COEUR d'ALENE, Idaho — Democrats unfurled banners for clean and open politics here this weekend. In a nearly unanimous voice vote, Idaho Democratic Convention delegates endorsed the Sunshine and Presidential Primary Initiatives.

The Sunshine Initiative would require disclosure of campaign contributions and registration of professional lobbyists. The presidential primary initiative, drawn up and sponsored by the Idaho College Republicans, would establish a spring primary to elect delegates supporting particular presidential candidates.

Glen Miles, immediate past president of the Pacific Northwest College Republican, asked the Democrats for support of the primary initiative. He told the Times-News the Democrats seized the opportunity the Republicans had missed.

Some issues likely to create divisions were avoided in committee before they reached the convention as a whole. By an overwhelming vote, the resolutions committee defeated a proposal for amnesty for Vietnam era draft dodgers.

FRAMED by arms of Russians waving small flags, President Nixon arrives at Simeferopol airport near Yalta, U.S.S.R. (UPI)

Talks shift to villa

YALTA, USSR (UPI) — President Nixon and Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev disagreed on nuclear test-ban terms Saturday and shifted their summit to a sun-seeked Black Sea villa next door to the site of the historic 1945 Yalta conference.

Maintaining the chummy style of the "personal relationship" summit in spite of the disagreement, Nixon and Brezhnev signed a 10-year commercial pact during a two-hour conference in Moscow's Kremlin, put the test-ban issue aside and flew south to the seaside playground known as the Soviet Riviera.

A Soviet spokesman said the two leaders discussed limitation of underground nuclear testing at the morning Kremlin meeting, but could not agree on terms. Instead, they sent the issue back to technical experts for more work.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler still held out hope for a test-ban agreement before the summit ends Tuesday, however, saying "we have five more days to go" if talks there would be more negotiation on the subject once the sides report back.

The commercial pact was the fourth pre-negotiated agreement signed during the three-day summit. Previous accords covered cooperation in energy conservation, housing construction and heart research, and White House sources said agreement to limit defensive anti-ballistic missile installations had been reached in all but minor details.

When the Brezhnev flew to the Black Sea coast airport at Simeferopol aboard a blue and white Ilyushin-62 jet and walked to a black limousine with their arms around each other's waists, smiling and waving a crowd of Soviet spectators.

Officially estimated 20,000 spectators lined the route and said this was the biggest welcoming crowd Nixon had ever seen in the Soviet Union.

Church says some farm labor unions OK

COEUR D'ALENE — Unionization of farm labor makes sense sometimes, Sen. Frank Church, Idaho, said here Friday. "But never in Idaho, he stressed. "I have never thought that the issue was a real one in this state because of the large number of family farms," Church said in an interview with the Times-News.

category as industrial corporations which are required to recognize unions. "I always hate to see big corporate farms that create this issue... my whole belief is that we should maintain the pattern of family farming," he said. Church said corporate farms do not comprise the "pattern" in Idaho and for those who exist here the need for unionization "depends on the size of the operation and the numbers of its employees."

against the lettuce boycott proposal at the National Democratic Convention in 1972. The proposal was defeated by one vote for the Idaho delegation. Church, recently has come under fire for reportedly signing a petition supporting the lettuce boycott at the 1972 state convention. The senator has said he cannot remember whether he signed such a petition. "Whatever it is they say I've signed I've asked them to make it public. I'm trying to track it down and make it public myself," Church said.

Evel jets to TF, skuns port antics

By CRICKET BIRD Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — Evel Knievel flew into Twin Falls Saturday in his new Lear jet. "But, breaking a procedure followed at other airports he's visited so far on his 39-city promotional tour, Knievel didn't have his pilots disembark the runway before landing. The motorcycle daredevil stopped briefly in Twin Falls to hold a press conference, meet with city officials and visit the jump site. The tone of the visit seemed to be one of reassurance to local officials that problems will be worked out. At a press briefing, held in the Air Idaho building at the airport, Knievel repeated his vow that the Bureau of Land Management could not stop him from jumping the Snake River Canyon on Sept. 8. Even if ordered otherwise by a court, he will go ahead with the jump, Knievel said. But he said his attorneys will go through regular channels to apply for needed permits. Knievel already has written permission from the State Land Board, according to his attorney, James May, Twin Falls. The daredevil said his dislike of the BLM is based on his experiences with the Department of Interior, which contains the BLM. The department gave him permission to jump the Grand Canyon but later rescinded it, proving their word isn't good verbally or in writing," Knievel charged.

He added if he had a letter from the BLM, "unless it was notarized by Jesus Christ, I would tear it up and throw it away because it's no good." A limit of 30,000 has been set on the tickets, Knievel said to avoid "problems for this city and state." Costing $35 for the week of events, the tickets will be sold only in Idaho, Montana and Utah, he said. Accompanied by his wife Linda and his New York producers, Knievel outlined the weeks' events. Sunday, September 1, mini-bike races, for "little boys and their dads," are planned. Monday there will be 125 cc. races, and Tuesday qualifying races for the amateur and professional matches will begin. The day of the jump, 10 of the "greatest daredevils" will perform. Knievel said, including famed lightplane walker Carl Wallenda. The jump is set for 2:30 p.m. In a briefing attended by local officials... Knievel discussed problems of sanitation, water, health facilities, power and traffic. Three bids have been made on sanitary facilities, Knievel said. He told City Manager Gene Miller waste would be handled with specially designed containers in a manner agreeable to the city. Water will be hauled in, he said, but additional facilities from the city would be desirable. Portable generators will provide power, Knievel said, and plans are underway for first aid tents or shelters. The blast-off area will be separated from the crowd with a chain-link fence. Asked earlier about safety precautions on the opposite side of the canyon, Knievel said no plans were being made at this point. BLM officials have cautioned that large crowds could lead to accidents at the canyon rim. Knievel said he was working with Attorney General Terry Park and Lt. Gov. Jack Murphy about the possibility of calling out the National Guard. "We want to have the National Guard there if it's all possible," he said.

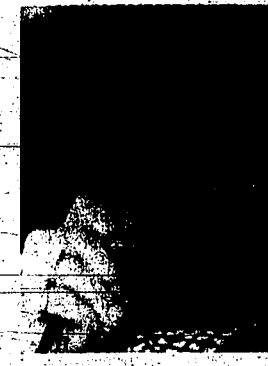

More UFO's over Gooding

HAGERMAN — Another unidentified flying object was spotted over Gooding County Friday night. Mrs. Coates Hagerman reported seeing a "cigar-shaped object" hovering vertically in the sky as she was driving on Highway 20 in the Hagerman Valley between 8:30 and 10 p.m. Mrs. Coates drove to the home of her nephew, Juan Menchaca, in Hagerman where the entire family watched the object turn to a horizontal position, take on a reddish glow and give off a vapor trail as it left the western horizon. Another UFO sighting was reported in Gooding on June 25. Vern Easterbrook, a Gooding policeman, and his son, Ed, saw five fast-moving objects as they were sitting in their back yard. Mrs. Coates said her UFO "didn't move an inch" although the wind was blowing out of the west. "I couldn't have been a weather balloon and it flew a vapor trail," she said.

MV crash kills 2

JEROME — Two Burley women were killed Saturday morning in a one-car accident on Interstate 80. Evelyn Mae Sherrod, 62, the driver, and Alice V. Knorr, 56, a passenger, both Burley, were traveling west when their car rolled about two and one-half miles west of the Hansen interchange.

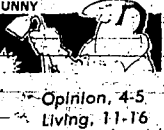

The vehicle passed a semi-truck and trailer and was returning to the right lane when a left rear tire low air pressure caused the car to swerve into the left lane and into the median, according to Idaho State Policeman Bill Walker. The vehicle rolled once, landing on its wheels, Walker said. Both women were thrown out of the car. Jerome County Sheriff Elmer Hall and Jerome County Coroner Dr. Lauren Nelson pronounced the victims dead at the scene.

TF vetos beverage sale at large gathering

TWIN FALLS — An ordinance prohibiting the sale, consumption or possession of alcoholic beverages in connection with large gatherings on any county property was adopted Friday by Twin Falls County commissioners. The ordinance becomes effective following publication. County commissioners said the ordinance pertains to the fairgrounds and to all county parks or other county owned lands and involves any gathering of more than 200 persons. It exempts family gatherings, individuals or small groups but provides in the event of a large gathering a permit must be obtained at least 30 days in advance and an application fee of $25 paid at that time. If alcoholic beverages are to be consumed or sold a special permit, and license, must be obtained from the county commissioners. The ordinance, unanimously adopted Friday by the three commissioners, provides for a $25 maximum fine for violation of the ordinance. County fair board members and commissioners have received a request from the Three of Life Productions, through Roseanne Evans, Twin Falls, asking for use of the county fairgrounds for a rock festival in July.

4 TF burglaries probed

TWIN FALLS — Four burglaries were under investigation by Twin Falls city police Saturday. The burglaries, reported Friday to the police station, included the theft of an automobile between 60 and 100 gallons of gasoline and a quantity of tools from the Blue Lakes Texaco service station, 292 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Officers said the burglary was discovered by a state police officer, Duane Owens, at about 8 a.m. Friday. A window had been forced open on the south side of the building, officers said, and the 1968 automobile inside the station was backed out and a barrel filled with gasoline. Some pop was also taken from a storage room. John Bishop, 1607 11th Ave. E., told officers someone cut a screen door to gain entry to his home Friday night and removed a purse and wallet from the bedroom in which the Bishops were sleeping. A violin from the living room was also missing, Bishop estimated his loss at $1,000. Dr. Jack Smith, dentist at 1337 Addison Ave. E., said someone entered his office building through a door which may have been left unlocked. He said about $26 in change was taken and a typewriter damaged for about $25. Claude L. Massie, 844 Fourth Ave. W., reported someone broke into his parked automobile and removed a tape player. He estimated his loss at $35.

TF search unit gets equipment

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County sheriff's search and rescue unit has received new extrication equipment to help save lives of persons trapped in vehicles, airplanes or building debris. The equipment was purchased jointly by the sheriff's office and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare on a 50-50 basis. Several deputies on the staff of Sheriff Paul Corder and members of the search and rescue unit have completed training in the effective use of the new equipment. Sheriff Corder said the equipment is designed to remove doors and tops of wrecked automobiles and is virtually spark proof which eliminates the danger of fire where gasoline has been spilled or vapors are escaping. This protects both the victim and the rescuer, officers explain. Emmett Perry, regional coordinator for emergency health with the state department, worked with the sheriff in obtaining the equipment. It consists of portable spreaders and jacks, wedges for opening doors and a heavy-duty cone along for pulling steering columns from vehicles' chassis. An air chisel which can cut through the top of an average vehicle in 30 seconds is also included. The total value is about $1,000 and the Twin Falls County sheriff and search and rescue unit was only $441.

Here are some interesting numbers.

7 1/4 Seven and one-quarter percent. That's a good one to start with. Our highest-yielding Time Certificate of Deposit. A $1,000 minimum deposit for four years pays a healthy 7 1/4% return, particularly with interest compounded quarterly for an even higher yield.

6 1/2 Six and one-half percent interest is your return on $500 or more deposited in a 2 1/2 to 4 year Time Certificate of Deposit. Again, interest may be compounded quarterly! It may not be as unique as the old soldier bank, but it pays a higher return.

6 Six percent interest is our rate on a $500 Time Certificate of Deposit for 1 to 2 1/2 years. Interest may be compounded quarterly. A shorter term "CD" with a very interesting 6% return.

5 1/2 Five and one-half percent interest. The Harvester. A healthy return on a flexible Time Savings Certificate. A 90 day deposit of $500 or more is all that's required. Renewed automatically and compounded quarterly for a healthy harvest.

5 Five percent and flexibility in a convenient passbook account! You add to it whenever you need it. Interest compounded daily from date of deposit to date of withdrawal and compounded quarterly for a higher return.

There. That's a run-down on some very interesting numbers from The Bank & Trust. For details contact your hometown friend at B & T. He has a lot of interesting numbers for you.

Federal regulations prohibit the payment of a certificate prior to maturity unless three months of the interest thereon is forfeited and interest on the amount withdrawn is reduced to the passbook rate.

Nations develop strategy against population growth

(c) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON) A common strategy is beginning to take shape within the world community for coping with the devastating problem of rampant population growth.

After nearly two years of negotiations, U.S. government officials believe most of the key advanced and developing countries, ranging from Sweden to Brazil, have reached a consensus in support of cooperative action to stabilize world population.

U.S. officials expect that an action plan to limit population growth through family planning and education will be adopted at the coming World Population Conference. The conference, to which 148 nations have been invited, is to be held Aug. 19 to 30 in Bucharest, Romania. It will be the first inter-governmental conference on population.

World population is close to 4 billion persons. Demographers say that if it continues to grow at its current rate of 2 per cent annually, there will be 6.7 billion by the year 2000. Even with immediate action to hold back the population, the figure probably still would reach 6 billion by the end of this century, demographers say. The inherent lag in effect is such that, even if birth rates decline, the population will continue to grow for at least a few years to 3 billion, possibly twice that number or more.

Getting nations off that population treadmill is a prolonged, arduous and complex task. Several African countries never have taken a census, let alone provided family planning services. The policy in Brazil and Argentina is to increase their populations; although both countries allow some family planning assistance by private agencies.

But officials here believe that inflation and famine in many of the world have brought a new sense of urgency. Countries with two-thirds of the world's population - including virtually all of Asia - are trying to limit their population growth rates. At least half adopted the policy in the past two years, and more are expected to follow.

In preparation for the world conference, the United Nations Population Commission recently approved a proposed "action plan" aimed at reducing the population growth in "developing" countries from the present annual rate of 2.4 per cent to 2 per cent by 1985. If this target were met and if the population growth rate in so-called "advanced" countries were to remain unchanged at 0.8 per cent, overall world population could be held to 6 billion by the year 2000, population experts say. (By contrast, if the growth rate of a developing country such as Indonesia were to continue at the present rate of 2.7 per cent for a century, it would jack up the population of Indonesia to 1.8 billion people, or nearly half the present world population.)

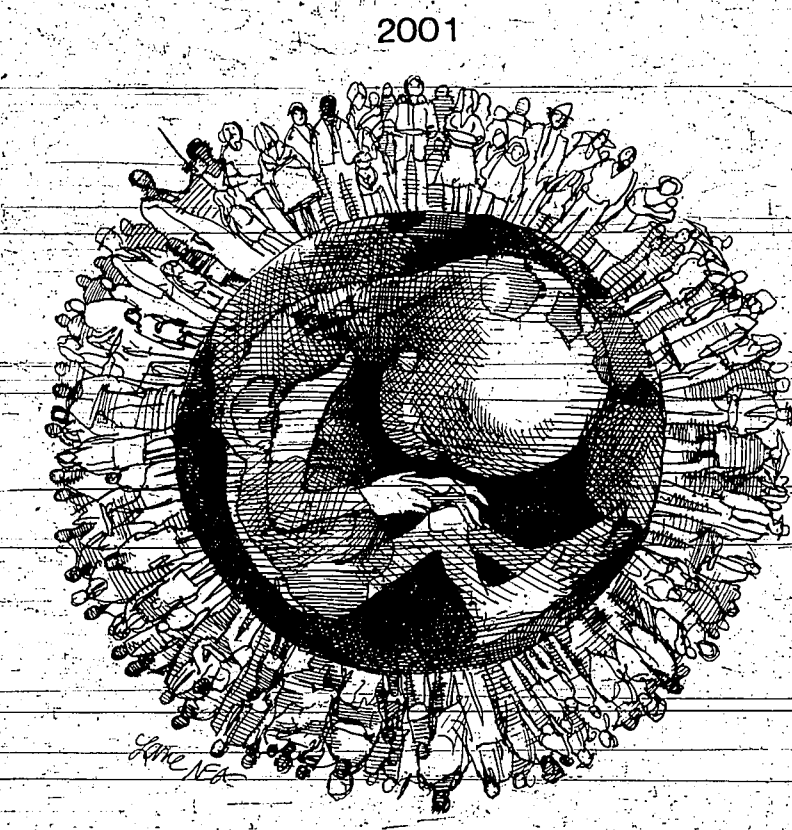

The proposed action plan was drafted by key officials within the secretariat of the United Nations, under whose auspices the Bucharest conference is being held. The plan, containing 79 major recommendations, grew out of regional meetings in different parts of the world during the past two years.

The action plan is meant to be a modest beginning in encouraging each country to adopt a national policy of keeping its population within reason.

As such, the plan is low-keyed, written to attract the greatest possible support from poor countries with the fastest growing populations. Even Brazil, the most recalcitrant of all high birth-rate nations, had voted to object to the draft plan. Brazil is a member of the population commission which approved it.

With strong emphasis on the right of every nation to steer its own course on population matters, the plan reflects the conciliatory views of Antonio Carrillo-Fabre, former foreign minister of Mexico, who has been designated secretary-general of the conference.

The draft contains no hint of anything that could be interpreted as coercive or restrictive. It makes no recommendations for universal family size, nor does it set target dates for slowing population growth.

Instead it suggests that countries with high birth rates consider reducing those rates by about 5 to 10 births per 1000 population before 1985. The present world average is 38 per 1000. Indonesia has a birth rate of 47; India, 42; China, 30; and the United States, 17.

Besides slowing the overall population growth rate, the only other goal the draft plan sets is for the mortality levels. It recommends that even the poorest countries should have a human life expectancy of at least 50 years or an infant mortality rate of no more than 120 per thousand live births by 1985. In addition, it urges every nation to undertake a census between 1975 and 1985, and suggests that every five years beginning in 1975 the population commission appraise the progress made toward its goals.

The U.N. draft plan has been generally well-received by population groups in this country.

"What's really important about the draft plan is that it requires a commitment from government leaders on vital population matters," said Cynthia Green of Zero Population Growth.

"If you consider that this is the first international meeting of government representatives on population, the extent of progress already is phenomenal," said Dr. Phyllis Pitroff of the Population Crisis Committee.

But contrary to what might be expected, the U.N. draft has gotten a cool reception from U.S. officials. An interagency committee headed by Philander P. Claxton, a special assistant to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, said the U.N. draft plan was "too discursive." The interagency committee proposed a draft plan of its own, with less than one-third as many recommendations but containing tougher measures to reduce high birth rates.

The U.S. proposal establishes explicit goals for population growth. It recommends that the average world growth rate be reduced by 1985 to 1.7 per cent instead of 2.0 as suggested in the U.N. draft. And it sets a world goal of bringing fertility to the replacement level by the turn of the century, which means that each generation would just be replacing itself.

The replacement level reproduction was reached, it would still take an additional 70 years or so for the world population to stop growing - to reach zero population growth. That's because growing populations have disproportionately large numbers of young people, and replacement-level reproduction must be maintained for some time before a population will stop growing.

The U.S. proposal also recommends that developed countries should aim for replacement level reproduction by 1985. If they haven't already done so, the U.S. growth rate has dropped below replacement level. No such recommendation appears in the U.N. draft due to apparent objections from several southern European countries. However, the U.S. draft plan has come under sharp criticism from a number of leading population experts who believe that it would wrongly shift the burden for population control away from this country.

Demographers like Paul R. Ehrlich of Stanford University contend that America's primary focus should be toward meeting a good example at home, since even at its currently declining level, U.S. population growth is the most serious in the world, because of its enormously wasteful consumption of irreplaceable resources and its assault on the environment. Ehrlich estimates that, in terms of damage to the planet, another 50 million Americans would be equivalent to about 2 billion people added to the populations of underdeveloped countries.

For their part, numerous poor countries maintain that rich nations like the U.S. are responsible both for the conditions that have spawned the population explosion and for the greater part of the drain on the world's resources. Family planning, even in Sweden, is expected to press at Bucharest for controls on the consumption of such resources as fossil fuels and minerals.

Here in Washington, population experts fear the U.S. government's position at Bucharest may be clouded by the low priority the Nixon administration has given to population matters.

They point out, for instance, that the U.S. is one of the few advanced nations without an explicit population policy. To this day, it has no goal for population growth, despite a recommendation made two years ago by the Commission on Population Growth and the American Future that the country should seek to stabilize its population.

The commission, in a well-documented report submitted by its chairman, John D. Rockefeller 3d, said the gradual stabilization of population - bringing births into balance with deaths - would bring important economic benefits. But the report was rejected by the White House after President Nixon sharply criticized the commission for recommending legalized abortion.

Since then, the administration has impounded family planning funds and pushed other population matters to the back burner. Although announced in creation in January, Nixon has yet to appoint a U.S. commission for the observance of world population year, which is this year. Nor has he named a delegation to the Bucharest conference, although the conference is scheduled to begin in only six weeks.

The two-week meeting is expected to draw 3,000 delegates from not only invited nations but also from African liberation movements, as well as 1,000 U.N. personnel, 2,000 specialists, plus an additional 2,000 representatives from non-governmental organizations who will be participating in a simultaneous Population Tribune.

The conference is expected to cost about $3 million. Money may turn out to be the most critically important subject at the conference, for the poor nations are expected to press for more financial assistance to underwrite the cost of family planning services, census-taking, providing contraceptive, education, and training.

Currently the flow of funds into underdeveloped countries from public and private sources amounts to roughly 250 billion dollars a year. That is believed to be scarcely a quarter of what is needed for family planning alone.

According to U.N. estimates, $1 billion would be needed to provide universal family planning services.

This compares with global military expenditures for an excess of $200 billion a year, exceeding the income of the poorest half of mankind.

"The greatest threat to quality of life is population growth," Russell W. Peterson, chairman of the White House Council on Environmental Quality, has declared.

Time to end 'Gate farce'

Editor, Times-News:
Over this desk comes a weekly deluge of pamphlets, open letters and articles, all claiming the endorsement of the impending takeover by communistic forces.

The high officials of the nation have sold us, body and soul, to foreign ideology.

So convincing are these writings that every morning we aghastly read and are left feeling nauseatedly outside in fear that some bewhiskered Bolshevik is lurking in the rosebushes or standing with fixed bayonet in front of the door.

Now this column has, for months, openly pursued the theory that the greatest danger to our democratic form of government and its concept of equal justice under the law lies within the legal and judicial professions.

Almost without exception those involved in the scandals that have rocked our nation are lawyers.

What has been carefully concealed for years under the pious cloak of equal justice is now emerging into full public view.

who finds himself himself trapped in a maze of financial tools and writes "no fund" check is thrown into two separate piles, drug addicts, homosexuals, murderers and their left and right to not unless some lawyer with a remnant of conscience presents his case to a parole board.

The wealthy buy justice, the poor take politics. If you don't believe this read the legal fees claimed by the lawyers defending the more notorious felons in Washington. Fees ranging from $200,000 to over a million.

When the attorney general of the US takes to the air and warns that plea bargaining must stop if the judicial structure is to be saved from collapse, that the legal profession must not further undermine the processes of government, that the concepts of rights and justice established by over 600 years of sacrifice by untold thousands cannot be allowed to perish because of, or in favor of, monetary gain by a profession, then it is time to listen.

It would seem that no Communist lurking in the bushes could be more destructive than what Mr. Saxbe warned against.

And after two years the antics of Mr. Rodino and Mr. Ervin are about as uplifting as ghouls dragging a disintegrating cadaver across their lawn and chortling gleefully as people turn away in disgust.

It's time to ring down the curtain on this judicial and political farce.

It's Yalta, like it or not

MOSCOW (UPI) - President Nixon had hoped to avoid the connotation of the Yalta name when he travels to the Black Sea for the weekend. But the resort of Cremona, where he will be staying, is in Yalta where he likes it or not.

American sources said last week that Nixon did not want to go to Yalta because of its political connotations as the site of the 1945 Big Three conference. Many persons in the United States, including Nixon, have accused President Franklin D. Roosevelt of having sold out American interests in agreements at that meeting.

Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill and Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin decided the division of postwar Germany and other issues at the conference.

Nixon did not want to give his political enemies in the States an opportunity to say he had come to Yalta for a new "sellout" of American interests, the sources said.

Conspicuously by its absence at the Republican State Convention was any resolution pertaining to the plight of America's war-veterans.

Burley TV reception scored

Editor, Times-News:
Be letter to editor in last Sunday's Newspaper from D. J. Hoskin, Jerome, we would like to say that he is really lucky if he can get anything at all on KMYT!

We here in Burley have to pay $6 per month for cable and then the programs we have paid for are blocked out by a station with the poorest kind of reception and programming we can hardly see anyway.

There is no recession. Pass it on!

Mrs. takes over

MARIA ESTELA PERON has assumed the presidency of Argentina because of the illness of her husband, President Juan D. Peron. The Perons are shown together in 1973. (UPI)

First Lady to govern Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — With a bronchial infection reportedly affecting his heart, Juan D. Peron Saturday temporarily turned over the government of Argentina to his vice president and wife, Maria Estela.

A later government statement said Peron, 78, turned over the powers of his office to his wife "for the duration of his convalescence" because he had been told by his doctors to take absolute rest. In a "statement to the people," the government said that Peron's condition had improved considerably Saturday evening and asked the people to remain calm in accordance with his wishes. It added that Peron was "profoundly grateful" for the demonstrations of support his wife had received from all walks of life.

All public statements voiced optimism that Peron would recover soon. Raul A. Castri, president of the lower house of congress, told reporters that Peron had improved during the day after a "crisis" in the morning. He said Peron remained lucid.

Peron, 78, the strongman of the 1940s and '50s who returned to power in a landslide election victory last year after 18 years in exile, has been confined to his home since June 17 with a bronchial infection. Mrs. Peron, the president's third wife, was elected vice president as his running mate in the 1973 victory.

Nixon keeps trade views

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Nixon Saturday reaffirmed his commitment to abolish legal discriminations on trade with the Soviet Union without a requirement for free Jewish emigration in return. Nixon and Communist Party Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev signed a 10-year economic agreement in Kremlin ceremonies before flying to Brezhnev's villa at Yalta for a week-end.

Congress has balked at a 1972 agreement Nixon made to give the Russians the so-called most favored nation (MFN) status without a quid pro quo concession permitting Russian Jews freedom to emigrate to other nations. The MFN status means that Russia will be entitled to all trade benefits which the United States grants to its "most favored" trading partners. No mention was made in Saturday's pact about relaxing emigration restrictions.

Idaho Demos adopt party planks

(Continued from p. 1) "I never saw such fright" as when the resolution was brought up, Mollie Hecht, Ketchum delegate, said. Mrs. Hecht, who proposed the resolution, called it a "political hot potato" and said it was received "like an icicle hanging overhead."

A resolution favoring streamlining regulation was voted down by the convention as a whole and another proposal urging "individual responsibility" to bring about a stable world population was defeated. Two proposals caused some controversy but were passed by a substantial majority of the delegates. One supported establishing a state wild and scenic rivers act and the other supported creation of a Hells Canyon national recreation area which would prohibit further construction on the Middle Snake River.

The delegates were almost unanimous in their adoption of other resolutions and platform proposals. Among the measures were: Support of state funded public kindergartens; Investigation of loopholes and abuses of both the state and the federal taxing system. An invitation to all persons to join the Democratic party but rejection of the "policies of extremism."

Reaffirmed support of the Equal Rights Amendment. Support for "right of all public employees to hold elections and bargain collectively with their employer." Endorsement of multiple use of Bureau of Land Management and US Forest Service lands. A call for expanded state funding of public schools with less dependence on the local property tax.

Support for a national system of comprehensive health insurance. A proposal for more state support for health and welfare programs. Support for extension of full Social Security benefits to persons 62 and over. Support for drug and utero-instrumentation with emphasis on rehabilitation. A call for comprehensive land-use planning legislation to establish minimum housing and building standards.

MV delegate unhappy

By BILL LAZARUS Times-News writer COEUR D'ALENE — Most Magic Valley delegates seemed pleased with the "harmonious" nature of the Democratic convention held here this week. However, one Magic Valley delegate, who asked not to be named, strongly objected to the passage of the Presidential Primary initiative.

"I'm sick and tired of pulling the reform chestnuts out of the fire for the Republicans. I think we were stamped into one-up-manship. We really haven't thought these things through," the delegate said. The delegate said that with no pre-election registration many supporters of George Wallace would vote in the primary and be able to gather majority support for their candidate.

The people most active in the party should have the right to choose national delegates in district caucuses, according to the delegate. The delegate did not vote against the presidential primary because it might have disrupted party unity. "But I can tell you I'm not going to go out and carry a petition," the delegate said.

DI—Bowler, Bliss had another opinion. "I'm very pleased we endorsed the Sunshine and Presidential initiatives," she said. She said she supports whatever increases participation in politics. Dick Strickland, Gobbling County party chairman, said he was satisfied with the whole convention. "Everybody was pretty agreeable this time. I thought it was a real good, constructive convention," he said.

Dragnet launched

WILLOWS, Calif. (UPI) — Authorities launched a massive dragnet Saturday for a heavily armed, 240-pound woodcutter suspected of the "cold blooded" killings of three members of one family and the abduction of a widow and her two children as hostages. Sheriff deputies, police and highway patrolmen were pressed into the manhunt throughout Northern California but gravely admitted the suspect whose rampage apparently was triggered by a $5,000 extortion plot, had a big headstart.

Woodland. He was reportedly armed with a .357 caliber pistol, a .45 automatic and a 30.06 deer rifle with a telescope sight. "Card is identified as the suspect because of information received back on a check on a license number of the first car used," Stenberg said. Authorities also said a description of Card was provided by a survivor of the shootings. The search first was centered in the farming counties of Butte and Glenn but authorities later expanded it. The hostages, Kay Skillen, 34, a widow, her son, Wesley, 12, and daughter, Debbie, 12, were discovered missing Saturday morning from their ranch outside the tiny community of Durham. The all-points bulletin said their white and green Chevrolet pickup camper was believed to be the escape vehicle.

US aides disagree on nuke control plan

(C) New York Times Service
 WASHINGTON — President Nixon flew to Moscow with his two principal advisers on national security still in disagreement over what would constitute an acceptable accord on "limitation" of strategic nuclear weapons, high administration officials have disclosed.
 The officials, described Secretary of State Henry A.

Kissinger and Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger as having the kind of fundamental differences were neither can be shown to be right or wrong. "It is a matter of judgment," one high official explained, "and the President has a clear choice."
 Both secretaries want a comprehensive agreement eventually. But Kissinger believes the United States should press for a limited agreement now to restrain the deployment of more nuclear warheads known as MIRV's for multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicles. Schlesinger, on the other hand, is arguing that a limited accord reached in Moscow could prevent the possibility of a comprehensive agreement.

Schlesinger favors an agreement that would limit the number of missiles, base limits on MIRV's on the sizes of missiles, and limit the number of bombers and the size of strategic nuclear forces in and around Europe.
 Kissinger favors such an agreement but insists that the Russians will not sign one now and seeks an agreement that he feels can be signed. From the day the President party left Washington, the two secretaries or their subordinates have continued to air their varying views through news conferences and news leaks. Kissinger has been arguing the need for at least an agreement in principle now.

Priest killing probed

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Officials planned an autopsy Saturday to try to determine what killed a 64-year-old Catholic priest whose body was found tied up in his church's rectory.
 Police Chief Kyle M. Gentry said the Rev. Francis T. Donahue, whose body bore no visible wounds, may have been strangled during a robbery since an undetermined amount of money was missing. The priest's car also was missing and police put out an alert for it.

Doctors said the shots had bolstered the girl's thymus glands, which had been functioning at one-sixth of normal.
 Doctors are hesitant to project future applications of the hormone, which is derived from the thymus gland in calves. The calf's hormone is nearly identical to the human hormone.
 But some researchers are speculating it could provide new weaponry in the war

'Heather' recovers

FRAIL (five-year-old girl) identified only as "Heather," weighed only 28 pounds and appeared near death two months ago, but has made dramatic strides toward recovery in a history-making medical first. She is shown in administration assistant Ellen Hoffman at University of California Medical Center. (UPI)

Calf's hormone saves tot

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A 5-year-old girl called Heather toyed with her bebopgun Friday as doctors told her a first-time-ever injection of calf's hormone saved her from a life of perpetual illness and possible death.
 The frail girl has been a constant hospital patient since age three because her body refused to resist ordinary infections. She was the first human ever to receive the hormone called Thymosin last April, doctors said.

 Today she has near-normal resistance to disease and may be going home soon following a series of injections over the past several weeks. Her mother probably will be taught to continue to give the injections.

Gangster connections eyed at Spokane's Expo

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Expo '74, the world's fair billed as the clean-environment exposition, is having its troubles with rumblings about gangster connections.
 The controversy developed after the Naquin Corp., which had been granted several concessions at the fair, came under investigation for possible ties with a company convicted of interstate racketeering.
 Naquin had been given concessions to operate games of chance — shooting galleries and other carnival-type amusements — with stuffed animals as prizes — in an amusement area, and to run several restaurants, including one in the Soviet pavilion.
 But last month, the firm was reported to have ties with the Empire Corp. of Buffalo, N.

Y., a company convicted of interstate racketeering.
 And last week, the state Gambling Commission transferred Naquin's gaming license for carnival games of chance to the fair itself.
 John Musgrave, vice president in charge of marketing for Expo '74, declined to give a license transfer had anything to do with the racketeering reports.
 Musgrave said Arnold H. Kagan, Naquin president, had asked the fair to take over the operations of the games of chance because they had not proven very profitable. Musgrave said Expo had private investigators checking into Naquin's background, despite Kagan's assurance there was no connection between it and Empire.

Weicker lists 370 "abuses"

(c) New York Times Service WASHINGTON — Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., a Republican member of the Senate Watergate Committee, charged Saturday that members of President Nixon's administration and campaign organization had been responsible for some 370 abuses of law or of the constitution in the course of the Watergate scandals.

Weicker issued a personal 134-page report declaring that the evidence presented to the committee during its inquiry demonstrated that "every major substantive part of the constitution was violated, abused and undermined during the Watergate period."

The Connecticut senator's report was made public in anticipation of the full panel's formal report, which was filed with the Senate Friday.

"After a hectic lifetime of 20 months, the Senate Watergate committee will officially pass out of existence today. The committee's final report is scheduled to be issued on July 11," Weicker pointed out that the long list of abuses and improprieties that he attributed to officials of the White House and the Committee for the re-election of the President "contained no 'new facts of scandal.'"

He and his staff chose instead he said to "emphasize the known in order to impress upon—the reader—the importance of its implications."

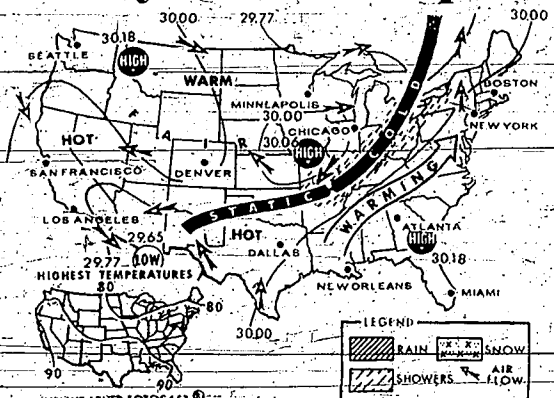

The senator declared in a long personal statement that "the indisputable ugliness of Watergate is of such scope as to justify it as a sheer insanity."

He said that he would refrain from concluding, "except as the courts have already passed judgment," whether particular individuals were guilty of specific offenses—a task that will also be adopted in the report of the full committee in deference to the impeachment inquiry in the House of Representatives and the current criminal proceedings in the courts.

Natural gas to cost more

HOUSTON (UPI) — The head of the nation's biggest group of independent oil and gas producers predicts sharply higher prices for consumers with falling natural gas supplies.

George P. Mitchell, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, blamed federal regulation of the industry as the major cause of the shortages, but said he doubted an end to government controls would have much immediate impact.

Mitchell, who has drilled 23,000 wells in his quarter century as an oil man, said in an interview: "You can't grow it like wheat or cattle. It takes lead time for exploration and production."

'Plumbers' trial defense changes

(c) New York Times Service WASHINGTON — A federal grand jury and the court of false swearing to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

All of the defendants were involved with the White House "plumbers" unit, special investigations force authorized by President Nixon in July, 1971, and ordered to stop newspaper leaks. Its first target was Eltsberg, who has told newsmen he provided the New York Times with copies of the Pentagon Papers.

The trial, before Judge Gerhard A. Gesell of United States District Court, is expected to last one month.

In his opening statement, Jones also relied heavily on a previously known Ehrlichman defense tactic while he did approve a "cover" operation in order to obtain Eltsberg's psychiatric records, "at no time did he consider what he had authorized to be an illegal act."

The attorney explained to the jurors that Ehrlichman understood the word "cover" to mean only "cover-in-the-sense that if the Eltsberg matter" was not to be disclosed.

The opening statements by defense and prosecution attorneys were followed Friday afternoon by testimony from E. Howard Hunt Jr., a government witness who participated in the break-in, and Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, the Beverly Hills, Calif., psychiatrist whose offices were burglarized.

Ehrlichman and three other defendants — G. Gordon Liddy, Bernard T. Barker and Benjamin M. Gitlin — were indicted last March for violating Fielding's civil rights, a felony offense that carries a maximum sentence of three years, imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. In addition, Ehrlichman was named on three counts of false swearing.

Ouster tremors warned

(c) New York Times Service WASHINGTON — Partisan fissures that split the House Judiciary Committee this week and culminated in a White House call for the committee's chairmans ousted were described Saturday as the warning signs of a coming political eruption in Congress over impeachment.

"We're being attacked both frontally and from the flank," said a Republican member of the Judiciary Committee, "but I'm afraid they're going to get worse."

The House Democrats agreed a Democrat on the panel in an assessment of the apparent collapse, after seven months, of a tenuous thin bipartisan committee facade.

20 die in Mideast clashes

(c) New York Times Service BEIRUT, Lebanon. — As many as 20 people are reported to have been killed and 17 wounded in Friday's clashes between rival Palestinian guerrilla factions in refugee camps in Lebanon.

Gun battles raged for several hours in late afternoon in three refugee camps in and around Beirut. According to sources at the camps, the fighting between rival Marxist groups, the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, started at Sabra camp in a suburb of Beirut. It then spread to Shatila Camp on the road to the airport, and later to Tal Zattar in the outskirts of the city.

A commission of inquiry set up last night by the Palestine liberation organization, the unitary group for the Palestinian organizations, began its investigation

TF offers summertime programs aplenty

TWIN FALLS — Summertime is coming to mean activities in Twin Falls, not boredom. At a rough count, at least 4,000 adults and children are involved in the many and varied programs offered by the schools, parks department and other sponsors.

At the College of Southern Idaho about 800 students are participating in the summer program. More than 80 courses and special programs are being offered, including dance, drama and music workshops, a senior citizen art class, and more conventional classes in English, history and other subjects.

At Twin Falls High School more than 250 students are taking about eight courses in basic subjects like US history, government and math.

More than 200 kids are attending Morningside School classes with special emphasis on reading and language skills.

And at school for the first time and-learning about reading, I writing, and rhymette—are three classes of kindergartners.

At the Bickel School, about 90 kids are participating in the special program for children of migrant workers. Arts and crafts, swimming, P. E. and the basics are all part of their school day.

The city parks and recreation department has probably the biggest load of summer activities. The department sponsors a golf, weight training, basketball and tennis program.

There are playground leaders at the seven city playgrounds who are conducting play and camping programs. A junior and senior band were planned.

Swimming lessons for beginners, "tracers" and fitnessers are offered at two city pools. And softball and baseball programs boast at least 125 teams in the various leagues and age groups.

At the YMCA-YWCA, there are judo, tumbling, arts and crafts and archery classes and camp programs.

In addition, many churches are sponsoring vacation schools and play programs.

Tough problem

COUNTING can be tough, as summer kindergartener Tim Robbins, 6, is finding out. Teacher Luella Roth is on hand to give the now student a hand in the classes offered at Morningside School.

Book Review

By LOU ADD DURHAM
Twin Falls Public Library
TWIN FALLS — "Crafts of Mexico" by Marian Harvey is so much bigger than a craft book, and so much more personal than a travel guide.

It is alive with the spirit of Mexico from the first page. The author records her search throughout Mexico for the foremost traditional crafts, men of straw, for crafts worked today as they were seven hundred years ago; red work, weaving, metal work, clay and paper sculpture, and wood carving.

She tells of living and working with each craftsman, describing his home, workshop, and family way of life, and recording his oral history of country and family. Then with photos, illustrations, materials lists and source guides, she gives detailed instructions for the creation of each piece. Some are difficult, some a beginner can do.

All are authentic and decorative. Indeed, also is the history and symbolism of each craft.

Marian Harvey lets you walk in a skilled-but simple man's shoes, and move your hands into tools and build with his materials. She opens a colorful door to Mexico.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

"DEAR ABBY: I have a nephew (my sister's son) who is 48 and has been divorced three times. He's always been quite a ladies' man. Very handsome, but something of a fortune-hunter. I've heard I've seen him perhaps half a dozen times in his adult life. (He lives in New York and I live in Canada.)

I lost my husband last year, and suddenly this nephew started writing me the loveliest letters. I answered each one, thinking how sweet of him to be so attentive to his old aunt.

Then came a letter saying: "May I come and visit you? I have something important to talk to you about." I thought maybe he'd found a ladyfriend and wanted to bring her out to meet me, so I wrote back: "Don't keep me in suspense, but please give me a hint."

In his next letter came the shock of my life. He wrote: "Now, I can finally confess how I feel about you. I've always thought of you as a woman, not as an aunt, but I never dared to let you know." He closed with: "I want you. I need you. I love you."

Abby, I am 71 years old, and couldn't possibly think of this nephew as anything but my sister's little boy. How can I put an end to this without insulting him outright?

Aunt-i' response

"DEAR AUNTIE: Tell him that you're flattered by his confession, but you don't feel the same way about him. And if he still wants to visit you, put him up at a hotel. You don't need a handsome, fortune-hunting ladies' man as a house guest. He probably walks in his sleep."

DEAR ABBY: For years I have wanted to trace my family as far back as possible, but I don't know where to begin. My forebears came from Ireland. Do you know of any agency in the United States or in Ireland with whom I could communicate to inquire? HOPEFUL IN BOSTON

DEAR HOPEFUL: Call yours "the luck of the Irish." I think I can help you: My column appears in the Sunday News, Northern Ireland's largest circulating Sunday newspaper, and one of my colleagues there specializes in tracing Irish family histories. For the information you seek is available for a small fee. Write to: Family Tracing Services, 23 North Circular Rd., Belfast 15, Ireland.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old happily married woman. I used to have a beautiful figure. In high school I was 38-25-36. After nursing three babies, I lost my bug. Now I have to wear a padded bra to look presentable. Nobody except my husband and a few very close friends know what I'm really like.

I wanted so much to be firm and filled out again that I made an appointment with a plastic surgeon. He explained all about silicone implants, and I can hardly wait to have it done, but something is holding me back.

Would such an operation be considered defeculent, and therefore sinful in the eyes of the Lord? HOLDING OFF

DEAR HOLDING: Your clergyman can tell you what the ruling in your church is concerning reconstructive plastic surgery. So ask him to "fill you in" before you ask the doctor to "fill you out."

WALT ANDERSEN LARRY SLATTER

CARPET COLOR wasn't much of a problem not so many years ago — perhaps when you bought your first carpet. Carpets were supposed to be, like children, unobtrusive, providing a muted background in grey or beige or soft green.

Today's carpet colors have come alive with a vengeance! In tune with the trend toward livelier colors and bolder decoration, you can go as wild as you want in the carpeting you choose.

Decorators advise you not to let the colors of walls and ceilings, or even our furnishings, dictate the carpet color. Painted surfaces change often. Even furnishings will be slipcovered, reupholstered or replaced long before the carpet goes. So why not put the carpet first when it comes to color?

The rule today is: don't be conservative about color. Let yourself go and pick the color or colors that make you respond whether it's a vivid orange or an electric green or even plum. The manufacturers have followed the trend and you'll find a dazzling color range to choose from.

The choice is better than ever in our big carpet displays, in colors and textures, and prices, too. Come and look over our selection, where you always find the best carpet values.

6-year-old proud winner of TF club pet show

By MARILYN ELLIOTT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kid Power is one neighborhood club that is doing more this summer than selling lemonade at a loss.

The 11 members of the all-girl club from the Clinton Street neighborhood staged a pet show Wednesday complete with announcer's public address system refreshment booth, prize ribbons and show rings.

About 18 young pet owners entered the show which was divided into dog, cat and small animal categories. The only restriction on pets was a limit of 200 pounds, which didn't keep one large St. Bernard and a 4-H lamb from joining the competition.

Grand-prize winner was a black Labrador named Gunner, who led his owner, 6-year-old Shelley Watson, around the show ring. Gunner performed no tricks, but the two made an unbeatable pair. Shelley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Watson, a Brazilian rooster, who remained nameless, took first in the small animal category and went on to nab second in the overall competition. Carried into the ring in a cage by his owner Gail Myers, 10, he neatly demonstrated how he could eat out of her hand. Gail's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Duane Myers.

"Third overall went to a quick-footed kitten named LeRoy who felled his owner David Slotten, 8, by springing from the show ring while he was being judged. David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Slotten.

Not everybody could win, though, and among the losers were several butterflies, two rabbits, turtles and several dogs that did tricks. The rabbit owner seemed to have an ulterior motive for entering the contest — the announcer informed the crowd that the rabbits were for sale.

The group charged 25 cents for exhibitors and 10 cents for spectators, which amounted to over 200 and ran a refreshment stand which dispensed popcorn and cold drinks. The event netted $11 which should give the club members several dollars profit after they pay back their mothers and pay rental fees for the public address system.

Kid Power members all said that the "mothers helped a lot" but at least one mother insisted that the kids "did it all themselves." The group says they are considering a bicycle rodeo next, "after our mothers call it down."

The club was formed in May "to keep us busy" and "to prove kids could do something to help other kids." In addition to staging special events, the group is making and selling handicrafts.

Next week, the girls said, they will take a vote on admitting boys to the club. "We have two already that want to join," they said.

Kansas picnic set Aug. 4 in Jerome

JEROME — Former Kansas residents will meet here again Aug. 4.

That's the date for the annual South Idaho Kansas Picnic, scheduled each year on the first Sunday in August. It will be in Jerome's South Park, starting at 1 p.m.

"All former Kansas residents living in south Idaho are invited to attend," said Dale Stewart, Twin Falls, president of the association which arranges the picnic each year.

"We have found there is a sizeable number of former Kansas residents in Idaho, and we hope they will attend and meet other former Kansans," he said. "An effort to spread the word about the picnic, we would ask that former Kansans be interested in attending and extend the invitation to them."

Persons attending should bring their own food, drink and table service. Entertainment will be provided, a short program will be arranged, and there will be ample time for visiting.

Efforts are again being made to publicize the picnic in Kansas as well as Idaho in order that Sunflower State residents who might be in the West in early August would be aware of the event and stop if they desired, Stewart said.

Madarieta rites in Hagerman

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL MADARIETA

HAGERMAN — Susan Dalton became the bride of Michael Madarieta in evening rites at the Hagerman LDS Church June 14.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dalton, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Madarieta of Hagerman.

The double ring nuptials were performed by Bishop Floyd Marsh. The chapel was decorated with bouquets of yellow gladioli and blue baby's breath accented with blue bows.

Mrs. William Buckland, Hagerman, organist, played the prelude music and the traditional wedding marches. She also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Kevin Ellis, Blackfoot, sister of the bride, who sang.

The prayer was offered by Bob Evans, Hagerman.

After the marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white sheer dotted swiss over satin. The gown was designed and made by the bride and her mother and featured an empire waistline, a deep yoke edged with a lace ruffle, and a high bandeau neckline.

The sheer full sleeves were gathered to deep cuffs at the wrists. Two bands of lace accented the hemline.

Her tiered fingertip veil of bridal tulle was held by a crown of fabric daisies centered with seed pearls. The veil was made by Mrs. Robert Tupper, Hagerman.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of yellow roses and white starburst chrysanthemums with white baby's breath tied with yellow ribbon streamers.

Carol Stoddard, Salmon, former roommate of the bride at BYU, was matron of honor. Sylvia Ellis, Blackfoot; Roberta Dalton and Nancy Dalton, Hagerman, all sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. Junior bridesmaid was LeJean Ellis, Blackfoot, niece of the bride.

Pat Madarieta, Hagerman, twin brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Matt, Barry and Rex Dalton, brothers of the bride, and Randy Clark, Hagerman, were ushers.

A reception was held in the church cultural hall following the wedding. Presiding at the guest book was Patti Gold, Hagerman. Gifts were carried by Brent Clark, John Hatlen and Lance Cluff. Arranging the gifts were Mrs. Bob Evans, Mrs. Lee Cluff, Mrs. Jim Brizendine and Mrs. Blaine Hulme.

The wedding party greeted guests before a backdrop of white sheer topped with a blue sheer drape held with blue satin bows and blue daisies. White and yellow daisies arranged in white floor urns were joined with yellow and blue ribbon streamers to separate the receiving line from the guest tables.

Quart tables were covered with white lace cloths over blue and centered with an arrangement of white daisies tied with yellow and blue bows. The center table featured a flowing fountain, cherubs, blue bows and flowers, and was lit from below.

The five tiered cake centered the refreshment table which was covered with a lace, floor-length cloth accented with blue bows.

The cake, tied in white and decorated with white roses and blue-edged sugar bells, was made by Mrs. Sylvan Clark, Hagerman, who also cut and served it. She was assisted by Mrs. Jack Martin, Hagerman, Mrs. Bill Choules, Hagerman, presided at the punch service. Assisting in the kitchen were Merilee and Margo Ellis, Shelli Larson and Mrs. Greg Hafen.

Also assisting with the reception was Mrs. Merthan Ellis. Reception music was played by Kristi Choules at the piano. Miss Choules also played a medley of love songs for the program presented during the reception. Mrs. Doug Wood and Mrs. Lynn Lindsay presented two vocal duets—they were accompanied by Mrs. Bob Evans.

Special guests at the wedding and reception included the grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Mollie Baker, Kimberly, and the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Barlogi, Hagerman.

The bride was feted at a pre-nuptial shower hosted by Mrs. Melvin Chick, Tacoma, Wash. Kristi Choules and Merilee Ellis.

The bride changed to a blue print ensemble for their wedding trip to the World's Fair, Spokane, and to the Oregon coast.

The couple are making their home in Hagerman where both are employed.

Filer GOP picnic draws good crowd

TWIN FALLS — The annual Republican picnic Friday let voters to meet the candidates attracted one of the biggest crowds in a number of years, according to one GOP official.

Lloyd Noh, Twin Falls County Central Committee chairman, said Saturday, "It was the largest crowd we've had in a number of years to a Republican picnic."

About 250 persons turned out to munch a picnic dinner and hear short speeches by 32 state and local candidates at the county fairgrounds.

Noh was enthusiastic about the picnic's success. "It's my personal impression maybe we won't share in the apathy which everyone else is generally reporting," he said. "The picnic attracted 'more new fresh young faces'... and even more old faces than we've seen in a long time," Noh added.

The new enthusiasm might be an increasing interest in government, or the good candidates running this year, Noh guessed.

The picnic was a venture sponsored by the Central Committee, the Young Republicans, the College Republicans and the Republican Women's Club.

Local candidates for the offices of lieutenant governor, attorney general and superintendent of public instruction were introduced by the new state Republican chairman Bob Linville of Boise.

Noh presented the local candidates.

Fire destroys Burley camper

BURLEY — Fire destroyed a pickup and camper unit Saturday in Burley.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Altom, Oakley, were leaving on their honeymoon after being married Thursday when the fire occurred. They were driving south on Overland Avenue about 12:30 p.m.

Firemen said the blaze apparently was caused by a plastic connector between the pickup's main and auxiliary gas tanks coming in contact with the exhaust pipe.

The connector, apparently melted and dripped gasoline on the exhaust.

When Altom stopped the vehicle, the flames spread and completely gutted the truck and camper.

The couple was not hurt in the fire. The vehicle was totally in flames when firemen arrived.

This was the second time the Burley Fire Department has had to deal with a vehicle fire resulting from the use of the plastic connectors, according to department officials.

The pickup belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Altom's father, Edwin Bench, Oakley. Loss was estimated at $4,000 by fire department investigators.

Machinery not 'junk'

GOODING — No action has been taken on a complaint filed at the last Gooding City Council meeting regarding farm machinery parked at Eighth Avenue and Nevada Street.

City Atty. Cecil Hobbey said Friday no action will be taken unless someone signs a complaint regarding the machinery owned by Dick Bird. Bird told the Times-News his machinery "is worth at least $50,000 and is not junk."

Harvey Bickett, who appeared at the council meeting to complain about the equipment, has not contacted him about any legal action, the attorney said. It was pointed out at the council meeting that since the equipment is farm machinery it does not violate any zoning ordinance, but Hobbey said it was suggested that the equipment might violate an existing junk ordinance.

The Times-News erroneously stated the machinery did violate a junk ordinance and that the attorney had been instructed to draw up a complaint. This was incorrect and the Times-News apologizes to Bird.

Nancy Pierson, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Pierson, is the reigning queen. The arena has undergone about $10,000 in improvements. The Days of the Old West committee and the Sawtooth Rangers rebuilt chairs and bleachers and painted the arena.

Two "saddle broncs" of the year and a "bull of the year" should provide thrills at the rodeo. J. G. and Malinee Pehrson are the rodeo producers. Several riding clubs will perform before each rodeo performance.

The "Stinkero" local riding club, and two clubs from Gooding, "the Purple Sage Riders" and "Sheriff's posse" will ride in the grand entry parade as well as the rodeo.

Following the night rodeo Wednesday there will be fireworks display.

The adult parade committee has received some calls seeking information about entrance requirements. Mrs. Jack Basolo has said all communities across the Magic Valley are welcome to enter. The committee is eager to receive communities and groups with floats.

The annual barbecue will begin at 5:30 p.m. on the Fourth. Secretary of State Pete Cenfrusa has donated 13 lambs and Hadley Stone-Bellevue has donated a whole beef to be barbecued in the pits over hot rocks.

Over 350 pounds of potato salad will be prepared. Admission to the feed is $1; Days of the Old West tickets can be purchased from Robert McKeethar at the liquor store, which entitles admission to the feed.

Church lauded

COEUR D'ALENE — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, would make a good president, according to the nation's youngest senator.

"Frank Church is clearly a man qualified to be president of the United States," Sen. Joe Biden, Delaware, told the press Saturday at the Idaho Democratic Convention. But Biden added he does not know if Church even wants to run for president.

Key speaker at the convention banquet Friday night, Biden warned Democrats of the deterioration of the country's political system.

"I think that American is in a awful lot of trouble today... for the first time a significant portion of average Americans have begun to say 'senator' named that 'too many Democrats are learning the wrong lesson,' thinking that they will win because the Republican party is in disfavor." "It's not enough for the Democratic party to win (it is) only good if it means we must stand for something," Biden said.

The party also has the responsibility to send men of "integrity, decency and civility to Congress," and to "hold by the standard law in dealing with its opponents," he said. "I hope that we don't violate any of the safeguards that are built into law because the devil will turn on us," Biden said.

Biden told the press that the real issues of Democratic campaigns this year should be taxes, economy and the nation's foreign role.

Second vote set

KETCHUM — The $25,000 Ketchum City complex bond election last week has been declared invalid and a new election scheduled in mid-August.

The election was two votes shy of the needed two-thirds majority. City Clerk Betty Coles told city councilmen canvassing the votes Friday that both the ballots and the stubs were numbered. Voters' names corresponded with the numbers on the stubs and this made the ballots no longer secret.

She said she did not notice the numbers Wednesday during the election but was informed of the mistake later by a Ketchum resident. The oversight was by the printer who has properly printed other ballots for the city.

"We're not blaming the printer," she said. "I had just assumed everything would be printed correctly. I even voted my own ballot Wednesday without noticing the error."

Secret ballots are required by law.

During the canvassing two votes were challenged. One of the voters lives outside the city limits and the other was not correctly registered, according to councilmen.

Mrs. Coles said the second election cannot be held until 45 days after one is declared invalid.

Subdivision plans listed

GOODING — Plans for a subdivision between Old Highway 30 and the new route north of the Malad River were presented at the Gooding County Planning Commission Thursday night.

Severt Swenson, attorney, told commission members at the meeting in Gooding Soil Conservation Service meeting room that a client was interested in building costly residences on the site.

Wayne Matthews, commission chairman asked for a month for the commission to review the proposal.

Nine more maps are needed to be added to the comprehensive county plans tentatively scheduled to be presented to county commissioners in September, according to Pauline Jackson, secretary. She said the land use map's completed.

A best-judging contest in the morning was followed by the noon lunch. Richard Spahr, assistant director of public relations of the National Angus Association, addressed the group in the afternoon.

Auto prices eyed

(C) New York Times Service DETROIT — The 1974 model year may be a sales disaster for United States auto makers, but it's going down as a record year of another sort.

Automotive News posed this question recently: "How does a dealer explain to a customer that identical models — with the same equipment — carry a wide range of sticker prices depending on when the vehicle was assembled?"

The trade journal said that as of June 1 it was possible "for a Chrysler dealer to have in inventory identical models with five different sticker prices — as for other companies, it adds:

It is ironic, some auto executives and dealers feel, that price increases are taking place at a time when sales are going down.

"You might think they would lower prices when sales go down to stimulate the market," said Keel. "But, with costs going up, they can't stop the price increases."

Huge oil drilling swindle may hurt popular industry

By ANTHONY CAMPBELL (C) Chicago Daily News CHICAGO — The Home-Stake oil drilling swindle, which reportedly victimized a crowd of oil-country investors, may hurt the industry.

While confirming that an investigation of the company is underway, the SEC declined to say whether it was looking for possible criminal charges. The SEC office in Fort Worth is conducting the investigation.

Investigations reportedly also have unearthed evidence that Home-Stake used only a fraction of the $22 million that poured in to drill. However, it did give back about $5 million to disgruntled investors.

Real estate, a capital-intensive business, has been thriving after the financing boom that went to traditional sources, real estate investment trusts and savings and loan associations, started drying up late last summer.

Real estate developers are not the only ones in their industry who are making overtures to pension fund managers. The real estate departments of banks, real estate managers at insurance companies, the Real Estate Investment House, real estate managers and mortgage brokers all want to hand in hand with pension managers into new real estate enterprises.

At a recent convention sponsored by Institutional Investor magazine to introduce pension fund managers to some of the investment possibilities of real estate and to warn them of its pitfalls, the would-be sellers outnumbered the potential buyers nearly 10 to 1.

Some pension managers previously invested in fixed-rate securities through realtors. Now they are attracted to equity purchases, says Rodger F. Smith, who manages a $180 million pension fund for the Allis-Chalmers

Corporation, the Milwaukee-based machinery manufacturer. "There's a definite, strong trend in pension funds making investments in the real estate field because of the escalating cost of living," Smith said.

Labor settlements last year led the managers in real estate industries, he noted, called for benefit payments to be applied to the cost of living. These contract agreements are seen as the beginning of a long-term trend.

Smith said "pension fund investments will have to grow with current inflation rates. Otherwise, a corporation's contributions will have to be increased to keep pace with living costs."

The actuarial assumptions that confront most pension managers lead them to seek investment assets that will grow at the rate of 5 percent a year or more. While these managers invest primarily in stocks, in the past they have become frustrated because their hopes for stock appreciation have not been realized in the last few years.

But pension managers are turning now to the purchase of real estate because many income-producing properties promise a cash return of 7 to 9 percent and a 1 to 3 percent annual appreciation in value.

A WEEKLY DIGEST OF NEWS, FORECASTS, TRENDS AND IDEAS

CAN ZERO POPULATION GROWTH BE HERE ALREADY? Probably not. But sales of products in the "baby need" category in supermarkets are definitely not what they used to be.

Instantaneous sustenance? You don't like what you read in your newspaper, you can't get a breakfast. The army has come up with a new kind of instant waste matter from the likes of newspaper, cartons and infanture into food and fuel with startling speed.

Back to school. Merchants are already beginning to get into the back-to-school business. The period from now to early October has been a traditionally slow time for many toy departments.

Conversation starters. Business in New York City's department stores recorded the largest monthly gain in 15 months for May, continuing a strong spring upward trend after more than a year of erratic consumer spending.

Home furnishings. Home Furnishings Daily? According to Progressive Grocer magazine, the meat sales are actually pushing forward on economics. The farmer can make more and the customers seem to be able to pay the prices.

Orders keep cookware hot? It looks like another good year for cookware. Although prices are up, so are orders and key manufacturers report that orders shipped are the barometer of business, not dollar volume.

Electronic watchdogs? Less expensive and easy-to-install phone and security devices are being used as "electronic watchdogs" by consumers planning to leave their homes or offices unattended this summer.

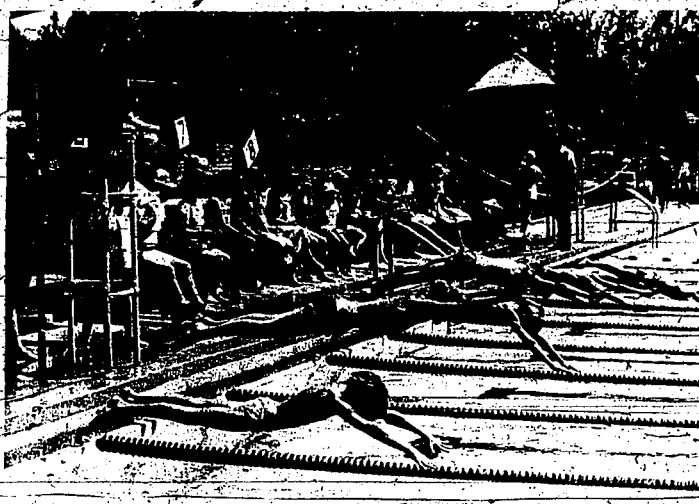

It's got to be wear-guaranteed? Wear-guaranteed carpeting, a trend which grew up in the contract market and which is now expanding into residential, had a strong selling edge over sales which did not carry guarantees.

Weiskopf clings to lead in windy western tourney

CHICAGO (UPI)—A 16-mile per hour northwest wind turned playing conditions foggy today at Butler National Golf Club Saturday and Tom Weiskopf shot a par 71 in the $200,000 Western Open to cling to the lead with 4 holes with 212, one under par.

None of the 78 survivors in the field could break par on the 7,002-yard, par 71 links and only three could equal it, Weiskopf, Joe Perry, who wound up with a 221, nine strokes behind, and J.C. Snead, who charged from a seven-way tie for 15th place into second. But he trailed Weiskopf by five strokes at 217.

Most of the day only one player was under par for the tournament, Weiskopf, who started one under and parred his first nine holes. He bogeyed the 10th to go even, but then birdied the next two to return to the under par red figures.

Then a string of three straight bogys put him over par until the 17th hole when he dropped a birdie putt to return to even. Then he confidently stroked home an eight-footer for a birdie on the 18th to go under par again.

Weiskopf blamed his string of bogys on bird club selection hitting over the green on two of the holes and into the trees into an unplayable lie on the other.

"I played very well the first nine holes, and I played the last three holes very well," he said. "I played the whole round very well except for a couple of club mistakes. I hit the ball solid and kept the ball in play. A 71 was a very good score out there today."

Al Geiberger, even par for the first two rounds and trailing Weiskopf by only one stroke after 36 holes, fell far behind with an 80, for a 222, nine over par.

"The five who trailed by two strokes at 222, Tom Evans, Larry Wise, Tom Watson, Bobby Mitchell and Gary Sanders, had similar problems.

Evans, who set a course record with a second round 67, went five over par on his first three holes and wound up with a horrendous 83 for 226. Wise stayed in close contention for eight holes and then slipped to 79 for 222. Watson shot a 75 for 218, Mitchell 80 for 223, and Sanders 78 for 222.

"Par is pretty good here any time," Snead said. "I should have bogeyed under but I took the 16th and 17th holes with three putts. It was my best putting round since I won at Philadelphia and it was fun to swing. But I'm not driving very well, I know what I want to do, but when I get over the ball I'm chicken to do it. I don't have confidence and I just nurse it around."

Frank Beard shot a 73 to tie Watson for third place and Hutch Baird with a 73 and Chuck Courtney with a 70 tied for fifth at 219. Arnold Palmer was in at 220 in a four-way tie while Lee Trevino took an 81 to slip to 227.

With Weiskopf the only sub-par player for 54 holes, the chances looked good for the winner of the tournament to be Weiskopf for the third straight week. Weiskopf appeared to be the only player with a chance to finish under par and par

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (UPI)—Teenager Heather Greenwood, who broke the world record for the 400-meter freestyle 24 hours earlier, came back to lead a pack of three swimmers to a Santa Clara International Swimming meet Saturday in the second day of the three-day event.

Miss Greenwood, a 16-year-old Fresno high school senior, added the women's 200-meter freestyle to her blue ribbon collection with a 2:05.93, clocking her time bettered the 2:06.3 set last year by Shirley Babashoff, who finished second Saturday in 2:05.56.

Two other records were bettered in the second phase of the 36-event meet.

The previous record was set by East Germany's Roland Matthes, 2:06.58 in 1973.

Miss Cook barely outpaced the top qualifier, Maryanne Bullock of Mesa, Ariz., who was timed in 2:22.03.

In the men's 200-meter backstroke, Steve Hardy set a Canadian national record with a 2:10.71 effort.

Mike Bruner of Deanna, Calif., became the meet's fourth double-winner when he took the men's 400-meter individual medley in 5:39.21. On Friday, he won the 400-meter freestyle.

Fishing hint: — By Oly

Re-cycling evil amphibians

It isn't often that a fisherman in Idaho can make money.

But with Ecol Knevel now offering $3,000 for recovery of his downed sky-cycles, some lucky Magic Valley angler could have a chance.

Fishing for sky-cycles can be tricky unless one completely understands the quarry.

Since the vehicle is made of aluminum, it seems improbable it would go for a series of rings off flippers — probably from the Olympia Brewery — and fashioned into a working spinner arrangement.

A hooked sky-cycle will, it is believed, stay in the depths and sink rather than fight. For this reason it's believed a strong rig, something like a main steel cable and wrecker would be the best bet.

When cleaning sky-cycles, one must be very careful about what he throws away. A small black organ, which on inspection would appear to be an electronic recording instrument, seems to be the prize of the catch.

(One final word of caution. Don't try to sink sky-cycles.

American juniors defeat Russians in track dual

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The relays, led the United States to its second team championship Saturday night at the 3rd annual Russian-American track and field meet.

NFL season tickets selling well despite blackout ban

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite all these dire predictions of selling problems because of the anti-blackout law the strike threat, the new league and even the energy crisis, season tickets for National Football League football games still seem to be a hot commodity.

A UPI survey of the NFL teams shows there's only a slight softening in the demand for tickets around the league this year.

Of the 13 teams that sold out all their games last season, 12 of them seem sure to be sold out again this year.

The only question mark team is the world champion Miami Dolphins, who lead the league with almost 70,000 season tickets sold but still have tickets available because they play in the 80,000-seat Orange Bowl stadium.

Some observers have speculated that the majority of teams might be down because the Dolphins are off 10 per cent. What wasn't generally noted is that the Dolphins have sold more season tickets than any other team even though they still have more available because of their big stadium.

As Don Sandford, the ticket manager for the Denver Broncos who play in the 51,701-capacity Mile High Stadium pointed out, "The blackout isn't going to hurt anyone in a small stadium."

Even the Dolphins are optimistic they'll come close to matching last year's figure when they cut off the season ticket sales at 78,000 and sold the last two thousand on a can track and field meet: Russian decathlete Vladimir Burlakov, meanwhile, set a meet record as the Soviets dominated both decathlon and pentathlon events.

The United States piled up 197 points to the Soviet Union's 181 for the team championship. The American boys claimed the team title with come-from-behind wins in the 10,000-meter run and 3,000-meter steeplechase, and added insurance points with first places in the mile relay. The U.S. outpointed the Soviets 133-99 in the boys division.

Though losing 64-42 in the girls division, the young American women came on strong in the mile relay to help the team's winning effort, largely through the efforts of anchor-ly Kathy Weston of Reno, Nev., who set a meet record in the 800-meter run.

Russian and American participants in the meet—held around the Memorial Stadium track hand-in-hand following the meet—displaying with smiles the relations between both teams in the week preceding the meet.

The Soviet team will return home Sunday.

America's Eric Hulst, a 16-year-old high school sophomore from Laguna Beach, Calif., overtook Russian Peter Chernuk in the last of 23 laps in the grueling 10,000-meter run, receiving a hero's welcome at the top.

In the boys' mile relay, Americans Mark Collins, Keith Tinner, Ron Harris and Curtis Byrd opened a wide lead quickly, and turned a glittering 3:14.74 clocking for first place points.

Not as expected was the American girls' showing in the mile relay. Charisse DeHaven opened a quick lead over Russian star Ludmila Ushatkin who had outpaced the field in the 200-meter race earlier Saturday, and Miss Weston anchored the Yanks to a 3:44.97 win.

Miss Weston shattered a meet record in the 800-meters in 2 minutes, 3.89 seconds.

Burlakov won all the field events in the decathlon and placed high enough in the races to win by a comfortable margin. The husky Russian won outright 4th long jump, 2nd shot put, 3rd discus and 4th javelin. He also won the 110-meter hurdles, piling up 7,600 points for the victory.

Teammate Anatole Novikov finished second behind America's Russell Pflits and Steve Alexander.

Petite blonde Russian Ekatarina Smirnova swept in the girls' pentathlon earlier in the day.

Through 21 events, the United States led the Soviet Union 117-104.

Miss Smirnova, who blushed when told she was admired by the American boys' team, won first places in each of the five events—the 100-meter hurdles, shot put, high jump, long jump and 200-meter dash.

Lisa Klimnaka of the United States placed second in the pentathlon, ahead of Russian Eugenia Salikova and American Jeanne Sheperd.

Frank Perbeck sailed the javelin 236 feet, one inch on his second try and his American teammate Gene Lorenzen threw the spear 232-8 for a surprising American sweep of the event.

Russian coaches had a minor squabble with meet officials because the javelin competition. Officials would not allow the Soviets to use their own gunnys by game basis but sold them all last year and figures to do it again.

About a third of the teams raised ticket prices this year—about a dollar a ticket—but only two of the teams which sell out every game—Minnesota and Philadelphia—were among them.

One team hurt by the energy crisis is New England. The Patriots sold 56,043—the cutoff basis in the 61,000-seat Schaefer Stadium in 1972 but dropped to about 52,000 last year and are around the 50,000 mark this year. The 25-mile drive from Boston to Roxboro worries some subscribers.

"Many people wrote they were afraid they could not get to the stadium on a Sunday and still get gas," a Patriot spokesman said.

San Diego and Baltimore are two teams quite a bit down this year. San Diego, which sold 36,177 season tickets at this time last year and wound up with 40,341, is at 29,234. Baltimore, which sold 48,000 last year, is now at 36,000. Both clubs had losing seasons last year.

From all angles

A year ago when Buhl hosted the state "B" Legion tournament for the second time, the townspeople were hoping for a "representative" showing.

That was because Buhl was in the meet as the host team and didn't have to earn his way there. Well, Buhl was representative. It was the state champion.

This year, however, the townspeople have another idea about the Legion club: Since just about everyone is back from last year's club, they anticipate a good shot at repeating.

If it happens, the local fans won't have to go very far to see it. Bill Nungester and the Buhl Recreation Council have landed the state playoffs for the third consecutive year.

The state "B" will be played at Farris Field Aug. 9-11.

But there's more. The council also has picked up the host destination for the "senior Babe Ruth League" playoffs. This group encompasses the same boys as those playing Legion ball—but with two big exceptions.

In the first place, only Lewiston has a registered senior Babe Ruth league team. Hence, Lewiston will come to Buhl for a best of three playoff the last weekend in July.

The second difference is the happiest for Buhl. The Babe Ruth competition offers a chance to advance to regional, sectional and national tournaments—if you can survive that long.

In "B" Legion, the state tournament is its only "A" champions advance to inter-state playoffs.

It's quite remarkable that a town the size of Buhl should come up with the ingredients of a Coach Jerry Hawkins can call on for four pitchers.

Outside help is provided by the return each summer of Robb, King, Pioneer league fans might recall Bob King, who played shortstop for Boise for a couple of years and then coached in the Boise school system for a while.

Now living in California, the elder King sends son Robb up each year—and has since Little League days—to live with relations and play baseball.

Buhl also is helped by Tim Martin, a Buhl native who moved to Wood River a couple years back but returns each year to play.

That, of course, helps, but the rest of the team is solid. The impressive thing is the way Buhl can hit the ball.

All the batters seem to have the ability to hit the average Legion pitching. This is a real plus. Most teams have a couple three batters who're only going to go so-so against so-so pitching. No one hits the really good ones consistently but then very few teams have really good ones either.

This ability to score also helps the pitching rotation. Coach Hawkins can usually figure on five runs a game so that means his pitching staff can carry an ERA of four and still be predominantly winners.

With this type of team, it is easily understood why Buhl is scheduling as much action as it can.

It will host the Sagebrush Days Legion tournament Monday and Tuesday at Farris field. After taking a couple of days off, it heads north. Playing two games at Caldwell and Craneville. Then it'll take a day to set Expo in Spokane. The following evening Buhl will play a couple of games in Missoula, Mont., and wind it up with another game at Idaho Falls on the way home.

Pat Hamilton is estimated to have made Mac Ball solvent in lining up the games for that tour. But since he's a baker and has three sons on the team, none is feeling sorry for him.

Intrepid wins yacht challenge

NEWPORT, R. I. (UPI) — Intrepid, bidding for her third America's Cup, soundly defeated previously unbeaten Courageous Saturday in the final day of preliminary trials for yachting's most prestigious title.

Managers of the two other American candidates, Mariner and Valiant, temporarily withdrew both 12-meter boats from competition for design changes in the stern.

Intrepid, her wood hull apparently lighter and stiffer than the new aluminum Courageous, split tacks at the start. When the yachts came together again, Intrepid was ahead by two boat lengths.

From that point, Intrepid showed commanding boat speed to weather and an ability to hold her own tactically downwind. The margins of her first victory at successive marks were 1:25, 1:31, 44', 1:15 and 1:22.

4,700 fans show up for WFL scrimmage

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Veteran quarterback George Allen led the Birmingham Americans to an easy 31-14 victory over the Jacksonville Sharks Saturday night before 4,700 fans at Memorial Stadium.

The game was billed as a charity scrimmage between the two World Football League teams.

Birmingham scored first on an eight-yard touchdown pass from Mira to running back Paul Robinson in the first quarter. The Americans came back with another touchdown when back-up quarterback Danny Duron connected on a 10-yard pass to tight end Bob Owens.

Running back Carl Bartles then scored on a nine-yard run in the second period and linebacker Ronald Fox recovered a blocked field goal attempt and ran back 63 yards for another Birmingham touchdown before the half.

Jacksonville scored in the first quarter on a 47-yard field goal by Grant Guthrie and then scored its only touchdown of the game when quarterback Key Stephenson dived from the one-yard line for six points.

The Americans came back with another touchdown when back-up quarterback Danny Duron connected on a 10-yard pass to tight end Bob Owens.

America's Clancy Edwards won his second event of the meet in the 200-meter dash, partly redeeming himself for a mishandled balloon pass that cost the U.S. a team certain first place points in the 44-yard relay Friday night.

Americans Robin Earl, first in the boys' discus; Cheryl Butler, first in the girls' long jump; Greg Eckman, first in the boys' 400-meter hurdles; and Robert Christensen, first in the boys' 3,000-meter steeplechase, added valuable points toward a team championship.

Christensen was a particular pleaser to the crowd of about 3,000 at Memorial Stadium, trailing through most of the race but surpassing Russian Yancis Iesalniks in the final water jump of the steeplechase.

The Soviets won the first of the junior events sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) at Sacramento, Calif., in 1972, and the Americans won last year—at Odessa—in the Russian Ukraine.

Orantes out-conditions Roche for Wimbledon win

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Manuel Orantes, the 12th seed for Wimbledon, proved that you can't beat match practice when he beat Tony Roche of Australia in a grueling five-setter to gain the last 16 of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Orantes, a clay court specialist, looked booked for an early exit when he trailed two sets to love, but he "pulled" himself together and ran out a 2-6, 5-7, 7-5, 6-4, 6-6 winner over Roche, beaten finalist here in 1968.

"Roche tired because he's not used to playing five-setters," the toothy Spaniard said. "Tennis is at the crossroads."

Players must decide whether they want to follow the tournament circuit or play for one hour in league tennis. They can't do both.

Roche, the player-coach of Denver in World Team Tennis, needed 74 hrs. to complete his second round match against John Alexander because of rain delays. Saturday he played with a single two sets but then played three strokes and was unable to capitalize on a fifth game break in the fifth set.

For the first time in a week, the sun shone on the All England club which was packed with 26,154 fans, but, unfortunately, the tennis did not match the gay summer scene. Retiree Mike Gibson played "catch up" as he tried to clear the backlog of 180 matches, but this meant the fans were denied the opportunity of seeing the higher seeds in action.

Gibson achieved his aim of getting down to the last 32 in both the men's and women's singles, while seventh-seeded Tom Okker of the Netherlands joined Orantes in the round of 16 with a light-hearted 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 win over Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

Three American men won their second round matches to bring to eight the number of U.S. survivors in the last 32.

Nine girls made it to the third round in the women's singles. Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., qualified to meet eighth-seeded Arthur Ashe with an 8-6, 6-4, 8-6 win over Germany's Karl Meiler. Dave Stockton of Port Washington, N.Y., lured back Briton Gerald Patricia, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, while Jeff Borowiak of Berkeley, Calif., beat Neale Fraser 6-3, 6-4, 6-6, 1-6, the Australian winner of the title in 1960 and now his country's Davis Cup captain, retiring with a muscle pull in his right thigh which hurt when he served.

Soviets pessimistic about track chances

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI)—The Russian coach was pessimistic and the American mentor optimistic Saturday as they met in Durham to prepare for next weekend's U.S.-Soviet track and field duel.

"This meet is the end of the track and field season for you," Russian Coach Igor Ter-Ovanesyan said. "But for us, it is the beginning."

The Russian team has not competed together and, although the squad contains 90 per cent of the best representatives of track and field in the Soviet Union, "their form is not the very best," Ter-Ovanesyan said.

He brushed aside the favorite's tag some having hung on the Russians. If that were so, he said, "then, why should your team come to participate?"

American coach Jimmy Carnes of the University of Florida, on hand to greet Ter-Ovanesyan and his team, said then they were "ranked" 20th to No. 1, but we're looking forward to possibly becoming No. 1 ourselves.

Carnes' team is made up of athletes selected from the National AAU Championships three weeks ago.

One of the closest contests in the meet was Friday and Saturday at Duke University's Wallace-Wade Stadium should be the 100-meter match of Steve Williams (who equalled the world record of 9.9 seconds at the AAU meet) and Valeyky Borzov, winner of gold medals in both the 100 and 200 meter races of the 1972 Olympics.

Williams bested Borzov in the 400 meter relay anchor leg last year at Minsk and the Russian sprinter said he was eager to complete against Williams.

"It's always much better to compete with the strongest person," said Borzov through an interpreter.

The Russians are expected to win the hammer throw with Olympic champion Anatoly Bundarchuk, the 5,000-meter walk, and the triple jump where gold medalist Victory Senevov is the top Soviet entry.

The "loss-up" events, as Dr. Leroy Walker, meet co-director sees it, are the shot put, long jump, pole vault, high jump and 4,500-meter run.

Matlack, Mets blank Cards
NEW YORK (UPI)—Left-hander John Matlack allowed only one hit—a third inning single—by losing pitcher John Curtis—Saturday to hurl the New York Mets to a 4-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

After Old-Timers Day festivities that included appearances by 47 former players, including seven Hall of Famers, Matlack pitched the Cardinals and retired the last 12 men he faced.

It was the second one-hitter of Matlack's career. He threw one against Houston last season. Matlack walked through batters, Ted Sizemore in the first inning, Luis Melendez in the second and pinch-hitter Ted Hentzelman in the sixth.

Squeeze hunt beats Twins
CHICAGO (UPI)—Bill Sharp's suicide squeeze-bunt scored Carlos May to cap a two-run rally in the bottom of the eighth inning Saturday to give the Chicago White Sox a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The White Sox, trailing 3-2 to Bert Blyleven, took a leadoff single from Jorge Orta. After Orta was sacrificed to second by Tony Muser, May walked. Ken Henderson then singled to right in the second, with the tying run and sending May to third. Bill Hands replaced Blyleven for the Twins to pitch to Sharp, who placed a bunt between first and second and beat it out for a single as May scored easily.

Third in U.S. not good enough for Martin

JEROME—Third best in the nation isn't exactly where Terry Martin of Jerome wants to be.

But you can ask a question about that. It runs, how can a Jerome native living in a desert become third best in the nation as a sled dog driver?

The third-place national finish was confirmed by the International Sled Dog Association's final standings. In the seven-dog team limited class, Martin was undefeated in all nine of his race heats last year. His team averaged 16 miles per hour or better over an eight-mile course.

Being undefeated among drivers in all 48 contiguous states, Alaska and foreign countries wasn't enough for first. The standings are based on money won, time, and distance and placement with mathematical formulas used for the final results.

But Martin's "higher" finish should have been possible. "The winning driver had two firsts, a couple of seconds and one third as low as tenth," he says. In fact, Martin defeated the champion driver and team twice in head-to-head competition a year ago when the Michigander ventured west — much to his dismay.

For that reason Martin hopes to get further east this year for fun in the bigger money races.

Last spring he ran at West Yellowstone, Jackson Hole, Pujos, Calif.; Hobart, Mills, Calif.; and Priest Lake. He won the Pacific Coast Title in his class at West Lake and the Western division title at Jackson Hole.

There are two problems in the quest for the national title — time and money.

Winning is not only important but essential in this game. Martin and his wife kept a kennel of 20 Alaskan and Siberian huskies at their ranch.

It costs $4,000 per year to feed them. Last season, Martin spent $1,000 on dog groceries — but the travel expenses came from his pocket.

"The time factor is difficult, too.

"Up there (Alaska) you never hear a driver say anything. The Indians have some great teams and when they want a little more they give a low whistle," he says.

"I think that's where so many drivers have gotten into trouble," he continued. "I believe the dogs are concentrating totally on racing and all that yelling behind them breaks them down."

"They have to be," he said.

"On an eight-mile course, you start out at a sprint and continue it to the end. We'll open at about 20 miles per hour and average around 18. The dogs have to think about running all the time to be able to do that."

"Discipline is another thing Martin has firm beliefs about."

"I never beat a dog. Once in a while I'll spank one, just like you spank your kids, but never to the same dog. You can get the same thing accomplished by picking them up and shaking them. If one or two of those don't work here, I'll spank 'em. I'll spank 'em well. I'll spank 'em because of the high cost of feeding them."

"You have to have an understanding of each animal. What to expect from each, how to get it and what you're getting and not getting. The dogs develop the same understanding of the driver and know when he wants more," Martin said.

"Martin says leaders rather pick themselves. The good ones, the naturals, have it instilled in them. For me, the leader has to be the fastest on the team to keep the gangline tight at all times. He also has to have the respect of the other dogs. And he has to learn to let the ones closest to him concentrate."

"I put my next fastest dogs behind him and my two strongest are my wheel dogs. The ones closest to the sled," he explained. "The wheel dogs are very important because they have to keep the gangline tight at all times."

"It's like water skiing. If that gangline goes slack, the sled starts to slide and veer out. It wastes time and energy to get it back and, yes, once in a while the sled will slip down the hill."

"The tight gangline also is important because if the pressure is steady you reduce

Staubach inks long pact with Cowboys

DALLAS (UPI)—Dallas Cowboys manager Tom Staubach says he never considered jumping to the World Football League Saturday.

mult-year contract with the Cowboys.

"I was advised by various sources to contact the WFL," said Staubach, last year's top passer in the NFL and a key factor in the Cowboys' hopes of regaining an annual Super Bowl challenger. "But I never talked to them and they never called me."

Staubach had one year left in his Cowboy contract plus an option year, but he chose to extend his obligation to the club.

"It's just as I signed a multi-year contract," Staubach said. "They (the Cowboys) called me a couple of months ago and we talked it over and got it settled last week."

"I've been happy with the Cowboys and we didn't have any hard negotiations. I negotiated for myself. If someone had gone in for me there might have been some haggling. But I'm happy and the Cowboys have been fair to me."

Fisk shelved for 2 months by knee hurt

BOSTON (UPI) — Carlton Fisk, the Boston Red Sox hard-look, hard-hitting catcher, will be sidelined for "at least two months" with a knee injury suffered Friday night in a home plate collision during a game at Cleveland, the club's team physician said Saturday.

"Fisk, 26, was injured when Indians outfielder Leon Lee slid home with the winning run in the ninth inning of Friday night's 2-1 game."

Fisk was straddling the plate awaiting a throw from Marv Stahler when Lee's "reached home. The throw sailed over Fisk's head as he went down in the collision."

"Fisk was a racehorse player," said Cleveland Manager Ken Aspromonte. "If the catcher gets the ball first, he's in a position and the runner takes the brunt of it. But if the runner gets the first, he has the upper hand."

"Fisk missed the first several weeks of the season with a groin injury, but was batting .300 with 11 home runs and 26 RBIs at the time of his latest injury."

Oldtimers play at Shea stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Mets honored 47 oldtimers including seven Hall of Famers Saturday at their annual Old-Timers Day celebration commemorating their first decade of play at Shea Stadium.

One of the players was Mame Little, who played in the two-losing game with a headset so he could speak on national television during the ceremonies that preceded the Mets-Cardinals game.

Ed Charles tripled in Chuck Hiller with the only run of the Old-Timers contest.

Amber Herod takes 15th Queen's Plate

TORONTO (UPI) — Amber Herod, charging from the three-quarter pole, Saturday won the 1974 Queen's Plate at Woodbine race track.

Native Aid, one and a half lengths back, was second and Ruston's Corsair was third.

Edward Pollock-Came in fourth.

The win by the three-year-old colt was the second Queen's Plate victory in a row for Stafford Farm. Platts, who piloted Stafford Farm's Royal Chocolate to victory last year, was aboard Amber Herod.

Amber Herod, who went off at 6-1 odds, paid $21.50, $20 and $5.80 across the board after covering the mile and a quarter in 2:09 1/5. The race was run on a track made sloppy by a steady downpour the night before the race and during most of the morning.

The winning purse was a record $96,541.

Williams' hit lifts Orioles past Yanks

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Earl Williams' seventh-inning ground rule double broke a scoreless tie Saturday night and sparked the Baltimore Orioles to a 2-0 victory over the New York Yankees behind the two-hit pitching of Dave McNally. Williams, hitting in his eighth straight game, doubled home Don Baylor who opened the inning with a single and moved to second on Brooks Robinson's single.

Yankee relief pitcher Sparky Lyle replaced Dick Tidrow to retire the Orioles in the seventh inning, but Baltimore's picked up an insurance run off the crafty southpaw in the eighth inning on a single by Tommy Davis, a walk to Bog Powell and a single by Baylor.

Site of "Christina's World"
Andrew Wyeth to leave
 Maine amid controversy

CUSHING, Maine (UPI)—Many residents of this rural community, which has attracted tourists by the thousands because it is the subject of many of Andrew Wyeth's paintings, were generally sorry to hear that Wyeth plans to leave Maine.

But most of them also said they would not be sorry if the tourists pulled out too.

The artist, who has a home here and spends summers painting scenes of Maine's rustic back country, announced Wednesday he is leaving and plans to move the museum because the neighbors have complained about the influx of tourists.

Most of the visitors want to see the old Olson farmhouse and surrounding countryside, which is the subject of his famous painting, "Christina's World." The farmhouse has been turned into a museum of Wyeth's work.

A summer resident, Barbara Kinney, said she hoped the Wyeths would stay.

"One of the things I have cherished about Cushing is the fact that Mr. Wyeth was among us," she said. "It is a great honor, and I feel very bad about it."

But another resident, June Champlin, suggested if it means fewer tourists it might be the best thing.

"If I lived on Hawthorne Street, I would object to 15,000 people drinking by my house," she said. "People were littering and there were no toilet facilities, and because of that people were desecrating the cemetery down on the point."

A town official who asked not to be identified said residents of Hawthorne Point, a high, promontory overlooking the St. George River, were mainly responsible for the complaints. "It's been blown up to the point where everybody in Cushing doesn't want the Wyeths," the official said.

"Frankly, most of us couldn't care less whether they stay or not. Their presence in the town has increased the land values, though, and a lot of rich people have built homes near the Olson place."

"Some of those houses down on the point cost $16,000 to $40,000—and they don't like the litter and the traffic," the official said.

One local resident, who asked that her name not be used, said the museum itself ought to be moved but the Wyeths ought to stay.

"This is a small town, and the type of people that it brings here don't get along with the residents."

But as for the Wyeths, "We like to have them around. The museum itself has nothing personally to do with the Wyeths. I know them and they are very friendly."

Wyeth said he thinks his leaving Maine and the moving of the house may be the only solution.

"I don't enjoy feeling that people are bothered and upset because of something I've done," Wyeth said.

"I may move to an island out to sea or I may go to Europe for a while."

"I just don't know—the whole thing is very unfortunate."

Police file pot charge

TWIN FALLS—Charges of manufacturing a controlled substance marijuana were filed Friday against a 49-year-old Twin Falls man.

Capt. Tim Qualls, chief of detectives, Twin Falls, Police Department, said Junior Calvin Treadwell was arrested Thursday afternoon. He was being held in the Twin Falls County Jail today in lieu of $1,500 bond.

'Lettuce' kills goat

LA PUENTE, Calif. (UPI)—Mary Vall bought a goat to keep the lawn mowed short, but the grass didn't satisfy its appetite, so the animal turned to "lettuce" — $302 in cash in Mrs. Vall's purse.

She took the goat to a veterinarian, who couldn't get the animal to cough up, so he operated.

He found $250 in satisfactory condition and $50 in cash that, tattered but good enough to send to the Treasury for at least partial redemption.

Mrs. Vall lost $350 — $100 in cash and $250 in the veterinarian's bill.

The operation was a success but the goat died.

NORTH GATE SUBDIVISION
(Follow Directions Below)

UNIQUE VARIATIONS IN ARCHITECTURE & FLOOR PLANS OPEN TO YOUR VIEWING

Imaginative building designs and solid building practices were used in the Northgate Subdivision. When the question arose as to what would be an efficient, dependable source of energy for heating, cooking and full family living, the answer was GAS. These homes were designed and built with your needs and desires in mind and can readily use gas appliances. In Idaho we have gas to burn... but we want to burn it wisely. Gas appliances are a wise use of energy.

Alaskan town girds for pipeline 'human flood'

(C) New York Times Service
VALDEZ, Alaska — The quiet beauty still clings to this little place, hidden at the end of a fjord and sheltered by mountain peaks. But occasional sounds, as emphatic as the crack of ice off the front of a glacier, forecast the human flood that is only months away.
 The roar of machines improving the gravel airstrip, the strident voice of a wife searching for housing so she can live with her husband, the expectant chuckle of a bar manager, the worried talk of a chief of police — all are sounds relating to the construction of a terminal here for the Trans-Alaska Pipeline.

 When pipeline talk began in 1969, there was a flurry of activity and the town's 1,000 residents settled back for the wait. Traller camps went broke and retail business sagged.
 In April a pipeline bill cleared congress. Crews quickly moved into Old Valdez where the pipe that will be used in the line is stacked across the grid pattern of the former city. The old town was washed away by the tidal wave that followed the 1964 earthquake.

New Valdez is five miles west, on the fourth side of the fjord that is called the Valdez arm of Prince William Sound. There Herbert Lehfeldt, a professional city manager who came to Alaska to escape southern California, spoke first of the housing problem.
 "The population is up to about 2,000 and we have no trailers, no place for the new people to live," he said. "A lot of them are hiding in the bush, camping, violating sanitation laws, and we can't take the things out. It's a real problem."
 There will be 8,000 or more people here within a year, officials predict.

 The construction companies will bring some 3,500 to build part of the pipeline and the tank farm on the south side of the fjord where the oil will be processed and the tankers loaded. They are building barracks for most of the workmen and family housing for the supervisor staff.
 But for the other thousands who come here to work as waitresses, clerks and so forth, no housing is provided.
 "You just don't do things overnight, and no one has been willing to put up money,"

Lehfeldt said. "The city owns almost no land and can't provide housing."
 While Valdez has the most urgent problems, other cities and villages in this thinly populated state are also discovering the realities of the boom that they have fought to bring about.
 Glenallen, an unincorporated town on the pipeline route, has no housing available. Its streets are clogged with traffic, and the village expects to be overwhelmed with job-seekers. Prime is up in Fairbanks, and the Alaska state troopers are reassigning men to stations along the pipe route. Officials have lobbied the state government for help. Of $12 million appropriated this year, $2 million went to Valdez. But this and more will be used in hiring more policemen, buying new equipment, expanding the city staff and meeting the increased demands of the school system.

 The city budget has risen from $500,000 in 1971 to $4.25 million next year, and school enrollment in the same period has jumped from 341 to 1,000 in September.
 "This town isn't ready for a guard," said Paul Stoner, a guard at a state mental hospital here.

 TRYING to report a fire might be a little difficult in this Misspula, Mont., neighborhood if there's no phone nearby — or worse yet — if there isn't a dime. A local fire department official said the box is temporarily out of order while the system is renovated and updated. (UPI)

White House attacks committee procedure

By SAUCOHLER

(c) Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — The White House has launched a vigorous campaign against the house judiciary committee which is considering the impeachment of President Nixon.

For the first time, the attack is based on procedure. It takes the confrontation "back to square one."

Dean "Burch," the top counselor to the president, insists that to uncover all the facts, the committee headed by Rep. Peter W. Rodino, Jr. (D-N.J.) must permit "defense witnesses." He notes that White House "impeachment" lawyer James St. Clair "hasn't asked for 600 witnesses, or even 60 just six."

But the committee voted not to hear four of them at this time.

News reporters hearing Burch's complaints asked whether Nixon's refusal to give up subpoenaed tapes likewise inhibits uncovering all the facts.

"The President has the sole power of invoking executive privilege," Burch replied. "It is true that the house has sole power of impeachment, also granted by the constitution. And so we're back to square one."

Since Rodino has refused to involve the courts in the impeachment process — if, indeed, the courts would allow themselves to become involved — the disputes will be resolved by the judiciary committee, and possibly on the floor of the House of Representatives.

The eventual vote in the house will be not to impeach," Burch said. "And my quarrel is not with the House, which has the right to do what it wants to do, but with the procedure. Although I doubt seriously that in a political trial, we can achieve the fairness of a judicial trial, the defense counsel does have a few basic rights and one of them is to develop his case."

indicts and the senate does the case. Burch refused to accept the analogy. The judiciary committee includes congressmen who have spoken out against Nixon and who have introduced the very impeachment resolutions now being considered.

Special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski and others believe that had the president stolen a loaf of bread, he could not be prosecuted at all, since an incumbent President cannot be indicted.

HOMER DeWOLFE
no change in lifestyle

Motorcycle cop learns he has genius mentality

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Motorcycle cop Homer DeWolfe, a high school dropout, has discovered through tests he is a genius with an IQ in the top 2 per cent of the nation's population. But he says the discovery will not make any difference in his life style.

"Really, I'm no more qualified now for anything else than I was before," he said, smiling.

DeWolfe, 44, is a 23-year police veteran who admits that he regrets passing up a formal education but says being a motorcycle cop was his lifelong dream.

"I've reached the age where happiness and satisfaction mean more to me than the status and prestige of rank," he said. "I've been satisfied with my police career, but an education helps you in any field."

DeWolfe learned by chance of his intelligence rating when he passed a short test in a monthly magazine and sent off for a home test administered by Mensa, an international society for persons of high intellectual level.

"It's not an accomplishment in the sense that it was something I did except to take a test," he says modestly. "I don't think it will have a bearing on anything."

DeWolfe and a brother were sons of an attorney who served in the Texas Legislature. He said his parents were intelligent but neither imposed scholastic restraint on the boys.

"I had every opportunity for an education, but like so many smart-alecky youngsters I didn't take it," he said.

"My brother was different. He was a scholar. He got his

P.D. at the ripe old age of 25 and he's a chemistry professor at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

But when the traffic lights turn green each day Homer DeWolfe motors on because police work "is my career and I have thoroughly enjoyed it."

Filling, flying hot air balloon

Balloon glides silently in sky

SUNBURY, Ohio (UPI) — It was 6 a.m. The winds were a good 7 miles an hour. The skies were barely pink. Pilot Dan Stone had chosen an unused cemetery area to launch his hot air balloon.

"No, this isn't an 'amen,' he said. "There aren't any hazards, except power lines. You can fly in high winds certain of when the sun is up. The thermostat makes the balloon go up and down and too hard to control."

Stone, 28, of Springfield, Ohio, gave the signal for the crew to start two high-powered fans set up on either side of the bottom rim of the deflated red balloon.

Within minutes, it began to take shape. Stone walked inside the puffed-up balloon to check the control ropes to the top hatch and maneuvering vent.

He grabbed a six-foot-tall propane torch and stuck it into the center of the 80-foot balloon to warm the air. The balloon rose and within seconds the lines stiffened and the basket began to jump from the ground, despite the weight of the crewmen.

Stone doused the torch and he scurried into the baskets as the last ropes were unhooked.

"Let her go," he yelled. "We rose silently into the sky to about 250 feet. The only noise was a frequent blast of the burner to keep the air hot and the balloon at a steady height."

The cows and horses in the fields below scattered to the far corners of the pastures as we glided over four miles of patchwork fields and mist-covered lakes. Stone checked the altitude controls.

"You can't control the direction, only the altitude," he said. "Notice that you don't feel a breeze? That's cause you travel the same speed as the wind."

"I finally relaxed and I clenched the rim of the basket. I gazed at the tree-tops, the sunrise—and the mammoth red balloon above."

"Don't worry," Stone laughed. "Even if a bird punctured a hole in it, it wouldn't collapse."

He pulled a rope and gigantic split in the balloon opened to let some of the hot air out. "We're going to start coming down," he said. "Whatever you do, just hang on when we land, or else the balloon will start up again. Now stand up and trade seats with me so I can get a better look at a landing place."

He spotted a good-sized clearing bordering a country road.

About 30 feet from the ground, he yelled:

"Hang on—it's going to be a rough landing! We're coming down quick!"

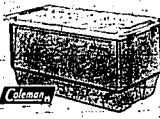

The basket hit the ground and bounced three times before tipping over. Stone, braced in the basket, was sliding on his stomach—in the knee-high grass, swiftly pulling a rope to collapse the top hatch of the balloon. The toppled rig skidded through the wet field, for about 20 yards before stopping.

"Breathless, Stone crawled out of the basket and over the pile of putty red nylon.

Airline gripes computed

By MICHAEL F. CONLAN
Cincinnati News Services
WASHINGTON — Although complaints about the nation's airlines declined in May from the previous month, they are running far ahead of last year's pace.

According to the Civil Aeronautics Board, it received 1,371 letters from "upset travelers" in May, compared with 1,477 in April — a drop of about 20 per cent. Passengers were complaining less about flight delays, cancellations and irregularities, as well as lost, delayed and damaged baggage.

But the CAB statistics show consumer gripes for the first five months of 1974 arriving at a rate 20 per cent above the same period of 1973. Overall, the number of complaints received in May was 7,945, compared with 6,664 last year.

Included in the May figures were 44 letters complaining about Continental Airlines' advertising campaign and 22 about National Airlines. Both companies have been accused by women's and stewardesses' groups of sexist advertising.

Excluding these letters, Continental would have had only 30 complaints or 1.76 reports per 100,000 passengers carried. National's reports would have been reduced to 51 or a rate of 3.43.

The rates of complaints against the major airlines for May from lowest to highest were: Western, 2.27; Delta, 2.78; United, 2.85; Northwest, 2.96; Braniff, 4.58; Eastern, 4.87; Trans World, 5.24; American, 6.88; Air West, 8.56; Pan American, 8.28; Allegheny, 9.44; Continental, 9.59 and National 10.69.

What's What

It's neither the liquor nor the coffee that kicks up your liver, sir. At least such is the claim now of medical researchers—who most recently looked into this matter. It's the cigarettes, they say. A checkup both of teetotalers and imbibers as well as coffee drinkers and non-coffee people indicates no significant differences in the incidence of ulcers, if these they smoke. In those cases, the rate of midsection malfunction jumps considerably.

BASEBALL

Q. "Say the baseball catcher takes the pitched ball, then whips it down to second base. That means the ball travels just about 187 feet. It's handled in the process by the pitcher, the catcher and the second baseman. How long does this all take?"

A. Less than three seconds.

IS THERE any vegetable besides the Chinese water chestnut that retains its texture after being frozen, after being cooked?

TEA

Tea used to be brewed right at the table. And it was kept there in a little box of pewter or silver or fancy wood. In Malayan, the name for that box was "kati." But the English don't you know, pronounced it "caddy." And our tablemate man says that's why we now so identify such tabletop receptacles for wine, fruits and condiments, too.

DON'T KNOW how much energy is packaged in one so-called standard atomic bomb. But that's how much energy 700 acres of grass pulls out of the sunshine in one day. Or so a grass lover reports. It's the most stepped upon organism on earth, says this authority. And it's approximately 10,000 times more useful in flood control than all the dams in the world.

Cattle, hog price decline eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The economic pit in which cattle and hog farmers are wallowing these days has been deepened by the fact that they turned up with a big increase in production at a time when consumers are pinching pennies at the supermarket, a meat industry official says.

Elis Paul, president of John Morell & Co., a major meat packing firm in Chicago, said the problem of low cattle and hog prices this year can be simply stated: "We have had greatly increased supplies from our producers at a time when consumer purchasing power has been weakened by a significant national recession. Add to this the fact that meat is the residual claimant on the consumer's pocketbook."

After rent, installment payments, gasoline and staples — and we should be grateful that meat sales have been good as they have been," Paul said.

Tony Dechant, president of the National Farmers Union, agreed in a statement last week that the current heavy supply of meat is not the only ingredient in the current farm problem. He said a "particularly serious" factor is the "pressure against food consumption caused by rising prices for other goods and services."

Other analysts trying to find out what has happened to consumer demand in the meat market are producing conflicting views. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, for example, said last week that housewives had "backed off somewhat" in beef purchases because of high prices early this year. But he predicted demand would revive and beef consumption would be "American consumer's basic desire for beef has declined."

George Hoffman, an economist, agreed in an interview that meat demand currently should be called "strong" in comparative terms. But, he conceded, there has been a "little slack" in the consumer's willingness to buy beef during the last few months.

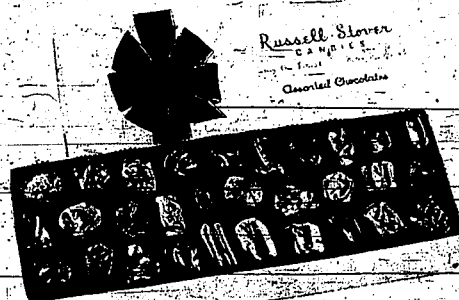

The strength of the consumer's eagerness for beef goes up and down with consumer income trends, Hoffman said.

SOUNDS CRAZY. DOESN'T IT?

How to get twice as much heat as you put in

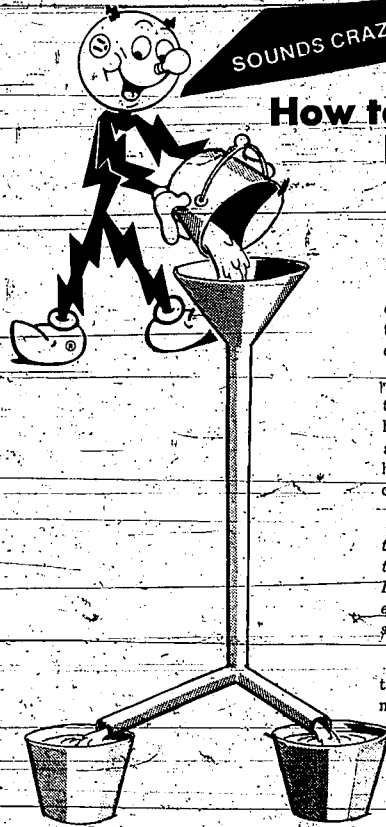

IT REALLY WORKS WITH AN ELECTRIC HEAT PUMP

Talk about saving energy! The technical explanation is rather complicated, but it's true that efficiencies of 200 percent are not unusual in our area for the electric heat pump.

That's because the heat pump, working on the same principle as your refrigerator, pumps heat from outside air—even when temperatures are below freezing—and uses it to warm your home. In the summer, the process is reversed for cooling. Sounds crazy all right, but it works.

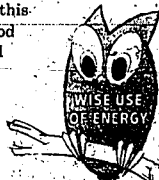

The result is not only energy saving, but the right kind of energy saving! In our area electricity comes almost entirely from hydro power. Later some of it will come from coal. Both of these energy sources conform to national goals to save scarce petroleum based products.

With every heat pump installation, insulation should be brought up to Idaho Power's recommended energy saving standards. There are now several reliable heat pumps on the market. To learn whether this exceptionally efficient method of heating and cooling would serve your needs, call your local Idaho Power Company office.

Bill encourages youths in farming

WASHINGTON — Rep. William A. Steiger, R-Wis., has introduced a bill he hopes will encourage rural youth to make farming their career.

Steiger said, "We often see able young people emerge from high school and college with a burning desire to farm, yet the financial burdens they encounter cause them to give up those hopes and move reluctantly to jobs in the city."

The Steiger bill provides young farmers several loan incentives not incorporated in present Farmers Home Administration provisions. Steiger said his bill would also prevent granting of the loans to persons with no practical farming experience.

Under the "New Homestead Act of 1974," a young farmer could borrow 90 per cent of the purchase price at a six per cent interest rate. The loan would be financed over a 40-year period. During the first 15 years, the borrower would pay only one-half the regular annual portion, after which the loan would be refinanced for the final 25 years.

The present limits on Farmers Home Administration participation in any one loan is $100,000, with a maximum purchase price of $225,000. The New Homestead Act would allow a young farmer to borrow up to 90 per cent of the $225,000 purchase, or $202,500.

Sugar Act deadline set

WASHINGTON — The Senate must act on the House-debated Sugar Act before July 10 or a House reconsideration of the measure would not be possible until spring.

This warning was issued in a letter to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., from House Agriculture Committee Chairman W. J. Porge, D-Tx. Porge said that the vote against an extension of the Sugar Act showed that the House doesn't want a sugar bill. He continued that although he thinks the absence of a new sugar program will mean higher U.S. sugar prices, it would do no good to ask the House now to reconsider the bill.

If a sugar program does prove needed, Porge said, the House Committee will reintroduce legislation this Spring.

But what he wanted to make clear to Long this week, he said, was that if any Senate move is to be made on sugar legislation, it must be made soon: He has set July 10 as the date after which the House committee will hear no more new legislation.

The Senate has taken no action on extending the Sugar Act and Long's position thus far has to keep quiet on the issue.

LONDON — Trade sources are suggesting that the Soviet Union may buy as much as 15,000 tons of poultrymeat from the European Economic Community (EEC).

Dutch exporters are continuing to maintain their contacts with the USSR according to trade journal Agra Europe. The main stumbling block to export sales is uncertainty over export refunds, although traders are optimistic that these will be overcome.

Sugar cane growers lament death of Sugar Act

(C) New York Times Service
BOUY LAFOURCHE, L. A. — Louis leaned against a cane and peered through the open window, squinting against the sun.

He and the boss inquired about each other's health, wives and children. They disposed of the weather and Louis's vegetable garden. (They disposed of the weather and Louis's vegetable garden.)

"How the crops?" Louis asked. His Cajun voice dropping an octaver.

"They're coming along good," the boss said. His own voice, touched with a hundred years of planter culture and good sense, dropped lower to match Louis's. He brushed a hand toward the flat land and the vast, hot sky and said, "What we don't need is a hurricane."

They laughed. In Gallic south Louisiana, people expect God's will to be unpredictable, especially during the tropical storm season. If a hurricane comes, it comes. If it does not, 'est bon; the sugar cane may survive another year.

The people of the Bayou know how to deal with hurricanes, rains, droughts and even the boring insect that eats the tender sweet stalks. What they have trouble understanding is the government in Washington.

no one here-in-the-heart-of-the Louisiana sugar cane country. Both planters and workers are unhappy.

The farmers will lose the government subsidies the law provides. That will be a small problem for the larger farmers, but for some of the smaller farmers the loss could be serious.

Recent studies have found that 80 to 100 marginal sugar cane farmers go out of business each year in Louisiana, leaving their land in most cases to the larger farmers. Loss of the subsidy is expected to accelerate that trend.

Without the Sugar Act, the field workers who plant and harvest the cane will lose the federal protection of their wages. The Sugar Act requires the Agriculture Department to set a minimum wage for cane field workers each year.

Many people have long considered those government set wages to be too low. But the Sugar Act at least provides a minimum for the unorganized workers. Some planters pay more than the minimum.

The current minimums set by the Agriculture Department are $1.90 to $2.10 an hour, depending on the type of work. The southern mutual help association, which was organized to help cane workers with housing, education and health, has asked the department to raise the minimum to $4 this fall.

Loss of wage protection could drive more workers out of sugar cane plantations. The mutual help association says a recent survey by some college students found that less work is available each year for sugar cane workers. While the average field worker worked 1,700 hours in 1971, he worked only 1,500 hours in 1973, the survey found.

The Agriculture Department said 16,500 persons worked in the fields in 1973. The association estimates that only 14,000 to 15,000 are working this year because of continued mechanization.

Unlike other farmers, sugar planters can't switch crops quickly to take advantage of price surges in other commodities. Cane is planted in September and produces its first harvest more than a year later, the following October to December.

The planters also have problems. Natural gas to run the sugar mills is running short and the price has gone up. The price of fertilizer has doubled in a year. The price of diesel fuel for tractors and harvesting equipment has gone up sharply. Petroleum and chemical industries continue to buy Mississippi River plantations, with some of the best sugar cane land in the state, to get access to river transportation and water.

Unlike other farmers, sugar planters can't switch crops quickly to take advantage of price surges in other commodities. Cane is planted in September and produces its first harvest more than a year later, the following October to December.

Cattle feeders' plight described in Kansas case

By DOUGLASE KNEELAND (New York Times Service) — Kan. — Gary Baalman has no real quarrel with the American housewife. If she thinks beef prices are too high in the supermarket, he more or less agrees with her — at least in view of the price live cattle are bringing. But if she feels she has trouble with beef, she should know his problems. Gary Baalman is a cattle feeder. Since January, his carefully kept records show him, he has lost $634,470.09 on the 5,235 cattle he has sold. That is about $123 a head, and the year is only half over. He still has 3,900 head on feed.

Baalman is not alone. The whole industry, ranging from small operators who have a few hundred head to the giant Monfort of Colorado, Inc., which feeds about 250,000, is in similar difficulty. About 12.5 million of the nation's roughly 116 million beef cattle are in feed lots. And, according to the American National Cattleman's Association, about $2 billion since the bottom fell out of the market last October.

Fertilizer price boosts predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farmers can expect a new round of increases in fertilizer prices according to the Agriculture Department. The price of fertilizer is an important factor in the retail cost of food. Officials said in a report that fertilizer industry commitments to the Cost of Living Council to hold the line on prices during the first half of this year will expire on June 30. "Some companies have already announced price increases ranging from 40 to 75 percent to become effective on July 1. We anticipate that other manufacturers will follow with additional price increase announcements," the department said in a report. It added that fertilizer supplies are still short in many parts of the country and baling wire and twine supplies are hard to get in more than 30 states. But it said gasoline and diesel fuel supplies are adequate in about 97 percent of all agricultural counties. Tight supplies were reported only in a few areas in the Midwest and in parts of the South.

Beef imports halted

BRUSSELS — The European Common Market, worried by growing beef surpluses, has suspended all imports of fresh, chilled or live beef from other European nations, a market spokesman said this week. The spokesman said the ban would last at least until July 12. Beef stocks in the nine Common Market nations — particularly France and West Germany — stand now at 109,000 tons — and prices have begun to fall. The spokesman blamed much of this on imports from other European nations, mainly from Eastern Europe. Beef exports to Italy particularly have risen, he said, and have cut into beef exports to Italy from the other Common Market nations.

Farm census planned

WASHINGTON — Farmers and ranchers, get ready for the 1974 Census of Agriculture! Keep good records of your farming operations this year. This is the request of the Bureau of the Census, the federal agency that will conduct the 20th nationwide Census of Agriculture during the first part of 1975. The Bureau is part of the U.S. Department of Commerce's Social and Economic Statistics Administration. Farmers will receive their report forms by mail early in January. They should fill them out and mail them back promptly. Having accurate and detailed records will make it easy for farmers to do this. Questions will be much like those in the last previous agriculture census which covered farming and ranching in 1969.

Questions will ask for acreage of cropland harvested; quantity and market value of major crops produced; acre irrigated and means of irrigation; acreage treated with pesticides; lime and other chemicals; acreage fertilized by kind of fertilizer (dry, liquid, gas); Questions on livestock and poultry will cover the number of each kind on the farm as well as the number sold and their sales value. Questions on the sales value of their products will be sought. Details will be requested about farm products produced marketed under contract. A questionnaire will be included about hired and contract labor, number of workers and wages paid; also about any injuries to workers. Further expenditures Questions will cover amounts spent for feed; fertilizer; pesticides; lime, gasoline and other farm fuels, machine-hire, livestock and poultry purchases.

The high price of grain, stimulated by large export sales and the rising cost of labor, machinery and other essentials have amply made it next to impossible for the feeder to realize a profit on the $3 to $9 a hundredweight his cattle now sell for. "We're just one, we're just a little one," said Baalman, whose average loss per head are about $2 under those claimed by the industry as a whole. "If it's going to keep going this way, I want out. I can't stand any more of that. But the way out is to get more of it — in cattle I've got in there now." Actually, Baalman, 37, has not lost all the money just for himself. He is in partnership with his brothers, Howard, 39, and Keith, 31. Among them, they run a sizable diversified farming operation 11 miles south of this western Kansas hamlet. It includes 2,800 acres of irrigated corn, 200 of alfalfa and about 1,000 acres of wheat.

But since last summer, with the death of his 41-year-old brother Charles, who had held the job, and the retirement of his 65-year-old father, E. A. Baalman, who started the farm back in 1929, Gary Baalman has managed the feed lot. He lives, not far from the dusty cattle pens, with his wife, a son and a daughter, 13, in the trim white house shaded by Chinese elms and pines where he was born. Gary Baalman has always liked his life, but now he is really worried. And sitting in his slightly air-conditioned office between the house and the feed lot the other day, while this year's air raised the temperature outside to 108 degrees, he kept trying to put his finger on what has gone wrong. "My dad's fed cattle as long as I can remember," he mused. "It used to be 100 to 200 head during the winter. Then in 1957 we built out first permanent pens. Our charges Dad's kept us here and kept us busy all our lives. That's the reason it is what it is, because we just stayed here and worked at it. I guess he knew what it was. It's been a good life, Hell's fire."

In 1957, the Baalmans fed about 450 head of cattle and they have been expanding ever since — that is, until this year, when, like a lot of other feeders, they have been cutting back on replacement cattle. "We've lost more than about 3,900 head of our own," he explained. "We do have four pets of neighbor's cattle. They didn't want to take the price for feeders, so we've feeding them. For our equipment and the manpower we have, we should have between 5,000 and 6,000 head." In the past, when the operation had grown to about 10,000 head a year, he said, profits averaged $20 to $30 a head, for a total of $120,000 or more. "We've lost more this year on cattle than we've probably made in the last 15," he went on. "When you are making a little money on feeder cattle, you weren't making as much. I really believe it's wiped out all our cattle profits for 15 years."

Land use planning urged

SPOKANE — Land use planning is rapidly becoming a necessity to prevent further encroachment of agricultural land, Lane Palmer, editor of the nation's largest farm magazine, told a group of farm leaders in Spokane this month. "With so many city people moving out into the countryside with its ideal environment, farmers and ranchers have urgent reasons to plan for protection which planning and zoning can afford," emphasized the Farm Journal. "To have your land zoned for agriculture use is your surest defense against nuisance suits over livestock and machinery noise."

Speaking in an address prepared for managers and directors of Production Credit Associations of the Northwest, Palmer noted that currently more than 12 state legislatures have taken the initiative to adopt some form of land use laws. Many states found it necessary to take such action to hold down excessive property taxes for the farmer, who many time finds both the speculator or countywide developer buying up adjacent lands for developmental purposes. In most of these states, land zoned for agricultural use is taxed at its value for farming rather than the current market prices in the area for most real estate," Palmer said.

There will be questions about the various types and uses of land, such as cropland not irrigated, other pasture and woodland, and about the value of land and buildings on the farm. Operators will be asked about farm related income such as recreational services, customwork provided other farmers, or payments for participation in Government farm programs. Two types of report forms are being prepared; one for farms with sales of $250 or more, and another less detailed form for places with sales of less than $250. Either which form a farmer chooses, he need answer only those questions that apply to his operation. He should skip questions that apply only to other types of agricultural operations.
