Federal campaign financing needs close look

WASHINGTON — Last week's disclosures in the Kalmbach-Symington affair doubtless will provide one more log to feed the fire of federal campaign financing.

Voter registration by mail supported

Washington Post

Two years of efforts of American voters to bring about the steps of the 94th Congress... in a series of electoral files submitted to undergo scrutiny...

Specifically, the requirement is that people must appear in person for registration at some appointed time and be subject to a check of their names against the list of registered voters in that precinct.

It can be argued that people ought to care enough to make sure they are properly registered. Yet, nevertheless, the process ought to be as simple as possible.

Completed forms would be returned to the appropriate state or local election officials for verification, and applicants would be notified by mail if their registrations have been accepted or rejected.

To help guard against abuses of this system, the legislation provides for federal assistance at the request of states in carrying out fraudulent registration or voting in addition to current federal prohibitions and other existing actions.

Opponents of HR 8063, the House bill, claim that postal registration would encourage fraud and lead to administrative chaos.

Congress seen moving toward impeachment vote

Impeachment asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic whip Robert C. Byrd says Congress is now moving inexorably toward an impeachment vote and although the outcome is uncertain, the watergate indictments appear to direct impetus toward the President's Oval Office.

Byrd said Friday's indictments pose serious implications for the President and I think for the first time the watergate cover-up is brought directly into the Oval Office.

"I think the House is moving inexorably toward an impeachment vote," Byrd said Sunday in a televised interview on NBC-TV.

Whether or not the House impeaches, he added, the Senate would try the President and could reach its verdict during the summer.

Byrd made his comment on the Oval Office when asked about points in the indictment such as a charge that Haldeman was lying when he quoted President Nixon as saying payment of bribes to Watergate burglars would be necessary.

Byrd made these statements on impeachment charges against Nixon constitutionally could include, "gross neglect of duty on the part of the president and a gross dereliction of his supervisory and his subordinate."

Democrats should no longer press the President to resign, he said, but instead be decided through the impeachment machinery.

Senators in the Senate does not yet approach the two-thirds vote necessary for an impeachment conviction. "No Senator has revealed to me how he would vote, but looking down the list and knowing the philosophies of senators and their positions—normally are on political questions, et cetera, et cetera," Byrd said.

He said there would be 15 to 20 perhaps who would vote to convict today.

The Republicans in the House may be more inclined to vote for impeachment, but they may not connect Watergate with their own political fortunes.

The President could not insure his political survival from Congress by any means, Byrd said, and executive privilege grounds and if he did, that in itself could be grounds for impeachment.

SEN. ROBERT BYRD

SEASIDE, Ore. (UPI) — A conference of Oregon's leading Republicans Sunday called for President Nixon's impeachment by more than a 2-1 margin.

Delegates to the annual Dorchester Conference voted approval of the impeachment resolution 236-119 after being briefed on the accusations being made against Nixon.

They also agreed to support any measure voted against the measure, saying the delegates should not preempt the House Judiciary Committee, which is studying the impeachment issue.

State Rep. Roger Martin, however, said the president has "been given an ample opportunity to be candid with the people of the United States and we are now beyond that."

Key votes due for Gem solons

BOISE (UPI) — The reapportionment bill was back on the House side of the court today as the Idaho Legislature begins its eighth week, but time may be running out.

With a federal district court hearing set for Friday on reapportionment, House members are scheduled today to vote on a reapportioning bill.

A second plan, which passed the Senate last Saturday, should be arriving in the House today.

At least one other plan should see the light of day this week.

Drafted by Rep. Paul Worthen, R-Boise, it makes changes in 23 of 35 legislative districts.

The House Republican caucus chairman promised last week it would get a hearing.

In addition, Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, who has vowed to oppose any bill that doesn't make some changes in her part of the state, has also announced she will vote on the bill.

The plan will be the number of legislative districts to 30 from the present 35.

Over in the Senate, H. Dean Summers, R-Boise, is having two or three plans prepared to present to the court when the court meets in Boise at the end of the week.

One of the original participants in the lawsuit, which successfully challenged the 1972 reapportionment, Summers said last week one of his proposals would also chop the number of districts.

The federal court has given the legislature 45 days to come up with a plan to reapportion the state, done one, one vote lines. The first deadline the court imposed, which expired in mid-February, was extended when the legislature said it couldn't finish in time.

The plan for a final vote in the House today was kept until last week despite the efforts of minority leader Rep. Hamilton D. DeHaven, in contention in that the 1,800 college students who go to school at Idaho and claim out-of-state residences should not be counted in the state's population.

Aside from reapportionment, members of the legislature are still awaiting some funding legislation from the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee today is the 50th legislative day, five past the last time the legislature has approved appropriations measures.

The joint committee has approved some detailed budget requests, but hasn't begun sending major general appropriations bills to the House.

The House also set for a vote today on the only remaining tax-related bill, a reapportionment bill. After enactment, it would be reorganized Department of Fish and Game. House members have a chance to give the bill final approval and send it to the Senate.

The amendment puts department heads in the department under the tax-related bill. A commission's classified system.

House members are also set for a final vote on a measure that would require the state to pay for the cost of environmental laws.

The proposal would permit a civil penalty of $1,000 for each violation of environmental laws.

Valley's votes

FN Capitol Bureau
BOISE — Here's how the Valley lawmakers voted Friday on tax relief package that would have provided about $10.5 million in tax relief to farmers.

The measure failed in the House 31-11.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Croup airway blockage

By GEORGE C. THOMPSON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thompson: My little boy is 2 years old and keeps having attacks of croup. He was in the hospital with it a few times and now he has been in again. The doctor says he will have it until he is about 5.

How does croup start? Is it because his lungs are not strong enough? If so, could it be the fault of the mother when she was carrying the baby? I have never been sick and child and never had anything like this trouble.

Mr. Thompson:

First of all, what is not Croup isn't a sign of weakness of the lungs, and it has nothing to do with anything that happened to you while carrying him.

Now, about Croup is obstruction of the larynx. The larynx is the part of the throat that results in hoarseness and a small child's air passages are so small to begin with that a little extra mucus can cause a blockage.

Diagnoses used to be a common cause of croup, widespread immunization against that infection has made diphtheria-croup rare.

Today a form of influenza virus is more likely cause. Mucus again results in narrowing the breathing passages, plus whatever interference there may be from swelling and mucus.

Why some children are "croup babies" and others are not is something we can't explain. In any more than we can explain why attacks of croup tend to come on at night.

Hearst urges note from daughter

(C) Chicago Daily News SAN FRANCISCO — Hearst, dragged screaming and nearly nude from a Berkeley apartment exactly one month ago, was still held today by the terrorist radio and television broadcast from the family's suburban home in Hillsborough. "You've passed a judgment, I know that pretty soon God will send you home and I'll be glad to see you."

Television plea

RANDOLPH A. Hearst and his wife Catherine, the parents of kidnapped Patricia Hearst, in a dramatic television plea Sunday asked her terrorist abductors to allow the 20-year-old girl to communicate with her family after 10 days of silence. "I'm sure she's all right," Hearst told in his first appearance before reporters in more than a week. (UPI)

He might ask the people that are holding you if you could be allowed to send us a letter or get in touch with us by tape," he said. "It is of course ridiculous to think that under the Geneva Convention we're going to be allowed to get in touch with you. But under the convention, you are allowed to write or correspond with people. "So see if they'll let you send us a note or something and let us know you're okay, honey." Hearst, offering his statement, told newsmen gathered in front of his house that she was about all right. "I believe the SIA is a political movement. I believe she is being held under the Geneva Convention. "But we haven't heard from her in 10 days. "Actually, the first communication from the SIA was dated Feb. 19, 1973, and it was received two days later. In it the girl was permitted to say only 19 words—today is the 18th and yesterday the Shahid-Isan had two people contact at dinner. The self-styled SIA General Field Marshal Chique" of the same time criticized the leaders of minority groups who almost without exception denounced the kidnapping and pleaded with the terrorists, believed to be less than 20 strong, to free the girl.

(C) New York Times Service WASHINGTON — For the first time in a generation, American wheat supplies have been depleted so low the bottom of the bin is almost in sight.

On the wall beside Waigera's desk is a plaque with a quotation attributed to the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy: "Don't get mad — get even." It says:

bread prices and serious shortages of baked goods, they conclude that they have other worries.

SECRETARY FARMER'S 'playing shell game'

Buyer skepticism called justified

By BERNARD BRENNER UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government spokesman yesterday said that the government's position is justified in being skeptical when administrative officials announce that food supplies are low.

There are some persons who contend that the bottom will be scraped before enough of the new crop can make its way to market to prevent soaring prices of wheat, then of flour, and finally of bread and other baked goods.

The American Bakers Association, which has been a vocal proponent of government intervention, considers that view to be somewhat hysterical.

Moreover, these persons maintain, with varying degrees of optimism, that the nation will have a small surplus of wheat from the 1973-74 crop.

The American Bakers Association, which opened the debate early last month by calling a news conference declaring that unless the government acted to slow wheat exports, shortages would be the result of a 15-pound loaf of bread as high as 45 cents.

But the secretary of agriculture is not a proponent of government intervention. He is a proponent of market forces.

The standard government statistics show that wheat supplies are low. The government's position is justified in being skeptical when administrative officials announce that food supplies are low.

But some families facing skyrocketing prices may not see how this figure can be true for them, and their skepticism is understandable.

USDA officials and their critics. If it had in fact, there may be a bread shortage or at least a price increase this spring and summer.

Bread shortages and empty bakery shelves can be avoided. If there is enough wheat there will be enough bread. But the agriculture department says no, nothing but wails.

On Tuesday, the bakers and their allies will hold a news conference to rebut the government's charges. They will say that the government is playing a shell game.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who has been an outspoken critic of the 1974 wheat loan, said that wheat loan deal consummated two years ago will be the featured speaker.

In Egypt, A. E. Robinson, director of the Department of Agriculture, Sedimentation Laboratory, is the director of the State Water Conservation Research Center.

Another new feature this year, Kirk said, is that signing up for the program will be done through the county extension office.

Moreover, there is a philosophical disagreement. The bakers do not like the idea that American consumers should have to pay a third of their cost, which supply, should be passing the price of a short supply that has been created by rising world demand.

On the other hand, the department, which would like to see a more stable market, has rejected at least one proposal to limit the amount of wheat that can be imported.

In debating the most recent projections first, the department said that wheat supplies will be 1.8 billion bushels in 1974, the lowest amount since 1947, when only 1.5 billion bushels remained on that

This means that under the 1974 program, farmers will be able to plant as much wheat as they want of any crop.

Under the 1974 Act, farmers are guaranteed a target price for wheat of $1.41 a bushel for the 1974-75 marketing year.

With a carryover last year of 438 million bushels, imports of 1 million and a record crop of 1.1 billion, the total supply for this crop year was 2.5 billion bushels.

Not so, says the Department of Agriculture, arguing that the bakers erred by including 150 million bushels reserved for shipping containers in an "unknown destination" category.

Lost portrait found

By LESTER CHACE
There was something about the portrait that bothered me from the start—an elusive quality that I couldn't describe except to say that I had made three false starts on it before getting down to work.

Perhaps it was because this portrait was so important to me. I promised me an escape from poverty that fall of 1957. For three years I had existed in a small room in a dingy rooming house on New York City's West 10th Street. It was quite a change from my home town of Pekin, nestled among the Illinois River cornfields.

I had come to New York to study and achieve artistic fame. However, I found that having a degree in art from Columbia University was only "padding" making a living from painting was another matter. Once in a while a thought would cross my mind about returning home. But I was too proud to go back.

LESTER CHACE

Besides, my life back home was too interwoven with values which didn't seem relevant to my new way of living. I was certain I could do it all myself and New York was where I'd do it.

Then came my big break. One of the nation's leading art collectors, Mrs. Elizabeth Havemeyer Webb, had seen my work and asked to see my hand doing her portrait.

When I walked into her ornate apartment, I seemed as if I were entering a new life. On her walls hung works by Goya, Corot, Manet and Degas. The room looked like a museum.

When Mrs. Webb was a young woman, and I loved painting her. I had the brush and palette in my hand, and I was standing in her rooming house and painting her. She was deeply engaged and I was somewhat apologetically asked if I could lighten the chin area a bit.

"Certainly," I said. "I'll have it ready in a day." Her eyes softened as she looked at my threadbare coat.

"But please," she said, "let me see your work first." I showed her a small sketch of a woman's face.

"A maid brought the money and I was surprised to see it was more than we had agreed on. I was not that I believe everything is wrong with New York City; many people are happy and live good lives there. My friends in Pekin is where God wants me.

"I thought, 'What better place than the Sun at the Columbia University Club?'" I had often gone there. At the club, friends congratulated me and we drank many toasts to the painting. Too many.

I awoke the next morning to find myself lying fully clothed across the bed in my room. I had been sleeping in a room sensing something terribly wrong.

"Where was the portrait?" I looked anxiously around the room. It was gone. My head throbbing with pain and panic, I clawed at the phone.

"Yes," said Mike—the bartender, he remembered my leaving with the portrait last night. In fact, considering my unimpaired condition, he had tried to stop me from taking it.

But I had insisted. I put down the phone. Sicken by shame, I began to cry. Then I found myself pleading for help. Not until the words had come out did I fully realize I was saying, "I do not want to go back to my home town."

A chair swept in from the front room. I was stumbling down the subway steps. I went to Times Square. On the street, figures brushed by me, a taxi honked, and I heard the eyes of a police officer and told him of my loss.

"Right now," he said, scratching his head, "if you see you took the subway from the club to your room, you should call the subway office."

I dialed a number for my new home. I stepped into a phone booth on what I felt was a ridiculous possibility.

"Someone at the subway office said he would report my loss. I gave my phone number, then made my way back to my room, wondering what I would say to Mrs. Webb.

"I was putting my key into the door when I heard the phone ring. I picked up the receiver to hear the message: 'A conductor found your painting. It's being held at the 168th Street Station.'"

In a rage, I went there, took the painting, and delivered it to Mrs. Webb. But all the while I suffered from a nervous shock—the loss of the portrait, the return home, and the happiness.

I pondered this and began to think I hadn't left God at home in Pekin after all. My painting had been returned to me. And I had heard the message: "I will be if He had used the last portrait to tell me into the realization that He can give, He can take away, and He can return. It took this experience to show me the truth in awaken my need for Him."

Today, if you visit Pekin, walk down Buena Vista Street and look for a small cottage. That's where I live. I have a maid, a car, and I paint every day. What I don't have is a thirst for fortune and fame.

But I have the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit and the assurance that I've been born in my life.

It's not that I believe everything is wrong with New York City; many people are happy and live good lives there. My friends in Pekin is where God wants me.

The other day a New York friend invited me to Manhattan to do a portrait of an opera star. I was offered a big fee and all expenses. It was quite a temptation.

But right at the moment I'm doing a portrait of a lady who has spent 50 years of her life in and around Pekin. I like the way the sun-squint lines show around her eyes.

My commission won't be as large. But I've learned of things far greater than commissions.

Study shows wolf unfairly treated

(N.Y. Times Service) — A study of the wolf in Oregon for almost three years under the direction of John B. Fentress, an ecologist and biologist at the University of Oregon, has shown that the wolf is developing a growing reputation as a gentle, loving animal, sensitive and even timid.

In addition, the wolf is described as being involved in one of the most complex, sophisticated networks of inter-relationships of all animals.

These are among the tentative finds of one of the first scientific studies conducted on the mysterious animal, which was long considered by many as a voracious, aggressive creature.

It tends to confirm a growing suspicion among naturalists and other that the wolf was unfairly maligned in folk and fairy tales, stories that pictured his fangs and his hunger rather than, for example, his cunning and its toward other wolves.

An extensive report on the study was presented Thursday at the annual conference here of the American Association of Game and Fish Management.

The study, financed in part by the National Science Foundation, was conducted in a way at the best of research.

Utah cancer project funded

SALT LAKE CITY — A University of Utah-Veterans Administration research project examining the body's natural resistance to cancer cells, has been awarded a $151,000 grant.

The funding comes from the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and names Dr. John B. Hibbs as the project's principal investigator. Dr. Hibbs is an assistant professor of medicine at the university's college of medicine and chief of infectious diseases at the Salt Lake VA Hospital.

The first year of the three-year grant is funded for $51,479, the second year at $50,000 and the third year at $50,000. Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, made the grant announcement from Washington, D.C.

The project will allow Dr. Hibbs and his associates to concentrate on the role of "macrophages" — resistance to cancer.

The researcher said macrophages, which are cells that engulf and destroy foreign matter, are generally being considered merely to be scavenger cells that remove foreign material and defend cells in order to maintain a constant internal environment.

However, in recent years research has suggested that the role of macrophages in body maintenance is far more complex. For example, Dr. Hibbs said it is now clear that macrophages play a critical role in defense against many infectious agents, particularly those that cause cancer and metastasize.

In addition, Dr. Hibbs work with experimental animals has established a role for macrophages in the recognition and the destruction of tumor cells.

These investigations have been funded through an award from the Veterans Administration in Washington, D.C., and are the NCI grant. "The animal work will continue, but we will use the latest NCI money to begin studies to better define the role of macrophages in resistance to human cancer," Dr. Hibbs said.

One of the techniques that will be used to accomplish this will be to keep human macrophages that have been surgically removed "alive" in the laboratory.

Petty dominates race with Yarborough second

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Richard Petty dominated the Daytona 500 race Saturday, finishing more than 100 laps ahead of Cale Yarborough at the North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Petty, winner of the Daytona 500 earlier this year, pulled off a one-lap lead with about 30 miles remaining. But it had been evident since midway through the race that only an accident could keep the Handelman, N.C. driver out of the winner's circle.

Yarborough, a Chevrolet driver from Timmonsville, S.C., earned his pole position and led 100 miles after Petty suffered a cut tire early in the race and had to make an unscheduled pit stop.

But after the 150-mile mark, Petty moved into first place when Yarborough pitted again. Yarborough's pit stop on the 107-mile banked oval track was not seriously challenged by the remainder of the field.

Hobby Allison, who edged Bobby Allison who edged

Petty in the 100-mile race, finished third in a Chevrolet. Five laps behind Petty, Charlie Glotzbach drove a Chevrolet, and Ford driver George Follmer took the fourth and fifth positions, eight laps back.

The slowest driver was Walter Ballard in a Chevrolet who was 15 laps behind Petty when he captured his sixth victory on the track.

Petty averaged 121.62 miles per hour for the race. It was a good average but there was no way to determine if it was a record speed because it was the first time the race had been 500 miles in length. The event was shortened as an energy conservation measure.

Only two caution flags were played during the race. The first came out on lap 226 of the 192-lap event when Cecil Gordon blew an engine. The other caution came out on lap 171 when Dick Skilton spun.

Today, said Petty after the race, "We had to run pretty hard just to keep up. It happened early in the race that Yarborough would win without difficulty as he grabbed a lead of more than three-fourths of a lap over the field. But he had been forced to contend with Petty due to Petty's pit problems.

The extra pit stop for Petty could have been serious but fortunately for him, the first caution flag came out just before he would have been required to make his second pit stop. After that, he managed to begin making stops along with the other leaders.

David Pearson, defending champion in the event, had to leave the race after about 90 miles in length. He was running second at the time.

The track described as a "roller coaster" during qualifying runs, caused Petty to change all four tires on pit stops instead of two. The drivers had similar problems and pit stops didn't seem to give any driver an advantage.

Garvey, who led in the Winston Cup point standings with the victory, He and Yarborough were first and second in the point list prior to the race.

Defense wins more games than the long ball, and around the national league, they'll tell you the Braves are a stronger defensive unit with Mike Lum, Dusty Baker and Ralph Garr in the outfield than when Hank Aaron was in the lineup.

Senator Tunney says players should arouse interest in bill

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., suggested Sunday that National Football League players try to arouse public interest in a bill to improve their chance for passage.

Tunney was the principal sponsor of the pending session of the NFL Players Association and told the group that his success in negotiating a new contract with NFL owners might make his bill a "must pass" bill.

The bill would eventually eliminate the reserve clause and would give a professional athlete an across the board opportunity to negotiate with any team without a buy-out clause after a contract is signed.

NEW YORK (UPI)—Profit taking and the falling health of oil and gas stocks in the government sent stock prices lower on the New York Stock Exchange Monday. Volume was light.

Stocks before noon the Dow Jones industrial average declined 6.72 to 848.20. The index had fallen 12 points the previous two days, largely because of persistent profit taking.

Losers topped gainers, 745 to 381, among the 1,317 issues traded.

Sales totaled more than 5,200,000 shares through noon, compared with 6,221,000 shares in the same period Friday.

Wall Street apparently was troubled by the economic positions of the present government in Britain, France, Germany and Italy. The Israeli government under Golda Meir also is floundering.

That concern overshadowed a sharp decline in Texas Instruments, Polaroid and American Express. President Anwar Sadat called for a meeting of Arab oil ministers next Sunday, with the lifting of the embargo at the top of the agenda.

Profit taking was heaviest in the climate group early Monday. IBM led the group.

Burroughs, Texas Instruments, Polaroid and American Express were among losers included Johnson & Johnson, Digital Equipment, Motorola and Walt Disney.

Gold mining stocks fared ahead in response to general market weakness. Some three shares of Homestake, Minnie 12, and ASA Ltd. Virginia Electric & Power led the advancers and fell 1.15 on 10,000 shares, including a 211,800 share block at 45. Parker-Hannifin was second off 1.26 on 11,400 shares.

Prices slid in very light trading on the American Exchange. Smith was the volume leader, adding 1/8 to 59 1/2 on 2,500 shares, and McDonnell-Douglas was second unchanged at 15.00 shares.

Great Basin Petroleum was third off 1/4 to 31 on 13,400 shares.

Big Board com traded with Gator off 1/4 and Atlantic Richfield, Ohio Standard Stations, Alcoa and Superior each 1/4 point or more lower. Among oil services stocks, Schlumberger dropped 3/4.

Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical and Eastman-Kodak each dropped at least a point in the chemical group. International Paper fell 1/2.

Transportation stocks joined the decline in factories, but Chesapeake System, off 1/2, stood out among lower rails. Steels, motors and electronics stocks fell in reaction.

US auto output takes nosedive

US auto output takes nosedive. General Motors Corp., which usually produces more than half of the total in January, reported a 14.2 percent drop in the first two months of 1974. Chrysler Corp. output was 110,000 units, a 10 percent drop from last year. Ford built 151,000 cars in February, down 1.8 percent from 154,000 in February of last year. The project is being developed by the Electric Power Research Institute. The conversion would allow the plant to burn a variety of fuels, including coal, oil, and gas. This would provide greater flexibility in fuel procurement and reduce the plant's dependence on coal. The project is expected to be completed by the end of the year.
