

Hoover fear put FBI data in White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high FBI official handed an assistant attorney general secret wiretap records in July, 1971, for fear J. Edgar Hoover might use them to blackmail President Nixon as he had "used wiretap information to blackmail other Presidents."

The story came to light today in five volumes of evidence published by the House Judiciary Committee before it begins debate next week on whether Nixon's conduct in office warrants impeachment.

The new evidence traces how political spying developed in the White House — using the same personnel and techniques — from elaborate machinery set up to combat news leaks of sensitive national security matters.

So deep was Nixon's concern with the leaks, a newly published tape transcript shows, that at one time he considered ordering his detector tests for 400,000 government workers who had "top secret" clearance.

But the big surprise in the 2,314 pages of evidence came in a sworn statement given FBI agents on May 10, 1973, by Robert Mardian, the former assistant attorney general and once a high official in the Nixon re-election campaign. Mardian has been indicted in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy.

Mardian told how William Sullivan, Hoover's deputy at the FBI, came to him in late 1971 and said he feared he was going to be fired because of policy differences with Hoover.

Sullivan said he wanted to give Mardian wiretaps ordered by Henry A. Kissinger after news had leaked out about the U.S. fallback position in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT).

"He said this was wiretap information and that, in his opinion, Mr. Hoover could not be entrusted with this information," the FBI report said. Mardian first expressed reluctance to talk about the incident, it noted.

"Mr. Sullivan continued the conversation, saying that Mr. Hoover had used wiretap information to blackmail other presidents of the United States and was afraid that he could blackmail Mr. Nixon with this information."

"Mr. Sullivan reiterated his request of Mr. Mardian to personally contact the President of the United States and to pass along Mr. Sullivan's information and request."

There was no elaboration from Mardian in the statement about Sullivan's view that Hoover had blackmailed presidents. But Hoover, who had held the FBI directorship since the 1930s, had long been regarded before his death as patently one of the most powerful men in Washington because of his access to all the FBI secrets.

In the statement, Mardian told the FBI he subsequently learned "that this wiretap was ordered by Dr. Henry Kissinger on behalf of the President."

Mardian went to John N. Mitchell, then a close associate, and short time later was ordered to take the White House shuttle plane to San Clemente, Calif.

The next morning, he said, Nixon ordered him to take the wiretap data from Sullivan — and then make sure that it matched information already in the White House.

The FBI said Mardian said Kissinger had checked the FBI records against the White House's and satisfied themselves that Dr. Kissinger's material matched with the cover sheet which Mr. Mardian was using.

Mardian was asked if he gave the bag containing the wiretap data to Nixon. He said he said "I brought it through his shoulders, nestled and said, 'I cannot answer that question,'" the report said.

The FBI taps were only one group of five separate wiretap incidents detailed in the Judiciary Committee evidence. One of them was the wiretap planted Memorial Day weekend, 1972, at Democratic headquarters at the Watergate office building and another, lasting from May, 1969 to Feb. 10, 1971, involving 17 government officials and reporters — and led to allegations that Kissinger had lied during his confirmation hearings.

Presidential attorney James D. St. Clair justified the decision to "wiretap" without obtaining warrants in the grounds the Supreme Court had "stated that the legality of foreign-policy, warrantless wiretaps was an open question" — allowing the government to rely on lower court decisions upholding such wiretaps as legal.

The Judiciary report on evidence brought 10,714 the number of volumes published by the panel, with more to come later this week.

High points in the new release:

- Nixon frequently played a central role in White House efforts to halt news leaks, which reached what the President felt were alarming proportions in mid-1971 when Daniel Ellsberg gave the "Pentagon Papers" to several newspapers.
- Presidential chief of staff H.R. Haldeman ordered FBI surveillance of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., in 1971; and domestic adviser John D. Ehrlichman ordered a rapid investigation of Kennedy's involvement in the Chappaquiddick incident immediately following the accident. The survey, however, never was carried out, but Anthony Licavone, a former policeman who spied for the Nixon campaign, spent several days at Chappaquiddick.
- The day after CBS newsmen Daniel Schorr was invited to the White House to hear complaints about an unfavorable television report, the FBI launched a full-scale investigation of him.
- There was evidence high White House officials ordered E. Howard Hunt to fabricate cables to make it look as though the late President John F. Kennedy, or one of the assassinations of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963. St. Clair said in his response, however, that Hunt's official White House assignment was to see if the Pentagon Papers were an accurate representation of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War.

A previously unpublished transcript from July 24, 1971 showed the depth of Nixon's ire over the leak about the U.S. negotiating position in the arms talks.

"Now, God damn it, we're not going to allow it," Nixon said on the tapes. "We just aren't going to allow it."

Nixon asks how many government employees have clearances granting them access to top secret papers. When told the number could be 400,000, he is implused. "I want all of them who have top secret clearances," he says. "I want to see we can get them to agree to take a polygraph test."

Dean "disproved"

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential lawyer James D. St. Clair, summing up President Nixon's impeachment defense, gave the House Judiciary Committee a new transcript today which he said would watergate testimony by John W. Dean, Nixon's former counsel.

St. Clair told reporters at the conclusion of his 90-minute summation for a closed committee session that the transcript proved Nixon was not aware of and did not approve payment of hush money to Dean to keep him quiet.

Although the committee had subpoenaed the tape of the conversation on which the transcript was based, Nixon withheld it on the ground it was irrelevant.

However, St. Clair said, it became relevant because Dean "changed his testimony" about events of March 23, 1973, when he discussed Hunt's demands with Nixon. That night, Hunt was paid $75,000.

The new 2½ page transcript was of a conversation between Nixon and H.R. Haldeman on the following morning in which St. Clair said, Nixon made clear his disapproval of paying blackmail.

questionable goings-on in the campaign finances of the ultimate winner of the Democratic nomination, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

While the committee report on the financial aspects of the Humphrey and Mills campaigns was less than complete, partly because neither Humphrey nor Mills would consent to testify before the committee, it revealed several instances of deceptive shuffling of money, particularly contributions from the big milk producers.

Humphrey, whose pre-convention campaign received at least three illegal contributions from corporate funds, and Mills, whose abortive campaign was heavily transfused with funds from corporate sources within the milk industry, both contended in letters to Senate Committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., that they were unaware of any irregularities. Ervin's argument, belted down, was not far different from that of Nixon, who spelled out his views of campaign financing in lengthy white papers earlier this year.

Legal tangles threaten Valley agency

By CHARLOTTE BELL
Times-News writer

JEROME — Legal angles threatened the existence of the new Magic Valley Association of Governments (MVAG) at its first meeting here Wednesday.

During deliberations for chairman of the planning group, Paul Kelly, Murtough, former executive director of the South Idaho Resource Planning and Development Association (SIRPA), questioned whether the new association is legal since it currently does not represent 75 per cent of the Magic Valley population.

Dell Taylor, Gooding, executive director of MVAG, said some of the cities and counties taken in by the new group have not signed a resolution creating the MVAG and authorizing payment of per capita assessments.

The MVAG represents a merger of SIRPA and the Wood River Resource Area Council of Governments (WRRACOG). The union became official July 1.

The new planning group includes representatives from Twin Falls, Cassia, Minidoka, Jerome, Blaine, Gooding, Camas and Lincoln counties.

On the representation problem, Taylor said "Jerome" and "Lincoln" and "Cassia" and "Columbia" have not returned the necessary resolution. He said several communities in other counties have also failed to turn in the resolution.

Kelly said that, without Twin Falls, the council does not represent 75 per cent of the population in the eight counties and is not legal. Any action taken by the council should be temporary until all of the resolutions are in or the non-participating units are dropped, he said.

A special coordinating committee comprised of WRRACOG Director Don Fredericksen, SIRPA Chairman Garnet Kidd and a county commissioner from each of the eight counties drew up articles of incorporation and bylaws for the new council prior to a resolution of adoption which has been submitted to each community in the eight counties.

A 10 cent per capita fee is being charged to all eight counties participating in the program. No action could be taken Wednesday night on adoption of the articles of incorporation and bylaws since the council has not received sufficient signed resolutions.

Marshall Everhart, Jerome councilman, said the city of Jerome has not signed the resolution because it amounts to double taxation of city residents.

According to the articles of incorporation, the City of Jerome and Jerome County are to be charged on a per capita basis. Apparently someone feels the residents of the City of Jerome are not residents of Jerome County. The city people say the same taxes as the county people, so a per capita charge for the city will be double taxation," Everhart said.

Cyprus war jitters continue high

By United Press International

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit said today after talks with U.S. and British leaders in London that the situation in the western Mediterranean is "very grave" and that Greece is sending military forces into Cyprus by land and by sea.

Turkey has massed up to 90,000 troops on its southern coast 30 miles from Cyprus and landing craft and warships are standing offshore. The Turkish House and Senate met in closed session in Ankara to consider giving Ecevit a mandate to invade Cyprus.

President Nixon's envoy, Joseph Sisco, joined British leaders in a formal and concerted effort to dissuade Turkey from invading the island, a move that could plunge NATO allies Greece and Turkey into war. Both nations have alerted their troops and Turkey has sent reinforcements to its border with Greece.

Ecevit said after his two-and-a-half hour conference with Sisco. "The situation is very grave." He told newsmen, "The time element is very important because hour by hour the Greek military presence in Cyprus is increasing and consolidating the illegal regime there."

He said he has received reports that Greek military forces are arriving in the island by air and sea.

Sisco, the undersecretary of state for Middle Eastern Affairs, arrived earlier today with instructions from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to help cool the increasingly dangerous situation over Cyprus where the Greek-led Cypriot National Guard overthrew President Archbishop Makarios Monday in a military coup.

Sisco scheduled another meeting with Ecevit and Deputy Prime Minister Iscan later today after conferring with Foreign Secretary James Callaghan at the Foreign Office. Callaghan had met late in the night with the Turkish leaders and British diplomatic sources said they were unable to come to any agreement in the heated argument.

The Greek government, despite repeated and intensifying pressure has so far not responded at all to allied Soviet demands that it pull out its 60 officers commanding the Cypriot National Guard and who were said to have staged the coup.

Demo campaign finance irregularities turned up

(c) Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — In the area of campaign financing, at least, the Senate Watergate Committee has turned up evidence to bolster President Nixon's "everybody does it" defense of his own 1972 activities.

The committee, in its first draft report, contended that some "irregularities" in the 1972 Democratic Presidential practices of H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Willard D. Mills of Arkansas. The panel also found some questionable goings-on in the campaign finances of the ultimate winner of the Democratic nomination, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

While the committee report on the financial aspects of the Humphrey and Mills campaigns was less than complete, partly because neither Humphrey nor Mills would consent to testify before the committee, it revealed several instances of deceptive shuffling of money, particularly contributions from the big milk producers.

Nixon has come under heavy criticism for allowing his campaign finance committee to accept a promise of up to $2 million in contributions from the milk producers at the same time he was considering the milk industry's request for increased federal subsidies for milk.

Nixon has defended his March 1972, 1973 support of decisions as "virtually proper," even though he has admitted knowing that the price of the producers' promise of a huge campaign contribution.

Park blaze still burns

YELLOWSTONE PARK Wyo. LUPA park official said fire fighters hope to contain a 500 acre forest fire in northwest Yellowstone today with a trench dug completely around it.

"It looks pretty good," said Vern Heaness, assistant park superintendent. "We hope to have a line completely around it Thursday."

Heaness said weather cooperated with the 500 fire fighters Wednesday for the first time since the blaze started Sunday, apparently because of lightning.

"It stayed pretty calm all afternoon," he said.

The fire was contained to about 100 acres when firefighters first reached the scene Sunday, but winds, came up Monday and spread it rapidly. Warm temperatures and dryness also helped the fire.

Deadly buckshot

Twin Falls Prosecuting Attorney William Galley made one of his more remarkable blunders Tuesday night when he condoned shooting buckshot at people attending Evel Knievel's jump.

Galley was questioned by a resident who lives near the Snake River Canyon jump site about use of buckshot against trespassers.

Galley replied that force could be used against trespassers, but only necessary force. He said such action becomes illegal "only if you use more force than necessary."

If only Galley had stopped there. Instead he added, "And buckshot doesn't seem to be too bad from what I understand of it."

Fortunately attorney For Nelson was at the meeting to clarify matters. Nelson pointed out use of buckshot could be "deadly force" and illegal.

Presumably the problem comes not from Galley's understanding of the law but from his understanding of buckshot. As he told Nelson, "I assumed that (buckshot) ..."

Buckshot ranges in size up to .33 caliber, about the size of a large pea. It is used by police officers when they may have to kill people of close range.

Short of dynamite, it is the deadliest force around these parts.

Nobody should use buckshot on trespassers, unless he plans to kill somebody, Galley notwithstanding.

State should defend

There is something deeply disturbing about the state's half-way support of its own employees accused in the death of a boy on a desert survival outing.

The Idaho Attorney General's office issued an opinion Wednesday which said the state would pay lawyer's fees for the accused — but only if they are acquitted.

The seven Idaho Health and Welfare employees are charged with involuntary manslaughter for the death of 11-year-old Jeff Hodgson of Pocatello.

Without presuming to judge the case against the accused, we can comment on the propriety of the state's action.

It is probable that the difficulties encountered on the desert trek resulted "as much from program deficiencies as from individual wrongdoing."

From all accounts the program was ill-conceived, and suffered from lack of planning, poor organization and abysmal execution.

The accusing finger must point at the poorly run state program as much as at the presumably well-meaning people who took part in it.

For this reason it is disgraceful that the state has decided to pay out its employees from use of state funds to pay for private defense counsel.

Moreover, the attorney general's office attacked a number of additional qualifications on state payment of legal aid for the accused.

Among these are required findings that the acts involved were performed within the scope of employment of the persons and required as part of their normal duties, that there was no evil intent.

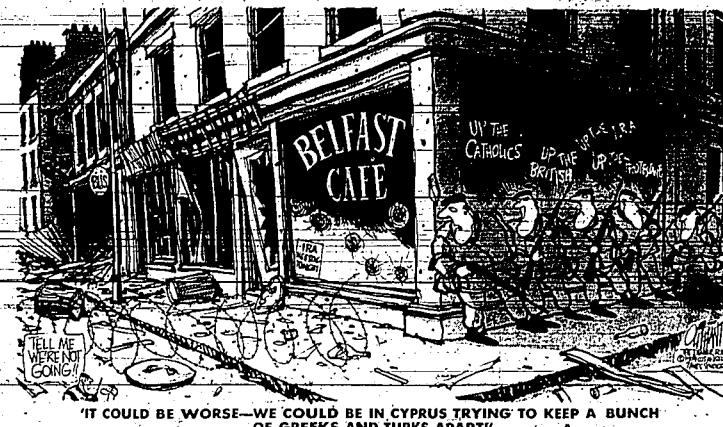

That is a nearly unbelievable list. Take one item alone: the requirement that the program have a valid public purpose.

In this case, the attorney general's office is linking defense of individual state employees with a finding that the programs on which they were employed were valid.

It seems beyond belief that an employee should be held responsible for determining whether or not his job is in pursuit of a valid public purpose.

I wish I could travel all over the world spending tax-payers' money, makin' MYSELF look good!

IT COULD BE WORSE—WE COULD BE IN CYPRUS TRYING TO KEEP A BUNCH OF GREEKS AND TURKS APART!

Meany accepts Henry's debate idea

WASHINGTON — AFL-CIO President George Meany has taken to heart Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's suggestion that a national debate on American policy with the Soviets be held.

The policy says Meany "should not be carried one step further" without the debate.

And with that statement, Meany weighed in with a scathing attack upon Soviet-American relations in a National Press Club speech Tuesday, in which he assailed policies of the Nixon administration.

"Before they arrange a debate with the Soviet Union, they ought to arrange a debate with the American people," Meany said of President Nixon and his advisers in foreign and economic policy.

He charged that they "don't think foreign policy is any of labor's damn business, to put it bluntly. They consider it to be a province of elite, high society."

But when the administration subsidizes "a wheat deal to Russia and submits to 'oil blackmail,'" he said, the costs come "out of our pockets."

Meany labeled the president's summit talks with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev "Yalta 1974" and branded it "another Yalta talk."

He recalled that the original Yalta conference in 1945, involving President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Britain's Winston Churchill and Russia's Josef Stalin, was surveyed by a "young politician" and a "young socialist."

The labor leader said he preferred Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled author, and Andrei Sakharov, the harassed physicist and the Soviet Jew "risking their lives" to dictators of the Kremlin system.

He said the Russians were "great, poker players — better than Henry and Dick." He said that it was "disgraceful" to oppose dictators.

Meany even violated his impartiality toward Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash., who recently called for closer relations with Communist China. "I don't agree with Scoop on China policy," Meany said.

On the economy, Meany scoffed at Chairman Herbert Stein of the President's council of economic advisers. "Henry said a 52 per cent unemployment rate was one of the most gratifying things this year. We're supposed to be grateful things aren't worse!" he said.

The economy "ought to be better," if Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, got his cottonpicking hands off of it, Meany said, adding that with his claws tight, money and restrictive credit, Burns had "a one-track mind."

WASHINGTON — Sen. William Fulbright, "that great champion of 'social justice' and equality" from Arkansas, said he was pursuing a cold war policy and was unrepresentative of the people.

Noting that the Russians "pulled the plug" on U.S. radio and television news from Moscow during the president's stay there, Meany said Fulbright "raised his voice to a whisper and said 'They made a foolish mistake: they hurt their own country.'"

WASHINGTON — A play by business men hungry for profits from U.S.-Soviet trade, to use President Nixon's words, is being called the Jackson Amendment is being followed by the realities of American politics.

Defeat of Sen. Henry M. Jackson's amendment — thinking Soviet trade "concessions" to countries by Russian Jews is the underlying purpose of the business men joining liberal soft-liners in the new American Council on United States-Soviet Relations. In the case of saving détente, it was thought the committee might induce Jackson's potential identity rivals, Sen. Edward Brooke and Walter Mondale, to abandon the Jackson Amendment.

But Kennedy and Mondale aren't buying. Indeed, one charter member of the committee is quitting over the Jackson Amendment. The conclusion of the Jackson Amendment's political force exerted by the American Jewish community can suffocate the strange bedfellows in the pro-détente lobby.

The committee is being thought of by Prof. Fred Moten, Neal of Georgetown College, as a "neo-conservative" and "neo-revisionist."

Neal collected manuscripts of the National Peace Movement for his committee. Prof. John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard, MIT President Joseph P. Kamp, Los Angeles industrialist

Harold Wilens, former Sen. Eugene McCarthy — But other members made the committee leaky. A collection of strange bedfellows, Washington attorney Charles W. Rhyne — an old friend of President Nixon, Thomas Watson, Jr., of IBM contributed $25,000 to Nixon's reelection.

The most important business man on the committee is David M. Keene, chairman of PepsiCo, Inc. — longtime Nixon intimate, front man and spear carrier. As chairman of Americans for the Presidency, and his fighting Independent Movement, he represents those who are not in the Nixon administration but are allied by the sword of profits. ... On April 10, Keene signed a contract to sell Pepsi-Cola to the Soviet Union and market Russian vodka in the U.S. Accordingly, a pecuniary interest is added to Keene's political interest in the Jackson Amendment.

And of course there is intrigue. There is necessarily more intrigue in a secret organization than in a non-secret organization. A fine writer recently wrote a huge book about intrigues within the New York Times, which publishes a daily variety show of intrigues available for a few pennies. The CIA publishes nothing about itself, and this necessarily inflames the intrigues.

Some of the intrigues in 1967, were having thought about Soviet intentions about Soviet ballistic capabilities, and about the Chinese role in Vietnam, which appeared in certain of Richard Nixon's advisers as highly ideological. That is to say some of the people in the CIA, and some of the people in the Pentagon, were being guided by his objective standards. ... So it was suspected — that by a search for evidence that harmonized with their pre-suppositions, that were ideological in character.

What we do not know for sure — and here is the most interesting question of all — is whether the progressives were subdued — Or whether they subdued Richard Nixon. There is more evidence to the latter effect than to the former.

But let me warn you here and now — one of these days you may wake up to find that the Russians are coming.

WASHINGTON — George Murphy called a press conference the other day, but almost nobody came.

This was a pity, because the former California senator is a 3,600 man, and he was engaged in mounting a worthy venture.

The old honker's purpose was to announce the formation of "American Cause." Though the word "Cause" is so directly American Cause obviously is intended to function as a conservative counterforce to the Liberal Communist Cause.

Under the leadership of John Gardner, Common Cause has become one of the best heeled and most effective lobbies in town. There was a time when Americans for Democratic Action served as a front-runner for liberal propositions. Now, Common Cause is hustling from here to California on everything from consumer protection to the federal financing of elections.

If I voice admiration, I voice envy also. Respectable American conservatism could use 330,000 contributors piling in $6 million a year. Our side has nothing like that.

If you listen for the voice of American conservatism, you will hear the urbane accents of National Review and the homespun strictures of Human Events. You will hear a few columnists and a few newsmen; many the main street Journal, but in terms of organizational voice, you will hear little.

Harry Goldwater's fledgling Free Society Association craves a before the very eyes of Americans for Constitutional Action is inactive. The American Conservative Union has done some first-rate things — its attack on the President's Family Assistance Plan was a masterful job — but ACU has become so identified with Ronald Reagan that it lacks a broad base. Out on the extreme ends of right field are Liberty Lobby and the John Birch Society; whose suicidal practice is to drown their sensible positions in great baths of hogwash. That's about as good as they can do.

Will Murphy's American Cause get off the ground? It hurts to say this, but I doubt it. Conservatives are a funny breed. Politically and ideologically, they are loners. They tend to see one issue at a time — gun control, right to life, fluoridation, busing, abortion, nuclear limitation, pornography. Thus blinkered, they cannot be distracted by issues on either side.

In launching American Cause, Murphy is touching his natural propensity of the American right. Liberals have no such problem. They have a splendid motor: United we stand. Gurs is different. Divided we fall. One Murphy plunges into areas of passionate disagreement, he is likely to shatter his constituency before he ever gets it glued together.

Yet the effort is worth a try. Murphy's prospectus rings off the old nostalgic chimera: American Cause would promote "a firm belief in the Constitution, free speech, free practice of religious worship, a responsible and trusted free press, the free enterprise system, the profit-incentive, the right of private ownership of property, the maintenance of peace and safety in our communities; and the guarantee of national security from all enemies."

These are admirable goals, broadly appealing, but they are fuzzy around the edges. If American Cause is to compete with Common Cause in the arena of ideas, it will have to focus on specific targets.

The unavoidable risk is that some of Murphy's conservative prima-donnas, offended at the neglect of their solo projects, will then stalk off the stage and go home.

This set-up tensions which are not the easiest to transcend, because it is hard to give the reason why you want this particular, of that CIA head removed.

It was during this period that Charles Colson apparently got the impression that the President felt he had lost his effective authority. We all know that he didn't lose his effective authority, but he did know that Nixon sometimes equivocates (he's told).

Prairie provinces strain at Canada bonds

Thursday, July 16, 1974 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho 5

OTTAWA (UPI) — A move to separate the prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba from the rest of Canada is alive and gaining ground after the recent Liberal election victory.

The... last... attempted separation of the western provinces was in the late 1800's, but the move to set up an independent Prairie State was quashed by police and its leader, Louis Riel, hanged.

In recent years, the threat of separation has come from a French-speaking province of Quebec.

But now the focus has shifted westward and, according to former Conservative house leader "Jed" Baldwin, "the situation is not unlike that of a tinder-dry forest, which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

Baldwin, who represents a constituency in the oil-rich province of Alberta, took aim at the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau which won reelection on the strength of support in central Canada but made little headway in the prairies.

The lopsided electoral map, he said, was an illustration of "weakening national bonds."

In an interview Tuesday, Baldwin said the separatist feeling at the grass roots was strong and "I've been around long enough to see what happens when you have the right kind of man to take advantage of the situation."

The man who has come closest to doing that is Jack Horner, another member of Parliament from Alberta, who last winter was barely held off in his bid to break with the Conservative party and set up a western independent party.

Horner said Tuesday that "the underlying feeling is that Quebec and Ontario are the parents and the West are the children... the children are growing up and want a share in how the shop is to be run."

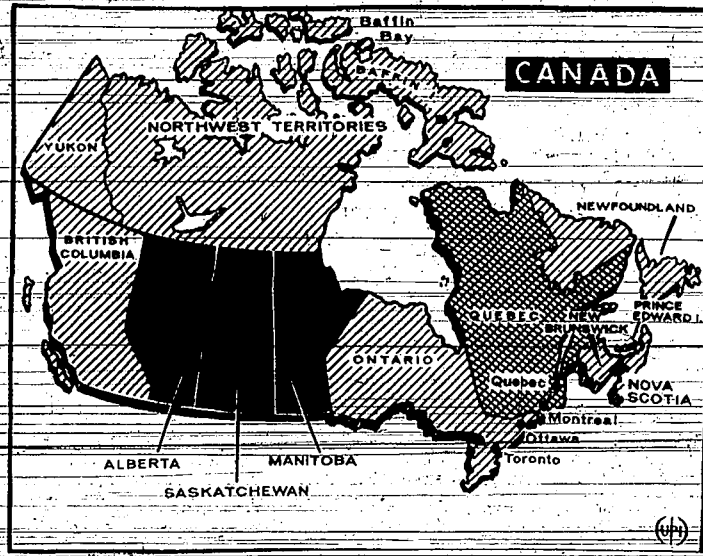

"Whether the decision hurts them or not, they want to feel they had a share in making the decision."

But Horner said he does not necessarily think western separation is in the cards and added "though I am not as strong a federalist as I was, I am still a Canadian."

Even Baldwin, who said recently that the West is now more likely to separate than Quebec ever was, said he does not support the move.

Instead, he said, the Liberal government and his own Conservative Party should be made aware of "western feelings against the eastern establishment" and move to correct injustices.

"The West continues to neglect these warnings, we could see such a movement... it is very much a possibility if several years go by and Trudeau does nothing about it, and our only party tries to do something," he said.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Impaired circulation trouble root

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife has a "bulge" under her skin. She has varicose veins. The doctor told her to put an elastic on it and "strip it up." She also has been told she needs to have her veins "stripped" by surgery. She is supposed to keep off her feet but she doesn't do it.

What does "stripping" veins in her legs mean, and what does it involve? Are her veins responsible for her unrelenting recurrent ulcer on her ankle? Is such an operation serious?

R. W.

I don't know why, but for some reason it seems almost impossible to get across to people the idea that "ulcers that won't heal" or the lower legs are almost without exception a result of impaired circulation—and except in the elderly, varicose veins are the most frequent cause of this impaired circulation. Even in the elderly, varicose veins often are the root cause although there can be other causes.

The point is this: valves in some veins of the legs can fail, and instead of the blood being raised through those veins, it stagnates there, the veins swell and become "varicose," and the net result is a reduction in circulation through the legs.

If these varicose veins are removed (stripped), then other veins, deeper in the legs, are forced to take over the job, and congestion is improved. The congestion caused by that more or less stagnant blood in the varicose veins is relieved.

"Stripping" a varicose vein involves a small incision at the top and the bottom of the vein, after which the vein is drawn out lengthwise, and only very small scars remain afterward.

Some varicose veins are determined not to take any of the good advice offered to them—the most important advice being to have the veins stripped—removed. Good advice is no help if she doesn't take it.

If you are still puzzled as to just how the faulty valves cause varicose veins, and what needs to be done, I suggest you send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for a copy of my booklet, "How to Deal with Varicose Veins."

Doctors have a suspicion that most women have their veins stripped to improve appearance, but actually there are compelling health reasons, aside from appearance—for having it done. Light, of course, can have varicose veins, too, but to them appearance isn't as much of a factor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: On hot nights, when my husband perspires the sheets and pillow cases have a yellow tinge to the morning. Is this the result of a bath before going to bed. He is not, has had a physical and is in good health. What could cause this? —Mrs. A.S.

Colored sweat is a rare but not unknown phenomenon. It usually is related to some bacteria or fungus on the skin, or can be caused by metal dust to which someone has been exposed.

Frequent bathing is about all I can suggest, but using an antiseptic soap may be the answer if bacteria are involved.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have osteoporosis. I noticed your reference that fluorides are helpful. My doctor does not seem to know about it. Could you tell me what fluorides are? —Mrs. B.H.K.

Fluorides have been used to combat osteoporosis; how much success you can expect is subject to dispute, but osteoporosis admittedly is difficult to treat.

With all the discussion about fluoridation of water in the last decade, with sodium fluoride I find it difficult to believe that your doctor is not familiar with what fluorides are.

Kalmbach links funds, milk support increase

(C) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Herbert W. Kalmbach, the final witness before the impeachment inquiry, told the House Judiciary committee Wednesday that dairy industry leaders had been required to reaffirm their pledge of campaign contributions before President Nixon announced an increase in milk prices supports in 1973.

Other Democrats who indicated they were paying more careful attention to the milk case were Rep. George E. Danielson of California, Rep. Edward Zwick of Iowa and Rep. Robert F. Drinan of Massachusetts.

Even Rep. Paul McCloskey, one of the President's strongest Republican supporters, said during a recess in Kalmbach's testimony that he had "more of an impression from him than there was some sort of understanding."

Most Republicans found nothing damning in Kalmbach's testimony because, even though he was the President's personal lawyer and a key campaign fund-raiser, Kalmbach had dealt with Nixon's aides rather than with the President himself.

"As for lying up to the President with any misconduct, he didn't," said Rep. David W. Dennis, R-Ind.

The committee recessed for dinner without having directly asked Kalmbach what many members believe to be the most significant question: How much did Nixon pay to his personal finances and tax returns?

On another matter, Kalmbach reportedly said that time and again he had discussed with potential contributors the possibility that they could obtain ambassadorships after the election. He said that in two instances—regarding committee members, he had made commitments of ambassadorships in return for a campaign donation.

One Republican, Rep. Lawrence J. Hogan of Maryland, called Kalmbach's testimony on ambassadorships "some of the most damaging stuff I've heard yet against the President."

But other Republicans noted, once again, that Kalmbach had "received" his orders on ambassadorships and contributions from H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, the President's top aides, and never discussed the subject with Nixon.

Kalmbach is now serving a term of six months in jail after pleading guilty to violating election laws and promising an ambassadorship as a reward for a campaign donation.

In the months following the Watergate break-in, Kalmbach raised nearly $250,000 in cash and arranged for its distribution to the Watergate burglars.

Disease fighter

WORKMAN at Oklahoma City stockyards sprays disinfectant in handling pens Wednesday after several cattle died of anthrax. Statewide quarantine was imposed in Oklahoma, but officials in Texas said today the outbreak of the disease has been controlled. (UPI)

Health officials control anthrax

MARLIN, Tex. (UPI) — Animal health officials in Texas and Oklahoma say they have isolated and controlled an outbreak of anthrax. But the disease, which is contagious and can infect humans, has already killed at least 200 cattle in Texas.

A special agent for Gov. Dolph Briscoe toured farmlands strewn with the burned carcasses of diseased cattle Wednesday and said everything appears under control.

Agent Reagan Brown said national guardsmen manning roadblocks in the quarantined area could be recalled in a few more days.

It appears the anthrax has been confined within Falls County in East Central Texas. And although cattle are still dying in the county, the deaths are occurring in unvaccinated herds.

The Texas Animal Health Commission ordered all available anthrax vaccines in the state to be shipped to Falls County.

Brown said he found 300,000 head of cattle in Falls County that need to be vaccinated and 250,000 doses of the vaccine were available.

"We feel like the situation is under control," Brown said. "There have been no other reports of anthrax from other counties."

Cattle that die of anthrax must be cremated. Brown said 200 carcasses have been buried in Falls County and there are not many left to be cremated.

Israeli minister hints at pullback

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Commerce and Industry Minister Haim Bar Lev said today Israel is willing to give up much of the West Bank of Jordan if Jordanian troops are not allowed into the area.

"If there is no Jordanian army west of the Jordan River, there is no reason why the Jordanian, Syrian, Lebanese and Samarian cannot be under the rule of the state of Jordan," Bar Lev said in a tape recorded interview for broadcast later this week. Excerpts of the interview were carried in the newspaper Ma'ariv.

Israel captured Judea, Samaria and East Jerusalem from the Jordanians in the 1967 Six Day War.

Bar Lev also said Israel must consider the question of the Palestinian refugees who consider the West Bank their home.

"There are people who see themselves as Palestinians and say 'We exist, and they do exist and the world must recognize them,'" he said.

The newspaper Yediot Aharonot said it had reported that the United States would urge Israel to recognize some kind of Palestinian delegation at the Geneva peace talks if the Arabs promise to curb terrorist attacks on Israeli targets.

It said the proposal would be made to Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon when he visits Washington at the end of the month.

Soyuz trip ending

MOSCOW (UPI) — The two Soyuz H cosmonauts have finished their two-week program aboard the orbiting Soyuz 19 space laboratory and have begun preparing to return to earth, the Soviet press said today.

"We have fully completed the program," the newspaper Vodyny quoted commander David Popovich as saying. "I would record the ground controllers replied."

Popovich said Popovich and his flight engineer Yuri Artyukhin, who blasted off on July 17, had checked up with the ground control in the orbiting Soyuz 19. Soyuz 19 is now "preparing to wind up the flight."

Soviet officials said earlier it would not be a prolonged flight, but would probably last between 15 and 20 days.

The newspaper Mirokovskii Kosmonavt said the two cosmonauts had checked on special astro-orientation system that can help them pinpoint a landing zone in the dark, suggesting they may return tonight.

Artyukhin said the only thing negative he had seen were the tubes for our soup and the foil paper on our fruit sticks.

Evidence bolsters Nixon campaign defenses

Nixon was not influenced by the promised campaign donation which was incidentally never fully delivered — but was influenced by the pressure of pro-milk members of Congress, who were lobbying the executive for a boost in the milk price support to 85 percent of parity from the existing 80 percent.

Humphrey, whose home state of Minnesota is a major dairy producer, was at the time openly seeking the subsidy increase, while Mills took the lead, according to the Senate Waitegate Committee. In arranging private meetings between key members of Congress and milk-producing interests.

According to the Senate committee, much of whose investigative findings have previously been made public, $250,000 of corporate funds of Associated Milk Producers' Inc. (AMPI) was paid to Valentine, Sherrard and Associates, a Minneapolis firm, for computerized political services that benefited Humphrey's campaign.

Federal statutes prohibit the use of corporate assets for political purposes.

All told, according to the committee report,

AMPI, one of the largest dairy cooperatives with over 6000 members, Valentine, Sherman and Associates $137,000 in 1971 for computer services—benefiting Democratic candidates, including Humphrey. In several states. One of the partners in the firm, which specialized in providing voter lists, was Humphrey's former press secretary, Norman Sherman.

According to testimony and evidence provided the committee by one AMPI official, Bob A. Lilly, a meeting took place on or about July 19, 1971, between AMPI officials and Humphrey campaign officials at the Humphrey home in Waverly, Minn. At this meeting, Lilly said, the milk group agreed to pay Valentine, Sherman and Associates $140,000 for computerized voter lists in several states which Humphrey and Mills, who were running separate campaigns for the Democratic presidential nomination, could use to their benefit.

Mills, the committee said, received a number of contributions from milk producer organizations in 1971 and 1972. In addition to contributions of $55,000 from the MPI's Trust for Agricultural Political Education (TAPED), and other dairy trusts, the committee found evidence that Mills' presidential campaign received the benefit of "up to $75,000 from corporate assets of AMPI; $15,000 from corporate assets of Mid-American Dairymen, Inc. and $40,000 in donations from members, employees, and officers of AMPI for a grand total of $130,000 from dairy producer sources.

This, said the committee, "is the equivalent of 38 per cent of his campaign revenue."

The committee, which on several occasions in the report pointed out Humphrey's rejection of its invitation to testify, and also the refusal of Humphrey's campaign manager, Jack Chestnut, to testify, listed two other irregularities in the finances of Humphrey's unsuccessful bid for the Democratic nomination.

These were the alleged sale of an AMPI gift of a $50,000 contribution from John L. Leob Sr., senior partner of the Leob, Rhoades, and Co. investment brokerage firm, and a $100,000 donation made through the office of the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. (3M Co.) but actually taken from a secret corporate fund.

The Leob donation came in May, 1972, to the Humphrey campaign committee in the names of seven persons, who were then reimbursed from Leob's personal bank account. According to the report, under the April 7, 1962, federal election law it is illegal for any person to make a political contribution in the name of another. On May 31, 1973, Leob pleaded no contest to violations of this law.

The 3M Corporation, which was convicted along with its chief executive officers of making illegal corporate contributions to President Nixon's political campaign, gave $1,000 from a secret political fund to both Humphrey and Mills.

Mills, in addition, received $15,000 from the Gulf Oil Corp., which was convicted last November of illegally contributing to the Nixon campaign. Gulf in November requested and got a refund of its $15,000 to the Mills for President

The Senate committee also raised some questions about the financial practices of the McGovern campaign, mainly in connection with the post-campaign settlement of campaign debts at 50 percent face value while "substantial transfers" of funds were being made from the McGovern presidential committee over to the McGovern-for-Senate Committee, in anticipation of McGovern's 1974 Senatorial campaign.

Tower bomb kills woman

(C) New York Times Service
LONDON — A bomb exploded in a cellar armory at the Tower of London Wednesday, ripping through the ribs of tourists and injuring more than 30.

One woman died Wednesday night in a hospital.

The explosion, which occurred after lunch, hurled a cannon five feet into the air and drove debris and a rackful of spears through the crowded underground chamber.

At least a dozen of the injured, about half of them children, were in serious condition.

Two of the victims had legs severed and rescuers found a child's foot lying beneath the displaced cannon.

The blast, bringing in dozens of fire engines and ambulances, disrupted air traffic in the Tower area, was the third major bomb attack here in the last 16 months.

Police would not say whether as the two previous blasts, they held the Irish Republican Army responsible. But police sources were reported as saying privately that the highly suspicious plot had a way.

There was no warning given today, as there had been in the other attacks. In the first, in March, 1973, bombs went off outside Old Bally Criminal Court and government offices on Whitehall, injuring more than 100 persons but few of the injuries were serious.

The second major incident was a bomb explosion on June 17 in Westminster Hall in the House of Parliament. There were 11 injuries; none serious, though extensive damage was done to the building.

The Wednesday bomb went off in the basement of the 13 structures that make up the Tower of London. It did relatively little damage to the 11th century building, but part of the collection of arms and armor was extensively damaged.

In the House of Commons, Roy Jenkins, the home secretary, told the House that the bombing was "one of the more serious incidents we have experienced." Members of the house were particularly upset about the loss of arms and armor, which he said would become a new pattern in such bombings.

Iran buys Krupp share

(C) New York Times Service
PARIS — The government of Iran is acquiring a 25 percent interest in the steelworks of the German Krupp group in Iran.

Final approval was announced Wednesday in Tehran and Essen, West Germany, following approvals by Helmut Schmit, chancellor, and Hans Zehrer, German economics minister, of West Germany.

The accord was first signed last Friday in Teheran by Berthold Beltz, chairman of Krupp, and Hushang Ansary, minister of commerce in Iran.

Final approval was announced Wednesday in Tehran and Essen, West Germany, following approvals by Helmut Schmit, chancellor, and Hans Zehrer, German economics minister, of West Germany.

Former narcs to face charges

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — Two former Idaho state narcotics agents have been freed on their own recognizance after being charged with second-degree kidnaping, armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

The two — Michael A. Caldero, 39, and Douglas Johnson, 34, both Coeur d'Alene — appeared in magistrate court Wednesday after warrants for their arrest, issued from Bannock County a week ago, finally arrived here Tuesday evening.

Officials said the warrants were finally delivered to the Coeur d'Alene Police Department Monday and were taken to the sheriff's department Tuesday.

Caldero and Johnson were fired as state narcotics agents last January in a shake-up of the department.

Caldero said he felt they were fired because they uncovered "too much" in their investigation of alleged heroin traffic in the Pocatello area last summer.

"There's no doubt in my mind that we were the fall guys," he said, adding that agents who "never stirred up any dirt" are still operating.

A third agent, Anthony Colon, in his late 20s, was also charged in the warrants. Caldero said he believed Colon, whose last address was in Boise, had left the state.

Caldero said the charges against the three stemmed from an alleged incident in which the three agents had made a "buy" of heroin only to discover the substance they had purchased with $150 of the state's money was not narcotic cocaine.

He said the three had been posing as underworld characters to gain the confidence of the drug ring operating in the area, and to investigate the suspect at joint and took back the state's money, without tipping their hand as state agents.

Kootenai County Chief Criminal Deputy Harry Butten said he was unsure what the next move in the case would be because he had been unable to make contact with Bannock County authorities.

Use of land aired

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Land Board has been warned to be ready for a flurry of last minute requests to use state land in connection with Level Killevel's Snake River Canyon Jump.

Assistant commissioner Jack Gillette said he anticipates widespread public use of state land on the north rim of the canyon and a request by a promoter to put up "concessions." He said many spectators may want to go to the north rim to watch the jump to avoid paying a fee to Killevel.

He said Wednesday some of the land there is under lease, and added the lessee may want part of the action. He said the lessee has the right to use the land only for grazing and as long as that right is protected by the state perhaps the employment funds "should get a piece of the action."

While there is no concrete application before the board at this time, Gillette said, applications could come quickly once plans are formed.

Gem geo-thermal production eyed

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho could have a geo-thermal energy production by 1977, a member of the Idaho Nuclear Energy Commission told the state land board today.

Dr. Robert Brugger, Idaho Falls, presented the board with a timetable for construction of a 100-megawatt geothermal power plant in the Raft River Valley when he asked for withdrawal of 2,000 acres of state land in the area from private development.

The board took his request under advisement, indicating they will act on it next month after they see what applications private interests have made for geothermal leases in that area.

Brugger, an employe of Aero Jet Nuclear, the prime contractor for the Atomic Energy Commission at the National Reactor Testing Station, said his company has a charter from the AEC to look at non-geothermal energy uses of the hot water, as well as the electrical possibilities.

He said the federal and state commissions as well as other governmental agencies want to define what kind of a power plant can be established on an available basis in Idaho.

He said the first deep hole may be drilled by this fall and, once the field is defined, his commission probably will reduce below 600 acres the land it wants withdrawn from private geo-thermal development.

Senate panel researches impeachment procedure

(C) Washington Star/News
 WASHINGTON — Two hearings have already been held for top Senate Republican leaders and more are planned in the future. Tower said. Asked whether the research effort was aimed at developing a consensus among all Republican senators on major procedural and legal issues involved in an impeachment trial, Tower replied, "that's obvious," what our work is leading to." Senate majority whip Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said no such move is contemplated by Democratic senators. "I think it would be a mistake," Byrd said. "This is not a party matter and I would be very much opposed to the development of any party position on these issues." Tower and other sources said some of the questions currently under study by Republican researchers include: How much time should Nixon be given to respond to any impeachment charges which may be brought against him by the House before a Senate trial begins? Is there a rule for the courts at any state-of-an-impeachment proceeding? Should a Senate impeachment trial be televised? Could an impeachment trial which began in the current session of Congress continue into the next session, which begins in January, or would all proceedings have to start over again?

Can any member of the Senate be disqualified from participating in an impeachment trial? Can a senator voluntarily excuse himself from participation? Are any changes necessary or desirable in the existing Senate rules governing the conduct of a trial? Could or should the Senate attempt to conduct other business while an impeachment trial is in progress? Tower said Republican senators will make no attempt to reach a party-line position on these and similar questions until and unless the House votes to impeach the President. According to another Republican source, one issue which could produce a partisan split in the Senate is the amount of time which should be allowed to Nixon's lawyers to prepare their response to any house impeachment charges. "It all depends on how much time Nixon lawyer James P. St. Clair asks for, and how much the Democratic leadership is willing to grant. This source said. Candidate stresses education

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Career education, kindergartens and more teachers are top educational priorities for Roy Truby, Democratic candidate for state superintendent of public instruction.

But, as a candidate, the most important thing to Truby is that "the state superintendent has to be an effective spokesman for education," he said in an interview, Wednesday.

In the past, he said, the superintendent of public instruction has seen the job "as sitting on various boards and managing the Department of Education."

Truby, 41, will see the state superintendent hold workshops for the state legislators on what is being taught in the classroom, he said, giving an example of how to "personalize" the office with the legislature.

He called for "studies of direction" to measure the lawmakers of the strengths and weaknesses of the state's educational system.

One current weakness is in the area of vocational education, he said. The programs offered are of good quality, he said, but there are not enough of them.

"Unfortunately, we can't offer vocational programs for more than seven per cent of our kids. When about 80 per cent of our kids will not go on and complete a college education, you have a serious problem," he said.

"I really think we're ready for the change. People are beginning to realize that vocational education isn't just a great thing for somebody else's kid," Truby said.

With a $20 million state budget surplus, Truby believes substantial new money will be available for education. The candidate proposes using this money to "expand programs in career education.

One of the ways to do this economically is by 'opening up our schools and beginning to use the community as a classroom.' A student may want to be a heavy equipment operator, but the schools cannot buy a bulldozer. They can go to the community and try to arrange this work," Truby said.

With additional funds the department should also establish a voluntary, half-day kindergarten program for other candidates for the office have supported the idea of kindergartens if the money is available, he said. "I'm going to want to see that money increase in taxes if we make the commitment to some of these people programs."

Truby said Idaho has the highest pupil-teacher ratio in the nation and the department should do more in the primary grades to provide special reading teachers and to reduce the "pupil-teacher ratio."

As superintendent, Truby would also support some of the affirmative action programs.

"I don't think we can justify closing administrative positions," he said, pointing out that all of the state's 113 superintendents are men and only one out of 275 secondary school principals is a woman.

"I don't think we can justify spending $10 for boy's athletics for every $1 we spend on girls," he said.

And the girls just aren't allowed to go out and sell cookies to buy their uniforms, he said.

We have to give them opportunities to provide greater opportunities for women to get into school administration, he said.

We graduate 20 to 25 per cent of our students who are American-born. Sometimes people see this as their problem, but it is our problem. We have to find ways to reach them," Truby said.

Reaching Mexican-Americans does not mean presenting them with the "clean little white teacher" model presented in Dick and Jane books. This presents Mexican-Americans with "a very unreal world and suggests what you are not and what you ought to be," he said.

Truby opposed busing between districts as "arbitrary." He called for working with the parents on a personal level "to bridge the gap that exists between the schools and people who are culturally different."

Some local specialists to advise school districts could help bring healthy decentralization. "We've assumed for too long that the department sits at the state level and it doesn't," he said.

Truby maintained he is not an anarchist. "I would like to see an administrator who can't seek out specialists nor knowledgeable in particular areas."

"I have some of the answers. I think I would like to see for the job of head of education in the state. But I don't have all the answers and I'm willing to listen to people who do," he said.

Idaho water issue eyed

TWIN FALLS — The energy crisis must not become an excuse for draining Idaho dry, Max Hanson said in Twin Falls Tuesday.

Hanson, Democratic candidate for Idaho's second district congressional seat, spoke to a group of Twin Falls supporters about preserving Idaho's water for the development of oil shale or coal fields in the western states becomes a reality.

"Great amounts of water will be needed to undertake such a development," Hanson explained.

One possible solution to the problem is in creasing research and development of solar and geothermal energy sources, Hanson said. He noted that Idaho's potential for such energy development is enormous.

If the energy sources were developed the energy problem would be decreased and "we can keep our water in our crops and in our rivers where it belongs," Hanson added.

"We must be careful," Hanson observed, "that in our eagerness to solve the energy problems we do not sanction any action which costs us our water here in Idaho. Idaho's water is not for sale at any price," Hanson concluded.

Hansen speaks at Jerome meet

JEROME — George Hansen attacked the "excessive and wasteful spending" of federal government when he spoke to the Jerome Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Hansen, GOP candidate for Congress from the second district, noted the federal spending has risen from $4 billion to $24 billion in the last 44 years and the federal payroll increased in number from 2,735,000 in 1929 to 7,735,000 in 1973.

Hansen noted that the gigantic cost of government is to blame for the rising income taxes and increased inflation. "It's time to curb this spending and restore the purchasing power of the dollar," Hansen stated.

Hansen cited the recent passage of a $13 billion proposal for funding the international development program as an example of "wasteful spending." "At a time when prices, inflation and interest rates are climbing higher when governmental spending is out of control, nonsensical spending must be stopped," he added.

level falls later in the year.

Mayor Wendell Johnson said that flooding near Jerome recently but that "it will happen again." Police Chief Edward Culver was instructed to watch the area for violations of city irrigation regulations.

People who allow the water to run in the street are subject to fine for breaking a law which prohibits letting water enter public roads.

A proposal by Chief of Police George MacDonald to conduct legislation to make the City of Rocks in southern Cassia County a national monument was tabled. The action was endorsed several weeks ago by the Burley City Council. The legislation is expected to go up for a vote in the US House of Representatives this week.

Subwater stalls Rupert project

RUPERT — Subwater conditions have halted efforts to stop flooding of streets on the east side of town.

Flooding by irrigation water in the summer and precipitation in the winter has plagued residents living on South and 14th streets for several years. The streets meet a county road at their southern ends which keeps water from draining City residents have had to pump the water across the road.

Following complaints, city residents, city street crews have begun installation of basins on the two streets. At their Tuesday night meeting, the council was informed that work had been stopped by high subwater which makes further digging impossible until the

The couple will relate through body language without words.

TWIN FALLS — Members of Twin Falls High School between 1900 and 1999 have been invited to an annual dinner Friday.

Reforms delayed in bitter fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats in a bitter intraparty fight, decided Wednesday to put off until next week a decision on the first reforms in more than a quarter century in the congressional committee system.

Democrats as the majority party control the committee system and party bucking broke out at a caucus of Democratic members since no proposal could establish two committees and take some jealously guarded prerogatives away from others.

A second proposal was aimed at striking a middle ground. The party caucus decided to study the plan and prepare for a vote on the bill, measures possibly on Tuesday.

The stronger plan was introduced earlier, this year by a select committee that worked for 18 months. The bill was drafted by a caucus panel that worked for the past month.

The select committee, headed by Rep. Hugh Downs, D-Mo., drafted a bipartisan measure that is generally backed by Republicans. The caucus named all Democrats and headed by Rep. John Butler and Hansen, D-Wash., reworked the billing proposal into a separate bill.

Congressional reform groups, such as Common Cause, say the issue is vital to meet public disaffection with the way Congress operates since the 1946 reorganization act of 1946.

Arab torpedo plan countermanded

LONDON (UPI) — An Egyptian submarine put to sea to torpedo the British liner Queen Elizabeth 2 carrying 500 British tourists celebrating the 25th anniversary of the end of the war, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said Tuesday.

Wilson said in an interview screened on British Broadcasting Corp. television and had personally countermanded the order given by an Arab leader and told the submarine captain to return to Alexandria.

Sadat was interviewed by Lord Chalfont, former Foreign Office minister of state.

Speaking of the cruise, with mostly American Jews aboard the liner, Wilson said: "I am sure that the Arab leaders had the idea to torpedo this cruise. Fortunately he tried to use one of my submarines and had the captain to return this order and he went out to sea to intercept the Queen Elizabeth."

Wilson told at a press conference about this. I had to be awake to 2:30 a.m. to give another order to my captain to cancel this order and to come to join his base in Alexandria."

Lord Chalfont said Sadat refused both an aid offer and to name the Arab leader who gave the order.

Utility taxes not deductible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that local taxes on utility bills are not deductible on individual federal tax returns.

They will continue to be deductible on business returns. IRS agents have made this interpretation of the deductibility of utility taxes called a sales tax in some areas of the country, said agents in others, on federal income returns since 1963.

New Mexico sides with group seeking treasure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a threat to sue the U.S. Army, the State of New Mexico has sided with a group seeking to dig on the White Sands Missile Range for a hidden cache of Spanish gold said to be worth as much as $225 million.

If the Army makes a move to unearth the treasure, the state of New Mexico, said Attorney General Travis L. Spivell Tuesday, he would file suit to compel the military from removing the gold.

Spivell held a news conference along with Attorney General Spivell and representatives of the group seeking the treasure, the subject of several headlines today.

"The Army has denied the existence of any such Spanish gold on the southern New Mexico military reservation. But Spivell said the Army is moving equipment to remove the treasure while refusing to let Bailey's group on the range."

Bailey, who declined to identify his clients, has said in the past he could find the treasure if given "just 30 minutes and a helicopter."

"Norvell gave strong indication of why he was joining with Bailey's group, facts compatible with the Army. Now, however, Norvell said he would let 20 per cent of the gold if he is brought out by Bailey's group."

"The missile site is operated by the Army on land leased from New Mexico."

Bailey said his clients had supported their story by producing a sample gold bar which assayed out at 99.9 per cent gold. The bar is currently being held by the Secret Service, the attorney said.

Meanwhile, Norvell was criticized by James C. O'Connell, a former U.S. Attorney who represents Mrs. Ova Aarsh of Crocus, N.M. Mrs. Aarsh is the 82-year-old widow of Milton E. Aarsh, the Noss who claimed he found a gold treasure in the Victoria Peak area in 1937.

"The Albuquerque Tribune quoted Koury Tuesday as saying he believed the Bailey clients found the Noss gold and that Norvell was buying the Bailey group preference over the original finders."

"I am puzzled and somewhat shocked that a New Mexico public servant would enter into a secret and unilateral agreement with a private group to recover a treasure trove on public land," Mrs. Aarsh's attorney said.

Bailey has said his clients found a treasure separately from the Noss gold.

The Tribune also reported that Norvell had signed an agreement on behalf of the state in 1973, granting the Bailey group immunity from criminal prosecution for acts carried out to recover the gold.

Bailey told reporters his clients advised the Army of the general location of the treasure and that the Army has "moved machinery to the site" to dig for the gold.

The cast of characters associated with the legend of the lost treasure ranges from Germany to the Italian frontier to former Presidential Assistant John W. Dean III.

Dean told Senate investigators Bailey had asked John N. Mitchell, when Mitchell was attorney general, for help in retrieving the gold.

Government is alleged to have hidden his boots in the area.

In another version, Spanish soldiers supposedly stole the gold and buried it near Victoria Peak, a 20,000-foot hill on the missile grounds.

The legend got its real impetus from Noss, a foot doctor and one-time inmate of the New Mexico State Penitentiary.

Noss claimed he found gold bars, coins, jewelry, old swords, guns and saddles in a cache of small caves hundreds of feet below a small mountain, Victoria Peak.

Noss said he later accidentally crashed in the passage to the caves with a dynamite blast, but claimed to have removed 88 bars of solid gold and some other riches.

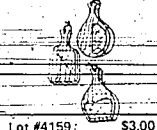

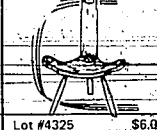

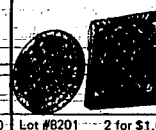

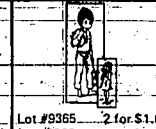

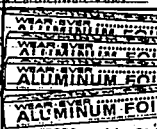

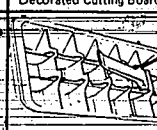

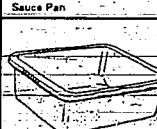

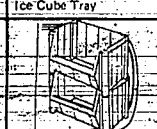

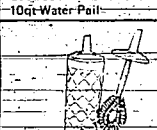

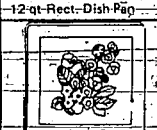

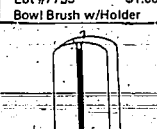

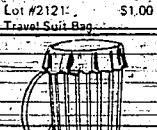

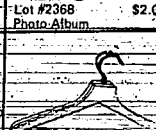

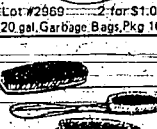

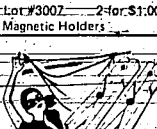

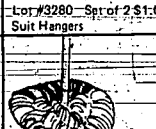

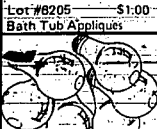

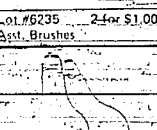

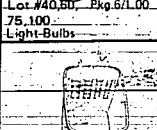

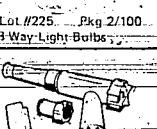

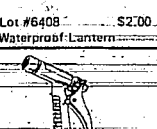

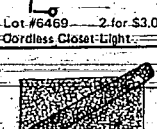

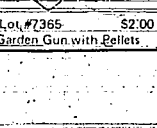

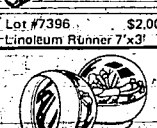

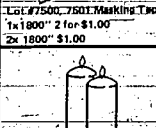

Noss was shot to death in a bar 10 years after his supposed discovery during an argument over some gold bars.

His widow says she has some of the relics and could locate the rest of the treasure if the Army would only let her look.

Mrs. Noss filed a $1 million suit against the Army last year, saying the Army was depleting her of her property. She said she has seen the treasure and that it is enough to "load 50 to 60 mules and make John D. Rockefeller look like a tramp."

The Army has rejected the government that the gold exists with a series of tests in 1962-63, a mining firm which found nothing after two months of drilling holes in Victoria Peak.

Smallpox cases spread in India

(C) New York Times Service
NEW DELHI — India's smallpox epidemic has spread from the state of Bihar, and the number of cases has reportedly reached more than 130,000.

Although health officials claim that the epidemic is being controlled, they fear that the disease will persist in India, and neighboring Nepal, Pakistan and Bangladesh. These four countries, along with Ethiopia, account for all the reported smallpox cases in the world.

"It's a vast country with a lot of movement," Karan Singh, the health minister, said in an interview. People from India travel to different states for festivals, for wedding, for employment.

Evel to observe all local laws, safety standards

By BILL LAZARUS
Times News Service

TWIN FALLS — Evel Knievel is planning to abide by all local laws and meet with safety standards, according to his local attorney.

But, with six weeks to go before the week-long air starts, the plans are being developed.

Attorney Jim May, Twin Falls, said Wednesday Knievel is attempting to locate fire equipment to protect the land from burning during the September event.

May could not say how much or what equipment is necessary. He said inquiries are being made "from the people most qualified to know what is needed. The fire chief had not been contacted, but May said he did talk with the city manager. But he said he did not ask the city manager what equipment is necessary.

"It's my feeling that there's plenty of time to take care of it," May said. Other members of the team," he said, are now working out the details of how many toilets are necessary, how water will be delivered and "all the thousands of other little nitty-gritty details."

Details of how traffic will be handled are being developed by Twin Falls County Sheriff Paul Corder, he said.

Tuesday Corder told canyon rim residents worried about the affair that Knievel had not made it clear how many people will appear.

"He's already told them," May said. "Evel Knievel's limiting of ticket sales to 50,000. He said Knievel was going to have sold all the event tickets already, is continuing to travel the country promoting the affair because people can watch it on closed-circuit TV."

To insure adequate medical and police protection there are plans for all types of helicopters "to take people to the hospital or bring in police if necessary, May said.

He said a double fence with security guards in between will be used to insure that excited crowds do not push spectators over the rim.

"There's no certainty in the morning that when you get up and cross the street that somebody won't hit you," he said, maintaining this should be reasonable protection.

May did not say how the fenced-in guards could control crowds in back pushing forward.

He said the jump has been in the works for the past four years. But, only recently, has there been enough to go on to work out detailed plans.

"It was just a few weeks ago we sold the right for closed circuit TV," he said.

"We are doing everything we can to comply with governmental regulations. May said. Some specific answers to problems should be available by next week after talks with city officials, he added.

May met Tuesday with Bureau of Land Management officials to apply for a landing permit for Knievel. But he did not know how Knievel plans to land.

"It's more likely that he'll be coming down on a parachute," May said, adding that he really does not know whether Skycycle X-1 will crash or land gently.

He said he has asked the BLM to close off all its property on the rim's north side "for purposes of safety."

BLM Area Manager Gary Hansen said the bureau is considering the close-off request but also has another application for concession rights to the property.

Some of the questions the BLM is asking regarding intended use of the property concern fees charged at the concession stand, spectator control, litter control, and what type of filming will be done.

Hansen said the bureau has not asked what type of landing Knievel will make. He said Knievel plans to land within a mile and a half north from the launch ramp, but has not clarified how much leeway will be needed east or west.

Normally, applications for land use are made 60 to 90 days before an event, Hansen said. He expected this application to be turned in next week and said it would be all right as long as the permit is processed and plans made before the event.

Hansen said the bureau is considering allowing camping on its northside land. The property, he said, "could be used to take care of some of the spillover." But he said the bureau is worried "because of the extreme fire condition."

Suit filed
HAILEY — The Idaho State Sheep Commission has filed suit against Curtis Baker, Blaine sheepman, for an overdue sheep assessment fee.

The suit alleges Baker has refused to pay the $20 sheep assessment fee on 1,400 head he owned during 1973. The assessment, according to the complaint, says each head will be assessed 30 cents to be paid to the commission.

Baker has not paid the fee, according to the suit. The complaint asks for the $420 plus interest.

Fund shift eyed
IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — The courts will be asked by two Bonneville County commissioners to determine if they can shift funds from one county budget to another without a unanimous vote.

Two commissioners voted Wednesday to shift funds to help pay for an unexpected hike in the building of the new county jail.

The third commissioner, Leo Clawson, voted against the shift and the County Executive's Office said funds cannot be shifted without a unanimous vote.

Commissioners named in suit
IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Bonneville County commissioners are being sued for allegedly attempting to circumvent the Idaho State Code by paying for work on remodeling the courthouse.

The suit was filed on behalf of Sam Bennett, Idaho Falls businessman, and taxpayers of Bonneville County.

It contends the commissioners unlawfully divided payments for work done in remodeling the courthouse.

The Idaho code provides that work costing more than $2,500 must be let out for bids, which the suit charged the commissioners had failed to do.

Accident scatters household furnishings, personal possessions

Idaho aides eye defense

BOISE (UPI) — If certain qualifications are met, state funds may be used to defend seven state employees against involuntary manslaughter charges.

Atty. Gen. W. Anthony Park said Wednesday the seven employees of the Department of Environmental and Community Services, predecessor to the Department of Health and Welfare, who are accused in the death of young Jeffrey Hodgson of Pocatello during a survival training course, may be defended with state funds if they are acquitted.

Park said the department involuntarily may pay the legal expenses of the seven if the director makes these determinations:

- The acts leading to prosecution were performed within the scope of employment of the persons, and were required as part of their normal duties.
- The offenses charged do not involve elements of criminal negligence.
- If the crime of "criminal negligence" is charged, that the prosecution has been found by the courts to be without merit.

The program in which the persons charged were participating was a "wild" public pursuit and that the charges against them arose out of acts in furtherance of that purpose.

Accident blocks I80

TWIN FALLS — Household furnishings and other personal possessions of a Boise family were scattered over Interstate 80 blocking the highway Wednesday afternoon.

State Patrolman Gene Hutton said the one vehicle accident occurred about 12:45 p.m. when a pickup truck driven by Patricia Mauck, 31, pulling a flat-bed trailer carrying household items, went out of control and jackknifed.

He said the trailer did not overturn but scattered the entire load of furniture and other items over the interstate. The accident occurred about 14 miles east of Twin Falls.

The driver and her passengers, Sherry Mauck, 11; Carrie Mauck, 7; and Raymond Mauck, 8, all escaped injury.

Area fire probed

JEROME — The Jerome City Fire Department is investigating a fire Tuesday in the garage of a home belonging to Harold Fahrenwald.

The city fire department answered the call to 113 Mountain View Dr. at 10:15 p.m. Tuesday evening. Mrs. Fahrenwald was home at the time the fire started and reported it to the fire department.

New Magic Valley planning council meets

Kidd, representing the city of Twin Falls, said the city of Twin Falls has the same complaint.

Kelly questioned William Casney, chairman of the Twin Falls County commission, as to why the county has not signed and returned the resolution. Casney said the commissioners are "thinking about it. But are not ready to commit funds" until they know how long the joint council will last.

Members of the council also questioned whether or not those representing different cities that have not returned resolutions have a legal right to vote. Following debate, it was decided that the council should elect temporary members and allow all representatives to vote.

John Van Orman, Jerome, was elected temporary chairman. L. W. Baldwin, Fairfield, was named temporary vice chairman and Jo Hills-Rupert, treasurer. Taylor was unanimously approved executive director with salary negotiations to be conducted in private. Karen Weibright was retained as secretary.

The council also decided to move offices from Gooding and Twin Falls to Jerome by Sept. 1, if not sooner. The council had, at a previous meeting, agreed to maintain an office in Gooding until the Jerome County courthouse annex was completed. Kelly said that the council was maintaining a Twin Falls office for the secretary and a Gooding office for the executive director. Office space will be rented in Jerome and the other two offices will be closed.

Kelly also questioned the council as to whether or not a new policy has been instituted under which only members of the council receive notification and agendas for upcoming meetings. Kelly said if it was a new policy, he would sign on receiving it, but would not sign it until the policy was approved.

Van Orman said that notification of the meetings will be sent to executive members and alternates. The subject of sending notifications to everyone in the community would be something to be discussed by the council, he said.

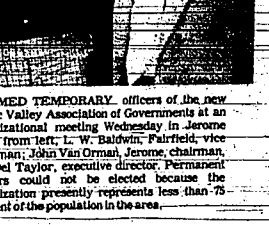

"Personally, I think you can get too carried away with notifying everyone in every community as to the upcoming meetings. This matter will be discussed by the council," Van Orman said.

Kelly also questioned whether or not some action should be taken or a private meeting held with representatives of cities and counties who have not signed the resolutions to see if they can't be completed and the council legally organized.

Van Orman said he felt it would be up to the county commissioners in each county to contact those who have not signed the resolutions.

Kelly asked how Van Orman expected the commissioners to see to it when some commissions have not signed and returned the resolutions. Van Orman said the matter would be taken care of.

Collision takes life
BANKS, Idaho (UPI) — A head-on collision five miles south of Banks on Highway 53 Wednesday took the life of Theodore A. Goodhall, 21, Iron River, Mich.

Boise County Sheriff Jack Williams said Goodhall was killed Wednesday evening when the vehicle he was driving in apparently crossed the center line.

8 board members appointed
BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has appointed eight new members to the Legislative Advisory Board of the Idaho Alcohol Safety Action Program (ASAP).

Andrus said among responsibilities of the board is the recommendation of legislation concerning alcohol safety to the legislature during each legislative session.

New appointees are Roger C. Carlson, Coeur d'Alene; Leon D. Doan, Coeur d'Alene; Larry Jackson, Boise; Janet S. Hay, Nampa; Vern Brassey, Boise; Thomas R. Heath, Idaho Falls; Claude Cain, Idaho Falls; and Bob Kinghorn, Pocatello.

Jackson, Brassey and Kinghorn are members of the legislature.

Senators propose salary cut
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James A. McClure and two other senators have proposed a "symbolic but very real" proposal for a 10 per cent cut in congressional salaries until a balanced budget is achieved.

"We have serious economic problems that call for courageous and drastic action," McClure and Sens. Curt Weldon, and Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., said in a joint statement. "Congress must face up to these problems while the economy is still strong. We should move before there is a crisis."

Machine-maker picks Gooding
GOODING — Gooding will soon become the temporary home of a million-dollar farm equipment manufacturing business, according to Jack Allison and Emmett Merkle.

They are partners in Farm Equipment Exchange Inc. and have used a nearby interest in Watts Plow Co. owned by Glen Watts, McMinnville, Ore.

The Oregon factory will be moved to Gooding and temporarily housed in a building south of the Gooding High School. "The site in Gooding is only temporary, and eventually we plan to build in Jerome," Allison said.

The new firm manufactures Watts non-stop hydraulic, reset and other farm implements and is estimated to have over a million dollars yearly in sales.

Allison said the firm will ultimately employ 20 to 30 persons with a yearly payroll in excess of $250,000. "We anticipate hiring as many local people as we can. However skilled and semi-skilled personnel will be required. We will need basic welders with practical experience and experienced machinists," Allison said.

He said they will wholesale to dealers and retail sales will be handled locally by Farm Equipment Exchange.

Officers of the corporation are Glen Watts; Emmett Merkle and Jack Allison. Management of the plant will be under the direction of the officers.

Not guilty plea given

JEROME — Richard Kyle Miller, 26, Boise, pleaded not guilty to charges of second degree kidnapping, grand larceny and burglary in Fifth District Court Tuesday in Jerome.

Miller was arrested last week and charged with taking a car belonging to Bruce Sauer, Jerome. At the time the car was allegedly taken, Sauer's father had left the car parked in downtown Jerome with her young daughter asleep in the back seat.

The burglary charges resulted when Miller allegedly entered a rural home and left the child.

Miller was later apprehended in private citizen's arrest after he returned to the city.

Phil Becker, Jerome County public defender, told the court that Miller would enter a defense of not guilty for reason of insanity. Miller, at the time of his arrest was on leave from State Hospital South, Blackfoot.

Judge Theron Ward ordered an evaluation of Miller to be conducted at the hospital in Blackfoot.

Judge Ward continued Miller's bond at $5,000. Miller is now in the custody of the Jerome County sheriff.

Association leaders

Named temporary officers of the new Magic Valley Association of Governments at an organizational meeting Wednesday in Jerome were, from left, L. W. Baldwin, Fairfield, vice chairman; John Van Orman, Jerome, chairman; and Del Taylor, executive director. Permanent officers could not be elected because the organization presently represents less than 75 per cent of the population in the area.

Salty farm waste water recovered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Salty agricultural waste waters are being successfully recovered in new experimental testing by the State Department of Water Resources, Director John R. Teerink said today.

Salad lovers' delight

GIANT HEAD of cabbage weighing 21 pounds is displayed by Tom Isler, Belleville, Ill. Cabbage was product of a garden planted at his home. (UPI)

Teerink said the tests at the waste water treatment evaluation facility near Firebaugh have resulted in a 90 per cent recovery of the otherwise unusable agricultural waste water.

"The 90 per cent recovery success enhances the prospect of using treated agricultural waste water for power plant cooling, thus reducing the future fresh water demand and alleviating agricultural disposal problems in the San Joaquin Valley," Teerink said.

The process, he added, also has the potential for use in the giant desalter to implement the Colorado River salinity control program of the federal government under an agreement with Mexico.

The recovery process utilizes "reverse osmosis desalting," Teerink said, and involves a complicated ion exchange process. An over simplification of the process, he said, would be to compare it to a home water softener.

The Firebaugh studies, Teerink said, have been in operation since July, 1971, in conjunction with scientists from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Funding for the project so far has totaled about $200,000 with $100,000 coming from the federal office of saline water.

Teerink also said his department expected to design a larger pilot plant next year. That plant, he added, would provide the cost information necessary to evaluate the possible use of the process as a means of handling the agricultural waste water of the rich San Joaquin Valley.

Threat balance asked

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Which is worse, a few holes chewed by aphids in the outer leaves of cabbage, or excess use of powerful pesticide chemicals?

Somebody should make a detailed study of the pros and cons so consumers and government officials can make intelligent environmental decisions, a committee of the National Academy of Sciences says.

Why not balance the threat to human health and safety posed by excessive and frequent pesticide applications against the disadvantage of a few insect parts on or in certain foods?

A careful cost-benefit analysis is proposed, added the NAS Committee on Agriculture and the Environment in a report on the problems of increasing environmental quality while not allowing agriculture to continue expanding its production.

The NAS panel said it based its proposals on the fundamental fact that "chemicals are necessary for the production of abundant, high-quality food and fiber." But after accepting that fact, the report said, policymakers should concentrate on reducing the amounts of pesticides used as much as possible without cutting food production drastically.

Committee members said several researchers have suggested that farmers use unnecessary amounts of pesticides in attempts to eliminate insect damage and insect parts completely from some foods.

For example, complete elimination of aphids and other insects in outer cabbage leaves requires an immediate increase in pesticide application. Similar situations have been made in regard to elimination of drosophila eggs from tomatoes, use of cut-up and for thrips found on raspberries used in jam, the report said.

Even under present high insecticide use, however, some drosophila eggs are still found in all-cut-up and thrips are in all raspberry jam," the NAS panel said.

The report did not suggest that "trade-off decisions to 'accept' a less than 100 per cent control of insects on crops like cabbage and tomato would produce a major cut in pesticide use. It said the greatest prospect for a quick reduction in chemical use "appears to lie in improving application techniques" on all farm crops.

Soybean crop doubtful

(C) New York Times Service
MOUNT PULASKI, Ill. — "It would be hard to say how many soybeans we'll make this year because we've never experienced anything like this before," said Frank Poppe Jr.

Pope's dubious appraisal of his soybean crop was an echo of the Agriculture Department's recent prediction of fewer soybeans planted than it had hoped for this fall.

It also portended another disappointment for consumers. A smaller bean crop would mean continuing high prices for soybean meal. High prices for soybean meal have usually translated into continuing high prices for chickens, turkeys, and pork.

"Our beans went into the ground 35 days late. Later than we've ever seen before, because of all that rain in May and June," Pope said. "So maybe we'll be lucky if the yield is out only 30 percent, and that will depend on getting enough rain in the next six weeks."

Pope, with his twin brother John, raises corn and soybeans on the 1,020 acres they own or rent here in central Illinois, in one of the richest cropland areas in the world.

This year, like hundreds of farmers in a 50-mile-wide band across the corn belt, the Pope brothers have seen part of their newly planted corn washed out and their soybeans planted so late that they are not expected to reach their normal yields.

The Agriculture Department has estimated that 52.5 million acres of soybeans would be harvested this year. This would be 3.9 million less than last year, when farmers produced a record crop, and 2.2 million less than the department expected in March.

Yield prospects are now so uncertain that the forecasters are reluctant to make a prediction on the total soybean crop, but it appears that the record crop, and 2.2 million less than the department expected in March.

Soybeans, once almost an afterthought to farmers who wanted something to rotate with their corn and cotton, became the golden glamour crop of the 1960s.

As world demand suddenly grew for soybean meal, the richest source of protein for animal food, farm prices for soybeans skyrocketed. For a brief time they soared to an unheard of $12 a bushel, four times the price in 1972 before they slipped back to a record $8 just before the new harvest began last fall.

Neither the Pope brothers nor anyone else expected a replay of last year's prices or demands. But recently, despite last fall's record crop, soybeans were still selling for more than $6 a bushel, only $1 less than a year ago, and there were no signs of a decline in export demand.

If this market level holds beyond the peak supply at harvest time, the price the Pope brothers and many other farmers get for a smaller crop may be high enough to gross as much as a larger crop at lower prices.

More than half the American soybean crop is exported, 25 with the American wheat crop, two-thirds of which is exported. The price the Pope brothers—and other farmers—get for their soybeans will depend on how much of the crop is exported.

All soybeans have to be processed by crushing. Most of this "crush" becomes soybean meal. Most of that meal becomes animal feed or human food in the form of soybean curd, which the Chinese call "meat without bones," or soybean flour, or soy sauce.

The remainder of the crush becomes soybean oil, a product used in margarine, cooking oil, salad oil, shortening, and in such industrial materials as paint, waterproof cements, soap, and printing ink.

Although the Pope brothers expect the market for soybeans to continue near today's prices after the harvest is in this fall, they are certain their profits will be much less this year.

Not only will their yields be smaller, but it has cost them 30 percent more than last year to seed, fertilize, and cultivate their crop.

Rain hurts crops

BOISE (UPI) — Cherries and some Northern Idaho hay suffered damage from rains around the state last week.

A federal crop report also noted that the cherry harvest was held up because of the rains. The cool weather lessened activity of pollinating insects on alfalfa and other seed crops, while dry weather in the Southcentral and eastern portions of the state hastened crop development on irrigated fields.

6 Gem varieties lead

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said six varieties of barley account for 67 per cent of the 1974 crop.

The leading barley variety grown in Idaho, Pinnacle, declined to 32 per cent of the state's acreage in 1973 from 35 per cent a year earlier.

Steelhead, the second major barley variety, has 11 per cent of the state's acreage, which compares with 12 per cent last year.

Steppe, one of the newer varieties, moved into third place with seven per cent of the total. Vanguard and Woodvale each had six per cent and Diggs five per cent, the service said.

Mart butchers beef intake

(C) New York Times Service
BRUSSELS — The European Economic Community decided Tuesday to ban most imports of beef from non-member countries until Oct. 31 in an effort to stem the growing meat surplus in Europe and boost, sagging domestic producer prices.

An American official in Brussels said the move could divert beef from the U.S. market and thus increase cattle lobby pressure on the American government "to reintroduce US beef import quotas."

The Common Market action does not affect the United States directly, however, since America normally exports no beef to Europe.

The agricultural ministers of the nine community members, meeting in Brussels after a weekend of demonstrations by farmers in France and Belgium, also decided to grant cattle producers special premiums for slaughtering their animals.

The premium would rise gradually from about $25 a head in August to $80 a head in February, with a portion of the funds coming from the community budget and the rest from the individual national government.

REVKIAVIK, Iceland — After centuries of denudation and catastrophic erosion, Iceland is beginning to grow forests again.
 Most Icelanders have never seen a forest. To them lumber, like other building materials, is something "manufactured," far across the sea.
 They have therefore grown up in the belief that trees cannot grow in this humid, windswept land, apart from a few, carefully nurtured and modest specimens in urban yards.
 In the last few years, however, it has been demonstrated that certain strains of northern species — particularly from Alaska — thrive in Iceland, and some small stands have taken hold. Heartened by the experience, Chief-Forester-Hakon Bjarnason, recently placed a bulk order for sitka spruce seed.

 The prospect is for a transformation of the currently treeless Icelandic landscape. Probably more than any man, Bjarnason is responsible for this. In 1925 he became the country's second holder of the forestry post and he feels that, at last, the tide has turned in favor of rebirth of Iceland's forests.

 He points out that, when the Vikings came in the 9th century, 80 per cent of the vegetated land of Iceland was covered with the rather scrubby native birch. There were a few species of willow, but otherwise whatever tree species once grew here had been wiped out by the ice ages and, in view of the island's remoteness, had not returned.
 Because the birches provided fuel and, to a limited extent, building material, they were increasingly depleted. But, in Bjarnason's view, the real disaster began when the king of Spain sent some knitted wool garments to Henry VIII of England. This gave birth to the woolen textile industries of Britain and the Netherlands, and led to a pressing demand for wool.

 The forests of the Scottish highlands and the rolling slopes of Iceland gave way to pasturage and today sheep rule the landscape. Fences are rare and limits on the pasturing land non-existent, according to Bjarnason. Consequently, a baby tree has little hope unless the area is fenced off; but that is costly.

So far, close to 200 miles of fence have been built to protect tree plantations amounting to some 6,000 acres. This is but a small start in a land where 14,000 square miles become green in spring. The other half of the country is either covered with ice or too lofty and stark for vegetation.
 As a result of overgrazing, Bjarnason has written, "few countries have suffered such a vast desolation. About one-half of the primary fertile soil has been swept away by wind erosion and the remainder is many-times-less-fertile than before."

Man tumbles down cliff

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Daniel Baker, who tumbled down a 50-foot cliff while hiking along a steep trail in Griffith Park, shouted for help for four days.
 No one heard him until Tuesday, when a woman detected his faint shouts drifting from the hills behind her home near the park.
 Mrs. Francis X. Olanie Jr., her son, Andrew, 20, and a neighbor clambered 300 yards up a steep fire trail and found Baker swallowed up in thick, tall grass.
 "The grass was so thick," she said, "we couldn't see him until we were standing right over him."
 Baker, 32, said he fell down the cliff Saturday.
 A Fire Department crew rescued Baker and took him to Hollywood — Presbyterian Hospital. Doctors said he was suffering from exposure, shock and a broken arm.

Shale energy pushed

DENVER (UPI) — A confidential Interior Department report indicates that the agency favors pushing ahead with oil shale development at all possible speeds, even to the point of losing more federal leases four years before results of the current study program are known.

The suggestion is contained in a draft report prepared by Interior's Interagency Oil Shale Task Force to be submitted to the Federal Energy Administration (FEA).

The report says that it has been prepared in all phases of the energy question and the final energy overview will be used to draw up a blueprint for President Nixon's Operation Independence.

Project Independence is designed to make the United States independent of all foreign energy by 1980.

The Interior Department earlier this year put up for bid six prototype oil shale tracts, two each in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming. The Wyoming tracts failed to attract any bidders.

Major oil companies are to begin developing those tracts and complete practical oil shale technology by 1978.

But the Interior report indicates that future shale tracts may have to be put up for bid in 1976, four years before the results of the current study program are available.

The report also says the current 5,120-acre limitation on tract size may have to be relaxed to encourage development of shale resources in states such as Wyoming where deposits are not so rich.

Another incentive suggested in the report would be creation of a purchase agreement with the federal government, under which the government would buy oil produced from shale at an agreed-on price regardless of what the international oil market did.

VP presents 7 medals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a somber outdoor ceremony, Vice President Gerald R. Ford presented the medal of honor Wednesday to the families of seven fallen and six Army men who died in acts of heroism in Vietnam.

"These seven Americans," Ford said in his first presentation of the medal, "showed not only sacrifice, but valor, to their countrymen. For such conspicuous bravery and selfless devotion, there is presented posthumously, on behalf of the Congress of the United States, the Medal of Honor."

Shannon Bowen, 6, of Tampa, Fla., was one of those who was awarded the nation's highest military award. Standing erect in a white dress with a white sash, she was presented the gold star with its blue ribbon for her father who was killed when he threw himself on a grenade on June 27, 1969.

Patti Loggiate of Pittsburgh sobbed quietly as she received the award for her brother who died July 19, 1969 while protecting the evacuation of a wounded man under intense enemy fire.

Health board elects officers

TWIN FALLS — Members of the South Central Health District board re-elected the chairman, vice chairman and one director whose term expired in the July meeting Wednesday.

William J. Chaney, Twin Falls County representative, was re-elected to another term as board chairman, and Clyde Peterson, Wendell, Gooding County member, was re-elected vice chairman.

John Clark, Cassia County, veteran board member, was re-appointed for another five-year term. Chaney said the appointment "has been approved by county commissioners in all eight counties of the district."

Chaney, an environmentalist, told the health board most of the 60 swimming pools in the district which are considered public pools are complying with district and state regulations.

Chaney has been working most of May, June and July to contact pool operators and owners where the public is permitted to swim. He said in all areas but Blaine County, nearly all of the pools have upgraded safety and water quality to meet requirements for health department permits.

In Blaine County, he said, there are 25 pools that permit consideration as public pools and only 7 of these departments. He said there is a difference of opinion as to "public" classification among some of the pool owners.

He said where the pools are in use in connection with condominiums in which the units are available for rent the department considers them public and is asking they meet requirements.

In many cases the owners consider these "private" pools and "have declined to cooperate," Chaney said. In some cases, he said, the pools have not been revisited and this number of pools qualifying for permits will increase when he has had time to make another visit.

In Twin Falls County, he said, there are 22 public pools, with 19 now holding permits. In Cassia County, the count is 9 pools, with 7 qualified for permits. Gooding, Jerome and Lincoln counties have 5 pools and all are under permit, he said.

Cochraner told the health board this is part of a three-year program by the district to standardize swimming pool regulations under a permit system. He said in the first year — the program is concentrating on suitable safety equipment and procedure and on water quality.

Tests are made each one to two weeks at all larger pools, he said. In addition the environmentalists are checking swimming "areas," he said. These include Dierkes Lake, he said, and similar areas where pool facilities are not available but where the public gathers for swimming.

Emerald Lake in Minidoka County is one of these. This classification and water tests have been taken and safety equipment and lifeguards checked for safety qualifications.

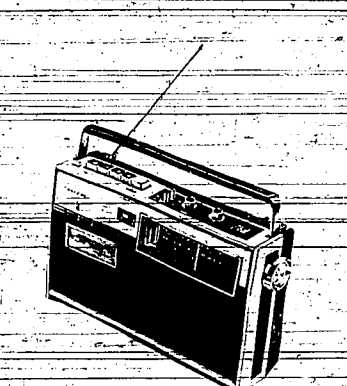

Dr. Wayne Carle reported the parking lots behind the 1000' Hall and behind the doctor's offices just east of the health district building are now available for parking.

He said this leaves 14 spaces, including 8 for health district patrons to use. The others are reserved to employees to help pay the $75 per month for rental of the parking behind the office of Dr. David Crossdale.

Lincoln seniors given free tests

SHOSHONE — Senior Citizens in Lincoln County may receive blood-pressure and diabetes tests free of a clinic sponsored by the Senior Citizen's organization at 10 a.m. Monday.

Mrs. Farrell Caraway, coordinator of the organization, said the diabetes tests will be given upon request that day.

Registered nurses, Mrs. Dorothy Alexander and Mrs. Sandra Moon, will be present to handle the tests, which will be given at the Senior Citizen Center of North Hall Street.

Mrs. Caraway also announced a special activity for senior citizens July 28.

The Lincoln County Search and Rescue unit, provide transportation and sponsor a fishing outing. Fleets will be near Buhl. There will be no charge to the senior citizens. The rescue unit will pay any fishing fees.

Mrs. Caraway said those attending are to take a covered dish 2nd table service and fishing pole and tackle if they have them. The poles and tackle will be furnished for those without any.

A golf course is nearby and participants should take their golf clubs if they wish to golf. For those wishing to not golf, she said "they may just relax and visit in the shade."

Everyone planning to attend should call Mrs. Caraway in the evening at 886-7740.

They will leave as a group at 4 p.m. and return by 9 p.m.

Coffee, punch, sugar, cream, juice and cups will be provided.

Filer cheerleaders rate high

FILER — The Filer High School Varsity cheerleaders came home from a cheerleading workshop in Utah with a handful of ribbons and a trophy for excellence.

The five-day workshop was held at Logan, Utah, and attended by more than 800 cheerleaders from schools in the United States. The sessions were directed by the National Cheerleaders Association.

The Filer cheerleaders included Cynthia Hoke, Jeanne Anderson, Phyllis Ramseyer, Linda Johnson and Tammy Stinson. During the four days of evaluation they won two superior ribbons, an excellent ribbon and an outstanding ribbon. On the final day of competition they won a trophy for excellence.

Junior varsity members who attended the workshop included Carol Vincent, Kim Blass, Susie Schweitzer and Paula Pierce. They won a blue, two red and one white ribbons.

Panel recommends banning nitrates

(C) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — An expert panel on nitrates and nitrites has advised the Department of Agriculture to restrict and in some cases ban these additives.

The preliminary recommendations are expected to be presented in final form at the panel's next meeting in September.

They are of concern that these chemical additives may be converted into cancer-causing compounds once in the human digestive tract. Animal studies have demonstrated this possibility.

In addition, traces of these cancerous compounds have been found in some foods to which nitrates or nitrites were added.

These food additives are widely used in processed meats including hot dogs, sausages, hams, bacon and luncheon meats.

The Department of Agriculture authorizes the use of nitrates and nitrites to impart a reddish color to cured meats, which would otherwise be greyish. Several consumer groups have petitioned for a ban on the additives.

Department and industry scientists maintain that the additives act as preservatives and prevent the growth of deadly bacterial bacteria. However, their use has not been authorized on the basis of the presumed preservative effect.

The department's advisory panel, which consists of five scientists from industry, universities and government, heard testimony from experts in various aspects of food and chemistry.

At their third meeting in Washington Monday, the panel recommended that nitrates be banned from use in most food products.

Preserved sausages, such as salami and bologna, and dried cured products such as country-style hams, are temporarily exempted from the recommendation on nitrates pending additional research findings.

Currently there are no limits on how much nitrate may be added in processed foods, and in some cases thousands of Law would make auto firms fix defects

WASHINGTON — Legislation to require auto makers to fix for free or replace unsafe cars is nearing the end of a long congressional road.

Under current law, the federal government can only declare that a safety-related defect exists and order manufacturers to notify first owners by letter. Companies, however, cannot be compelled to recall vehicles or make repairs free.

Generally, industry practice has been to remedy faulty items without charge. But there have been exceptions, and Congress now seems ready to impose a mandatory feature.

The Senate approved such a plan more than a year ago. The House is expected to vote on a similar measure this month.

Both approaches would oblige manufacturers to notify current owners by mail of any item the secretary of transportation determines to be unsafe. Vehicles would have to be recalled and fixed free of charge.

If they could not be repaired, manufacturers would have the option of replacing the vehicle or item of equipment or refunding purchase price less depreciation.

In 1969, the Senate adopted a proposal similar to the current legislation. The House declined to go along after the auto industry pledged to repair voluntarily all safety-related defects without charge. Since then, however, the industry has balked on several occasions.

The first breach occurred in January 1971, when federal safety officials declared the heaters on all 1968-69 Chevrolet Corvairs leaked poisonous fumes into passenger compartments.

The 600,000 owners of those cars were each asked to bear the cost of the repair — $150-200 per vehicle — with no

Education lowers VD increase

TWIN FALLS — Dr. Wayne B. Carte Wednesday credited an educational program in high schools with at least holding the line on venereal disease increase rate among teenagers in Magic Valley.

He said while VD cases are continuing to increase, the amount of that increase is dropping in the under 20 age group. Thanks to the educational program.

in this course, but it should cover other important aspects of the health as well," Dr. Carte said.

He said he would like to see the school boards look at health education as a possible course for as much as one class a week for students from the first through 12th grades.

Dr. Carte said if it is offered as a sex education class only, it loses the broader values of a total health education program and would be turned down by most school boards because many parents object to sex education.

Sex education is only a part of the program. Few homes teach their children health practices and sex educational matters such as the important venereal disease aspects, Dr. Carte said.

Dr. Carte said if a program went into the school systems today, it would be about 10 years before the real value would begin to show when today's teenagers begin passing the information on to their children.

Dr. Carte also proposed Wednesday some additional means of financing public health services other than ad valorem taxes. Dr. Carte said the change would have to come at the state legislative level and he suggested a meeting with legislators during the September health board session.

Possibilities listed by Dr. Carte for consideration included a district sales tax or a per person assessment on residents rather than property owners only.

Board members voted to invite the legislators of Magic Valley to the September meeting to discuss such a plan.

The next health board meeting will be Aug. 21 at 2 p.m.

Public domain concerns hopeful

TWIN FALLS — Public domain and representation of the working man are the main campaign planks of Democrat John T. Walker.

Walker is running for state representative from district 25.

He is concerned about the loss of public domain lands. "I feel our zoning boards should make certain, when all private or corporate enterprise to buy public land we don't lose access to what we have left," Walker announced.

Walker feels that public domain lands should be protected from private ownership through the use of leases.

Walker believes the working people are not being represented in state or national government. "Let's have a government for all the people not for a selected few," Walker commented.

"I'm forgetting all walks of life, regardless of social standing or size of pocket book, have a fair say in the way the government is run," Walker added.

West Coast cities resist oil drilling

(C) New York Times Service
LOS ANGELES — Seven cities along this coast, haunted by the memory of a massive oil spill in 1969 in Santa Barbara, are preparing to resist what is seen as a unilateral decision in Washington to allow drilling for oil off southern California.

The Nixon administration, as part of its accelerated efforts to find additional sources of domestic energy, is expected to announce this month specific new tracts for offshore drilling along large portions of the southern California coast. Federal waters start three miles off the coastline.

The tracts, consisting of 1.6 million acres that the government reduced from 7.7 million acres, are, in the view of the city officials and coalition of environmental groups here, in the worst possible location.

Blazers drop Wheels for second victory

YPSILANTI, Mich. (UPI) — Tom Reagon slashed over from five yards out with 1:37 to play Wednesday night, giving the Florida Blazers an 18-14 victory over the Detroit Wheels and their second straight success in the World Football League.

More than nine minutes remained and the sparse crowd of 10,631 half of the capacity "erowd" expected seemed certain the Wheels had recorded their inaugural WFL win in their first home game. But quarterback Bob Davis, who played in the shadow of Joe Namath with the New York Jets of the National Football League, finally directed the game-winning drive which consumed nearly half of the final period.

Mira rallies Birmingham past

New York 32-29 in WFL action

NEW YORK (UPI) — Miriamally to a 32-29 victory over New York, stealing the game in the second half Wednesday night.

Chicago secured first when Carter hit running back Mack Keller on a 41-yard screen pass for a touchdown in the opening quarter.

Held without a touchdown in the first half, the Americans overcame a 23-5 deficit as Mira's touchdown strikes of 20 yards Ted Powell and four to

Al Jenkins and a game winner of 63 yards to Dennis Roman with 2:15 remaining. He also ran two yards around right end for Birmingham's other touch-

Sharks nip Fire in last six seconds

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 26-yard field goal by a Chuck Ramsey with six seconds left to play gave the Chicago Fire a 21-20 victory over the Jacksonville Sharks in the new World Football League Wednesday night.

Chicago scored first when Carter hit running back Mack Keller on a 41-yard screen pass for a touchdown in the opening quarter.

Thorton on a 20-yard pass. Chicago tied it again, 22-21, when Keller plunged over after pass interference gave the Fire the ball on the Shark one.

Prior to his second half heroics, it appeared the Stars had the game well in hand after completely dominating the first half for 15:41. I-200 admitted an "excuse" of dilapidated Dowling Stadium.

EYE MAKEUP IMPROVEMENTS

By Mary Sue Miller

Did you know that there are new versions of eye makeup that are truly waterproof? You can swim, splash, get caught in the rain, travel through a heat wave, and your eye makeup won't smudge or fade, crumble or streak. Let's take a gander at these gambits:

Liquid-matic—brown brush-on eyebrow color or lightener. This marvel can make brows look thinner or thicker, darker or lighter, can change fill-in and subdue unruly strands. One dip of the brush in the tube of liquid automatically pre-measures sufficient formula for dust application.

Waterproof mascaras, creamier than ever, will even let you cry during a movie without flaking off. New colors—mahogany and indigo, cocoa and navy—not all made by the same house, so shop around.

Waterproof eye color, an improved name for shadow. Eye colors are available in six pastel sea and sand shades that are delicate and tender, never blinding; freshwater blue, gumamine, sea-side green, Bermuda coral, driftwood and sandy mauve. All in tiny, portable tubes that go-go.

Traveler compact—contains everything a woman needs in the way of eye makeup during a sojourn. Like so—mirror, shadow applicator, three blending shades of shadow, automatic mascara, liner.

What big eyes you have!

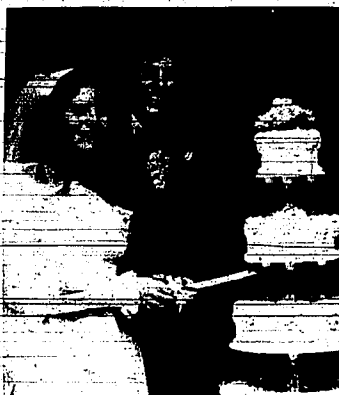

THE EYES OF YOUTH

You are not lost to youthful beauty because of dark circles, puffiness, or wrinkles around the eyes. These problems can be brought under control by newer, skin-care cosmetic applications, health habits and facial exercises. Methods are detailed in my booklet, THE EYES OF YOUTH. To obtain your copy, write Mary Sue Miller in care of this newspaper, enclosing 15 cents in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Abigail Van Buren

1974 BY CHICAGO TRIBUNE; N. WOOD STONE, INC.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and Bill is 21 and we're getting about to marry. My problem is my mother. She doesn't like me and she is always offering Bill's driving services to her friends without asking Bill first. She just calls him and tells him to pick up so-and-so. She also asks him to drive her around and do whatever errands for her. She has never offered to put any gas in Bill's car and with gas so high, it makes a difference.

Bill's problem is he knows he's being taken advantage of, but he doesn't want to take advantage of Bill this way, but it hasn't helped. Any suggestions? BILL'S GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: Tell Bill that when your mother's requests are an imposition, to tell her in a nice way that he can't accommodate her. People who let others take advantage of them are great to go through life being used and manipulated. They may be known as "nice guys," but they're also known as "suckers."

Nice guy or sucker?

DEAR ABBY: To "HAD IT WITH MOM", who visited her mother only occasionally because Mom talked at her, death and hardships present and past. To had we can't just a concept all the contrary old folks to die, death's cause would have to bother with them. Old people complain of "illness" because they are at that stage of their lives when their bodies and minds have begun to deteriorate.

Probably the most frightening thing that happened to Mom was her visit to the doctor's last week.

Old folks talk about "death" because they live at death's door. Their brains are dropping like flies, and death seems so much easier.

They speak of "hardships" present and past, because they are trying to endure present hardships of the past, and they are trying to endure present hardships of the past. My own mother suffers from all the above. You see, I have memories of Momma from when I was a child. Of the love, care, time and tenderness she gave me. What she taught me was more valuable than all I learned in college. There is not one single day that passes that I don't use some of the knowledge that Momma imparted to me.

DEAR DIANNE: You're beautiful.

DEAR ABBY: Please help correct the erroneous idea that most boys "for me" might have eluded down because of their parents.

The fact that most unmarried mothers are keeping their babies does not necessarily mean that no one needs our services anymore. Many unmarried pregnant girls need a quiet place where they can "think" and get counseling and guidance that preaches from people who understand. Delivery of her baby is a small part of her need.

The Salvation Army has 35 Booth Memorial Hospitals around the country that stand ready to serve.

LONDON (UPI) — Argentine-born Juan Henshore disarmed pigeons because they spread disease and made a mess of Trafalgar Square.

That's why, he told the judge, he was stalking them in London's Green Park, with a bow and arrows.

At this point West's blindness really showed up. He did not see that East had made a very unusual play and that he had a chance to win the trick with his 10 spot and lead a club to give East a cut and set the contract. He just let East have the trick.

At this there was no defense. South led a trick to the ace of trumps, but that was all.

There are none so blind as they who will not see. Today's West appears to have been outstanding in that respect. His blindness started with the bidding. He didn't have even one jack in his hand, but he wasn't vulnerable and he did hold 11 cards in two suits and a void in spades.

Probably he should have brought away over South's four-spade bid. Certainly he should have acted after East doubled four spades. A four-trump call at that spot would clearly have asked East to bid a suit. It could not

Couple marries in Boise

BOISE — Deborah Friesz and Kenneth Fischer were married in a 1:30 p.m. ceremony June 29 at St. Paul's Student Center, Boise.

Rev. Perry Dadds, St. Paul's Student Center, performed the double ring ceremony. The chapel was decorated with arrangements of blue and white daisies with baby's breath.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Friesz, Boise, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fischer, Buhl.

The bride wore a gown of white tulle with a white satin with a beige lace trim. The long full sleeves were gathered to wide lace trimmed cuffs. The bodice featured a V of lace and a high standup collar. Lace trimmed the yoked neckline of the gown.

She wore a picture hat with lace trim and an illusion bow and streamer. She carried her mother's pearl mass with a white orchid and white rose bouquet.

Linda Friesz was maid of honor. Susan Moran and Kelley McCray were flower girls. Jim Woods was best man. Ushers were Gary Fischer, Larry Knight and Mike Malloy. Kevin Moran and Brad Malloy, cousins of the bride, were ring boys.

A group of guitarists provided instrumental and vocal music for the ceremony. The couple was honored at a reception following the ceremony at the student center.

Assisting with the reception were Mrs. B. Perrett, Mrs. N. Pringle, Mrs. T. Moran, Mrs. J. McCrory, Mrs. L. Stuchlik, Mrs. R. Hawkins, Shawna Moran and Linda Stuchlik.

Following a wedding trip to McCall and Expo 74 in Spokane, Wash., the couple will live in Boise. Both have attended the College of Southern Idaho for two years and will attend Boise State University this fall. Relatives attended from Twin Falls, Idaho Falls, Buhl, Montana, California, Colorado and Nevada.

Book Review

By MAREDA WRIGHT
Twin Falls Public Library
TWIN FALLS — "Letters of Long Ago," an oral history reprint, is a biography of Agnes Just Reid's sister, Emma Thompson Just, who was a pioneer on the Blackfoot River during the 1870's.

Though the letters are fictitious, the incidents are true, written as if Emma wrote them to her father, George Thompson, who lived in England.

One of the highlights in Emma's life was the territorial episode. The officers at Fort Hall invited the settlers within a 60-mile radius to dance with the people at the post.

tended the children at home. The music was good, and everyone from the valley was there, delighted with each other's company.

While they danced and talked, alcohol began to flow and at midnight Emma could see that an all-night affair was in progress. She was anxious to go home, but her neighbor that had brought her was too drunk to drive. At 2 a.m. Emma and her husband walked in, and she fled for home like Cinderella.

The letters are vivid descriptions of the hardships these people endured. During this 20-year span, Emma gave birth to 10 children; 4 dying in infancy.
