Fragile Cyprus cease-fire holding today

Out $5 million?

By United Press International
A fragile Cyprus cease-fire brought Greece and Turkey back from the brink of war appeared to be holding today, despite occasional shooting. But months of hard negotiations lay ahead, observers said, before there can be any final solution to the aged strife between Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

U.N. peacekeeping troops reported sporadic firing between Turkish soldiers and Greek Cypriots forces in the mountain enclave of the Turkish invasion spearheads east and west of Kyrenia. Despite the Declaration of Geneva agreement that became effective at 10 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT) Tuesday.

"All is quiet generally but there has been some sporadic firing around the enclave," a U.N. spokesman said.

Provisional President Glafkos Clerides protested to the United Nations after today that Turkish invasion forces had broken the cease-fire agreement by moving troops into new positions in the Kyrenia district.

The commander of the U.N. peace-keeping force, Maj. Gen. Prem Chand of India, is "looking into the matter," a U.N. spokesman said.

"Observation up to 12:30 (4:30 a.m. EDT) today we have received no reports of shooting on the island," the spokesman said.

He said Red Cross officials had now taken over control of relief-convoys carrying food, water and medical supplies to both Greek and Turkish communities. Turkish troops earlier blocked U.N. efforts to supply the refugees.

U.N. officials on Cyprus appealed today for immediate reinforcements to police the truce, and the Security Council was expected to debate the issue today. The U.N. troops on Cyprus were there only to keep peace between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots, not to occupy two armies.

The Soviet Union, which wields veto power in the Security Council, has not said whether it will go along with the agreement worked out in Geneva by the foreign ministers of Greece, Turkey and Britain. In the past it has insisted the council must not authorize the use of force.

The agreement called for a cease-fire in place, creation of a security zone between Greek and Turkish forces to be manned by U.N. troops and the return of prisoners of war by both sides. Greece and the threes of replacing its military junta with a new civilian government negotiated from weakness as a result, and Turkey gained nearly everything it demanded.

The agreement recognizes the existence of two autonomous administrations on Cyprus, bringing into effect a de facto partition of the island which many world powers have objected to.

In London, British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said the three-party Cyprus agreement brought Greece and Turkey "back from the brink of war" but was "just the beginning" of peace.

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Constitutional Convention adjourned early today without agreeing on a new document after seven months of work at a cost of $5 million.

According to the rules of the convention, two-thirds of 121 of the delegates had to approve any proposed charter. In a final vote, 118 delegates voted for passing the latest revision, 62 voted against and one delegate abstained.

The impasse resulted because of a struggle between labor and business leaders over a right to work law. Labor voted to defeat any constitution that elevated right to work a prohibition against union shops from a statute to constitutional law.

Labor leaders who packed the convention gallery for the final night of debate whooped and cheered when the vote was announced.

Inmate snoozes through bomb threat deadline

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Fred Gomez Carrasco, who threatened to blow up a woman hostage with a bomb unless Texas prison officials gave him six bullet-proof vests, let the inmate pass today. His only act was to order pastry and fruit juices for breakfast.

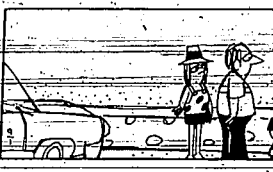

"He acted as if he was somewhat groggy from sleep," prison spokesman Ron Taylor said of the dazed, awakened by a telephone call at 7:05 a.m. EDT — five minutes after his bomb deadline.

The state penitentiary was tense but quiet. Prison officials denied the latest demands by Carrasco, who with two convict confederates had his headquarters at a room in the prison library for the eighth day.

Negotiations between the convict and prison officials were held throughout the day.

"The first contact was made with Carrasco at 8:05 a.m. CDT," Taylor said. "Request for bulletproof vests was made. Pastry and juice were the order — newspapers and records made by Carrasco the night before was made during the day's first talks. It was completely ignored," Taylor said.

Carrasco had said if the vests — two each for himself and his two accomplices — were not passed to his fortress inside the prison library, he would kill one of his men captives, Taylor said, adding, "He was very excited" Tuesday night.

Washington (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) accused Ford and Chrysler today of making false claims of fuel economy in advertisements for their cars during the height of the gasoline shortage last winter.

The agency said a similar complaint was made against General Motors but the company had signed an agreement pledging to discontinue such advertising.

Chrysler and Ford are fighting the complaints against them.

The FTC said Ford had no reasonable basis for claiming that its 1974-75 Lincoln Continental coupe could get 26.6 miles per gallon from the Mercury Comet, 32.4 miles per gallon from the Mercury Capri, 28.3 miles per gallon from the Mustang II or 27.7 miles per gallon from the Ford Maverick.

The Chrysler complaint alleged that the company made false comparisons for its small cars with the Chevrolet Nova. The FTC said some Nova got better fuel mileage than some Chrysler cars and the firm erred in making a sweeping comparison.

In the General Motors case, a particularly sweeping agreement prohibits the country's biggest auto producer from making deceptive fuel economy claims for any of its cars and from taking down its competitors in terms of their fuel economy.

Humphrey's former aide accused

WASHINGTON — The special Watergate prosecutor's office charged Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's former press secretary today with having helped a large milk cooperative, illegal contributions to candidates of the Minnesota Democrat and others.

The charges, filed in a 10-page indictment, are worth $1,000 and a year in jail, was filed in federal district court in St. Paul, Minn., against Norman Sherman, who worked for Humphrey when he was vice president, and John Valentine, a political scientist who was Sherman's partner in a computer-services concern.

The action by a criminal information is a misdemeanor equivalent to an indictment in a felony, was announced in Washington by the special prosecutor, Henry S. Byrd.

The action followed the indictment of former secretary of the treasury John B. Connally on charges of accepting illegal contributions in the same milk cooperative and with perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

"Thus in two days the prosecutor has investigated of milk funds, generated by President Nixon's decision in 1971 to raise milk-prize supports, reached high into Republican and Democratic camps.

Hansens quarrel about use of campaign funds

By DIANE MARSHALL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Orval Hansen is breaking an Idaho precedent by using funds raised for a "congressional campaign" for use in a primary, his primary election opponent George Hansen, charged Tuesday.

The funds in question are proceeds from a two-evening testimonial dinner at which Sor. Howard H. Baker Jr. was guest speaker. The dinner was held Nov. 16 to raise money for Orval Hansen's congressional campaign.

The primary election is that money raised in similar situations has been held for use in the general election, rather than using funds for a campaign against a member of the same party, George Hansen said.

The invitation letter sent to those attending the dinner says the money will be used for "continuation for Republican representative of our second congressional district." The letter went on to say "The money raised from the sale of the tickets for the use during the 1974 congressional campaign."

Orval Hansen confirmed that the money is being used in the primary.

George Hansen pointed out that a congressional campaign was a race between Republican and Democratic parties and that the money was not being used for "continuation for Republican representative" because both candidates in the primary race are of the same party.

"The money should not be used against other Republicans," Hansen said. According to Marjorie Miller, past chairman of the executive board of the Republican party, there had been no "hard and fast ruling" on the policy of using money raised in this manner. She said it was "traditional" that the money be held until the general election and until the question of ethics rather than legality.

George Hansen said that in an earlier campaign, a testimonial dinner was held in his honor with Gov. Ronald L. Evans as the guest speaker. Hansen said he was told by the Republican executive committee that the money raised was not to be used until the general election. An earlier precedent also was set by Gov. Samuelson in a similar situation in which former vice president Spiro Agnew spoke at a fund-raising dinner, George Hansen said. These funds, too, were held for use in the general election.

Len B. Jordan, former Idaho senator and co-chairman of the Twin Falls dinner, said Monday the dinner was sponsored by the re-election committee for Orval Hansen. Jordan said the money was raised to "meet the challenges of a campaign whether they be in the primary or in the general campaigns."

Treasurer for the dinner, Curtis Eaton, Twin Falls, said "the money was raised for Orval's campaign." When asked if the money could be used for the primary, Eaton answered, "I can't answer that. I'll have to refer you to Orval's offices in Boise and Idaho Falls."

At the money raised was being used in his campaign against George Hansen. He added that he "would probably go for seating aside money of anyone who did buy a ticket to the dinner that thought the money would not be used until the general campaign."

Candidate Jim Stoicheff has car problems

Stoicheff advocates taxation on land use

TWIN FALLS — Large property owners should shoulder a bigger tax burden in Idaho, according to Jim Stoicheff, Democratic candidate for state superintendent of public instruction.

Stoicheff, 46, Sandpoint, Tuesday, said "I don't make sense" that a homeowner who property doesn't generate income should be taxed at the same rates commercial businesses and utilities.

He advocated a class taxation — taxing land according to its uses — with higher rates for commercial and utility interests.

Stoicheff, a state senator for six years, said the tax shift "might be accomplished by exempting the first $10,000 worth of property from taxation and raising taxes on everything over that figure."

"A guy with a $50,000 home or guy with a dam or coal mine would be paying a bigger share and I think they should be," Stoicheff said.

He also offered a solution to teachers' school district salary negotiations in Idaho.

An agreement that 70 per cent of the school district's maintenance and operation budget be spent on teacher salaries each year would eliminate the need for bargaining, Stoicheff said.

"Most districts are close to 70 per cent now," he said.

But "I could never see any reason for going over 70 per cent," Stoicheff added. He said Idaho teachers are underpaid but "you've got to keep in mind that a quarter of the families in Idaho have incomes under $3,000."

Stoicheff, a former teacher, principal and athletic coach, also said public kindergarten funding should be offered by the state but setting up the lot classes should be a "local option" of the school districts.

"Votes in the legislature each session allocate a sharp division in the state" over kindergartens, he said. "We should provide money for the local districts and let them decide whether to spend it for kindergartens, vocational education or others."

— the false claim that he has a doctoral degree from the University of Wyoming, listed in an Idaho League of Women Voters election information pamphlet, was "probably a bona-fide party part."

"Maybe I should have said 'working toward a doctorate,'" in answering the league's questions for the pamphlet, Stoicheff said.

The state superintendent of public instruction should keep a close eye on educational methods and achievement in Idaho. The superintendent should "know what Twin Falls is doing in reading and how well they are doing it," Stoicheff said. If elected, he would "probably ask each district to send in copies of achievement test" results.

— the "ultimate" job of the superintendent "should be to make sure that every kid in the state is made a winner in some way. If you don't have rewards, you don't have production," Stoicheff said. Curriculum should not be so narrow that they prevent students from excelling in one or more areas, he said. More vocational education programs are "definitely" needed, he added.

Privilege tops Nixon victories

(C) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON President Nixon was three far-reaching and historic victories last week. That statement will induce paroxysms of rage and laughter from most reasonable men, who have watched Nixon get pole-axed by the Supreme Court's order to turn over the contents of the taped tapes, and by the Judiciary Committee's overwhelming desire to throw him out of office.

But in the long run history will record three events of the last week to have been overlooked but overriding.
First, the busing victory. The issue of busing has become an achilles' heel of Nixon's public schools was one of the great liberal versus conservative battles of our time. Nixon's position was that the decision to end enforced segregation was right and the decision to force integration was wrong.

Each one of Nixon's four appointments to the court agreed with the President's basic position on busing. Last week the civil rights of a long-oppressed minority were checked by a judicial recognition of the civil rights of the majority.

Second, the victory of "Nixonomics." When Nixon entered office, his economic policy was to move from a wartime economy to a peacetime economy without causing unemployment, gradually restrain demand and encourage production, choosing a middle way between government controls and Laissez-faire unconcern.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

When inflation and the threat of recession at home in an election year caused Nixon to abandon his economic faith, he took a bold, decisive action, and succeeded only in proving that price and wage controls in peacetime cause shortages and aggravate the causes of inflation.

Last week, he returned to the "unpopular conventional wisdom" on the budget, with irritatingly high interest rates.
The third, and to him the most important victory, was in the first cleared assertion by the Supreme Court that the confidentiality of a president's discussions was "constitutionally rooted."

Before that decision, the President withheld a promise of compliance for two reasons; one, noted here, was to gain public credit for respecting the rule of law, and the other was to give the chief justice some bargaining chips within the court. Nobody wanted a confrontation, and so, as a face-saver to history, the court gave the President a principle of what Nixon likes to call "executive privilege."

Future presidents, with the ghost of Nixon nodding approvingly over their shoulders, will be urged to be decisive to mean that "need to protect military, diplomatic or sensitive national security secrets" gives the chief executive the privilege of withholding anything from even the in-camera inspection of a federal judge.

Anybody who thinks that is not a victory for Nixon is allowing impeachment fever to cloud his judgment.

Unlike his other two victories of last week, his winning of national security privilege is a dark victory.
All of which is why the President is not so crazy to detect silver linings in the events of the last seven days, even though pessimists can point out that for every silver lining there is a large, black cloud.

Groppi marching

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — The Rev. James E. Groppi is marching again.

Groppi, who made headlines in his civil rights battles in the late 1960s, and eight others Monday picketed the Eagles Club where the 70th annual national convention of the Eagles is being held.

There are no blacks in this club and we don't accept that policy of letting nonmembers have exclusionary clauses," Groppi told newsmen.

A Thought

A thought for the day: General of the Army Douglas MacArthur said, "In war, there is no substitute for victory."

'SCAT! AN INDICTMENT IS NOT A CONVICTION, AND I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT ANY MILK!'

Strategy for procedure suggested

It's a matter of days and hours, and still there is no apparent Republican strategy.

Strategy directed at the following objectives listed in the order of their importance: 1) Spare the American people a reversal of the 1972 presidential election by an overwhelming election of Democrats to Congress; 2) Assist Republican candidates running for reelection and turn, by conscience and by practical political considerations, by the necessity of having to vote for or against impeachment of G. W. Richard Nixon, while he still has the opportunity to effect arrangements, the opportunity to give precedent to whether he took executive power beyond the lengths contemplated by the founders of the Constitution.

Worse than the fact that Congress will be agreed on a chronology. As things now stand, up front are the personal derelictions of Richard Nixon allegedly seven at the last count. Behind that are his abuse of executive power allegedly eight times, at last count. Now it would not be a great matter to reverse the order of these two major divisions so that what the Senate would be given to discuss would be in the first instance the Constitutional points.

It having been established to the satisfaction of all realists that the House of Representatives will indeed vote for impeachment, attention is directed toward the dissenters, in particular the Republican dissenters. They share the spotlight with the Republicans who will vote impeachment and return to their constituents to try to survive the Coventry into which they will be put by the Nixon loyalists.

JAMES RESTON

Now a possible strategy looms. If, on the eve of the vote, President Nixon were to say something that would reduce as follows:

"Tonight I am addressing myself to the Republican members of the House of Representatives. Gentlemen, the House is resolved that 'questions have been raised concerning my conduct of the Presidency, and will accordingly vote impeachment."

"I am confident that as regards my own ethical conduct I shall in due course satisfy the Senate that I behaved properly."

"But I consider that events have crystallized grave questions unanswered by the Constitution.

As you know, I lost a position different from that of the Supreme Court on executive privilege. As you know, I acted on my own initiative to defend the national security during the years 1969, '70 and '71.

"It is the feeling of the majority of this body that I exceeded the authority granted to me by the Constitution. The only effective instrument for settling this question is the impeachment process."

"I shall vigorously defend my own position in the Senate, but this is not the time to put forward those arguments."

"But meanwhile, I urge you to join me in the effort to elevate the spirit of this proceeding to genuine Constitutional inquiry — by voting unanimously for impeachment on the first count."

"I do not believe that any such vote commits any representative to more than agreeing that the majority of his colleagues are resolved to take the matter to the Senate and that under the circumstances in order to make the Senate's mandate clearer, the House will vote — with my blessing — unanimously."

"If the Senate, taking up the first series of charges, proceeds to vote against Nixon, he stops being President as of that moment. And the other articles of the impeachment go untransacted."

Congress' turn for trial comes next

(C) New York Times Service

The question is now up to the House, but one thing is clear — somebody is obviously going to be impeached: The President, the Congress, or the American ideal.

The President, the courts, and the press have had their turn. Now: The Congress.

The closer President Nixon comes to impeachment, the louder his supporters proclaim his innocence and predict his coming victory on Capitol Hill.

This is an understandable but probably comforting fantasy. It is a strategy of optimistic forecasts and dreadful forebodings; if you say he is innocent often enough, maybe you can make prevention it has to set the precedent of impeaching and convicting Nixon, or the precedent of excusing his record, and deciding that a President beyond reasonable doubt to be a crook.

There is some force to the argument that "fixed terms" of four years for an American president gives stability to the system and that he cannot be sacked for frivolous reasons. But there is little danger that we will have another White House gang like this one and it is probably no great danger that the republic will establish the precedent of getting rid of them if we do.

Finally, the stability of the American system has survived, though presidents do not always complete their "fixed terms." The system made provision for human frailty and death, even for murder, of which we have had more than our share, but the system goes on.

It is really a little hard to be asked by President Nixon and his supporters to believe that he is essential to the strength and integrity of the presidency, since he has done so much to weaken it. But this is the Congress now to decide, and it seems as if it's beginning to get the point.

the people believe it. And if it is impeached and convicted, somehow mortal damage will be done to the stability of the American system of government.

Well, we have all had it dug out in our minds about all this, but the stability of the American political system surely rests on something more than "fixed terms." It rests primarily on the fixed principles of the law, on the integrity of its people, and on the examples of its leaders.

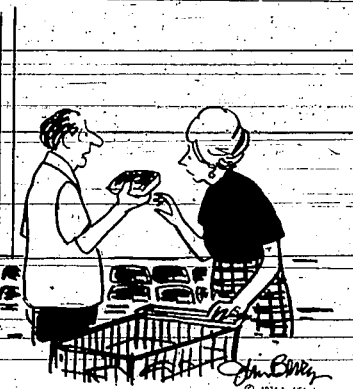

The outcome of this nightmarish of lawlessness and hideous stupidities will break our hearts if we end by convicting Vice President Agnew for fiddling with his income — look and excuse President Nixon for trifling with our freedom and our lives.

We have been spending our days in Washington pawing over the intrigues of little men, and a lot of people are now thumbing through the law books looking for loopholes, but everybody is not trying to be so shrewd and clever and calculating. There are echoes of the moral foundations of the nation in the televised Judiciary committee debates. At least some Republican Congressmen seem to remember that Nixon's appeal to the "silent majority" was essentially a cry for law and morality.

(Besides, the Congress has to decide some

BERRY'S WORLD

"I've got an idea! Let's go on a hunger strike!"

Rabin's quiet strength may be Israel's need

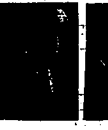

TEL AVIV — Only hours after seven Itzhak Rabin became Israel's first native-born prime minister on June 3, his political enemies found a confrontation.

They sent a 70-man contingent to plant a new settlement near the west bank (Palestinian) city of Nablus. What made the test particularly hairy for Rabin was that Gen. Ezer Weizman, hero of the Yom Kippur war and a major figure in the oppositionist Likud party, placed himself at the head of the march.

Rabin met the challenge head-on. Lacking time, he ordered the army to disperse the settlers. Rabin's swift reaction launched his premier ship on a bold and decisive note.

Rabin needed such a launching. He is probably the only prime minister in a modern parliamentary government anywhere to take office without political experience, without having conducted a debate in the legislature and without an inner core of advisers and confidants.

Washington yet; Rabin, who served as ambassador to Washington after commanding Israeli troops in the 1967 war, inherits leadership of a party in a confrontation.

EVANS AND NOVAK

an advanced state of disorganization and a government that under Golda Meir was run by a kitchen cabinet.

And only joined the Labor party four years ago and only entered the Knesset (parliament) after last December's election. Add to this Israel's grave problems and the formidable dimension of Rabin's task can be seen.

Yet, since he took office with his "enlightened majority of a single vote in the 120-member" Knesset, Rabin's directness and honesty and his total lack of theatrics and political guile have served him not at all badly.

The divided state of his foes has helped. "You can't judge Rabin," one Labor party stalwart told us, "unless you first look at his opposition."

That opposition, centered in Sharon's Likud party, is undergoing even worse strains of disorganization than the Labor party as it too seeks to transfer party power to the new generation.

minister Joshu Palamovich marked Rabin's most important parliamentary test yet.

Touché. He is moving with extreme caution on the Arab-Israeli issue — perhaps partly because he came to the premiership with a dovish reputation, partly because he is a slow mover, fastidious about detail, and still uncertain of his own power and prestige.

Critics charge Rabin with moving too slowly more like a caretaker government than a fresh regime bursting with confidence. But that's Rabin's style. Moreover, exuberance may not be what Israel wants in this time of trying to come to grips with how it can permanently fit into the Arab Middle East without more war.

Inexpressibly shy and reserved, Rabin's beginning to feel his way in the strange new world of high politics. His quiet strength may be the tone for a land in transition.

Dear Twin Falls television viewing public:
I, for one, am sick and tired of turning my television set on every programming advertisement on certain channels, not only by these channels themselves, but also by certain television magazines advertising these programs at such a time of day and on a certain day of the week, only to find that our local television station has "first rights" in this viewing area and the program I wished to watch is another channel of my choice was started one hour earlier and therefore I have missed half of that particular program like I'm not watching it at all.

per month by choice, my choice as a free citizen of these United States of America. My choice because I'm willing to pay this amount for the alternative viewing offered by this cable service, my choice because I own my television set and in that respect, I should have "choice control" of it, not the local television station. As a taxpaying citizen, I want to know — what gives Channel 11 the right to determine whether or not I wish to watch certain programs at 6:30 p.m. on their station or indeed, I would rather watch that same program at 7 p.m. or even 8 p.m. on another channel. If that be my choice?

Does channel 11 pay the $6 service fee for the cable service I enjoy? Not of course not! As long as this service is offered and a citizen is willing to pay for it, shouldn't that citizen be able to enjoy it at the time of day one desires?
Choice? Black out channel 11 in my home completely.

Food stamp misuse hit

Editor, Times-News:
"I thought I had seen almost everything — but — Thursday morning while in a business house in Italy a hippie — type fellow about 25 years of age came in and asked the manager, "Is this the place you buy food stamps?"

Our country is sure getting in a sad state when a young husky, apparently healthy fellow like this — about 6 feet tall and weighing about 180 pounds — can get on the relief rolls.

"No, he didn't need relief, he 45 just a moocher who is too damned lazy to earn his own way. These food stamps are not meant for characters like him, they are meant for the needy and I sure don't have any beef if they are put in the right place.

I think it is high time our government officials got off their duffs and put a stop to these things and I also hope someone besides myself has gumption enough to express his or her opinion.

It is getting to look like the hippie has the "ace in the hole" and you and I are paying the bill.
Let's all tell them to get off their lazy duffs and get to work and leave the food stamps to the people who rightfully need them.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Neuralgia explained

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you explain what neuralgia is? What is the treatment? How long does it last? Can it cause insanity? Does it happen mostly to the elderly? — Mrs. A.M.

I've gathered that a good neuralgia is, and don't know why it is not the same as neuritis.

Both, of course, are painful. Both have to do with nerve trunks. The difference is this: neuritis is infection of a nerve; the nerve itself is diseased.

Neuralgia differs in that the nerve itself is not diseased, but is affected by some condition outside the nerve. One common form is sciatica, in which the sciatic nerve is painful because of pressure at the root of the nerve. Although the pain of sciatica is felt mostly in the backs of the upper legs, and sometimes in the buttocks or lower hip region, the trouble originates at the spine where the sciatic nerve exists from the spinal column.

Other forms of neuralgia are tic douloureux, in which a facial nerve is affected, and intercostal neuralgia involving nerves in the region of the ribs. This can follow an attack of shingles.

Neuralgia does not cause insanity, neither does it happen mostly with the elderly. It can develop at any age. Treatment involves correcting the cause. And, sadly, the cause in some instances is hard to track down — as in tic douloureux in which the treatment is primarily applied to controlling the pain by cutting or paralyzing the nerve, or by powerful medication.

House panel votes third impeachment article, rejects 2 others

The third article was only narrowly approved for several reasons. Some of its opponents, including Rallsback of Illinois, felt that the committee should have gone to court for the tapes as Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski did.

Some felt that this was too narrow an argument for impeachment in itself and should have been included in article two as another instance of alleged abuse of power. It had originally been part of this article but was detached and made a separate article to win McCleary's vote.

The pro-impeachment majority felt it was worth making this gesture to win over the second-ranking Republican on the committee, who had originally played a partisan role in the lengthy committee investigation.

"He had served as a de facto spokesman for the Republican minority since Edward Hutchinson, the ranking Republican, was reluctant to take the responsibility for conducting Republican caucuses and co-ordinating strategy when Hutchinson was hospitalized for minor surgery. He played a prominent role in the decision of Nixon advisors on the committee to remove Albert Jenner, the Chicago lawyer, from his position as minority counsel when it became clear that Jenner along with Joan Doar, the majority counsel, favored the President's impeachment.

But McCleary's views shifted sharply. He confided to reporters, last Wednesday when he began putting together his opening remarks for the committee debate that began that night.

"I came to the conclusion that I just could not condone this way of operating the office of the presidency," he said.

McCleary voted against Article One because he did not feel there was enough evidence to support the charge of obstruction of justice and cover-up.

But he joined the majority on Article Two on the grounds that the President had violated his oath of office by failing to take care that the laws be faithfully executed. This article charged, among other things, that the President misused the FBI and violated citizens' constitutional rights through unlawful wiretaps.

It also charged that the president attempted to misuse the Internal Revenue Service to obtain discriminatory income tax audits.

The President's defenders on the committee, led by Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, (R-Calif.) who comes from Nixon's home town of Whittier, Calif., argued generally that the charges against Nixon either were not proved or were not impeachable offenses.

Two other articles of impeachment were considered by the committee Tuesday before it concluded its labors. It rejected them both by 26-12 votes.

It voted down, 26 to 12, a proposal by Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., a proposed article that the President be impeached for the secret bombing raids carried out in Cambodia beginning in 1969.

Nine Democrats, including Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., voted against the article.

The other proposed article, offered by Rep.

Edward Mezvinsky, D-Iowa, would have recommended impeaching the President for alleged fraud in his income tax returns and for allegedly illegal government expenditures to improve his personal properties at San Clemente and Key Biscayne.

Nine Democrats also joined against this article although Rodino voted for it.

The next step in the impeachment process, before the House Rules Committee to meet and decide how it will be handled.

Among the questions to be resolved will be whether the House proceedings will be televised, whether the members will be allowed to try to amend the impeachment articles, and how much time will be allotted for the debate.

Rules Committee Chairman Ray J. Madden (D-Ind.) said, in an interview, that he planned to call an informal meeting to discuss these questions before they are brought up later at a formal meeting of the committee.

He said it should be noted that Nixon's close friend, C. G. Hoban, took the $500,000 out of a bank in June of 1972 through four separate checks and four separate accounts in one day.

"We've heard of laundering money in the Watergate matter," she continued, "and I would suggest that this bears a strong resemblance to that."

After Ms. Holtzman concluded, Sandman asked committee counsel John M. Doar, "In view of what the gentle lady from New York has said, where do we stand in regard to libel—are we imputing from that?" Doar said he thought so.

"I think I presented this as fairly as I could," Rep. Holtzman said. "I think by casting aspersions on my integrity, Mr. Sandman is casting aspersions on the integrity of the committee, and the committee should resent his remarks."

whip, to attend the meeting, he said. His purpose is to try to "get an agreement on procedure" that there will be no partisanship on this issue when the measures get to the House floor.

Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill., a pioneer leader in a move to have the floor debate televised, told a reporter he is hopeful that his proposal, which now has 105 signatures will be adopted.

"He thought his cause had been advanced, he said, by the sense of pride" which house members feel over the way their colleagues on the Judiciary committee conducted themselves during their televised sessions.

Madden agreed with him on the success of the project. "It was in Minnesota last weekend," he said, "and all they talked about were the televised hearings—I think they have given the American public a terrific education."

But one problem with which Madden is wrestling is how to keep the floor debate to a limit of two weeks, the leadership's goal, and still have time to do the necessary work.

Noting that there are 435 members in the House, he said "we could be here until Thanksgiving" unless some form of debate limitation is agreed to.

Democrats lose hot fight over Nixon income taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—After two hours of the bitter partisan bickering, Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee failed late Tuesday night to win approval for an article of impeachment charging that President Nixon fraudulently evaded more than $400,000 in personal income taxes and illegally used government funds to improve his private properties.

The measure failed by a vote of 17-26 after the most acrimonious exchange of the sly day debate.

One Democrat characterized Nixon as a "greedy man who took too much," but Republicans said some of their colleagues had "caught" improprieties.

All-17 Republicans voted against the article, and were joined by nine Democrats, including two of the committee's strongest impeachment advocates — Reps. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts and Jerome Waldie of California.

They said that while Nixon's activities on his personal finances may be shabby, they did not constitute a crime of sufficient magnitude to warrant impeachment.

One of Nixon's strongest defenders, Rep. Charles Stenholm, R-N.J., charged that the Democrats had purposely "strayed" from the income tax debate to take advantage of early evening "prime time" television.

"I just can't imagine why these people want to do all these things to Richard Nixon," Sandman said.

"They want to throw him out of office for almost anything imaginable, they want to strip him of every asset he has left and make him go to jail for the rest of his life. Boy, this is a hot one."

Rep. Joshua Ellberg, D-Pa., countered, saying, "Mr. Nixon has acted more in the manner of an Imperial ruler than any other President. He is like any greedy man who has tried to get as much as he could when he could."

"Some time ago Mr. Nixon told the nation that he is not a crook. If he had not been President when he committed these crimes, that is exactly what the IRS and the Justice Department would have had to do in a court of law."

Several Democrats referred to comments by anti-IRS officials, made during the committee's closed investigation, that Nixon was found by the IRS to have underpaid his taxes, and has paid more than $500,000 in back taxes and interest.

The sharpest exchange came when Nixon's supporters tried to strike references to Nixon's reported use of $50,000 in campaign funds to purchase a pair of diamond and platinum earrings for his wife, Pat, on her 40th birthday.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., said the earrings were an example of income not reported on Nixon's tax returns.

She said it should be noted that Nixon's close friend, C. G. Hoban, took the $500,000 out of a bank in June of 1972 through four separate checks and four separate accounts in one day.

"We've heard of laundering money in the Watergate matter," she continued, "and I would suggest that this bears a strong resemblance to that."

After Ms. Holtzman concluded, Sandman asked committee counsel John M. Doar, "In view of what the gentle lady from New York has said, where do we stand in regard to libel—are we imputing from that?" Doar said he thought so.

"I think I presented this as fairly as I could," Rep. Holtzman said. "I think by casting aspersions on my integrity, Mr. Sandman is casting aspersions on the integrity of the committee, and the committee should resent his remarks."

Gem wool clip off

BOISE (UPI)—The Idaho Crop and Livestock reporting service said their preliminary estimate of the 1974 wool clip is 6.6 million pounds, a decrease, one per cent below the 1973 clip.

The service reported an estimated 605,000 head will be shorn this year, a decrease of 22,000 head from last year.

The service said Idaho's lamb crop is expected to be 624,000 head this year, five per cent above the 1973 year.

The increased estimate is the result of three per cent fewer breeding ewes, but an eight per cent increase in the number of lambs saved per 100 ewes.

Questions relating to the presidential direction, knowledge or approval of actions demonstrated by other evidence to be substantial grounds for impeachment of the President. In refusing to produce these papers and things, Richard M. Nixon, substituting his judgment as to what materials were necessary for the inquiry, intruded the powers of the House of Representatives, thereby assuming to himself functions and judgments necessary to the exercise of the sole power of impeachment vested by the Constitution in the House of Representatives.

In all of this, Richard M. Nixon has acted in a manner contrary to his trust as President and subversive of constitutional government, in the great prejudice of the cause of law and justice, and to the manifest injury of the people of the United States.

Therefore, Richard M. Nixon by such conduct, warrants impeachment and trial, and removal from office.

Text of third article

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Text of impeachment article III adopted by the House Judiciary Committee recommending that President Nixon be removed from office on charges that he "willfully disobeyed" committee subpoenas for Watergate tapes.

In his conduct of the Office of President of the United States, Richard M. Nixon, contrary to his oath of fidelity to execute the office of President of the United States and, to the best of his ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States, and in violation of his constitutional duty to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, has failed, without lawful cause or excuse to produce papers and things as directed by duly authorized subpoenas issued by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives on April 11, 1974, May 15, 1974, May 30, 1974, and June 24, 1974; and willfully disobeyed such subpoenas.

The subpoenaed papers and things were deemed necessary by the committee in order to resolve by direct evidence fundamental

Grand jury charges Hughes with stock manipulation

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A U.S. attorney and federal grand jury brought stock manipulation charges against Howard Hughes just seven hours before the statute of limitations ran out Tuesday, despite orders from Washington to leave the Dillon-Reade office.

It was a clear victory for Devoe Heaton, U.S. attorney for Nevada, who only the day before was removed from the case by his superiors in the Justice Department.

The grand jurors, in a rare move, stood with Heaton against the instructions, and refused — as Heaton had done — to indict anyone unless they could indict Hughes too.

It was not known whether Hughes, who has not been seen in public in decades, could be forced to emerge from his current hideaway in the Bahamas, to respond personally to the charges.

Hughes and three others were indicted on charges of stock manipulation, conspiracy, wire fraud and aiding and abetting the fraud in Hughes' purchase in 1962 of what is now Hughes Airwest airline.

They were accused of forming a conspiracy, that pressured the airline's board of directors into selling out to Hughes — by dumping large blocks of stock, forcing down its value.

They were first indicted for the same alleged conspiracy last year, but the charges were dismissed Jan. 30 by a federal judge, who called the indictment "the worst criminal pleading I have ever encountered."

Under the law, the Justice Department had six months to get another indictment or drop the matter. The deadline was midnight Tuesday.

On Monday, Heaton told reporters he had been taken off the case by Assistant U.S. Attorney General Lawrence Silberman.

A summons will be issued for Hughes, and if he refuses to surrender, it would be routine to seek a warrant for his arrest, Heaton said.

Charged with Hughes were his New York lawyer, Chester Davis, Los Angeles, movie producer David B. Charnay, a long time Hughes friend, and Robert Maheu, formerly head of Hughes Nevada financial empire.

Middle, low income tax cuts proposed in House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most middle and low income Americans would get an income tax cut next year under tentative decisions made Tuesday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee is nearly finished with the first draft of a wide-ranging tax bill. All decisions so far are subject to change, but it seems likely now that the bill will lower the tax on individuals at small amounts.

Despite the tax cut, the overall bill, so far would gain about $500 million for the Treasury, largely because the committee decided to include in it a previously approved bill to increase oil company taxes.

The $1.6 billion income tax cut is brought about by first abolishing or limiting several major deductions, then making up the loss to the taxpayer by creating a new type of general deduction and increasing the standard deduction.

Some taxpayers actually will pay more tax under this formula, but most will pay less, especially at the lower income levels.

The committee staff estimated that the very lowest income wage earner, with less than $5,000 per year of adjusted gross income, would get a 15.5 per cent cut. Those with $1,000 to $5,000 income would get an average 10.4 per cent cut.

For taxpayers in the vast middle "ground" of adjusted gross income, from $5,000 to $20,000, the cut would range from 2.1 per cent to 6.3 per cent, with the greater cuts coming at the lower levels.

From $20,000 to $50,000, there would be almost no cut, and above $50,000, there actually would be a slight tax increase.

The tax cuts approved by the committee Tuesday would:

- Create what the committee is calling a "simplification deduction" for all taxpayers of $350 plus 2 per cent of adjusted gross income up to a maximum of an additional $500.
- Increase the standard deduction from the present 15 per cent of income with a $2,000 maximum to 17 per cent with a $2,500 maximum.
- Increase the minimum standard deduction of greatest benefit to the very poorest taxpayer, from the present

- $1,300 to $1,400 for single taxpayers and $1,500 for married couples.
- These cuts would offset a number of deductions that the committee has tentatively decided to disallow or curtail, such as deductions for state gasoline taxes, half of medical insurance premiums, and the first $100 of dividends.
- One of the most popular items to be curtailed is medical deductions. Instead of present law, which allows deductions of prescription drug expenses over 1 per cent of adjusted gross income and medical expenses over 3 per cent of such income, the bill would allow deductions for combined medical and drug expenses over 5 per cent of adjusted gross income.

Rodino's chore still unfinished

CHAIRMAN PETER RODINO ... looks for more sleep

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After 35 hours and 34 minutes of work on articles of impeachment in the House Judiciary Committee, Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., was asked if he would like to go through it all over again.

Rodino, 64, said he probably would not.

He must work with the committee staff on the report he expects to finish by next Tuesday, and must plan his presentation before the House Rules Committee, which will determine the manner in which the articles of impeachment are brought to the floor.

Probably in August, Rodino said, he will leave the ornately paneled committee room shortly before midnight Tuesday, accompanied by the two bodyguards who have been assigned to him from the staff of House detectives since a bomb threat was called in to the committee last Saturday.

White others on the committee dined in nearby restaurants, and eaties during lunch and dinner breaks during the hearings. Rodino often grabbed a quick bite to eat at his desk.

He had to give up his daily handball games during the hearings.

Rodino, who voted against one of the five articles proposed, received the handshakes of his colleagues on the panel after he gave his six days of proceedings to a close Tuesday and stood to leave.

He returned the praise: "The committee really discharged a duty and obligation which was a rather burdensome one in a commendable way."

Although several of the panel members planned to take their first few days of relative rest for the first time since hearings began on May 4, Rodino said his work was far from finished.

Impeach votes go by party

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ten of 17 Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee voted against each of the five articles of impeachment proposed against President Nixon during the six days of debate.

Eight of the 21 committee Democrats were consistent in voting for all five articles.

The 10 Republicans were: Ranking GOP member Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, Henry P. Smith of New York, Charles Sandman and Joseph Maraziti of New Jersey, Charles Wiggins and Carlos Mohrhead of California, David Dennis of Indiana, Wilsey Mayne of Iowa, Trent Lett of Mississippi and Delbert Latta of Ohio.

The eight Democrats were: Jack Brooks and Barbara Jordan of Texas, Robert W. Kastenmeier of Wisconsin, Don Edwards of California, John Conyers of Michigan, Charles Rangel and Elizabeth Hightower of New York, and Mevyn Sklar of Iowa.

Two Democrats believed to be among the strongest supporters of impeachment, Reps. Jerome B. Wildie of California and Robert F. Drinan of Massachusetts, did not make the list of eight Democrats.

They voted against the last proposed article — that Nixon be impeached for evading income taxes and spending federal money on his private properties. Each said he thought the case on that article had not been made.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., voted against a proposed article recommending impeachment for secret bombing in Cambodia.

Mansfield asks relaxed trial proof standards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield recommended today that the Senate use a standard of proof less stringent than required in criminal cases to judge President Nixon if he is impeached, and must stand trial.

Mansfield proposed that the burden of proof to find Nixon guilty of impeachment offenses should be "clear and convincing evidence."

This falls between the standard for criminal cases, which is "beyond a reasonable doubt," and civil proceedings, which is "by a preponderance of the evidence."

Mansfield's proposal was included in a series of suggestions to change and moderate the Senate's rules on impeachment trials; almost all of which go back more than a century.

Mansfield submitted his recommendations to each member of the Senate Rules Committee, which begins closed door hearings today on proposed changes, with instructions to report back to the Senate no later than Sept. 1.

Some of Mansfield's proposed changes are technical. Some are tough on presidential privilege. Among his recommendations:

- That in the impeachment trial no evidence can be withheld on grounds that the evidence could endanger national security or national defense.
- The Senate, however, could close its doors to hear the evidence.
- That the Senate is empowered to declare and set sanctions for civil contempt.
- That the Senate would decide if there is a privilege to decline to testify or produce evidence in any situation.
- That the Senator can, on his own, call witnesses and invite outside attorneys to file briefs and make oral arguments.
- That the President would have to reply to the articles of impeachment within 10 days after he is served, although this does not mean the trial has to start at that time.
- That the Senate not vote "guilty" or "not guilty," but rather to "sustain" or "reject" the impeachment articles.

In a 42-page backup report, Mansfield said — using the standard of "clear and convincing evidence" was a "logical middle ground" between the burden of proof in criminal and civil cases.

Missile tests hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has sent to the President a Defense Procurement Bill which prohibits the expenditure of funds for the proposed "Giant Falcon" missile test program.

Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said Tuesday the Defense Department proposal called for the launching of Minuteman II missiles from Malstrom Air Force Base near Great Falls, Mont., toward targets in the Pacific. The missiles would pass over western parts of Washington and Oregon and possibly parts of California. Portions of the missiles would be dropped in remote areas of Northern Idaho.

The proposal drew strong criticism from the congressional delegations and state officials in the affected areas.

Church rapped for conflict

BOISE (UPI) — A Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate said Democrat Frank Church had a conflict of interest in national recreation area legislation for the land near Clayton, Idaho.

Bob Smith said Church in 1971 retained an option on a cabin site in the area where his wife sold her half-interest in the Robinson Bar Ranch between the Sawtooths and the White Clouds.

Smith said the reason Church gave for selling the ranch at that time was that legislation was being considered in Congress to authorize the creation of a national recreation area and it would include the Robinson Bar property.

Smith said "Only the NRA legislation which Church helped pass many Idaho citizens are now losing their summer recreation in this same national recreation area. Many of these homes are also located on one acre lots similar to Church's lot at Robinson Bar."

"It is ironic that the same senator who has advocated full and open disclosure of all personal assets has failed to disclose his interest in a portion of the Robinson Bar Ranch, which he had claimed to have sold in its entirety."

"The Idaho voters have been led to believe that the senator had divested himself of any conflict of interest in the NRA. The truth is the conflict of interest still exists," Smith said.

A spokesman for Church's Washington office said, "Frank Church has always disclosed everything. He has nothing to hide. Smith has disclosed nothing and says he won't do so until after the votes are cast."

"I think the people of Idaho can tell the difference."

Consumer audit approves Andrus

BOISE (UPI) — A quarterly consumer audit prepared by a Boise research firm shows Ada County residents favor development of a downtown shopping area and approve of the job Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has done.

The quarterly Boise Consumer Audit released by opinion Research West was based on a survey conducted in mid-July.

Residents were equally divided over the question of regional shopping centers such as one proposed by Larry Daunt south of Boise.

But 69 per cent said they favor a shopping center for downtown Boise. Only 25 per cent opposed the downtown development.

They had to choose between one or the other of the shopping centers, 55 per cent of the business respondents would choose the downtown center.

An index reflecting public approval of the job being done by elected officials showed Gov. Andrus in the top position, followed by Boise Mayor Dick

Market threat eyed

KIMBERLY (UPI) — Rep. Orval Hansen, R-Idaho, predicted a new threat to the depressed cattle market Tuesday in the form of increased imports resulting from the recent ban in meat imports by European Common Market Countries.

Hansen told a luncheon meeting that he had appealed to the Secretary of Agriculture for immediate action to limit imports in order to prevent prices being paid to U.S. producers from dropping further.

By United Press International

An automatic cost of living increase for state employees is being prompted by a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor.

John V. Evans said the increase would replace the need for the state employees to come to the Legislature every session seeking salary hikes.

"This inflationary spiral is affecting all the people throughout the state of Idaho and creating severe problems to the working people," Evans said.

Another lieutenant gubernatorial candidate, Republican Hope Kading, said there was a need to protect agricultural producers from government interference which cripples their ability to produce.

Mrs. Kading told the Fayette Kiwanis consumers and taxpayers will pay in the end if government interference retards agricultural production.

One of her opponents, Vern Ravenscroft, was speaking at the Boise Civic Club, where he said there is not enough water in the Snake River for future up-stream development and requirements for recreational navigation.

Ravenscroft said — the projected needs for up-stream development — said — suggested minimum flows for recreational navigation below Hells Canyon would each totally obligate the present unappropriated waters of the river during a dry year.

Ray Truby, a Democratic candidate for public instruction superintendent, told a St. Maries audience school facilities should be more fully used by all students.

Truby said schools must give all youngsters the opportunity to develop a healthy body and spirit by expanding physical education programs and keeping sports facilities available outside regular school hours.

An opponent, Jim Stoicheff, also a Democrat, said in Pocatello the "most important job of a school is to help parents turn their children into winners."

"Boys and girls don't come into the world with 'chump and chump' labels tattooed on their bodies. The same boy who did with a healthy body and mind is born into this world a potential winner."

Speaking at Sun, Idaho, Republican attorney general candidate Wayne Kidwell told Rotarians of the need for the state attorney general to be prepared to fight legal battles if political battles fail to keep Idaho's water safe from diversion plans.

And Republican lieutenant governor candidate Pat Harwood said if elected, he would use the office to help change the emphasis and direction in educational priorities.

Range burns near Marslog

MARSLOG, Idaho (UPI) — A lightning caused fire burned out of control today across a range land 15 miles south of Marslog. The Bureau of Land Management said the fire had blackened 2,500 acres of grassland by Tuesday night. The fire burned along McBride Creek and was fought by 60 men from the BLM.

In an attempt to halt the fire, 22 aerial retardant drops were made.

Hearing scheduled

BOISE (UPI) — A hearing is scheduled in Fourth District Court here Aug. 8 on a petition by the Sunshine Committee seeking intervention in a suit to block its proposal to have an ordinance which would restrict the rights of the 38,000 persons who signed petitions to have the initiative placed on the ballot. State Committee Coordinator Mary Mech said Tuesday. The suit was filed by former state legislators Clyde R. Kitchin of Nampa and Jack D. Claiborn of Kimberly and state Sen. A. L. White of Orofino.

They contend that the initiative was unconstitutional because more than one issue was involved. The initiative would require campaign contribution disclosure as well as lobbyist registration.

Man charged with kidnaping

BOISE (UPI) — A charge of second degree kidnaping was filed against a Boise man arrested Tuesday in the Gooding Field area.

Scelo A. Antunes, 25, Boise, was charged with abducting a knife-peddler from the Vista Avenue Circle K Store. Detective Raymond Crowell said he was watching the convenience store after receiving a tip that the store would be robbed.

He said a man armed with a butcher knife forced Kay D. Sherwood, the store clerk, into her car after she closed the store for the night.

Crowell said he followed the car toward the airport where the man abandoned it and his hostage and fled into the dark. Mrs. Sherwood was not injured.

Boise fires probed

BOISE (UPI) — Fire investigators in Boise are trying to determine if an arsonist has been involved in a series of fires this month in the north end.

A fire Tuesday destroyed a mattress near an alley at 1107 North 18th. Other blazes have destroyed garages and automobiles.

"We don't know if there is one person involved or several," assistant Fire Marshal John Boros said. "We do have good reason to suspect arson in each of the cases."

Boros said the investigators so far believe a chemical incendiary was used to start the blazes.

New car data listed

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — The 180 new cars

financed dealers in Idaho were only 3.3 percent of the retail establishments in the state last year but had 17.1 percent of the 1973 retail sales.

Jack T. Crowland, Coeur d'Alene, President of the Idaho Automobile Dealers Association, said those facts are included in information on the industry for the year which is being distributed to dealers by the National Automobile Dealers Association.

TF survey stated

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls radio station is taking an on-the-air survey of public opinion on a power plant planned for southern Idaho. Station manager Dave Copp said the station will conduct the survey from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday on the proposed Idaho Power generating plant.

Idaho Power has announced it is investigating sites near Bonanza and Blaine for installation of a 2-million kilowatt generating plant. The plant could be fired by either coal or nuclear energy, according to plant officials.

Capps said survey results will be sent to Idaho Power, Idaho Public Utilities Commission, the US Environmental Protection Agency and other interested agencies.

Jerome firm gets OK

BOISE (UPI) — The North Side Bus Co. Inc., of Jerome was granted authority Tuesday by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to operate on a temporary motor contract carrier permit.

The company sought the permit to operate as a transporter of persons, outfitting's guests and guides, and baggage on demand of outfitters from the Stanley put-in point at Dugger Falls on the middle fork of the Salmon River.

They also will be permitted to return the groups from takeout point at the confluence of the Middle Fork of the Salmon River and main Salmon River to the Stanley area.

Two TF firms entered

TWIN FALLS — Two businesses on Addison Avenue West were burglarized Tuesday night, city police reported.

The Auto Repair, 261 Addison Ave. W., was entered by forcing open a side door. Officers said the business was ransacked and some pop and small change taken along with two cans of beer. Loss was estimated at $650.

While investigating the first burglary, officers discovered an entry had been made at Cox Automotive located two doors down the street. In the second establishment officers said some pop was taken from the refrigerator but nothing else was missing.

Ketchum slates action on saloon

By BART QUENELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The city attorney here will draw up a nuisance petition against the Crazy Horse Saloon, a city official said Monday.

Police Commissioner Glenn Bransen said the complaint would be drawn up but residents would have to circulate the petition themselves. Mrs. Betty Lavery, a nearby resident, said 20 people living near the saloon had agreed to sign the petition.

Bransen said, "We've had complaints since the bar went in." Originally, Bransen said the saloon was a plumbing shop. However, the shop was converted into a saloon with City Council approval and the city had never tried to force saloon owner Chris DuPont to come before the City Council.

Bransen said the complaint would not seek to close the saloon on that basis but would probably seek a nuisance injunction from the City Attorney.

"The saloon is in a commercial zone area but is close to several permanent homes. Residents, Bransen said, have complained several times of the noise from the band.

Bransen said, "It isn't just a noise problem though. I know people come out there and wander around on people's lawns."

Mrs. Lavery released a statement Monday. However she did not mention any names because she said she was afraid of a suit against her.

"Our residential area is located on the fringe of a shopping district which contains a saloon," she said. "The saloon creates a noise problem and has an objectionable influence in the neighborhood until late hours."

"Many senior citizens are among the 20 residents wishing to abate that type of business in this part of town. We have been very tolerant and patient over the past few years without making an official complaint with the establishment and the police although the police and city officials have given them several warnings."

The Crazy Horse voluntarily closed its doors for one month in March. Police Chief Dennis Haynes said owner DuPont, after consultation with him, closed the saloon after several complaints of a T-shirt contest inside.

Haynes said the Crazy Horse did put on two T-shirt contests but he had complaints only of the second one and talked with DuPont. DuPont voluntarily closed the Crazy Horse then, he said.

Haynes confirmed, "The city is in the process of having a petition drawn up."

He said he had heard an attorney for the Crazy Horse had intimidated Billie Thompson, a local reporter, who two weeks ago sent a letter to the governor pleading for police protection.

"It is too bad people have to be intimidated," Haynes said. "People personally have the right to complain without being threatened."

Haynes said no person had ever signed a complaint against the Crazy Horse although several have called to complain. He said no arrests have been made inside or adjacent to the saloon.

City attorney Jim Phillips said no petition had been drawn up yet. He said Police Chief Haynes, Police Commissioner Bransen and Mayor Bill Brand have been consulting with him.

Phillips said before the petition is drawn by the city, the Ketchum City Council will have to resolve whether to press for closure. He suggested the city will not draw up the petition until the citizens themselves hand a petition to the council.

"I personally don't think the city should start the petition," Phillips said.

He said citizens in the area could begin with a short statement of public nuisance against the Crazy Horse and obtain the signatures of every citizen who would like to prove every allegation, Phillips said. "They would just have to prove enough to show it's a public nuisance."

Phillips said he saw no legal wrongdoing with the letter sent by Billie Thompson. "If not see any problem with libel or slander," Phillips said. Mrs. Lavery said this morning residents would push and sign the petition whether the city did or not. The city attorney's legal counsel has been obtained for the residents.

Theatre gets injunction

KETCHUM — A permanent injunction has been issued to the Magic Lantern Theatre here restricting its operation until standpipes are installed.

The three-month-old battle over fire safety standards for the theatre was decided by Judge Charles Scoggin.

In a letter to Kessler's counsel, Scoggin ruled, "The court is of the opinion that the defendant and corporation should be, and they hereby are, restrained from conducting business in the location in the Old Fellows at Ketchum until the final inspection and approval of the remodeling permit."

Further, the court does not feel there was sufficient evidence for it to find the requirements as contained in said application and approval by the city of Ketchum, as to fire and people proposals were unreasonable.

Scoggin heard a two-day debate last week from Ketchum City Atty. Jim Phillips and Larry Young, counselor for Kessler. Young contended the remodeled Old Fellows Hall was much safer than it ever had been.

He said Kessler had added exits, exit ladders, fire retardant curtains and smoke detectors tied into an alarm system.

Kessler has contended throughout the increased occupancy of the building makes the building safe because of the upkeep and care received. He has suggested also if the protection is needed, the responsibility of fire fighting apparatus should be on the fire department.

"However, their building inspection was faulty," Scoggin said. "The standpipes are a standpipe. The standpipes, they said, would allow people inside the building to begin fighting a fire immediately before the fire department arrived."

According to testimony last week, Kessler drew standpipes on his initial plan and on revised plans. Brand said the approval for Kessler to open was based on those plans. The Magic Lantern Theatre has been open less than a month.

Firm slates coal supply

Idaho Power is accompanying its bid for Wyoming coal with a plan "relating to drive reasonable and practical" coal mining legislation.

In a release today, the company spoke out against congressional legislation which would block much needed strip mining activity.

Pending legislation, the company reported, could permanently eliminate the mining of an estimated 127 million tons of surface coal and 120 million tons of underground coal annually.

"This legislation, which does not distinguish between strip mining and western strip mining, could lock up as much as seven billion tons of coal," the release states.

"We believe the nation simply cannot afford this kind of a lock-up of its most abundant energy resource," it said.

As an example of how strip mining should be carried out, the release pointed to its Jim Bridger plant. Twenty per cent of the cost of the plant went into environmental protection and the coal stripped land will be restored with contoured topsoil and native arid grasses, the release cites a Smithsonian Institute article as saying.

Pigs love shampoo and powder, 4-H youth learn

By MARGE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — Pigs love to be bathed with baby shampoo, and dusting off baby powder can almost make a pig forget he really is a pig. These and other facts about pigs were brought out at the "swine achievement" day Monday evening at the fairgrounds. The event was attended by 4-H club members in the county who will be taking swine projects to the fair Sept. 4-7.

Bathing, brushing and proper training of pigs were demonstrated by 4-H club members of the Berger-Barny and Bunch club in the swine club. This club, one of the largest in the county, has 37 members. Its leaders are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Cristobal and Mr. and Mrs. Gertrude Peters.

Mary Jo Biggs demonstrated the proper way to get a pig ready for showing. Club members should start now giving their pigs daily baths, she said, as not only do the pigs love it and it helps calm them down, but it also starts conditioning their skin and will make them look better by fair time.

Miss Biggs used a white pig to demonstrate proper cleaning. On white pigs, peroxide or a bleaching agent may be used several times around the pig's eyes to remove stains, she said. This bathing hint would not work on red or black pigs, however.

"She recommended baby shampoo—a good scrub brush, wash cloth and running water from a hose as bathing essentials. When the pig's coat is dry, it may be brushed with a piece of sandpaper placed over wood. Pigs should be brushed each day, she said. For a final touch, white pigs may be given a dusting of baby powder."

Miss Biggs donned a pair of heavy rubber boots while she bathed her pig, and she covered her attractive red gingham shorts and top with a pair of striped coveralls.

TF pedestrian injured

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Gene (Joyce) Carpenter, 38, Twin Falls, was hospitalized early today after being struck by an automobile while crossing Shoshone Street.

City police said the accident occurred about 8 a.m. at the intersection of Shoshone Street and Fourth Avenue North.

Mrs. Carpenter was crossing Shoshone Street when Kent Brennan, 18, Twin Falls, traveling east on Fourth Avenue North, was in the process of turning left onto Shoshone Street.

He told officers the sun was shining through trees and the pedestrian was apparently at the border of shade and sunlight. He said he could not see her until she was directly in front of his vehicle.

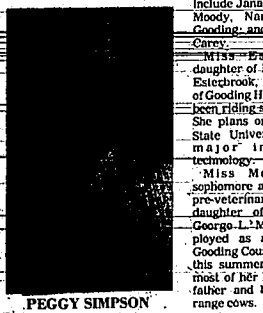

Mrs. Carpenter was treated for a severe head laceration, cuts and bruises and was being X-rayed for possible fractures.

Chicks lost at Hagerman

HAGERMAN — A fire three miles north of Hagerman Tuesday destroyed two buildings, 8,000 chickens and several pigs at the Dennis Cabini ranch. Hagerman Fire Chief Richard Scroggs reported.

The fire began about 1:30 a.m. and the cause of fire is still under investigation. Scroggs reported. Fire departments from Hagerman, Blaine, Gooding and Wendell helped fight the blaze. The fire was under control by 7:30 a.m. Tuesday.

One of the buildings that burned was the Midway Dance Hall that during the late 1930s through 1950s attracted huge crowds and big name bands. The hall had provided entertainment for people all around Hagerman Valley.

4 girls seeking Gooding queen

GOODING — Four girls are competing for the title of Gooding County Fair queen, according to Cheryl Hoyt, chairman.

She said eight girls are seeking the Junior princess title. The new royalty will be crowned the night of the final rodeo performance Aug. 7.

The fair runs through Aug. 7. Linda Laudert, Wendell, is the reigning queen and Sandi Mohwinkel, Gooding, is current Junior princess. She also was queen of the sheriff's posse.

The four queen contestants include Jana Esterbrook, Jana Moody, Nancy Pierson, all Gooding, and Peggy Simpson, Coeur d'Alene.

Jana Esterbrook, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Esterbrook, is a 1974 graduate of Gooding High School and has been living since a young age.

She plans on attending Boise State University this fall to major in radiologic technology.

Miss Moody, 20, a sophomore at BSU majoring in pre-veterinary science, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Moody. She is employed as a deputy at the Gooding county sheriff's office this summer. She has ridden most of her life and helps her father and brothers with the range cows.

Miss Pierson, 19, also a sophomore at BSU, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Pierson. She has been queen of Halley's Days of the Old West and the Gooding sheriff's posse, and runner-up in the state posse contest. She also has competed in Miss Rodeo Idaho contests, representing Halley.

Miss Simpson, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Veri W. Simpson, is a 1974 graduate of Carey High School where she was a cheerleader for four years.

She was named Miss Carey Pioneer Days in 1972 and plans on attending Rick's College.

Sports

From all angles By Larry Hovey

This has been a summer of discontent for young Jeff Thomsen of Twin Falls. He sums it up this way, "I just can't win."

Now at age 20 it seems a little early to be considering oneself over-the-hill. Thomsen doesn't exactly feel that way but he'd like something to happen to help remove the mental block that he fears is growing.

"I'm hitting the ball real well. Usually I'm putting pretty well — but not always. But it seems like I just can't win," he says.

Young Kevin Packard, Twin Falls, came from two strokes down in the final two holes to force an overtime and then won the Butley Amateur Championship on the first sudden death.

Kevin, who probably comes closest to being "Mr. Loose" among Magic Valley golfers, then two putted for a hole in one.

Winning is something that Jeff is fairly used to. He was the youngest ever to win the state amateur championship, doing that at McCalla.

When he came out of high school, he and several other good golfers weren't getting any scholarship offers. Arizona State was one of the premier golf schools due in the year round weather conditions.

So Jeff, and others, went to Arizona State and he promptly began beating those who were on scholarship. It was a little tough for Jeff and the Thomsens clan to take, but the Arizona State coach wasn't about to let a "hot" fall rush him.

Father Clyde admits that he suggested that Jeff let Arizona State take a running jump, but Jeff said he wanted to prove himself beyond doubt. He now is on a scholarship.

The matter of winning money — merchandise prizes — is of no consequence to Jeff because he generally gets a gift certificate or two a week.

Like he picks up about $150 in merchandise at Butley Sunday and comes back to a pro-am Monday in Rupert and wins $7,000.

But it is the touch of being first that he wants. He wasn't able to compete in a couple of the Magic Valley "big four" meets this year, which cut into his ability. He was second at Butley and second in the Southwest amateur.

Such impatience is a mark of youth. But it also is the mark of a competitor.

Hole-in-one

Wendell Haskins, a golfing veteran of many years, scored his first hole-in-one at Twin Falls during a pro-am course.

Playing with Ken Hurlbert and John Leinen, Haskins converted on the par three, 165-yard 14th hole, using a five-iron.

Twin Falls Municipal Women's Golf Association will conduct a "fun day" starting at 8 a.m. Thursday.

Members also were reminded that the club championship will be decided over 36 holes of medal play, Aug. 15 and 22. On Aug. 23, those who "beat the pro" in earlier competition, will play for the trophy.

Twins belt Royals 7-3

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Back-to-back home runs by Harmon Killebrew and Larry Hick in the third inning powered the Minnesota Twins to a 7-3 win against the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night.

Brewers take two from Yankees

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Kevin Kobel hurled a three-hit shutout and Dave May singled in the only run he needed to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 4-0 win over the New York Yankees in the second game and a sweep of their twelfth doubleheader Tuesday night.

The Brewers won the first game 7-2 as Mike Tragan's two-out single in the bottom of the 10th.

The doubleheader victory moved the Brewers into fourth place in the American League East, just 3 1/2 games behind the division-leading Boston Red Sox.

Hall of fame induction marks crest of Stengel's 84 years

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Casey Stengel celebrated his 84th birthday Tuesday and looking back over the years reckoned that induction into baseball's Hall of Fame was "the biggest thing in my life."

Not just in his life, in typical Stenglesque hyperbole; Casey said it was just the biggest thing in his life. Maybe that's because Stengel's baseball life.

There are many more that should be in it, Stengel said in the course of a somewhat scrambled interview. Then, in one of his better non-sequiturs, he added:

"But once in, they can't take you out."

Stengel was hurrying to board a plane for Olathe, Kan., to attend the minor league All-Star game. He plans to appear at the "Old Timers" game in New York City this Saturday and will be one of the presenters at the Hall of Fame induction in Cooperstown, N.Y. Oct. 12.

Among the inductees this year are Whitely, Ford and Mickey Vernon, two of the superstars among a team of ordinary stars during the years that Stengel managed the New York Yankees.

Most people think of that era as the high point of Stengel's active career of 55 years in baseball during which he won more pennants and World Series victories than any other major league manager in history.

Actually, Stengel thinks with apparently even more fondness of the last years with the New York Mets and it was the mark of his interest in the National League that he talked must about the race between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds.

Although the Dodger lead a few weeks ago stood at 11 1/2 games and plummeted to 3 1/2, Stengel says, "this isn't a slump."

"The Dodgers are good," he said. "They are a young ball club. They had a good start, everybody, and now they lose a few and everybody is watching."

Stengel gave credit to Wall Alston for "the Dodgers" showing and particularly the manager's decisiveness in yanking his starters—and putting in a relief pitcher.

"Better have a good relief pitcher, or you won't win the pennant," he said. Then, in another quick switch, he said: "But I sure wish the Mets were on top."

District Legion tourney opens here Thursday

The Minico Legion rates as the favorite to win the district playoffs, opening Thursday, and take this area's home berth in state playoffs next month.

Coach John Astorino and his Minico charges will come to Twin Falls—Joyce Park—for single games at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday. If a third game is necessary, it will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Legion teams have played three times this year and so far Minico is undefeated. Twice they won decisions and a third ended in a tie due to darkness.

The tie team is rated in powerhouse this year but that largely is due to the youth and lack of experience. Minico has played the entire season with 14 men. Meanwhile, Twin Falls Coach Paul Epperson has had more men to call on, but only two of them graduated from high school this spring.

The differences in the clubs seems to be in the pitching where Minico holds the edge.

Minico also showed good power in its last appearance at Joyce Park, hitting two over the fence and rattling a sixth new home extrabaser in.

He is undecided about who will start Thursday but is expected to be leaning a little toward Gary Hull. Hull pitched the last time out against Minico and was beaten by a line drive that came back quicker than it got to the plate.

Fortunately the youngster sustained nothing more serious than a bad headache and a large lump on his forehead.

Opening lead—54

South cashed one high diamond and West dropped the deuce. South thought while and tried the club. Down went South!

The diamond play was wrong from result, common sense and percentage, but South should never have gotten into that position.

When East showed out on the second trump lead, South should have cashed the ace and kings of hearts and diamonds before leading a third trump.

West would be on lead and have no way to throw South in dummy. West would try with his third diamond, but it wouldn't do him any good.

A—Bid six spades. If you want to play a really bad overbid.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding three spades, your partner has jumped to four spades. What do you do now?

ANSWER TOMORROW

Head-hugging berets and knitted caps are edging out the floppy big hats for fall and winter wear.

DEAR ABBY: I just read a letter from that foolish girl who was miserable because she had a big nose and a small bosom.

Where has she been? Big noses and flat chests are IN! Look at Barbra Streisand. She's got a real back on her, but after a little more of growth or you?

And how about Princess Ann? She doesn't have a little button nose either, but you don't see her getting it bobbed. As for the small bosoms, just look at all the fashion models. Not one of them wears a bra, because they have nothing to put in it.

So tell all the girls who are unhappy with their big noses and small bosoms to cheer up. They're in style!

—MRS. CAROL ALVINS

Flat chests could win

DEAR ABBY: All right, girls, no more crying in your J2 A cups. You could win by a nose.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a person to serve a prison term for another person who has been tried and sentenced? I realize this is a strange question, but I really must know. If this is possible, can more than one person serve the time in place of another? In other words, may twelve people serve one month each to cover a year's sentence of another? If this can be done, how would one go about volunteering?

KANSAS QUESTION

DEAR QUESTION: In the U.S.A., each person must serve his own sentence.

DEAR ABBY: How can a wife tactfully refuse invitations from a wonderful person who has a terrible bore for a husband? I met this woman through our children's school events and community projects in our town. She's a fine woman with a charming, outgoing personality and I enjoy her company.

She invited my husband and me to her home for dinner, and afterwards my husband said: "Please don't ever subject me to another evening with those people. He is the worst bore I've ever met!" Naturally I've never invited them back.

Abby, now I feel so guilty when I see this woman. I owe her a dinner invitation but I can't reciprocate, knowing how my husband feels.

—EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Include this couple with other couples who represent their hospitality. After that, see the lady during the daytime, and spare your husband.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for showing some understanding for girls who get pregnant out of wedlock. I am the granddaughter of Charles Lindbergh, who was a mortician in Ogden, Utah.

I will never forget a young couple who were in a family way and unwed. They had no one to turn to, so they took their lives. Later their parents had a change of heart, but it was too late.

I saw the bodies of those two beautiful young kids at my grandfather's funeral parlor, and I thought: "How sad. All they wanted was someone to stand by, and help them and the baby that couldn't be born."

An Aug. 23 wedding is planned. The couple will reside in Boise.

Reunion held

Family members came from as far away as Wisconsin and this is the first time the eight brothers and sisters have been together in years.

The family first came to Idaho from Nebraska in 1849, then moved to Gooding in 1938. There were 67 present at the reunion.

DIANE Miller, Twin Falls, received the "Pete Creed" trophy last year at the Twin Falls County Fair, awarded by the Twin Falls Bank and Trust to the outstanding junior gardener. Sandra Yoder, Filer, received second place. Both plan to compete again this year.

Plan to compete

Junior gardener department's popularity at TF fair grows

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News writer

ENTER — A division which is increasing in popularity each year at the Twin Falls County Fair is the junior gardener department.

Last year 42 young gardeners competed for blue ribbons and a special trophy and the number is expected to be even larger this year.

The purpose of this division is to encourage young gardeners to grow and display their vegetables, and exhibits must be grown by the person in whose name they are entered.

Entry sheets may be obtained from the fair office or mailed upon request.

Entries will close at 6 p.m. Sept. 1 and judging in this division will be held at 4 p.m. Sept. 3.

Three place premiums will be given for several kinds of beans, beets, carrots, cauliflower, corn, potatoes, squash and many others. Also special cash prizes will be given for the largest specimen in cabbage, cauliflower, onion, potatoes, pumpkin, squash, and watermelon, and for any novelty or oddity Agricultural product.

"Pete" Creed will again present a trophy in the best individual vegetable display by a junior gardener last year's winner was Diane Miller, Twin Falls, with Sandra Yoder, Filer, placing second.

Both girls attend Filer High School and both plan to enter in the competition this year. Miss Yoder said she enjoyed the gardening division because it gave younger people a chance to show their gardening skills.

Do Russian women enjoy sex more than Western sisters?

MOSCOW (UPI) — Do Soviet women get a greater kick out of sex than their Western sisters? If so, could Russian cavort-and-vodka-be behind it all?

A Soviet doctor has made both suggestions in a book lifting the veil of almost Victorian prudery surrounding the subject of sex in Russian publications.

Dr. Abram M. Svyatosch's "Female Sexual Pathology" borrows liberally from Western sex researchers such as Masters and Johnson, but manages to include some original Russian ideas as well. In the book, designed for other doctors, Svyatosch frankly examines the question of women's sexual fulfillment for perhaps the first time in a Soviet publication.

Basing his observations on a Kinsey-style survey of 300 women in the central Asian town of Karaganda, Svyatosch suggests "Soviet women enjoy sex more than their Western counterparts."

He said only 18 per cent of the women questioned admitted never having an orgasm; compared to a 40 per cent figure for French women. The town, however, might not be so typical: It has one of the highest birth rates in the Soviet Union.

Svyatosch suggests coitus as a treatment for frigidity. He says vodka can help overcome inhibitions, but "a limited dose of dry white wine" is even better.

Part of the book is based on case histories at a Leningrad sex clinic, one of six set up on an experimental basis in the late 1960s.

Svyatosch recommends women adopt a suitable birth control method but does not go into detail. The pill is not generally available in the Soviet Union.

He describes lesbianism as an illness and says it can be cured. He says, however, there are half as many lesbians in the Soviet Union as in the United States.

Although the book is dryly written and slightly illustrated, all 100,000 copies were quickly sold out. Russian sources say the 67-cent, 189-page paperback now commands up to $32.50 on the black market.
