Israeli and Syrian forces must be in their new cease-fire line positions by Wednesday under the accord engineered by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.
Responding to Israeli air attacks against guerrillas in Lebanon, Lebanese Foreign Minister Fead Naffa, meanwhile, called upon a meeting of 37 Moslem nations in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to force Israel to respect all U.N. resolutions.

Dream aided searcher
MINIDOKA — A psychic dream was responsible for locating a lost Pocatello boy, the "finder" said.
Gerald Sturm, 25, Blackfoot, found the body of Jeff Hodgson, 11, Thursday in the desert about 15 miles northeast of Minidoka. The boy had been missing since June 10 when he was separated from a desert survival training group under the supervision of the Department of Community and Environmental Services.
Blaine County Coroner Jay Butler said the boy had been dead as long as eight days before his body was located. Sturm said he felt he was "guided" to the body by a dream he had Tuesday night. He said he was unable to get to the area where the boy was until Thursday because of lack of transportation.
Sturm said he concentrated before going to sleep on the location of the body after hearing reports of the search. He said he knew he would find the boy when he came to the area which looked like the terrain he had seen in his dream. He walked directly to the body about 2.5 miles from Split Butte, where the boy was last seen alive.
Other volunteer searchers went in another direction. Sturm came upon the body about 100 yards from the spot.
Sturm said Saturday he has had other "smaller experiences" with psychic phenomena but this was the first time it really came up so significantly.
He said he has studied under a German clairvoyant in Modesto, Calif., to help develop his powers. (Continued on p. 6)

26 in 'Gate coverup
(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The special Watergate prosecutors have decided that at least 26 persons, ranging from President Nixon to the original Watergate burglars, conspired to cover up the Watergate break-in, a number of sources disclosed Saturday.
Seven of the alleged co-conspirators were indicted this spring, Friday, the sources said, but prosecutors gave defense counsel in the cover-up case the right to interview co-conspirators.
Nixon's name was on the list, as has already been reported; since the grand jury that investigated the cover-up voted to name him as an unindicted co-conspirator.
In addition, several sources said, the list included Herbert W. Kalinbach, the President's personal lawyer; John W. Dean, 3d, the President's former counsel; Jig Stuart MacGregor, the deputy director of the Committee to Re-Elect the President; and various other former campaign aides.
It also includes the names of the seven original defendants in the Watergate burglary case, each of whom was convicted either at trial or by guilty plea for his role in the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate complex here. (Continued on p. 9)

Gem GOP likes foreign gains

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer
SUN VALLEY — After a more sweeping resolution of praise failed, Idaho Republicans commended President Nixon on his foreign policy Saturday.
The action was taken at the state Republican convention held in Sun Valley Friday and Saturday.
By an 18-20 vote, a resolution citing the President's overseas successes and giving a general commendation failed in the resolutions committee. But in a special meeting Saturday morning the committee approved an alternate resolution to commend the President "for his sincere and dedicated efforts in the cause of world peace."
(Related stories, p. 7)
The resolution was unanimously adopted along with several other uncontroversial measures by the convention as a whole later in the day.
In a 10-11 vote, the convention turned down a proposal endorsing an initiative which called for the repeal of the state's approval of the Equal Rights Amendment. The ERA was adopted by the state legislature in 1971 and since then has been subject to two unsuccessful legislative attempts to repeal it.
Friday the resolutions committee had almost unanimously accepted the resolution supporting an initiative to reconsider ERA.
The convention took no stand on the Sunshine Initiative which calls for disclosure of campaign contributions and for registration of lobbyists.
Friday the resolutions committee did itself of the issue by rejecting a proposal neutral to the initiative and then tabling a proposal critical of it.
Both measures had endorsed the "concept" of campaign disclosure. The convention itself considered no further proposals on the Sunshine Initiative.
College Republicans were disappointed when the convention strongly voted "20-for-1" to not endorse the student's initiative for a state spring presidential primary.
David Warnick, chairman of the Idaho College Republicans, said the initiative would attract presidential candidates to Idaho by setting up a primary election on the same day as such elections are held in Oregon and Nevada. (Continued on p. 13)

Party control scored

SUN VALLEY (UPI) — Failure of a spring presidential primary initiative at the Idaho Republican convention Saturday shocked and appalled "its originator."
Delegates voted the proposal down 22-10.
David Warnick, chairman of the presidential primary initiative, told United Press International he feels the vote is an indication of the right-wing control of the Idaho GOP.
He said the college Republican club "are interested in the possibility of bringing court action to force reappointment of the convention" because of the outcome.
Warnick said the right-wing element in the party is opposed to the presidential primary because "Ronald Reagan has the delegation sewn-up" and conservatives in the party are afraid a primary might take away some of that support.
He criticized Mike Franklin, Boise, an aide to Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy, for speaking out in opposition to the proposal. (Continued on p. 7)

Red gunfire hits convoy
PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist mortar and rocket fire hit five ships in a sevenship ammunition and rice convoy Saturday on the Mekong River 33 miles southeast of the Phnom Penh military sources said.
The convoy moving upriver from South Vietnam came under fire at Beam Chor and one ship, named Part Sun II, was hit at least five times, the sources said.
Two crewmen seriously wounded in the attack were put ashore three miles further upstream at the ferryboat town of Neak Fga and rushed to a Phnom Fga hospital.
The convoy was enroute to Phnom Penh from Vung Tau, a South Vietnamese port on the South China 40 miles southeast of Saigon.

No secret Soviet missile accords, Henry says
(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Kissinger, without informing Congress, made at least two secret arrangements with Soviet leaders in 1972 on the number of strategic nuclear missiles on each side, administration officials said Saturday.
The secret arrangements concerned the interim agreement, expiring in 1977, that mutually limits offensive nuclear missile launchers. It does not concern the treaty, signed in Moscow at the same time in May, 1972, that restricted defensive missile systems.
Kissinger, according to sources, gave private assurances to Soviet officials that the United States did not intend to build the maximum number of missiles permitted by the interim agreement.
The arrangement was disclosed to a Senate committee Friday in closed session. Congressional sources said, by Paul H. Nitze, who resigned last week as a member of the American negotiating team for the arms talks. But the Congress has yet to be informed of the first arrangement.
Saturday, Kissinger branded as "totally without merit or any foundation whatever" allegations he had made secret arrangements with Soviet leaders about strategic nuclear missile launcher numbers.
Kissinger said he "is prepared to address this issue at a press conference Monday and at his appearance before the arms control subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee Monday."
Kissinger asked about Nitze's testimony before a Senate armed services subcommittee, said that he had explained this matter to the subcommittee and it is based on "classified information." "That view must be based on a misapprehension of the negotiations by some of the witnesses."
Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the subcommittee, said last Friday, "I don't think it will upset the balance of power but the numbers represent a substantial alteration of the agreement as represented to the Congress." (Continued on p. 9)

Labor parlay goes on

HURLEY — Negotiations between the J. R. Simplot Co. and the Grain Millers Union are making progress, according to union officials. The officials at the union headquarters in Turley said Saturday that they had no details on the subjects being discussed but that a "healthier attitude" was being displayed in negotiating sessions.

Company and union negotiators met Friday and Saturday in Boise to try to settle the labor dispute which led to the two-month-old strike at the Caldwell and Heyburn Simplot plants.

There had been no meetings since June 4 when "slight progress on non-economic issues" was made.

Both plants have returned to partial production since the strike closed them May 2. Company officials said Thursday they expected to finish the year's production run the second week of July.

The plants were reopened with the help of new employees, many of them high school graduates expected to start school for the summer, and returned union workers, according to company officials.

Soviet embassy picketed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chanting "Russia go to hell," 1,500 Ukrainian-Americans marched to the Soviet embassy Saturday to protest the imprisonment of Ukrainian intellectuals by the Soviet Union. Local police and the Executive Protection Service arrested nine persons on charges of disorderly conduct and demonstrating within 500 feet of a foreign embassy when the crowd stopped and some protesters attempted to throw rocks at the building.

Police officers were splattered with the dye when they stopped the demonstrators.

The demonstration began peacefully in a park commemorating the 19th century Ukrainian poet Taras Shevchenko and was orderly until the marchers reached the embassy.

Jeremiah, friends get walking papers

DENVER (UPI) — Every morning as the sun rises over Cook Street, so does the voice of Jeremiah, his feet sometimes oiled, and looking forward to a plate of eight hard-boiled eggs for breakfast.

Hazel Matthews' neighbors get up too, awakened by Jeremiah and the woman's 49 other cackling and crowing roosters and hens crowing in her backyard.

Mrs. Matthews' neighbors want the chickens out so they can sleep.

The chickens do not care what happens to the chickens as long as they're moved.

County Judge Anthony Greco says if the chickens aren't gone by Aug. 7, it will cost Mrs. Matthews another $100.

"I wouldn't take $7000 for Jeremiah," said Mrs. Matthews. "I don't know why they are picking on me, but I do want to tell you how much I love Jeremiah."

Angry neighbors took Mrs. Matthews to county court last December. She was fined $50 and told to get rid of the chickens. On June 12, she was back in court and fined $100 by Greco.

Hospital, sheriff argue on patient confinement

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — A disagreement has developed between Valley Memorial Hospital and the county sheriff involving a prisoner chained to his hospital bed.

The hospital wants the sheriff to provide an around-the-clock guard for the patient who is accused of setting a fire which killed a Twin Falls man.

But Sheriff Paul Corder believes the four-foot chain-linking the patient to his hospital bed provides satisfactory security. The sheriff says a guard would be too expensive, and unnecessary.

The patient, Jerome Cree, is being treated for burns.

Cree's attorney, Rudy Barchas is in the middle; he objects to the chain but believes requiring an expensive guard might cause his client to be released from the hospital before medically advisable.

A request to see Cree was denied the Times-News by the sheriff's department.

Hospital administrator James Rosenbaum said a guard is needed. If the crime warrants the charge, then law officials should provide an around-the-clock guard, he said. "We can't turn our back on that feeling," he added.

In addition, there's the humanitarian feeling. When Cree was under the custody of Twin Falls police, a guard was provided. With the change in custody to the sheriff, the chain replaced the guard.

The nurses treating Cree reportedly were upset with the new arrangement and discussed the problem with the hospital administration and attorney. But the nurses realize Cree is under arrest, and one said, they're going to try to "make the best out of a bad situation."

The chain apparently doesn't hinder treatment by doctors. Cree's burns are on his legs. But a sheriff's deputy is called, about three or four times a day, when Cree needs his gown changed or bathroom privileges.

"Even with the chain, he can sit up or stand near the bed. He's quite mobile," a nurse said. The hospital has the key to Cree's handcuffs in case he needs to be evacuated for any reason.

Cree's room, in the middle of the children's ward, is reserved for any violent or problem cases and can be locked.

Sheriff Paul Corder is on the other side. "Our policy, if it's at all possible, is to use a chain," he said. He added he had "tried to get them to just lock him in the room," but that solution was unacceptable to the hospital.

Corder said a chain had been used in the past when a person under arrest needed hospital treatment. He said he had received no complaints of medical complications caused by the chains from doctors or nurses treating Cree. If he did, he would consider a change, and he added, "If it was hurting the man, I'd be the first to change."

As for the charge warranting a guard, Corder commented the charge doesn't equal conviction, and said to his best knowledge, Cree didn't have any crimes on his record.

In addition, the sheriff said in his judgment, Cree did not present a danger to hospital employees or patients.

According to Rosenbaum, the hospital has no problems so far with Cree. But if there were "any change" in the situation, Corder said, "sure, we'd put a guard on." If he were a different man with a different record, he might have a guard, the sheriff said.

A 24-hour guard would cost money, and be difficult to maintain, according to the sheriff. He estimated it would cost $50 a day. Because the department is short of manpower, an extra man, probably an off-duty officer, would be hired. And Corder said it's "hard to get off-duty officers work around the clock."

The sheriff maintained "the fellow himself doesn't resent the chain," and said if he were in the same situation, "I'd just as soon have a chain as have a guard sitting there."

"Why just throw the taxpayers money away by setting a man up there that doesn't want to be there in the first place," he asked.

Attorney Barchas, appointed as a public defender, said, "They're as humane with the handcuff as they can be." The cuff is loose and Cree's wrist bandaged to avoid rubbing. The cuff is changed to a different hand often.

The chain is not physically hurting his wrist, Barchas said, but it is "psychologically damaging." "I'm treating us of the Middle Ages where they chain people to walls."

"I know he doesn't like it," Barchas added. But at the same time, the attorney said, "he can appreciate the sheriff's position. I can appreciate that the sheriff has to do something to assure that he doesn't escape custody."

With the cost of a 24-hour guard constantly nagging, Barchas said, he would be afraid Cree released from the hospital before medically ready. "The alternative is he might end up in jail and not get the treatment he needs," Barchas said.

When jailed from the hospital, Cree will be taken to jail unless he can raise $30,000 for bond. "They're not skimping on his care. I would rather this. He needs doctors more than guards," Barchas said.

Miss Beckstead will live with the Hipolito Viveros family during her stay in South America and will attend school with one of their five children, a girl of the same age.

She will spend a day in New York City attending orientation sessions with other AFS exchange students who also will spend their summer in South America.

The exchange student will be honored with a bon voyage open house from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bakler.

She has been active in the AFS exchange program during the past several years and is the second local student from Twin Falls High School to go abroad. The first was Ellen Toolson who was on the summer program to Argentina.

Beverly has been practicing her Spanish for at least an hour daily. She will return to the United States Aug. 20 in time to complete her senior year at Twin Falls High School.

Demo hopeful campaigns in area

TWIN FALLS — "I'm in the race for Lieutenant Governor here," said "I love Idaho," key Rigby, candidate for the Democratic nomination for this office, told a group of supporters here Friday.

Rigby, who served eight years in the Idaho Senate, is senior member of the law firm of Rigby, Thatcher and Andrus of Rigby. He is also engaged in farming and livestock raising.

Rigby, stopping here on a campaign tour of southern Idaho, told the group he is "enjoying" the campaign because it gives me a chance to see "our great state, visit with Idaho people; and I think this is something every Idahoan should do," see Idaho first.

"I'm impressed with the majesty of the state... our clear streams, smogless skies, sweet smelling air. We must keep it this way for our generation and for those who will come after us."

"We have some areas now where this description does not apply. We must never let it get out of hand and our people are making progress in cleaning up our air and water."

Rigby noted that the most pressing problem facing Idaho and the nation is inflation. "This deadly virus," Rigby noted, "attacks every Idaho citizen, especially the senior citizen on a fixed income or inadequate pension. We must control it."

ANOTHER STICKY WICKET

Skeptics question detente

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — When President Nixon arrives in Moscow Thursday for another round of summitry with Soviet leaders, he will be leaving behind a Congress deeply absorbed by the question of impeachment and increasingly skeptical of detente.

The conclusion of any comprehensive agreement on nuclear weapons is unlikely. But it is possible that Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger could work out a more limited agreement with the Russians.

Negotiators reportedly are working on possible agreements concerning multiple nuclear warheads and a partial test ban on underground nuclear explosions.

Whatever the outcome, any substantive arms agreement will require the approval of Congress. And that may prove difficult.

Many members of Congress are worried about the course of detente. Some are disenchanted with the outcome of the first round of the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT I). Others are concerned by recent Soviet advancements in nuclear weaponry and military initiatives in the Middle East and Indian Ocean.

Finally, there is Watergate. Several members of Congress have called on the President to cancel his planned trip to Moscow because of impeachment proceedings. Others are worried that the domestic scandals may weaken Nixon's hand during negotiations.

Congress already has made it clear it will not serve as a rubber stamp for detente. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., known on Capitol Hill as the watchdog of detente, successfully has led congressional opposition to granting the Soviets trade concessions until the Russians agree to relax their restrictive emigration policies.

So far this year, both the House and Senate have turned back all attempts to limit SALT II "bargaining chip" weapons programs, such as the B-1 bomber, the Trident submarine and projects to increase U. S. missile accuracy and destructive capability.

According to the chairman of a House subcommittee on arms control and disarmament — Democrat Charles H. Wilson of California — the series of defeats is "a strong indication the House of Representatives wants to leave our negotiators in as strong a bargaining position as possible."

House Armed Services Committee Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D-Ia., agreed. "We can't negotiate a bargain unless we have strength," he said. "The Russians understand our language and our one, and that's strength."

With a permanent comprehensive agreement apparently out of reach at this point, the administration has been concentrating on a limited agreement on multiple independently targeted reentry vehicles (MIRVs) — re-entry vehicles containing several warhead packages capable of separating widely and striking different targets.

The United States already has deployed MIRVs on parts of its strategic missile force. The Soviets have flight-tested MIRVs on several of the heavy missiles it is now developing. Once deployed, according to the Defense Department, they could pose a serious threat.

According to experts on Capitol Hill, there may be an agreement in Moscow on a limited test ban treaty on underground nuclear tests. One House committee staffer said negotiators appeared to be working "feverishly" on it and a Senate aide said he had heard "rumors all over town" that they were working the matter out.

One critic attributed the speed-up activity on a test ban to the lack of progress at SALT II and the need to get something signed in Moscow.

If agreement is reached on a test ban, it may be a threshold rather than a comprehensive threshold agreement, with a limit on the size and number of tests that could be conducted.

But a move is underway to push for a comprehensive test ban. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has charged that a threshold treaty would be seen by many nations as "continued hypocrisy by the superpowers. Once again, they will see the U. S. and the Soviet Union urging others to accept a treaty that enables the superpowers to maintain their own below-threshold development programs."

Kennedy, joined by 45 other senators, has sponsored a resolution urging an immediate U. S.-Soviet suspension of underground nuclear testing and a permanent comprehensive test ban treaty. The Senate voted on the resolution before the upcoming summit.

The unmeasurable factor in all the negotiations is Watergate. Opinions on the scandal's effect vary widely. The administration repeatedly has denied that SALT II negotiations in Geneva have been affected by problems in Washington.

But such reassurances have failed to allay the fears of some on Capitol Hill. One House committee staffer describes the mood of the House as "one of caution" because of Watergate, and predicts that any SALT II agreement will be "reluctantly" obtained by Congress.

Several members of Congress have called for the President to abandon his plans for the June summit. Sen. James E. Buckley, Cons.-R. N. Y., has strongly recommended against a presidential trip to Moscow while impeachment proceedings are still in progress.

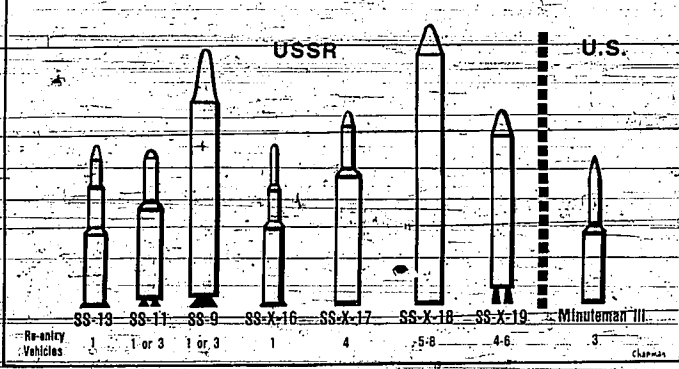

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has warned that "unless the substantive articles of SALT II accord are known prior to the visit and receive widespread approval by a relevant cross-section of the congressional leadership," the President should not go.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., has introduced several resolutions to curtail President Nixon's foreign policy activities during the period between a House decision to impeach and a Senate vote. One would bar concluding international agreements; another would prohibit official trips abroad.

Armed Services Chairman Hebert said the Watergate scandal had affected the SALT II negotiations. Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., said he had discussed the issue with Kissinger, and others who said that it was "remarkable that Watergate has had so little effect on SALT."

In a congressional move to offset linkage of the SALT II negotiations with Watergate, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., and Mathias sent a letter to Kissinger April 10 expressing their view that "the Congress and the American people remain willing to support good negotiations leading to strategic arms limitations and reductions between the Soviet Union and the United States."

Comparison of U.S. and Soviet ICBMs

Nuclear issue ignored

By Congressional Quarterly

"We have this unbelievable capacity for destroying the world" — and no one is really looking at the issue, according to Sen. Stuart Symington, R-Mont.

"The Hiroshima bomb... was 14 kilotons. One lighter plane got 85 Frankfort today — one little lighter plane — could drop 700 kilotons on Moscow," Symington said in a wide-ranging interview on SALT II, nuclear energy and modern weaponry.

Symington regards nuclear energy as "the most important subject in the world." And, according to the 72-year-old senator, "the sadness in the picture is the lack of knowledge on the part of the people about the risks playing with when they play with nuclear energy."

After nearly 22 years in the Senate, Symington is one of its leading authorities on national security. He is the ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee and was a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, and the Joint Atomic Energy Committee. Before he came to the Senate, he served as assistant secretary of the air war department and secretary of the Air Force.

"It has never been gotten over to the people — Instead, it has been hidden for reasons I have never been able to understand — the true importance of the change in concepts of defense as a result of nuclear weaponry," Symington says.

"They've sort of gotten the American people feeling that what we're talking about are dynamite sticks that can blow up a dam."

Symington says that twice during his Senate career, he has attempted to prod the Armed Services into investigating the question of modernizing nuclear weapons, but both times the chairman refused because of the secrecy surrounding the issues. "We've never been interested in the subject. And I think it's a disgrace, an absolute disgrace."

The first paper probing nuclear weapons "in the history of the world," according to the senator, were held by two Foreign Relations subcommittees in early April.

Symington is deeply concerned over nuclear proliferation and its consequences. He believes the United States and Soviet Union could play: "I can't see why there's all this fighting. If they can knock us off and we can knock them off and together both of us could have some influence on the other nuclear powers; why can't we hurry up and really get to work and work this thing out because pretty soon it won't make much difference."

But he holds little hope for success at the current round of SALT. After SALT I, Congress approved an amendment offered by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and accepted by the administration requesting that any future permanent treaty on offensive nuclear weapons "not limit the United States to levels of intercontinental strategic forces inferior" to those of the Soviets.

In Symington's view, this amendment failed to take into account the U.S. advantage in strategic bombers and forward-based aircraft and was, in effect, a demand for superiority rather than equality. "The Soviets will never give it to us again."

Key decision should be open

Editor, Times-News:

Doesn't it seem strange that the Twin Falls City Council would make a decision that would affect many long-time citizens and ever so faithful workers in another of their closed-door special called meetings, instead of bringing such an important issue up for discussion during the appropriate time, during the council meeting as designed for such purposes.

It seems we have a City Council that professes only lip service to democracy. They will not give the same privileges to our city employees as the use of democracy and the right to vote, for why they wish to represent them at a bargaining table? It seems the City Council wants to reserve this right to have democracy along with the right to vote for themselves.

It seems once again that the city council is resorting to the old adage, that democracy is only for those who have it, but damned hard for others to get.

What is strange that the city fathers could not have had enough wisdom and foresight to have realized the needs of the city employee's before it became too late for a sensible solution.

I for one say "Hooryay" for the Teamsters Union and the men who represents them. It is they that the presidential initiative didn't take the alternatives that have been offered by the state of the national parties but have come up with a unique way of handling Idaho's potential presidential primary.

The college Republicans in their presidential primary initiative have considered the many facets and problems that are present in Idaho's politics and have come up with a measure which gives a voice in every election.

The net calls for the proportional allocation of delegates to national conventions will, twenty percent of the delegates coming directly from the convention and thereby being uncommitted.

By being proportional, they insured that the supporters of any candidates don't pick up their numbers and go home if they lose, as sometimes

It becomes a sad and disheartening situation, when the leaders of our city do not have the guts or fortitude, to stand before a man and tell, or take a vote in front of him, but have to resort to the shameful tactics they have used before by reading letters and leaving room for no further discussion on the matter.

Again I say SHAME-SHAME on the City Fathers that have become so soft involved in their own suspicions that they have closed the door, and care not for the needs of the working man and his family, whose only desire is to have a union.

Perhaps the IHR Association, or the American Medical Association, or the Insurance Association, take some consideration when charging the under-paid worker when they become clients or patients.

I say the residents of Twin Falls should get behind the striking city employees to see that they are not railroaded by our city manager or City Council for demanding equal rights and the right to have a union representation.

The City manager has now threatened them with job loss if they do not bow down to his wishes.

I as a taxpayer do not feel democracy belongs to only one group but to all, and I am desirous to see the city employees having a union election that they have asked for.

The City manager has now threatened them with job loss if they do not bow down to his wishes.

Buhl report draws blast

Editor, Times-News:

Your front page story of June 14 regarding the tragic accident and death of the little Lopez girl is in my opinion a classic example of irresponsibility reporting.

The reputation of a highly dedicated professional man has been wrongly damaged to provide distasteful sensationalism for a news story.

You are surely aware by now that Dr. Cullings did most certainly examine the child and finding the required treatment beyond the capabilities of his office wisely sent her by the most expeditious way to the closest hospital where she could be surgically treated if there was to be any chance of saving her life.

Any delay in waiting for an ambulance or police escort simply would have reduced her chances of survival by that much.

I operated the ambulance service in Buhl until 1968 and during that time had many opportunities to see how Dr. Cullings performed in emergencies. He never hesitated one moment in responding to the medical needs of anyone, regardless of the time or situation.

We in Buhl feel mighty lucky to have such a dedicated physician in our midst. He is one of the last of a vanishing breed of down to earth, dedicated family doctors.

Primary initiative endorsed

Editor, Times-News:

The citizens of Idaho are being given the chance this spring to increase their voice and influence in the selection of the President of the United States.

The presidential primary initiative didn't take the alternatives that have been offered by the state of the national parties but have come up with a unique way of handling Idaho's potential presidential primary.

The college Republicans in their presidential primary initiative have considered the many facets and problems that are present in Idaho's politics and have come up with a measure which gives a voice in every election.

By being proportional, they insured that the supporters of any candidates don't pick up their numbers and go home if they lose, as sometimes happens in a winner-take-all system.

By including the twenty per cent allocation to the parties they insured that Idaho's delegations aren't excluded from decisions on rules, regulations, platforms and the other business that the conventions conduct other than the selection of the presidential candidates.

I hope that the registered voters of Idaho will see the wisdom and potential held in the presidential primary initiative and will join the ranks of Gov. Cecil Andrus, Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy, Congressman Orval Hansen, US Senator Frank Church, State Senators John Daavoy, Vernon Haversant and John Barker, and Legislator William Roberts as well as many other leading citizens of Idaho.

IRS closes Nixon probe, cites cooperation lack, inconsistency

(C) New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee heard evidence Friday that the Internal Revenue Service had closed its investigation of President Nixon for possible tax fraud in the wake of an incomplete examination of his case.
 The evidence, according to committee members, showed that tax agents had not interrogated Nixon and that the committee's review of internal revenue, Donald C. Alexander, had found many omissions in the testimony of key witnesses.

Alexander sent a letter last April 2 to Leon Jaworski, the special Watergate prosecutor, stating that "We have been unable to complete the processing of this matter in view of the lack of cooperation of some of the witnesses and because of the inconsistencies in the testimony of individuals presented to the service."
 In his letter, Alexander recommended that a grand jury consider whether a crime had been committed in the preparation of the President's tax returns.

A spokesman for Jaworski declined comment and would not confirm whether or not the special prosecutor was investigating the preparation of Nixon's returns. Atty. Gen. William B. Saxby has said that he referred that investigation to Jaworski.

Government sources said, however, that there was no indication that Jaworski had ruled out further examination of whether the President had committed fraud.

The day after Alexander's letter was written, Nixon announced that he had been assessed and would pay $132,787.13 in back taxes and declared, "The report by the Internal Revenue Service rebuts any suggestion of fraud on the part of the President."
 Alexander's letter contained no such conclusion, and instead said that the fraud issue could not be determined on the basis of the evidence assembled by the tax agency.

Friday afternoon, the Judiciary committee received a staff report on the President's ordering of a secret bombing campaign over Cambodia beginning in 1969 and on the falsified reporting system used, with the President's knowledge, to hide the campaign from Congress and the public.

The session was the 18th and final closed hearing on evidence gathered by the "Impeachment Inquiry staff."
 The committee will begin a series of public meetings next week to determine how to pursue the impeachment investigation with a view toward completing the inquiry sometime next month.

Many committee members seemed stunned by disclosures that the examination of the President's taxes had been so incomplete and incomplete likely that the panel would pursue the matter further.

Earlier, the Congressional Joint committee on internal affairs had looked into Nixon's taxes.

Madrid July 9. — After three months of negotiations, the United States and Spain agreed Saturday on a declaration of principles similar to the new NATO guidelines, smoothing the way toward a renewal of ties on U.S. military bases.

A State Department spokesman said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Spanish officials will sign the unprecedented declaration on principles of military, political and economic cooperation in Madrid July 9.

After that, the two nations will begin negotiations for renewal of the agreements that make Spain a major overseas outpost of U.S. nuclear power, with a nuclear submarine base at Rota, a Strategic Air Command base at Torrejon and a smaller air base at Moron. The agreements, announced today, will expire this year, but Saturday's announcement seemed to make their renewal likely.

Sea law meet success unlikely

CARACAS (UPI) — United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said Saturday he doubts that the present law conference in the Venezuelan capital will be able to draw up an international constitution for the oceans.
 He said he considers another conference in Vienna next year to conclude discussions on the problems involved which he called "very complex and very difficult."
 Waldheim spoke to newsmen scheduled to last two weeks. Disputes over voting procedures in the following have so far held up work at the meeting.

US gas use sets record during '73

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gasoline consumption in the United States hit a new record in 1973 despite a supply crisis, the president of the American Petroleum Institute (API) said Saturday.
 Frank N. Icard said Americans used 106 billion gallons of gasoline last year or 4.3 per cent more than in 1972. The increase was a slight drop from the 5.5 per cent rise in 1972.
 Nearly 10 per cent of gasoline consumption occurred in California, Texas, New York, Ohio and Illinois also were among the leaders.
 Every state except Kansas showed an increased gasoline demand, Kansas demand declined 1.2 per cent.
 Icard said gasoline consumption increased 65 per cent from 1963 to 1973 and warned that "we can't afford to go on burning up our fuel supplies as if there were no tomorrow."
 He said Americans should continue fuel conservation measures applied during the Arab oil embargo last winter.
 "The truth is that this country had a serious energy situation before the embargo and it is even worse now because we are heavily dependent on imported oil, which costs more than it did a short time ago."

Files suit

ACTOR — Carroll O'Connor, who portrays Archie Bunker on television, sued the production company that makes "All in the Family" for $83,000 Friday. He charged that Tandem Productions held up payment of $45,000 for reruns and "locked" him $10,000 for being off work for a week because he was ill — UPIH.

Tests show student lag

MIAMI (UPI) — A nationwide survey shows American students who are black, poor or live in the Southeast lag behind national levels in basic learning and educational skills.
 The results, contained in a 22-page report compiled by the National Assessment of Educational Progress over a five-year period, were released here this week at the annual meeting of the Education Commission of the States.
 The report focuses on seven areas — reading, writing, science, music, citizenship, social studies and literature. Findings in three other areas — mathematics, art and civics and occupational development — will be released later this year and in 1975.

Lease path clear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Spain agreed Saturday on a declaration of principles similar to the new NATO guidelines, smoothing the way toward a renewal of ties on U.S. military bases.
 A State Department spokesman said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Spanish officials will sign the unprecedented declaration on principles of military, political and economic cooperation in Madrid July 9.

Dream called key to finding youth

 "It was not really in doing it, I was just an instrument," Sturm said. "I am thankful I could do something to relieve the suffering of the mother."
 Sturm said he had not known of a similar dream by a Boise man until the day he found the body. He said reports of the other dream matched the situation exactly.
 He called his experience "quite an extraordinary thing." He said his powers "kind of scared me at first."
 The body was a fraud which had been used by searchers in four-wheel drive vehicles and trail machines but it was behind a large rock making sighting from the road impossible.
 The pathologist who performed the autopsy, Dr. Edward Fisher-Poentello, said his final report will not be finished until next week. Search authorities would not speculate on the exact cause or time of death. An investigation into the survival training program on the incident involving the boy being held is being conducted by an assistant attorney general, Don Burriel. His report is expected to be released this week.

The search for the Hodgson boy was officially called off last Thursday, but 100 persons had been involved in the official search. Tracking dogs, helicopters and a professional tracker were used without success. One volunteer searcher died June 15 following a heart stroke.
 The youth was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hodgson and one of three children in the family. The couple has a girl, 4, and a boy, 8.

Big government primary issue, Idaho GOP told

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News Writer

MRS. GOLDWATER
... values top issue

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — Big Government, not Watergate, is the primary issue facing voters, two speakers at the Idaho Republican convention said.

Keynote speaker, Mrs. Harry Goldwater Jr., said, "the real issue of the 1974 campaign is the total disintegration of our value system brought about by too much reliance on the federal government."

Watergate, she said, is "only symbolic of a generation of Americans who had somehow forgotten the principles this country was founded on."

Mrs. Goldwater cited a survey showing a minority of college students consider morality, religion and patriotism important. "The decline of values brought about by big government has created a 'Watergate mentality,'" she said. "We have an issue. It is the restoration of values and ethics after 40 years of onslaught by liberal egg-heads who have been preaching 'doing their thing' and don't worry because 'Dad Sam will always bail you out.'"

She said rumors of the Republican party's death are greatly exaggerated, but she added, "one thing that is not exaggerated is what will happen to our great country if we don't hold our own in the Congress this November."

Banquet speaker Rep. Phillip Crane, R-Ill., said "The virtually disappeared; they have been replaced by crises, Crane said. To save the nation from crisis is often good politics, he said.

"Doomsday prophets" who speak of running out of oil, coal, gas or other natural resources may not be seeing far enough ahead, he maintained. Shortages have occurred in the past but were solved by "miraculous contributions (which) could not be envisioned before they were invented."

"Material blessings are a by-product of a free society," he said.

If government cracks down on individual freedoms and property rights it will hamper creativity, he said. Crane said the average American works almost up to June before he starts earning money for himself.

"Your right to property is basically your right to yourself," he said, and asked, "are we slipping into bondage?"

Oil spills

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 23,000 barrel capacity oil barge slipped its tugboat on Saturday and slammed into the Huey P. Long Bridge. Gobs of crude oil boozed down the Mississippi River.

The United States Coast Guard said it was uncertain how many barrels of crude oil were aboard the barge. The captain of the Port of New Orleans closed the area of the accident to traffic.

Yalta visit out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon likely will visit the Black Sea resort of Oranienburg during his visit to the Soviet Union next week, a White House official said Saturday.

The official confirmed that Yalta, which had been suggested by Nixon's Russian hosts as a possible stop during the five-day visit, has been ruled out. He also said that Minsk, the president of Byelorussia, probably would be the President's only other stop outside of Oranienburg and Moscow.

The President, who goes to Moscow Thursday after a meeting in Brussels Wednesday with NATO heads of state, spent the weekend at the Camp David, Md., retreat. Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon announced Saturday had begun poring through briefing books for the Moscow and Brussels meetings.

N-test rumor stirs London row

LONDON (UPI) — A new report in the governing Labour party, Saturday over a newspaper report that Britain is about to conduct an underground nuclear test in Nevada.

The ministry of defense refused to confirm or deny the report, which appeared in the London Daily Express.

Leaving Labor members of parliament will ask Defense Secretary Roy Atkinson in Parliament Monday whether the report is true.

The Daily Express said British nuclear scientists want to test an improved warhead for the Royal Navy's Polaris missiles.

... position despite Murphy saying that his people would remain neutral," Wassick said.

He added that Murphy had even asked the party to take a stand on the issue, but Franklin spoke for the lieutenant governor and most people here who know Franklin knew that.

Warnick and his vice-chairman, Richard Miller Jr., Boise, said they could not understand the opposition from Murphy's office when the majority of Republican candidates have endorsed this along with many of the legislators.

During lengthy and occasionally heated debate on the resolution, Rep. E. V. McHan,etchum, opposed the primary slogan because it would "have a bunch of politicians all over the place from late April to November."

McHan said the people are tired of seeing politicians on television and the primary would just make them more visible. He warned that it would increase the cost of campaigning by increasing the number of persons who could afford to campaign.

Proponents pointed out that holding the primary in conjunction with neighboring northwest states would be making it possible for presidential candidates to stop off in Idaho on the same trip.

Youth delegates loudly protested when the chairman tried to cut off debate. Warnick was given a chance to explain the initiative.

Extending the debate, however, also allowed Casey Miners from District 12 to tell the assembly that the primary would take power away from this convention.

Miners, addressing the delegates, said "You who are here are the people who have showed you care" about party politics and "you are the people who should have the power" to decide how Idaho will cast its vote at the national convention.

"You need to keep the power here where you can control it," Miners said.

Officials' visit puzzles Andrus

BOISE (UPI) — Despite spending a hour with federal officials, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus says he is still in the dark about Forest Service recommendations for Idaho's Primitive Area.

Andrus said his meeting Friday with Robert Long, assistant secretary of Agriculture and two other federal officials, was a waste of time.

The governor said he "tried to get them to listen to reason" but that he was unsuccessful. He said he pointed out that the people of Idaho would not agree with recommendations had been made by the Forest Service.

He said he was advised that he would receive a copy of the recommendations after they were reviewed by the secretary of agriculture and the President.

Drink, not drugs for Idaho's youth

PRIEST LAKE, Idaho (UPI) — A state official has told the board of Environmental and Community Services that Idaho's young people are turning to alcohol as they move away from hard drugs.

A report from the Idaho District Health Department and its regional environmental personnel indicated that deterioration of water quality in the lakes of the north was attributable to the spreading of hard drugs.

Mark Litvin, director of field operations for the Department of Environmental and Community Services, also told the board that in the past most of the funds available for combating drugs has gone to law enforcement.

An in-depth survey of more than 50 lakes in the five northern Idaho counties is underway to pinpoint sources of pollution.

More money, he said, is needed for treatment and administration.

The board voted to proceed with a food stamp program in Cassia County despite disagreement with county authorities over administrative costs of the program.

James Wilson, head of the assistance program for DECS, said 300 eligible families had been affected by the disagreement. He said these families should not be abandoned while the technicalities are being worked out.

'Gate prosecutors link 26 with cover-up

The list — of which 17 names were obtained by the New York Times from various sources — contained no surprise for all of the individuals identified had been mentioned either at the Senate Watergate hearings, in news accounts, or in other proceedings involved in Watergate.
However, the list was the first statement by the prosecutors of their view of the scope of the cover-up.
The prosecutors declined to make the list public or to comment on it. The sources said that normally of the prosecutor's staff provided the list orally at a three-hour meeting with defense counsel.
According to the sources, Leon Jaworski, the special prosecutor, said he did not want to make it public now, because defense lawyers have asked the Supreme Court not to make public certain court records relating to the matter.

The Supreme Court, which is involved in the matter because of its pending review of Jaworski's latest subpoena of White House tape recordings, has thus far declined to make public anything from the secret record except for a single sentence stating that the grand jury had named Nixon an indicted co-conspirator.
The defense lawyers in the cover-up case had sought to maintain the secrecy because of the danger of pre-trial publicity that might prejudice their clients' chances to get a fair trial. Sources said the lawyers agreed with Jaworski that the list not be made public now, and that each promised to keep the list confidential.
An indicted co-conspirator is someone whom the prosecution or grand jury believes participated in the cover-up but who was not indicted for any of several reasons.

There might be insufficient evidence against the person, for instance. Or, the prosecution may have agreed with the person not to indict him or her if the person would testify at the trial. A third reason is that the alleged involvement of the individual was minimal.
Identification of various persons as co-conspirators is important because of a rule of law called the "conspirator rule."
Basically, the rule allows the prosecution in conspiracy cases to introduce evidence at trial that might be inadmissible otherwise. If the prosecution can show that a conspiracy existed and that a person was part of the conspiracy, it can introduce any statement or acts of that alleged co-conspirator for use against the others.

Independent check asked

MONTEREY, Calif. (UPI) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford suggested Saturday that an "independent" party other than the White House and the House Judiciary Committee ought to listen to and transcribe the Watergate tapes.
"Perhaps we have to have a third or neutral party take the tapes and get transcripts from them," Ford told newsmen.

Secret deals on missiles hinted in '72

Government experts do not consider the additional Soviet advantage in numbers of missiles of military significance. But the fact that the Nixon administration did not submit the secret understandings to Congress may be a violation of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act of 1961.
Under the interim agreement the ceiling on missile launchers for the United States was set at 1,710 and for the Soviet Union at 2,532.
The Americans were allowed 1,054 land-based missile launchers and 656 submarine launchers. If Washington decided to retire 54 of its older land-based missiles, it could build up to 710 submarine launchers.
At this point, according to administration sources, the first secret arrangement was made by Kissinger, then presidential advisor for national security affairs.
At the Moscow summit, before Nixon and Brezhnev signed the agreement, Kissinger gave "unilateral assurances" to Soviet leaders that the United States would not build up to the allowable 710 submarine missile launchers when it decided to retire the 54 older land-based missile launchers.

The administration officials said they did not know why Kissinger did this, but they speculated that "he might have meant it as a gesture of goodwill."
According to several Senators involved in nuclear arms matters, no member of the Nixon administration has ever officially informed Congress of this unilateral assurance. These Senators did not want to be identified.
The agreement allowed 1,618 land-based missile launchers and 740 launchers on nuclear-powered submarines. But if Moscow decided to retire 210 of its older land-and-sea-based launchers, it could have as many as 930 submarine missile launchers on no more than 62 modern missile submarines.
The reason that modern nuclear submarines and missile launchers were specified, officials explained, was that the 22 older diesel "G-class" submarines with 70 missile launchers were not to be counted as part of the total of 930 submarine launchers.
This is where the second secret arrangement made by Kissinger is involved. On June 17 in Washington, according to the sources, Kissinger met with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and "clarified" the understanding on diesel submarines.

The sources said that Kissinger told Dobrynin that "it was his understanding that the Soviet Union could put 70 modern missile launchers in the old diesel submarines, thus going over the 930 total without violating the agreement."
In other words, the sources explained, Kissinger was "giving" the Russians an extra 70 missile launchers. Dobrynin accepted. The administration sources said they did not care to speculate on why Kissinger did this.
This "clarification" was not conveyed in any statements by Kissinger or by administration witnesses appearing before Congress. At a May 27 news conference in Moscow, Kissinger said, with respect to the diesel submarines, "if these missiles are modernized, then that missile is counted against the 930 total and reduces their ability to build nuclear powered submarines."
This was confirmed on a number of occasions in testimony before Congress on the interim missile agreement. But, the administration sources said, these witnesses were not aware of the "clarification" at the time of their testimony.

US denies arms sale plans

(C) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The United States told Israel Friday it has no plans to sell military arms to Egypt or Syria, State Department officials and diplomats said Saturday.
The officials said Secretary of State Kissinger conveyed the assurances in the course of a one-hour meeting at the State Department last night with Binchab Dintis, Israel's ambassador to the United States.
Dintis had told Kissinger of growing apprehension in the Israeli press recently about two developments in Egyptian-American relations — the decision by the United States to negotiate the sale of a nuclear power reactor to Egypt for use in the 1980's and the disclosure earlier in the week that a team of American military officers was going to Egypt at the instigation of the Egyptian defense ministry.

The United States — which also signed a similar nuclear arrangement with Israel during President Nixon's recent trip — has assured the Israelis that the safeguards in the nuclear power reactor will be so severe as to make it impossible to convert the plant to the production of atomic weapons.

The Pentagon and the State Department also had earlier the military mission recent trip — has assured the Israelis that the safeguards in the nuclear power reactor will

Three damage suits filed over traffic accidents

TWIN FALLS — Three damage suits have been filed in Fifth Judicial District court seeking settlements as a result of accidents involving traffic accidents.

Two of the suits involve traffic deaths but the largest involves injuries only.

Verl and Lillian Hinton, Twin Falls, are asking $1 million damages and $1,000 medical costs as a result of an accident Sept. 4, 1973, in which Mrs. Hinton was injured. The defendants named in the complaint are: City of Baker, Baker Co. Inc. and James Steen, driver of a bakery truck.

The plaintiffs allege negligence on the part of the driver and the bakery in the accident on Adams Avenue East in which Mrs. Hinton suffered a fractured leg, cuts and bruises, and back and shoulder pain. The complaint states she was deprived of wages and suffered pain and discomfort. Lloyd Webb represents the plaintiffs.

In the death of William Edgar Stoddard, Twin Falls, who was killed on 12th St. in Minnoka County Dec. 22, 1973, his widow, Virginia Stoddard and the couple's two children are asking $300,000 general damages plus $1,500 funeral expenses, $1,432.73 automobile damage and $800 tow charges.

Stoddard was killed while standing on the pavement beside his stalled vehicle. The complaint states a truck driven by Kenneth J. Burke, and owned by Cal-West Inc. hit the rear of a truck owned by North Pacific Lumber Co. and driven by Donald Howard Zander, throwing Stoddard into the path of the truck driver by Burke and killing him.

The accident occurred four miles west of Burley and the complaint states resulted from negligence on the part of the truck driver.

A third complaint resulted from the death of Kevin Goodfellow, his mother, Sandra, Goodfellow, Twin Falls, seeks $250,000 plus medical expenses in the death of her son. Named as defendants are Jack Sheldon Coggan, Gem State Wholesale Drug Co., and Terry Corp.

The complaint states a vehicle driven by Coggan struck a tractor operated by the Goodfellow youth one mile west of Burley Sept. 6, 1973, resulting in the death of Kevin Goodfellow also asks $1,000 in hospital and medical expenses.

James May, Twin Falls attorney, represents both plaintiffs in the fatal accident cases.

Motorists forget crisis

By United Press International
Gasoline could become scarce again this summer if motorists forget the conservation lessons they learned during the energy crisis earlier this year.

The key to ensuring supplies for all motorists still is keeping highway speeds to 55 m.p.h. maximum and eliminating unnecessary travel, state and automobile club officials say.

Although their forecasts for the summer generally are optimistic, they agreed Thursday that some motorists are forgetting.

"Conservation is the name of the game," said Robert Mitchell, director of New Hampshire's energy office.

"If there is no conservation then we are right back to where we were in January and February," Mitchell reported only spot shortages of gasoline in New Hampshire.

A spokesman for the California Highway Patrol said some service stations on the West Coast are extending their hours to those of pre-crisis days. Acting state energy coordinator Harold Berthoff was cautious. "Our driving habits, volume and gas consumption are still below 1973," he said. "And if it continues we feel we'll have sufficient fuel to meet our needs."

Adequate gasoline should be available in New York state "providing the public continues to use fuel wisely," a fuel official said.

The New York official said a few pumps were dry, but they were caused by a run by motorists seeking cheaper gasoline.

Lanes reported at a few stations in northern Florida were attributed to increased tourism.

The Wisconsin energy office said it conservator "emphasized" supplies should be stable or adequate.

Colorado Gov. John D. Vanderhoof said his state is having no problems. He was even optimistic about tourists boom this year.

Reports from Louisiana, Kansas, Texas, Kentucky, Washington, New Mexico and Alabama were of only spotty shortages. Outside of metropolitan areas, some motorists had to look a little harder for open stations at night or on Sunday.

Pesticide eyed in eagles' death

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Environmental scientists say there is strong evidence that American bald eagles are dying off in Maine because of high levels of pesticide use around the water.

They know there are some large accumulations of pesticides in organisms, fear large bodies of water, the ocean," said Francis J. Gramlich of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Tests sent to the Federal Wildlife Research Center at Patuxent, Md., for testing. Preliminary tests showed the shells "were considerably thinner than normal due to the pesticide residues. Nucleus had showed any embryonic development."

nests along the Kennebec River, best for eggs which authorities knew would never hatch.

Both eggs hatched successfully with their fostered parents. Within a week, one of the eaglets was snatched by a predator, but the other survived and has been banded by scientists to trace its movements.

Gramlich, both original eggs were sent to the Federal Wildlife Research Center at Patuxent, Md., for testing. Preliminary tests showed the shells "were considerably thinner than normal due to the pesticide residues. Nucleus had showed any embryonic development."

Gramlich speculated in an interview that pesticides used primarily in Europe had made their way into the food chain either through bacteria or aquatic life. The fish carried the residues, some which have been known to stay active for 30 years, in eastern U.S. shores where the eagles eat the fish.

DDT, a derivative of DDT, nucleus had been banned by Maine for several years. Gramlich said it was the hope of scientists the ban would be reflected in an increase in eagle productivity.

"But the biological accumulations are still accumulating, not at a great rate, but it's definitely not tapering off," he said.

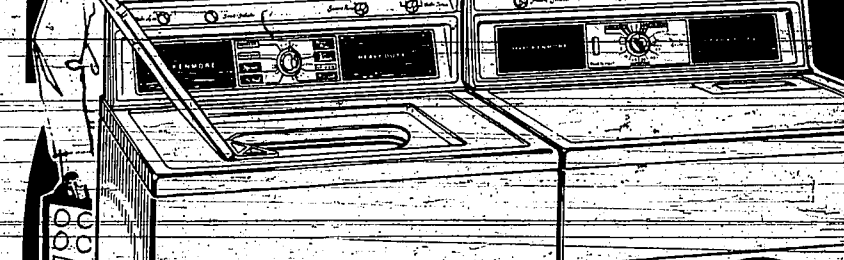

Gramlich is conducting an ongoing experiment in which two healthy eagle eggs from Minnesota were substituted in Gramlich said he would like to be able to pinpoint the source of the pesticide residue, but said "proof just doesn't come easy" for several reasons.

"In many cases the insecticides may be three times removed from the eagles compared to the bacteria which worked their way back up the food chain.

"We do know that birds that eat fish primarily do have higher residues of these materials, and that eagles eat about 70 per cent fish in their diet," he said.

Gramlich said the American bald eagle is no longer an endangered species as such, but scientists are worried about the eagles in Maine, the first major population of the national bird in the eastern United States.

Brazen burglars take 'whole thing'

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — In the annals of crime, few have been fished like Floyd Phacker.

Phacker is president of Phacker Construction Co. in Edwardsville, Ill., and Wednesday he surveyed the remains of an exorbitantly executed ripoff.

"There wasn't much left to survey because thieves visited Phacker's firm Saturday night and made off with:

- A 100-foot high aluminum radio tower, which they neatly dismantled into 30-foot sections.
- The base station transmitter.
- The two-way radio equipment from seven trucks and a tractor-trailer.
- Four typewriters.
- A calculator.
- Two adding machines.
- A multiplier.
- A television set.
- A radio.
- And the clock of the wall.

"There was more," moaned Phacker. "They even stole the pen and pencil set off my desk. It was a nice recovery, thinking the kids gave me for Christmas."

"There was still more. The brazen burglars also snatched Phacker's FM radio transmitting license, the property of the Federal Communications Commission.

"They carted everything off in a wheelbarrow," Phacker said. "I wish they'd leave the wheelbarrow."

In the wheelbarrow were two washers. "That about all they got us with," said office manager Michael London. "Two washers. They even took the washings of the tower, and all of the bolts."

London said the company equipment was insured in full.

Phacker, whose company is engaged in highway construction, used the radio equipment for contact between his mobile units on the road.

"My FCC license was pasted to the wall," he said. "It was in a plastic case. With that license, they can change the crystals and get themselves a new frequency."

Phacker, who estimated his loss at about $15,000, said the lowermen, even took the tower to the dispatcher's office.

WEISER, Idaho (UPI) — Ben Thomason, 65, Toulie, Wash., won the senior division of the National Oldtime Fiddlers' Festival and Contest Friday night.
Joe Panczerzowski, Enumclaw, Wash., took second place. Ben Setra, Billings, Mont., took third.
Clarence Norberg, Toledo, Wash., came in fourth, and Chuck Beal Sr., Rialto, Calif., placed fifth in the annual contest.

Regulation
BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus believes development of public capability to regulate governmental energy is as vital as exploration for the resource.
He said, "Much of this country's past history of private exploration has led us to wish after the fact that public regulation had been more sophisticated and better staffed so that the environment and social concerns would have been better served."
The governor told a luncheon meeting of Pacific Northwest Power and Light these wishes are particularly compelling the case of geothermal resources.

Request denied
POCATELLO (UPI) — A request that Hermit Nielson, 27, who had been convicted of killing a Pocatello woman, be transferred to State Hospital South at Blackfoot, has been denied by District Judge George Hargraves.
Nielson is presently at the Idaho State Penitentiary. He was convicted in the stabbing death of Irene Wagstaff, 26, Pocatello, Sept. 8, 1971.
Hargraves denied the application pending a new petition to have the man transferred to State Hospital North at Orofino.

Works for rail service
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said he is working to have restoration of rail passenger service to southern Idaho included in an anti-inflation proposal.
Church said the funding proposal was being considered by the Senate Surface Transportation subcommittee.
"The committee report has provided little hope for reinstatement of rail passenger service to rural-oriented states such as Idaho, even though the citizens of those states help support the system with their taxes."
Church said if his legislation was added to the transportation subcommittee's proposal, other states besides Idaho which were left out of the original basic system would be extended rail passenger service.

Demos sign
BOISE (UPI) — Three more prominent Democrats have signed the presidential primary initiative, David Warnick one of the initiative's coordinators, said Saturday.
Warnick said Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, Attorney General W. Anthony Park and H. Max Hanson, a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination in the second district, have endorsed the movement.
"The momentum seems to be building and we think that we'll be on the ballot any day now," Warnick said.

Californians held

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — The sharp eyes of a Glenn Ferry service station manager led to the arrest Saturday morning of four Californians wanted for kidnap and armed robbery.
George Bailey, 31, a part-time policeman and manager of the West Inn American service station in Glenn Ferry, was talking to a state police officer on the telephone when the four pulled into his station in an allegedly stolen 1970 sedan.
Bailey said he had been asked earlier by state police to look out for the automobile. When he read the car's license number the officer he was talking to on the phone he found it was the vehicle wanted by police.
"He told me to see if I could keep them there, but I couldn't without looking suspicious," Bailey said. "I stalled them long enough so they couldn't get too far."
Bailey said he pointed out the direction the car had traveled and the four were arrested a short time later.
Elmore County sheriff's Deputy Bob Mendall said the sheriff's office wanted to confer with California officers before releasing the names of those arrested.

Visits in TF Humane societies don't oppose rodeos, aide says

TWIN FALLS — The American Humane Association is not opposed to rodeos and horse shows, but is working with rodeo organizations in an effort to eliminate cruelty factors.
This was reported by Roger Van Tevens, Denver, field representative of AHA, in Twin Falls Saturday.
Van Tevens, currently on a tour of humane societies in the western states visited in Twin Falls Saturday with Bobbi Glasmann, president, and other officers of the Twin Falls organization.
Van Tevens said the AHA, as different from the US Humane Society, has a different approach to the use of animals for entertainment purposes.
"We do not support the exploitation of animals such as in rodeos, horse shows, horse and dog races, or even zoos," Van Tevens said.
"However, our prime concern is to keep a watch on such events and to work with the producers, owners and sponsors to make certain there are no individual cases of animal cruelty."
"We usually send local Humane Society inspectors to the shows to check the grounds, chutes and other facilities to show if there are obvious ways in which the animals might be injured. If so, we meet with the producers and officials to correct these immediately," he said.
He said events such as the "steer busting" which is shown in some areas although no longer an event in rodeo in southern Idaho, are on the list of things the AHA is hoping to eliminate from rodeos.
"We have a good working relationship with the Idaho Rodeo Cowboy Association and the Rodeo Cowboy Association as a whole, and generally these people are as interested as we are in protecting the animals from injury or cruel treatment."
"In most cases where we received reports of mistreatment of animals, we find a certain individual and a sudden temper flare is to blame and the matter can easily be corrected," the official said.
He said the coyote situation in some places such as Idaho may be a serious problem for the livestockman, but generally it is a small group or even a single coyote and there must be a better measure of control than the all-out killing of every coyote.
Van Tevens said the problem of dogs is frequently as bad as that of coyotes. Many people adopt a puppy and then decide they no longer want the pet. He said then turned loose in the desert to survive by his own means and become a scavenger and livestock killer. He also is "a problem of the deer and rabbit game."
Van Tevens said most humane societies have their own special problems such as the 400,000 stray dogs currently confronting the Twin Falls organization.

Rupert citizens irate over flooding in yards

RUPERT — Several Rupert citizens were irate when they awoke Saturday morning to find their street and yards flooded.
The east end of South C Street was covered in water as much as eight inches deep when irrigation water from a home two blocks away ran into the street. The water is kept from escaping by a road running perpendicular to the street.
Mrs. Janet Ulrich said the water had been high enough in the early morning to flood her children's sandbox in her yard.
She said this was the second time in the last four weeks this has happened. The situation also occurs in the winter when snow melts, according to Mrs. Ulrich.
She related an incident in which her friend lost his wallet in the water and was unable to recover it until spring because of the water and ice which forms on it in cold weather. The ice cuts tires on cars and causes people to get stuck, she said.
Mrs. Owen Vaughn, an Ulrich neighbor, said the situation had been the same for 15 years. She said she and a number of neighbors had complained repeatedly to the city without effect.
She said she drain the city out in has never pumping it into a ditch across the road at the property owner's expense.
The pool of water in the street has lasted long enough cattails have begun to grow in front of the Vaughn residence and poll-wogs have a swimming hole.
"Neighborhood children seem to be taking advantage of the situation, riding their tricycles through the water and generally enjoying a condition which has made their parents unhappy."
Ed Dixon, public accountant with his office in his home, said the water in front of his house makes it difficult for his customers to enter. He said, "The city has promised everything in the world but they have never done anything about it."
He suggested possible court action if the situation is not cleaned up.
Dixon expressed fears one of the neighborhood children would be run over while playing in the water or drown if he fell and hurt himself.
City councilman William Strasser told the Times-News that the situation would be cleaned up Monday morning by city crews. He said the area was not designed for flood irrigation.

TWIN FALLS — The hungry fish taken into custody by the Twin Falls Humane Society June 21 have something to eat... at least for a little while.
With urging from the society, the owners, Seacrest Industries of Dallas, Tex., have reportedly provided funds to buy food. A local food dealer delivered 2,500 pounds of fish food to the ponds on Thursday.
John Bremer of Royal Catfish, who manages the enterprise for Seacrest, said he could stretch the food for 10 days. Normally, the fish — mostly rainbow trout — would gobble the food up faster.
"But because they haven't been fed for several weeks, the food must be doled out in smaller amounts to prevent the fish from getting sick."
Kemper said the fish were "being fed a very vitamin fortified diet," to get them back into shape.
According to Kemper, only about 150,000 of the 400,000 fish at Royal were not being fed. All the fish at the hatchery have been fed continuously, he said. The problem was with the bigger fish in the ponds. About 30,000 to 40,000 pounds worth. And these fish were getting some nourishment off the pond bottoms, including moss, shrimp, snails and insects, Kemper said.

"These fish were not starving to death," he said.
"Not" Jockumson of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, called by the Humane Society to "venture an opinion of the condition of the fish," commented that "some of them were quite fat and they had been fed for a long time," maybe three weeks at least.
Jack Dietrich, a representative of Seacrest residing in Twin Falls, could not be reached for comment.
The situation looks good, at least for the moment. Humane Society officials say future actions will depend on whether more food is obtained for the fish. "If they get more, everything's going to look fine," Craig McKenney, state inspector for the Federated Humane Societies said.
Both Kemper and the Humane Society people have contacted the fish and game department about the possibility of releasing the fish into the Snake River.

Overseas gain gets GOP nod

Also he said, "the measure would encourage voter participation in politics by appealing to all Republicans in sole for the candidate of their choice. Opponents objected that a spring primary would create too long a campaign period. They also objected that the measure would take the power of nomination away from the hardest working party members."
After extensive debate the convention overwhelmingly passed a resolution demanding the repeal of the Occupational Safety and Hazard act and any other law that deprives the citizen of his rights without due process of law.
Alternative motions to not specify OSIA and to change the word "repeal" to "modify" were defeated in narrow votes. Opponents to the resolution for repeal of OSIA said such an extreme position might alienate labor groups. They said OSIA is a poor law which already has been modified and which will be modified more.
The party took a hard line on welfare. Resolving with no opposition that "all welfare programs be repealed and revamped with the aim of promoting and resuming individual initiatives and discouraging indolence."
The Republicans passed a general Watergate resolution calling for a speedy conclusion to the issue, for punishment of wrongdoers, and for prosecution of those who willfully govt. to prove.
The party unanimously resolved to support local hand-use planning without any federal intervention. It overwhelmingly rejected a resolution supporting statewide educational standards. "The winning argument in both cases was that the community should set its own guidelines."
In other issues, the party:
- Urged reinstatement of import quotas on beef and labeling of imported beef.
- Urged enactment of legislation to allow foreign nationals to obtain agricultural employment for specific purposes and on a temporary basis.

Evel Knievel promotes jump

TWIN FALLS — Evel Knievel will barnstorm 29 cities to promote his Sept. 8 jump of the Snake River Canyon near Twin Falls.
The famed motorcycle daredevil and his producers, Top Rank Inc., New York City, will hold a press conference Monday in New York to kick off the promotional tour.
According to one Top Rank official, the firm has "made a deal with Ever Knievel to handle the week-end television rights." Top Rank says the official is "the foremost closed circuit producer in the world." Both of the Mohammed Ali Joe Frazier fight films were produced by the firm.
"The firm hopes to sell the closed circuit version of the canyon jump to a worldwide market in South America, Japan, England, Australia and elsewhere. Showings are planned in Madison Square Garden in New York City, the Forum in Los Angeles and at many other sites."
As to the possibility Knievel might cancel the jump once again, Top Rank says, "there is no question about it."
Hotels in the area are filling up. The Holiday Inn, Blue Lakes Inn, Apollo Motor Inn and others in Twin Falls are booked tight — some for the whole week. The Paradise Inn in Burley has no rooms from Sept. 2 to Sept. 8. But some smaller motels in the area still have space.
Security may be a big problem, and Sheriff Paul Corder is working to coordinate efforts between city, county and state law enforcement officials.

Many reports have come to the board that flowers taken to graves of loved ones have been disappearing.

Bell Rapids fete today

HAGERMAN — Several thousand visitors are expected to tour the Bell Rapids pump-irrigation project today.
The public tour of the project, described as a "model" desert enterprize by 31 individual farmers, will follow a dedication ceremony to be held at Hagerman Park beginning at 12:30 p.m. Monday.
The speaker, other politicians scheduled to speak are Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho; Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho; Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho; Rep. Steve Berkman, R-Idaho.
 Curtis Berkman, national Bureau of Land Management director and an Idaho native, and William Mathews, Idaho BLM director, will also speak at the dedication ceremonies. G. T. Newcomb, Twin Falls, will discuss the project's formation and future.
Visitors will see two of three Snake River pumping plants that lift water as much as 625 feet to the project's farms. The three plants contain a total of 24,700 horsepower electric pumps.
At 25,300 acres, the project is more than one and one-half times as large in area as the city of Boise.
Some 7,000 acres of the total have been added this year — more than in any other single year since its first 5,720 acres were transformed into productive irrigated cropland in 1970.

Starving fish eating, for awhile

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The hungry fish taken into custody by the Twin Falls Humane Society June 21 have something to eat... at least for a little while.
With urging from the society, the owners, Seacrest Industries of Dallas, Tex., have reportedly provided funds to buy food. A local food dealer delivered 2,500 pounds of fish food to the ponds on Thursday.
John Bremer of Royal Catfish, who manages the enterprise for Seacrest, said he could stretch the food for 10 days. Normally, the fish — mostly rainbow trout — would gobble the food up faster.
"But because they haven't been fed for several weeks, the food must be doled out in smaller amounts to prevent the fish from getting sick."
Kemper said the fish were "being fed a very vitamin fortified diet," to get them back into shape.
According to Kemper, only about 150,000 of the 400,000 fish at Royal were not being fed. All the fish at the hatchery have been fed continuously, he said. The problem was with the bigger fish in

Reds demand free passage in S. Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI) — The Vietnamese Communists said Saturday their long-standing demand to move freely around South Vietnam must be granted before they will cooperate in the recovery of men missing and believed dead in the Indochina war, including about 1,100 Americans.

Their reticence "or the demand at the weekly Communist press conference underlined the probability that the search for the missing in Communist-held areas will be stalled for many more months."

The Saigon government has consistently refused to allow the 200-man Communist truce delegation stationed in Phan Son Nhut airfield just north of Saigon to move around the countryside. It also forbids ordinary Vietnamese to have any contact with the Communists.

Though American delegates are anxious to get going with the search for unrecovered bodies of U.S. servicemen, the U.S. government so far has made no known pressure on Saigon to give the Communists more freedom of movement so the search can proceed.

Instead the United States has frequently denounced the Communists for using the right to search for the bodies, which is spelled out in the Paris ceasefire agreement of Jan. 27, 1973, as a lever to pry freedom of movement out of Saigon.

Saigon officials point out that they have no permanent truce delegation in North Vietnam and no freedom of movement there whatsoever.

The Paris records say the Communist truce delegations have privileges and immunities "equivalent to those accorded diplomatic missions and diplomats to regimes."

"No further agreement is necessary," the Communist delegation has said.

At Saturday's press conference, a Hanoi spokesman denounced the sinking of a North Vietnamese ship Thursday off the South Vietnamese coast. He said it was carrying food. Saigon said it was carrying ammunition.

The North Vietnamese statement called the sinking of a "serious act of war" by Saigon.

On the fighting front, military sources said a Saigon Skyraider fighter-bomber was shot down Friday 25 miles north of Saigon. The pilot parachuted to safety.

Convict, bride escape

EVERETT, Wash. (UPI) — State reformatory convict Ronald Parker, 24, who got married under escort Friday, fled with his bride in a reformatory car.

Parker, serving time for forgery and assault from Clark County, stole his bride, Arathia A. Bolls, when she came to prison on a visit nine months ago.

Reformatory Superintendent Dale Swenson, who gave special permission for the wedding, grumbled as he was left behind by the fleeing newlyweds. "I didn't give him any honeymoon time."

"I want my state car back."

Youth designs stage settings

TWIN FALLS — Stage settings for "Slow Dusk" have been designed and built by John Mead, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Mead, Twin Falls.

The musical production sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts auditorium. All proceeds of the performance will benefit the CSI music and drama departments.

Mead has been interested in drama for several years, combining his interest in woodworking and design to design and build the sets under the direction of H. Paul Kliss, director of the musical.

The scenery will be imaginative. Other scenery items will include an antique rain barrel, kerosene lantern, and corncracking apron.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Driscoll are serving as stage manager and props manager. Terri Wood is in charge of makeup.

Mrs. David Mead is singing the role of "Sadie." Roger Vincent plays "Jess" and Mary Walker plays "Aunt Sue."

The musical was composed by Carlisle Floyd. Lawrence Curtis is director of the stage orchestra.

The performance will be followed by a champagne buffet on the patio of the Blue Lakes Inn.

Tickets for the performance are $2.00. Tickets are available at Twin Falls music stores or by calling Mrs. John McKain.

Vinyl chloride cancer scare reaches into family homes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The vinyl chloride cancer scare that jumped the fence from factory factories to surrounding neighborhoods with frightening new statistics from Connecticut, ultimately may be tracked into the homes of almost every American consumer.

The mystery surrounding vinyl chloride suddenly first appeared this week with the first figures showing what may be two confirmed cases of people who developed liver cancer because they worked with the plastic chemical but because they lived near plants where it was produced.

Officials at the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health are calling them the first "downwind cases." The deaths occurred in the towns of Tringport and Stratford among people who lived as far as 2 1/2 miles from vinyl chloride plants in the past 10 years.

One of the Connecticut victims was a housewife. The other was identified by the government as a Puerto Rican plasterer who immigrated to New York and later lived and died in the vicinity of one of the Connecticut plants.

The same figures from the Connecticut Cancer Registry also show two other cases of liver cancer that have been confirmed as the first incidents involving secondary exposure. These people worked not with the basic vinyl chloride gas but in turning its powder to pellets and then into consumer products.

While only about 6,000 U.S. workers are employed in plants where basic vinyl chloride gas is made, about 700,000 come into contact with it in its later stages while turning the widely used plastic into everything from seat covers to briefcases.

The health implications for that industry only now are beginning to be realized.

And the hazards to people living near plants where vinyl chloride is processed are only just being discovered. Health officials do not know that about 10 percent of the 100 million pounds of vinyl chloride gas produced in the United States every year escapes into the air usually through factory smokestacks.

The Environmental Protection Agency recently surveyed seven chemical complexes in Kentucky, Massachusetts, Louisiana, California, Ohio, Delaware and New Jersey and found no evidence of an imminent health hazard; but it stresses that its findings were skeletal and it told the $2 billion-a-year industry it should take immediate steps to reduce neighborhood exposure to the lowest practicable level.

For the average consumer who might be wearing, carrying, using or otherwise living with some polyvinyl chloride product almost every waking moment, the health implications are less clear but no less a cause for concern.

So far, basic consumer exposure to vinyl chloride has been limited to aerosol sprays. It was used as a propellant in a variety of household aerosol products until late in March.

So far the government has forced the recall of hundreds of thousands of cans of hair sprays, pesticides, wig cleaners, dog clipping groomers and other products that used the gas. It is looking at still others such as paint sprays and cleaning compounds to determine if enough remain in the marketplace to warrant action.

The danger here, particularly where hair sprays are concerned, is that users in continued spaces such as bathrooms, "bathrooms" being heavily doses of the gas in jetty concentrations similar to those which have produced cancer in laboratory animals.

It was in the laboratory that vinyl chloride's potential as a carcinogen first was unearthed. What had been suspected for years "was" suggested strongly in 1970 by a researcher in Rome, Dr. P. Viola. But his findings were subject to dispute and largely ignored.

More persuasive evidence came from Prof. Cesare Maltoni in Bologna, Italy, who conducted a study funded in part by the chemical industry. Those results came out early in 1973, but the Institute of National Occupational Safety and Health says it was unaware of Maltoni's work until January, when it learned of the first confirmed deaths among U.S. vinyl chloride workers.

That important finding point is credited to Dr. John L. Creech Jr., physician at the B.F. Goodrich plant in Louisville, Ky. He discovered two workers at the plant had died of a rare cancer, angiosarcoma of the liver. On checking further, he found a third case in the records.

The disease is so rare that only about 25 cases a year normally could be expected in the United States. Three in one plant was a startling discovery, and Creech alerted the government Jan. 22.

That adds up to 15 U.S. cases, 12 fatal. In addition, two cases have been confirmed in West Germany, two in Sweden and one each in Great Britain and Norway, for a worldwide total of 21.

CARPET CARE is just about as important in your satisfaction with any carpet as buying it in the first place. It's a good idea to look in advance for such qualities as: crush resistance, clean ability, stain and soil resistance.

But the fact remains that soil will accumulate, and stains or spots will occur, no matter what the carpet you have. So here is a 1-1/2 inch wide, 1/2 inch deep, 1/2 inch thick system for getting the most out of your new carpeting.

1. Give the carpet a thorough vacuuming at least once a week. Don't rush the job — long slow strokes will remove loose soil and dust better in rooms that get heavy traffic.
2. Treat stains or spots at once. Often cold water and a sponge will whisk stains away before they can become embedded or fixed. A mild detergent solution is effective with many stains.

3. Don't let carpets become too soiled before having them thoroughly cleaned professionally by a professional carpet cleaner. Carpets would last years longer in many homes if cleaned more often.
4. Your carpeting might well BE THE BEST if you use the carpet that you need for a heavily-trafficked room or for any specific flooring problem. See us for the latest carpet color and selection in town!

From all angles By Larry Hovey

It's a little tough to be talking about being too old when you're 23 and 25.

But that's how two Twin Falls athletes described themselves Tuesday night just after what could have been their finest hours didn't materialize.

The "old man" of the twosome is Earl Shields, 25, a former graduate who has been king of the Intermountain boxing mountain around 165 pounds for the past several years.

Shields, who also shows a lot of self discipline in making himself stay in shape for an amateur career that has little reward really, was to have gone to the national AAU finals.

His coach, Bill Morán, gave the youngster — a veteran rider in amateur boxing — a good chance of linking the U.S. title.

But the problem for Shields has been exactly the same one he found when he tried to fight his way to the western AAU championships. Nobody would fight him.

He took the title in the Denver tournament unopposed.

Because of that, he and Coach Morán felt things should be a little tougher and scheduled the trip to nationals.

But in the three-month interlude, he couldn't pick up a match and traveled to Salt Lake City but no one down there would give him a match. Several phone calls have been made, all to dead ends.

"We didn't feel I should go into a national tournament without a good match or two," Shields said, referring to his timing and mental condition. "We couldn't find one and just had to cancel the trip."

Still he doesn't feel like giving up on boxing yet.

Morán is trying to put something like it up in a gym and a couple of other places that appear to be trying to start a pretty good stable of experienced men. Most boxers, unfortunately, for the dedicated ones like Shields, start putting the gloves away about the end of high school careers. Especially after they've married and started a family or two.

"Maybe I'm too old (to be able to get sufficient matches)," Shields said. "Maybe I should retire."

The other is Twin Falls grad John Geister, just out of Idaho State and several other youngsters in Southern Idaho, including some CSI players, had the indication from pro scouts they would be taken in the June pro baseball draft. None were.

"I thought the Phillies were going to draft me," Geister said. "But I guess they figured I was too old."

"Those two years I spent doing nothing, just waiting to get well after breaking my wrist hurt me," he said.

John played at CSI, then transferred to Idaho State where he showed a good batting average and surprising versatility as Coach Babe Garcia pressed him into catching service.

Geister always had played outfield before and truly had a major league arm. Just ask any baseball and slowpitch player around about that arm. No one took the extra base — or even thought about it.

The other surprises were Kevin Nelson, who was supposed to be an arm and turned down $100 and $12,000 bonus offers. He followed up by having probably the best spring of his lifeline CSI.

He put on a super pitching-hitting show for two pro scouts in the stands at Joyce Park this spring and it appeared at that time the Pirates surely would take him.

But Pittsburgh new him to Seattle where he worked out with another scout. Although Nelson felt he'd had a good showing in Seattle, the draft went by without comment and so far the phone hasn't rung.

Vic Wells, Twin Falls, who is regarded as an excellent defensive first baseman and a good hitter, also was being looked at this spring while playing at Boise State. Wells was to attend a tryout camp, the week before the draft but couldn't make that, breaking a foot while sliding during a slowpitch game.

Ron Estes, CSI pitcher from Anacosta, was drafted in January by the Phils — but never contacted afterward. This spring a torn muscle in his throwing shoulder excluded his effectiveness and kept him on the sideline for three weeks. His name didn't surface in the draft.

Nor did CSI's Joe Rubino, Tulsa, who also was told by scouts to expect to be drafted.

All of these things indicate the difference in baseball's thinking in the past 20 years. During the early 1950s baseball firmly believed that each player should graduate to the bigs under the minor league steps of C, B, A, AA, AAA competition.

The sport used to figure five years to become master players. But with the price of minor league affiliation and player salaries and the sudden emergence of many other sports to grab off prime athletes, baseball is down to the school grad. And it'll give them only three years to make it.

Of course, Idaho ranks among the poorest scouted states in the union, although four tournaments were taken in the recent draft, including collegians.

Only a few years ago, one of the scouts who we talked to about the best in ever work this area, explained to us why he was going to sign a youngster. Then he added, "but he would be signed for about $20,000 if he lived in Southern California."

Asked to explain that, he replied, "Southern California is so hot they don't scout that all. Scouts are afraid not to draft anyone who can play a little bit. If one of those borderline players blooms all of a sudden into a major league player, the front office wants to know why that kid wasn't on his draft list a couple of years ago."

"Up here only a few Scouts see boys and they aren't sure in their own minds that he has it all (batting, throwing and running), they won't take a chance of blowing a draft. If the Idaho boy doesn't make it, the front office wants to know why you talked them into missing a fifth-round pick to take a chance on a borderline kid from a cold climate."

Horseshoe's over stake

FATHER-SON duel waged during the Buhl horseshoe tournament Saturday when Roger Evans nipped his dad, John Evans, 38-46 during the round-robin competition.

Hake retains horseshoe crown

BOULDER — The Rev. Harold Hake, Gooding, successfully defended his Buhl open horseshoe pitching tournament title Saturday.

The Rev. Mr. Hake again had to nail down the first-place trophy in a playoff as he and Bert Bruins of Gooding and R. E. Clegg of Boise wound up the seven-man round robin schedule even.

Clegg took second in the playoff. Roger Andrews of Wendell grabbed the class B singles title, second by Kent Beecher-Buhl. Perry Wolfe Gooding, combined with the Rev. Mr. Hake to win the doubles crown in the final event of the day. The tournament was played on a handicap basis. Area pitchers interested in competing this summer may enter a Boise tournament at 10 a.m. July 4 at Julia Davis Park. The state playoffs also are set for the Davis Park on Aug. 24.

College insurance?

PITTSBURGH, Va. (UPI) — A possible $1-million insurance policy against injury before Virginia prep basketball star Moses Malone could turn pro was reported Friday as one of the factors in his decision to attend the University of Maryland.

Neither Maryland coach Lefty Driesell nor the university would be involved in the proposed transaction but an adviser to the much sought-after Malone said Driesell had suggested the insurance arrangement in his successful recruiting drive.

The 6-10 high school all-American already has indicated he probably will turn pro after two seasons at Maryland. The Utah stars of the American Basketball Association already have announced their intent to tempt him to forego college to play in the pro ranks.

NBA expands into Canada

NEW YORK (UPI) — Commissioner Walter Kennedy's long range plan for a new western national basketball association reached its first stage of fulfillment Friday when the league's board of governors voted to expand into Canada with a Toronto franchise for the 1975-76 season.

The expansion vote was the second in recent months. New Orleans Jazz paid $6.15 million to field a team for the coming season. Kennedy said the team could conservatively be franchised within the next year to bring the NBA into a balanced alignment again.

No price tag was set on the Toronto franchise, nor was a specific group selected as the buyer. There is also the question of indemnity which Buffalo will most certainly demand since Toronto is only an hour's drive from the Buffalo Bulls.

Harold Ballard, owner of the Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto, says he has the inside track on the new franchise.

Buffalo played nine games at its sports place last year and had an average attendance of 7,000. The largest crowd to see a game was the 13,306 that showed up for a game with the New York Knicks.

Where else can they play? Ballard asked. Ballard formally applied for a franchise at the last NBA meetings in Seattle and posted a $50,000 bond as a guarantee for fielding a team.

Squires sold to new group

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The American Basketball Association Friday approved the franchise to a group of Norfolk business men, headed by banker John Bernhard.

No terms were disclosed. The franchise had been taken over by the league from financially-beset owner Earl Fotherman.

That informed source told UPI that the San Diego Consistades have obtained a 15,000-seat arena for their games next season in San Diego from Peter Graham, removing the possibility that Dr. Leonard Bloom would move his franchise to Los Angeles in direct competition with the NBA Lakers.

One of the league trustees said much of the ABA meeting Friday afternoon was devoted to trying to reach a solution on the fate of the Carolina Cougars franchise.

Mrs. Undhjem keeps women's golf crown

JACKPOT. Virginia Undhjem of Twin Falls, maintaining a lead she had to have played better, tucked away another Times-News Magic Valley women's golf championship Friday.

Mrs. Undhjem, who now has won this event 11 of the past 15 years, winstook a late charge by Sorensen of Burley, one of the few who have interrupted Mrs. Undhjem's string of victories.

Mrs. Undhjem carded a 15-over par 167 for the two days while Sorensen, coming up with a 30 on the final nine Friday, closed to within two for the runner-up spot.

Jackie Gasser, Twin Falls, in second at the start of the second round, dropped to third but claimed the net championship at 146.

"I like to play this course, but I wish I had played it a little better today," said Mrs. Undhjem who tucked an 18 on her first round. "I missed a lot of makeable putts and could have had a better score."

"I always play eight and nine badly, like Eddie today," the new champion said of the bogey finish. "I get on these two holes and all of a sudden I can't hit my woods."

During those final two holes Mrs. Undhjem pronounced her shots as "yucky."

"If you think you can say 'yucky' after a shot like that, try playing my shots," smiled Mrs. Gasser. "I can say 'yucky' after every one."

Two different charges were made at Mrs. Undhjem, one she was acutely aware of and another she suspected but didn't know for sure.

Mrs. Gasser caught the two-time deficit to one going into the second nine.

"I got one back on the front side and gave everything back on this side," she said.

Mrs. Sorensen, playing just behind Mrs. Undhjem, went out in 42 which picked up a little ground and then came back with the 40 on the backside that cut her (that deficit to two).

Penny Jones of Rupert, a new arrival to the Magic Valley scene, took third in green while Shawm Jensen seconded Mrs. Gasser in net at 147 and Beth Shivers of Burley third at 149.

Justice Messersmith of Jerome, who was hoping the merchandise prize could cover some of her "other expenses" at the tournament, held onto her early first flight lead. She posted a 143 on the first nine.

In the second flight, Anna Dean of Coalm, Twin Falls, carded a 144, followed by Emma Harty of Burley, 145, and Lois Anderson of 218; Florence Thomson, Twin Falls, won the net division at 154 while Maggie Somner, Buhl, had 161 and Carol Coantz, Twin Falls, 170.

Judy Mack ran away with the third flight which followed by Nancy Zelinski of Twin Falls, at 212 and Mrs. Borchard, Wendell, at 217.

Luella Milton and Ruth Dorgan, Twin Falls, shared best net 147 with 129 and 130, while Jerome, third at 156.

Four teams share "A" loop lead

It will seem like a new season when the division of the slopethat softball league opens the second-half schedule in 10 days.

Four teams are tied for the lead at 92.

At the downhill, Sewer and Water Specialty holds a one-game advantage over Cain's in the "B" division.

In individual races, Rich Torres planned to win in an average last week to wind up with a "mere" 750. Jim Blanchi, the loop's top slugger with five homers, is back from a belated honeymoon, and hitting .682. Steve Hadley stands at .600.

John Geisler and Harry Espal remain one homer behind Blanchi.

Russ LeMoyné has vaulted into the top division at .642, followed by Tony Dille .607, Rocky Reece .606 and D. Crawford .600.

Reece and Ken Holte share homer honors with five, one more than Dwight Bann.

Minico's Legion

EDEN HAZELTON — Larry Spore, three- to a stakeout, three-hitter to lead the Minico Legion past Valley 4-2 Friday night.

Minico took the lead in the third inning when James Dean tripled after Baker and Stuller had garnered singles.

In the fifth, Dean threw an error and sacrificed on Ron Dietz, double, and on Jim Jinning, later an error gave Cowell lived and Valley singled him home.

Valley broke the shutout in the seventh when Williams singled and Hanks followed with a double. Hanks scored on a wild throw during the play.

Minico, Travis, 10; Buhl, Dilling and Jerome Thursday, both game starting at a 10 p.m.

Fishing hints by Swen

Let's smoke 'em

Including Snake River "Salmon"

Smoking your fish. Proper cleaning is a must when smoking your fish. Use a copper pan scrubber to remove all scales and the skin in the inside back of the fish.

Also remove all the bones and the skull. The fish should be cleaned and before you cure. Many like to leave the heads on, but I prefer to remove the head too.

There are two ways to cure your fish. One is to use a salt cure and the other is to use a dry cure. One 7 1/2 lb. box will cure all the fish you are likely to catch this summer, cost about $1.50.

I have tried the salt and dry method and find the dry method easier and more effective.

After cleaning the fish, place about a tablespoon of the salt cure down the inside back of the fish and rub into the meat. Rub a small amount on the outside too.

Pack in stainless steel or pottery container. DON'T use an aluminum pan. It will taint the fish.

After putting on the cure, pack tight into large pans or trucks and let about 24 hours. Then you can remove a pint or more of water for every 10 average fish.

After draining, wash the fish well under running water and set out to dry. You can be heating up the smoker while doing this.

After about an hour the fish will have a sticky feel. This is the indication you are ready to smoke. Apple, Hickory, or fruit wood is used. Don't use pine or soft wood as they will give your fish a bitter flavor. Smoke about 5 hours, changing the chips or sticks about every 2 hours. Usually three pieces of chips is plenty.

How about some delicious smoked salmon. (without the salmon?)

Try a carp. We have plenty in the Magic Valley and they are one of the best ones. If you want to food the fish, clean the inside back of the fish as usual, but before smoking cut the fish into steaks, such as salmon steaks about 1 1/2 to 2 inches thick. Now to make it a "salmon" your friends will brag about, simply smoke the carp steaks in a mixture of 2 quarts water and 4 teaspoons red food coloring for an hour or two and then use the dry method of curing and you will have beautiful red colored "salmon", smoked.

There is no need to skin the carp. I find the skin will not reveal your "salmon" secret.

Tournament players

OUT OF THE ROUGH, Shawm Jensen blasts toward the 18th green during the Times-News women's Magic Valley amateur. At right, Jackie Gasser seems more than pleased with her 150-yard approach that stopped a foot from the pin.

Five teams unbeaten in league

Walt's Tavern and Red's Trading post share the "A" league lead while three teams remain undefeated in "B" play in the city women's softball association.

S. Haynie leads LPGA touney lead

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Sandra Haynie fought the humid heat in the Valley Country Club to a standoff Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after three rounds of the 660,000 P.G.A. Championship.

Sandra Palmer, who had a tournament record 66 in the rain Friday, soared to a three-over par 76 in hot, hazy weather that reached 85 degrees to fall one stroke back.

Miss Haynie, who finished Friday at 72, Saturday, carded a 71, four under par. The difference between her and par was an opening round 69 as she followed with a pair of 73's.

JoAnne Carner, three strokes back to start the third round, had six bogeys and four birdies to finish with a 73, although she maintained her three-places position at 218.

Donna Young, who along with Jane Blalock and Judy Boykin, had a best round of 71, moved into a fourth-place tie with defending champion Mary Mills, who scored 75. Both women were four strokes back at 219.

The topic of discussion among the leaders was the extra toughness of the course Saturday.

"This is the type of course that you really have to take as it comes," said a perspiring and flushed Miss Haynie. "Each day it gets a little tougher — not the course itself, but because it's a 72-hole tournament. Normally, we play 54 holes. This one is a 72-hole tournament — including the pro-am, plus a sixth day for a practice round."

Only five of the 61 players who made the cut at 155 are at par or under for the tournament on this sprawling 6,100-yard course.

Miss Palmer, however, did not think the length of the course hurt her as much as Friday's downpour.

"I thought the rain affected my putting," she said. "I missed four easy birdie putts. Sometimes you try too hard."

The crusher for Miss Palmer came on the 17th hole when she took a double-bogey six. She also had three bogeys and just two birdies compared to her rain-spotted round of eight birdies and one bogey the previous day.

Mrs. Carner, winner of three of the last five tournaments, tied the leaders after seven holes but suffered five bogeys against just two birdies the rest of the way to fall away from Misses Haynie and Palmer. Mrs. Carner, a five-time former national amateur champion, blamed her putter.

Wohlhuter sets record to highlight AAU track meet

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rick Wohlhuter, holder of the world 400-meter record, set an American 400-meter record of 1:43.4 at the National AAU Track and Field Championships Saturday.

Wohlhuter, a 25-year-old Chicago insurance executive, was only two tenths of a second off the world mark of 1:43.7 set by Italy's Marcello Fiesonati last year. His clocking equaled the second best 400-meter time in the world.

Wohlhuter bettered the American mark of 1:44.3 set by Dave Wottle in 1972. His time also broke the AAU mark of 1:46.2 held by Art Sandison and High Five.

He was named the most outstanding athlete in the meet. Jamaica's Don Quarrie beat a star-studded sprint field, including Steve Williams, in the 100-meter dash in a record of 10.5 seconds. James Gilkey of the NCAA 220 champion from Fisk University and Guinea was second in 20.7 with NCAA 100 champ Reggie Jones of Tennessee third and Williams fourth, both in 20.7.

Williams, who equaled the world 100-meter record by winning Friday in 9.5, was never a factor in the race he won a year ago.

Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter, second in 2:10.4, won the 5,000-meter race Friday; won the 10,000 meters with room to spare in 28:16.6. Vierker was second in 28:55.0.

Buenker John Kraft, of the University of Chicago Track Club, won the fourth straight AAU triple jump title at 54.4. It was his fifth crown in six years.

For Wohlhuter, a former Notre Dame runner who competes for the University of Chicago Track Club, it was his second straight 700 crown.

"The race went just the way I planned it," Wohlhuter said. "I felt that I would run fast. The conditions for a world record will be similar to what Jim Hodge of the Pacific Coast Club broke his own AAU record in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles with an easy 48.9 victory, for his second straight national title, despite collapsing the final hurdle. His time was the best in the world this year.

Bolding went 49.2 in Friday's preliminaries.

Manter Peoples, formerly of Arizona State, retained his title as America's No. 1 quartermiler with an easy 45.2 win in the 400-meter dash for the second AAU title in a row.

West all-stars trounce easterners 36-6

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The pass catch combination of Jesse Freitas to Lynn Swann and the running of former rival Joe Barnes and Dickey Morton carried the West All-Stars to a 36-6 romp over the East Saturday night in the Coaches All-American Football Game.

If what was expected to be a close contest, the West showed surprising polish for an All-Star team on little practice and dominated the contest to the extent that it became the most one-sided game in the 17-year history of the event.

Despite an overwhelming lead in statistics by the East in the first half, the West held a 16-0 lead after two quarters thanks to a 12-yard touchdown pass from Freitas to Swann, a 45-yard field goal by Bert Simmons, and a four-yard sprint around right end by Morton.

Barnes, who was playing on his former home field at Texas Tech, broke the game open late in the third period by tearing away from an East rush on third down and sprinting 26 yards up the middle for a score.

Morton, while at Arkansas, hailed Barnes throughout their collegiate careers, scored again late in the third period from two yards out and Freitas, of San Diego State, hooked up with Swann, of USC, again early in the final quarter with a five-yard scoring loss.

The only East touchdown came in the second quarter on a 46-yard throw from Norris Weese of Mississippi to tight end Paul Sentorino.

The victory, which came before more than 42,000 fans who will flood near 100-degree heat at games time, gave the West an 8-6 lead in the series.

The East held the ball almost twice as long as the West in the first half, but the East mistakes kept it out of the end zone and often in poor field position. During the first half the East fumbled, setting up the first West scoring chance when Weese overthrew a receiver in the clear and had a punt partially blocked.

Freitas, who will play his pro ball for the San Diego Chargers, hit 9 of 16 passes for 136 yards. His performance won him the most valuable player of the game award by a panel of coaches.

In the final moments of the third period, Freitas threw complete two times in a row to Reuben Gant of Oklahoma State for a total of 42 yards.

Not only was Freitas' successful in the air, but Barnes, known mostly for his running ability, surprised the East with his ability to throw.

Buhl drops Caldwell and Nampa to run winning streak to 15

The Buhl Legion team ran its win streak to 15 by availing three games at Caldwell and Nampa over the weekend.

Buhl dropped Caldwell 8-3 Friday and then swept a doubleheader from Nampa 7-2 and 10-0 Saturday.

In Friday's win, Jerry Hills limited Caldwell to five hits, scored two runs. In the fifth, a pair of walks and singles by infielder and a double by Pat Hillman in the fifth. Both drove in two runs.

Mike Hamilton spun a three-hitter in the opener against Nampa while Buhl rapped 11 hits.

Martin's triple, fowing a first-inning walk to Tom Carson and King's single, scored two runs. In the fifth, a pair of walks and singles by Tony Nede, Mike Hamilton and Hills added three more.

Buhl tucked the second game away in the third inning with a three-run outburst. A walk and fielder's choice that retired no one started it, and Hills and Martin followed with fill singles.

Buhl will entertain Minico Tuesday and Twin Falls Thursday at Morris field, both games starting at 8 p.m.

Ali wings wine glasses after jacket-ripping job on champ

NEW YORK (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, who insulted Joe Frazier into a race on national television before their last fight, tried to do the same to heavyweight champion George Foreman at a Boxing Writer's dinner Saturday night, then exploded in a jacket-ripping, glass-throwing, name-calling confrontation.

Foreman, at the dinner to receive an award for Boxer of the Year, sat next to Ali, glaring at him while Ali delivered his usual threat-filled monologue for 20 minutes.

Ali, who split that amount with Ali for their championship fight Sept. 23 in Zaire, stood up to leave, holding his placque in his hand, and telling the audience he'd had enough of Ali.

At that point, Ali grabbed the placque from Foreman and held it behind his back and, when Ali refused, ripped Ali's jacket.

Ali, according to Foreman's public relations manager Bill Kaplan, then "blew his cool and flipped out."

Ali charged him, ripped his jacket and, after having his upper arms restrained by the 230-pound Kaplan, threw at least four glass goblets at Foreman. Some of the glass splattered on bystanders. Ali grabbed a wine bottle but didn't throw it at Foreman, according to Kaplan, remained in control of himself and exited with Sadler and another guest on the dais and assuming a switch of roles, came again to call Ali.

"Man, this has gone too far," Frazier told Ali. "It's no good."

Polished or rough, rocks add charm to area home

WENDELL — Few people can enjoy the fruits of their parents' labor as graphically as Joe Marsh Jr. and his family.

Nestled behind his home in Wendell is a small backyard enclosed with decorative rock wall, which creates an atmosphere reminiscent of the old song, "Let the Best of the World Go By."

Essential parts of the attractive enclosure are a swimming pool, as well as a fireplace and a fountain spraying water over the elaborate rock formations of the wall alongside the pool. Well-placed roses complete the outdoor decor.

All this is the work of Marsh's father, the late Joe Marsh, who spent some 13 years working on the project in between his business travels. Mr. Marsh, who moved to Wendell in 1950, sold costume jewelry and he and his wife traveled about seven to eight months out of the year, his son said.

During their business travels they collected rocks which now grace the family garden. The stones come from throughout the western states.

Marsh's mother was killed in an auto accident near here in April, 1971, and her husband "more or less" retired after that time, his son said. The elder Marsh died last August.

The pool, which was the last addition to the sheltered beauty spot, was completed about 1970, the son recalls, so his parents had but a short time to enjoy the result of their collecting and work.

The elder Marsh became interested in collecting rocks about the time the family moved to Wendell, his son recalls, and had enough collected for most of the wall and fireplace before he ever began building.

One of the most striking things about the enclosed garden is the polished decorative rocks affixed to the end of the pool facing the house and patio. Marsh said his father had the pool poured, then he set his polished rocks on blocks which he cemented to the pool.

Mr. Marsh also collected arrowheads and his son is the proud owner of a coffee table which has arrowheads set in plastic. He had two big saws and a rock polisher, but all this equipment was sold after his death.

Marsh said he helped his father "just a little" and while he is not as avid a rockhound as was the elder Marsh he does want to finish installing decorative rocks along the length and far end of the pool. He would like to have a rock polisher someday, he said.

Marsh said he has ordered a new filter pump for the pool and when it is installed the fountain, which adds such a graceful touch to the decorative rock wall behind it will probably spray considerably higher than it does now.

The elder Marsh cut a median and fitted it into cinder blocks to form intricate designs on the wall running the length of the property.

His son and wife, who decided to keep the place after his father's death, have installed a fence around the pool for the safety of their little boy who will be 3 in November, but this detracts little from the symmetry and beauty of the garden.

A patio provides a relaxing buffer between house and pool which the Marshes and their friends enjoy daily during hot weather, such as that blanketing the Magic Valley earlier this month.

"You can sit out there in the evening, and forget all about the problems of the world," said Marsh, who is an accountant.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My parents live in a small apartment near us. They feel lonely and neglected, and complain constantly that friends and relatives visit them only as a duty, and not very often. They are critical and quarrelsome and have no interests beyond their aches and pains, and being entertained.

I've tried to interest them in senior citizen groups, but because some of their members smoke, play cards and are Democrats, my parents couldn't mingle with them.

I visit my parents every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. I take them grocery shopping, to the doctor, and out for lunch once a week. I have them to my home for dinner every Sunday and Thursday (except their birthday).

The problem is, they are not satisfied, and let us know about it in no uncertain terms. We've had several heart-to-heart talks with them, but they still think we are selfish for not spending more time with them.

Parents pose problem

When I'm not with them, they phone, and if I am not home, they get furious, and I get bawled out like a child for "running around all day."

I am 57 years old, and have worked for 41 years, and I am tired of running myself ragged trying to please them. Any suggestions? RUN RAGGED

DEAR RUN: The problem isn't THEM; it's the way you react to them. As long as you know you are doing all you can for them, there is no reason to feel guilty. None at all!

DEAR ABBY: I am a bartender in a small town and quite often a customer will say, "If anyone calls asking for me, say I'm not here. And if they ask if I've been here, say you haven't seen me."

Abby, when I lie, as I often do, it goes against my conscience, but I lie anyway because I don't know how to get around it. Is there a way I can keep from lying without losing customers? HONEST BARTENDER

DEAR HONEST: Probably not. Bartenders, like doctors and priests, are expected to keep confidences.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin had her first baby, so the other night we went to her home to see the new baby. There were lots of other relatives there.

This cousin kept looking at her watch because she had to feed the baby at 8 p.m. She could hardly wait to unbutton her blouse right in front of everybody. Then she said, proudly, "This is the first time I've ever had such a nice breast," and without even putting a blanket or diaper or anything around the baby, she proceeded to nurse him. BOTH breasts were exposed the whole time, which was not necessary. Some of the men went into the kitchen right away, and a couple of the younger kids got so embarrassed they also left.

I know there is nothing nasty about the human body, or nursing a baby, but what do you think of a woman who would take advantage of a situation like that to show off? DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Same as you, it's disgusting. I'd also feel sorry for her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO T. M.: When someone starts out with "I'm not the money," it's the principle of the thing. It's usually the money.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 62700, L.A., Calif. 90063. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Opening lead—4 ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Todd's hand was played in a match-point game back in 1938. South was a bridge genius, or at least he thought he was. West was the late Jimmy Malar, a real bridge genius. He might well have turned out to be one of the greatest players of all time; if he hadn't died at the age of 31.

Our self-styled genius might have bid just seven clubs which would make without depending on any luck in hearts or diamonds, but he wanted to go score and bid seven notrump.

Looking at all the cards it is hard to see how he could get himself set at that contract but he worked it out with a little help from Jimmy. He started by cashing three rounds of clubs and Jimmy discarded his deuce of diamonds.

The genius stopped, though, thought some more, cashed his queen of diamonds, entered dummy with the fourth club, thought some more, led a low diamond, took some more time and finessed his 10.

He explained later—and with considerable bitterness that he could not see how anyone could be stupid enough to discard a diamond from three or four to the jack.

Jimmy said nothing at the time, but explained later on that he needed to develop some sort of swindle to beat the lay down grand slam and that South was just the sort of idiot that might fall for it.

W CARD Sense

The bidding has been: 22 West North East South
1 ♠ Dble Pass 3 ♠
Pass 3 ♠ Pass 2 ♠
Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠
Pass 4 ♠ Pass 7

Pass South, bid: 6 5 4 3 2 ♠ A Q 9 7 6 3

What do you do now?

A—A further bid should be made. We think you should just bid six hearts, but we would have no criticism of a four-notrump or five-heart bid.

TODAY'S QUESTION

In each of but six three clubs, your partner has bid three spades in response to your two-spade cue bid. What do you do now?

What's What

L. M. Boyd

It has been widely reported that the part of a football quarterback's body most prone to injury is the knee. And of a baseball pitcher's body, the arm, certainly. But it should also be reported that the knee and the arm of the normal person are those parts of the body far less likely than most to show any degeneration over the years. A study of the bodies of 113 persons who died at an average age of 71 indicates such. Clearly, football-quarterbacks and baseball pitchers engage in unnatural practices.

PRITNEAR—everybody knows John Hancock was first to sign the Declaration of Independence. But how many know who the second signer was? Samuel Adams.

PRIME VINEYARD land in France's Burgundy is just about as valuable now as mildly land hereabouts. I'm told.

HONEYMOONS—Where does Florida rank in popularity among honeymooners? A. It's No. 2. Right after New York. No. 1. Just ahead of California, No. 3.

NO ANGLER who goes for catfish should overlook this remedy for the sting of the catfish barb. Rub the stung spot against the catfish's underside. The pain will let up right away. Or so contends an expert of lengthy experience.

TO WHISTLE at a girl, walking past the firehouse in Huntington, W. Va., is illegal, young fellow.

BATHTUBS—Within 20 years ago in West Germany, some bathtub makers changed the contours of their tubs to more closely fit the form of the human body. These tubs take less hot water, clearly. And the heating of water uses more energy than just about anything else that goes on in the average household. That was the sales talk for such tubs, even that far back.

HYPNOPHOBIA, as you might guess, is the fear of going to sleep. And it's not so uncommon, really. Develops sometimes in a child; a mental specialist reports when the parents wait for the youngster to doze off. After leaving the house. If that child repeatedly wakes up to find it has been abandoned, even though temporarily, some degree of hypnophobia may set in.

NO SAILOR should long remain ignorant of this handy fact: In the 4th century, B.C., Alexander the Great leaved himself underwater in a big barrel with glass portholes. That was the first recorded effort by man to make an undersea vessel.

Valley Comment: nuclear technology

QUESTION: Do you think President Nixon should have agreed to provide nuclear technology to Egypt and Israel?

Mike Hickman, Twin Falls: "I'm against that. They're going to get it anyhow whether he gives it to them or not. I'm against helping those countries so much . . . all they do is cut our throat. I think help should be at home and not so much over there."

Ann McLenn, Salt Lake City, Utah: "No, I don't think so. I'm against nuclear warfare, period. If you're against it, you should be against it for everyone, not for just a select few. I'm against it for America, too."

Laraine Jackson, Salt Lake City, Utah: "I think he should stay here and get the U.S. straightened out. I don't think he's doing enough to keep the inflation down."

Jim Fuder, Twin Falls: "No, I don't. Emphatically no! Anyway, that should go through the Congress. I don't think the President should bargain without the sanction of the Congress."

Alma Jackson, Salt Lake City, Utah: "Why certainly, you bet. That's the only way to have peace. Otherwise, we've got our boys over there fighting and who wants that. Wars after wars, that's all we get."

Kim Tovey, Syracuse, Utah: "The only thing I can say is if they use it for peaceful means, I wouldn't have any objection. I wouldn't want it used for warfare."

Dorothea King, Seattle, Wash.: "No, I'm not just really sure. I think we might as well give them it we do everybody else . . . but I'm not sure I'm well enough informed."

Jim Winkie, Twin Falls: "Well, it seems kind of like playing tug-of-war and pulling at each end. I think it's a diplomatic move, trying to appease both of them. But I'm not sure it's going to do either one any good."

Lawn mowers wound, kill trees

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

LAWN MOWER DISEASE: Some plant doctors believe (and rightfully) that more trees die from "lawn mower" disease than any other cause.

This means that trees suffer when you bang them with the lawn mower. Scraping the bark with a mower makes a wound that's open to infection from fungi and bacteria.

If you do scrape the bark off a tree, take a sharp knife and cut off frayed edges and jagged bark. It's not really essential, but a small wound, but if you wish, you can dab a little shellac on or use a tree paint. Avoid regular house paint and tar compounds.

Here are some ideas for preventing "lawn mower" disease:

(1) Make a neat edge around the base of the tree — at least 18 inches, removing the grass, weeds, twigs and other soil. Shovel, potting, cocobean, shells, gravel, compost, sawdust or woodchips. This keeps the mower some distance away.

(2) Place a tree guard such as wire fence, a ring of bricks or stone, around the base.

(3) Caution your worker not to bang the bark.

SWEET SMELLING GLADIOLUS: Many have asked us about the fragrant gladiolus called acidanthera. This item is more relative from Africa, and is not the true gladiolus most gardeners grow.

Some gladioli have a light tea-rose fragrance, but nothing like that of the acidanthera. A few years back a woman gladiolus grower produced a cross between a common gladiolus and the acidanthera and she named it "Lucky." It carries the parent hybrid carries the carnation-like fragrance of the acidanthera. A few gladiolus experts have coined the name Gladnathera, and many seed houses carry the parent acidanthera.

We still need a truly fragrant gladiolus and many amateur breeders are working on this. The North American Gladiolus Council wants hobbyists to get active in producing a fragrant gladiolus. It could net you a tiny amount of money.

GRASS CLIPPINGS: Some gardeners are afraid to use grass clippings for a mulch in the vegetable garden and around shrubs. No reason why you can't use these to good advantage.

One reason they hesitate to use them is they think that the clippings are bad, preventing it from going directly into the ground and around the plants. This is not true.

Use clippings at a depth of 2 or 3 inches. Spread them around the base of your vegetable plants and see what a great job it does keeping weeds out, and holding water in for roots to absorb.

EDIBLE WEEDS: The high cost of groceries is making more and more people lean toward "wild foods" such as weeds. If you're going on a wild food binge, take someone with you who knows his plants.

Also, never collect from roadsides due to residues from highway maintenance and emission poisons from automobiles.

Here are a few edible plants you might want to cook up:

(1) Purslane (wild portulaca). Juicy young leaves and stems are good addition to salads or as slightly sour thirst-quenching nibble while in the field. Top leaves and stems prepared as a potherb.

(2) Chickweed (Stellaria). Leaves and stems eaten as a potherb from early spring until covered by snow. Also used in salads, soups and stews.

(3) Milkweed (Asclepias). In spring, young shoots from 6 to 8 inches high are cooked like asparagus. Young leaves, from spring until flower buds form are cooked as a potherb. Unopened flowers and young pods make good cooked vegetables.

(4) Dandelion (Taraxacum). Early spring green vegetable cooked in two changes of boiling water: Greened down in salads.

(5) Burdock (Atractylis). Cultivated commercially in Hawaii and Japan. For flowering stalk and leaf stalk peeled and eaten raw or as cooked vegetable. Very young leaves can be used as a salad green or as a potherb.

(6) Broadleaf plantain. Leaves cooked as a potherb, but may be found as bit fibrous.

(7) Chicory. Very young leaves gathered in spring and used as a potherb or salad green. Root dried and ground for coffee substitute.

(8) Wild mustard. Young leaves used as a salad green or potherb.

(9) Winter cress. Leaves used as salad green and potherb.

(10) Sougrass (Oxalis). A favorite nibble of hikers. Leaves good in salads.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. E. of Twin Falls. "I heard there is such a thing as companion planting."

"I'm not sure about growing certain plants near each other. It is true that some plants like each other, while others actually dislike each other in the same garden."

"What you are referring to is 'companion planting' or growing plants along with those which they 'like' or 'away' from those which they 'dislike'."

Frankly, we know very little about companion planting and how it works, if it does. Some gardeners view it as a mixture of wishcraft and wishful thinking, while other gardeners will tell you that certain plants actually grow best when planted with certain others.

When plants are grown in harmony, they grow better and are less affected by pests and diseases than when grown alone or with hostile plants.

In a statement on recent tests of companionate planting at the Rodale Experimental Farm in Emmaus, Pa., Ken Pollock states: "The protection offered by companion planting is usually not 100 per cent effective in keeping plants insect-free. The degree of protection, however variable, was sufficient to cause insect damage to be well below that considered acceptable by most gardeners."

The Herb Society of America says "The presence of companion herbs is thought to improve the growth and flavor of vegetables and also to deter garden pests."

Catnip, they say, deters flea beetles; mint drives away the white cabbage cutworm, and garlic can turn away various beetles.

If you want to know more about companion planting, and wish a free leaflet, send your name and address to Lee Goldman, Organic Gardening, Emmaus, Pa., and ask for a copy of the bulletin, "How to Plant a Companion Garden."

It's got all the answers for gardeners who want to keep harmony among plants in the garden.

G.N. of Burley: "We planted some fruit trees last year and this spring noticed something stirred part of the bark at the base. Will it hurt trees?"

If the bark is not completely girdled, the tree will recover. It's always a good idea to put tree guards around the trunk. One of the best we've seen is the Alpinor tree guard made of coiled vinyl plastic 20 inches high.

You just wrap it around the tree and it keeps out rabbits, mice and other rodents, and protects against mechanical injury, winter sun and wind-scald.

Dog biting serious problem

Question: We are very concerned for our St. Bernard, Avalanche. He is only three and lately has become rather snippy. It began when he nipped a visitor on the back of the man's hand. I'm sure if he had kept his mind we would never have had more trouble. But as it is, the loss. This is not a surgical or discipline problem — it's a disposition problem, which shouldn't be tolerated another day.

Dog bites are becoming a major source of pain, expense, and worry in the US. No surveys have been conducted lately, but projected statistics

Lowering the incidence of dog bites calls for courage enough to speak out against behavior of many so called "pet animals." Some "pet" acts daily in veterinary practices are so unpredictable and potentially dangerous that anyone should recognize them. In addition to spoiled, badly trained, or poorly bred dogs there's a growing problem of indiscriminate sale of trained guard dogs which present more danger to the family than prospective burglars. The only restriction to owning a trainer killer seems to be having the money to buy him. Few people are capable of handling these animals — to do so one must have more training than the dog. And are they dangerous? The German Shepherd is able to exert up to 700 pounds of pressure per square inch in his bite. That's sufficient to rip a grown man's arm, kidnap a child. Most people simply don't understand how dangerous their dog is, or could become.

There are means of decreasing bites such as strict enforcement of leash laws, licensing, and rabies vaccination. But the real cure of the matter is getting each of us who owns a dog to realize the danger of keeping a biter. Consider now whether you could live with the moral (much less financial) responsibility for a child with a face scarred for life. If Avalanche can't be completely rehabilitated immediately, I believe he'd better be removed from the scene by euthanasia.

The Merry Pet

dog has been quite amenable toward several visitors recently. We would like to know if you feel that altering him would help or is this a discipline problem? Answer: Show me a man who shows no fear while being mouthed by a 200 pound dog, and I'll show you a man with no yltis to indicate that at least two million dog bites occur yearly. That works out to at least one person in each 100 being bitten. Most of the bites involve children or service people. One insurance company's estimated cost of bites at $30 to $50 million in medical treatment and litigation.

Famous horses will perform

POCATELLO — Over 40 show bred Lipizzan and palomino horses and their riders will stage a two-hour Broadway styled presentation in Pocatello Friday.

The Royal Lipizzan Stallion Show will be held in the Idaho State University-Mindome at 8 p.m., backed by a full orchestra, and complete with rich and colorful costumes, exotic lighting effects, beautiful horses and top riding talent.

More than 20 Lipizzans, from all of the breed's six bloodlines, appear in the show. Created for the exclusive use of the royal Austrian family, the Hapsburgs, in the 16th century, breeding of the Lipizzans has always been strictly controlled and no more than a few hundred have ever been in existence at any one time.

The Lipizzan stallions are famous for their "airs above the ground," or great leaps in the air. The horses are renowned world-wide for their beauty, graceful ballet like movements and natural instinct to interpret their musical accompaniment in classic steps as they dance gracefully above the floor. All seats for the performance must be reserved by mail order from the Mindome ticket office or selected locations in Pocatello and Idaho Falls. Tickets cost $5, $5 and $4 with children under 12 charged half price.

RIDER and horse perform as one during the Royal Lipizzan Stallion Show scheduled to appear in Pocatello Friday. Here, Charles Skelton on Robin performs a number without reins control.

Pet cougar trained with love, affection

DALLAS (UPI) — Rebecca Duke is lucky that her pet, "Socki," is a mild-mannered beast.

"He doesn't like to hurt my feelings so he will do anything to keep from offending me," the young telephone clerk at the police department said.

"When I need to discipline Socki, he gets spanking just like a child. I order Socki to lie down and let me spank him, and he does."

Rebecca got her first contact with big cats when she worked at the zoo in Tyler. She raised seven lions and two bobcats by taking them home when they needed around-the-clock care as cubs.

Socki, who weighed four pounds as a five-week-old cub when Rebecca got him, is too big to come in the house very often anymore. He usually stays in a 14-foot-by-14-foot cage in the back yard.

But Rebecca said he enjoys riding in the car and staring at the window at the people who are staring at him.

Rebecca doesn't thank Socki, whose real name is Socorro, would ever intentionally hurt her or her husband, John, who said he's

"kind of used to the idea now, but it wasn't always that way."

Rebecca said Socki could accidentally hurt someone by being playful.

"People ask us if we aren't afraid he'll turn on us, but we feel sure he won't because of the training methods we've used."

"There are two methods of training. The first is to dominate the animal by whipping and such. When an animal trained like that finally realizes he is the stronger creature, he is apt to turn on his trainer."

"Those animals, trained by love and affection, as ours are, do not turn on their owners."

"Socki might attack an intruder, if the intruder scared him, but it would be instinct only. He would want to protect his owner, just like a dog."

Rebecca has two house cats and two dogs, but feels Socki is special. "Big cats have a personality all their own. They are unlike any other animal."

"My dogs really love Socki, but my cats aren't too sure about him. Socki likes to chase the dogs and will sometimes share his food with them. But my house cat really doesn't appreciate Socki. We usually keep the cats separate from Socki."

Family cat

SOCORRO, John and Rebecca Duke's pet cougar, is a mild-mannered beast, the couple says. They have raised the cougar since he was five weeks old. He is too big to come in the house very often and usually stays in a backyard cage.

Inside Religion: open executions closed

By LESTER KINSOLVING

Senator Hubert Humphrey almost certainly expressed the mind of the U.S. Senate when referring to Senator Harold Hughes (D - Iowa), he recently told his colleagues:

"He needs to get back seat to anyone in this dedication to good deeds, and in his deep concern for human kind."

Iowa's senator and former governor will leave the Senate in December in order to devote his life to a non-denominational lay ministry. Senator Humphrey's tribute came immediately after Hughes had pleaded with his fellow senators:

Florida's Senator Lawton Chiles was shocked by this amendment. "A very serious and a very dangerous thing to be shown to children. It is something they are not equipped to handle." (That very evening network television showed in prime time the superb but ghastly "Execution of Private Slovik.")

So Chiles, and 80 of his fellow senators, voted against the Hughes bill-concealed-deterrent amendment, which was supported by only 10 Senators. Earlier in the day, all 87 Senators present had voted in favor of Senator James Buckley's (Conservative - New York) amendment to "abolish the execution of any, expectant mothers."

While Hughes did not vote against this limited abolition amendment, his questioning of the New York Conservative produced a rather devastating exposure of Buckley—who is a devotee of the death penalty: "If a woman was pregnant awaiting execution and the baby was born prior to the date of the execution would the woman then be executed?"

Buckley: "She would then be executed."
Hughes: "Is there any provision for the mother to nurse the baby for any period of time, say 30-60 days or six months before the execution?"

Buckley: "No, but I assume the competent officials would have the humane good sense to do the right thing under these circumstances."

Senator Buckley's amendment does not explain whether a humane official could wait until the child is weaned before executing the mother or whether it would be cruel and unusual punishment to gas, shoot, electrocute or hang the mother immediately after the umbilical cord is snipped. (When Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren was asked about this, he angrily replied: "Take your question to the Senate.")

Senator Hughes is leaving the Senate, to devote his life to the service and worship of a victim of capital punishment — whose crime was regarded by authorities as worse than that of a murdered named Barababas. The Iowa senator was no more initially successful in this opposition to State-Sanctioned homicide than was another devout Christian political leader named William Willburforce, at the beginning of what was to be a 20 year campaign to abolish the slave trade.

But Jesus Christ neither demanded nor promised his disciples instant success — only that they bear witness, as Harold Hughes has done in the Senate of the United States.

Senator Harold Hughes

"For God's sake, let's not be hypocrites about what we are doing! If we want to execute people then do it! If the open — if the death penalty is to be a deterrent, the more people who see the execution, are offended by it and know that if they ever commit a similar crime they are subject to a similar penalty, the better — this amendment I think will offer a way for the death penalty to be a more effective deterrent to capital crime — it is in fact it is a deterrent at all."

Hughes' proposed amendment directed the United States Marshal to "utilize such communication facilities, including radio and television, as may be necessary to assure the widest possible exposure of all executions at a time most likely to provide such exposure."

Woman complains of cramps

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 27. Why wouldn't get a pain on the left side of lower abdomen midway in the menstrual cycle? There is no bleeding, but sometimes cramps off and on with this pain until the period begins. I had a checkup several months ago, and the doctor said something about congestion of the ovary. Can this be expected to persist? — Mrs. S. G.

Your Good Health

One possible explanation — and not an uncommon one of midcycle pain is "mittelschmerz," which is due to a leaking of blood when an ovum is being extruded from the ovary. That is, when the ovum is released — approximately midcycle.

Some women experience this; others don't. When it does happen, the discomfort ordinarily lasts only a few days and ordinary pain medication is all that is necessary.

When the discomfort persists until the next menstrual period, it would be wise to look for some other condition. The beginning of endometriosis is one possibility that comes to mind. So I would suggest that periodic pelvic examinations are in order until you pin down the cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know how fattening gum is. I would much appreciate if you would tell me how many calories I get if I often am am hoping it is not too fattening. — J.B. The sugar in a stick of gum represents a few calories but you can also buy sugarless gum, in which case you can forget about even those few calories. The gum itself is not digested and represents no calories even if you swallow it. In other words, chewing gum is a waste of time. It's a trivally compared to the diet items that make you take on weight.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: More than 50 years ago drug stores sold charcoal mints consisting of two layers of peppermints with a layer of charcoal between which was advertised as being very good aid for digesting one's food. Is this still good for that purpose? — R. P.

An old, old idea, with possibly a tiny flicker of fact involved but not much. It was thought then that both charcoal and peppermint helped — peppermint held in particular regard then because it was thought to "soothe the stomach."

The charcoal may possibly have absorbed some gas, but it would take an unreasonable amount of charcoal to make any difference to anyone who really had much of a "gas" problem. In which case, something more than candy-coated charcoal would have been required. Neither the peppermint nor the charcoal "aids digestion."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Before I had a breast removed, I was taking hormone shots for my hot flashes. Since the operation the doctor refuses to give me any more of the shots or tablets. He says it may cause cancer to appear again. Is it possible to get relief from any other medicine? — Z.I.I.

It's not that hormones would cause cancer to reappear; rather, if any of the cancer remains, hormones could feed it. In your own case, however, milk tea helps a lot. In a great many cases, however, milk tea helps a lot. In a great deal to minimize hot flashes, so I would recommend that approach.

Scopes trial alive in Tennessee town

DAYTON, Tenn. (UPI) — Nearly 50 years after the historic Scopes "monkey" trial focused world attention on this tranquil hamlet, you can still get an invitation to leave town by speaking up for evolution.

Not much has changed here in the last half-century. The red brick Rhea County Courthouse, with its white arched and pleasing arches, still dominates peaceful Market Street.

The landmark in front of the old Courthouse tells the story of Dayton's skirmish with world history: "Here, from July 10 to 21, 1925, John Thomas Scopes, a county high school teacher, was tried for expounding the theory of the simian descent of man, in violation of a lately passed state law."

About 250 local residents turned out recently for a symposium on the most recent monkey law passed by the Tennessee General Assembly, a statute which requires that all explanations of the origin of man, including the Biblical version, be part of high school biology texts.

During the first hour of the session three scholars discussed the historical, constitutional and scientific issues. Then the spectators were given a chance to ask questions, and it became clear that for many of them, evolution is as controversial as it was that sweltering summer when Clarence Darrow cavorted to the delight of the national press and William Jennings Bryan made his final bid for immortality.

H.L. Mencken, in what may be the most scornful obituary in the annals of journalism, said of Bryan, "His place in Tennessee historiography is secure. If the village barber saved any of his hair, then it is curing gall-stones down there today."

What Mencken did not foresee was that out of the ashes of Bryan's political career there would arise a new populism in Dayton, if not across the United States.

The devil's advocate at this spring's evolution symposium was Frederick Leclercq, associate professor of law at the University of Tennessee. Leclercq argued that including the Genesis version of man's beginning in public school textbooks was a violation of the constitutional doctrine of disestablishmentarianism, the separation of church and state.

"Are you a Christian?" Mrs. June Griffin, of the nearby unincorporated town of Knoxville, Tenn., asked Leclercq. "Do you believe in God?"

Leclercq replied his personal beliefs were not relevant to the issue.

Undaunted, the self-described housewife and Christian asked Leclercq if he had read the Mayflower Compact, in which she said the colonists set forth their intent to found a Christian nation.

Leclercq said he was familiar with the document. "This is a Christian nation," the persistent young woman told him. "And I'm getting sick and tired of hearing we have to tolerate these other religions. I'm fed up with my kids being brainwashed. The Christian fundamentalists have been left you."

A parade of citizens concerned that Tennessee's youth was being brainwashed by evolutionary theory followed Mrs. Griffin.

Mrs. Betty Gleaghtain, a Bryan College teacher of chemistry and physics, said "we don't have any scientific theory that's as old, as full of holes as evolution, but we keep dragging it along, propping it up."

"Why are the evolutionists so exclusive?" she demanded. "Why don't they say to the people who believe in the Bible, 'You've got as much proof as we have which is none.'"

Mencken called people with such arguments "peasants" and "yahoos."

He derided their "childish biology." "But many at the Dayton symposium called attention to gaps in fossil evidence which they said cast doubt on Darwin's theory. They said evolutionism is as much based on faith as any religion."

"Evolutionism is a religion based on science," said Charles Ogilvie, associate professor of history at the University of Tennessee-Martin campus. "Those who believe in it said they had no need of a God."

Biology professor Robert O'Bannon of Lee College in Cleveland, Tenn., said "the problem is that a very small portion of people are making inferences that are not warranted by the empirical data of science."

The anti-evolutionists in Dayton made it clear, however, that they do not believe the problem is small. Their vehemence indicated the problem goes beyond the issue of whether school children should learn about the Bible in science class. They seek an end to the kind of abuse Mencken doled out, damning them, in effect, as lunatics.

Mencken wrote of Bryan during the trial, "What moved him, at bottom, was simply hatred of the city mer, who had laughed at him so long. From my place in the courtroom, I looked directly down upon him. His eyes fascinated me: I watched him all day long. They were blazing points of hatred."

The vehemence of some Daytonians at the symposium testified to the endurance of the feeling. Mencken discerned, Equally revealing was a speech by State Rep. Bill Carter, a Chattanooga Republican, who had this to say about evolution, Scopes, the U.S. Supreme Court, Darrow and the American Civil Liberties Union, which joined in the 1925 test case against the anti-evolution law.

"I was a cosponsor of the current bill," the portly, amiable politician said. "I was a member of the legislature in 1967 and I voted against repeal of the old law because I was fearful evolution might be taught as fact rather than theory."

Carter said he would work in the next session, if he is reelected, to put the Genesis theory of man's origin into all public school texts, regardless of subject or grade level.

He concluded, "In the house chamber every morning we have a prayer to the Heavenly Father, we pledge allegiance to this country and to the God that created us all, and the ACLU and the Supreme Court, and I'm going to stop there!"

Son finds 'himself' during summer

By ERMA BOMBCEK

A couple of years ago, one of our children announced, "I'm taking the summer off to find myself."

He didn't seem to look too hard.

I found him everywhere. Sprawled in front of the TV set, padding around the refrigerator in his bare feet, plugging a stereo, hanging on the phone and tooling around in my car.

Late one afternoon when I went into his room to air his blanket out the window, he fell out. That's when I confronted him. "I did not go through 16 hours of labor to give you a life, just to sit around the house and suck ice cubes all day long. There's a new rule in this house: either get a job or go to summer school."

To date, he has taken such provocative summer subjects as History of the U.S., Frisbee Open, the Wit and Humor of Jane Fonda, Speed Talking for people who have nothing to say, Working Horses For Fun, Advanced Wig Styling, Stalking Euel Gibbons-How to Get Out of a Record Club, and Taking Dictation From a Man Who Mumbles.

"A neighborhood psychologist said to me, 'I don't want to fight you but I think you're in the process of turning out what we call the perennial schoolboy. He's the boy who never grows up but just keeps taking course after course all through his lifetime to put off the reality of work."

My mind immediately recalled a cheerleader we had in college called Stan Hejwig. He was 31 years old, had been attending school for the past 13 years and was only a second semester Freshman. He had switched his major eight times and gone through four university presidents. When the worms went coed, he was the only one who could wander around without a robe and no one cared.

The very thought of raising a Stan Hejwig depressed me.

"What are you doing this summer?" I asked my son.

He whipped out a summer school bulletin. "I don't know. It's a choice between Foreign Policy of World Editors, Ethnic Obscurities or Advanced Party Plans."

"Get a job," I said. "It will open doors for you."

"What doors?"

"The front door, the refrigerator door and my car door for openers."

"I'll never find myself!" he sighed.

"Yeah, but this way you'll have money to hire someone to look for you."

I turned to the dog. Alone at last.

Local children's show rises, dies with changing times

TWIN FALLS — Growing up in the Magic Valley during the '50s and '60s meant afternoons spent in front of the television with Happy Holly. For those thousands of Magic Valley residents, the Double H Corral, the birthday man and the super dooper snooper scope were everyday words — just like Sesame Street, Big Bird and the Cookie Man are for kids today. The Double H Corral, on the air for some 33 years, was the first and only locally produced children's television show in this area from 1956 to about 1967. Happy Holly — minus Holly Houburg — was a near-daily feature in the lives of Magic Valley children.

And the Double H Corral was not just to be observed. If any child could beg a ride from his parents to the KLIH studios in Twin Falls, he could appear on the program. That's something Big Bird could never offer.

Houburg, now a vocational, audiovisual and public relations director at the College of Southern Idaho and working with some of the very people who used to watch him on television, says the days of the locally produced show are over.

"Many people say they wish there was a local show but I think it's just like everything else — the industry has surpassed it," Houburg says. His show "was fine in the intermediate days," he says, "but I don't think it could compete with sophisticated methods of network shows."

While Sesame Street has a flock of advisers, technicians and actors to call upon, the Double H Corral had Holly Houburg — everything wrapped up in one.

Houburg was doing a local country-western radio show billed simply as the happiest man in Idaho when television got its start in Twin Falls.

Shortly before the Magic Valley's first television station, KLIH, went on the air, Houburg was observed by the station manager doing his radio program, and asked on the spot to host a children's program which was then merely an undefined idea.

"Being someone that loves people and likes to talk," he accepted.

And talk he did on that first show. "They turned me loose on the TV set to introduce the show and that was it," Houburg says. Wearing a six gun and a pair of jeans, he talked for an hour about what he planned to do on the show and where the gun came from. Almost immediately kids were flooding the station each day at air time.

Expanding as the show grew, Houburg developed a repertoire of gimmicks and talents to keep the children on their toes.

"If you're going to perform that part, you really work at it," he said. "I had to have the time for it but I developed them as I went along." The youngsters themselves often gave him ideas for the shows, as did their parents. "Kids are creative," he says.

With an old telescope borrowed from Herrett's Jewelers, he created the super dooper snooper scope. With the aid of the scope — and many letters from frustrated parents of unsuspecting children — Happy Holly could look right into any child's home to see if he or she was picking up his homework and doing his chores.

Every day Happy Holly would choose a child from the audience to call the birthday man. The birthday man would then announce the name of every child in the Magic Valley (whose parents had written to the station) who had a birthday that day.

Youngsters often came to the show equipped with their own "six shooters" and were always challenged to a "shlick draw" contest. In 13 years with the show, Happy Holly never won the draw.

"I tried to make kids feel they were each the only one I was talking to," he says. Children would often come up to him on the street and say "Hi, Happy Holly" and he'd greet each one if he knew them.

"Kids were the biggest thing that happened to me," he says. "I'm still working with them. Some of the youngsters I work with today used to watch my show." And some still call him "Happy Holly."

Every dance studio in the valley sent its prima ballerinas and star tap dancers to perform on the show. Boy Scout troops and Camp Fire girls attended the show. Birthday parties celebrated at the Double H Corral.

If any of those watching the program had never made an appearance on the show they at least knew someone who had. Thousands of Magic Valley youngsters could then say they'd "been on television." In those days, many kids got on TV that never would have," Houburg says.

After several years, the state had to ask people to make reservations for the show because the studio was getting to be "war to war" hot. There, as Houburg became increasingly involved with radio production and local appearances on his own and with his country western band, the show was cut from six to five days a week and then to half an hour instead of an hour and was pre-empted.

The show didn't bring a star's salary. Houburg says, which was part of the reason he expanded his work. Besides, "it became a burden. I wanted to devote more time to radio management."

"They turned me loose on the TV set to introduce the show and that was it," Houburg says. Wearing a six gun and a pair of jeans, he talked for an hour about what he planned to do on the show and where the gun came from. Almost immediately kids were flooding the studio each day at air time.

Houburg calls these years "a great experience," but says "sometimes you wonder in a small area if you can keep it going and so you quit while you're ahead." People tend to "judge your show against national network shows that have impleen dollars." By the time the show went off the air, national networks had practically taken over local programming. "When we first started," he says, "we were it."

Houburg says he "likes the changes in the industry if they really enhance and do for the youngster the things they should do in education and entertainment. I still think the moral standards should be high in shaping the child's mind and body."

He is optimistic about the future. "Right will win," he says. "It has so far."

Still, something is lost when youngsters idolize some mythical yellow bird living on some mythical far-away street instead of a real live person that they can meet and talk to.

Once, Happy Holly rode in a parade in Buhl with Tex Ritter. Community groups had put out a lot of money to get the famous cowboy singer and star to come to their community.

Ritter, Houburg says, rode through the streets practically unrecognized. Happy Holly could hardly ride ten feet, because of the crowds mobbing their afternoon companion.

After all, Happy Holly was real.

Radio station plays 'big band' sound

TWIN FALLS — A new program, "The Swinging Years," became a regular part of the radio programming at KTFI Saturday night. Featuring the "big band" are music of Chuck Cecil, the show will be broadcast from 9 p.m. to midnight each Saturday. Station officials said the program is in response to numerous requests for this type of music. Chuck Cecil is known for his programs featuring music of the 30's, 40's, and 50's which he adopted in 1956 in reaction to early rock and roll music that was then monopolizing the airwaves.

Since that time Cecil has been bringing major popular bands to the fans through his special program. Most of the living big band leaders and record companies consider Cecil as a leading expert on music of that era and on big band sounds in general. KTFI officials say,

By the end of the school year you will be anxious to rush into those activities associated with summers and vacations. Here are some suggestions to help assure that your child's summer is healthy, safe and enjoyable.

1. Immunization:
This is a good time to check your immunization schedule with your family physician and bring it up to date. As vacation activities frequently result in cuts and abrasions of the skin, special attention should be paid to tetanus immunization.

2. Sunburn:
The havoc of the sun's strength. Even on a cloudy day you can get a bad burn. To avoid bad sunburns, show your children exposure to direct sunlight only a half hour on the first day at a beach. Gradually build up their resistance to burns by adding a half hour exposure each day.

3. Diet:
The irregularity of vacation activities promotes erratic eating times and diets. Your child should have a balanced diet, paying special attention to seasonal vegetables that are not easily available during the winter.

4. Accidents:
Increased activity also increases accidents during the summer. Drownings are particularly prevalent. Their occurrences can be reduced by following these few simple recommendations:

— Insist that the buddy system be used for all swimming, water skiing, boating and other aquatic activities. If one of the individuals gets into trouble there is someone there to help.

— Anyone in a boat or water skiing should be equipped with a properly fitting life jacket.

— Discourage swimming at night for there is inadequate light.

— Don't overload boats. There should be one experienced swimmer for each non-swimmer in the boat.

WATCH THAT LINE! In Europe, the latest rage is seamed stockings. In London and Paris, the fashionists are combining the stores, for old-time hostery ago, of course, garter belts. All part of the Fannies' Fad. So much for progress.

MUSIC LOVERS JUST HOLD YOUR HORSES. Pretty soon director Ken Russell will get around to everybody in the musical pantheon of fame. (He already has done Tchaikovsky and Mahler.) The way-out director has signed a deal with Sandy Lieberston and David Putnam to do the lives of Berlioz, Liszt, Vaughn Williams, Gershwin. He wants Al Pacino to play Gershwin and Mick Jagger to play Liszt, who was the first "pop" star of the 19th century.

QUESTION: YOU NEVER ASKED. Since LBJ and Nixon saw eye-to-eye on many subjects, how do LBJ aides feel about the President's current troubles? Well, one-time LBJ social secretary Bess Abell wears a yellow, T-shirt with red letters reading "AMNESY FOR NIXON." You can take that any way you like.

Q: Does anybody really think the TV public is going to watch Sonny without Cher? — W. O., Bayside, N. Y.

HOLLYWOOD CASTING GENIUSES AT WORK: The best idea anyone has had since the MGM lion roared is the one to remake "A Star Is Born" with Janet Gaynor and Fredric March, then Judy Garland and James Mason made into two "classics" with a new slant as a vehicle for Cher's rol' rol' singers. Cher Bonu will play the part of the "nobody who makes good with" — get this — herself as the big star on the skies. (That is: if the producers can come to money terms with Old Sweed Hips.)

THE TELL-ALL BOOK OF THE YEAR: A book is in the works on the late President Lyndon Johnson that will probably be the most intimate portrait ever written about a U. S. President. The writer, Dorothy Kearns, was supposed to be at the White House fellow during the Johnson administration. However, when she spoke out against the Vietnam war she was attached to the Labor Department instead

Prison authorities have Ray in super solitary confinement, ostensibly to protect him from inmates who might want to kill him, but Roy claims it is the authorities themselves who want to do him in. # Youngsters learn from each other

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some very special preschool children the other day took cookies a bunch of boys at a junior high school.

They wanted to thank the big fellows for making toys for them. They also wanted to get the feel of the place where the boys made the toys.

It wasn't a case of love at first sight. The children can't ever experience that kind. They are blind.

The exchange program between the blind-preschool children and the junior high kids was arranged by the Lighthouse, the New York Association for the Blind.

The children are enrolled in The Lighthouse Child Development Center for Visually Impaired Children and they've been deriving a great deal of benefit from the joys.

The designs for the playthings by the boys at Thomas Jefferson Junior High were taken from a publication of the American Printing House for the Blind — "Aids for Teaching Basic Concepts of Science Development." It was felt that the blind children would receive even more benefits they could meet with the student craftsmen, touch the wood and machines used to make the toys, feel the sawdust and so forth.

The older, sighted children would at the same time grow the way visually unimpaired young folks do when meeting and visiting with blind children they had helped.

Little Denise Flores, another student from the Lighthouse, had to be held in arms to get high enough to feel sandpaper scratching against whirling wood lathes in the woodshop of the school in the East New York section of Brooklyn.

Thelma Coleman opened her mouth wide and let out a happy sound each time she turned a big vacuum cleaner on and off.

Telling more than words were expressions on faces of students such as Phillip Caban, as he held Eric Rivera, a little blind boy, and subjected his inquisitive hand to the sandpaper.

It seemed that way, too, when Arnon Tin-Boh, a little one from the Lighthouse, showed Augusto Diaz how he plays with a toy made by Diaz.

He puts a square peg into a square hole.

The big boy seemed to have tears in his eyes, too.
