tremendous fiscal impact on the state.

What he didn't say but what he apparently meant was that he didn't like the concept in the bill.

When the printing committee refuses to print a bill a member can get the job done anyway if he can get 31 of his fellows to join him on the floor. Onwiler got 33 and his motion prevailed, 34-32.

Message critiqued

Editor, Times-News:

So, according to Dr. Richard Nixon, one year of Watergate is enough, also on the other side of the record of your "State of the Union doubletalk" you stated you will not walk away from a job you were elected to do.

In case you don't know, Dr. Nixon, you were not elected to create the following: Watergate, accept illegal contributions, use the "smoking" cigarettes many for your home improvements, dirty tricks, an enemy list (however, happiness is knowing that my name is on your list of undesirable), walk with big oil, ITAT, the milkman, Howard Hughes, Robert Vesco, the airlines, etc.

To this, your "motley" crew of politicians leaped to their feet and applauded, to where I'm sure that's the hardest work they will do this year.

However, the Honorable Sen. Edward Brooke of Mass. had the dignity to remain seated during this ritual.

On the same page I see, Nixon — will — help with impenchment proceedings. That reminds me of the cat that ate the canary, then helped his master look for it. I didn't believe there was gas and oil shortage till I found out that all seven of the "big oil" corporations "playboys" also known as executives arrived in Washington in a Volkswagen, to plead poverty. And would you believe it worked?

The way the politicians are trying to make instant gas and oil, and make Watergate go away, reminds me of the farm hand whose boss went on an extended convocation circuit. When the boss returned the hired man was quick to point out that two prize cows were electrocuted before he discovered the electric stock waterer had a short in it, then took him to the shop and told him the truck motor was burned out, because he thought there was enough oil in it to get home.

About that time the farmer was aware he was going into stock, said, "Hold it, hold it, in the name of stupidity, didn't you stop anything from happening?"

To which the hired man boomed, "Yeah, do you remember those periodic rains your wife used to have?"

Tuesday vote asked

Editor, Times-News:

Yesterday I voted yes. Because Sunday morning I'm flying East for two weeks and will be gone on voting day.

I go with the assurance that should a medical emergency arise for my husband or three children who remain behind, they will be able to receive expert medical attention from one of many physicians and a competent staff at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Decision deplored

Editor, Times-News:

Open letter to the school board:

We feel that the decision of the school board to keep the present school hours and endanger the lives of our children is both lamentable and unwise. There are many parents who feel as we do. To those working mothers who feel their home is more dangerous than the busy, darkened streets we ask, "What about your dangerous home during the hour or longer your children are home alone after school and before you return from work?"

While we believe in the democratic process, we do not feel the will of the majority has been carried out in this situation. Why does the school board not send a questionnaire home with each child to ascertain the real desires of the parents concerned?

We respectfully request that you reconsider the former decision rather than shoulder the possible responsibility of some child's death.

US troops key to German defenses

(c) Chicago Daily News

BOHN — West Germany's defense continues to be based on the combination of American combat troops and the United States as the backbone of the NATO alliance.

"I have to often repeat this point that we regard the United States as the leading part of the alliance and expect it to remain such," Adm. Armin Zimmermann, inspector general of West German armed forces, said at a recent briefing for American journalists.

The West Germans feel that a substantial number of American troops facing Warsaw Pact forces to the east of the borders and barbed wire is the first element of a credible Western defense. If American GIs are involved, the United States is committed. The second consideration is the American troops in West Germany are, however, unmovable.

— Since France pulled out of the military side of NATO in 1966, French troops have not been committed to the Atlantic.

— The French would join in to repulse an attack. But there is no guarantee.

— Soviet forces have been present in Czechoslovakia since 1968 when the Czechoslovak experiment in liberalism was squelched. Now both Soviet and Czech forces are being armed with the latest Soviet weapons.

— Austria has reduced its military strength on the assumption, as Chancellor Erns-Krispies puts it, that they couldn't hold out for more than 24 hours anyhow. The West German concern is that if Austria does not defend its neutrality, it might become an avenue for attack on West Germany.

Col. Alfenburg says the latter should not be dramatized, but it is being given deep consideration in the West German defense ministry.

Of the four elements, NATO officials consider the Soviet buildup most alarming because it is combined with an existing massive numerical superiority.

Vote shift rapped

Editor, Times-News:

Since becoming chairman of the Idaho State Republican Party, I have made numerous trips to Washington, D.C. Many things go on in the halls of Congress which are not reported in the media.

For instance, on Jan. 31 an amendment to the Legal Services Bill was offered by Sen. John Tower of Texas. The purpose of the amendment was to prevent tax-paid attorneys from defending draft dodgers. Senator Church voted against the amendment. The vote was tied 45-45 and under the Senate rules, a tie vote would defeat the amendment. Then near the end of the time allowed for a roll call, Senator Roth of

Cargo moves as truckers cool

By United Press International
Independent drivers voted to return to work in growing numbers Saturday, apparently ending the worst of a 10-day drivers strike that had halted critical food supplies and threatened some industries with virtual shutdowns.

Authorities in a dozen states, while cautiously keeping National Guard troops on standby alert, reported traffic near normal.
However, pockets of dissatisfied drivers appeared in some places rejecting government pledges to freeze fuel prices

Mike Parkhurst, editor of Overdrive magazine, said government proposals to end the strike were "unworkable" and termed "talk of an end to the walkout a giant smokescreen." Parkhurst predicted the walkout would continue.

A key group in Pennsylvania, the Pittsburgh chapter of the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers (FASH), voted overwhelmingly to return to work.
And representatives of Okla. truckers group in Florida agreed to resume citrus shipments Monday.

However, the Cleveland chapter of FASH turned down the back-to-work plan, and the group's Youngstown, Ohio, chapter was evenly split on the issue. Other drivers in Louisiana, Iowa and Alabama rejected the plan, and one group of defiant drivers in Bensenville, Ark., named themselves "The boys who haven't given up yet."

'Confused' envoy disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Undersecretary of State John N. Erwin said in secret testimony published Saturday he was sent to the Middle East three years ago to halt a confrontation between oil producers and the U.S. industry with no real understanding of American objectives.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Erwin's testimony Jan. 31 "reveals an appalling lack of governmental expertise—in the area of international oil and the failure of the U.S. government to come to grips with its issues."
He said Erwin's story contains a lesson for the international conference of 13 oil-consuming nations opening Monday in Washington on President Nixon's invitation.

Erwin told Church's Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations he was dispatched to the Persian Gulf on one day's notice Jan. 16, 1971, after a meeting with Secretary of State William P. Rogers and John J. McCloy, attorney for the U.S. oil industry's anti-boycotting group. Rogers also had conferred with President Nixon.

President Nixon, in a nationwide radio address, termed the truckers essential "to provide food, fuel and other supplies to all-Americans" and urged them to return to work.
"Now is the time to get all the trucks back on the road," Nixon said.

Europe takes 'flexible' stance

BRUSSELS (UPI) — European leaders have told the United States privately that Europe will take a flexible and cooperative approach to the Washington conference of oil-consuming nations beginning Monday, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

But France, one of the 13 nations in the two-day meeting, was known to oppose anything that smacks of active cooperation with the United States. As a Common Market member, France could veto any united stand at the conference, being attended by the United States, Canada, Japan, Norway and the nine Common Market countries.
French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert, on a visit to Baghdad, said Saturday that the session "is a political conference dedicated to politics, the Iraqi news agency reported."
The European negotiating mandate, drawn up here last Tuesday by Common Market foreign ministers, appeared to set rigid limits to the conference. In language demanded by France, it said "the meeting cannot resolve questions and cannot set up a permanent organ" to oversee the industrial nations' response to the oil crisis.

But other sections of the mandate seem to open loopholes in this stern approach. The sources said European leaders, in presenting the mandate to the United States, stressed this positive aspect.
West Germany Foreign Minister Walter Scheel and Common Market President Francois-Xavier Ortoli, who met the European team in Washington, met midnight Tuesday after the foreign ministers' meeting with the U.S. ambassador to the Common Market, Joseph Greenwald.

Ford eyes rationing

DETROIT (UPI) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Saturday night there may be "no alternative" to gasoline rationing if the Arab embargo on oil exports to the United States goes on much longer.
Ford also said the administration has decided to propose additional unemployment assistance for persons out of work in high jobless areas, with no requirement that beneficiaries show that they lost their jobs because of the energy shortage.

The vice president made his remarks in a speech prepared for delivery at a Michigan Republican dinner during a three-city tour that was expected to raise $400,000 for the state party organization. He took the opportunity to appeal for support of President Nixon in the current "period of transition and trial at home."

'Snoop' ring told

The yeoman acknowledged that he had pilfered hundreds of documents while serving with the military liaison unit. Most of these, he said, were funneled to the office of Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Radford also confirmed that at least three other high-ranking officers, along with Admirals Welfander and Robinson, knew about and were involved in the activity, though he added, "I was very surreptitious in operation."
Radford's assertions directly contradicted the thrust of recent statements by Moorer and Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger, both of whom had minimized the spying incident.

In the airport interview the yeoman said that he had always believed that Moorer was a patriot and a good man. He said that fact was conveyed to him on a number of occasions by Robinson.
The White House is known to have first learned of the military spying while investigating a leak of sensitive documents in December, 1971 on the India-Pakistan war to Jack Anderson, the columnist.

Budget report cites city losses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's 1975 budget short-changes the nation's towns and cities by allocating them "more responsibility but less money," according to a study prepared by urban leaders.

The report on "The Federal Budget and the Cities" praised Nixon for giving municipalities more authority over the funds they get, but said such factors as inflation, defense spending and continued impoundment of funds would actually give urban areas less to spend this year.

"The budget sent to Congress Feb. 4, for the year beginning July 1, offers cities more responsibility but less money," it said.
The 89-page budget study was prepared by 30 analysts from the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors, organizations which represent 14,883 towns and cities.

In sum, it said the budget would provide cities less money this year for education, environmental protection, public health services, mental health, drug and alcohol abuse, summer youth programs and the Economic Development Administration.

On the other hand, it said, "there are offsetting gains for individuals for medical payments, social insurance, food stamps and higher education assistance."
"A remarkable feature of the budget is that despite the fact the U.S. military involvement in Vietnam is ended, the President advocates an unprecedented increase in defense spending," it said.

Town loses growth battle

The angry homebuilding industry hauled the city into court, charging the ordinance violated the U.S. Constitution. In 1973 alone, it was estimated, the city had filed 1,600 rejected applications for 1,600 new housing units.
A few weeks before the trial in mid-January, Petaluma's school teacher mayor, Helen Putnam, appealed by the city and 49 California city councils and county boards of supervisors for help in Petaluma's pending court fight.
She argued that the fate of small towns everywhere was at stake and more than 25 responded.

California, with the state setting a population limit and closing its borders.

But Burke stressed the ruling was not an order the city must "open its gates to unlimited growth."
The future building applications, he said, could be evaluated in light of "traditional zoning and community planning considerations" if they were not used as subterfuges to limit population.
Petaluma was stunned, other small towns were shocked. "I thought our ordinance," said Mayor Putnam, "was reasonable for us."

One $50 check came from San Jose, Calif., never a small town but one that grew bigger and bigger during the same explosive decade, from 204,000 in 1950 to 445,000 ten years later.

"The City Council of San Jose," wrote Mayor Norman Y. Mineta, "recognizes the absolute requirement that cities be allowed the flexibility to meet the problems which result from uncontrolled, unregulated and rampant growth."
"The home building industry also stocked a war chest. A $25,000 check from the National Council of Home Builders arrived to aid the suit-filing construction industry's association of Sonoma County and other northern California builder groups fighting the ordinance.

Petaluma is deciding whether to appeal the ruling, and wondering about the proper use of "traditional tools" approved by the judge.
"We don't have a rosy path," said Putnam, a first grade teacher and school principal who has been mayor for nine years. "It's sort of back to the drawing boards on everything."
"We won't know the effective use of our own tools until we start using them and get some reaction to them. We'll make an honest use of them as possible."

"This wasn't a no-growth policy. It was a limited growth policy. We don't want to grow like San Jose."
The defendant ordinance was candid in the judge's opinion. It was designed to "preserve the small town character and surrounding open space of Petaluma" and to "allow the city council to control its future rate and distribution of growth."
"What the judge is really saying," says City Manager Bob Meyer, "is that everyone has to take their fair share of responsibility that you've got to make room for newcomers no matter what you feel about it."
Judge Burke readily agreed. "If you hold it down," he said later, "it's just a matter of whether or not you can say, 'If the ins are in, they stay in, and if the outs are in, they stay out."

"The city argued, somewhat belatedly, that controlled growth was necessitated by a limited sewer capacity — a plant built a few years ago was already overloaded — and a strained water supply.
But US District Judge Lloyd H. Burke ruled the ordinance unconstitutional, violating citizens' basic right to travel and live where they please.
"I'd prefer to live in a rural community myself," he said. "But that doesn't give residents of a rural community to exclude others."
"What happened in Petaluma could happen in "The legal principal is that people have a constitutional right to settle where they see fit."

But Burke believes his ruling and others like it will be tested in the US Supreme Court as more communities seek the solution to unwanted expansion of boundaries.
"I don't think the question has ever been presented in exactly this way to the Supreme Court before," he said. "The small town's objectives certainly possess a sympathetic quality. If you're a small town, you want to keep it small. But big cities face the same problem."
Burke believes that, within the nature of a town's location, resources, and other factors, population will reach a practical limit — and can do it legally.
"Suppose they put limitations on building sites, quarter acre lots, half acre lots and so forth. If it were not for the purpose of excluding people, population control could be accomplished indirectly. If the motives are proper, it can be accomplished."
"Maybe," they paid a penalty," he said, "for being just too honest."

British miners launch strike

But the strike by 269,000 miners in a wage dispute was already effective for all practical purposes. Because of an overtime ban originally imposed Nov. 12, most miners did not show up for work anyway.

The miners' strike would use only six-man picket lines in order to avoid clashes with police such as occurred during the last coal strike two years ago, when thousands of miners at a time blockaded power stations.
Heath and other government ministers have warned the shutdown would bring economic chaos to a nation already hard hit by the 13-week-old slowdown in the mines, which produce 70 per cent of Britain's electrical power.

Launching his campaign for reelection, Heath said Saturday it was "a sad and shameful thing" that his Labor party opponent, former Prime Minister Harold Wilson, refused to join in a last-minute appeal to the miners' workers to call off their national shutdown.

"He dares not associate himself with my appeal, because he knew that his own position, his own title of leader of the Labor party, depended on the support of the extremists who were held back upon a strike," Heath said in a speech to a conference of Young Conservatives — his youth organization — in Southport.
"This was a sad and shameful thing," Heath said.
Wilson responded by saying that the Heath government "did not have the courage" to settle the miners' workers conflict.

"Britain is in grave danger of becoming a broken-backed economy," Wilson said.
"Who will stand up for the voice of moderation and who will surrender to the force of extremism?" Heath asked.

MV census reported

T-N Capitol Bureau
BOISE — While the Idaho Legislature argues about reapportioning along the lines of the 1970 national census, the US Department of Commerce has new population figures for 1973. They show Blaine County to be the fastest-growing of the nine Magic Valley counties while Camas County is the only one in the group to have lost population.

While the state population is estimated to have increased by 7.9 per cent, six of the nine area counties are expanding at a faster rate. The figures are estimates provided by the US Bureau of the Census, and include provisional totals for July 1, 1973.

The figures show an increase of 17.8 per cent for Blaine County to a new population of 6,800; for Camas County, the population has declined by 28 persons, a 1.1 per cent reduction.

Camas County has grown by 5.2 per cent, with a new estimated population of 17,900; Elmore County is estimated to have 19,400 people an increase since 1970 of 10.9 per cent. Gooding County's population has increased 8.9 per cent to 9,400. Jerome County has gone to 11,900, an increase of 15.6 per cent.

In Lincoln County, the population has gone to 1,200, an increase of 3.4 per cent over the 1970 figures. Minidoka County's population has jumped 12.7 per cent, standing at 17,700.

Twin Falls County, the state's fifth biggest according to the estimates, has increased 8.3 per cent in population since 1970.

Board axes TF teacher contract

T-N Capitol Bureau
BOISE — The State Board of Education refused Friday to permit the Twin Falls School District to substitute its own teacher contract for a standard one already approved by the board.

Supt. George Staudaer appeared before the board at its meeting at Boise State College and asked for the waiver. He said the contract drawn up by the local school district attorney, Fred Decker, was "more equitable, simpler and basically what has been in the past."

But department of education administrative assistant Roy Truby warned the board if it approved an exception it would face similar requests by up to 100 other local districts.

With the exception of Ed Benoit, board member from Twin Falls, the board was unanimous in turning down Staudaer's request. Benoit abstained on the voice vote.

The appearance was Staudaer's second effort at the state level to win approval for a substitute contract form. Last month he appeared before the Professional Standards Commission and asked for its approval. The commission denied the request, but transmitted it to the board for final action.

The Twin Falls superintendent claimed the contract which had been approved for statewide use was not circulated among school officials until after it was adopted. He said at least two associations of superintendents within the state had expressed opposition to the firm.

But Truby disagreed, saying the contract form had been mailed to every trustee and school superintendent in the state while it was under consideration.

Deputy Atty. Gen. James Hargis told board members the contract they had approved attempted to be broad enough to permit inclusion of any local board policies that were in effect. He also said, however, that at least a few points of the contract offered by Staudaer were in violation of state law of board policy, and therefore were unenforceable.

Board chairman Dr. John Staudaer, Boise, said near the end of the discussion there seemed to be enough "confusion" about the standard contract form for the board to review it once again.

Other board members pointed out it was nearly time for contracts to be signed in the

PUC approves Blaine power project

By DAVID ESPO
T-N Capitol Bureau
BOISE — The Idaho Power Co. has secured the permission of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (PUC) for construction of a proposed 50-megawatt turbine generator in Blaine County.

An order issued last week by commissioners Ralph Wickberg and Robert Nagenhag also gave the go-ahead for the conversion and rebuilding of the present transmission and distribution lines from the Wood River substation to the Ketchum substation for greater capacity.

The request from the power company had sparked a protest and resulted in a public hearing Dec. 6 in Halley. The commissioners agreed with the firm, however, that the permit requested "would provide increased security to the Halley-Ketchum-Sun Valley area and alleviate any hardship that could be caused by a prolonged electrical outage."

Idaho Power told the commission a delay in the scheduled completion of its Jim Bridger plant in Wyoming made the increased load capability necessary. In addition, it said, the existing power line that serves the area, in place since 1962, "has been especially good," but warned that "the passage of time and the corresponding deterioration of the plant would eventually contribute to a substantial outage in the future," according to the PUC's report on the company's request.

The turbine generator would be used to supply energy until the Jim Bridger plant is completed and will then provide increased security of service in the Blaine county area and a reserve capacity for the users of electricity.

local boards, however, and Swartley dropped his suggestion.

Benoit said the difficulty with local school officials not seeing the contract was due to a "breakdown in communications," with the blame shared jointly by superintendents, trustees and state officials.

Staudaer said after the meeting the local board would abide by the decision of the state board.

The commission said it was satisfied with the company's efforts to mitigate environmental impact with its construction proposals. It noted in its report, "an earth dike will surround the tank (at the generator) and will encompass an area that will contain all of the oil in the event of a leak. The ground will have an impervious barrier to prevent any escape of oil into the ground."

In addition, efforts to gauge the air quality around the proposed generator indicate "no significant deterioration," even when results for the worst one-hour period were used.

The PUC report also said Idaho Power had investigated at least one other alternative method of providing additional power capabilities to the area. The method considered was the construction of an additional transmission line from the Hunt substation near Eden into the Ketchum area.

"The applicant contacted many individual landowners on the possibility of obtaining right-of-way and found that these individuals did not desire to grant such right-of-way across their property. Such a transmission line would cross a substantial portion of federal lands and obtaining right-of-way across these lands presented serious problems."

Wickberg, in a separate concurring statement attached to the commission's funding, said he was ambivalent about authorizing a gas turbine power plant for emergency electric power at the area.

But, he said, the company had "come up with a reasonable plan to eliminate much of the risk of a serious electrical power outage to this area."

A hearing is pending before the Blaine County commissioners on appeals filed by both sides of the turbine generator issue.

The appeal stems from the Jan. 17 county board of zoning appeals decision which upheld the county planning and zoning commission's Dec. 13 decision to grant Idaho Power a variance to construct the generator at the Wood River Substation north of Halley.

The appellants include Idaho Power, which objects to a board-imposed condition on the variance. The stipulation provides that after Sept. 30, 1974, the generating plant can be used for emergency use only. Mrs. Dorothy J. Chapman, a neighboring landowner, who had previously appealed the matter of the appeals board, is also an appellant.

BOISE — The Senate Health, Education and Welfare Committee agreed Friday to introduce legislation to change the way the state supports education of exceptional children. The proposal creates a funding system based on the salaries of teachers and other personnel involved in instruction of exceptional students.

Development official Howard Schrag, also told committee members he doubted any effort would be made to "establish state-supported day-care centers. "We're not trying to put anybody out of business," he said.

But several senators objected to the proposal. Sen. Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, said he is afraid day care homes — neighborhood homes — would close down rather than try to meet the standards imposed by the legislation.

Sen. James Stolcheff, D-Sandpoint, suggested the bill should apply only to those centers where more than 10 children are cared for during the day.

The vote to hold the measure in committee was 6-4, with Sens. James Vest, R-Wendell, and Robert Sarvik, D-Burley, among those voting to keep the bill and Barker voting to introduce it.

Schrag said after the meeting he would have the bill amended to take into account some of the objections and then return to the committee.

The special education program comes on the strength of a report that 43 of the state's 115 school districts have no program for exceptional students.

The interim committee investigating the subject received information at an October meeting that 40 psychologists were at work in 39 school districts around the state, while the state's districts had hired 11 social workers and 56 speech therapists. In all cases, the services had increased over the past few years.

"At the time, Barker said he thought Idaho was ahead of other states in the country in providing educational services to the exceptional children. Nevertheless, he said, a lawsuit challenging the limited scope of the efforts was a possibility.

Thomas denied seat on panel

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Senate for the second time in modern times turned down a gubernatorial appointment by refusing to confirm Robert Thomas of Coeur d'Alene to the Idaho-Fish-and-Game Commission. The vote was 12-2.

The only other time that the Senate has turned down an appointment was in the late 60's when the Senators refused to appoint Don Fredericksen of Gooding to the State Tax Commission.

Although in nearly an hour of floor debate senators agreed that Thomas was honest and had high integrity, his opponents argued against his "extreme" environmental stand.

Thomas' floor sponsor Sen. Jack Evans, D-Malad, said, "let's don't crucify this man for all the wrongs of the Fish and Game Commission."

Senate axes reapportionment extension bid

BOISE (UPI) — Proponents to have the federal court reapportionment — the Idaho legislature won another battle Friday in the State Senate. An effort to suspend the rules to have a joint memorial passed which would ask the federal court to give the legislature an extension of 30 days to reapportion was defeated.

The vote was 16-11 to suspend, two votes short of the necessary — two-thirds majority.

A federal court panel of three judges gave the Idaho legislature 30 days from the start of the current session to reapportion itself or have the court do it. That deadline is Tuesday.

Earlier Friday, the Idaho Senate defeated an attempt to reconsider a House-approved reapportionment bill which it killed Thursday. The vote was 16-18.

A second bill a Senate version of reapportionment — went to the House Friday. It had been approved Thursday in the Senate, but it was held an extra day upon notice of reconsideration by Sen. H. Dean Summers, R-Boise.

The Senate rushed through its final reading calendar and then an attempt was made to bring in the memorial asking the courts for an extension of time since under normal procedure the Senate measure now in the House won't be acted upon in time to meet the court deadline.

Roberts backs budget 'school'

BOISE (UPI) — A "school" for lawmakers on government reorganization has proved so successful House Speaker Wm. J. Laning, R-Hollister, has suggested one on the budget.

Chairman William Roberts, R-Buhl, of the House Appropriations Committee said serious consideration is being given to a couple of alterations of "classes" for the entire house in the near future.

He said they could be conducted either near the end of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee's budget hearings or immediately afterward.

Laning believes "it might be advantageous to discuss them openly — breaking into two groups of lawmakers where both political parties are represented.

"We want suggestions and questions on the budget," he said. "Hopefully, we can have a member of our staff at each meeting so questions can be discussed with the entire House before we start finalizing the budgets."

He said one of the main reasons for the plan is that "we'd discuss it out in front of everybody."

"I think we can get more mileage if it can be done this way rather than in individual party caucuses," Roberts said.

Roberts said the joint committee has a target date of Feb. 21 for completing its budget hearings. That would give the committee about a week to finalize budgets if it "can do so by the statutory 45th day of the legislative session."

BOISE—A public hearing on the Intermountain Gas Co. request for a 12 per cent rate increase will be conducted here Tuesday at the Idaho Public Utilities Commission offices.

The proposed increase must be approved by the PUC before taking effect. On Jan. 1, the commission granted a 17 per cent rate increase for Intermountain Gas to pay for the increased costs of gas. This "tracking increase" brought in $6.9 million to be passed on to the company's gas suppliers in Canada.

The general rate increase now under consideration would bring in an additional $4.5 million to the company, according to Bill Chapman, public information officer for Intermountain Gas.

On Tuesday PUC commissioners will examine the evidence presented by Intermountain Gas supporting the increase request. Also, they will hear public testimony supporting or opposing the rate hike. Unless new evidence is presented or someone requests another hearing, the commissioners will decide the rate increase request following the hearing. R. E. Larson, director of the PUC's utilities department, said.

Chapman said Intermountain Gas is asking for the 12 per cent rate increase to offset rising wage and maintenance costs and to finance new projects.

Since 1969, he said, wages of Intermountain Gas employees have risen from an average $3.66 per hour to $4.79 per hour. He said the company now is raising money to join with other companies in a joint exploration venture.

Intermountain Gas will spend $50,000 yearly for five years to find gas near the pipelines which the company uses, Chapman said. He said the interest on mortgage bonds to finance such exploration has risen to 9 per cent.

The hearing will begin at 9 a.m. at the commission's offices at 472 West Washington in Boise.

Twin Falls

Day	High	Low
Yesterday	43	18

Continued fair weather expected

Twin Falls, Rupert, Northside: Fair Saturday night through Monday. Overnight lows zero to 15 above, but 10 below zero at a few points. Highs both days mostly in 30's.

Synopsis: High pressure both at the surface and the loft and extends over Idaho and the Pacific Northwest with another center offshore. This pressure pattern is changing very slowly so we expect continued fair weather through Monday over the entire state. However, some low level moisture in the Upper Snake River Valley are producing stratus in that area tonight and may break up partially this afternoon.

Temperatures were fairly mild over the state Saturday with high temperatures in the upper 40's and low 50's in the valleys of southwest Idaho and temperatures were in the 40's Saturday afternoon in the Magic Valley. The coldest portion was in the southeast part of the state with maximums in the upper 20's and through the 30's.

ERA repeal advanced

BOISE (UPI)—In a special meeting, the House Judiciary Committee sent to the floor Friday a concurrent resolution that would rescind Idaho's ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the US Constitution.

The decision to send out the resolution will speed up action on it and possibly prevent it from developing into a full blown controversy the way it did a year ago.

Last year, the House killed by lack of a two thirds vote a joint resolution which called for rescinding the ratification. This year's proponents of repeal said they discovered they can rescind by a simple majority if they use a concurrent instead of a joint resolution under legislative rules.

While the committee sent out the resolution it held further study a bill which would put the question before the people next November for an advisory vote.

AMC tallies record sales

(c) 1974 New York Times Service

DETROIT—American Motors Corporation, enjoying booming sales of its small cars with the Big Three auto firms are in a slump because of the energy crisis. Thursday reported that earnings in the last three months of 1973 were up 23 per cent to $67 million on record sales of $479 million.

AMC, announcing the results of the October-December period, the first quarter of its 1974 fiscal year, said net earnings were $1.6 million above the $7.1 million profit from operations reported in the 1973 quarter.

Earnings were equal to 32 cents a share compared with 27 cents a share reported last year. On a fully diluted basis, earnings were 28 cents in the past quarter versus 23 cents a year ago.

Net earnings a year ago were $12.7 million, including an extraordinary income tax credit of $5.7 million.

AMC also said it was resuming paying a dividend for the first time in nearly nine years. The board of directors voted to pay a 10 cent per share semi-annual dividend March 27 to stockholders of record Feb. 25.

The firm has been reporting its best car sales in almost a decade this model year at a time the Big Three companies are hurting because of their heavy lineup of large cars.

The results at AMC were to send net sales to the new high of $4.7 million in the October-December quarter, up 16.5 per cent.

AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. and President

William V. Laneburg reported the results to shareholders at the company's annual meeting in its west side Detroit headquarters.

They cautioned that in addition to pricing and production problems that are common to all the auto makers, there would be "major expenditures for future product and expansion programs" at AMC. This was a reference to the firm's plans for a new small car, called the Pacer, which will be introduced in 1975 and is going to require additional parts manufacturing facilities.

Nevertheless, they said AMC "should achieve a satisfactory level of earnings for the year, but these factors could in the short term depress earnings from levels we might otherwise expect."

ROBERT SEIBEL advances

Seibel takes partnership

TWIN FALLS—Robert Seibel, local representative for Edward D. Jones and Co., has become a general partner of the St. Louis-based New York Stock Exchange member firm.

Mr. Seibel, 47, has operated the local office, with additional responsibilities in supervision, sales and compliance for the Mountain States region.

He will soon complete the New York Stock Exchange Board of Governors Review and will take the Allied Members Exam.

Utility firms pursue coal

(C) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON—Utility companies across the country are quietly placing orders for immense amounts of "clean" Wyoming and Montana coal, signaling the re-emergence of coal as an important source of energy and the beginning of mass strip-mining operations in the West.

More than a dozen power companies have signed long-term contracts for orders as large as 40 million tons of strip-mined coal from the rich western fields. Others are negotiating, or considering it. All the coal involved would come out of new mines.

The contemplated western coal mining operation is likely to set off a major confrontation between environmental groups and energy producers.

While environmentalists have long feared development of a "new Appalachia" in the scenic West, with lands left barren and scarred from surface mining, he contracts calling for delivery of coal beginning in the mid-1970's are the first tangible threat of that.

The move, the power companies say, grows out of increasing consumer demands, shortages of other energy sources, (particularly natural gas), a disillusionment with nuclear-power plants that have failed to meet promised operational schedules, and environmental laws preventing further use of traditional eastern and midwestern coal, which is high in sulphur and thus more polluting.

The contracts also show a new trend among energy producers: The development of big-oil companies into broad-spectrum "energy" companies. Out of the four new western mine operations scheduled to supply the coal, only one—American Metal Climax—is a traditional coal-mining enterprise.

The other companies entering agreements are Carter Oil Co., a subsidiary of Exxon; Kerr-McGee Corp. and Atlantic-Richfield.

In most cases, the power companies are at the same time contracting to build new power plants, both to increase their energy capacity for projected rising consumer demand and to accommodate the low-sulphur fuel. Some are finding it necessary to switch from natural gas to coal—a change requiring new plant.

Savings, loan firms said 'over-regulated'

(c) 1973 Chicago Sun-Times

DALLAS—The savings and loan industry is over-regulated, with entirely too many business decisions being made by those outside of the industry, a speaker told the U.S. Savings and Loan League's 81st annual convention in Dallas.

Practically all of the 6,000-plus delegates will tell you the same thing. But when the speaker, as was true in this instance, is Thomas R. Bomar, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (which regulates the S&L business) the statements tend to take on significance.

Bomar made the interesting suggestion that not only will the board attempt to eliminate certain regulatory restrictions, but that the board itself has become "a central bureaucracy which, by definition, has to be inefficient."

Therefore, Bomar said, "our plan calls for the elimination of implication of regulations—making operational matters from the board and organizing the board's simplification so that it may properly function as the policy and control group."

The industry as a whole has expressed no great interest in checking accounts, Bomar noted, "but we all realize that with the coming of electronic fund transfer, that access to this system is critical. We may never get into the paper check business, but the function it now performs is critical to the industry's ability to continue to attract funds." And what this means, he added, is that S&Ls must have a better balance between assets and liabilities.

The ability to shorten assets, increase funds sources and lengthen liability maturities will enable the industry to operate in an increasingly competitive environment, Bomar said.

The lowest temperature recorded in Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, was 81.6 degrees below zero in January, 1947.

Indonesian oil hike eyed

(C) New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Indonesia has the potential to double her present daily oil production of 1.3 million barrels in the next few years, the head of that nation's state-owned oil enterprise, Pertamina, said here.

Lieut. Gen. Ibnu Sutowo, president-director of Pertamina, said about $200 million would be spent in 1974 on exploration and development of the country's oil reserves.

Sutowo made the estimate at a news conference in the Waldorf Towers prior to delivering an address at the New York Hilton Hotel on the occasion of the sixth anniversary of the establishment of Pertamina's office here.

Replying to another question, Sutowo said he hoped Indonesia would be producing 1.5 million barrels of oil a day by the end of this year. He added that production has "nearly tripled" under Pertamina's management since 1966.

He said that about 40 per cent of total production was going to foreign oil companies — "almost all of them United States companies" — and that much of the increased production could come to this country "if the oil companies so desire."

In his prepared text, the executive said he had read many analyses of the present energy crisis in this country, "but rarely if ever do they speak of Indonesia." He charged that his country, the eighth largest oil exporting nation in the world, is "largely overlooked and largely forgotten" even though its crude oil is of particularly low in sulfur content, and thus contains less polluting effect.

"Indonesia's capacity to more than double its production and exports of petroleum in the next several years, and its capacity to send you and other countries (liquefied natural gas), and its capacity to supply your petrochemical producers and consumers with critically short products, are all largely ignored," he said.

TF County considers landfill use fee

Covering readied

NEWLANDFILL operations south of Twin Falls handles solid waste in deep trenches. Here a Twin Falls city sanitation contractor truck empties a load of waste. In the background a bulldozer moves in to begin covering the trench.

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Costly operation of three sanitary landfills in Twin Falls County and a continuing program of clearing and closing old dumpgrounds has brought county commissioners to consider a landfill use fee plan.

County commissioners are now attempting to develop solid waste control from a two mill maximum levy allowed by state law.

This provides about $125,000 per year in tax revenue and must cover contracts for the continuous operation of trenching and recovering the landfills. In addition, the county is phasing out dump grounds as rapidly as possible. At one time there were 14 of these. There were a few hundred "accidental" dumps where someone dropped a load of trash and someone else saw it and decided it would be a good spot for them to dump debris. These are being cleared up as rapidly as personnel and money allow.

Initial costs in obtaining land fencing, developing and building access roads for sanitary landfills was also high, Commissioners report.

The main landfill south of Twin Falls and the Black Bear landfill west of Buhl are under contract to Paul Welch for trenching and covering. The Mustang landfill is contracted to Art Bailey, Hansen, and clean up work is being done by Al Parrott, Twin Falls.

"I think we are making good progress and I think we're way ahead of where we were a year or two ago," Commissioner Chairman William Chace said Thursday. The commission made an inspection tour of dump grounds and landfills.

Most recently closed are the old Clover dump southeast of Clover, and the Hollister area dump. Equipment is working when available to bury as much of the accumulations as possible.

What will eventually be done with rolls of wire from dismantled fences, old car bodies and other items difficult to manage is not fully resolved, Commissioner Merl Leonard said.

At the Clover dump site, closed since last year, debris has been building up for 60 some years. It still presents a problem, but the collection is no longer growing.

"We are going to have to do better on this one," Chuncey said. "We will have to get in and clean it up but it will be a big job."

One of the problems at the Clover site is a number of old tree stumps, difficult to burn, too large to bury and unsightly.

About $65,000 in revenue sharing funds have gone into the establishment of the land fill program, Leonard said.

"Without this, we would never have been able to accomplish it on the two mill levy," he added.

The only additional revenue comes from a maximum $2 per load fee charged commercial haulers using the landfill.

Commissioner Bill Wiseman said the county is planning to set up a charge schedule requiring cities using the county facilities to participate to some extent in operating costs. The present plan is to make a nominal charge for all users until the county can catch up with the problem on dump grounds.

One dump site, near Kimberly is to be closed soon, and the county is looking ahead to closing the large dump near Filer. This one is now manned and dumping is being regulated with as much debris as possible being cleared back and covered. While it is improved over a year or two back, Wiseman said, there is no more available dirt for covering.

The main county landfill south of Twin Falls opened in August. It was necessary to acquire an 80 acre site and begin trenching after the county assumed the former Twin Falls city landfill site.

This site, although in use only briefly, proved to have too much rock below the surface to allow for extensive trenching. Because of the new location, two miles of new road had to be built for an access from the west. Another road south of the site has been improved.

The total American Indian population in the United States increased by 51.4 per cent in the 1960s, totaling 792,700, according to the 1970 census.

Disposal problem

PROBLEM AREA, the old Clover dump, is now closed to the public, but county commissioners are faced with having to clear a 60 year accumulation of waste and debris.

Here's what happens. Sometimes color changes in certain spots are noticeable on plush carpets. Differences in light refraction from tufts slanted against the natural pile direction produce the apparent color change. This change in color, however, is really just apparent. You can remedy the condition by vacuuming the same direction as the pile or, in stubborn cases, by professional cleaning.

Water once was thought of as free. Free as snow. Free as rain and rivers. Either you had water or you didn't. When it got dirty you threw it out.

Today we still classify water as a renewable resource. But we recognize that the supply is limited. Industries are spending millions of dollars so contaminated water can be cleaned up and used again. Additional millions are being spent to clean up our rivers and lakes.

Most recycling and pollution control processes require electric power, often in huge quantities. They require electric pumps, paddles, rakes, screens, aerators, precipitators and other specialized equipment.

They also require power poles, transformers, wire, insulators... and the highly skilled men who install and maintain our electric facilities. As our customers increase their electric use, the electricity must be available to serve them.

TF aides delay zoning decision

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners said Friday they are holding a zoning decision in abeyance for 30 to 60 days on a piece of property on US Highway 93 southwest of Twin Falls.

The commissioners inspected the site Thursday and conducted a public hearing Tuesday on the property in question. Billy Taylor, owner, has proposed location of a repair shop on the property along with storage of gravel and other construction type material.

The request would require a commercial zone on the property which is located in an agriculture zone. Commissioners Thursday asked Taylor to come up with some screening plans. They have asked fencing or plantings along the highway frontage to hide stockpiles of material and vehicles now stored on the property.

The owner has also requested permission to build a small riding arena for use by his family. This would be located at the rear of the property, he said.

While in the area, commissioners inspected a piece of property now being used by the owner for the storage of old car bodies as personal property. Zoning administrator Ed Woods said a specific ordinance would be required to wait such a practice so long as they are there for the sale of parts of other commercial endeavor.

Party aide has comment

TWIN FALLS — Nolan Victor, Twin Falls, Idaho State chairman of the American Party today charged President Nixon and Henry Kissinger with an "act of treason" in signing the Panama Canal treaty.

The American Party official said the treaty gives the Panama Canal to "our enemies." Neither Congress nor the American people, he said, can honor this action. To do so will prove to be a future threat to America in commerce and militarily.

"Mr. Victor said President Nixon and Kissinger do not have the right to give the area away."

The canal was built at an approximate expense of $300 million by the United States with an agreement we would never control it. There is approximately $1.5 billion annually in tolls. To allow this treasonous act to be finalized will be a threat to freedom loving people the world over," he said.

Minico youth selected

RUPERT — Terri Douglass, a Minico High School junior, has been selected as one of two girls to represent Idaho at a nationwide youth safety conference scheduled for March 29-31 in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Miss Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Negh Douglass, Rupert, is a high school representative on the Rupert Traffic Safety Committee headed by Elmer Eddington.

Eddington explains that youth members were added two years ago. John Head is a senior member this year and Miss Douglass and Cal Larsen are the junior members.

"In order to ensure continuity on the committee, two junior members are appointed each year and continue as committee members when they are seniors," Miss Douglass said.

The nationwide youth safety conference scheduled for Scottsdale is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

"The task we have been asked to answer," Miss Douglass said, "is to examine highway safety problems and explore, develop and recommend program ideas which may attract and sustain the active support of young people for the cause of highway safety and in performing this task we are asked to evaluate the efficiency of existing Department of Transportation programs in producing desired results among the nation's youth."

Miss Douglass is also scheduled to attend a meeting Jan. 30-31 in Cheyenne, Wyo., sponsored by a South Dakota traffic safety organization.

DECS asks club

(Times-News Capitol Bureau) BOISE — The Department of Environmental and Community Services wants to give its lawyers bigger clubs to hold over the heads of welfare cheaters.

Legislation introduced in the Senate this week would permit punishment of cheaters "to the same extent as for larceny of the money or value of the public assistance or relief."

Similar offenses are now punishable as misdemeanors, with a $300 maximum fine and imprisonment for up to 60 days or both.

Robert Bushnell, DECS general counsel, said the strengthening of the penalties has been requested by the attorneys general who work in the seven DECS regions. They are part of the agency's effort to cut down on welfare fraud and overpayment.

The legislation introduced would also raise the penalty for persons who sell property illegally to make themselves eligible for assistance, or for people who assist other welfare cheaters.

The proposal also introduces residence requirements into the eligibility regulations for receipt of dependent children assistance, or old age assistance, by requiring that recipients be Idaho residents.

Howard Jamieson, director of management services at DECS, said several of the proposed changes in existing law were needed to assure conformity with federal legislation and regulations.

Meeting place chosen

FILER — The "Over 60 Group" has acquired a permanent meeting place for meetings and social events.

The group will meet from now on in the building on Main Street formerly occupied by the Eaton Barber Shop.

Members are asked to submit suggestions for names for the place before the March 4 meeting.

New members of the advisory council are Mrs. Harold Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Pickett.

Group formed

High stepper

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Sergio Enrique Escobar Inostroza grabbed a briefcase containing nearly $6,000 from a construction firm employee who had just left a bank and fled down the street cluttering on his six-inch-high heel shoes. Escobar tripped on the fashionable footgear and fell. Passersby held him for police.

Computers challenged

BANGKOK (UPI) — A Buddhist monk who says he has a secret method of calculating figures has challenged a computer in a man-machine test of mathematic wizardry. Si Leng See Sim, 54, says he only has a fourth grade education, "but I learned quickly and as the years went by I developed my own method of rapid calculation. An average mathematical problem now takes me only three minutes to solve." Si Leng says his secret method of calculation is not suitable for schoolchildren. "It is good only for higher level students who have to compute bigger sums of numbers." "I will welcome any of them (computers)," he said. "I just want to prove who is superior."

Catholics set coffee hours

TWIN FALLS — The newly formed Guadalupana Association of St. Edward's Parish will be in charge of parish hall coffee hours the fourth Sunday of each month. Balvina Rodriguez, president, said the coffee hours follow the 8 and 10 a.m. mass services. Members of the organization will assist with registration of Mexican-American children in parish CCD classes. Mrs. Rodriguez said the association will be raising funds for the annual Mass and Festival of Our Lady of Guadalupe each Dec. 12. She said persons interested in joining the new association should contact her or Father Thomas Lafey, pastor of St. Edward's Church.

6 computer schools charged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission today accused six computer schools of using misleading and deceptive tactics to lure students into their programs with false promises of high-paying space age jobs. Named in formal complaints were Lear Siegler Inc., Santa Monica, Calif.; Electronic Computer Programming Institute Inc., New York; Chestkin Corp., Boston; York Mountain Computer Corp., Salt Lake City, Utah; Data Processing Resources Inc., San Jose, Calif.; and Electronic Computer Programming Institute of Fresno Inc., Fresno, Calif.

Among other things, the complaints said the schools falsely promised that graduates would get good jobs, that a college degree was unnecessary in the field, that their own placement offices would find students jobs and that most recent graduates have found work. The complaints ask that the firms be made to stop the allegedly deceptive advertising and to tell their customers, among other things, that recently established schools have not been running long enough to have a good reading on how successful their job-hunting graduates were. They would also be required to tell students in writing that they will be visited by a salesperson if they apply for entry. A similar complaint was issued last year against another computer school, Control Data Corp., Minneapolis, Minn.

Skylab 3 astros shrink in height

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — The Skylab 3 astronauts, shrinking in height but adapting to gravity with fewer problems than other spacemen, returned Saturday aboard the USS New Orleans after a record 12 weeks in orbit.

Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue were in excellent condition as the recovery ship docked in San Diego at midmorning. They feasted another round of elaborate medical tests by NASA doctors.

After brief deorbit ceremonies Sunday, they will fly to Houston in a medically equipped DC-9 jet for a reunion with their wives and a hometown welcome climaxing their 84-day spaceflight—longest in history.

Although they are being allowed to rejoin their wives as soon as they return, doctors asked that they stay away a few days from their children. Carr has six children, Pogue three and Gibson two.

Dr. Jerry Hordinsky, head of the NASA medical team aboard the New Orleans, said they were "probably in better shape" than their predecessors in space.

Hordinsky disclosed measurements of the spacemen, taken in a supine position when they first came aboard Friday after splashdown and then several hours later in a standing position after being re-exposed to the force of gravity, showed they had shrunk in a short span of time.

Carr's measurements went from 5-9 3/4 to 5-8 3/4, Gibson from 5-10 3/4 to 5-9 1/2, and Pogue, a full inch from 5-9 3/4 to 5-8 3/4.

Hordinsky attributed the change to readjusting the discs of the spinal column which had become wider apart in weightlessness aboard the space station. Doctors had predicted they would lose extra height upon returning to earth.

All had in common the symptom of vertigo, susceptibility to sudden forward or backward movements of the head, but it was rapidly disappearing. None had nausea and all had excellent appetites.

Pack committee turns woman down

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Mrs. Jan Millspaugh, 64, has been turned down to be cumbarster of Pack 415 of the Barlow Trail Boy Scout District because she is a woman.

She termed the decision "narrow minded." Gray Miller, scout executive for the Columbia Pacific Council, said the decision was mandatory because of the constitution and by-laws of the national organization.

He said there are six positions which must be filled by men—cumbarster and assistant cumbarster, Webelos Leader and assistant leader, and cumbarster and assistant cumbarster.

"At this point that's simply the way the program is drawn up," Miller said. "It has no bearing on the competence of one sex or another."

Mrs. Millspaugh's application is backed by the pack committee's 12 members.

One of them, Jim Crumey, said, "This woman is completely qualified. The mothers do all the hard work in the den and then they say the can't get up and lead a meeting. It's unjust."

Nixon appeals to truck drivers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon urged all striking truck drivers to get their rigs back on the road Saturday, saying they were essential "to provide food, fuel and other supplies to all Americans."

Nixon made the appeal at the close of a nationwide radio broadcast in which he announced he would ask Congress next week for a six-year, $16 billion federal aid commitment to improve public transportation in metropolitan and rural areas, from highways to mass transit.

He also said he would simultaneously ask Congress to authorize $2 billion in federally guaranteed loans to help modernize railroad operations and equipment.

"Today our railroads are more necessary than ever," he said.

Nixon added a personal note to the independent truck owner/operators two days after tentative agreement was negotiated to provide them financial relief from soaring prices and short supplies of diesel-fuel vital to their livelihood.

The government, he said, has acted to "provide relief for... their legitimate concerns."

"Now is the time to get all the trucks back on the road," Nixon added.

"The trucking industry plays a critical role in our economy, and it is essential that the truckers continue to provide food, fuel and other supplies to all Americans."

"It is important to emphasize that during the recent stoppage, despite the threats of violence from a handful of desperados, at least 80 per cent of the nation's truckers stayed on the job," Nixon said.

The bulk of the President's 2,000-word radio speech was devoted to elaboration on what he termed "the largest federal commitment ever in the im-

Egypt, US expected to resume relations

By United Press International

Egypt and the United States are expected to resume full diplomatic relations shortly after the completion of troop disengagement from the Suez front on March 5, diplomatic sources in Cairo said Saturday.

The move stems from Cairo's recognition of the role Secretary of State Henry Kissinger played in bringing about a cease-fire stabilization accord following the October Arab-Israeli war and his engineering of the subsequent troop separation agreement, the sources said.

Israeli military sources said Israel and Egypt have already thinned out much of the troop concentration in the two strategic mountain passes of the western Sinai.

Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Algeria were reported to be considering a summit conference within the next few days to discuss what the Egyptian newspaper Akhbar El Yom called "the possibility of a disengagement of Syrian and Israeli troops in the Golan Heights." The Arab oil embargo against the United States may also be discussed, political sources said.

The director-general of the Syrian prime minister's office, Mordhechai Gozit, told the parents of soldiers missing in the Syrian front that the government had not altered its refusal to begin substantive talks with Syria on disengagement before Israeli prisoners have been accounted for.

A resumption of full diplomatic relations between the United States and Egypt would end a seven-year break. Egypt, along with six other Arab countries, severed ties during the Six Day War of 1967 over charges of American "participation" on Israel's side.

The American embassy in Cairo became an annex of the Spanish embassy and the Egyptian mission in Washington similarly became part of the Indian embassy.

'No confidence' proposal planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., said Saturday he expects to introduce a constitutional amendment next week authorizing a vote of "no confidence" against a President and setting up the machinery for a new presidential election.

Reuss said his amendment would amount to the "partial adoption of the parliamentary system" of government in the United States and provide a "less traumatic way" of changing a government than impeachment, while restoring congressional power.

He said his amendment would apply to future Presidents only and would not affect President Nixon.

The amendment would allow the House and Senate, by a three-fifths majority of those present and voting, to pass a concurrent resolution of "no confidence" in the President.

At the same time, the vote would set up a new presidential election for a regular, four-year term on the first Tuesday in November in the next even numbered year.

If the election date under the resolution is less than four months off, Reuss said, the new presidential election would be held two years later.

Jerome hearing Monday

JEROME — A public hearing on the proposed 1974 county budget will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the Jerome County courtroom.

The budget totals $1.2 million which includes $555,000 for the construction of the courthouse annex.

The budget is up 13.2 per cent over the previous year, much of which is salary increases, new personnel for the sheriff's department and inflationary cost of materials.

Caldwell changes time

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — The Caldwell School Board has voted to change school and bus scheduled so that children will not have to walk to school in the dark.

Schools and buses will both operate a half-hour later than usual.

School opening times will return to the normal scheduling in the spring according to Superintendent Jerry Evans.

Evans said at the meeting Friday that school officials and most board members had received complaints from parents since the state went to daylight savings time.

2 men jailed

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — Two men who allegedly robbed a Fort Hall couple and raped the 19-year-old wife last November are in Bingham County Jail on $200,000 bond.

Ronald Haak, 21, and Harold Whitman, 19, both Idaho Falls, are charged with one count of rape and two counts of armed robbery.

Whitman waived preliminary hearing in magistrate court and was bound over to district court. He was brought from the Idaho State Penitentiary, where he is serving a sentence on burglary from Jefferson County.

Haak was transported from the Idaho Falls Jail where he was being held on grand larceny charges. His arraignment was continued to Monday.

McClure asks time change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legislation to return the nation to standard time during the winter is being cosponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

The DST Energy Conservation Act of 1973 proved to be a "considerable hardship on a large segment of the country. And it hasn't been shown that the change to daylight time has saved energy," according to McClure.

Mining firm sued

SPOKANE (UPI) — In what one insider termed an attempt by "the minnow to swallow the whale," the Silver Dollar Mining Co. has filed suit against the Sunshine Mining Co. and its board of directors, demanding to examine the records of the company.

Harry F. Magnuson, president of Silver Dollar and a veteran mining executive, said the suit, which boils down to a proxy fight, was filed in Spokane County Superior Court.

The suit, among other things, contends public records sought by Silver Dollar from Sunshine Jan. 14 have not been received. Silver Dollar, according to the complaint, wants the names and addresses of Sunshine's shareholders as well as the number of shares held by each.

The complaint also asks that the court enjoin the next annual meeting of shareholders of Sunshine until such records have been produced and studied.

Board won't ask for loss

BOISE (UPI) — The State Board of Education will not ask the legislature for $75,000 to cover a loss to Boise State College operations after all.

The school administration's illegal use of $75,000 worth of general fund money to purchase land was discovered in 1971, audit.

Last summer, Board President, John Swartley, with the board's consent, told the Boise State Foundation, Inc., the board would include the $75,000 in the current legislative appropriation request for the institution.

The money was to be "Boise State College President John Barnes said it had been originally intended to go several years ago—the library.

The board has since received work from lawmakers that the request would result in problems and controversy on the Senate floor. There would be no fight if it were withdrawn.

Monday deadline on canal vote

TWIN FALLS — Monday is the last day Twin Falls Canal Co. stockholders can vote on the controversial proposal for the canal company to convey water to two huge desert farm developments.

Polls will be open between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. at the Twin Falls Canal Co. office at 163 Second Ave. W., Twin Falls.

All registered stockholders are eligible to vote. Also, any stockholder wishing to change his vote may do so until 5 p.m. Monday, according to Al Peters, Twin Falls Canal Co. manager.

A person buying land is not considered a registered stockholder until he has completed purchase of the property, Peters said. However, a buyer can vote if he obtains a proxy from the registered owner.

To be valid, a ballot must be signed by the stockholder exactly as his name is shown on the canal company's register.

Peters said votes will be tallied Tuesday morning and results probably will be known Tuesday night.

The proposal calls for conveyance of Milner Dam spillover water by the canal company to Tuana Muttler and Canyon View Irrigation Companies. Two two companies plan to irrigate 47 square miles of desert land west of the Salmon Falls Creek Canyon.

Display plaque

MR. AND MRS. Sam Thornton, Eden, display the plaque which was presented them Friday evening after Thornton was selected Mr. Angus of Idaho for 1974. Presentation of the plaque highlighted the Idaho Angus Association dinner in Twin Falls.

Eden man named Idaho Mr. Angus

TWIN FALLS — Sam Thornton, Eden, was named Mr. Angus of Idaho for 1974 at the Idaho Angus Association Banquet Friday evening in the Rogerson Hotel.

The award was presented by Ned Wilde, Area association president. Thornton had served six years on the board of directors and has been raising Angus cattle since 1948. He usually has a herd of about 100 head.

Wilde was re-elected association president at the business meeting with Ben R. Goslin, Horseshoe Bend, re-elected vice president and Edith Sawyer, Boise, secretary.

New directors elected to office include Durrell Galison, Blackfoot; Glen Pincock, Sugar City; and Laule Dobran, Boise. Holdover directors are Robert W. Morley, Eagle; Dale Thompson, Pocatello; Clyde McAfee, Arco, and Richard Howard, Burley.

The Idaho Angus Auxiliary was in charge of dinner arrangements and also hosted a breakfast for auxiliary members Saturday morning in the Rogerson Hotel.

The Idaho Junior Angus Association held a business meeting Saturday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer during the Angus bull sale.

Reapportionment monkey returns to house's back

BOISE (UPI) — Senators put the reapportionment monkey on the House's back again today and Republican leaders tried to figure a way to pass the Senate-approved bill without rattling the amendment cage.

Similar, though not identical, to a bill originally proposed in the house, the measure includes eastern Idaho in the remapping. Earlier, minority leader Melvin Hammond, D-Rexburg, talked the House into amending the other bill to exclude eastern Idaho.

Hammond pulled it off by inserting a preamble in the reapportionment bill that stated out of state students need not be counted for remapping purposes in the voter population.

Ricks College in Rexburg has about 2,000 of these students, he said, and that is what threw eastern Idaho out of kilter with the one-man, one-vote rule.

Senators would not buy the Hammond amendment, convinced the federal court which ordered reapportionment by next Tuesday would declare such a bill unconstitutional—bringing about a court reap plan.

Aware of the shortage of time in which to act, the Senate tried to pass a joint memorial Friday asking the court for another 30 days in which to reapportion the legislature. Sen. H. Dean Summers, R-Boise, one of those who forced reapportionment in the courts, blocked immediate consideration of this by two votes.

Republican leaders in the House feel Hammond once again will try to amend eastern Idaho out of the remapping bill. Their job will be to get the bill through the house in two days without that happening. They believe the amendment will be fatal to the bill in the courts.

Meantime, both houses have passed more government reorganization bills with only token opposition. The reorganization committee later Friday conducted another "school" for lawmakers in both houses on content of some of the remaining legislation.

Now that reorganization and reapportionment are moving through the legislation and matters. Monday afternoon, the transportation committees of the two houses will meet with energy officials and fuel industry spokesmen to try to ascertain the magnitude of the fuel shortage in Idaho.

Chairman John Sessions, R-Driggs, of the House committee said a full-blown hearing may be necessary later. But first, he said, the committees want to find out just how serious Idaho's problems are and what, if anything, the legislature can do about them.

Among the questions the lawmakers want answered, he said, is how high gasoline and other fuel prices may go.

A number of traffic safety bills have been introduced—including proposals to prohibit trespassing upon beer containers in motor vehicles and to require motorcyclists to turn on headlights day-and-night.

Rep. John Reardon, R-Boise, has come up with a new proposal that has many House members interested. It would require driver training students to spend two hours in a traffic court upon completion of their course to see what happens when motorists fail to obey the laws.

Juveniles held in Burley theft

BURLEY — Three Burley juveniles were arrested and charged with grand larceny Friday in the theft of several hundred pounds of copper wire from the site of the former Burley Junior High School.

The theft occurred sometime Thursday night or early Friday morning. The wire belongs to Roe Demolition Co., Boise.

The youths were arrested by Burley police detective Rex Madden after they allegedly attempted to sell about 500 pounds of wire to McCarty's Scrap Metals in Burley Friday morning.

About 600 pounds of wire was left in an alley east of the school site, apparently because it would not fit in the gateway car, according to officer Madden.

Drawing set

SHOSHONE — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Shoshone Tuesday from 2 to 6 p.m. at the grade school auditorium.

The quota is 75 pints. Since the last blood drawing Lincoln County residents have used 55 pints of blood. Many of these must be replaced.

The blood is needed greatly this time of year. All residents are urged to support the drawing. Persons with malaria will not flare ups in the past three years may now give blood.

Mrs. Len Sention is the blood drawing chairman for Lincoln County. She said the past drawing saw the quota surpassed by some 20 units in the first time in years. She urged residents to keep up the good work Tuesday.

FILER — An Angus bull owned by Ralph Baughman, Buhl, was named grand champion at the Idaho Angus Sale Saturday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

The bull, Grand Mac Perfection of SLR, sold for $2,100 to Everett Coates, Fairfield, during Saturday's sale. Cliff Countryman, St. John, Wash., received the reserve champion trophy for his Angus bull.

Before the sale began a halter was auctioned by the Junior Angus Association and sold to Jim Brooks, Hazelton, for $25. A registered Angus bull, Nampa, was sold for $670 with proceeds going to the Idaho Angus Auxiliary for their project.

Obeys signs

WENDELL — Wendell police officers have requested that motorists obey the posted speed limit signs.

According to Sheriff's Deputy Jim Burke there have been several cases in Wendell of motorists unintentionally speeding because of a proposed house bill which would set the maximum speed in towns at 35 miles per hour.

Burke pointed out that if House Bill 363 does pass that 35 m.p.h. is a maximum speed. Speed limits could still be set lower.

In the meantime, posted speed limits are in effect, he said.

Damages in suit denied

SHOSHONE — A 12-member jury returned a verdict in favor of the deformed Dean Barney, in a civil suit conducted in district court here this week.

The trial lasted two days and was heard before Judge Charles Scogglin.

Mrs. Barbara J. Tipton, Twin Falls, was the plaintiff, asking damages from Barney for reported injuries she received in an intersection automobile accident in Twin Falls in February, 1971.

The jury deliberated between 20 and 30 minutes before reaching a verdict.

Blaine budget hearing set

By TERRY CAPPELL
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Blaine County commissioners will conduct a public hearing on the proposed 1974 county budget at 2 p.m. Monday in the county courthouse, Hailey.

The 1974 total tentative budget of $1,133,311 constitutes a 26.6 per cent increase over last year's $894,863.

This year's budget contains an anticipated amount of $132,677 in revenue sharing funds compared to about $81,230 last year. In the sheriff's department proposed budget—about $17,000 for a new co-operative patrolling program will be covered by US Forest Service funds, and about $3,780 of one deputy's salary will be covered by Law Enforcement Planning Commission grant funds.

Two new budgetary categories have been added this year. A proposed $12,000 is budgeted for the new youth services worker program and about $77,000 is budgeted for the county's share of construction costs on the new jail.

Most overall increases in the tentative budget stem from salary increases and additional personnel to meet greater county work loads.

Salary increases include $50 a month each for the assessor, treasurer and clerk and $75 a month for the sheriff. Generally, all county employees will receive a $50 a month raise, with road and bridge employees receiving a $75 a month raise.

Undecided

BOISE — Twin Falls School District—Supl.—George Staudacher said Friday he hasn't made up his mind yet about seeking the office of state superintendent of public instruction.

Staudacher said he wouldn't make a final decision for several more weeks, noting the deadline for a formal declaration of candidacy isn't until June.

He also said he hoped legislation declaring the race a non-partisan election would win legislative approval. Otherwise, he said, if he chose to run, he would do so as a Republican.

Shoshone group backs housing needs survey

SHOSHONE — A survey on possible housing needs within the city of Shoshone will be supported by the Shoshone Development Corp.

At a special meeting Thursday night at the Manhattan Cafe, members agreed to pay for a newspaper survey wherein citizens might cast their vote in the matter.

In discussion with city officials Thursday evening, notice was given that the city is bound under contract and cannot provide sewer extension for possible newly developed areas.

Robert Miller, president, said that in view of this fact, the development corporation is looking into a possible private loan to assist for such extensions.

The city requires the Environmental Protection Agency rules be applied in any such possible development.

representative of a Twin Falls development corporation, asking for information pertaining to the types of residences most needed within the city.

The corporation has established the fact that more housing is needed, but specifies in types, apartment, single residences and approximate cost bracket must be determined, the development firm representative said.

Miller made it plain that the development corporation is not trying to superecede work of the newly formed city planning commission, that they were simply hoping to work with private developers and assist the city with planning when asked to do so.

Former Shoshone mayor, Mrs. Myrtle C. Burdett, and Herb Love, former Lincoln County Journal publisher, said their ideas on development in the community at the meeting.

TF hospital bond history recounted

BY CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The history of the proposed Magic Valley Memorial Hospital bond issue dates back several years.

"Five years ago we started consideration of a bond issue," said Robert G. Brackett, chairman of the hospital board.

"At the board's request, the Boise architectural firm of Cline, Smull, Hamill, Shaw & Associates undertook a feasibility study, completed in June, 1970, for a major building program.

"Like the hospital board, doctors have foreseen the need for a major improvement program for several years. Dr. Birdall Carle, chief of pathology, said, "I started beating the drums for some kind of expansion three years ago when I was chief of staff."

"The need has grown, and this, coupled with other changed conditions, made the bond feel a bond issue was both possible and necessary.

According to Dr. Brackett, one reason for failing was the difficulty of undertaking a program for construction program during a transition in hospital administration. Mrs. Irene Oliver, long-time hospital administrator, retired in 1972 and was replaced by James Rosenbaum.

"I like the hospital board, but I didn't feel that the citizens of Twin Falls County were 'in the financial position to accept a bond issue."

according to Brackett. A good farm year combined with ever-increasing hospital needs made the hospital board and county commissioners decide that now was the time.

After presentations by the Boise architectural firm and CTA Architects, Billings, Mont., the hospital board chose CTA in split vote. A program for expansion was drawn up, with total cost estimated at $4.6 million, the amount of the bond issue.

The plan was based on a study of the hospital by CTA's department of medical facilities and "a series of interviews with the hospital administrator, department heads, doctors and other key personnel from the hospital."

The incorporation of hospital staff recommendations into the proposal shows the planners were looking to the people who would be working at the hospital, according to Dr. Bruce Buck, general surgeon. "At least they come and ask you here, which is more than any other place I've been where they've built a hospital."

The CTA plans are also based on the earlier study by the Boise firm. The basic plan suggested in that study calling for a building addition north of the present emergency entrance, has been adopted by CTA.

Reorganization of laboratory, X-ray, emergency and outpatient departments was detailed in the four-year-old study, though some location changes have been made by the Billings firm. Also included were plans for a tower structure to house future bed additions, similar to the bed towers proposed by CTA.

The final proposal, however, went beyond the 1970 study by recommending major changes in surgical and other facilities.

At $4.6 million, the hospital bond issue is the largest ever in Twin Falls County, exceeding the $3 million, two-county wide CSI bond issue, and the $3.5 million Twin Falls school bond issue last fall.

Hospital administrators and members of the medical staff assert that both a realistic appraisal of financial considerations and the excellent condition of the present building led them to dismiss consideration of an entirely new building.

A conservative estimate of the cost of a comparable new hospital would be $8.5 million, according to Rosenbaum.

Physicians interviewed agreed that the construction plans were adequate and "without embroidery or frills," as Dr. Ben Katz, pediatrician, put it.

"You have to face reality," commented Dr. Carle. "You ask for what you can get."

Final plans, should the bond issue pass, will be ready possibly by early summer for contractors to begin bidding, Rosenbaum said. Construction could begin this fall, he added, depending on the time schedule set by the hospital board.

Rosenbaum said several modernization programs completed since the hospital's opening have kept the building up-to-date and made a major bond issue unnecessary for the past 22 years. According to Dr. Katz, "The hospital board kept the building in remarkably good condition."

The hospital has spent $1.4 million during the past 10 years on four building projects.

The first was completed in 1965, with total cost of $429,000, according to Rosenbaum. It remodeled the first and second floors. A drop in birth rates combined with the expansion of the lab and X-ray departments resulted in the "relocation of classrooms, auditorium and office space in former maternity rooms reducing hospital bed capacity.

The intensive care unit was installed in a project completed in 1967 at a cost of $114,000. As of 1969, all combustible ceiling tile was removed and air conditioning was installed, at a cost of $426,000.

The most recent construction, completed in 1972, added a nuclear medicine facility, more space for radiology and a new recovery room for surgery at $493,000.

The present building plan was reviewed by the Magic Valley Comprehensive Health Planning Council. According to Leon Felder, past president of the council and administrator of St. Benedict's in Jerome, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital is considered to be a regional medical facility, with the largest array of medical specialties in the south central area.

The council states that studies show that approximately 15 per cent of admissions are referrals.

In a letter dated November 20, 1973, the Magic Valley organization recommended to state Comprehensive Health Planning that the hospital's building plan be approved. "It is felt by the council that the delivery of health services and the expansion of these services must include an enlargement and expansion of the Magic Valley Hospital if we are to keep pace with today's trend," the letter stated.

Under new federal legislation, the responsibility for health facilities planning is given to Comprehensive Health Planning organizations, both on the area-wide and state level. These organizations forward recommendations on building programs by hospitals in their area to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. If the proposal is not approved by federal agency funds — such as Medicare and Medicaid — may be withheld from the hospital to encourage reconsideration of plans.

A formal review of the plans for expansion of Magic Valley Memorial was not undertaken because arrangements for a new reviewing procedure have not been completed (legislation was passed about one year ago).

But negative action is unlikely now, according to Huey Reed, Health Facilities Coordinator for the State Comprehensive Health Planning department. "I doubt very much that they'd come back for retroactive action," Reed said.

Oil deal told

PARIS (UPI) — France and Iran Saturday announced a $5 billion deal under which France will build nuclear plants, pipelines and pipelines to Iran to return for natural gas and oil exploration rights.

Financial sources said they believed it was the biggest agreement of its kind ever made between an industrial country and an oil-producing state.

The agreement was signed by Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Iran's Minister of Economic Affairs, Houshang Ansary, after two days of talks by members of a mixed Franco-Iranian economic commission. Finance Ministry sources said several contracts worth about $3 billion are in advanced negotiation and the latest talks added projects worth a further $1.5 to $2 billion.

TF bond backed

The newspaper ads and radio spots urging support of the bond issue have "all been paid for by private capital," Faulkner said. The committee solicited county citizens to help pay for the publicity, in all, about 18 people have donated money for ads or parts of ads, according to Faulkner.

No doctors or people associated with the hospital were contacted, Faulkner said.

Besides providing for ads and radio spots, the committee arranged for the donation of the downtown merchants bus for use as a voter bus. The bus will make two circuits (see map, page 3) starting at approximately 2:30 and 4:30, taking people to vote at the courthouse.

The hospital boosters cite both personal and business reasons for their support.

"We're all going to need it sometime and the day I do, I want to have it there," Faulkner said.

"What the concerned citizens see is development of this area. If you take one part of development away, you hurt the entire area," Muldoon said, adding that their intent was to make the Twin Falls area "very complete, a better place to live."

The citizens committee has been working for about a month and a half on publicizing the hospital bond issue. A previous project was rounding up support for the school bond issue.

"It's worth the effort we put forth to get it (the bond proposal) approved," concluded Sinclair. "These things don't just happen, somebody has to stick out his neck and get them done."

JAMES ROSENBAUM compares costs

DR. BEN KATZ 'no-frills'

Hospital bond costs eyed

At present, the hospital acts as the area's major medical and referral center, serving patients from all of the Magic Valley and some parts of eastern Nevada. With the advent of more specialists and advanced procedures, use of the hospital by out-of-county patients cannot be expected to decrease.

"This out-of-county use brings up a sticky question. Why should the residents of Twin Falls County be expected to pay taxes to support a building program when out-of-county residents pay nothing toward the building program, yet can avail themselves of all the specialized services?"

Some answers to this question are in legal terms, some practical.

"Magic Valley Memorial is a county hospital, operated by a fifteen-member hospital board appointed by the County Commissioners. As such, it is subject to state laws governing county hospitals.

"When a county hospital needs money for a large-scale building project, or one it can't successfully finance out of current revenues, as MVM did on smaller building projects" it has to take out a general obligation bond, according to the law. With a general obligation bond, funds are raised by taxing county residents on the basis of the assessed value of their property.

"Another fund raising device, preferred by hospital administrators James Rosenbaum, is a revenue bond. A revenue bond — also voted by county residents — uses hospital income to pay back funds raised through the sale of bonds. A revenue bond effectively lets all users share the expense.

"A new organization, provided for by 1971 state legislation, the Idaho Health Facilities Authority may soon have the power to issue tax free bonds and loan money to hospitals for building projects, thus providing a way to avoid a general obligation bond.

"A test case for this law is tied up in the Supreme Court now, questioning whether the borrowing is actually a public purpose and therefore constitutional and whether the authority can lend to county hospitals, hospitals affiliated with religious organizations or to hospitals for refinancing existing hospital debts.

"A decision is not expected before late fall, according to Fred Decker, hospital attorney. Notwithstanding the dubious state-of-the-law interest rates charged by the authority would probably be higher than the county could get on its general obligation bond. The county has an established credit rating, the business and health benefit to county residents.

Out-of-county patients are often accompanied by family members, Rosenbaum says, who stay in local motels, eat at local restaurants, shop at local stores. In Rosenbaum's opinion, out-of-county patients bring money to Twin Falls through their fees at the hospital and through their relatives' expenses in town.

Aside from a business benefit, according to the argument, Twin Falls County residents gain by having the area's most specialized medical facility as their local hospital.

"If you get zonked by a truck,

"If I had a hospital to serve 42,000 — the population of Twin Falls County," Rosenbaum says, "we couldn't have the kind of specialties that we have today.

Without this specialized medicine, hospital backers add, many more Twin Falls County residents would have to travel to Boise, Salt Lake City or San Francisco to receive modern medical treatment, a common practice before the hospital had the influx of specialists.

Fertilizer supply scant

(c) N. Y. Times Service CHICAGO — A three-member delegation from Ecuador arrived here Feb. 3 intent on contracting for fertilizer supplies from United States producers.

Since they had registered as participants at this year's annual meeting of the fertilizer institute, a 250-company trade association, the Ecuadorians, as did representatives from India, felt that they would have no trouble getting plant food materials at the source.

They were wrong. The episode helps illustrate the situation in which farmers around the world find themselves. There is a severe shortage of the chemical materials necessary to grow crops.

And, according to some of the 600 participants at this year's meeting of the institute during the first week of February there will be any relief in the supply of such primary materials as nitrogen or phosphate.

"There will be a shortage for at least three more years," one participant declared.

Peter Grace, chairman of W. R. Grace and Company, was not much more hopeful. He estimated that the shortage of ammonia would last indefinitely because of a lack of natural gas. As for phosphates, he said the tight supply situation would continue for 18 months more. There was no problem with potash, he felt.

To underline the pessimism, Edwin M. Wheeler, the president of the institute, recalled that Ecuador several days ago requested tenders for 65,000 tons of various types of fertilizer. The global response was a single bid from Lebanon for a total of 5,000 tons of phosphates.

Several participants in the meeting stressed in informal discussions that the energy crisis could not be blamed for the current shortages, although continuation of the crisis would play havoc with the economies of developed and developing nations.

Grace, for example, stressed that the members of the European Common Market had a trade deficit of $5.7 billion last year. With an additional oil bill of $3 billion this year, he asked whether the Europeans would be able to buy US farm products.

As for developing nations, one industry observer noted that countries such as India and Pakistan previously had accepted the idea of using hybrid rice and wheat. "Now we find," he said, "that the new strains do not match the yield of the traditional seeds without extra-heavy doses of fertilizer. For these countries, the ability to feed themselves has become a real problem."

Loughmiller wins national honor

TWIN FALLS — Bill Loughmiller, named Idaho's outstanding young farmer last year, placed as one of the top six young farmers in the nation in the "American Farmer" contest.

He and Mrs. Loughmiller, Hollister, received the national honorable mention award during the Idaho Young Farmers and Ranchers Convention held this past week in Boise. The contest is sponsored by the American Farm Bureau Federation magazine, "The American Farmer."

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Montgomery, Jerome, also attended the meeting to accept a special award for outstanding work in the Young Farmers and Rancher program.

Young farmers and ranchers from throughout Idaho attended the meeting. Ralph Bowman, Dale Carnegie representative from Boise, conducted a workshop on assets of the young farmer. Tuesday night, he discussed issues before the Freshman State Rep. Butch Otter, District 12, was introduced. Delegates visited the Statehouse and met with some of his views on farm area legislators Wednesday.

Irrigators to report well levels

ODESSA, Wash. (UPI) — Area irrigators will begin reporting how much water is withdrawn from their wells this spring, according to the State Department of Ecology. For the past several years the water table in this rich farmland area has been dropping sharply and the ecology department stepped in recently to do something about it.

The department said the management policy, which goes into effect Feb. 25, was the topic of several public meetings in the area.

It provides a method of correcting the imbalance between groundwater withdrawal and natural replenishment. Under the regulation, each irrigator must report the volume of water used from his well each year.

The department said this information, together with depth to water data collected by its staff will be used to determine when withdrawals must be stopped or slowed.

Yancey finishes strong to keep lead in classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)— Bert Yancey, fighting off a strong challenge from Hubert Green, shot a three-under-par 69 at Bermuda Dunes Saturday, including birdies on the last two holes, for a three-stroke lead after four rounds of the 90-hole, $160,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Yancey, winner of seven tournament titles since joining the tour in 1964 but without a victory since the 1972 American Golf Classic, bolted into the lead with a course record 61 at Indian Wells Friday. The 69 Saturday enabled him to stay three strokes ahead of Green with one round to go in the chase for the $32,000 first place prize.

Green, who blossomed last year with two victories and more than $114,000 in earnings, also played Bermuda Dunes Saturday. He matched Yancey's 69 to stay even for the day.

Thus, the 35-year-old Yancey had a 72-hole score of 15-under-par 273, while the 27-year-old Green was at 276, 12 under par. Close on their heels was Johnny Miller, winner of three tournaments in a row at the start of the year, who also shot a three-under 69 for 279, five shots behind Yancey.

Young Jim Mahaffey shot a 66 at Bermuda Dunes and was at 280, eight under par and seven shots behind Yancey. Lee Elder and Mark Hayes checked in with 72s at La Quinta and were at 281.

It was another perfect golfing day in the California desert country and most of the scores reflected it. Brian Allen and Ben Crenshaw had the day's best rounds—Allen a six-under-par 66 at Eldorado and Crenshaw a 66 at Indian Wells. However, Allen was at 284 and Crenshaw at 290.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer shot his best round of the tournament—a three-under 69 at Indian Wells—and was at 289.

Green already was in the clubhouse with his 69 when Yancey went to the 17th tee. Yancey's lead was only a rolled-in birdie putt but he rolled in birdie putts on both that hole and the final one for his three-stroke edge.

Green had four birdies and one bogey on his card and said he could have shot better.

"I wasn't thinking—real good," said Green. "I hit some good iron shots and I feel I'm in pretty good shape." Miller, with six birdies and three bogeys, said he could have shot a 65 with more decent putting.

"If I drive it good tomorrow," Miller said, "I could shoot 60. I'd love to win this tournament. I'm not out of it."

Zwilling cops world downhill

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (UPI)— Austria's David Zwilling, who had never won a major downhill race in his life, Saturday took the world championship title by more than a full second from his teammate, and downhill specialist, Franz Klammer.

Willi Frommelt gave the principality of Lichtenstein its third medal in two days by taking the bronze to spoil what Austria believed was a clean sweep of the top three places.

Zwilling, normally a giant slalom specialist, said that two days before the race he was thinking of giving up his place to a teammate because he was not fast enough. A training run Friday changed his mind, however.

"I guess I am as surprised as anyone," said Zwilling. "I did not expect to win and I am very happy. There was less pressure on me than on the top favorites and that played an important role."

Roland Collombin, the pre-race favorite, fell in the tops 5 bend to the howls of disappointment to the thousands of his Swiss fans who lined the 1,210 meter track ringing their cow bells.

Vaughn to coach WFL Wheels

DETROIT (UPI)— The Detroit Wheels of the new World Football League said Saturday Tommy Vaughn, who retired as a Detroit Lion in 1972, has signed a contract to coach.

Vaughn, 31, played safety for the Lions.

He joins the staff of new head coach Dan Boisture, who signed a three-year contract with the new franchise Friday. Boisture is a veteran coach of seven seasons at Eastern Michigan University.

Vaughn said he retired because he was "tired of getting knocked out." He spent most of the 1971 season on the sidelines with a head injury and said he was knocked unconscious about 20 times during his six-year career with Detroit.

He is a graduate of Iowa State and averaged 25.7 yards per carry on kickoff returns with the Lions.

Hall sets new mark in shotput

NEW YORK (UPI)— Al Hall, the dean of American hammer throwers who is approaching his 40th birthday, captured the 35-pound weight throw at the U.S. Olympic Invitational track and field meet for the fifth year in a row Saturday with a toss of 64 feet, 10 3/4 inches.

Hall, the Pan American champion in the hammer throw and a competitor in four Olympic Games, won the event on his final throw but later apologized for what he called a "sub-par performance." Hall, who will be 40 in August, had sprained his wrist on ice 10 days ago.

Purdue humbles Minnesota

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI)— Purdue reeled off 13 consecutive points midway through the first half to recover from an eight-point deficit and handed Minnesota its worst basketball loss in three years, 64-45, Saturday.

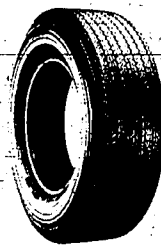

The triumph left the Boiler-makers at 7-1 in the Big Ten title chase, keeping them in a first place tie with Michigan, and raised their overall mark to 14-6. Minnesota fell to 3-5 in the conference and 9-10 overall.

Frank Kendrick and Bruce Rose led Purdue with 16 points each and 6-foot-11 center John Garrett, added 11. Dennis Shaffer, the Big Ten's scoring leader with a 23.1 average, was held to 15.

Purdue fell behind 18-10 early in the slow-moving game, but shot into a 23-18 advantage with 7:04 to go in the half. At intermission, Purdue led 30-23 and the Boiler-makers basically extended the margin in the second half.

The loss was the worst for Minnesota since a 99-73 setback to Indiana in 1971.

O'Leary girls' drill team works out

TF physical fitness program under way in all 12 grades

By BONNIE JONES
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — A physical fitness program in the Twin Falls School District now covers all 12 grades, with a new emphasis on "life time sports" in the upper grades.

Robert Donnelley, director of physical education for the district, said the program is now total, aimed at giving every child in the system an opportunity at physical activity, skills and training.

First graders and other pupils in all Twin Falls grade schools begin with such basic programs as tumbling and preliminary gymnastics such as balance beam and parallel bars. They work out on the trampoline and other activities, each for two week periods.

Equipment is moved from one school to another to keep it in use all times and to reach as many students as possible.

In the junior high schools, students spend part of each day in physical activities ranging from calisthenics and tumbling to volley ball, badminton and drill team routes.

At the high school level the youngsters can move into golf, backpacking, bowling, skiing, fencing, gymnastics, volleyball and weight lifting. Some of these, all considered lifetime sports, are also offered to the junior high and elementary students.

Donnelley said the emphasis on lifetime sports is to develop skills and appreciation for physical exercise which can be enjoyed after school age. It can also be enjoyed by the many students for whom there is no room in the limited football and basketball programs.

"We try to begin with the youngest children and give them physical training through school to develop the total child. Muscular skills and motor learning will give a child confidence he or she does not get in any other way and will build coordination to help academically as well as physically," Donnelley said.

He also said his goals are to have physical training given an equal balance and consideration in the curriculum with academic programs.

Donnelley said the school administration and trustees have been most helpful in supporting physical training and lifetime sports, and in purchasing additional items of equipment each year to expand facilities as funds permit. He said some federal money, under the Title I program, has been made available.

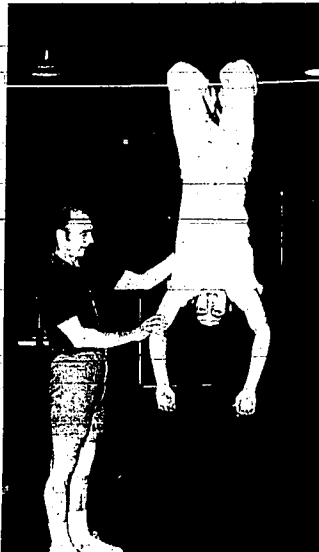

Among new programs this year are fencing, the high school and a ski program, also for high school students only at the present time. About 20 beginner and 20 intermediate skiers go to Magic Mountain one day each week for nearly a full day of skiing and instruction. Most of the cost for lessons and lift tickets is carried by the students themselves.

A new weight training machine has also been received at Robert Stuart Junior High School to expand weight lifting to that age group.

Other programs include archery, flag football, jogging, cross country running, golf, and bowling.

'Crazy' idea takes root, 45th anniversary in sight

By TERRY CAMPBELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — "Everyone thought we were crazy."

That "crazy" idea — Bald Mountain Hot Springs, Ketchum — was not only an "instant success" but will celebrate its 45th anniversary on March 5.

Pre-dating Sun Valley by seven years, the hot springs and adjacent St. George Hotel, which was destroyed by fire in the late 1930's, were the brainchild of the late C. E. Brandt and Mrs. Dorothy Brandt, Ketchum.

Mrs. Brandt said the Ketchum business began with a simple flip of a coin.

Semi-retired and on a year's leave of absence from the J.C. Penney Co., the Brandts were traveling from Circleville, Ohio, to California to live. Reaching Blyth, they agreed to flip a coin to decide whether they would stay in California or go to Idaho, where Brandt had previously managed the Penney's store in Hailey.

The result — a couple and their son, Dave Brandt, camped for the summer on Warm Springs in a Gilkey trailer, the forerunner of today's tent trailer. During the winter, they moved into the Ketchum Kamp Hotel (presently the Casino).

Preparations for the hot springs and hotel — conducted during the winter of 1928 — 1929 — were ambitious in scope. According to a Jan. 10, 1929, account in the "Hailey Times," Brandt "is leaving nothing undone that might add to the complete success of his undertaking."

Brandt purchased the Guyver Hot Springs, Warm Springs, and obtained right of way from the U.S. Forest Service and the Blaine County commissioners for a three mile long pipeline into Ketchum. Permission was also received to tie the line onto the then planned Warm Springs Hydro.

According to Dave Brandt, teams of horses and mules (screppers) were employed to dig trenches for the six-inch wooden pipe, which was buried at an average depth of three feet.

According to records two full city blocks "in the most desirable location in Ketchum" were purchased and the county commissioners granted closure of the alley between the two blocks.

The pool and hotel facilities reflected Brandt's "spare no expense" philosophy which pushed total costs for the first year up to the $100,000 mark.

The white concrete plunge held about 200,000 gallons of natural hot water that started out at Ketchum with a temperature of 170 degrees and lost only 15 degrees in transit. The hot water was also used to heat the hotel and 31 cabin apartments.

Sporting three diving boards and surrounded by 70 dressing rooms, the pool was said to have been "one of the most attractive and modern in the west."

The project also included garage accommodations, a bungalow for the family and installation of sodded lawns and 200 shade trees.

As Highway 93, then a dirt road, drifted full of snow every winter from Shoshone, the cabins and pool were open only during the summer at first.

Mrs. Brandt said the facilities primarily catered to vacationers from Boise, Pocatello, the Magic Valley and Salt Lake City. April was a hectic month as "school sneak days" from Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Richfield filled the pool with as many as 100 to 150 youngsters at a time.

A suit, a towel and swim were furnished for a fee of 35 cents for adults and 25 cents for children.

Mrs. Brandt said the facility also was host to Count Felix Schaffgotsch — an Austrian alpine expert hired by Union Pacific to scout a location, for a ski resort — and his companion, Count Hoffentahl.

However, without the efforts of an unknown highway commissioner, Sun Valley may not have been discovered.

Mrs. Brandt said the highway was closed when Schaffgotsch and Hoffentahl arrived in Shoshone. The commissioner arranged to accompany the visitors in a car preceded by a snowplow.

Traveling across the desert, Schaffgotsch was less than impressed with the area's ski resort potential. But his repeated requests to return to Shoshone were met by the commissioner's reply that a place must be found where the snowplow could turn around.

So the group pushed northward until they topped Timmerman Hill and the Wood-River Valley unfolded below.

"Ah, this is the place," Schaffgotsch said. Until that time, the Brandts spent the winters in Florida and Mexico, returning to Ketchum each spring.

"We had a ball," Mrs. Brandt said, "then everything changed" and Bald Mountain's year-round career began.

Support urged on February Penny Parade

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News Writer

JEROME — Mrs. Grant Wellard has two major objectives.

Her second hope is to warn other parents of a common household hazard that almost claimed her child's life on Nov. 7, 1972.

Nicholas Ray Wellard, who will be 2 years old on Valentine's Day, has had a long hard struggle after he actually "died" from a freak household accident just over a year ago.

He was 9 months old, crawling and beginning to walk. Mrs. Wellard found it necessary to follow him from room to room to see what he might be getting into. On the morning of Nov. 7, he apparently went into the bathroom just after his 5 year old brother left.

He probably became fascinated by the swirling water after the older boy flushed the toilet. Four minutes after she had last seen him, his mother found him unconscious, standing on his toes with his head submerged in the water of the bowl. She believes he leaned into the bowl and did not have the balance or strength to get back out.

Her husband, a Jerome city police officer, was on night duty and home asleep at the time. Her screams brought him to the rescue with immediate mouth to mouth respiration. This apparently got oxygen back to the child's brain in time to prevent permanent damage.

When the ambulance arrived and rushed the child to the hospital, his heart had stopped but doctors were able to start it again.

For weeks he remained in a semi-conscious condition, limp and like a new born infant. Since that time he has had to "start all over again" and with help of specialists such as those at the Primary Children's Hospital, is now back to the level of development he had just prior to the accident.

He was in St. Benedict's Hospital, Jerome, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, Twin Falls, and then at the Primary Children's Hospital for therapy and special tests including those for blindness which was one of the first problems detected.

"Nickie" can now crawl about the house and is beginning to walk although he has difficulty because of incisions made in both ankles as doctors attempted to find a vein to inject medication following the accident.

His parents say he is gaining every day and they fully believe he will escape with no permanent brain damage, although tests must continue to be made.

Mrs. Wellard said facilities and medical skill at the Primary Children's hospital were a major factor in her baby's return to life. The hospital asked nothing beyond the family's insurance coverage, she said.

During February, Penny Parade workers will be asking for donations to help maintain the Primary Children's Hospital. Mrs. H. M. Drake, Jerome, chairman of the North Side area campaign, said children in LDS Primary classes will donate pennies, one for each birthday anniversary, and adults will make similar donations.

Children from throughout the world, regardless of religion, color or background have been treated in the hospital, continue to come for help and will continue to receive the best medical attention available.

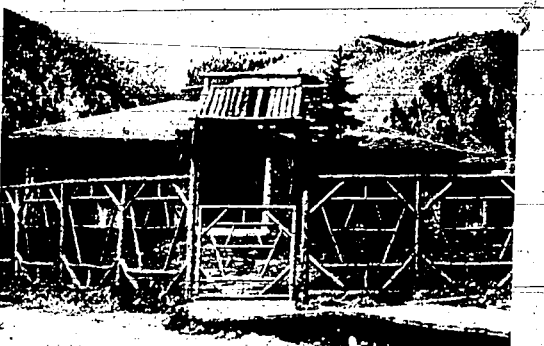

Nicholas Ray Wellard makes good progress

Majestic hotel

THE "UP TO THE MINUTE" St. George Hotel, only open about one year before destroyed by fire, would have probably been considered modern today. It was located on the corner presently occupied by DeCosta's.

Family bungalow

TERMED AS "BEAUTIFUL" and "modern," the family bungalow — adjacent to the pool and hotel facilities — incorporated split jack pine in an elaborate fence as well as for intricate designs on the ceilings and walls inside.

By MARGIE MORRIS
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The American Association of School Administrators has selected George Staudaher, superintendent of Twin Falls Public Schools, to attend a study mission in Scandinavia and the Soviet Union beginning March 27.

Staudaher was chosen from the 20,000 member organization along with 34 other educators across the country. Mrs. Staudaher will accompany her husband on the three-week excursion.

In a Times-News interview, Staudaher explained that the purpose of the tour is to give a selected group of American school administrators a first hand view of education in Finland, Sweden and the Soviet Union and to become better acquainted with the history and culture of these countries. They will visit schools and meet with various governmental officials who are responsible for shaping educational policies in their respective countries.

The educators will depart from Washington, D. C., after extensive briefing by the AASA, the State Department and representatives of the foreign embassies of the host countries. The Staudahers hope to tour the capital city before the March 27 departure date.

The work-study itinerary includes visits to Helsinki and Finland's newly planned, contemporary city—Tampere.

Tours of the Kremlin, Red Square and Lenin's Tomb are scheduled for Moscow. Tour members will also have an opportunity to attend the Bolshoi or National Theatre for an evening performance. Highlighting the Moscow stay will be a visit to Moscow University. The university tour is not readily available to non-Russian tourists. Additional stops will be at Minsk and Leningrad.

The Staudahers will be in Stockholm Easter weekend. In addition to leisure activities, the educators will visit the Royal Library, the National Museum and will attend a briefing at the Swedish ministry of education before returning to the states.

The study mission is carefully coordinated. Mrs. Staudaher stated that they receive instructional mail three or four times weekly.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old girl. I don't mean to brag, but people have told me I am very pretty and have a good personality.

I have never had sex with anybody. I am saving myself for marriage. Some fellows have tried to talk me out of it, but so far I've managed to stay pure.

I recently met a fellow (24) who told me that I am the kind of girl he would like to marry, but before he gets serious with me I will have to have sex with him because sex is important to him, and he wants to be sure I can satisfy his sexual demands.

He insists on sex

I like this fellow more than any I've ever dated, but I don't want to give in. On the other hand, I'm afraid if I don't, he'll drop me. What should I do?

SAVING MYSELF

DEAR SAVING: Tell him you have a few demands that have to be satisfied, too. One of them is your own self-respect. And feeling as you do about saving yourself for marriage, if he doesn't want to accept it, he's not for you. I have an idea he may not drop you. But if he does, you'll be lucky.

DEAR ABBY: I own an apartment building. One of my tenants is a retired school teacher. He is a proper gentleman and if anyone says "hell" in front of him, he raises his eyebrows and says, "Please, I do not tolerate profanity."

Well, a young newlywed couple has the apartment next to this old gentleman, and they use a lot of four-letter words in their conversations. Naturally, it's a source of great annoyance to this gentleman, and he complains to me daily about it.

I have told the newlyweds not to talk so loud, and to cut out the four-letter words, but it hasn't done any good. The newlyweds claim this old man must have his ear to the wall because they talk in normal voices and do not shout.

So what should I do? LANDLORD

DEAR LANDLORD: YOU be the judge. Ask the complainer if you may visit his apartment and learn for yourself whether the neighbors are out of line—or if HE is.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died suddenly three months ago. Last month was our 36th wedding anniversary. I didn't receive one gift or anniversary card from any of our friends who always used to remember us on that occasion. I felt terribly let down and hurt.

I have been told that when your mate dies, you no longer have a wedding anniversary. Is that true?

It seems you are treated entirely different after you lose your mate. You suddenly become a third-wheel—unwanted and unnecessary.

What do you think? ALONE AND LONELY

DEAR ALONE: When one's mate dies, the wedding anniversaries cease. Your friends probably felt that sending gifts or cards would have revived memories of past anniversaries, which could conceivably sadden you, since you are now alone.

However, instead of ignoring the occasion, it would have been a kindness for some friends to have invited you out on that day.

TF Junior Miss

Junior Miss still receiving prizes

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER—Janie Vincent, the current Twin Falls Junior Miss, is still receiving money and prizes from the state competition she entered in December.

She was informed this week she had won the Kraft Party award for her party plan which she submitted at the competition in Moscow. She received a $100 scholarship, a cassette-tape recorder and a box of company products as first place winner.

Her party plan carried out a Noah's Ark motif with blue punch to resemble water, cakes decorated like animals, and amusing favors and decorations for a children's party. She stressed the nutritional value of foods while using the company's products.

Miss Vincent, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Vincent, Filer, was crowned Twin Falls Junior Miss last November and at the state competition was named third runner-up. Rhonda King, Rupert, received the state crown and will represent Idaho at the national finals in Mobile, Ala., in May. Janie was one of 25 girls who competed from different counties in Idaho and won the physical fitness award. For this she was given a $25 scholarship, plus 10,000 trading stamps which she said she used to buy Christmas gifts.

At the local pageant in Twin Falls she was one of 12 girls competing for the title and as winner she received a $500 scholarship, one of the largest presented in local competition in the state. The Twin Falls Jaycees, who sponsor the contest, gave over $1,000 in clothes and awards for the pageant.

Miss King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vern King, Rupert, was talent award winner. A panel of five judges marks points during the competition, including 15 points for scholastic activities, 15 for youth fitness, 15 for poise and appearance, 20 for creative and performing arts, and 35 for best showing in the judge's interview.

The pageant, which has been presented each year since 1959, has had several Magic Valley state winners—Terri Thornock, Twin Falls, and Ann Hagerman, Wendell, both were state winners, as was Miss Vincent's sister, Laura, who was Idaho Junior Miss in 1950 after winning first place in physical fitness, talent, and poise and appearance.

Airport budget down

By CHARLOTTE BELL
Times-News Writer

JEROME — The Jerome County Airport Board of Directors has set the year's airport budget at $2,650 compared to $3,400 last year.

Claude Bernard, county commission chairman, said at the time the tentative budget was set that the cut in the airport budget is because repair work needed the year before has been completed.

The airport board agreed that the commissioners were not aware of the needs and needs of the county airport and that every effort should be made by the board to provide the commissioners with pertinent data about the needs for improvement, maintenance and usage of the airport.

Millford Jones, county commissioner, said after the meeting that he thought the airport does a lot of good for the county.

Several improvement projects have been planned for the airport this year, including landscaping the approach area and the airport and fixing road heaves in the runway as well as several other projects.

Members of the airport board plan to express their needs at the Jerome County budget hearing scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday in the Jerome County courthouse.

Skinny dip crime?

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — State Rep. Robert Enosd Thursday urged the Vermont House Judiciary Committee to pass his bill making it a crime to skinny dip at public beaches or walk nude on the street.

Enosd, a Brattleboro Democrat, said that America's moral standards have declined too low and "it's time must be drawn somewhere."

He said that sex acts were being performed on Main Street in Brattleboro and even in public cemeteries.

BELLEVUE — The Bellevue City Council Thursday night discussed the possibility of adopting a leash law to stem the city's increasing dog problems.

The council will study the law and may call a special meeting on the matter.

Alderman Duke Martin said the Ketchum ordinance, which prohibits allowing dogs to run at large, enables the animal control officer to issue a warning or a citation to the dog owner.

Martin said pedestrians had also complained about dogs last spring and said he felt "some drastic measures have got to be taken."

In other action:

The council increased Taylor's salary from $300 a month to $450 a month to equal the watermaster's salary.

— Mayor L. T. (Pete) Johnson said he intended to formulate a budget in response to a request by Fire Chief James Pigg for an allocation of $2,000 this year for fire department equipment.

At the last council meeting, Pigg requested that the city set aside an undetermined amount of money for the fire department on an annual basis.

Thursday night, Pigg said the department had the "most critical need" for emergency lights, ladders, and hoses.

Other equipment needed to update the department, he said, includes air bottles, K-32 saw, hydraulic wrench and rope.

— Johnson set an informal meeting on proposed changes in the city charter for Saturday evening.

— the council agreed to re-post an earlier resolution against parking vehicles on the city streets and rights of way in a manner which prevents snow piling.

— in response to a complaint by Pigg about garbage burning within the city, city clerk Anna Faye O'Donnell said it was against state law to burn garbage — if garbage pickup service is available.

Mishap prevents printing

BUHL — A mishap prevented the publication of Tuana Mutual Irrigation Co.'s amended application for Twin Falls Canal Co. waste water in the Buhl Herald this week.

The application was scheduled to be printed as a legal advertisement Thursday.

But, according to Herald publisher Bob Bayless, the application was misplaced earlier this week. "We're totally responsible," he said.

Bayless said the application is now scheduled for publication on Feb. 14 and Feb. 21.

The water filing calls for diverting waste water spilled by the Twin Falls Canal Co. from Lateral Canal No. 9 and Coulee E at the edge of the Salmon Falls Creek Canyon 5.5 miles west of Buhl.

The water then would be conveyed to Tuana's Yahoo Creek Reservoir for storage and irrigation purposes. It would be diverted at any time of the year.

The original application, filed by Tuana president Harry LeMoine, called for diverting the waste water from Lateral Canal No. 9 at Deep Creek between March 15 and Nov. 15. This application had been a source of opposition to the project from farmers using Deep Creek water.

LeMoine said Thursday that he does not intend to make any changes on the amended application. He said that the water filed on would go into the Salmon Falls Creek Canyon or into Tuana's siphons, making it clear that no farmer's water would be diverted.

Twin Falls Canal Co. stockholders are now voting on the canal company proposal to convey Milner Dam spillover water to the Tuana and Canyon View irrigation projects. The last day for voting is Feb. 11.

Christian Church observes 50 years of scouting

TWIN FALLS — The First Christian Church in Twin Falls is observing its sponsorship of 50 years of Scouting this weekend.

A 50-year Golden Anniversary Alumni banquet Friday night at the church was highlighted by presentation of eight Eagle awards. Today, during the church morning worship service, 15 boys received the God and Country award.

Four of the boys, Brian Jessen, Carl Murphy, Doug Murphy and Dan Wirsching, were honored for earning both awards concurrently.

◻ J. (Vern) Davidson, scoutmaster of the church's troop 66 from 1940 to 1950 and past institutional representative, presented a program at the banquet entitled "Scouting Some Time Ago."

Guests at the event included alumni, past Eagle Scouts of all ages, present scouts and Scouters and their families. Darl Glead, Snake River area council executive, spoke on the importance of the Eagle award, highest rank in scouting. The new Eagles include Tony Beitia, son of Mrs. M. Nieves Beitia; Brian Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kelli Jensen; Ricky Jacobsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jacobsen; Carl Murphy and Doug Murphy, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Murphy, and Dan Wirsching, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Wirsching.

Recipients of the God and Country awards are Gary Beeson, Howard Burgman, Milton Burgman, Jim Deahl, Jeff Hafer, Brian Jensen, Jimmy Lindsey, Carl Murphy, Doug Murphy, Scott Nass, Roger Reddick, Boyd Wilmouth, Dan Wirsching, Steve Wirsching and Tim Walker.

Kelli Jensen is current scoutmaster and there are 43 boys registered in the troop, including the Leadership Corps composed of older scouts. Neal Wirsching is assistant scoutmaster, Rev. Ray Jones, minister, is God and country chaplain. Other committeemen include Glen Shorhouse, Ellis Hegdick, Robert Miller, C. S. Hinder and Roger Hass.

C. E. Allen served as first scoutmaster when 16 boys were organized in 1924 as troop 3. Other scoutmasters have included Lunny Lundin, Davidson, retired Union Pacific railroader; Ira Mills, David Dingman, Robert Gillespie, Walter Harris, Donald Rudolph, Orville Cole, Manual Burgess, Bob Barnes, Elvin Gobel and Gerald Courtney.

Davidson recalled that the troop used to be called on for much community services, such as Easter sunrise at Shoshone Falls, polo drives and teachers institutes.

"In 1942," he said, "we had the first Twin Falls hotheke demonstration at the old Van Engelen store on Main Street." During the war, he recalled, numerous scrap and paper drives and the troop won a first place in war bond sales.

The first sea scout unit in the area was formed in 1948, according to Davidson, and at the city drug and bank corners.

He said the Scouts built a cabin at Dilkes lake with the help of Fred Head and others.

"We used to take many overnight hikes," he said. "I often had my car filled with boys on the hood and running boards."

Two firms chosen

TWIN FALLS — A Boise chemical firm and a Salt Lake City firm have been selected by Twin Falls County Commissioners to supply the county weed department chemicals for the coming season.

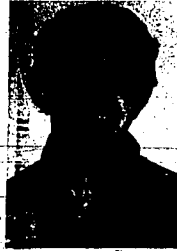

A total of seven bid offers were received with the two — low bids — accepted Friday morning.

The annual chemical, of which the bureau will purchase 1,220 gallons, will be supplied by Wasatch Chemical Co., Salt Lake City, in the amount of $8,299.80.

CAA launches two new service projects

TWIN FALLS — Two new community service projects have been launched by the South Central Community Action Agency, according to Terry Castanda, director of community organization.

An information and referral service on non-profit programs and services available in the eight-county Magic Valley area has begun under direction of Freida Johnston, assistant director of senior programs.

Data will be available on the toll free telephone number, 734-

2070, regarding eligibility for the various agency programs and where the agency is located, Ms. Castanda said.

The other program involves emergency or "on call" taxi service in Twin Falls and outlying area. Ruth Haken, Twin Falls, a licensed chauffeur, has volunteered her services to drive senior citizens, and even include deliveries of small articles, such as groceries.

Also, a citizens mobilization committee is being organized under the direction of John Hicks, community aide, to consider the subject of some kind of urban system of transportation.

This will not conflict with the senior citizens' shopping buses now operating in the area, Ms. Castanda said.

She said the information and referral project will also operate out in two other valley communities, at Jerome and at the neighborhood center at Burley.

CSI plans blood drawing

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho will hold its annual blood drawing Wednesday, (Feb. 13) at the college gym.

Quota is 150 pints, according to Marie Etlinger, student chairman. Last year the quota was not reached and campus leaders hope that students will reach the quota this year.

A film will be shown all day Wednesday in the conference room illustrating procedures at the drawing. It will be shown at least five times throughout the day at the Student Union.

John Fluegel, chemistry instructor, is faculty coordinator for the blood drawing.

Mrs. Etlinger said anyone interested in donating blood is welcome to participate. The drawing is not exclusively for students. The blood all goes to the Red Cross and is badly needed, she said.

Valley Comment:

QUESTION: Are you planning to observe Valentine's Day and if so how will you observe it?

Randy O'Dell . . . "Yes, I'm going to make valentines and give them to all of my friends, and my teacher."

Jane Anderson . . . "Yes, I think I'll dress up my black Lab as a valentine and take him around the neighborhood—I have two dogs. The other one is a mutt but I may dress him up, too."

Timmy Jacobson . . . "Yes, I'm going to buy valentines for everybody. If I make any they will be to decorate my house. I'm going to buy the rest and I may give Marc one."

Bill Davemort . . . "I don't know. I don't know if I'll get any valentines to give. I don't have any girl friends and I'm not going to give my brothers and sisters any."

Sandy Gillette . . . "I'm going to give people valentines. I think I'll make them all. I might give one to Timmy."

Joy Milton . . . "Well, I'll probably eat some treats at school. Hopefully, we'll have a big feast at our house with turkey and things—hopefully, that is."

Disneyland dusted with 'a little reality'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Disneyland has dusted its magic kingdom with a little reality lately. Its ads are promoting the famed theme park as well within the range of most families with a tankful of gasoline.

Officials at the Anaheim, Calif., amusement park concede that the fuel shortage and gasless Sundays are indeed nibbled steadily into their winter attendance figures.

The drop is small, they say, but significant. Yet some of the other prime attractions and resort areas in southern California are really hurting these days — in some cases losing up to half of their usual weekend crowds.

The Los Angeles Times in a survey Sunday of state tourist attractions, concluded: "Tourism is fast becoming California's first major casualty" due to soaring gas prices, limited fuel and gasless Sundays.

Officials at the Queen Mary in Long Beach disclosed that 37-50 per cent fewer tourists visited the former British vessel in December-January. Martland, an established aquatic park on the Pikes Verdes Peninsula, suffered a 40-45 per cent January revenue decline compared with 1972. And San Diego's Sea World attendance is down 10 per cent and Empire employee layoffs are contemplated.

Ski resort traffic in southern California is holding steady, the Times reported, but the winter months have meant a 25 per cent drop in the number of visitors to Yosemite, usually one of the nation's busiest national parks.

San Diego Zoo, one of the world's largest, has halted expansion plans because revenue fell when 10 per cent fewer people passed through the turnstiles and it appeared that the fuel shortage might bite an even heavier toll.

Fewer Californians made the weekend desert run across to Las Vegas, Nev., last month and one government official at the U.S.-Mexico border said about 15,000 fewer cars passed into the splashy town of Tijuana, Mexico, in January.

"A whole new pattern of travel is emerging," said Frank Tenley, who operates a state border patrol station for the Agriculture Department.

Jack Benny ignores fact his age doubled

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jack Benny will celebrate his 80th birthday this week when Frank Sinatra hosts a party for him in Palm Springs.

The comedian contemplated the celebration with mixed feelings. Clearly he did not relish turning 80—two years older than his pal George Burns. But he was looking forward to the Sinatra clam-bake.

Benny sat in his Beverly Hills office puffing contentedly on a cigar. He was dressed in expensive blue slacks, sports shirt and highly polished shoes. Whenever possible he directed the conversation to his activities and away from his age.

For a man who told national radio and television audiences he was 39 years old for 40 years, Jack took no notice that he more than doubled those years.

Benny's mind is keen, his memory unflinching. He walks more than three miles to his office every day. His weight is 145 pounds, lighter than he has been for many years.

"I don't eat very much so I don't have to worry about getting fat," he said. "I have a highball before dinner at night with Mary. Other than that I don't drink."

"I play golf as often as I can. And the caddy who gets me is lucky. He rides in the cart and I do all the walking. Best thing in the world for me."

"Most nights I go to bed early unless we go to somebody's house to see a movie. I'm usually in bed by 9 o'clock and fall asleep watching TV."

Benny has his own projection room, but seldom uses it. His home is a large mansion surrounded by manicured gardens, set well back from the street in Holmby Hills, a fashionable enclave of the wealthy tucked between Beverly Hills and Bel-Air.

He wears his wealth unostentatiously—He wears his years lightly.

"I've made more than 500 appearances on television, counting my own shows and guest spots," he said with a note of pride. "I can still remember the exact date of my first radio job."

"It was May 10, 1932. I'll never forget it. You asked me any other date I couldn't tell you. I remember my opening line of my first show: 'Good evening ladies and gentlemen, this is Jack Benny—I will now pause while everybody says, 'Who cares?''"

As it turned out, millions cared, and still do.

Jack Benny recently starred in the television special "Jack Benny's Second Farewell Appearance." His first won the highest ratings he'd even received. He plans a third, fourth and as many other farewells as he can.

But through the years the comedian has given higher priority to his violin concerts with symphony orchestras for which "I don't get paid a dime."

He reckons he has saved dozens of such orchestras in the United States from bankruptcy—I should practice the fiddle more. But I do take two lessons a week and I try to practice two hours a day."

"Actually, I'm playing better than ever now. I love the violin and it's a great form of entertainment for me because I can play and talk at the same time. People come to the concerts out of curiosity. They hear the best violinists in the world, so I can't play too lousy."

"Isaac Stern, my closest friend in the music world, tells people Jack plays the violin well enough for his purposes."

But I'm proud to say no critic has ever panned my playing. I love getting into white tie and tails and walking out in front of a 90-piece orchestra. It's the greatest feeling in the world. At every concert I get a lot of laughs, but I'm also playing the very best I can."

Jack, who enjoys good health and good friends, has no plans to retire. His youthful outlook forbids even mentioning the word retirement.

Leukemia outlook brighter

By ARTHUR J. SNIDER

(CH) 1974, Chicago Daily News — The leukemia outlook grows steadily brighter.

A child coming down with the disease today has a 50-50 chance of living at least five years, two University of Chicago researchers follow in cancer reported at a seminar on the campus.

"Some may go on to seven to 10 or more years," they said. "Some may even be cured, but we really can't use the term 'cure' yet because the studies haven't gone on long enough."

The scientists, Dr. Harvey Golomb and Dr. Richard Stein, emphasized the significant progress since 1948 when a leukemia child had but a few weeks to live.

The increasing longevity has been made possible by the strategic use of a combination of drugs.

Along with prospects of extending gains for children still further, the drug combinations are now being applied in adult cancers with promising early results.

Using a four drug approach, clinicians at the University of Chicago have been able to get remissions (disappearance of symptoms) in 65 to 80 per cent of patients with malignant lymphomas, a cancer of the lymph glands.

"This is very encouraging," the two scientists said.

The University of Chicago also is beginning a study of application of drug combinations to sarcoma, a cancer that affects muscle and bone and resulted in the amputation of the leg of Sen. Edward Kennedy's son. Results are not yet available but, in another medical center, remissions are being obtained in 40 per cent of patients, they said.

"We are also beginning to put results together on using a 5-drug combination to treat advanced breast cancer," said Golomb. "Newly published figures from Boston show an increase in life by six months. This does not sound like much but it does show that we are learning to do more for the breast cancer patient as surgery and hormonal treatments have run their course."

People who have an itch to marry first must scratch up the price of a license.

It's wonderful to see how much better you can get around with a cold at a party than at the office.

A 5-5 alarm is what a fellow experiences when he leaves the office five minutes after he must be present.

Nearest the juice we had for breakfast ever came to bring orange was when the tank truck carrying it passed a grave, somewhere in Florida.

Historian-spots civil war strategy flaw

By VICTOR WILSON
 (The News-News Service)
WASHINGTON — For more than 110 years, historians north and south have agreed the confederate lost the Civil War chiefly because it hadn't the manpower to withstand a war of attrition.
 Now, for the first time, Historian Bruce Catton, recognized as an outstanding authority on the 1861-65 conflict, asserts flatly that Confederate strategists themselves — not the north — paved the way to the war of attrition which brought defeat.

The flaw, declares Catton, was in the north's decision to order Gen. Robert E. Lee's magnificent army of northern Virginia to invade the north via Pennsylvania. The army lost a third of its offensive strength — about 20,000 men — in three days' savage fighting at Gettysburg on July 1-3, 1863.
 The Federal Army of the Potomac lost 23,000. Catton writes in "Gettysburg: The Final Fury" ("Doubleday, dtrs. $8.95). — But it could easily absorb and replace such losses, while the south could not. Thus, though he never lost the offensive, it was Lee who retreated back into Virginia, pursued ultra-cautiously by the Union commander, Gen. George Gordon Meade.

 "A year later," Catton writes, "when the army of the Potomac was slowly and painfully fighting its way south across war-ravaged Virginia, it was argued the union was engaged in a simple war of attrition, accepting heavy losses for the sake of inflicting heavy losses, knowing that northern resources were far greater than southern resources."
 "As a matter of fact, the war of attrition began much earlier . . . in the Gettysburg campaign. When the South undertook to invade the North in the face of northern superiority in manpower, it made war of attrition inevitable. Not even Robert E. Lee could win that kind of fighting."
 Ironically, Catton points out, just two months before Gettysburg, Lee had won the "most dazzling of all confederate victories" — the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., where his opponent, Gen. Joseph Hooker, outnumbered him two to one. But the point was, Catton adds, that Lee was fighting a battle of his own choosing, on ground of his own choosing and in his own military backyard. That is the objective of all great generals — to fight on their own terms.

 In a way, the historian continues, the Confederate leadership's hand was forced into launching the invasion north in hope it would draw northern forces away from the huge southern fortress at Vicksburg. — Missa . . . then surrounded by Gen. US Grant's forces. Richmond recognized that Vicksburg's fall would cut the south in half, and open the whole Mississippi River down to New Orleans to the federals.
 Catton also cites southern hope that Lee's drive north could help win the long-sought diplomatic recognition of Great Britain for the confederacy, and might increase the north's known war-weariness, forcing the north to concede southern independence.

But the record shows, he writes, that not a man, gun nor wagon-load of supplies was diverted from Vicksburg; that British ideas of recognition withered with loss of a third of Lee's best men; and that the northern government "did not flinch" at the fearful price it was paying, it simply called up more men.
 In the end, Catton declares, the name of President Abraham Lincoln could be substituted for "northern government." For like the beam of a laser, all the pressures finally pinpointed on Lincoln, he says.

Collector irked over dump closure

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Frank Frisella likes dumps. Specifically, he likes to go picking through the rubble in dumps in search of hidden treasures.

So, it is understandable Frisella would become irked when the town closed its dump to all those who enjoy spending a weekend afternoon dumpster-picking.

Frisella, a 59-year-old letter carrier, is the founder and secretary of the South Kingstown Dump Pickers Association.

The group, which numbers up to 100 members, was organized last October when the town put a ban on their pastime.

John Connors, town manager, said at that time the ban was put into effect because there were too many fires at the dump, and that the state was pressuring the town to curb the number of fires.

To Frisella and his fellow dumpster-pickers it sounded as if the town was blaming them for the fires.

"I can tell you that our dumpster-pickers didn't start any fires. Why would we want to set fires? We might burn something that we consider valuable," Frisella said Tuesday.

"The way we figure it, we are doing the town a favor. We are keeping the dump cleared out. And we are mad that we can't go into the dump anymore," he said.

Frisella and other members of his organization used to visit of the dump often on Saturdays and Sundays. According to Frisella, he has been able to salvage a brass bed, a dog house, enough planks to build back stairs to his home, dozens of assorted chairs and gas cans which he says come in handy during the energy crisis.

"Since we put the ban into effect, we have not had any fires at the dump," a spokesman for the town manager said. "I'm not saying the dumpster-pickers are setting fires for purpose, but all it takes is for someone to drop a cigarette butt on the ground."
 "I like going to that dump, and it is relaxing to spend an afternoon just browsing," Frisella says.

Through the organization, Frisella hopes to put pressure on the Town Council not to keep the ban in effect.

"It's only in numbers that people with common interests are able to get what they want," he said.

Two Valentines And Two Heads? You Gotta Be Kidding!

By O.A. (GUS) KELKER

Two guys with the name St. Valentine? You gotta be kidding!

And they both had their head's chopped off? Oh, come now, you must be pulling my leg.

But you're not, are you? I can tell by the twinkle in your eye and that sly smile which is crossing your face. So we'll sit here and listen to your story, inasmuch as Valentine's Day is the 14th and today is the 10th.

But listening and believing are different things. Like we said, we will sit so start talking.

So now you're talking but you are saying that even historians disagree about the identity of St. Valentine. One St. Valentine was a priest who lived in Rome during the 200's under Emperor Claudius II. The Romans jailed him for aiding persecuted Christians. Some people even believed he cured his jailkeeper's daughter of blindness. Along about A. D. 270 or so the Romans beheaded him on Palatine Hill, at the site of an ancient altar to Juno. We are told that quite a few years later a gate in Rome was named Porto Valentim after St. Valentine. That was later changed to Porto del Popolo. St. Valentine's remains are buried in the church at St. Praxedes in Rome.

And how about that other St. Valentine? You say he was a Bishop of Trent, about 60 miles from Rome? You say that you believe he was persecuted for converting a Roman family to Christianity? You say he was beheaded in Rome about A. D. 273? And you say nobody is real sure where he was buried?

Well, you've got two good stories there. You have two St. Valentines — just like you promised — and you have both of them losing their heads.

So we will take it from there. We'll tell you a little about the "modern" Valentine Day.

Very little is really known about the early observances of Valentine Day so we take the word found in a book published in 1877 by John Brand. The author said that so far as he could find out people observed the holiday as early as 1446. In those early days young people chose their valentines by writing names on slips of paper, then drawing them by chance from a vase or other container.

After the drawing, each young man wore the name of the girl drawn on his sleeve for several days. Probably (although we are only guessing) this is where the expression "he wears his heart on his sleeve" came from.

Then came the practice of providing gifts for "my valentine." And later each gal received a pair of gloves, although just why is not really clear. The wealthy got together and gave big dances in honor of the young ladies.

Still later the practice of giving sentimental valentines came into being and the expensive gifts were eliminated. Could be that a depression had something to do about it — but this, too, is only a guess on our part.

It wasn't until the time of the Civil War that Valentine's Day became popular in the United States. In an article published in 1863 a writer said "indeed, with the exception of Christmas, there is no festival throughout the world which is invested with half the interest belonging to this cherished anniversary."

Some of the valentines of that period are still around. And a lot of them were hand painted. For the most part the central theme featured a cupid — most always on the chubby side — with arrows piercing a heart. Of course, there was all that lace trim and satin, feathers, mother-of-pearl, dried flowers and even seaweed.

Lots of these items are now in the hands of collectors and are worth so much money most of us cannot afford to even look at them.

But today, all that is changed. For not much money you can get a big packet of valentines — enough to take care of about everyone you have in mind. Of course, there's always that special one — like your gal friend, your wife or your mother.

Perhaps, in this special case, a nice box of candy would do the trick. It would also give you something to eat — because what valentine in her right mind would eat a whole box of candy without seeking help?

So that's about the way it is. No longer is Valentine's Day a holiday. It's just another day in the long list of those which have lost their real meaning down through the years.

Oh, there are special Valentine Day sales and special Valentine cards and like but, like we said, it's now just another day.

No longer is it, like the author said back in 1863, a festival which rivals Christmas throughout the world.

But it is still around so go ahead and have your fun! A valentine for your valentine is really nothing to be ashamed of.

Merry Pet

Linda Merry
 Question: Can a young (less than 2 years old) hunting dog be "cured" of gun shyness? If so, what is the best method to use? This dog showed no skyness until the third trip into the field. No effort has been made to use a gun around him since.

Answer: I wish I had a winning answer since there are a lot of hunting dogs who'd rather not hunt if you're gonna tote a gun. Maybe the most realistic answer comes from a trainer of many champs. "I try to talk the owner of a gun shy dog into training a different dog."

If you've got a stubborn streak and want to try, the place to start may be the skeet range. Tie the dog up nearby and let him sit while someone else shoots. After a couple of trips, you do the shooting with the dog tied close at hand. If and when he becomes totally at ease, proceed with the usual field training.

Question: I have a 13 year old male dog. About four months ago his bark sounded different and gradually he barked less and with difficulty. None he cannot bark at all. I feel so sorry for him when the neighbor dogs bark and he tries to answer but no sound comes out at all.

Answer: The case of a missing bark can usually be solved by investigating laryngeal problems due to over-exercizing cats when protesting interment in a kennel or "caving tongue" while hunting is common.

It may also occur during the course of some infectious diseases and occasionally from allergic reactions or trauma. But, in the older dog, neoplasia or cancer is most certainly be

FACELESS Vietnam veteran Loran Bailey, who was treated so carelessly by the Veterans Administration that it drew the attention of President Nixon, has turned again to a private doctor for help, but now the VA says it will pay the bills. Bailey, 26, began a machinist course at Trinity Junior College in Chicago. Instructor Clair Stala, left, shows Bailey how to operate a metal lathe. (UPI)

Network TV eliminates provincialism of mind

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — One of the major effects of network television has been the gradual elimination of provincialism as a state of mind.

Like history's first great connecting roads, coast-to-coast video has inevitably made it all but impossible for most regions to remain pockets of separatism.

Taking provincialism in its worst sense, one can only think of its elimination as a healthy development.

But considering regionalism in its best sense, one is saddened to contemplate all the grassroots individualism that has gone by the wayside.

For better or worse, the blue innuendoes on Johnny Carson's show now are understood as readily in remote hamlets as in great cities.

The airwaves have become mental highways that go through just about every Main Street in America.

And, sad to say, the differences in main streets in various regions are not as colorfully singular as they once were.

If you have driven across the nation, you know that a highway is a highway is a highway.

Only if you get off the main roads do you get a feel of the many varying flavors that blended to make the country stimulating.

You have to walk down the side streets of villages and towns and cities to know what any land is all about.

Rupert forms chapter of group to keep, bear arms

RUPERT — Walt Charles represents a page out of rural America when he flatly states "resister" Communists, not firearms.

His stand often brings ridicule. "As frute as mother and apple pie," some say. But Walt Charles' stand does spell out feelings shared by members of this community dating back to the founding of the American Constitution. Charles and fellow members of the Rupert community recently organized a chapter of the National Association to Keep and Bear Arms. Charles is temporary chairman. Ron Fairchild is acting secretary. The new chapter, called Mini-Cassia Arm, was formed this week by 19 Minidoka County residents, who have already outlined the group's bylaws. Specifically spoken they say: "protect the constitution, especially the Second Amendment which states, Right to Keep and Bear Arms."

"Our goal," Charles explained, "is to inform the public of its particular rights. The ones we need to explain their rights to are those who are leaning toward the gun-control beliefs which have spread across this country."

"These people point to violent crimes," Charles points out, "illegal guns cause most violent crimes. Why not just enforce laws now on the books. Get rid of the million of illegal guns available for a price across the country. Gun control legislation will not control them."

Members of Mini-Cassia Arm believe firearms and freedom are synonymous. "Citizens who lose one will surely lose the other," Charles states. "Our motto is no compromise."

Charles explained to the Times-News that the National Association to Keep and Bear Arms is not affiliated with any other organization.

"It conducts no business for a profit of any of its members or directors," he explained. "It does not endorse or support any political party, but rather on its adherence to constitutional principles."

"Our organization alerts and informs concerned Americans of all matters pertaining to their right to keep and bear arms. It is supported by membership fees, donations and sale of literature, bumper stickers, decals and advertising," Charles continued.

"We oppose any federal, state or local firearms control legislation or laws not in keeping with the U. S. Constitution and Bill of Rights," he added.

Minidoka County organization supports the "posse comitatus" nationwide.

—Rationally stated they want every person to have the right to defend — even by force — his person, his liberty and his property.

"From this premise," a Mini-Cassia "ump" spokesman stated, "it follows that a group of men have the right to organize and support a common force to protect these rights."

The group's next meeting will be Feb. 11, beginning at 8 p.m.—in the Rupert Civic Building.

Some vegetables ornamental as well as edible

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
ORNAMENTAL
VEGETABLES: Many vegetables you grow can be not only edible but highly ornamental. Let's take the purple vegetables first.

Purple cabbages alternated with green ones are attractive. Eggplant, glossy purple, is an outstanding vegetable with a purple color.

Black Magic is a hybrid that is worth planting in your garden. Purple headed cauliflower looks like broccoli but with smaller buds. Royal Purple and early Purplehead are good colorful varieties.

A purple cauliflower becomes green when cooked, but has a flavor more like broccoli than regular cauliflower. Serve it raw in salads for its pretty color.

Early purple Vienna kohlrabi is named for its skin color, but it is only skin deep. The purple is peeled off before cooking. Early White Vienna is white-skinned but matures a few days earlier.

"For another purple vegetable try Royal, a purple-podded snap bean. It looks strange in the garden but not when you eat it. Its top turns green when cooked. Ornamental kale is highly attractive in the garden or flower bed.

Many vegetables you grow are useful in "flower" arrangements. For a pretty table decoration, cut a beet in half and place the upper part in a black bowl with some colored sticks. A little water is added. Green-and-red-leaves appear and last a long time.

"Regular kale" makes beautiful foliage and then don't forget the ornamental kale with soft cream, pink, lavender and green shading, plus crinkled and frilled edges.

Bronzed lettuce is a fine border for a flower bed, and the leaves can be used at the bases of arrangements.

Vegetable flowers are also attractive in arrangements. Try sprays of yellow broccoli flowers, or the cream-yellow blooms of okra.

Garden More in '74 and don't be afraid to try a few novelties among your vegetables.

VELVET PLANT: The so-called "purple passion" plant or gymra has become highly popular today. People like its purplish color. It does well in a sunny window, or even semi-shaded, soil should be humusy (1 part each of sand, peat and loam).

Give your gymra ample moisture, but never a soggy condition. Plant is fragile and tends to grow crooked unless staked. Pinch the tip back to make the plant bushy. Start new plants from tip cuttings rooted in plain tap water.

COMMUNITY - GARDENS: A poll made in 1973 revealed that there are 30 million people in the U.S. who would raise a garden if they had a garden plot. The way to bypass this handicap is to grow plants in tubs, pots, hanging baskets or on trellises.

Another way is to undertake a community garden in your neighborhood. Every town and suburb has many weed-grown, unproductive lots and acres which can be plowed and divided into small garden areas. That's community gardening.

In Burlington, Vt., last summer, community gardening really worked. Over 500 families raised $150 to $250 worth of produce on a 25-acre site in a community garden. And they all loved it!

FREE: Garden Way Associates, a non-profit organization, has allowed us to offer a 92 page booklet, Gardens For All, a helpful guide for anyone who wishes to conduct a community garden. SAVE YOUR VITAMINS: Many do not realize that cooking waters from your vegetables contain large amounts of valuable vitamins and minerals. For example, from 9 to 54 per cent of the thiamine and riboflavin in vegetables is dissolved in the cooking water.

If this water is thrown away, these food values are lost, even from frozen vegetables. The cooking water includes the frost of frozen vegetables, and should be saved and used. Cooking water can be used in juice cocktails, soups, sauces, stews, pot roasts and casserole dishes.

You can flavor and prettify certain vegetables by tearing them up with fruits. After cooking—the vegetable just enough, butter and heat—without being soggy, fresh or canned. No reason why your dishes need to be bland and unappetizing.

JADE PLANT: This item is being used in many homes. Give it a bright window, or a semi-shady one. Best temperature is 72 degree F., and a soil mixture of 1/3 each of sand, peat and loam is best.

In summer you can set the plant outdoors, and then bring it indoors before frost. Withering of leaves is due to too-much water, or poor drainage. There's a disease which causes shrinking and withering of foliage, and it is associated with excess water. Let the plant go dry between watering. Non-flowering is due to age of plant. Older plants seldom flower.

QUESTION BOX
QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. of Burley: "We want to have a good vegetable garden this year. Unfortunately our soil is heavy and we want to have your ideas on improving the soil so it won't be so hard to work. Can you help?"

Clay soils need not be tough to garden in. Such soils are heavy because of the finer particles in it. A sandy soil (called a "light" soil) are easy to work because the particles in it are larger.

Clay soil is clay. Your job is to make it "breathe." Because a soil not well aerated is unproductive, gardeners use many tricks to loosen up a light clay soil.

One is to use various homemade soil conditioners such as lawn clippings, corncobs, leaves, garbage, compost, coal and wood ashes, sawdust, peatmoss, wood chips, muck and any other form of organic matter.

If this water is thrown away, these food values are lost, even from frozen vegetables. The cooking water includes the frost of frozen vegetables, and should be saved and used. Cooking water can be used in juice cocktails, soups, sauces, stews, pot roasts and casserole dishes.

You can flavor and prettify certain vegetables by tearing them up with fruits. After cooking—the vegetable just enough, butter and heat—without being soggy, fresh or canned. No reason why your dishes need to be bland and unappetizing.

JADE PLANT: This item is being used in many homes. Give it a bright window, or a semi-shady one. Best temperature is 72 degree F., and a soil mixture of 1/3 each of sand, peat and loam is best.

Don't worry about adding too much of these materials on a heavy soil because it breaks down slowly and the clay has a buffer effect, preventing the calcium in limestone from making the soil alkaline, even when large quantities are used. So, save your wood ashes this winter and add them to your heavy soil.

Another way to keep on the good side of a clay soil is to avoid working it when it's wet. One day's work in a wet clay soil can make it hard the rest of the year. Some gardeners like to whip up a garden soil with a rotary power tiller until it's like talcum powder. That's not necessary.

Rotary tiller is fine, but too much fluffing of a soil can break up the structure, plug up the soil pores, and as a result the earth will turn to a sticky gumbo after the first rain.

Chemicals and conditioners are worthless for loosening a clay soil. Stick to organic materials such as "compost," coffee grounds, etc.

It's of Twin Falls: "Please tell us how to start a Hawaiian wood rose from seed. What care does it need?"

The Hawaiian wood rose you see in flower—shops in—not a rose, but a glorified morning glorie. The wood rose is the dried seed pod and inside the pods are seeds. The seeds are of an acorn and having a hard shell similar to our Brazil nut. File a notch in the hard seed coat, enough to expose the meat, for faster germination. So, seed in a pot of sand-peat mixture and keep in a 72 degree F. room. Growth is fast. When plants are up keep them well watered as though in a foot or so in inches in a day, sometimes.

The Gossip Column

LORETTA SWIT

Q: Is it true that Alan Arkin at M-A-S-H and Loretta Swit, who plays "Hot Lips," are an item in private life? — C. R., Fort Worth, Tex.

A: No, they are just pals. Everybody loves Alan, who plays the surgeon "Hawkeye" on the successful series, and Loretta says she is no exception. But he is happily married to his wife of 19 years. Mrs. Arkin is a concert clarinetist. Loretta, by the way, is the girlfriend of onetime TV actor, now writer-director Gardner McKay.

Q: How can those experts really tell if a tape has been tampered with? — G. B., Denver

A: When a tape is running it picks up a normally undetectable hum or echo from the walls near the mike. This hum can be measured and will always be constant, with a cycle rate of 60 per second or 50 per second. But if the tape is tampered with, this constant rate will be interrupted and it is easy to spot.

Q: I heard that the health-food expert, Adelle Davis, was seriously ill. Is this true? — L. L. L., Miami, Fla.

Q: Whatever happened to Lana Turner's last husband who was suing her for so much money? — J. E., Little Rock, Ark.

A: Nightclub hypnotist Ronald Dante wanted a 50-50 settlement of all his and Lana's community property, but a Los Angeles judge denied the appeal, pointing out that Dante had been married to Lana for only six months and had contributed nothing to their "community property." Lana has been married eight times; if you count her two-times marriage to Steve Crane.

Q: In a case like Teddy Kennedy's illness, does the family try to acknowledge the gifts or cards received? — J. P., Mobile, Ala.

A: After the amputation of his leg young Kennedy received thousands of gifts and 50,000 cards and letters. A printed card in his own handwriting went to those who remembered him. It said: "Thank you for sending your feelings, notes, and thoughts and remembering me in your prayers. The little time it took you to write these notes encouraged me greatly, and now I am just beginning to walk. Thank you very much for thinking of me. Love, Teddy Kennedy, Jr."

TEDDY KENNEDY

NOTHING'S TOO GOOD: His Caesars Palace comeback in Las Vegas set Frank Sinatra back $150,000 for the big, weekend party he tossed with an all-orange motif, from orange trees to pale orange napkins, tablecloths, and draperies. Ol' Blue-Eyes sent out 200 handwritten invitations to his most intimate friends and he picked up the whole tub.

Q: Is it true that Nixon's friend, Bebe Rebozo, has absolutely no influence over the President and stays out of White House affairs? — J. E., Portland, Maine.

A: Insiders now think that Rebozo greatly influences the President and gets action from the White House whenever he wants it. Their examples — after Newsday published a series on how Rebozo got rich in Florida, the White House arranged for the IRS to audit the reporter's tax return ... Retired cop Tony Ulasegic says a copy of the secret report he did about Chappaquiddick was sent to Rebozo ... Rebozo stayed overnight in the White House just before Nixon fired

Q: I know that the actress Neil Patrick was in "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds," is the oldest of three daughters of Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward. But doesn't she have children by a previous marriage? — H. F., Pittsburgh.

A: Paul has three: Susan, Scott, and Stephanie. The youngest, Stephanie, goes to college in Vermont and both Susan and Scott live in California and are trying to break into movies.

Q: Is it true Katharine Hepburn will never walk again after her operation? What was the problem? — H. P., Duluth, Minn.

A: The still-athletic Miss Hepburn, 64, plans not only to walk but will make a stab at returning to her beloved tennis court. She has made a rapid recovery at the University of California, L. A., Medical Center where surgeons reconstructed her inflamed hip. She suffers from osteoarthritis. She'll soon be back at work on a TV show with Sir Laurence Olivier.

Q: I know that Debbie Reynolds has quit the Broadway play, "Irene." Is she going back to California? — D. L., Baldwin, N. Y.

A: We think she's planning to stay in New York since she's considering buying an enormous co-op apartment in Manhattan that used to belong to the late writer, Fannie Hurst. If Debbie buys the apartment her neighbor will be John Lindsay. The apartment is priced at $100,000; the Lindsays' cost around $75,000.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED

Who had plastic surgery at the same time Dean Martin had his eyes redone? None other than his third wife, Cathy. Though only 26, Cathy had some cosmetic work to improve her already pretty nose.

Q: We think Simone de Beauvoir is the most important writer in the Woman's Movement and would love to know who the French author herself would choose as number one. — R. L., Los Angeles.

A: Mile de Beauvoir would choose with you and thinks that nothing important has come out on the feminist movement since her book, "The Second Sex." She says that writers like Germaine Greer and Kate Millett have used her work as their inspiration without giving her any credit.

HELMUT BERGER

... prefers coonies

Q: Fred in a fan magazine that Liz Taylor was upset because Helmut Berger, who was with her in "Ash Wednesday," preferred her daughter, Liza Todd, to Liz herself. Can this be true? — N. E., Hollywood, Calif.

A: No! Helmut was very sweet to the teen-age Liza, who did have a crush on him, but he isn't romantically interested in either Liza or in Liz. Helmut likes to breeze around the world with his Roman pal, the Countess Marina Cicogna, and her Brazilian actress protegee, Florida Bolkan.

Q: If there is an Arab embargo on oil to this country how come we're still getting barrels of Arabian oil? — W. W., Baltimore, Md.

A: The Shah of Iran told some VIPs he had heard that tankers full of oil have been sold to one country, resold to another, and sold again for a third time — even changing direction on the high seas — before they reach port. Apparently oil bound for countries where there is no embargo can change ownership and end up at a U.S. port.

Q: When the son of Onassis was killed in that plane crash, was the pilot blamed for the accident? — O. M., Bay City, Mich.

A: The pilot and five technicians are now standing trial in Athens charged with manslaughter in the death of Alexandros Onassis.
