Nixon ready to aid House inquiry panel

WASHINGTON, U.S.A. — President Nixon's Watergate attorney said today the President is willing to turn over extensive material to House impeachment investigators and is prepared to answer both written and oral questions if necessary.

Attorney General E. H. Clark, however, quickly apposed a suggestion by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica that the House Judiciary Committee put off its proceedings until after completion of Watergate investigations by the Senate Select Committee.

St. Clair's disclosure of Nixon's readiness to turn over material in a public hearing called by Sirica and him decide what to do with a sealed Watergate grand jury report and a briefcase of other secret material submitted with it.

The material was said to deal with the grand jury's opinions of Nixon's handling of the scandal.

St. Clair told Sirica he had been authorized and directed by the President to pledge Nixon's cooperation with the committee inquiry.

The President is prepared to turn over to the House committee all of the material he has turned over to the grand jury without limitation and to answer the oral questions and participate in oral interviews if it becomes necessary, the President's attorney declared.

As for the sealed grand jury report, St. Clair said the President was making no recommendations to Sirica about what the committee's position should be.

He added that the committee could keep the report to the House panel.

The House Select Committee formally requested that the report and the briefcase of material be turned over to the committee.

Chairman and H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's chief of staff, were present at the hearing and sought to make recommendations to the full House to make the material available to the committee for impeachment.

St. Clair told Sirica: "The President would not be in favor of delaying the impeachment procedure."

As for turning over the sealed grand jury report, St. Clair said that whatever Sirica decided would be acceptable to the President.

The hearing was held before a capacity audience in the huge conference courtroom on the sixth floor of the federal court house where the trial of the original Watergate burglars took place 14 months ago.

Credit card users should pay own costs

Many a hardshelled and moshbacked believer in paying cash should be upset. Widespread use of credit cards has raised prices the cash customer pays.

Perhaps the difficulty may be eased through a suit which has been filed by Consumers' Union against BankAmericard and American Express.

The suit forcefully makes the point that people who pay cash are being played for the sucker.

What happens is this. Suppose the credit card user charges $100 to his credit card. By the time it is collected by the issuing agency and finally paid to the people owed, about 5 per cent is deducted to pay for the service.

That means the card customer pays $100, but the company you paid gets only $95, perhaps several months later.

Naturally, this cuts down on the margin of profit to the firm whose goods or services have been purchased if it needs cash for what it does, it has to charge $105.27 to net the same $100 after paying off the credit card company.

And what happens to the old-fashioned cash buyer? He pays more than he should to help subsidize the credit card user.

The amount of the cash customer's extra payment varies according to what percentage of all sales come from cash. In a business catering mostly to credit card users, the cash buyer would pay nearly 5 per cent more than he should. In a business seeing few credit card purchases, the extra payment would be negligible for a cash customer.

There are two equitable solutions to the problem. One is to have two different price tags on each item, in effect adding an extra charge for credit customers. This seems to be unworkable.

A better solution would be to enact legislation prohibiting credit card companies from taking their cut from the store's sale price. A store which sold goods worth $10 to a credit card customer would get the full $10 back from the credit card company.

Clearly the credit card companies would have to pass their operating costs on to the card user, a fair system.

Such legislation would not sound a death knell to credit card companies. Credit cards often provide users' convenience and security worth paying for. The person using a card for the advantages should foot the bill, not other customers.

British boycott US atom reactors

Portuguese organize
Opposition to the purchase of any American "light-water" pressurized water reactors in the British electrical generation has come from a Portuguese Union of Consumers committee, calling public demonstrations in the safety of this type of U.S. reactor.

The British report has taken the safety argument and used it to support the development of British-type gas-cooled reactors in the eve of a government decision to move heavily to atomic power generation to reduce Britain's dependence on coal and oil. If the objection is allowed to stand, it will have an impact on the purchase of American reactors by other power-hungry nations.

The big problem with the British gas-cooled reactor is that it has never worked very well, so there has been a movement toward the proven American light-water-cooled reactors now under attack because of the core melt-down controversy. Cost overruns, corrosion problems and other technical bugs have combined to stall British reactor development, even though the country was able to produce the world's first nuclear power station back in the 1950s.

The story of the British position is that it believes water-cooled reactors and goes for a continuation of gas-cooled development. It will have to seek U.S. help if it wants an efficient, successful gas model. General Atomics is a small subsidiary, has one of its high temperature gas reactors operating in Colorado.

The company has orders for six gas reactors. American Electric Power Co. is working with General Atomics on standard design for a series of giant 1,000-megawatt reactors, the largest nuclear power output of any reactor.

The San Diego-based company has been pressing for contracts to build gas reactors in Oregon and Washington. The big difference between water-cooled and a gas-cooled reactor is that the gas-cooled reactor burns carbon dioxide instead of water past the fuel rods to generate heat.

It is not exactly clear why gas-cooled technology has not caught on in this country or why having bought out Britain it was something of a bust.

A recent deal concluded between Royal Dutch Shell and Gulf Oil to press for worldwide sales of gas reactors means well now get a lot of attention. The combined assets of the two companies is $29.2 billion, or at least three times the assets of their nearest competitors in the nuclear reactor field.

But the emergence of gas-cooled reactor is no reason for the British to raise money safety arguments against water-cooled technology, so far has proved the most reliable and cheapest.

More 'no vote' reasons

Editor, Times-News:
The question has been asked, "What did the people who voted 'no' on the hospital bond issue do so with the request that our reasons be stated? No letter can hope to speak for all those 'no' voters. But here are the reasons for some of the voter refusal."

First: The bond issue was too large. That our patient services and better emergency facilities provided is probably a desirable goal. But tell us that this one county should by taxation provide a medical regional center rivaling Boise or Salt Lake is, we feel, ridiculous. May I point out that as far as we can ascertain these institutions are NOT public, tax supported institutions.

Why should this one county try to do this? Why permit Northern Idaho and Magic Valley the luxury of financial participation? Most of us are quite willing.

Second: This big facility will benefit the city of Twin Falls. I think everyone realized this. Then why doesn't the city foot the bill? So much of what is done in the country is for the benefit of the few who have.

Third: The pamphlet printed at tax expense, and circulated in early meetings to service clubs, stated clearly on the back page the amount of tax that would be levied on an average 40 acre farm. When these taxes were reviewed in your paper the amount was cut in half. Now which amount was correct? Much was

Pops concert draws applause

Editor, Times-News:
An impressive audience sharing a unique experience last Sunday afternoon when they attended the free pop concert presented at the CSI Auditorium under the very talented direction of music director Lawrence Curtis.

The concert, which featured Mary Walker and Eugene Miller as guest artists, was filled with great music encompassing the period between Jerome Kern and Three Dog Night. It was a real pleasure to see the talented young college students playing side-by-side with old timers like Reed Coulam who has been so generous with his time for the many Dilettante shows and also band concerts over the years. It was impressive to see they could handle Count Basie and Bert Bacharach with equal skill.

Mr. Curtis and all the people who must have worked many hours to put the show together are to be congratulated on their great performance. Those who failed to attend really missed something.

Vitamin E said 'good for what ails you'

By GEORGE C. THOSTERSON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteron: Please give me some information on vitamin E. What is it good for? What is it made of? On the market it looks like oil in the bottle. Is it safe?

— Mrs. A. M. —

I'll take a violent issue with your last statement. I've heard a lot about vitamin E. I'm up to her with it. And I've written multiple times in this column about it, but maybe not vehemently enough.

Vitamin E — according to its boosters — is supposed to clean out the arteries, increase sex vigor, regenerate nerve tissue, and stimulate the immune system. It's also good for the heart and circulation, tones up the arm muscles, and let's not forget about your eyes.

Sixth: Did not the defeated plan include proposed new equipment and facilities to assist doctors in their practice? Then when it was used on a tax-payer would there be any reduction in tax credit? Of course not, because it's pay twice. How about a bond issue to buy a number of very expensive pieces of farm equipment for public use so that farmers can raise better and better crops. We'll gladly sell the extra produced, but at no reduction.

There are material improvements we could make in how we live. Our public and private institutions sometimes get things the above recitation contains facetious reasoning: But voters are people and not always stupid in action. There are always two sides to any question, and surely only one side was ever presented — over and over.

If the Times-News was guilty of anything it was massive overkill. When one begins to feel beam-washing techniques, suspicions enter in.

And the threat of a $3 million bond issue next time because we shot shoddy stuff "not to $4 million" doesn't make us feel kindly disposed to the inquirer.

We are certainly not the stupid we view the proposal as unreasonable and unrealistic. Perhaps this had better be kept in mind. Yours truly, made of the tax which would be added to that on $40,000 house. Most people tried to purchase a house for that amount. Since that was the maximum amount and there was still a tax carry-over question open to review, without the conflict of amnesia I've already noted.

Third: Farmers suspected strongly that the tax placed on some of their products certainly had some bearing on the timing of this bond issue, but it insulted our intelligence when you quoted Mr. Becker in this very effect: "that this was a good opportunity time for the big push."

Fourth: West End voters will be confronted with several bond proposals long before this bond issue will be retired, we greatly fear. And that is a matter for these school districts, not all the county. But who will foot the bill, the property owner?

Fifth: If only tax payers voted on bonding proposals, a simple majority to carry the issue would perhaps be fair and reasonable. We see no justification in requiring a special tax for a bond issue being almost as mortgaging our property as a second mortgage. Some of us feel it's not the property主人's business to mortgage his livestock as security. So what is the justification for placing a mortgage on our real property if you own none?

Sears links Mitchell

(UPI) — The government started today to get to the "core" of its case against John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans, with the first testimony linking former attorney General Mitchell to Robert L. Vesco, the financier who's now a fugitive. This was done through Harry L. Sears, the former Republican majority leader of the New Jersey Senate, who told of introducing Vesco to Mitchell and of inducing Mitchell to intervene in a federal investigation of Vesco's financial dealings.

He also told how Mitchell helped get Vesco out of New Jersey, assuring him he was being well-preserved while he was investigated his finances.

Sears had been described by the defense in one of its opening statements as "being supposedly central to this conspiracy, and today the large,��faced lawyer showed in his testimony why the government considers him perhaps most important, if not most dramatic witness." Mitchell and Stans, the former attorney general, are accused of attempting to impede the investigation of Vesco by the Securities and Exchange

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Commission on the Arts has selected five resident craftsmen to work with selected public school districts in the state.

The artist-in-residence component will be sponsored by the National Endowment for the Arts, U.S. Office of Education and the artists in the schools program.

Suzanne D. Taylor, executive director of the Idaho State Commission on the Arts, said every school district in Idaho has been notified of the opportunity to secure the crafts component. Application deadline is March 15.

12 bodies of US POWs released

UTAPAO AIR BASE, Thailand (UPI) — An American transport plane flew to North Vietnam today to pick up the bodies of 12 American servicemen who died in captivity during the Indochina War.

The remains of the men, who died in the "Hanoi Hilton," a prison camp, will be flown aboard the huge C-130 cargo plane back to Ulongo and then taken to Siam Reap, Thailand, for identification before being flown to the United States.

U.S. officials said the names of the men would be released with the rest of kin notified. The flight marked the first time since the signing of the Jan. 28, 1973, cease-fire agreement that the Vietnam has given the United States permission to retrieve the remains of American war dead. While Hanoi completed releasing America's POWs by last March 28, the North Vietnamese government has talked of helping Washington track down troops missing in action and prisoners who died in captivity.

Vietnam officials have said North Vietnam has at least 1,100 members of U.S. POWs. The officials expressed hope of getting Hanoi to release them. A total of 1,064 American military personnel were listed as missing in action or captured in North Vietnam.

Rationing mandatory

By United Press International
The latest statistics from the Automobile Association of America show last week was the lowest ever for gasoline supplies, and in other gasoline-dependent areas, too.

Automobile Association of America spokesman in Saigon said last week: "We hope this is the first step in accounting for all missing in action in North Vietnam and repatriation of all remains."

Cities were short of gasoline Monday for the first time in weeks, and the AAA said shorter lines were prevalent throughout New England Tuesday evening in Boston.

But some stations have had survived the overall impact of the fuel shortage. Hartford

com., reported 80 percent of its gas stations out of business since July. The city used to have 10 filling stations and now it has only three.

Disrobed darters scored

By United Press International

More than a thousand college students of both sexes dabbled naked across campuses Tuesday night as the nation's newest "college fad" streaking gained momentum, but some authorities took a "get tough" attitude.

The biggest display of nudity was at the University of Georgia, where about 300 youths ran between dormitories in an effort to break the streaking record, apparently set in a 10-minute carnival featuring 53 participants at the University of South Carolina Monday night.

An estimated 270 men streaked around Southern Tech in Atlanta and 180 men and one woman, calling themselves the Leigh University Streaking Team (LUST), ran naked across the campus at Bethlehem, Pa. The lone female exclaimed afterwards: "I feel great and no one touched me."

One of the 175 streakers at Northwestern University was so overcome while streaking that he fell, sprained his knee and suffered a nosebleed.

Streakers were encouraged running from the Columbia University campus onto New York's Broadway.

Tuesday night and seven women were among the 45 nude runners at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. One girl took part in a streaking dash by 30 students across a street at the University of Oklahoma. About 20 youths streaked at Georgia Tech and four others did it at the University of Pittsburgh.

Emily lives her belief

By MARY BOUTON
With her husband and five children, Emily arrived one morning in a battered station wagon that left a moving van just past my house to a white metal half-block away.

I really did intend to give Emily a plate of brownies or some hot tea for coffee but somehow, this time, never seemed right. A week passed. I realized that Emily wasn't my kind. I love passengers who were gone most of the day. Her children were small and noisy, with safety pins hanging from every crease, drew across Emily's front lawn. Yet months later due to deadly interplay the conditions would spark friendship. In fact, they were disastrous.

The afternoon my son picked our car out of the shopping center. While Bruce accelerated to normal speed down the street, the mood of invasion caught a young "victim." My toes gripped the floorboard for an imaginary brake. Bruce's foot reached the road.

Dress screamed. The car shuddered on its chassis. But not soon enough. Before my eyes that didn't want to see a small boy fall, the steering column was bent.

The door of the white colonel opened, and Emily ran into our lives. Her stony figure raced over the spotty grass. Brown hair flumped across her face. Square hands clutched a flapping chocolate-streaked

Woman charged

KETCHUM — A Ketchum woman has been charged with allegedly driving while intoxicated and driving while suspended.

The woman, Dixie Lee MacEnden, 35, was arrested by Mrs. Marlene Leinenweber, Ketchum Police Department officers. She was released on her own recognition after arraignment Monday in Blaine County Magistrate Court.

Police, Bruce said, he's not dead.

"Mother," I said,

"I think I think."

Emily assured, probing him dad, comforting him at the same time. She lifted Tommy up, her arms, and started toward the house. "I'll do what the doctor says."

"We'll have to tell the police," Bruce said, evidently remembering his driver education classes.

"Oh no," Emily turned,

"that will go on your record and the accident wasn't your fault; Tommy shouldn't have been riding his brother's bike like that."

"I wondered if I had heard right. People didn't react like that."

"We did," said the police again.

"I'll be required and pay the fine," the police investigator Bruce said. "I don't think I can ever drive again."

"Of course you can, Tommy."

won't hurt bad. Your confidence will come back. Bruce shook his head. "My insurance payments will go sky-high and my paper-route barely pays for it now. He was quite discouraged.

Mr. Swaine, the insurance adjuster, arrived. He had been to the scene, had made a statement and signed it before leaving to deliver his papers. "Are you sure the boy wasn't doing more than 20?" Mr. Swaine adjusted his glasses. "Laws in the front seat," I answered coldly.

"He shrieked. "Oh, well, then the boy hit me when we're home anyway."

"A medical bill is involved and naturally the bill was ruined," I explained, "but I don't think it will come to a lot of money. The woman's very modest."

Mr. Swaine stood up. "My business demands let her know you. Wait until you see the claim." He turned and sprawled in a chair.

The deep aroma of chocolate cookies filled the kitchen. "Now, every afternoon so that the children can come in from school to that wonderful smell," explained Emily.

I sat down on an unpolished chair. "Why didn't you make a claim?" I asked. "You're entitled to it."

Emily lowered voice. "It was Bruce's fault. If I'd been watching Tommy, he never would have been on that bike." She looked up at me. "Jesus, would I have made a claim?" she added. "She passed me the words again.

"Different day, I'd ask myself, when would Jesus make me play the role to follow the boy?"

Walking home in blinding light, I studied the plate of blossoms in my hand. I knew then what kind of a woman she was.

Bruce was in the kitchen behind the open refrigerator door. I told him about Emily not filing a claim.

"No fooling," Bruce was quiet for a moment. "You know I would have her for her." She's different from him, why is she that way?

I had the answer to that question. "Because Emily loves Jesus so intensely."

"They're all alike. Like it from me. I've been in this business for years."

In a few minutes, she got out for the white colonial, leaving the alone, with the fears he'd planted in her mind. She was still there when he came back, and he was relieved to find she was still there.

"I thought I met them," he said, "but that lady's got two million. Know what she did?" He didn't wait for my reply.

She refused to put in a claim. Can you believe it? Seven-year-old Reagon (Billie) still she didn't want her mother to know we're home anyway."

"I gave her a brownie. After he drove away, I had to see Emily. She smiled when she found me there and made out a cup of coffee. She stopped by.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices opened mixed on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday. Trading was fairly active.

Shortly after the opening bell, the Dow Jones industrial average had dropped 16.6 to 347.2, where it was 137 advances, 103 declines and 341 stocks inactive on the tape.

Frequent clear signs the fall embargoes days finally are numbered, and stock prices were soaring on Tuesday. The Dow gained 45.4 to 61,242, and volume picked up to 21,988 million. Both the Dow advances and the turnover figure were the largest in two months.

Wall Street is expected to step back a bit Wednesday, and survey the landscape for Tuesday's buying material.

With oil prices still high, high on the prospects that an end to the embargo could be announced at a meeting set for next Sunday of Arab ministers.

But some profit taking would be under way,

State A-3 tourney opens at CSI Thursday

Powers contenders from the east and west and three cinderella teams form part of the field that will begin the state A-3 basketball tournament at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium Thursday afternoon.

The power is provided by the New Plymouth Pilgrims and the two district and the West Jefferson Panthers, 16-6, after district tournament completion.

The cinderella clubs are the Kimberly Bulldogs, Westside Pirates, and the Lapwai Wildcats, all of whom went into their district playoffs after only an outside chance at best and making good on it.

Kimberly (13-11) will play against Kamiah (17-8) in the quarterfinals at 1 p.m. today. New Plymouth (14-8) at 2:30 p.m. The losers of those two games meet at 3 p.m. Friday with the winners playing at 2:30 p.m.

In the first night session, West Jefferson, high located in Terreton, will take on Lapwai, the Panthers' second twice by an acceptable margin.

The round robin by teams includes:

New Plymouth, coached by Dick Dillon, now in his fifth year as head man. The Pilgrims won two conference titles and were undefeated in the district tournament in posting a 22-1 record, losing only to A3 Glens Ferry during the year.

The starting lineup includes John Ziegler, 6-3 with 19.8 points per game average; Doug White, 6-2, 19 points per game; Guards: Phil Pittman, 5-6, 10 points; and Vic Parsons, 5-6, 10 points; alternates: Ron Hawker, 5-6, and Jerry Hale, 5-7, combining for 10 points per game; and John Nickolomus, 6-6, 10 points per game. Inside relief man is junior Kelly Roper who is 6-3.

"We like to run if we can," says Coach Dillon. "I guess we're more interested than that. He rates all his players as good defensively and uses a combination of runs and man-to-man.

Westside's first defeat was to Teton High school, a loss the Panthers avenged twice by an acceptable margin.

The Twin Falls Bruins will take on the dangerous Capital Eagles at 1 p.m. today in the round robin to lead the Magic Valley teams into state tournament action.

NFL wants neutral arbitration

CHICAGO (UPI) — There are intense feelings favoring impartial arbitration and eliminating the NFL's committee system.

At a National Football League Players Association meeting, President Bill Curry rejected Tuesday.

The NFL standard players contract requires a committee of three to serve as arbitrators for all disputes, except on injury cases, and permits every team in the league to claim a player put on the waiver list.

"We have been operating under a system that's called the commissioner form of self-government. If you can imagine, the more you think about it, the more amazing it becomes that Mr. Rozelle can actually stand up and call himself a neutral when he is in fact on the payroll of one of the parties in the dispute."

Recording group to buy Tams

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Sox Records and millionaire Charles O. Finley announced Tuesday they have almost completed an agreement for Finley to sell his ABA Memphis Tams to the black soul music company.

Finley reported last week his pro basketball's worst team was in financial trouble, but neither side would discuss money publicly.

"We feel formal announcement of the sale is imminent," said Stan Lee, president Larry Shaw at the firm's headquarters here.

"We have finally resolved the differences between Mr. Finley and ourselves," Shaw said.

"The team will be fully owned and operated in the city of Memphis by the Sox organization."

The Tams had lost 51 of their 52 games going into Tuesday.

— by the Sox organization.

The A-1 meet, slated for the round robin starts in day four due to the NENCA regionals set for the ISU home Saturday, after which it will conclude Friday night.

The others get underway at 1 p.m. Thursday with the A-2ndaries, A-3rdaries at the CSI gymnasium in Twin Falls, and A-4tharies.

Wendell's crew seems to feel that Capital has a fine 18-4 mark and if New Plymouth can't do anything to hurt them, they may be beaten.

Fruthland must be reachable since the Bruins since becoming state determinants between the two. Glens Ferry defeated New Plymouth.

Wendell dropped Glens Ferry twice by narrow margins.

Matt Burns is now rated Mr.

Clifford for the Trojans having come in with the decisive win over most of Wendell's late-season close games. Kent Johnson is the best rebounder in the state, but he has had some full team wins.

He and his team have a defense and patient offense in just Snake River, which over the years has been considered a bottom-line team.

Capitan is coach this season and Wood River will be home, however, in both.

It seems like they fight their heads off just to stay in the game and then beat you at the end.

The rest of the area teams are facing unknown quantities.

Kamiah, which now has 3-13 record, after coming from 1-12 last year, is the best team in the state.

Jim Pickett, the 6-2 leader, is still in contention. Camas County is also in line of its success in strong rebounding. Holland Weeks, Layne Osborne, and Leon Leifer are generally provide it.

Supply backlog hits beef mart

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Consumers may not get promised increases in meat supplies next summer and fall unless a current "backlog" in beef is moved off the market quickly to allow cattle prices to rise, a spokesman for cattlemen said today.

Gordon Van Vleck, president of the American National Cattlemen's Association (ANCA), added, in a statement, that cattlemen were urged to step up special price cuts of 50 cents per head of beef in the next few weeks to move the temporary glut in supplies. At current cattle prices, producers are paying considerably more for the corn they feed their stock are lasting 10 cents on every pound they produce and have lost nearly $1 billion since last September, the official said.

Van Vleck blamed the problem partly on the temporary drop in beef marketing during the independent truckers strike. The strike had delayed the meat pipeline, which was beginning to return to normal after last year's price freeze.

Van Vleck said there is a possibility that currently depressed cattle prices will discourage the movement of added stock into feedlots.

That could mean a drop in beef supplies in late summer and fall, he said, and could wipe out the leveling-off in prices which administrators of the federal price support system hope for a general easing of food inflation later this year.

Fertilizer transport search on

WASHINGTON (UPI)

Renewed efforts are needed to find a means of transporting anhydrous ammonia from Alaska to the West Coast, according to Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho.

McClure said he would reevaluate his efforts after what he termed a "dismaying aspect" from the Massachusetts.

He said a ship the firm had thought could be equipped to transport the chemical in its liquid form could not be equipped as had been thought.

We are now pursuing other leads for other possible carriers so that the needs of Northwest agriculture can be met," he said.

McClure is the chief sponsor of an amendment to the Jones Act that would specifically exempt anhydrous ammonia from the requirement that goods from domestic ports be carried exclusively by U.S. flagships.

Milk costs up 50 cents

BOISE (UPI)—The cost of milk has increased by 50 cents per gallon since last year, with the exception of raw milk.

Boise Valley stores cited milk prices ranging from a high of $1.65 a gallon to a low of $1.12 per gallon.

Other stores quoted similar figures, with stores averaged around $1.10 to $1.12 per gallon for processed milk.

Only one store in the Boise area was found to stock raw milk, which still sells for $1.12 per gallon, Frank W. Krone, general manager of the Daughters of the Creamery Association explained the increase in milk prices as the effect of rising costs in the production of milk.

Sisters offer reward

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The sisters of missing balloonist Thomas L. Hatch offered a $10,000 reward today for his recovery alive or for information leading to his recovery.

Eleanor Hogan and Nancy Swanson of Rochester, Minn., placed their resources to establish the reward in a special account in a Washington bank, where William Amstutz, an associate who helped Hatch prepare his craft, "Light Heart."

The money would be shared equally if two or more persons qualified for the reward said William Taylor of the Washington law firm of Schles Greenbaum and Taylor, which is representing the women.

Amstutz, 34, of Marysville, Wash., Feb. 10 attempting the world's first transcontinental voyage. He was last seen Feb. 21 in a television freighter almost 1,000 miles from the Canary Islands. Officials believed he was heading toward the Spanish shore.
