Nixon off to Europe, Moscow

President gets farewell kiss from daughter Julie

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon headed today for his third Summit meeting in a little over two years with Soviet leaders, expressing hope his new "journey for peace" would help avoid a runaway arms race and a danger of world war.

In a brief departure ceremony at Andrews Air Force Base, just outside Washington, Nixon said that "as we take off on another journey for peace," his aim at the Moscow Summit was threefold:

"First, we expect to strengthen the bilateral relations between the two strongest nations in the world.
"Second, we hope to develop areas of cooperation to displace confrontation in other critical areas of the world that might be those places where conflict could develop between the two great powers.

"And third, we hope to make more progress on a goal that we began to achieve and move forward toward in 1972 of limiting both the burden and also the threat of nuclear arms over our two nations and over the world generally."

The President seemed in good spirits, having apparently recovered strength from the fatiguing Mideast trip. He also showed no sign, in his public appearances on leaving the White House and at the airbase, of the attack of phlebotomiasis which affected his left leg while he was on his way to the Mideast.

He expressed confidence, in his departure statement, that most Americans "are united behind the efforts we are making to attempt to resolve differences that otherwise would lead to a runaway arms race and otherwise would lead to confrontation not only between two great powers but all over the world."

Reply law killed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today unanimously struck down a Florida law giving political candidates free newspaper space to reply to criticism of them by the paper.

The ruling was loudly applauded by the nation's daily press, held that the law violated the First Amendment guarantee of a free press because it operates as a command in the same sense as a statute or regulation forbidding a newspaper from publishing something.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, in the opinion reversing the Florida Supreme Court, said: "A newspaper is more than a passive receptacle or conduit for news, comment and advertising. The rights of material to go into newspapers and the decisions made as to limitation on the size of the paper, and content, and treatment of public issues and public officials — whether fair or unfair — constitutes the exercise of editorial control and judgment."

Canyon claims TF boy

JEROME — An 18-year-old Twin Falls boy died in a fall into the Snake River Canyon Monday night.

John David Aslett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell T. Aslett, Twin Falls, died in the mishap.

Jerome County officials, assisted by Twin Falls County officers, Idaho State Police, the Twin Falls County Search and Rescue Unit and Magic Valley Ambulance personnel worked until about 8 a.m. today in bringing the body from a rock ledge on the north side of the river near Pillar Falls.

Officers said the young man and a companion had gone to the north side of the canyon to look at the Eyal Knievel jump site and were walking along the rim in the vicinity of Pillar Falls across from the ramp when the 18-year-old slipped and fell about 8 p.m.

Cloyce Edwards, ambulance service operator, estimated the youth fell about 150 feet from the top of the rim to a rock ledge. He said it was necessary for the ambulance crew and rescue squad to climb about 300 feet up the canyon wall to reach the body. He said the Aslett boy apparently died instantly when he struck a rock outcropping.

State police said the companion went to the converted bus manned by the Idaho Department of Highways at the Perrine Bridge entrance to report the accident. The companion's name was unavailable this morning.

Assistance was requested from the Jerome County sheriff's office and later from the Twin Falls officers.

The Jerome Fire Department was called to the scene to shine floodlights into the canyon while efforts were made to recover the body.

Officers said a boat was taken into the canyon on the south side and put into the river at the Taylor Orchard, then moved upstream to a spot beneath the ledge where the body rested.

FIREMEN and county officers assist in recovery of body of John David Aslett, 18, Twin Falls, from Snake River Canyon Monday night.

Thirst prompted march

By ED MITCHELL

POCATELLO — Intense heat and thirst prompted the desert march on which a Pocatello boy was lost June 10, according to a group leader.

Jeff Hodgson, 17, was lost during a wilderness survival training course offered by the Idaho Department of Environmental and Community Services (DECS).

His body was found Thursday by a lone searcher in the desert about 15 miles northeast of Minidoka. The boy apparently died of heat exhaustion, according to a report by Blaine County Coroner Roy Butler.

Brenda Greiner, Pocatello, a volunteer leader with the group, said today the group of 11 boys and girls ages 10 to 12 and four adult leaders set out the morning of June 10 in search of a road where they were to meet a supply vehicle.

She said the group could not find the road and ran out of water in the over 100 degree heat. Two teachers, Fred Chesley and Karen Kimesy, both Pocatello, left the others to go ahead to find water. The main group stayed behind to wait.

Miss Greiner said the two adults and the children waited for several hours until the children became bored and thirsty. They decided to walk to find water or the road. They did not know at the time that the supply vehicle had broken down and did not reach the area, according to Miss Greiner.

The walk "seemed like a never-ending road which seemed like a street paved in gold. In time, Miss Greiner said, they said they did not walk faster than usual, but did not take rest stops until they reached the road."

"It was when the group realized the road that they reached Jeff Hodgson and another Pocatello boy, Rocky Nelissen, were not with the other children. She said that she was at the head of the group during the march. Another leader, Keith Johnson, walked toward the rear.

She said Jeff and Rocky were not as tired as the rest and had "a lot of spunk in them." Johnson went back several times in unsuccessful attempts to find the boys, according to Miss Greiner. She said when Johnson returned to the group, they became "deeply concerned."

Miss Greiner said, "I personally don't think the boys ran away." She said neither she nor Johnson had ever heard the boys discuss leaving the group but that the other about 100 reported to them the boys had talked of running away.

Miss Greiner said the group was not found until Tuesday evening after they had reached a stagnant cattle watering tank where they drank. She said there had been no contact with anyone until Tuesday night to notify authorities that the boys were lost. The group did not have communication equipment.

Miss Greiner said Johnson searched for the boys from about 7:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday.

POCATELLO — "Heat exhaustion," heat strokes or dehydration "caused the death of a Pocatello youth lost in the desert near Minidoka, according to a pathologist's report."

Dr. Edward Fisher Pocatello, said there was no evidence of snake bite or serious injury which would have led to the death of Jeff Hodgson, 17.

The boy was lost June 10 when he became separated from a group undergoing wilderness survival training in the desert.

According to the report, the boy probably died three to four days after he was lost June 10. About 400 persons had participated in the search to find him. The search was unsuccessful when it was officially called off June 17. The boy's body was found June 20.

According to the report, authorities do not know how long the boy had been without water or food before he died.

An inquest has been scheduled at the Blaine County courthouse Friday. An official inquiry into the State-sponsored training program is expected to be completed late Wednesday or Thursday morning.

According to Bower, the Navy is seeking sites which meet three criteria:

— the site should be located in a thinly populated area.

— the site should be fairly level, in order to reduce the cost of installation. The transmitter could be operated in mountainous terrain, but costs would be high, he said.

— the soil and rock should have low electrical conductivity in order for the grid to operate at high efficiency. Dry desert soil and rock might be ideal, he said.

Knievel sees big jump crowd

By CRICKET BIRD

TWIN FALLS — Eyal Knievel said Monday 200,000 people are going to witness his Snake River Canyon jump.

And the city of Twin Falls isn't going to know what hit it, the motorcycle daredevil predicted.

Knievel spelled out the plans for the jump week to the Times-News from a New York hotel. Motorcycle races with $25,000 in prizes will start on Sept. 1 and last until Sept. 8 on land leased by Knievel at the jump site.

On Sept. 2, the countdown for the jump begins, Knievel said. Sept. 8 is the day set for the jump.

Tickets for the whole week of events, culminating in the 10-powered jump, will go for $25 a head, Knievel said. About 30,000 to 50,000 tickets permitting access to the take-off area will be sold, he said.

Knievel impersonated a fictitious business manager for the 10-part-of-the-telephone interview. As the business manager, Knievel said, "He (Knievel) is only going to sell as many tickets as it's safe to sell."

Knievel said he had been trying to tell the "Idaho farmers" what was going to happen when he jumped the canyon for several years.

He added, he hopes the town is in the same shape the day after the jump as it was the day before.

Knievel unveiled his plans to the nation at a Monday press conference in New York City at Rockefeller Center's plush Rainbow Room, attended by more than 200 members of the press.

Wearing a white suit with a modish red sports shirt, red shoes and socks, Knievel talked about his jump, skycycle X-2, the descendant of Skycycle X-1 which plunged into the canyon last year. It is about 12 feet long, is painted red, white and blue, and looks something like a wingless jet.

Powered by steam, the skycycle will be launched from a 56 degree ramp. Knievel or his producers have indicated that the canyon is a mile wide; best estimates available at the site make it to be more like a third of a mile wide.

CSI mulls seniors programs

By CRICKET BIRD

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho trustees Monday agreed to decide July 15 whether they will accept administration of Magic Valley senior citizen programs.

The CSI board decision will follow a planned meeting with officials of the Idaho Office on Aging (IOA).

A task force of senior citizens last month voted CSI its number one choice for regional program administration. The college board has not decided yet to formally apply for the job.

Board trustees took up the question at their regular board meeting Monday night. Trustee John Coleman said he had spoken with several

IOA officials, but was not ready to make a recommendation to the board.

At the end of the discussion, board members moved to postpone action until they could meet with representatives of the state office on aging July 11 or 12, and then set the decision.

The state office, responsible for the final choice of aging fund administrator, originally hoped for a June 1 decision, the postponed action until mid-June, and then set the decision back to the first of July. According to Coleman, they now hope for an Aug. 1 decision.

Better gas mileage demanded

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., Monday called for better gasoline mileage and cleaner industrial production and said that through the middle 1980's energy conservation will be the major tool for dealing with energy problems.

Stevenson said personal sacrifices such as less air conditioning and summer car trips "are the least important kind of energy conservation."

Plen bargains fail for pair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski said today that two of the four remaining defendants in the Ellsberg break-in case nearly pleaded guilty last week but the plan fell through at the last moment.

Confirming what had been widely rumored, Jaworski said in a legal brief that Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez had been negotiating with his office to settle their cases short of trial.

Chavez raps enforcement lack LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Cesar Chavez, head of the United Farm Workers, said he is starting a campaign to raise the "terrible problem of 60,000 to 70,000 illegal Mexican and Filipino workers" on the Pacific coast.

Chavez charged the Department of Justice is not enforcing the law preventing illegal laborers from entering the U.S. and preventing them from breaking his union's strike.

Portuguese fire on irate miners

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique (UPI) — Portuguese troops opened fire on an angry crowd of black miners today, killing seven men and wounding six others, the army command said.

A crowd of 600 African miners returning home from South Africa to Mozambique by train refused to allow customs officials at the Ressano-Garcia border post go through their baggage, the army said.

Palestinian reprisal attack claims 7 lives in coast town

By United Press International
The military command of the Palestinian guerrillas assumed responsibility for an attack early today on the Israeli coastal town of Nahariyya and said it was a reprisal for Israeli air raids on Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon.

Seven persons were killed, including an Israeli woman and her two children who tried to escape the guerrillas by jumping out a window.

The three attacking guerrillas were cut down when Israeli troops blasted their way into an apartment building where they were holding out. An Israeli soldier also was killed. Six soldiers and a civilian were wounded.

"This operation was a quick reply to the barbaric attacks which the enemy launched on the refugee camps of our people," a statement issued in Damascus by the General Command of the Palestinian Revolution said.

The statement of the Palestinian general command did not identify the guerrillas, but said that the three Arab attackers belonged, but other guerrillas sources in Beirut said they belonged to Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla organization. The guerrillas landed at the resort of Nahariyya, a town of 25,000 persons four miles south of Tyre, on the Lebanese coast.

They came in on a Mediterranean sea, from a rubber, commando-style raft equipped with an outboard motor and touched shore about 200 yards from the three-story apartment building, an Israeli military spokesman said.

Neighbors said the assault began an hour before midnight and ended 3 1/2 hours later when army troops stormed the white concrete and stone building under heavy fire.

"There is a possibility that more attempts may be made by sea because the guerrillas could be finding it harder to cross the frontier by land," an Israeli military spokesman said after inspecting the rubber raft.

In another guerrilla attack, the Israeli military command reported several mortar shells fired early today at the border town of Qiryat Shimon, where 29 Israelis were killed in a guerrilla attack last May. The command said the mortar fire was returned and there were no casualties.

The attack came less than 24 hours after Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told settlers in a speech at Qiryat Shimon that "perpetual war against the terrorists" infiltrating from Lebanon.

Witnesses in Nahariyya said the guerrillas were first seen by sea because the guerrillas ordered them to halt in the street and were answered by gunfire as the raiders rushed for the apartment building at 19 Bakfur Street.

Authorities said the guerrillas apparently planned to strike a school in the neighborhood, where students were to prepare for an end-of-term party, later in the day.

"The first thing I heard was explosions," said Mrs. Hanna Halevi, a tenant in the apartment building. "We didn't know we were afraid to make noise."

The guerrillas went through the building spraying each apartment door with machine gun fire, then broke into the apartment where Mrs. Irene Zaranika, a 39-year-old kindergarten teacher, her husband and two children were hiding.

Mrs. Zaranika and her two-year-old son and 10-year-old daughter tried to escape by jumping from a window but were cut down by guerrilla gunfire, military sources said.

Nurse strike talks pushed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Negotiations under the direction of the nation's top medical mediator were expected to start Monday in an effort to end a nurses' strike which started June 7.

W. J. Usery Jr. of the Federal Mediation Service took charge of the bargaining Saturday and clamped a news blackout on the talks.

Some 4,400 members of the California Nurses Association were striking 41 hospitals from San Jose to Sacramento.

The demand by the CNA was that the nurses be given a voice in staffing decisions in the hospitals.

A spokesman for Usery declined to comment on whether there was progress in the talks. "They've been negotiating for six months so it's not that easy," he said.

"Health, Education" and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger, meanwhile, said in a telegram to regulators that both sides should "put the interest of the patients first and reach a speedy settlement."

"The patients are not a party to the dispute and they should not be involuntarily made to be its pawns with their lives possibly at stake. The health and welfare of sick patients should transcend all other concerns."

Imported oil cost increases push US trade into deep red

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. balance of trade, pushed by a cost increase in imported petroleum products, went into the red by the largest amount of any month in 2 1/2 years, the Commerce Department reported today.

The value of imports outstripped exports by $777 million last month, the department said. This is the farthest the U.S. foreign trade account has been in the red since October 1971, when the effect of a longshoreman's strike forced an $815 million deficit.

The dramatic slump in the trade balance stemmed chiefly from two factors — the enormous increase in the cost of importing petroleum products coupled with a sharp decline in exports of U.S.-produced agricultural crops and livestock.

Although the U.S. trade picture, after 2 1/2 years of surplus, has been heading downward toward a deficit position since the onset of the price boom last fall, May's big decline was the sharpest evidence that the Arab oil price policy has hit the American market.

Imports in May were valued at $10.3 billion. This was only a 3.4 percent rise over April and was the smallest monthly increase since December.

On the other hand, exports of U.S. goods rose over April by $7.6 billion, or 7.2 percent from a month earlier. This was the first monthly decline in overseas shipments of American-produced goods since September 1972.

US court narrows libel guards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By a 5-4 vote, the Supreme Court today narrowed the protection publications have against libel suits, giving private citizens a better chance to defend their reputations.

The Court reversed lower court rulings in a libel suit by a Chicago lawyer and author against John Birch Society. The Supreme Court sent the case back for a new trial.

The case involves an April 1969 article by Alan S. Sang, a contributing author to the magazine American Opinion. Sang called Elmer Gertz, a lawyer, a "Communist-fronter" and a "Leninist," and a participant in Marxist and "red" activities.

Gertz won a $50,000 jury verdict against Robert Welch Inc., publisher of American Opinion. That was reversed by a federal district court on grounds Gertz failed to prove the magazine knew the statements were false and showed "reckless disregard" for the truth — two standards for proving libel.

The lower court, in disregarding the jury's verdict, cited two factors — the enormous increase in the cost of importing petroleum products coupled with a sharp decline in exports of U.S.-produced rebuttal than do public officials and public figures, they are more vulnerable to injury from defamation. Because they have not voluntarily exposed themselves to increased risk of injury from defamatory falsehoods, they are also more deserving of recovery.

"The state should therefore have a greater interest in compensating for injury to the reputation of private citizens than for public figures," the Court said.

In a dissenting opinion by Justice William O. Douglas said the framers of the Constitution protected free speech in clear language and Douglas said he thinks the First Amendment "was not intended to be construed as passing any libel law."

The case arose out of the conviction of a Chicago policeman, Richard Nuccio, for murder in the death of Ronald Nelson, 17. Gertz brought a damage suit against Nuccio. The magazine contended Nuccio's murder trial was part of a Communist conspiracy to discredit local police. It called the Nuccio verdict a "frameup" and called Gertz a "Communist-fronter" for participating in the suit.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Highlights of President Nixon's trip to Brussels and Moscow: Today — The President and Mrs. Nixon leave Andrews AFB at 8:30 a.m. EDT, following a breakfast ceremony at the White House, arriving in Brussels in the early evening for a welcome by King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola. The Nixons will pass through the museum, King and Queen at the royal palace, then spend the night at residence of ambassador Leonard Firestone.

Wednesday (June 26): Nixon holds private meetings with Italian Prime Minister Mariano Rumor, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, and attends a closed, private session of NATO representatives.

Lunch will be formal, hosted by King Baudouin while Mrs. Nixon has luncheon with museum. Early in the evening, Nixon holds a reception at the U.S. Embassy for about 110 guests, including NATO heads of state and their representatives.

Thursday (June 27): The presidential party flies to Moscow in the morning, where Nixon will be guests at the Kremlin. Nixon and Brezhnev expect to hold their first formal meeting that afternoon.

President Nikolai Podgorny of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet will host a dinner in Nixon's honor in the evening.

Friday (June 28): Nixon will place a wreath at a tomb of unknown soldier outside Kremlin.

Saturday (June 29): The Nixons go by motorcade to the White House summit and spaceport, then fly to the Crimea and arrive at Brezhnev's resort on Black Sea.

Sunday (June 30): Nixon will relax further with Brezhnev and attend church services.

Monday (July 1): Nixon flies to Minsk for a meeting with Belorussian officials and a night, returning to Moscow.

Tuesday (July 2): Nixon and Brezhnev expected to sign another agreement and the President — as he did during the last Moscow summit — Brezhnev did in the United States — will deliver a national televised address.

The Nixons will hold a farewell dinner for Brezhnev and leadership at the U.S. Embassy in the evening.

Wednesday (July 3): The President and Brezhnev will sign a final communique and the Nixon party will leave Washington, arriving shortly after 7 p.m. EDT.

in-ville. During the day, Nixon and Brezhnev will hold one or two private meetings, followed by social evening including concert at Bolshoi Theater. The White House indicates that first of a series of U.S.-Soviet agreements will be signed Friday.

Canyon jump set Sept. 8

Knievel's producers, Top Rank Inc. of New York, presented him with a $5 million check at the press conference. "It's a guaranteed advance on the 50 per cent of the gross Evel will make from the jump. Or the 60 per cent his heirs will make. The motorcycle daredevil admits there's a chance he may not make it. Knievel starts today on a whirlwind 39-city promotional tour... called the "Evel Knievel Says Goodbye Tour."

According to Knievel, his scientific adviser, Robert Traux, who once designed missiles, says "my chances are 50-50... If one, if the vehicle does not blow up on the launch ramp; two, if I go straight up in the air and does not flip over backwards and come back into the crowd; three, if I go 2,000 feet up at 350 miles an hour and goes across the canyon; four, if the parachute system opens; five, if when they open, I come down on the other side and can stand the G forces, and six, if I can get out of the vehicle."

According to a news account, Knievel figures "five per cent of the people want to see me die... 45 per cent don't want to see me die but want to be there if I do and 50 per cent are pulling for me."

Knievel says his stunt will "outdraw the pro bowl and the superbowl put together... and I'll make more money than any heavyweight fighter in history."

His promoters hope to make up to $20 million on the closed-circuit TV broadcast of the spectacular. Tickets for the show will be $10 per person.

Even in Idaho, preparations for the jump-by state, county and city agencies seem barely underway. Many officials contacted said they didn't know how to reach Knievel, and were waiting for a valise for him to reach them.

Bureau of Land Management officials say Knievel can't miss landing on their land... whether on the other side of the canyon or at the bottom. But no application for landing has been made yet.

According to the BLM, Knievel would be responsible for providing sanitary facilities, disposing of litter, and for fire prevention.

"He's causing a terrific nuisance, the way we see it," Dick Geier of the state BLM office said.

And the BLM cynically expects masses of cyclists to be present, that nobody was going to stop him from jumping the canyon.

Security, a prime concern of the Twin Falls County Sheriff Paul Corder, will be handled by the Governor and Attorney General, "good friends of mine," Knievel said.

Apparently, neither Knievel or his Twin Falls contact, Mike Gray has met with the state. So hotels are filling here, while Evel and his New York producers are jettisoning from Boston to Buffalo, and Denver to Detroit, promoting the spectacular.

Pet show set

TWIN FALLS — The Kid Tower Club will sponsor a pet show Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. at 235 Clinton Dr., an Airport Rd.

The show is for kids only, ages 6 to 14. No animals over 200 pounds may be entered, no horses or cows of any kind are permitted.

Entrance fee is 25 cents for exhibitors and 10 cents for spectators. Free refreshments for exhibitors will be provided. Exhibitors should bring ropes and cages and leashes. First, second and third place prize ribbons will be awarded.

For more information, call 733-2257.

2 tool thefts reported in TF

Washington St. N. — reported someone broke into his basement through an outside basement entrance and took tools and a tool box valued at $250. He also removed fishing poles and tackle, an ice chest and camping stove.

Berth estimated his total loss at $452. Officers said investigation is continuing in both incidents.

2 tool thefts reported in TF

TWIN FALLS — Two thefts of tools were reported to Twin Falls city police Monday.

David Meloy, 53, Second Ave. W. told officers someone entered his unlocked vehicle sometime Monday night while it was parked at his home and took $35 in tools and a tool pouch.

Drug problems mount in Blaine

By BART QUESNELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A roommate found Steve Myers dead here last week of an apparent heroin overdose.

The death swelled the total of drug-related fatalities in Blaine County to six in the last 14 months. Five of the deaths occurred in Ketchum; the sixth was in Sun Valley. Three were the result of heroin overdoses.

"I don't run into it that often," he said.

But state authorities and Ketchum police chief Dennis Hyman are convinced of a rapid spread of drugs in the area.

Orville Hendricks, Idaho drug enforcement agency, said agents are working this area heavily and conducting on-going investigations.

Haynes is mad and confused. "I'm tired of preaching to the choir," he said.

"I told the people here five years ago we had a drug problem but they wouldn't listen."

"I've attempted to form a county-wide narcotics force with the sheriff's office and city police officers and have gotten nowhere. I'm tired of banging my head against the wall."

Haynes said hard drug use was rising alarmingly across the county.

"How do you get through to the people that drugs are scattered over this county everywhere," he said. "We've probably had more drug deaths in little over a year than the whole state of Idaho has had, period."

An official with the attorney general's office in Boise said last week investigation was continuing into organized drug dealing in the state. Hendricks said some thousand-dollar cocaine and heroin arrests have been staged in the area.

A Ketchum couple was arrested last month in Miami smuggling cocaine into the United States. Drug enforcement officials could not say whether the cocaine was coming to Blaine County.

All drug enforcement personnel said cocaine use is rising. Drug oriented cultures have taken to cocaine as the "drug" according to one official. Several agents along the California-Mexico border say heroin and cocaine smuggling is at all-time highs.

One official with the attorney general's office said arrests have been made on heroin buyers in large quantities in the state. An investigation is underway into an organized crime syndicate working throughout the state, he said.

Idaho Power owes more

WASHINGTON — The US Supreme Court effectively ruled Monday that Idaho Power Co. must pay an additional $123,365 in federal taxes.

The money represents taxes the power company had deducted on equipment used in plant construction in 1962 and 1963, according to a report from the Gannett News Service.

In accord with the Federal Power Commission and Idaho Public Utilities Commission procedures, Idaho Power had charged the depreciation of its construction equipment to its capital assets.

The question, according to a 17-page majority opinion by Justice Harry Blackmun, is whether depreciation of such equipment should be deducted over the short life of the equipment itself or should be included in the long-term depreciation of the capital facilities constructed.

In an 8-1 decision, the court ruled with the Internal Revenue Service that the equipment depreciation should be included in the long-term depreciation of the facilities constructed.

Justice William O. Douglas, who rarely allies with big power companies, dissented.

Douglas maintained that the court lacks expertise to deal with technical and complex tax questions. He said the question belongs before Congress; the news service reported.

The Justice accused the IRS of arbitrarily choosing a depreciation method that would produce the most revenue.

2 bid openings scheduled Friday

TWIN FALLS — Two bid openings will be held Friday at Twin Falls City Hall.

City Manager Jean Miller said the city will open bids on about two and one-half miles of street improvement. An overlay-type paving is called for in improving several of the more traveled streets in the city.

Miller said an estimated 55,000 square yards of asphalt mix material will be needed in the project.

Streets scheduled for the overlay treatment include parts of Addison Avenue East, Piler Avenue and Piler Avenue East.

Work is scheduled for completion during the summer paving months, Miller said.

"Another bid opening Friday will be for the purchase of three mowing machines for use in various city parks. Bids will be opened at city hall at 4 p.m."

Tickets available for 'Slow Dusk'

TWIN FALLS — Tickets will be available at the door, Wednesday at 8:15 P.M. for the production "Slow Dusk" at the CSI Auditorium.

All proceeds of the performance will benefit the CSI music and drama department. The musical was composed by Carlisle Floyd and is sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club.

August benefit performance set

TWIN FALLS — Plans for a benefit performance by the Antique Theatre were made at a meeting of the Twin Falls County Mental Health Association Monday night.

The play "Rip'd Van Winkle," one of the repertory theater's summer productions, will be presented at 8 p.m. Aug. 21 in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts auditorium.

Senior citizens will be invited at reduced prices and all service clubs are being contacted for possible theater parties for their members.

Proceeds will be used to support a VISTA volunteer in mental health work, with special emphasis on after-care program for patients returning from State Hospital South, Blackfoot.

Boy Slotten, president, reported $600 has been sent to the Idaho State Mental Health Association for support of state and national mental health education, and Sue Klug, membership chairman, made a final report on the spring membership banquet.

The group will have an information booth at the Twin Falls County Fair this fall with pamphlets, covering many aspects of mental health available to the public.

The Monday night meeting was held at the home of Tracy Bailey, VISTA worker here the past year, who will be leaving next month. Another VISTA volunteer is expected in August. Miss Bailey was commended for her work in community involvement in doing the initial work on formation of an after-care program.

Al Reyes was named the new treasurer, replacing Debbie Kraus, who has moved.

The July 22 meeting will be held at the Slotten home.

Licenses expire

TWIN FALLS — License plates ending in 6 expire June 30 at midnight, according to Twin Falls County assessor Ronald Taylor.

The assessor's office is closed on weekends making Friday the last day to renew stickers, before they expire. Stickers may be purchased in the license plate office at the courthouse Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

They are also available at the Dallas Agency in Buhl.

Gem political campaign heats up

By United Press International

Idaho's political campaign heated up Monday as a Democratic first congressional district candidate leveled charges of "slur" against the present Republican incumbent congressman.

Ken Miller, a free lance writer from Sandpoint, charged Congressman Steve Symms with "fatehoods—in this disclosure of campaign expenditures."

Miller said that an analysis of the contributions Republican Symms received in 1972 showed that 60 per cent of the money came from out-of-state.

Miller said, however, that Symms had maligned that not more than 30 per cent of the fund originated out of Idaho.

"Therefore," Miller said, "Symms appears to be a liar."

Meantime, Republican lieutenant governor candidate Hoye Kading urged Idaho voters to encourage political candidates who have not done so to sign the "Sunshine Initiative to require campaign disclosure and lobbyist registration."

"It is my firm belief that people want this openness, and if we are to have their confidence and restore credibility to the political process, then all candidates should sign the initiative," Mrs. Kading said.

She said there were parts of the initiative she didn't agree with, "but I do believe full disclosure of campaign funding by all candidates, and the Sunshine Initiative is a step in the right direction."

Another political candidate, Roy Truby, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for state public instruction superintendent, called for a "more equitable system of funding our schools."

"We need to do more than just satisfy the courts," Truby

Popular place

MAGIC Reservoir continues to be a popular sportsman's stopping off place. Campers like the beach weekends and the cabins are filled. The water is high and fishing hasn't been the best this year so far. But, according to the campers, there's fun in beating water skiing or just relaxing along the water's edge.

Mile-wide canyon leap?

For the next couple of months, the hoopla over Evel Knievel and his leap across the Snake River canyon will increase in intensity across the nation.

At a press conference amid the brick canyons of New York, Knievel described the leap as a mile long and the canyon as a thousand feet deep.

Persons who know the territory say the canyon is only about 1,500 feet wide at the jump point — though Knievel will probably be airborne for more than that distance — and the depth is around 500 feet at the jump site.

We'll grant that in the publicity emporiums back East, Knievel's meager earnings sound more impressive than the actual figures.

Anyway, if you try it, it's a whole of a jump.

Public employes and the public

Wall Street Journal

In a show of firmness that was overdue, a New York judge recently cracked down on three leaders of New York's Unemployed Firefighters Association who allegedly faked a strike.

But come on, Evel — let's stick with the truth in packaging this bit of show biz. It might keep a lot of people from being disappointed when they find out the real facts.

However, the question that underlies this and similar cases goes far beyond a simple question of crime and punishment. The nation now has some 15 million government employes.

One thing that all types of governments have traditionally had in common has been a low tolerance for unionism and strikes by their own employes.

Nonetheless public employe unionization has risen sharply over the last decade, particularly since President Kennedy permitted limited federal negotiation with such unions in 1962.

One obvious answer — one which applies to any number of other problems — is to kill inflation. The clamor for higher pay and the willingness to go to extraordinary lengths to acquire it, is almost certain to abate if inflation can be brought under control.

Similarly, it should be a goal of public policy to maintain some parity between the compensation of the public employes and that of private employes in similar occupations.

Beyond that, public employes should be encouraged by public officials to participate in the making of public policy, rather than having to fight their way in the door through their unions.

Public employes strikes reflect alienation of workers who traditionally have identified themselves with the public welfare.

That is not something to be taken lightly. They should be treated firmly where laws are violated but that is only the beginning of a solution.

Observer thinks court will rule for President

WASHINGTON — Over a cup of coffee the other day, expert Supreme Court watcher of 35 years experience put it flatly: "I don't think you can find three members of the court who believe they have jurisdiction in the Nixon-Jaworski squabbles."

He was addressing himself to the court's order agreeing to consider President Nixon's plea that the Watergate grand jury had no authority to name him as an indicted conspirator in the Watergate coverup.

Could be. One section of the order instructed opposing lawyers to discuss in their written briefs and oral arguments the question of whether U.S. District Judge John Sirica's compelling the President to yield more tape recordings to Prosecutor Leon Jaworski's "an appealable order."

has the authority "to entertain and decide" Nixon's appeal of the Sirica ruling and the grand jury's action.

What the Court order was saying, of course, was that somebody would have to convince its members that they had a legal right to get mixed up in the squabbles.

Andrew Tully

It's a fascinating situation. Nixon's lawyers would seem to have an arguable point in declaring that the grand jury was powerless to act against him. Such action by a grand jury, they argued, exceeded its authority because only the House of Representatives, with its impeachment power, has the right to deal with criminal conduct by a President.

Besides, the lawyers argued, such a decision (to approve the grand jury's naming of Nixon) could be interpreted to mean that a President would be subject to similar action by any grand jury throughout the United States.

Jaworski noted a number of Supreme Court rulings that a vote of a "properly constituted grand jury conclusively determines the existence of probable cause" to name any individual as a co-conspirator in a given case.

The unanimous 9-0 grand jury vote to name Nixon was based on evidence available at the time only to the grand jury, said Jaworski.

In any case, if the Court ducks both issues by pleading lack of jurisdiction Nixon would have an out. A refusal to rule might be construed by Nixon as "definitive" and cause him to defy Sirica's order (or release of the tapes).

Presumably, Sirica then could hold the President in contempt, but where that would lead my expert Supreme Court watcher refuses to venture a guess.

My expert guess is that the squabble would wind up as a partial victory for Nixon if the court pleads no jurisdiction. That could be a good thing for the country, not because Nixon is necessarily innocent, but because the matter then would be decided in the House through impeachment proceedings, and that's the constitutionally wiser way to handle the mess.

The Nixon victory would be only partial because you can be sure many members of the House would be influenced by the grand jury's naming of Nixon as a co-conspirator — and probably by his refusal to turn over the tapes.

Fascinating is the word. A writer-of-fiction would never get away with it.

Free oranges deceptive

(C) Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — After a trip about the Middle East like the deckhand of an accused Flying Dutchman, that legendary ship sailing through the spectral mists headed for nowhere, a traveler finds himself with something of a re-entry problem.

It always takes a little time to slough off the jet lag and regain one's bearings. This is especially true for a traveler in the Middle East, where one feels constantly hustled. The politics of intrigue was cradled along the Euphrates and Nile, and it has retained some of the ancient guile of the region's stormy past.

A story heard on President Nixon's nine-day sortie roughly illustrates a point about the mentality of the area. An Arab politician, accustomed to taking an afternoon nap was disturbed one day by children playing in an alley outside his window. A crafty man, he opened the window and said, "Why are you children playing here in the alley when they're giving away free oranges in the market?"

And that gets us back to the re-entry problem. When the traveler left here 10 days earlier, there was an impeachment inquiry underway by the House Judiciary Committee into the suspicious affairs of the President. Upon his return, charges that the President's right of due process is being violated by committee leaks can be heard all over town.

The leaks may be, as Judiciary Committee

Chairman Peter Rodino says, "unfortunate" if they truly impinge upon due process, they are inexcusable. But what about the truth of them?

But for "leaks" from troubled law enforcement officials — and disgruntled bureaucrats, even from conscience-stricken employes of the Committee — to re-elect the President, the Watergate story might still be lodged in the files of the White House, stamped secret, with pious functionaries prepared to shrivel "national security" at the drop of a subpoena.

Peter Lisagor

The re-entry problem is aggravated for the traveler when he discovers that newspapers which make the most of the leaks bend way over backwards to prove their "objective" approach to affairs of state by treating the Clawson-Buchanan counter-offensive with a solemn detachment.

One is reminded that when the prosecutors were moving on Spiro Agnew, there also was a furious outcry against leaks, much less hearing about how the man was being maligned and deprived of his rights, until he ended the charade by copping a plea.

If folks around here aren't careful they will come to believe, with the patience that they're really giving away free oranges.

Italy on brink of chasm crossed by narrow span

(C) New York Times Service

RICKMOND, VA. — The present Italian crisis has been the worst since World War II.

The economy remains on the brink of collapse; the system of law and order has broken down; the curious formula of administering the state, as a non-government or, in fact, virtually without government, has reached a dead end; the tentative groping for compromise between the two main ideological groups, Catholics and Communists, has ceased.

The result is a continuing possibility of a financial disaster and social disorder with a lame-duck regime floundering. It is unlikely the population would ever tolerate a Communist regime, even if legally produced. It is equally unlikely it would accept a dictatorship, either fascist or military.

Since the early 1960's Italy has mostly been governed in theory if not in fact) under the formula of an "opening to the left," meaning a coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists and Social Democrats, supported by the small Republican party — like the group now hanging on by its teeth.

The system maintained so long as Western prosperity reigned, nurturing Italy's economic recovery, so long as the United States made known it would oppose any Communist takeover, and so long as the Vatican urged voters to oppose the Kremlin.

commitments followed the Vietnam experience. Under Pope John XXIII a new Vatican attitude toward Communism developed. Then West European Communism prospered into inflation and fear.

At the same time, a fascinating Italian experiment hinting at an opening eventuality (to the left) ended. This was a proposal by Enrico Berlinguer, secretary general of the Italian Communist Party, to work out "a dramatic compromise with Italy's Catholics."

The idea was developed by Berlinguer following hints of encouragement from Pope John and after a dialogue between Catholics and Marxists had already started between some groups in France, West Germany, certain East European lands — and Italy.

Berlinguer's solution — at least so he indicated — remained a "historic compromise" between the leading Italian political forces, the Catholics and Communists. The obvious idea was to prepare for an opening still-further-to-the-left once the present stalemated system, distinguished in failure.

But that month this effort seemingly was doomed. Inspired by conservatives and prodded by Amintore Fanfani, the ambitious former premier (who himself once advocated a liberal approach), the papacy encouraged Italian voters to "demand" a referendum on "annulling the divorce law previously enacted."

This move failed at the cost of dividing the Christian Democratic center from many genuine leftists among its supporters and walloping the party off from even tentative talks with Communist gradualists.

So Italy appears to have come to a chasm across which only the narrowest bridge extends. While political leaders took on glumly at the latest resuscitated government it seems headed once again toward the only remaining opening — chasm and despair.

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market opened slightly higher in light trading Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The widely watched Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip stocks was up 0.71 at 871.44 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 95 to 76, among the 27 issues crossing the tape.

The turnover amounted to more than 280,000 shares. Trading has been slow during the past several sessions on the NYSE and analysts say this has been caused, generally, by rising interest rates. There are indications these rates will continue to rise.

First National Bank of Chicago raised its prime rate, that it charged key corporate customers to a record 11.8 per cent Monday. Several other banks raised it to 11 1/2 per cent from the prevailing 11 per cent. There was speculation the rate would reach 12 per cent soon. And this has distressed investors.

Secret accord claims denied by Kissinger

(c) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Monday denied an "official file" in every detail published reports that he made secret agreement giving the Soviet Union an edge in the number of strategic missiles allowed under a 1972 agreement.

In a 45-minute news conference on the eve of his departure for a summit meeting in Moscow, Kissinger gave a detailed elaboration of the interim "SALT" agreement on arms limitation and its impact on the strategic balance between the two super-powers.

Kissinger disclosed for the first time that the Soviet Union, at the request of the United States, signed an understanding just before the 1972 elections which he said clarified the details of how certain submarines could be armed under the interim SALT agreement.

Kissinger also revealed that President Nixon, on the last day of the 1972 summit, informed the Soviet Union that the United States had no intention of converting older nuclear submarines because he felt the Russians would soon have discovered the fact anyway.

"The secretary did not say and was not asked whether Congress ever was told that such an assurance had been given by Nixon," he said.

He said Nixon's disclosure, to the United States, would not be converting older submarines "was a relatively minor gesture."

"The totals for the United States (number of nuclear weapons allowed both sides) submitted to Congress were not altered by any agreement public or private," Kissinger said.

Kissinger did acknowledge that the interpretive statement or document of understanding signed by the Russians, just before the 1972 election was not submitted to Congress, but he insisted that interpretations of it were.

One another subject of current controversy, the secretary was asked about his involvement in 1969 and 1970 in administration wiretaps of persons suspected of leaking "national security" matters to the press.

Kissinger declared that he expects that, when the Senate Foreign-Relations Committee examines all the facts, "the conclusions are likely to be the same as last year. There is no substantially new information that I am aware of."

In discussing the alleged "secret" agreement which former CIA negotiator Paul H. Nitze has charged were made without Congress's knowledge, Kissinger said the Soviet Union had disputed the U.S. interpretation that any modernization of Soviet G-class diesel submarines would have to be counted against their allowed total of 350 missiles.

Kissinger gave assurance that the Soviets could exceed that total. Nitze's contentions were reported in the Star-News and the New York Times, among other newspapers, last Saturday.

"The Russians claimed, according to Kissinger, that they should have the right to trade in their G-class missile submarines for more modern submarine weaponry."

"The understanding," Kissinger said, "read: 'In clarification of the agreement signed May 25, the U.S. understands that the aggregate level on submarine stands at 350 missiles for the Soviet Union and 710 for the United States and includes both nuclear and diesel submarines. We didn't authorize the modernization of diesel-powered submarines.'"

Drops hint

"AGREEMENT" in principle" on underground nuclear test ban may be reached by U.S., Russia during President Nixon's Moscow visit, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said during his Monday press conference. He said he doesn't expect a full agreement on nuclear weapon limits now. (UPI)

Calley's hearing continues

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — William L. Calley's lawyers urged a federal judge Monday to throw out the former Army officer's murder conviction in the My Lai massacre on grounds the court-martial board was influenced by statements by President Nixon and top military leaders.

Calley's attorneys cited several other issues during a day-long hearing, including massive pretrial publicity which they said turned the 1971 court-martial into a farce.

Calley, 31, formerly a lieutenant, was convicted of murdering at least 22 civilians in the Vietnamese hamlet. He originally was sentenced to life, but the sentence was later cut to 10 years by military review.

The issue of whether Calley was used as a "scapegoat" by the military chain of command was argued in more detail today before U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott.

Attorney A. Houston Gordon touched on the issue Monday, saying the military command decided "to convict him (Calley) at the lowest level of the totem pole and chop it off there."

Now you know... United Press International... Transatlantic airline passenger service began in 1969, with a flight from New York to Marseille, France, that took more than 42 hours.

Golson denies having all secrets

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — A private investigator quotes former White House aide Charles W. Golson as saying that the Watergate prosecution thinks I've got all the secrets on Nixon, but I don't.

Golson, expelled by members of the House Judiciary Committee to clear up whether President Nixon was involved in the Watergate cover-up, portrayed Nixon to the private investigator as a prisoner of the Central Intelligence Agency, the military billionaire Howard Hughes and of his own aides.

Appraised of the convoluted set of plots that Golson described to private eye Richard L. Bast, judiciary committee members and staff said that it would take them months trying to sift through the allegations, if they were of a mind to do so.

Golson, who pleaded guilty June 3 to a charge of obstructing justice in the Elsborg case, said he had informed the Watergate prosecution of his theories.

"The prosecutors have all this stuff. They haven't found it. They've gone out of their way not to," Golson was quoted as saying.

Golson said he had "taken three lies" on the material, but that the prosecution was putting him under pressure to talk about President Nixon.

Sources in the prosecution declined comment on Golson's statements, but indicated that indictments in the Elsborg case, said he had informed the Watergate prosecution of his theories.

White House, not the CIA. These were among Golson's other allegations, as quoted by Bast.

Nixon is "a President who is weak and under attack" and "is scared to alienate the military and foreign policy establishments."

Bast said he asked Golson: "Because of a coup?" Golson replied: "Yes."

Golson said he thought Nixon had received some of a $100,000 payment made to his friend, Charles (Bebe) Rebozo, and on that account could be blackmailed.

"You want to know what I really think?" Golson was quoted as saying. "I'm loyal to the guy because he's a friend, but I think Hughes paid Bebe that dough. I think that Bebe used that $100,000 for himself and for the President, his family and the girls and my worst supposition is that the President thinks, if he really blows this thing, that Hughes can blow the whistle on him. Who knows if that's the only $100,000?"

Golson said he is convinced that the purpose of the Watergate burglary was to determine how much former Democratic national chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien knew about Hughes' connections with the CIA, too and Nixon is surrounded by these guys," Golson said.

Hughes' Industries, according to Golson, are "the largest private contractors" employed by the CIA.

Mrs. Dorothy Hunt, killed in a plane crash in Chicago in 1972 "was on the CIA payroll the day she died," Golson said.

"Some Secret Servicemen are in the CIA, too and Nixon is surrounded by these guys," Golson said.

Spy, bomb charges dismissed

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — The Senate Armed Services Committee has absolved Admiral James H. Moore of the joint chiefs of staff of blame in military spying on the White House and illegal bombing in Vietnam.

The committee's action took the form of a recommendation that Moore be retired with the full rank, pension and honors of an admiral, when he leaves active duty next Saturday.

The full Senate is expected to approve the recommendation this week.

The committee reached its decision behind closed doors after concluding that Moore was not culpable in the unauthorized transfer to him of Henry A. Kissinger's private papers in 1970 and 1971.

The committee also dismissed charges that Moore broke the law by accepting bombing orders in which President Nixon allegedly bypassed then Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird and dealt directly with the JCS chairman.

8 achieve freedom

CAIRO (UPI) — Eight Palestinian guerrillas whose life sentences for murdering two American diplomats and a Bulgarian envoy were commuted to virtual freedom arrived in Cairo early today, the semi-official Middle East News Agency said.

Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiry commuted a court decision Monday and ordered the eight Black September guerrillas flown from the Sudan to the custody of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Middle East News Agency said the terrorists arrived "at an early hour" aboard special planes. Arab diplomatic sources said the commandos were in effect given freedom by Numeiry's decision and were probably handed over to PLO officials in Cairo.

Reward offered

HAILEY—Whitely Myers, father of Steven Myers, has offered a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the death of his 22-year-old son. Myers was found dead last week at his Ketchum residence of an apparent drug overdose.

Murphy denies check

BOISE (UPI)—Lt. Gov. Jack M. Murphy denied Monday a newspaper report he lent out campaign bumper stickers along with letters of congratulations to high school graduates in Idaho this year.

In a story published Sunday the Idaho Statesman, Boise, reported that Murphy included the bumper stickers with the notes. Murphy said this was not true. "No such stickers were sent to any high school graduate at any time and I never even contemplated doing so," Murphy said.

Story 'pure speculation'

SANDPOINT, Idaho (UPI)—The president of Pack River Co., Monday labeled as "pure speculation" a story that appeared recently in a Japanese trade publication saying Pack River and a Japanese firm would build a large pulp mill in northern Idaho.

The story said the Toyo Co., along with Pack River, would build a $50 million mill with a production capacity of 300 tons a day in northern Idaho, possibly as early as 1975.

Airman pleads innocent

OGDEN (UPI)—Airman William A. Andrews pleaded innocent Monday to charges of molesting a 17-year-old girl in the count of aggravated basulism in the Ogden RIFP Shop playings. Andrews, 19, Jonesboro, La., is one of three enlisted men from Hill Air Force Base charged in the killings of three persons at the stereo shop on April 22.

Protection plan eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Monday he hoped legislation could be introduced this summer to provide a permanent protection plan for the City of Rocks in Cassia County.

Church began working on the legislation two years ago but has held off introduction in hopes of securing a unified agreement with the Idaho congressional delegation.

Spray check made

POTLATCH, Idaho (UPI)—The pesticide DDT begins killing muskox muskox larvae within 20 minutes after contact, says Dr. Ladd Livingston, an Idaho Department of Public Lands Entomologist who observed DDT spraying near here. Dr. Livingston is project entomologist for the North Idaho Wildlife and Game Management Project. He said during spray runs last week in the Moscow Mountain area he walked nearby in a pickup truck until the spray helicopter passed and then immediately began checking in the area.

More signatures needed

BOISE (UPI)—At least 5,000 more signatures are needed by Monday for the initiative petitions, a supporter of the proposal reports. The initiative group is still "breaking our backs" to obtain more signatures, Mrs. Joanne Smith of the American Association of University Women said Monday. Mrs. Smith said although 24,350 signatures had been obtained many were being rejected. She said the rejection rate was about 18 per cent. The initiative would require campaign contribution disclosure and lobbyist registration.

CSI will meet equality status

TWIN FALLS—The College of Southern Idaho will meet newly-formed requirements for educational equality between sexes. Dr. James L. Taylor, CSI president, told board members at his Monday night meeting he is studying aspects of the college program to assure equal opportunity. The new federal regulations require equal opportunity in at least three areas, Taylor said, including admissions, programs and accommodations. He said he didn't know if this problem would erupt on this campus, but added later, "When they get ready, we'll be ready" for them.

The all-male board discussed the implications of the new rules. For example, females would have to be guaranteed equal access to a course in automotive mechanics and males given opportunities to enter the nursing program. Women's sports programs would be expanded as requested, Taylor said. But he said, major programs must be financed the same way as men's sports. Except for coaches' salaries, he said men's sports are financed from donations and the proceeds of season ticket sales. In other business, Taylor reported he was engaged in a statewide project to establish the same definition for full-time equivalent students and credit hours at state colleges. The president announced that report on the ongoing budgeting process would be made Oct. 15 and told the board the city was finishing work on the sidewalk in front of campus. The next meeting is July 15.

GOP smorgasbord dinner scheduled

TWIN FALLS—The Twin Falls County Republican Party will have a smorgasbord dinner from 5 to 6 p.m. Friday at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. The event is being organized by the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee, the Young Republicans, Republican Women and Teen Age Republicans. Jack Murphy candidate for governor and Bob Smith, Don Winder and Charlie Bolstridge, Republican candidates for the senate, will attend as well as Houtenan, a governor and attorney general candidates. All local candidates will also attend. Tickets are available from Mrs. Laird Hob, 752-3417 and Bob Bailey, Jr., 563-5348.

By BILL LAZARUS, Times-News writer
BOISE—A second effort in negotiations to settle the massive strike halting most heavy construction throughout southern Idaho began Monday. Representatives of each of the five building craft unions on strike are now meeting separately with the state's Associated General Contractors (AGC), according to Bob Kinghorn, secretary-treasurer of the unions. Following these talks, the five unions as a group will bargain with the AGC Thursday, Kinghorn said. Previous negotiations, initiated by a federal mediator two weeks ago, broke down quickly after the unions found a new AGC proposal unacceptable. Kinghorn said present negotiations were begun without the aid of a federal mediator. The talks, involving up to 6,000 men, started three weeks ago when the unions and the AGC could not agree on wage terms. At that time AGC executive secretary John Millar said the contractors' proposal was "most generous" offering wage increases ranging from $2.35 to $2.60 an hour over the next three years. But Kinghorn said previously negotiated wages had been restricted for two years because of the wage freeze imposed by the federal government. He said the contractors were offering to cents an hour less this year than they had promised for the last year of the previously negotiated contract. He said the unions are demanding the wage guaranteed under the previous contract and a seven per cent per year increase. Monday, however, Kinghorn would not say whether the unions still are making the same demand. "I think those things are so important in the resolution of the strike that they shouldn't be discussed at this point," he said. The five unions on strike are the Laborers, Carpenters, Cement Masons, Teamsters and the Operating Engineers. The Operating Engineers said hopefully some of the other crafts are scheduling membership meetings this weekend for the purpose of voting on a proposal if there is a proposal available," Kinghorn said. "He said the strike is continuing full force but added, "I call it progress when you have a (negotiation) meeting scheduled."

Officials eye TF airport sewage disposal system

TWIN FALLS—District health officials are developing plans to correct the sewage disposal system at the Twin Falls City-County Airport. The airport's sewage is now running above ground in a dangerous violation of state health codes, according to Gerald Hurst, south central district environmental health director. "But Twin Falls City Manager Jean Millar has denied that any sewage is running above ground and that any danger exists. He said Monday that the problem will be solved soon when the city gets approval from the Idaho Department of Health and the US Environmental Protection Agency to hook up the airport's disposal system with city sewer lines. Millar expected no change with the airport's present sewer disposal system, which has existed about three years, until the hook up is completed. District environmentalist Alan Biermann however, said he and other health officials are drawing up plans for a drainfield for the airport's sewer system. The drainfield would enable the sewage to go underground and filter through the soil, he said. Currently, the waste drains out of septic tanks into an open ditch going toward the Highline Canal. "The stagnant sewage stops before it reaches the canal. Drawing up the plan will not take long. Then, it will depend on whether the plan is 'willingly agreed' to by Biermann," said. "The city and county have always been cooperative in such matters," he added. District medical health director Wayne Carle said Monday he had never been informed of the sewage disposal situation at the airport. Contrary to city reports, both Biermann and Hurst also denied that the district had been informed about the situation before.

Navy studies Gem sites

The Navy plans to construct the grid from parallel cables buried six feet underground. The cables would be spaced at intervals of about three miles and would run north-south and east-west. At the corner of each three-mile-wide square formed by the intersecting cables, the Navy would build an underground transmitting station. A "conventional" above-ground building would be located somewhere in the system to house maintenance crews and equipment. The Navy spokesman would not provide specific information about the control points plans for the system. He would only say there would be "more than one" control point in order to make the system less vulnerable to attack or breakdown. The largest commercial radio stations operate at a power output of 50,000 watts. The Sanguine network would operate at perhaps 750 times that output level—somewhere between 30-40 million watts, he said. The frequency would be in the extremely low frequency range, between 40 and 70 cycles per second—roughly the same frequency range as standard household 60 cycle current. Despite the huge power output of the radio grid, there would be no interference with normal communications, the Navy spokesman said. He said the radio output would be comparable to that found in a normal room with normal lighting. "The electric field produced at full power is many times less than a person lying under an electric blanket or watching television," he said. He said the output would not interfere with devices such as hearing aids or radio receivers. He said the Navy expects little detrimental environmental impact. The Navy would require 15-foot-wide easements along the hundreds of miles of cable routes. But once the cables are buried, he said, the land could be used for any other use. He said the cables could pass underneath a city without detriment.

System not vital target

TWIN FALLS—The Navy says a huge underground radio transmission system would not be an important target in the event of war because such a "horrendous" effort would be required to destroy it. A Navy spokesman told the Times-News that the system would require so many nuclear bombs to pull it out of commission that an enemy would find it impractical to try to do so. The huge underground radio transmission system, called Sanguine by the Navy, would be designed to transmit messages to submarines at great ocean depths. In order to transmit such signals, the Navy plans to string buried cables over thousands of square miles. Several sites in Idaho are being considered actively by the Navy, according to the spokesman, L. Corn. W. Bower, head of the news desk at the Navy Office of Information. He said the underground cable network buried six feet deep would be difficult to destroy. Moreover, the transmitter stations located at each intersection of the grid would be "hardened," encased in concrete and buried underground, making destruction difficult.

The most vulnerable part of the system, the control centers, would not be described in detail by Bower. He would say only that there "are redundancies in the system" which would make destruction of control points difficult. "There are enough control points that the effort would be horrendous. It's unlikely that they would expend that on a single system," he said. He said Sanguine would "probably not be a prime nuclear target." The very fact of its dispersal compared to existing communications systems would require a horrendous effort on the part of an enemy to clean it all out.

Buhl chamber views slides

BUHL—Buhl Chamber of Commerce members heard information and saw slides on the Humboldt National Forest during their weekly luncheon meeting Monday. Tom Walters, wildlife biologist, told of the fire hazard and showed slides of forest service activities. He described the controlled burning the rangers do in the spring, which is designed to help control summer fires and create more usable grass for wildlife by cleaning out brush. All of the Humboldt forest lies in Nevada but the office for the Humboldt Ranger District is located in Buhl because all of the users, both for grazing and recreation, come from Twin Falls County, according to office personnel. Walters said there have been several bad fires already this year, such as the Murphy Hot Springs blaze. He also told chamber members there are several college girls employed by the Humboldt division this summer to conduct range analyses.

Ketchum vote today

KETCHUM—Ketchum residents will vote today on a $225,000 general obligation bond for construction of a new city municipal complex. Residents may vote at Hemingway Elementary School from noon to 8 p.m. today. The present city hall has been declared unsafe for more than eight occupants and does not qualify as a voting place. A two-thirds majority is needed to pass the proposal to house city offices, the station, equipment repair shop, street shop, plow equipment storage and an improved city jail facility in one place. The new building, if the bond passes, will be at the corner of Main Street and Tenth Street on donated land. The land will revert back to the original owners if the bond fails, according to Bill Brand, mayor.

According to statements prepared by advocates of the bond issue, the city clerk needs space, the present jail is grossly inadequate for house prisoners and the ambulance and fire equipment is split between two buildings. Limited parking is a constant complaint and there is no guarantee on the length of time the city may use the building, according to Brand. Brand has said the fire station must be torn down by August 3 this year in accordance with a Continental Oil Co. lease.

Major issues not resolved

BOISE—Simplet officials said today that "major issues" in negotiations between the company and the Grain Miller's Union have not been resolved. A Simplet public relations director, William Maxwell, said negotiations "do not see the end of the strike at this point." He said economic issues which led to the strike by the Grain Millers at the Caldwell and Heyburn plants May 2 have not been settled. Negotiations were conducted Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Boise. More negotiating sessions are expected to begin Wednesday without the aid of federal mediation. Both company and union officials had reported "slight progress on non-economic issues" after the last negotiations June 4.

Seniors attend CSI board meeting

Senior plan action eyed

Discussion at the meeting centered on the function the college would serve as regional administrator. According to Coleman, federal law stipulates the administrator would have the responsibility of developing an area-wide plan, to administer that plan and to build and strengthen an area council on aging. Several trustees told The Times-News that the meeting they were hesitant about taking on the program because they were not sure how it fits into an educational purpose. CSI president James L. Taylor said he felt the "service aspect" of a community college, but said trustees would have to decide "whether or not this is a legitimate purpose" for the college. Seniors participated in the discussion and one elderly man joked trustees by saying "You're going to be there, too, pretty soon." Other organizations applying as administrator include the Ageless Senior Citizens of Kimberly-Murtagh Inc., the women to be created Magic Valley Association of Governments and the South Central Community Action Agency.

A Lovelier You

GET A TAN WITHOUT SUNNING

By Mary Sue Miller.

Victorian ladies would not dream of tanning their faces. The look was not thought pretty or fashionable. How times have changed.

Today, Lovelies want to look bronzed, sun-kissed and golden. But, no risk of sunburn. The risk of damaging the skin. There are many tans that will not tolerate any sun, and are pale the year round.

That's where clear gel face tints come to the rescue. An application brings a sunny, see-through color to the skin. The end effect is not one of coverage via makeup, but of sunshine - the wholesome bronzer.

With gel face tint you can control the amount of color. Simply use more for a deeper tone. You can apply it under or over makeup, or with no makeup at all. For the tan fun it fills in spots that the sun has missed. Like the white line on the bridge of your nose or under the eyes. It erases wrinkles, leaves. And it will bring life back to a fading tan.

No-makeup - it won't rub off - in case you wonder - it creams or washes off with soap and water.
P.S. In answer to questions from readers, products are available that actually tan the skin - even hair or cloth if contacted. First use should be on a spot-test basis, particularly if the skin is known to be sensitive.

Illinois miss weds Veeder

TWIN FALLS — The East Bend Mennonite Church near Fisher, Ill., was the setting for the evening wedding of Virginia Schrock and John Veeder.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schrock, Gibson City, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Dale Veeder, formerly of Twin Falls.

The couple chose to be married June 7, the 34th anniversary of the bride's parents. Rev. Irvin Nussbaum performed the ceremony.

Lila Sixt of Champaign, Ill., was the organist and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Weaver from Mantua, Ohio, provided special music with guitar accompaniment.

The bride designed and made her full-length gown of polyester chiffon over crepe. Lace and pearls accented the bodice, cuffs and hem of the empire-style dress.

The lace edged chapel length veil was held by a layered bow trimmed with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white and blue-tipped roses, light green carnations and daisies and a handkerchief belonging to her great-grandmother.

Sister of the bride, Evie Schrock, Gibson City, was maid of honor. Karen Schrock of Canby, Ore., was first bridesmaid along with cousin of the bride Shireen Schrock, Peru, Ind.

Dennis Veeder, Lincoln, Neb., served his brother as best man. Ken Schrock, Gibson City, the bride's brother, was groomsman. Candlelighters were Steve Schrock and Virgil Veeder, and ushers were Richard Schrock and Marvin

MR. AND MRS. JOHN VEEDER

Veeder, all brothers of the couple.

A reception was held at the church immediately following the ceremony. The chik was decorated by a relative of the bride, Madeline Garber. Assisting at the reception were Nancy Westlake, Halstead, Kan., at the guestbook; Gloria Boatrager, Iowa City, Iowa, gifts; Kathy Oyer, Cindy Dillman, Champaign; Kay Zehr, Poland, Ohio; Laura Zehr, Northbrook, Ill., both cousins of the bride, assisted also.

The bride is a graduate of Gibson City High School and Hesston College, Hesston, Kan. The bridegroom graduated from Jerome High School and Arizona Automotive Institute, Phoenix. He is now employed in Twin Falls.

Following a trip through the west, the couple is making their first home at 319 Jackson Street, Twin Falls.

Boise miss, Biser recite vows

TWIN FALLS — Kandy Edwards, Boise, and Rodney A. Biser, Twin Falls, were married June 7 at Boise's Holiday Inn.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bealan, Boise, and the bridegroom is the son of Lois Biser, Twin Falls. Orville Siles performed the ceremony.

The bride's maid of honor was Jackie Bolen from Twin Falls; Ernie Hothan, Twin Falls, was best man. Ushering were Tony Stoddard, Boise, and Kerry Warren, Twin Falls.

The couple was honored with a reception at the Holiday Inn. The newlyweds will reside in Boise where they are both employed.

HAZELTON — Velma Reed Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Reed, Hazelton, was graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in mathematics from Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa.

Fabrics made of nylon and spandex combined will be used for outerwear as well as undergarments and swimwear this fall.

Marian needed 7 skylights, 3 easels and a view of the Left Bank to create her masterpiece.

All she wanted was her own studio. A paint-proof floor, natural light and room to swing her brushes. The kind of thing no banker could understand, she thought. So she put off asking for a loan through years of canvases leaned against refrigerators, ringing telephones and kids underfoot.

Finally, she'd had enough. She worked up her courage and marched into The Bank & Trust's independent loan department. Instead of the frowns and scowls she'd been expecting, however, she promptly got her home improvement loan. In no time a crew of workmen was searching her attic into a studio that would have made Andrew Wyeth proud... even if she did have to give up the Left Bank for a view of the Sawtooths.

That's how we do things at The Bank & Trust.

We aren't bound by stiff corporate policies. We're independent, hometown people. We know our neighbors need money for a lot of different reasons, and we're willing to listen to all of them. Chances are, if your reasons make sense to you, they'll make sense to us.

DEAR READERS: I received the following letter. It was signed: I.

DEAR ABBY: We are two students at Scripps College in Claremont, Cal., who are distressed by the attitudes of the majority of the girls in our residence hall concerning male visitors.

Not only are men allowed in the girls' rooms 24 hours a day, but they are also allowed to use our bathroom facilities.

We find it particularly embarrassing to encounter men just outside the showers with only a towel wrapped around them. We also sometimes encounter couples showering together in the same stall.

She wants privacy

These rules were approved by the majority of the girls in our dormitory, but we feel that as a minority, we have certain rights to "privacy" that give us a "women's college" we shouldn't have to accommodate men in our living quarters.

We would appreciate your advice on this subject and hope you will point this out to girls of other women's colleges who share the ideas of the majority will have a greater respect for the sentiments of the minority.

DOUBTFUL

Suspecting that "Doubtful's" letter might have been a ploy, I wrote to the Dean of Students and asked for verification. I received the following reply:

Dear Ms. Van Buren: I have received your letter and the enclosed letter from one of our students, indeed, the situation which you have described is not "unusual" though ours is a residential college for women, the college community, at the express request of students, adopted a 24-hour visitation system three years ago.

Part of the understanding inherent in this procedure, and one which the students must reaffirm each year, is that "equal consideration and accommodations be given to any student in any residence hall who finds herself as 'Doubtful' does, in the minority. She has only to talk to the president of the hall, the residence staff person, or to one of us in the Dean of Students office, and we will make every effort to provide her with a living situation compatible with her particular lifestyle.

I think "Doubtful" should be encouraged to use the channels available to her within her own college!

Sincerely,
Stephanie Adams, Dean of Students

DEAR DOUBTFUL: Well, there you are. The Dean of Students has suggested alternatives available to you and others who find the prevailing lifestyle within your dormitory repugnant to you.

Even though you are in the minority, I share you, feel that some could believe that "Doubtful" is a woman's residential college, since girls who have opened their bathing and toilet facilities to their male guests, should suffer the inconvenience of applying for a living situation compatible with THEIR lifestyle.

DEAR ABBY: My 28-year-old mother died of cancer last week. During her illness, which lasted for about eight months, she occupied our guest bedroom.

I want to make sure the room is entirely disinfected. Would having the carpet, curtains and mattress dry cleaned make it safe for others to sleep in that room? I have already scrubbed the walls and furniture with disinfectant.

A friend of mine said I should burn up everything that was in that room and repaint just to be on the safe side. Please advise me.

DEAR WORRIED: Your friend is mistaken. Cancer is not a contagious or infectious disease. Since there is no known germ or virus which causes cancer there are no "germs" to get rid of. Give the room a thorough routine cleaning and forget about it.

Why did you take me all the way to six? complained South. "Don't you know I may open a fifteen-point notrump on occasion?"

"I don't really mind your fifteen-point notrump," replied North. "What I do object to is the way you misplay them."

South won the diamond lead with his ace and led his four of clubs. West played the seven and South went right up with dummy's king—East showed out and try as he might—South had no way to avoid the loss of two club tricks.

Where had South gone wrong? There was a perfect safety play available to him.

He should simply have covered West's seven of clubs with dummy's nine spot. This would have cost him a trick if East had started with exactly two clubs. But all the trick would have cost him, would have been a 30-point over-trick. As North pointed out you can afford that loss when insuring a slam.

Suppose clubs had broken 3-1. South would lose a club trick and could not lose two. Suppose East held four clubs—West would have shown out and South would have known about the bad break. The only way to lose the slam was for West to hold all four and South to misplay the suit.

Hatch, Bellevue, right, grand master of Idaho IOOF lodges. Both Mrs. Waits and Mrs. McCauley are past international presidents of the Rebekah Assemblies.

International IOOF head visits in TF

TWIN FALLS — Shelby McCauley, Charlestown, Ariz., who heads all IOOF lodges in the world, made his official 1974 visit to local lodge members Saturday night. Also on hand to welcome him was Halbert E. Hatch, grand master of Odd Fellows in Idaho. Hatch, a resident of Bellevue, welcomed McCauley and his wife to Idaho earlier in the week in Idaho Falls. McCauley has been traveling since being elected to the international position last September. He has attended 195 official meetings and has only about 30 more to complete before the end of his term.

Mrs. McCauley is a past president of the International Associations of Rebekah Assemblies. McCauley attended a banquet in Twin Falls Saturday night as guest of the Twin Falls lodge and Rebekahs.

He has been a member of Odd Fellows since Dec. 7, 1930, when he joined the Flagstaff, Ariz., Lodge, No. 11. He served as noble grand of the lodge two years later and became a master visiting each jurisdiction on the North American continent and will hold meetings on the subordinate unit level in promoting Odd Fellowship. He is holding seminar sessions on Odd Fellowship in Idaho and other northwest areas in the final few months of his term.

Couple marries in California

TWIN FALLS — Rebecca Paldi Spies and William Allen Von Bergen were married June 1 in San Rafael, Calif.

The rite was performed by Dr. Charles C. Griffin in the First Presbyterian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Paldi, San Rafael. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Von Bergen of Twin Falls.

A white taffeta, full-length gown was chosen by the bride.

She had a spray of baby's breath in her hair. The bouquet she carried was composed of white roses. Amy Elizabeth Paldi was the flower girl.

Randi Lynn Paldi served as maid of honor and was accompanied by bridal attendants Cheryl Warrick Campbell, Calif., and Mrs. Marshall Steiny Seal, Berch, Calif.

Acting as best man was Mickey Von Bergen. Ushers were John Musgrave, San Jose, Calif., and Marshall Steiny Seal. Ler-R-Suess was the ring bearer.

The couple was honored at a garden reception at the hill-top home of the bride's parents. Hawaii was the destination for the newlyweds. Upon their return they will reside in Mill Valley, Calif. The bride is employed at Aetna Life and Casualty Co. in San Francisco and the bridegroom is a communications consultant for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Woman entombed in own home

SHEFFIELD, England (UPI) — Workmen hammering doors and windows shut drowned out the cries of Katherine Godfrey inside her home.

When the workmen went away after boarding up the doors and windows with heavy timbers, they left the crippled Mrs. Godfrey, 75, in almost total darkness and with no way out.

Officials said she could have died there. But by chance, a relative arrived three hours later and rescued the widow.

The workmen had turned her home into a tomb by mistake, the Sheffield Council said. They were ordered to seal up houses being readied for demolition — and had been given the wrong address.

Gem court eases rules on hearing

BOISE (UPI) — Workmen's compensation hearings by the Industrial Commission are not bound by the strict rules of evidence required by district courts, the Idaho Supreme Court said today.

In a 32 opinion written by Justice Charles R. Donaldson, the court said the commission may admit trustworthy and reliable hearsay evidence dealing with topics in which the commission possesses expertise.

Donaldson based his decision primarily on the requirement set forth in the Workmen's Compensation Law calling for fair, brief summary and simple conduct of the proceedings before the commission.

As a result, he affirmed the Industrial Commission's decision in the case of Donald L. Hite.

Hite lost the use of a kidney as the result of an accident on June 9, 1970, while employed by Kuhnert Building Contractors, post office and school.

Because the injury was not one scheduled in the workmen's compensation statute, it was necessary during the hearing to establish an equivalent schedule loss in order to determine the compensation to be awarded.

Basing its decision on equivalents set forth in the American Medical Association guidelines, the commission found the loss of a kidney to be equivalent to a 10 per cent loss of a whole arm. Hite appealed to the Supreme Court.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

'Psychology' bullying in reality

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I know a couple with a little child, not yet two years old. He holds a title in his mouth for three or four hours, especially meat. He is whipped and slapped across the face and told to chew and chew until he swallows it, which can take several hours.

I think he has taken all the nourishment out of the meat by then so why not let him spit the stuff out?

And do you believe a child that age is old enough to be whipped and made to stand in a corner for two hours or so? They think that in this child, I think he is too young to fully realize.

He raised five and I didn't report on these tactics. I say a tap on his hands for spilling and he'll learn.

It breaks my heart and he is nothing to me. And I like well-behaved children. His sister, who is five, says she touches the TV and he gets a whipping. Do you approve of beating a young child to teach? She's lucky she doesn't have another child to smother on her.

Also after a whipping the little boy is told to shut up, he's not allowed to cry.

The father has read many books on child psychology, so he says.

I don't mean child abuse, but a good whipping and slaps across the face. What do you do in places of them for a child under two?

I will be looking for your answer and show it to them. D. M. T.

You don't call it child abuse. Just because no bones have been broken, and the police haven't been called to rescue the child, does not excuse whipping and slapping across the face, and standing in a corner for two hours, and being forced to chew on a piece of meat for longer than that, and then why not let him spit the stuff out?

If the parents "think a lot of this child," I wonder what they'd do to one they didn't like.

Whether three hours of chewing gets all the nourishment out of a soggy piece of meat is beside the point. The average child is brought along gradually, first pureed baby foods, then ground or finely chopped meats, and in time, eventually learns to "chew" and swallow.

Slapping and punishing isn't part of it. All that does is make him resentful and rebellious. In time he'll hate those folks, if he doesn't already. That is probably why he acts the way he does.

The father has read "books on child psychology?" Bah! — Frankly I never know what to do with letters like this, which almost never have a return address.

So from time to time I print one. In hopes a (vain) hopes perhaps that possibly some of these punishment-oriented parents may get some faint glimpse of themselves, and see themselves — for — the over-demanding bullies that NICODEMUS, Kan. (UPI) — This small town in the wheat farming country of northwest Kansas was founded more than 100 years ago by ex-slaves. During the late 1800s the town had several cultural organizations, two banks, a hat shop, general store, newspaper, post office and school.

Over the years, however, most of its people have moved away, and today there are only 10 houses left. But the 50 residents who remain in the all-black farm town are not out and out.

They are preparing to replace

Kansas community thinks 'mouse in the meal'

an old Baptist church built 100 years ago, and the town hall, built of native beige-colored stone. It really "looks" in addition, they asked for and got a $240,000 grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) two years ago to build a "community center" for the elderly.

The town's people, dreaming of restoring their town prosperously, said it would help get their friends and relatives to come home to spend their retirement years.

But the black people are angry now because they could not get a "builder" to construct their proposed housing unit for $250,000 and they have been unable to get any more funding from the government.

The town leaders subsequently decided to go ahead and build what they could with the money they have, starting in July, but they are not happy about it, and suspect they were discriminated against.

"There's a mouse in the meal somewhere up and down the line," said Ora A. Switzer, a member of the Township Board. "Everywhere you look they've lost our papers and this, that and the other."

The town's housing authority applied to HUD for an extra $250,000 — the smallest sum contractor's said was needed to complete the project as planned. But the application was held up in Kansas City for almost a year, and by the time it reached Washington, the government had imposed a blanket moratorium on supplemental funds for any housing project.

"We've made so many trips up and down the road and they've had us go to this place and that place. We hate to be denied this when we've had such a great hope," Mrs. Switzer said.

Accusations of racial discrimination were brought up after nearby Hill City, the larger and more prosperous county seat, won approval for extra funds for a 25-unit public housing project. Applications for similar funds from the two towns were sent in at the same time.

"We've got it was definitely discrimination and we're hopping mad," said Lois Alexander, director of the Nicodemus Housing Authority. "We're still going to fight, not so much for the buildings or anything, but to see what happened to our request."

The project now planned is to be built without a community building, landscaping or other extras such as paving. Nicodemus has no paved streets whatsoever — only shale and gravel put on the roads by the county.

But Mrs. Alexander said ground will be broken next month and the project will go ahead, regardless.

"It's pride in the town and wanting to keep the history behind it. We'd just like for there always to be a Nicodemus if that's possible," she said.

Decline of brine shrimp eyed

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Tiny brine shrimp — nature's filtering system for the Great Salt Lake — are fighting for survival because of the water's decreasing salinity.

The salinity has declined because of the lake's expansion from an influx of fresh water, an expansion that is causing havoc for industries and resorts along its white shores.

Walter Katzdinger of the Utah Geological Survey said it's the quarter-inch-long shrimp disappear, companies pulling purified salt from the lake would have to find other means of filtering the water.

Without the shrimp filtering the water and devouring algae, the lake would quickly be covered with green slime, turn stagnant and stink, he said.

Rising water has not only caused the decline of brine shrimp, but also plagued developments along the shores of the lake. One south shore resort has already been swamped and industries which extract salt and minerals have had to build dikes to keep the water out.

Construction of a highway to the lake's biggest island has been repeatedly plagued by the washing away of portions of its rocky foundation.

The $2.5 million roadway from the eastern shore to Antelope Island is a key part of Utah's plans to develop the Great Salt Lake as a recreational area.

On June 1, the lake reached its highest level in 45 years — 4,201.4 feet, above mean sea level. That is 10 feet below the record high set in 1873, but 30 feet higher than its low of 4,191.35 feet measured in October, 1963.

In the past 10 years the lake has doubled in volume," said Leon Jensen of the Geological Survey. "We can't predict what it will do in the future. But if it continues to rise, it will be at such a slow rate that it could easily be diked to prevent damage."

Jensen said the lake's level has actually peaked for the year, dropping .65 feet during the first half of June. He said it will be a foot or two lower by fall, then start filling up again in its annual cycle. The steady rise of its level in the past decade is part of a cycle that usually runs 15 to 20 years, he said.

Show example, Saxbe advises

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — "We must show the young, by example, that our system of justice really does work," U.S. Attorney General William Saxbe told the National Association of Attorneys General convention Monday.

Saxbe said in his keynote address that this was particularly important today as the nation endures the aftershock of Watergate and watches the progress of justice unfold from all related cases.

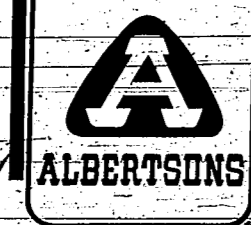

"It seems to me that we have to be scrupulously fair in a number of ways," he said. "As we have seen in Watergate, the highest positions of government power have defaulted on their oath of office and on the responsibilities they owe the public."

He said criminal violations cannot be tolerated on the part of anyone — no matter what position of public trust they may have held, no matter how glib their attempts at justification.

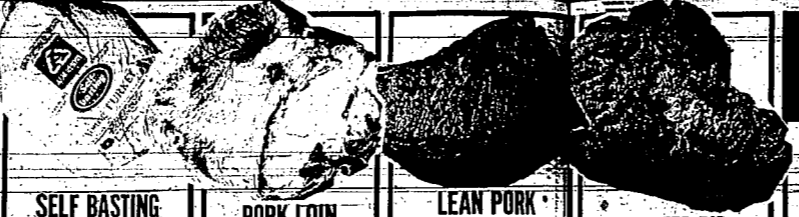

The attorney general said fairness is most needed when it is in short supply or when a problem assumes such great proportions that men are tempted to resolve it through expediency outside the law. "It is hardly reassuring when one man goes to prison for years for theft while another man involved in a conspiracy to steal our freedoms is in and out of jail in a wink of an eye," he said.

No one is suggesting that the thief should not go to jail, Saxbe said, adding he should and should the man who is convicted of falling in his public trust.

Saxbe said this was not meant to be a criticism of the particular sentences handed out in Watergate, but of the laws that allow them. "The message has to go out all over the country," he said, "that there will be no more dirty tricks not by anybody for any reason." From now on, we must play it by the book and by the Constitution.

Couple sells sons for $24

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Authorities throughout the Southeast were alerted today to be on the lookout for a couple said to have sold their two young sons for $24 to a man they met at a flea market.

A woman identified only as Mrs. Williams said she saw the transaction take place Sunday at the state fairgrounds and the children led with a man in a car bearing Virginia license plates.

Metro police were attempting to track down Mrs. Williams, who passed the story on to flea market operator Fred Hicks, to see if they could learn any more about the couple, identified as Charles and Anne Keyes.

An all-points bulletin was issued today for Mr. and Mrs. Keyes, believed headed for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., as well as for the man in the Virginia car.

Youth guidance officer Judy Bawcum said Mrs. Williams told Hicks that she saw the entire transaction. "We need to talk to her so we can get a description of the man who took the children with him, and also get an account of exactly what took place," the policeman said.

She was crying and distraught. She told Hicks something to the effect that she had just witnessed an awful thing, that she saw Joe Anna and Charles sell their children. Mrs. Williams was upset and left the flea market.

The policeman said Mrs. Williams knew the Keyes since she and the couple had gone to the fairgrounds flea market several times during the past three or four months.

The names and ages of the children were not immediately available, but Miss Bawcum said she expected to obtain them later today from state welfare department records.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26, 1974

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This one of those days when you would be wise to thresh out any differences and make joint decisions with others. There are many obstacles in the way and you can remove them by being friendly and giving a big smile! Keep busy working on a joint affair with an associate. Take time for personal duties you have to perform. Sidelstep any arguments.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can do much work around your home. Make sure that colors are blended well. Help a friend in need. Take it easy tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get together with congenials and have a good time today. You have a talent that needs exposure. You can inspire others now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Buy new items that will make your home more delightful. Not a good day for entertaining. Relax at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Finish your shopping chores so that everything will go more smoothly for you. A communication today will work to your benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) A good day to add new objects to your home. Impart your budget so that you have extra money when you need it. Be wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If the treatments you are taking are not bringing out your real charm, try new ones. Be cheerful when you go out socially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If there is any information you need, this is a good day to go after it in the right places. Don't be fearful with mate now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have many wishes of a personal nature that could take up too much of your time. Steer clear of a group affair.

PISCES (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Planning in career activities is your best bet to build more security. The evening is fine for the social side of life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 19) Make long-range plans that are of interest to you. Tonight is excellent for seeing new friends and deepening the relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your hunches are not as accurate as usual so don't rely on them. Use your finest judgment and seek the advice of experts.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY He or she will be one with a particular charm that pleases others. Be sure early in life to teach to discriminate as to playmates, or your progeny could take up with the wrong kind of people. Any profession that requires precision is fine here. Much ability of an artistic nature in this chart.

PRESIDENTS

Among one-president who drove cats, who was the best driver?

A. Too tricky a query, that. Can only report that Lyndon Johnson was the fastest. He sometimes took long-air speeds, far in excess of the limit. Slowest no doubt was Calvin Coolidge. He never exceeded 16 m.p.h., and didn't drive at all while in office. First president to drive a cat was Warren G. Harding.

WHAT DO YOU mean when you say something is fabulous? Surprisingly few folk realize that word is not just a synonym for wondrous. If it's fabulous, it's like something in a fable. Take the unicorn, for instance. Now that's fabulous. Incidentally, surprisingly few folk too realize it's not just a horse with a horn on its head. A true unicorn of good breeding has not only the head of a horse, but the hind legs of a stag and the tail of a lion.

BREAD

Time was when you couldn't buy bread in the Netherlands without a physician's prescription. # Bell Rapids form avoids litigation pitfalls

G.T. (BUD) NEWCOMB displays plaque

By LORAYNE SMITH Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The Bell Rapids project has avoided the pitfalls of litigation which still plague several other of the irrigation projects in southwestern Idaho.

G. T. (Bud) Newcomb, whose firm has been the project general contractor and who is an individual landowner, credits the final success of the completion of the project to the shape the developers took.

Each parcel of 320 acres is individually owned, but all irrigation development was done cooperatively with the 75 landowners forming a non-profit corporation, the Bell Rapids Mutual Irrigation Co., which has provided the vast water distribution system, requiring an investment of more than $7 million to date.

All financing has been done by private capital without a single penny of government money, according to Newcomb.

In some of the other irrigation projects in Idaho big corporations provided the operating capital and, according to Newcomb, it still has not been resolved if this violates the purpose of the Desert Land Act, which is to help the individual obtain land for his own development.

Now in its fourth year of production, the 25,000-acre Bell Rapids project contains some 33 miles of canals which have lift stations to energize the Snake River water pumped as much as 85-92 feet to the once arid but now productive fields atop a bluff west of Hagerman in Twin Falls County. There are 22,120 horse power-motors in operation with two spares at the three pump stations.

The system includes 120 miles of buried steel pipe and has some 9,000 acres of "solid" set sprinkler lines, more than any other known development in Idaho.

Newcomb, who served as guide for one of the buses during Sunday's tour following dedication ceremonies in Hagerman, said many wheel type sprinklers also are used. They are popular because they require no labor costs for moving.

The contractor said the individual owners have developed their land in full compliance with strict criteria of the Desert Land Act, set by the Bureau of Land Management.

Historically, Newcomb said, the BLM has had many failures with this type development because people would file on land without bothering to learn if it was suitable or if water was available.

Since the BLM felt obligated under terms of the 1877 law to approve entries by anyone seeking them, whether feasible or not, there were many failures. Thus the BLM has in recent years become extremely cautious about such projects, Newcomb said, and understandably "dragged its feet."

But both Clyde Keithly, president of the Bell Rapids Irrigation firm; and William Matthews, Idaho BLM director, said during Sunday's dedication ceremonies they had worked long and hard to satisfy all government requirements for the project.

Newcomb said the crops on the project are roughly divided into one third each of potatoes, beans and grain, with only 1,500 acres of sugar beets. He said a four-crop rotation system is planned and there are a few specialty crops such as onion seed grapes are planned.

The water pumped by the project's three pumping plants supply as much water as is needed for domestic use for Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Boise, Twin Falls, Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Salt Lake City.

Meat supplies for July large

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department is worried because supermarkets have too much beef and pork.

The Department has issued a "Food Marketing Alert" for July which says:

"Beef supplies will continue large... moderately above year-earlier levels. Pork production will dip seasonally from June (but) will exceed July, 1973.

"The report added that turkey supplies will be at record levels and broiler chicken production will be slightly above a year earlier.

"It is a problem because livestock producers say they pay more for their feed than they get for the sale of their animals and birds. The Senate votes today on an attempt to hike cattle and hog producers' bill to guarantee private lenders against losses up to 90 per cent of $3 billion in loans to "bona fide" livestock producers.

Individual producers, under the bill, could get loan guarantees of up to $1 million. In an effort to make the measure more palatable in city lawmakers, farm leaders in the House have drafted a second

MV teams win

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Future Farmers of America won honors during the Idaho FFA judging contest in Moscow included the Jerome, Oakley and East Malco teams.

The Jerome team tied with Rexburg for second place in the farm mechanics judging contest. Matthew Clark, Oakley, with 308 points was among the top five winners in individual dairy judging competition.

Wayne Winklerman, East Malco, tied with a Caldwell youth for honors in tool identification.

India monsoon poor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — India's monsoon season helps shape world grain supplies and food prices every year, and Agriculture Department experts said today that it got off to a poor start in the first two weeks of June.

The monsoon, technically a wind-borne bringing enough rain that can mean poor crops and starvation and grain-the world's small reserve grain supply.

"It's too early to get worried. But if this persists it will be serious," said Department spokesman Kenneth J. Murray.

The monsoon rains normally come in June and the volume of these rains is the key to India's grain harvest.

Elmore gets agent

GLENN'S FERRY — Elmore County now has a new extension home agent after several months without one.

Miss Ruth Van Slyke is a graduate of the University of Idaho, with a bachelor of science degree in home economics education. She has taught home and family life education in the Raymond, Wash., schools for the past six years.

Miss Van Slyke was raised on a cattle and trout ranch at Wilder, and has nine years of 4-H experience as a member in Owyhee County. Her brother is the 4-H agent in Bingham County and her parents live in Wilder.

The new home agent is interested in organizing more extension clubs in the county and publishing a monthly newsletter with information of interest to the homemaker.

Classes in sewing and other areas will be planned when Miss Van Slyke becomes better acquainted with the needs of the people of the county.

She will be in charge of the home economics and miscellaneous projects of the 4-H program.

HS rodeo winners told

BURLEY — A Caldwell man and a Gooding girl took top honors at the Idaho High School Rodeo finals.

Dan Rosser was named all-around cowboy. All-around cowgirl was Lisa Sagers. Each was presented with a saddle symbolic of the all-around title.

Rodeo officials announced the final placings Monday.

Reserve cowboy was Randy Dains, Gooding, and reserve cowgirl was Leslie Kyser, Wendell. Both were awarded a pair of silver mounted spurs.

Natalie Hyer, Nampa, was named rodeo queen and also won the horsemanship contest.

Runnings-up in the live-rope competition was Angie Robinson, Tuttle, a senior at Gooding High School. Second runner-up was Denise Bier, Cambridge. Cindy Kyser, Meridian, named Miss Congeniality.

The three top performers in each event category qualified to represent the state at the national high school rodeo finals in Tomah, Wis., Aug. 5.

There were 159 contestants at Burley. Of those, 35 qualified for the national contest.

Boys event winners were: Saddle bronc riding: Hudley Morten, St. Anthony, 127 points; Randy Dains, Gooding, 125; George Tallaback, Caldwell, 109.

Girls event winners were: Cow cutting: Dawn Clark, Georgetown, 299.5 points; Barbara Swan, Rogersen, 290; Victoria Bole, 271.

Barrel racing: Toni Jo Malstrom, Challis, 36.48 seconds; Lisa Sagers, Gooding, 37.01; Terry Welch, Lewiston, 37.04.

Gait tying: Cindy Kyser, Meridian, 27.94 seconds; Belinda Staley, Lewiston, 29.34; Lisa Sagers, Gooding, 28.45.

Pole bending: Dean White, Emmet, 42.84 seconds; Lori Ann Harrison, 42.89; Peggy See, Boise, 43.12.

Breakaway roping: Leslie Isaacs, Wendell, 1.55 seconds; Julie Branch, school unknown, 18.11; Angie Robinson, Tuttle, 21.25.

In addition, seven scholarships were awarded.

Hudley Morten, St. Anthony, won a $250 scholarship put up by Ralph Schnell, Rogersen, and Henry Jones, Eden.

Ricks College presented scholarships of $100 each to Dan Rosler, Caldwell, and Leslie Isaacs, Wendell, the top winners in the boys and girls categories.

Over $250 scholarships were awarded by the Idaho High School Rodeo Association. The awards, to be used by the winners at the school of their choice, were awarded on the basis of rodeo points and school grade averages.

Candidate withdraws

THREAT on a masked gunman on his life and his family's lives led business magnate Peter Fuller, 53, to withdraw from the Massachusetts gubernatorial primary race.

"I was frightened. He was a messenger, a pro," Fuller said. (UPI)

$3 billion deficit forecast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said Monday the federal deficit for the fiscal year ending Sunday will be about $3 billion, or $2 billion less than earlier forecasts.

He said the administration would try to restrict federal expenditures during the 1975 fiscal year to $300 billion, which would reduce the projected budget deficit by $5 billion, from approximately $1 billion to $6 billion.

He said that by fiscal 1976 he hoped to bring the federal budget into balance and was preparing new guidelines for government spending to achieve that goal.

He made announcements following a general economic review he held with his chief advisers — Treasury Secretary William Simon, Budget Director Alan G. Auerman, Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisors, White House aide Kenneth Rush and Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board.

"The most effective weapon for combating inflation as I have said repeatedly is a policy of fiscal and monetary restraint by the federal government," Nixon said.

"Recent increases in consumer prices while disappointing only serve to reemphasize the importance of rigor and patience in sticking to that course."

Bethlehem hikes steel prices

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (UPI) — The Bethlehem Steel Co. Monday announced price increases ranging from 5 to 15 per cent on a number of rolled steel products.

The largest increase was an average 50 per cent on prices for tubular products and the lowest 33 cent on hot rolled alloy bars.

Bethlehem spokesman said the move "recognizes larger

price levels already established by other producers"

A company statement said the price increases cover "cost increases" during May and June "plus clearly identified additional increases over the next few months."

"Added," improved earnings are vital to support Bethlehem's previously announced expansion program and to fully maintain existing # capacities, both of which are necessary to alleviate current and future steel shortages."

Other price increases, per ton, are: structural shapes, $40; carbon and high strength plates, $35; standard 7' rolls, $40; special quality carbon hot rolled bars, $12; carbon rods, $42; manufacturers' coarse wire, $48; hot rolled sheets, $29; cold rolled sheets, $24; and galvanized sheets, $33.
