NELSON ROCKEFELLER ... faces House vote next

Senators approve Rockefeller, 90-7

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved the nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be vice president, by a vote of 90 to 7 Tuesday.

President Ford, who was similarly confirmed as vice president by the Senate last November by a 92 to 3 vote, learned of the Senate action in New York as he was en route from the Walls Street heliport to the Waldorf-Astoria to meet with Rockefeller. He issued a three-paragraph statement on arriving at the hotel that said in part:

Four Democrats and three Republicans voted against confirming the nomination of the 66-year-old former governor of New York state to be the nation's 41st vice president; 90 Senators of both parties voted in favor of confirmation.

"Few Americans have ever been more closely scrutinized or more thoroughly investigated by the Congress than Governor Rockefeller. The Senate's overwhelming vote of approval after probing so meticulously into every aspect of his public and private life speaks eloquently for his character and outstanding qualifications for public office."

Rockefeller must still be approved by the House of Representatives, which will vote next week after receiving the report and recommendation of the House Judiciary Committee, which is expected to vote in favor of confirmation today or Thursday.

Air pollution control gear 'must' at Bridger

By BILL LAZARUS

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Installation of expensive sulfur dioxide control equipment at the Jim Bridger coal-fired power plant would be mandatory under proposed Wyoming air quality regulations.

Under the proposal, major new sulfur dioxide emitters would be limited to releasing 0.2 pounds of sulfur dioxide per million BTUs of heat, a standard six times more strict than the current federal standard of 1.2 pounds sulfur dioxide per million BTUs.

The proposed Wyoming standards could raise electric rates to Idaho customers, and could set a precedent for a similar power plant planned near Boise.

The Bridger plant is expected to release between 1.1 and 1.3 pounds of sulfur dioxide per million BTUs, Wood said.

Idaho Power Co. and Pacific Power and Light are jointly building Bridger.

In a two-day hearing this week Wyoming's Environmental Quality Council heard utility objections to and public support of the standards.

The proposed standards would require installation of pollution control equipment capable of removing up to 90 percent of sulfur dioxide release.

Robert Moech, vice president of PP&L, protested that the expensive equipment would mean higher rates for electricity users at the hearing.

The equipment would cost up to $112 million for a 2.5 million kilowatt, $600 million plant, according to U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates.

Other utility representatives protested federal standards are "stringent" enough to protect human health and vegetation.

And utility spokesmen say the equipment would hike operating costs 30 per cent. They also say sulfur dioxide control systems are unreliable.

Wood said all citizen testimony was in favor of proposed regulations or still more strict standards.

"We feel the technology is here to meet these standards and the air quality advisory board and the people in the state have asked the most stringent standards that are technologically feasible," Randolph Wood, administrator of Wyoming's Department of Environmental Quality's air division, said this morning.

Following another two weeks of hearings, the environmental quality council will decide whether to impose the proposed standards, the said.

Hospital improves emergency service

By CRICKET BIRD

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital may have physicians on around-the-clock duty in the emergency room at least two days a week by January.

consideration by hospital administrators before the first week in February, with a tentative implementation date of May 1. But Rosenbaum said he felt the new service may take until mid-year to establish.

Included in the proposed 1975 hospital budget is $125,000 to pay emergency room physicians. At present local physicians take turns being on call for emergency room duty.

Complaints have been made about the hospital's emergency room service because doctors are not on duty to handle urgent cases.

According to hospital administrator James Rosenbaum, three possible plans for emergency room coverage are now being considered. Proposals from different groups are due for patient arrival at the hospital, with delays which range from minutes to considerably longer.

local physicians, and a 24-hour 7-day coverage administered and staffed by specially-trained trauma surgeons.

The weekend coverage would run from 8 a.m. to 5 a.m. Monday. A group of surgical residents from a Salt Lake City, Utah, hospital has expressed interest in this plan, as has a group of physicians from the Boise Valley.

The three plans include a weekend coverage plan offered by two medical groups, the possibility of a 24-hour, 7-day plan staffed by Hospital officials said the four Boise Valley doctors would each take one weekend a month for emergency duty, sleeping during off hours at the hospital.

 Ford's statement also expressed his hope that the House of Representatives would also take "similar action" as quickly as possible. Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., House Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said today that the committee would consider on Thursday sending the nomination to the House next week.
 House Speaker Carl Albert, who has been next in line for the presidency since Ford became president in August, said, "My impression is that he will be confirmed."
 The judiciary committee completed nine days of hearings on Rockefeller's nomination last week. The Senate Rules Committee held eight days of hearings, somewhat earlier.
 The seven who voted against Rockefeller were Sen. James Abourezk of South Dakota, Birch Bayh of Indiana, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, Democrats; and Barry

Emergency staffing planned

 In addition, local physicians have requested the opportunity to submit a proposal for a 24-hour, 7-day coverage plan for the emergency room.
 The largest group, a professional group from California, would arrange for 24-hour, 7-day coverage by qualified trauma surgeons. Rosenbaum said the group would submit a proposal to the hospital, under the new system. The hospital in turn would pay the physician, with costs dependent on the medical procedures required.
 Because the physicians would not be on call, fees would be likely to increase. "The hospital would have to offset the cost of the physician," Rosenbaum said.

US wants to make sure gold buyers aren't cheated when mart opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans will be able to buy gold at the end of this year, and government officials have begun a campaign to make sure they don't get cheated.

The prospect of heavy new gold sales already has started a series of phony schemes, Alfred Rusch, special counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, said Monday.

Bank-regulatory agencies also are setting guidelines for financial institutions dealing in the precious metal after the first of the year.

With an exchange to unauthorized foreign exchange trading that caused major bank losses recently, the comptroller of the currency said national banks who trade gold for their own account must get prior approval from their board of directors.

Federally chartered savings and loan associations will not be allowed to deal in gold at all, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board ruled.

The flows conference was called to caution Americans about shady gold schemes.

At that time, American citizens who heretofore have only been legally allowed to own gold in the form of coins or jewelry will be able to line up at bank windows and buy bullion for hard cash.

1. Be skeptical of spectacular profits. Ask yourself: "Why am I being offered this golden opportunity?"

2. Be skeptical of spectacular profits. Ask yourself: "Why am I being offered this golden opportunity?"

10. Demand a written guarantee concerning weight and purity. Some gold bears a refiner's mark assaying its weight and fineness; however, there are no federal standards.

11. Make your purchases through local reputable firms. The term "exchange" in a firm's name should not be assumed to constitute an association or group of firms which provide a public market like the stock exchange.

12. Obtain in writing the purchase terms — when and how the gold will be delivered and stored, what security precautions will be taken to insure that your gold is not shaved or that counterfeit gold is not substituted.

13. Ask whether the gold will be segregated and stored in your name (not the seller's or supplier's). Make sure you receive a written receipt showing that the requisite amount of gold is being stored for your account by a reputable concern.

14. Ask whether there will be a ready market for the gold in the form being offered to you. You may have to pay to have your gold re-assayed, recast into a different shape, or transported to a distant market before you can sell it.

Analysis

These include sales of "gold bricks" — lead bars passed off as 99 per cent pure gold — and fictitious overseas gold stockpiles that suckers can buy into through warehouse receipts.

Ford, Rocky, aides discuss world's problems

(C) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — President Ford held an unusual session Tuesday with key associates of vice president-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller to hear their views on world energy, raw-material and food problems.

The meeting of the President, Rockefeller and seven key members of Rockefeller's National Commission on Critical Choices for Americans was held as a briefing session, but also served as a bid for presidential support for the commission.

The commission had been expected to fade away with Rockefeller's assumption of the vice-presidency.

"In some form, it is going to continue," said Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, after the 90-minute meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The President spent all of his seven hours here at the Waldorf, meeting first the commission and then attending a Football Hall of Fame dinner and reception. He was in return to Washington before midnight.

Nessen's optimistic view of the commission's future echoed an earlier remark by Rockefeller's spokesman, Hugh Morrow, who said Rockefeller "has every intention of continuing it in one form or another."

Their statements and the presidential meeting that served to lend prestige to the commission contrasted with earlier predictions by Rockefeller aides, including Henry L. Diamond, the commission executive director, that the commission would fade away. These statements were backed up by suggestions to some of the commission's 45 staff members that they look for new jobs.

According to Nessen, there was no specific talk of the commission's future at the meeting where the President heard a series of far-ranging and even radical proposals to meet world and national energy, raw-material and food shortages.

Among them was a proposal that a private contractor be hired to manage the nation's energy program in a fashion similar to the role of private industry in space and ballistic-missile development. The suggestion was made by John Foster, vice president of energy research and development for THW Inc. which provided management service for the intercontinental-ballistics-missile project.

"Frank Zarb, President Ford's choice as federal energy administrator, who participated in the conference, received the proposal favorably, according to Nessen.

"If we don't go down that road, we're in a real predicament to get the job done," Zarb responded, according to Nessen. He added that the president had not reacted directly to that or other proposals.

The other participants at the session — unusual in that the President came to the experts rather than the reverse — were Dr. Edward Teller, father of the hydrogen bomb; Carroll L. Wilson, a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; George D. Woods, former president of the World Bank; Dr. William J. Roman, chairman of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey; Hans Mark, director of Ames Laboratories; and Oscar M. Reubhausen, a New York lawyer. All are members of the commission on critical choices and — most — are long-time associates and advisers of Rockefeller.

Grocery shopping binge bill $40,000

DALLAS (UPI) — Mary Crowley turned loose 200 of her employees in a grocery store Tuesday. They had one hour to get all the groceries they could handle. When the hour was up, Mrs. Crowley's grocery bill came to $40,000.

Mrs. Crowley is the president and sales manager of a company called Home Interiors and Gifts, Inc. The shopping spree was a Christmas present to her employees.

Mrs. Crowley operates three stores in the Dallas area. Only one store participated in Tuesday's bonanza and the employees of the other two will go on their Christmas shopping orgy later this week.

Mrs. Crowley restricted the employees to purchases of nonperishable items, but she gave each of them a $25 gift certificate to purchase meats and other perishable commodities at a later date.

She said she expects her total bill to come to between $90,000 and $70,000.

The most popular item for Tuesday's shoppers was sugar — one employee crammed 24 five-pound bags of sugar in her cart and still found room for other goodies.

Another employee — a bachelor — said he was going to donate his cart of groceries to his church for distribution to needy families.

Freon-caused skin cancer boom looms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It may be too late to head off an increase in skin cancer even if Congress acts right away to control freon gases being released into the atmosphere from aerosol sprays and other sources.

Each, in testimony prepared for the hearing, said a University of Michigan study widely quoted in news reports estimates that ozone destruction would not reach its peak until about 1990, even if all emissions were halted now.

"There are estimates," he added, "that this ozone destruction will result in an additional 8,000 cases of skin cancer by 1990 and at least one prediction that the incidence of skin cancer could be much higher."

Scientists have said that freon gases being released into the air from aerosol sprays, as well as from refrigerators and air conditioners, may be eating away at the ozone layer high in the Earth's atmosphere. That layer is what filters out harmful ultraviolet rays from the sun which, if seriously depleted, increase the risk of skin cancer throughout the world.

"We must immediately begin a comprehensive study so that steps can be taken to defuse this potential time bomb if a health hazard is proven," Esch said as Congress began its first investigation of the problem.

That layer is what filters out harmful ultraviolet rays from the sun which, if seriously depleted, increase the risk of skin cancer throughout the world.

A House Commerce subcommittee, which today opened hearings into the question, has two freon packing bills for a study first and power to state ban freon.

Krey stew cans pulled off shelves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department has ordered all canned beef stew produced by the Krey Packing Co. of Jackson, Tenn., withdrawn from grocery shelves and returned to the stores if consumers have them.

Officials earlier had recalled 24,000 cans of stew produced by the firm under company brand labels for the Kroger and Winn-Dixie supermarket chains.

One can of the stew had been identified earlier by federal officials as contaminated with deadly botulinal bacteria, which caused the death of a Georgia woman.

The Tennessee firm, which also does business as Kelly Foods Inc., produces canned beef stew under all of the following labels: Kelly, Krey, AQ, Thrifty Maid, Krigger, Allen Pride, Hermitage, Lancaster, and Porter.

All cans of the products being recalled will have the number "Est. 712" on the can lid or bottom.

Bakery monopoly charged by FTC

(C) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Continental Baking Company, Inc., the nation's largest baker of bread, was accused by the government Tuesday of attempting to monopolize the wholesale bakery business through the use of a large number of illegal predatory practices.

According to the complaint issued by the Federal Trade Commission, Continental's parent company, International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, "conceals and acquiesces" in "most or all" of the alleged illegal activities. In fact, the complaint said, I.T.T. "controls, approves and benefits from the practices of I.T.T. — Continental" and has set profit and sales targets for Continental so high as to "force I.T.T. Continental managers to behave in a predatory manner."

I.T.T. acquired Continental in 1968 and some of the illegal acts alleged in the agency's complaint go back as far as 1932. But the commission said that most of the complained-of practices continued until this day.

Among the alleged illegal practices charged in the F.T.C.'s complaint was a pattern, on the part of Continental, of reducing prices, sometimes below cost, in places where it had serious competitors and making up the losses by increasing prices in other places.

Continental operates in 30 states and the District of Columbia and is half again larger, in terms of its sales, than the next largest national wholesale bakery, Campbell-Toggart Baking Co.

The company has also followed the practice of systematic concentration of its advertising in areas where it is selling bread at predatory prices, the complaint said. In addition, the complaint charged, the company uses its position as the dominant baker of what are called "snack cakes" to earn profits that far exceed those of Continental's bread. Continental makes the "hostess" line of cakes. The company was also accused of charging different prices to different customers, which is illegal unless there is some sound economic reason for it, such as actual higher costs of serving one customer. Some customers and, in some cases, the employees themselves, were said to have illegally been paid special allowances for giving extra amounts of shelf space to Continental's breads.

In addition, the F.T.C.'s complaint said that the company, which had grown dramatically through mergers, had violated a 1962 order by the commission which forbids it to acquire any more bakeries for a period of 10 years. The contested acquisitions occurred before I.T.T. bought control of the company.

The F.T.C. asked that Continental be split up into two or more companies and that its brand names be licensed to other companies in cases where that would aid competition.

The complaint also proposed that the company be required to maintain records of its sales to permanently open to inspection by the F.T.C.

The new suit against I.T.T. Continental is quite different in its contents from the 1962 consent decree that was filed against I.T.T. by the Justice Department in 1969 and 1970, and settled allegedly as a result of political pressure on the Justice Department by top officials of the Nixon administration.

Though the earlier cases, like this one, all fell under the general legal heading of antitrust suits, they were cases seeking to bar acquisitions by I.T.T.

No change

AGRICULTURE Secretary Earl Butz said in Des Moines, Iowa, Tuesday that the U.S. Agriculture Department's farm policy would not change in view of the Ford administration war on inflation and recession. "Our policy always has been full production and market orientation, and we will not change that," Butz declared. (UPI)

Marijuana users bustin' out, medics say

BOSTON (UPI) — Regular smoking of marijuana can lead to larger breasts in a small percentage of men and women, a Harvard Medical School doctor said today.

"I would think the chances would be in the vicinity of 100-to-1, but that's purely conjecture," said Dr. John E. Harmon. He said the chance would be about the same for those who smoke but often regardless of the sex.

Harmon said he and another Harvard physician had seen 16 male patients with enlarged breasts during the past two years and had operated on four of them to remove excess tissue.

"The largest breasts we've seen definitely look like a woman's breast," he said. Harmon said several of the patients had undergone thorough physical examination to rule out any other possible cause since other drugs are also known to cause breast enlargement.

He said the case studies were also supported by laboratory tests in which rats developed larger breasts after being injected with THC (the ingredient which produces the "high" from marijuana) smoking. The results were reported to the American College of Surgeons in October, he said.

"When the first patient came to us two years ago we naturally asked him what drugs he was taking. He said he wasn't taking any drugs but that he had smoked marijuana a lot," Harmon said. "From then on, the first thing we asked these patients was whether they smoked marijuana."

In all cases, he said, patients admitted smoking marijuana at least three times a week, and some smoked daily.

"He said surgery to correct the problem is simple and urged others to take advantage of it. "It does not necessitate removal of the entire breast. There is — no — scarring or disfigurement," he said.

interested in their problem," Harmon said to prevent a recurrence of the breast enlargement, patients must stop smoking marijuana.

"Our experience is that most patients said they will — but they don't," he said.

NJ deer hunt stirs furor

STIRLING, N.J. (UPI) — Hunters with special permits bagged three dozen deer Tuesday at the Great Swamp National Wildlife Refuge, but environmentalists were outraged that hunting was permitted at the game preserve.

"Wildlife officials said the hunt was necessary to reduce the size of the deer herd and thus prevent many animals from starving, but some conservationists said it would be better to eliminate the deer some other way, including letting wolves loose on the refuge.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia refused earlier Tuesday to block the hunt.

State and federal officials said "there is insufficient food on the 6,000-acre preserve to support the present deer population of 600, and also said, some of the deer were sick from malnutrition. They have allowed 350 deer to be taken by about 400 hunters with special permits."

Soviets seek loan

(C) New York Times Service
LONDON — The Soviet Union is trying to borrow $100 million through a syndicated financing that may prove to be the first of many of the Eurodollar market.

The Moscow Narodny Bank and the National Westminster Bank, both London-based institutions, are forming a syndicate to raise the loan on behalf of the Soviet Foreign Trade Bank, an important international financing arm of the Soviet Union. "So far as we are aware, it is their first time in the syndicated Eurodollar market," a banker close to the negotiations said today. Previously, the Soviet foreign trade bank has borrowed directly from other banks without dealing with a syndicate.

Other banking sources suggested that the Soviet Union was trying to develop expertise in the syndicated Eurodollar market in preparation for substantial additional borrowing to cover the costs of extensive internal development projects.

Syndicated loans involve participation by a number of banks, thereby permitting a borrower to deal indirectly with several lenders. Through the loan now being discussed, the Soviet Union could open new banking relationships with the West.

Purse thief gets surprise

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — A Des Moines purse snatcher may be more careful in picking his next victim, for the thief who made off with the purse of a woman in a local parking lot was in for a couple of surprises.

"I'll bet he was a bit surprised when he found my New Testament and identification that told who I was," said Sister Dale Martin, 32, science teacher at West Des Moines Dowling High School.

Aide hired at Hagerman

HAGERMAN — An unusually heavy first grade enrollment prompted the Hagerman School Board Monday night to authorize the hiring of a teacher's aide to assist the teacher. School Supt. Kenneth Black said there were two additions last week to bring the first grade to 22 children. This is too many first graders for one teacher to adequately handle, he said, and a teacher's aide will be hired when one can be found. The aide will assist with personal attention for the individual child. Black said the third, fourth and sixth grades are down this year but for some unexplained reason an unusually large number of first graders, mostly from the town of Hagerman, have shown up this year. The school board set Thursday as the date for an open house in the district's new elementary school. Children of the district moved into the school several weeks ago and while some final items are still awaiting to complete such things as permanent partitions in the restrooms, Black said the school is functioning well. The open house will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. with tours of the building conducted for anyone interested. Trustees also agreed with a proposal from the superintendent to join all other districts in the county in a cooperative program for speech, therapy and psychology services. Black said if all of the districts, including Bliss, Hagerman, Wendell and Gooding, approve the program they could hire one therapist and one psychologist and share the salary and travel expenses.

Plot fulfills woman's dream

LONDON (UPI) — Housewife Coldagh Dean lost one child and longed to have another. So she told her husband she was pregnant and wore a special padded corset. When the time came for her to enter the hospital for the "birth," she went to a maternity home instead and walked out with a month-old baby girl. "I was obsessed with having a baby," Mrs. Dean told a London court Monday. "Words cannot convey the empty longing that a childless woman has for a baby." Police arrested the woman Sept. 11, several hours after she took month-old Victoria Faulkner from a maternity home at Beckenham south of London. The baby was returned unharmed.

NH ballot count goes on

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — New Hampshire's Ballot Law Commission, peering at times with a flashlight and magnifying glass at contested paper ballots, has given five-term Rep. James Wyman, R-N.H., a three-vote lead over Democrat John Durkin in a Senate recount. The lead represented Wyman's largest margin since unofficial final totals on election night gave him a 20-vote lead. Durkin's attorney, James Durkin, said that a spokesman for Thomson said it was unlikely there would be any council action regarding the election. The governor alone has authority to call a special election, which Wyman had suggested last week. Hearings were scheduled Friday for Wyman's two state court cases, one seeking a new election if "illegal votes" were counted, the other asking approval of ballot commission policy to count write-ins on machines when a candidate's name appears on the machine. Commission hearings resume today despite a request from Durkin's lawyer that further hearings be suspended to allow preparing for upcoming federal and state court battles. Gov. Meldrim Thomson and the all-Republican Executive Council also meet today but five days after agreeing to revoke Durkin's certification of victory. Durkin's attorney said that a spokesman for Thomson said it was unlikely there would be any council action regarding the election. The governor alone has authority to call a special election, which Wyman had suggested last week. Hearings were scheduled Friday for Wyman's two state court cases, one seeking a new election if "illegal votes" were counted, the other asking approval of ballot commission policy to count write-ins on machines when a candidate's name appears on the machine.

Grocer shoots suspects

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dan Cassin said he "had to turn the tables," so he shot and killed one robbery suspect and wounded another Monday when the two armed men came into his grocery. They came in like storm troopers, shooting and beating people. And this time I just couldn't stand and watch," said Cassin, owner of Alewife Grocery Store. The failed holdup was the fourth in four years Cassin has owned the store. Earlier this year, the store's cleanup man, 50-year-old Louis Carruth, was severely beaten during a robbery. Cassin said the two men came in the store Monday, fired at least one shot, their attack beating Carruth. Cassin, who was working among the shelves near the center of the store, pulled his own .38-caliber pistol and rushed to the struggle. He killed an unidentified young man who had shot Carruth in the leg. He shot the second hand, who was heading toward Cassin's unattended wife at the cash register. The second suspect, tentatively identified as Willie Lee Foster, 21, of Columbus, was in Grady Hospital with a bullet wound in the back. "I've got friends underground, dead and buried because they said, 'Take all I've got,' then were killed so there wouldn't be any witnesses left alive to a $15 holdup," said Cassin. "I've got a responsibility to my employees and my customers."

Pollution firm aids own coal plant land

BOISE (UPI) — The land that Idaho Power company needs for its coal-fired electrical plant southwest of Boise is going to cost $50,000. In addition, KBOI-TV learned Monday, the land belongs to three men, two of whom are top officials of a corporation that manufactures pollution controls for coal-fired electrical plants. The land is owned by James Ballantine Jr. and Robert Halliday, both Boise, and Michael Dingham, New York City. Halliday is chairman of the board and Dingham is president of Wiscelator Corp., which produces electrostatic filters. A spokesman for the firm's air pollution plant in Pittsburgh, Pa., told KBOI that specifications have not been received from Idaho Power's environmental consultants but the company did plan to submit bids on the project.

Pilot error caused Utah crash

DENVER (UPI) — The pilot of an Air Force fighter flew into a light plane over southern Utah last month because he thought it was an air-tanker with which he was rendezvousing the chief investigator of the mishap said today. George B. Baker of the National Transportation Safety Office in Denver said all work at the crash site near Kanab in southeastern Utah has been completed and a report is now being prepared. But Baker reported Air Force Capt. Peter A. Granger, 33, Fairport, N.D., said under questioning he had spotted the revolving red beacon atop the smaller plane and thought it was the tanker. All information indicates the F111A fighter-bomber was flying at 17,000 feet, Baker said. The tanker was at 20,000 feet and the fighter was supposed to come up under the tanker with 2,000 feet vertical clearance for returning. Baker said the twin-engine plane, piloted by Royce J. Jett, 34, Bluff, Mont., was supposed to be at 16,500 feet at the highest, "but he, of course, had to be at 17,000 feet to get hit by the F111." The area between 18,000 and 21,000 feet had been cleared by the Air Force controller for the night-time refueling practice. Baker said the Air Force plane was 100 feet below the minimum cleared level but that 100 feet is not considered far off and altimeter error might account for much of it. "The Air Force pilot came up under the Turbo Commander and hit it," Baker said. "Granger told us he saw a red light in the position the tanker should have been in and flew toward it. He thought at the time he had collided with the tanker. It wasn't until later when he was on the ground that he learned it was another plane."

Erlichman's emotion leaves hush over crowded courtroom

WASHINGTON (UPI)—John D. Erlichman choked up Tuesday as he told of asking a former Richard Nixon to explain to the Erlichman children why he was being fired.

Erlichman's tears were not the first that were shed in the crowded courtroom.

Justifying his defense, Erlichman told how he and former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman drove to the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., on April 29, 1973, as the Watergate cover-up unraveled.

Haldeman told me the president had decided I should resign, and this meeting was for the purpose of talking about it," said Erlichman, the former chief domestic adviser.

Erlichman said he and Nixon talked on the terrace and three inside.

"He said in substance that this was very painful for him," Erlichman said.

"How could you tell that?" asked lawyer William S. French.

"In his demeanor. He broke down at one point and cried," Erlichman said.

He said he regretted very much having to take this step. He said he felt it had been or tried to be his conscience. I replied I hadn't been as effective as I would have liked.

"He said that on reflection I had been right, and that he would like to help me with my attorneys' fees, if attorneys' fees were necessary. He had a large sum of money available to him."

"I told him I could not accept that offer. He asked if there was anything else he could do for me. I said that sometime I would like him to explain to our children."

Erlichman broke down. He whispered, "Excuse me," took off his glasses, reached for a water glass and said again in a small voice, "Excuse me."

In the audience, his wife Jeanne, mother of his five children, dropped her head and closed her eyes. She danced at them with a hankie.

Haldeman, 50, sign of emotion showing, looked at his old friend.

Presiding Judge John J. Sirica called a recess. Erlichman wiped his glasses, and French had to tell him to leave through the witnesses' door as he mistakenly headed for the judge's exit.

The audience and lawyers, who normally crowd toward the door, stayed motionless for several moments.

After the 20-minute recess, French began a new line of questioning. But Erlichman said he wanted "to go forward on that answer I was working on."

"It's important to me," he said in a strong voice.

The president asked - I said he could explain to our children why he was asking me to leave. That basically was the end of the meeting.

A day after the tearful meeting, on April 30, 1973, Nixon announced to the nation the resignations of Haldeman and Erlichman, "two of the finest public servants it has been my privilege to know."

Resuming his testimony, Erlichman denied he had ever advocated anything to Nixon less than "full disclosure" of all the facts of Watergate.

Earlier in the trial, Herbert W. Krimbach, formerly Nixon's personal lawyer and fundraiser, broke down on the stand as he told of approaching a friend for money used in hush payments to the original Watergate defendants.

US fuel status eyed by expert

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A year after the energy crisis and Arab oil embargo, the United States is "less — not more — self-sufficient in fuels," an industry man contends.

F. Donald Hart, president of the American Gas Association, could see a little good and much bad in the developments of the past year.

The good news, he told the President's Energy Resources Council, is that the Alaskan oil pipeline is being built, the embargo is over and there is a new energy research program.

The bad news, he said, is that world oil prices are still high, Canada is gradually cutting off its oil exports, oil shale is falling from energy planning, natural gas supplies are dwindling and Congress has done too little.

"We are importing more oil from foreign sources than ever before," Hart said. "On balance, one year after the oil

New birth control medicine studied

HOUSTON (UPI) — Researchers are on the trail of a new birth control medicine which they hope will avoid the complications with side effects and will only have to be taken once every three months.

Dr. Roy G. Smith of the Baylor College of Medicine and his scientists have isolated an important protein that unites with the sex hormone progesterone to ready the uterus for the fertilized egg. If they find a nontoxic chemical to prevent that process, the pill could be available within 10 years, Smith said.

He told the American Chemical Society's southwestern regional meeting Tuesday that the chemical should be easier than isolating the protein, which took four years of research.

Smith said the method embargo, we have done a great deal of talking but have taken very few positive steps. As a result, we are even less self-sufficient now than when the crisis hit the headlines."

In related developments:

— Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., accused the Ford administration of stalling on efforts to work out an energy program acceptable to both the White House and Congress.

— The Trilateral Commission, composed of business, economic and academic leaders of North America, Western Europe and Japan, urged international cooperation to solve energy problems.

— Federal Energy Administrator John Sawhill announced a "Project Escalator," a task force of 30 investigators to find out whether and where fuel oil dealers "gouged" public utilities that burn oil.

should be perfected in animals within two years, but the Food and Drug Administration testing could take seven to 10 years more.

He said the method should vastly improve today's birth control pill, which must be taken daily to prevent ovulation and has numerous side effects.

"There will be no side effects," he said. "That's the reason for this work."

He said the only possible problems would be rare individual reactions to whatever chemical is used.

Smith said the chemical would be administered locally probably by implanting a small pellet in the uterine wall. The pellet would slowly dissolve releasing the chemical and would last three months or more, he said.

Casualties mount

SAIGON (UPI) — The Saigon government said today the number of Viet Cong "killed" has pushed Communist and South Viet namese casualties to more than 200,000 since both sides signed a peace pact nearly two years ago.

A Communist spokesman said over 11,000 government and Viet Cong troops were killed or wounded in the six-day-old battle for the Mekong Delta, the rice basket of the country.

He said Communists accounted for most of the latest casualties, raising the number of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese losses to 100,000 since Jan. 29, 1972 truce.

The government also reported 26,325 South Vietnamese soldiers killed, 107,183 wounded and 14,459 missing and presumed dead or captured since the truce.

In heavy fighting today, Communist soldiers seized a village on the main road to Vietnam's vegetable farms, sending more than 16,000 refugees fleeing from their homes.

Fathers should support

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — A large proportion of the children of welfare mothers have fathers who could afford to make child-support payments but are not doing so, according to a new government study.

The study, conducted by the General Accounting Office, is the first ever made of the incomes of the absentee fathers of children on welfare.

It showed that the median income of these fathers was $712 a month, or $8,544 a year. In other words, half the fathers had more income than the median figure and half had less.

The mothers of their children, on the other hand, had a median income of $289 a month or $3,468 a year, including their welfare payments, despite the fact that half of the mothers worked at least part-time.

The study was limited to fathers who had agreed to make child-support payments, either under a court order or voluntarily.

But the study found widespread lack of compliance with the child-support agreement and no correlation between ability-to-pay and actual payments.

Only one-quarter of the fathers who had agreed to make support payments were regularly paying at least 50 percent of what they were supposed to pay.

The over-all noncompliance record of fathers of children on welfare was not significantly different from what has been found in other studies of child-support payments that were not limited to welfare recipients.

Rep. Marjorie H. Griffiths, D-Mich., who had asked that the study be done and who discussed its findings in a speech to the House of Representatives recently, said that the federal government should force absentee fathers to make their child-support payments.

Miss Bergey, Wolfe recite nuptial vows

JEROME Beverly Bergey and Mitchell Wolfe were married in an intimate ceremony Nov. 26 at the Jerome First Baptist Church.

Rev. Vernon Kendall performed the double-ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bergey and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Wolfe, all Jerome.

The bride, pylon in marriage attire, wore a long, patterned gown of white tulle with a fitted bodice and softly gathered skirt. It featured a scoop neckline edged with lace and long sleeves trimmed with lace and seed pearls. The skirt was finished with a wide flounce of lace.

Her three-quarter-length veil of nylon net was trimmed with chandelier lace and was held in place by a cap of matching lace and satin trimmed with two rows of seed pearls.

She carried a nosegay bouquet of pink baby roses, lavender carnations and white baby eucalyptus surrounded with baby's breath and tied with white streamers knotted with miniature pink roses.

Pats Barnes was maid of honor and Denise Bush was bridesmaid. Cinda and Michelle Wolfe, sisters of the bridegroom, were candlelighters. Alena Lancaster was flower girl.

Mike Gladowski was best man. Ushers were Wayne Bergey, brother of the bride, and Tracy Wolfe, brother of the bridegroom. Travis Atwood was ringbearer.

Shirley Bentzinger was organist. Sylvia Walters was soloist and Dora Barnes and Ora Lee Peterson sang a duet. The couple was honored at a reception following the ceremony in the church basement.

Shannon Barnes was in charge of the guest book. The gift table was covered with a white linen cloth and decorated with white candles and a lavender floral arrangement tied with purple streamers.

The four-tiered cake was iced in white and decorated with lavender roses. White bells and doves topped the cake. The bells were centered with lavender violets.

Cinda and Michelle Wolfe poured cake and served by Dolores Olson and Carmine Foster. Other reception assistants included Margaret Atwood, Barbara Stein and Melvyn Stein.

Major home fire causes listed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Electric stoves, gas stoves and television sets are the leading cause of fires in the home, a government study said Monday.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission and the National Bureau of Standards estimated there were 5.5 million household and personal property fires in the country in the 12 months ending last April.

There were 3.4 million appliance fires. Of these, electric stoves, with 155,000 fires, were the leading cause followed by gas stoves with 360,000 and television sets with 196,000.

Nearly half of the appliance fires involved food and grease.

The report said the next most common source of household fires was electrical wiring followed by cigarettes and matches.

The survey, described as the first attempt to draw up a statistically accurate look at American household fires, said there were 225,000 injuries in the fires during the period involved with a property loss of $1.5 billion.

Of the 5.5 million fires, 4.5 million were in homes while the remainder were in vacation homes, care-of-other-buildings on private property.

Fashionettes

Designer Halston has scored one for the Girl Watchers of America. In his new spring line he has skirts called the skip — about the old mini length.

"American women are known for their beautiful legs, and men have missed them so much," he said.

The scarf-covered head will be in fashion's front ranks for spring. In most designer collections shown to fashion reporters, the scarf-covered head appeared frequently with the "showing" of daytime clothes.

Collection ousts stripper look

CHICAGO — There are no strings in Tom Briganee's swimwear collection because he says, "I'm in business to dress women. There's a little too much of the stripper look in the string."

The designer prefers a more fabric than the string requires in his designs whether they're two piece or one. "Frankly, there aren't that many women in the world who look sensational in very abbreviated suits," he maintains. "Many women need a little camouflage or helpful items like a soft built-in bra, and most of my customers ask for briefs that cut up too high on the thigh because they're more flattering."

His resort collection plays up the bright prints such as jungle florals and sparsely abstracts for which he's known. He's paired a simple jersey and a mat stretchable lycra (which is similar to girdle fabric but softer) which forms to the body contours beautifully.

In addition to two-piece styles he does one-piece tank styles; one-shouldered silhouettes and mailots with high back which are reminiscent of the 50s, but with less construction and softer fabrics.

School imparts Yule spirit through fragrance, sound

BY DOUGLAS R. SEASE
JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Seven-year-old Windy Forrest has been memorizing her lines for her school's Christmas pageant, and now has her part down pat.

She's to sing "It's a time when all are jolly and windows glow with wreaths of holly."

This requires a bit of imagination on Windy's part, since she's been blind since birth and has little concept of glowing windows.

But she knows about Santa Claus and Christmas trees and gifts, and she's as jolly as St. Nick himself as she puts the finishing touches on her Christmas list.

"I'm kind of a little giggler," she apologized as she practiced reciting the list, which includes a house and wardrobe for her five Barbie dolls.

Windy attends the Mississippi School for the Blind, and her teachers have been telling her about Santa Claus.

"He's a jolly man, of course," she said, "and he's got a white beard. They say it's white as snow but I don't know 'cause I can't really see it."

Windy can faintly perceive light through her left eye but nothing through her right. She explained her condition matter-of-factly, stumbling several times over the word "glaucoma."

"I'm not doing very well at saying it," she conceded, "so I guess I better quit trying."

About 140 children are enrolled at the Mississippi School for the Blind, and the teachers try to impart the spirit of Christmas to the children through sound and fragrance.

"We always have a real Christmas tree to get the smell," said Mrs. Fahla Smith, one of the teachers and the self-appointed director of Christmas activities. "And the children really enjoy the sound of Christmas."

Carels are played on record players — Jingle Bells more often than others and the school makes every effort to get the children to as many musical programs in the Jackson area as possible. The Jackson Symphony's presentation of Handel's "Messiah" ranks as the favorite.

But the best part of the Christmas season for the children begins Dec. 20 when parents come from throughout the state to take their youngsters home for a week or two.

"My daddy will be home from the oil rig so I can be with him Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and half a day Thursday," Windy said with a grin.

Planning a wedding?

Your wedding may be the most important event in your life. We wish you every happiness.

In order to obtain the best possible news and picture coverage of your engagement and marriage a few newspaper rules should be kept in mind.

Time deadlines are important. Engagement stories and pictures must be run in the paper before the wedding. Space is short, and engagement stories take some time to process, so it helps to bring in or mail the information as early as possible.

Pictures of the wedding must be received by the Times-News within two weeks after the event. Beyond two weeks, wedding pictures will not be printed. Remind your photographer of the deadline.

After the two-week deadline, wedding stories will be printed; but often in shortened form as space permits. After three months, wedding stories will no longer be printed.

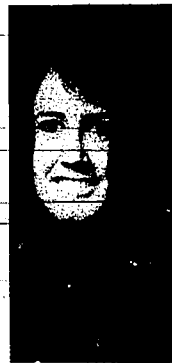

There is no charge for printing wedding and engagement pictures and stories.

TF club uses Yule theme

TWIN FALLS — The spirit of Christmas and giving was the theme of the Magic Valley Saultpaulia Club meeting Monday at the home of Mrs. Floyd H. Juman.

Table decorations and favors were furnished by Mrs. William Hall, hostess, and Mrs. Carol Hiley, co-hostess.

Guest officers of the club will serve for the coming year. Suggestions for next year's program were given, by members. Secret pals were revealed with a gift exchange and new names drawn. Mrs. Alma Requía, Boise, was a guest.

The next meeting will be Jan. 13.

Stunt nets woman tidy sum

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (UPI) — During a five-minute marathon dash, Carolyn Koester scooped up more cash at the Toy National Bank than her husband, a baker, makes in a month.

Mrs. Koesters, 29, plucked up $1,712.50 in loose currency and coins from the vault floor in a promotional stunt to mark the opening of the new bank.

While on her six-lap run from the vault to an armored car parked outside the bank, the 5-foot-6, 130-pound mother of five managed to carry two 40-pound bags of coins at once.

"I was wobbling like a penguin," Mrs. Koester said Tuesday. "I really should have gone into training for that, but my husband and kids just kept telling to scoop faster." "I've never run like that before and I guess I showed most people who only thought the most I could get was $500."

"Today I'm floating, though."

We just ordered a dining room table and for the first time Sunday the whole family will be able to sit down to a dinner together. We also got a washer and dryer so there will be no more trips to the laundromat."

Mrs. Koesters, a production-line worker at a Zenith Radio Corp. plant, now is known to her co-workers as "the superwoman." She said the best part of her performance Saturday is that her children will get "a full Christmas."

"It would have been a little short otherwise," she said, "and it is still hard to believe. We also got a $500 gift certificate and I opened a savings account at the bank so we can let that grow."

World prices up

Courtesy Sinclair & Co.

WASHINGTON (GNS) — An Agriculture Department survey of food prices in 15 world capitals revealed prices advanced again from Sept. 4 to Nov. 6, USDA reported today in its Foreign Agricultural Service magazine.

In the European countries, higher feed costs have pushed poultry, beef and pork prices up.

In the United States, advancing grain prices have affected retail prices of many commodities.

In contrast, West Germany had the lowest rate of gain — only 3.8 per cent, versus Brazil's 41.9 per cent hike.

New York Times Service
NEW YORK — Business

Do not trifle with Prof. David Klein.

Klein looks like a nice, upper middle-class type. Most of the time he is. Sometimes he's not.

... behave reasonably outrageously by current standards," he admits without a hint of hedging or shilly-shallying.

Klein has a middle-class hang-up. He doesn't care about his credit rating (although it's still impeccable); he doesn't give a hoot whether business organizations and their employees think he's cheap or crazy, or both, and he isn't a bit abashed about making a scene, as long as the scene is quiet and well-kept.

Klein is at war with the system "and if more people did what I do, business practices might improve," he said.

A distinguished looking man with a serious mien, twinkling eyes and a waxy beard, Klein began his campaign three or four years ago "when things began to deteriorate."

Take, for instance, one of his early experiences — a mere skirmish, but enough to whet the appetite.

The professor arrived at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal after a tiring air trip and was told that his confirmed reservation could not be honored.

"I will give you three minutes to find me a room," he told the clerk, quietly but firmly. "After three minutes, I am going to address in the lobby, put on my pajamas and go to sleep on one of the sofas."

He got a room, he also got a lot of cheers and pats on the back from scores of other men also waiting for overbooked rooms.

"But," Klein recalled a little sadly, "None of them would go ahead and do the same thing. I think I made my point in a reasonable, courteous way, but also took a no-nonsense approach."

More recently, Klein, who has a master's degree from Columbia University, and is a professor of social science and human development at Michigan State University, has had several run-ins with retail operations. As a result, he has evolved his own charge system. He bills the store for any time he spends clearing up errors they have made on his orders or his account.

The current Klein rate is $10 a letter, a reasonable fee, he points out, when one considers not only his time but such expenses as photostamping checks that have already been cashed. Telephone calls are billed at $2 each. The fee scale is pre-inflation and is open to adjustment.

"I simply deduct the amount from my monthly charge account bill," he explained. "I add the total amount of time spent on letters and telephone calls when I'm billed in correctly, or if orders come incomplete, or if merchandise is unsatisfactory."

"The complaint system has always struck me as terribly one-sided," he continued. "The store has people to handle complaints, and those people not only get paid to handle them but the basic cost of the department is added to the merchandise. The customer is not only paying a higher cost for everything because of store errors, but he or she is also expected to spend time writing or telephoning to clear up something that should never have happened in the first place."

To date, the several stores that have encountered the Klein method of retaliation have, eventually, deducted his "fee" from that amount owed them.

"I do this as much as a matter of principle as a matter of making money," the professor said.

"A lot of middle-class people live in terror of being considered cheap," he said. "I don't worry about that."

Klein, whose wife, Marynae, is a freelance editor "much less aggressive than I and a very sweet, nice woman," believes that there is a moral in history.

"One of the few nice things about being middle or upper middle class is that you have an enormous amount of elbow room," he said. "If people used it in the right way, they could make enormous changes in retailing, and in other practices."

Student honored

BURLEY — Dan Kelly was selected "student of the month" for November at Klamath Business University in Spokane, Wash. He was elected by the student council for his individual achievements.

Dan maintains a "B" grade average, is vice president of the student body, instructor for the ski club and active in other school functions.

He is the son of Betty Mc Murray of Burley and William Kelly of Spokane.

Free service for runaways

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — If you're a runaway and won't be home for Christmas, the state of Connecticut is offering a free telephone service to say hello to the folks back home.

There are no strings attached in the offer, according to the spokesman for the state Department of Children and Youth Services.

"It's completely confidential, no tricks, no traces or traps. It's free of charge and free of hassle," he said.

The department said runaways may call from anywhere in the United States by dialing the agency at 1-800-231-6946.

Sun's energy supply tapped

SPokane, Wash. (UPI) — Solar heating in the cold wastes of the Pacific Northwest, James Piper thinks it can be done.

For the past few years, Piper, 42, a control valve manufacturer turned building contractor, has been installing solar energy systems in southern California apartments. Now, he is installing a system in a home under construction here, where four seasons should give it a steady test.

Piper's system, which he calls solar hydraulics, basically involves using the sun's unending energy supply as the less-than-bath-space-and-water-heating. He says it uses 50 percent less energy consumption and cost than a conventional tank.

The system involves passing water through one or a number of solar panels, capable of heating water to up to 190 degrees.

The hot water is then passed through a pipe system to a storage tank much like a conventional hot water tank. From the tank, water can be drawn off for use in the laundry, for washing clothes, and dishes and for general tap use.

The hot water serves the same of the space heating system as well, passing through a second network of pipes to centrally located heat exchangers coils in joists between floors.

Coupled with each coil is a blower that draws the cool air from the room, over the coil, heated by the water, and back into the room as hot air.

"Water heating systems go back to the age of the Greeks," Piper says, "and, interestingly enough, they were heating water 3,000 years ago with solar energy. These systems worked very well."

Piper estimates the cost of installing his system in a new home at about $4,600, versus about $1,000 to $1,200 for a conventional unit.

Piper says it will pay for itself the first winter of use.

While his system has a backup gas or electric heating unit to kick in when the solar panels are not generating enough heat, Piper says on the average, the panels will heat water more efficiently than now.

"The rule of thumb is that as long as you see a shadow, you're collecting solar energy and heating water," he adds.

Piper doesn't pass his solar hydraulic system off as the panacea of the nation's energy woes, but says it is a reasonable alternative to total dependence on electricity or natural gas — both of which are energy-wasting systems.

A Lovelier You HOW BUSY CAN YOU GET?

By Mary Sue Miller

You are not so busy, are you, that you skip putting on lipstick at least a dozen times a day? Or spend an hour a week doing your nails, and more rolling your hair? But when it comes to exercise, most of us contend we simply do not have time for it. Certainly not in this busy season.

Yet workouts are vital to your appearance. In a real sense, exercise is a cosmetic that contributes to healthful, handsome looks. The boon to the figure alone makes it worth the effort. Give just 10 minutes a day to the toning routine below and it will help prevent or overcome flabby muscles. And the firmer the muscles, the trimmer the figure. Even in a season of feasting.

To perform: stand tall, contract the abdomen and hold for 10 slow counts. Now pull in the waist, and then the buttock muscles. Next pull up knee and thigh muscles. Each area in turn, 10 counts. Finish by extending the arms and flexing the upper arm muscles.

It may require several weeks of practice to get the muscles working properly, especially in the leg and arm areas. Once you get the hang of the routine, most of it can be done while you do something else — Waiting for the pot to boil, for instance.

No hedging. The routine has a history of success with Lovelies. It will work for you, if you work at it.

SPOT REDUCING EXERCISES

Spot reduction — key to a proportioned figure. Exercise is the only way to trim those stubborn bulges — to lose inches exactly where you wish. South won, drew trumps with three leads, cashed his last two high spades and then made what he thought was a cunning lead of the four of diamonds.

West hopped up with his ace, led a diamond back and eventually South had to lead a club. East took the trick with the 10, led back a club and South was one down.

South had been about as cunning as a jackass. If he had led the king of diamonds instead of the four West would have been unable to beat the contract. If he took the trick he would have had to put South in dummy to get a club lead and if he checked he would have been thrown in with the ace and ended played.

DEAR ABBY: After 26 years of marriage, my wife died suddenly, and I married again one year later. This displeased my mother because she was very fond of my first wife, although she saw little of her because we lived in California and Mother lived in Connecticut.

I phoned Mother last night to wish her a happy birthday, and before completing the conversation, I added my new wife's best regards. (They had never met.) That's when all you-know-what broke loose.

Between Mother's tears and the tirade that followed, she let me know that she was furious that she had not as yet received any communication from my bride, introducing herself to her new family, etc. My wife, on the other hand, being British and therefore very proper, insists that it was Mother's place to have written to HER, welcoming her into the family, etc.

One lady must yield

I find myself torn between two women, each of whom I love dearly. Neither one will give an inch. What do the etiquette books say is the correct procedure?

And is there a way out of my dilemma?

TORN IN WOODSIDE

DEAR TORN: "Etiquette" is far less important than good family relations. Obviously one lady must yield, and I suggest that you do so with respect to your mother. Ask your wife should write to your mother (or phone her) and make the first move.

Being British (and "therefore proper") is no excuse for being stubborn and therefore arrogant.

DEAR ABBY: Because my mother thought my boyfriend and I were getting a little too serious, she violated my privacy, and read my personal mail from David.

In one letter he said he loved me and hoped we could move in together soon.

When I came into my room and found my mother standing there with that letter in her hand, I asked, "Why did you sneak into my personal things?"

She replied, "Because I love you, and don't want to see you hurt." Then she asked, "Why didn't you tell me?" To which I had no other choice but to answer, "Because I love you, and don't want to see you hurt."

How's that for irony?

DAVID'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: You don't say how hold you are, but if you are a minor, your mother is responsible for your well-being. This doesn't give her the right to violate your privacy, however.

DEAR ABBY: You are not wrong to have used your common sense and logic concerning the question of whether the man could marry his former daughter-in-law. (You said that since they were not related by blood there was nothing incestuous about it. The "law" differed with you.)

It is disheartening that logic has fallen (or been pushed) into so much dispute. The legal minds that were so quick to correct you could have better served justice by initiating action to remove such unreasonable laws from their state statutes.

M.P.: PALMER, ALASKA

DEAR M.P.: Thanks. I needed that!

Support lags on new sex book

(c) New York Times Service
NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A new edition of the sex-information booklet that has become somewhat of a trademark for Yale University's nationally known sex-education program went to press last week and the revisions have apparently caused the school's administration to weaken its support of the booklet.

The original version of "Sex and the Yale Student" was produced in 1970 with "the collaboration and blessing of the university," in the words of one high university official. Faculty members assisted, and Yale officials sanctioned the booklet's distribution to freshmen.

However, the official said the new edition "is an independent student project." As a result of an agreement between the student editors and Yale's secretary, it will carry a notice reading, "This book is written by a group of Yale students and is not an official university publication."

Of principal concern to university officials are two photographs illustrating the use of birth-control devices. The photographs are described by the student editors as part of an attempt at the "humanization and feminization" of the new edition.

"The last book was really impersonal," said Bobbi Mark, one of the editors. "We wanted to put people and faces into this one."

Catherine Carr, the editor, explained: "This is a chance to open things up educationally and say it's all right to show male as well as female genitals. We're willing to risk whatever outsiders or alumni might think, because this book is intended to help Yale students."

"It's an excellent book in its text," said Dr. Philip Sarrel, the sex specialist who was adviser to the booklet editors. "But I have mixed feelings about the pictures. They may cause negative reactions that may well cancel out the effectiveness of the rest of the book."

The original publication helped gain wide recognition for Dr. Sarrel and the non-credit course on human sexuality that he teaches with his wife, Lorna.

Demand from other colleges for the booklet prompted its student writers to expand the publication and have it commercially distributed under the title, "Student Guide to Sex on Campus."

In addition to their course, which has been attended by more than 2,500 undergraduates since its inception — the Sarrels run a sex-counseling service that is so popular that getting an appointment requires about six weeks.

'Fifth' heads for oblivion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The familiar "fifth" of whiskey and wine is headed for oblivion. The closest thing to the "fifth" will be the 750-milliliter bottle.

As part of a nationwide conversion to the metric system, the Treasury Department said today that domestic and imported wines must be bottled in seven standard metric sizes beginning Jan. 1, 1975.

The department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms will publish similar proposed rules for distilled spirits in a few weeks.

The new size closest to the fifth will be 750 milliliters, or 25.4 ounces. This is just a fraction smaller than the fifth's 25.6 ounce size.

Domestic wine is now sold in 27 different bottle sizes and imported wine in 27. The new standards "should facilitate buyer comparison and unit pricing of wines by retail stores," said Treasury Secretary William Simon.

One exception is old wine which has been aging in the bottle and will not be sold until after 1979. The rules allow the old bottle to be used provided it is certified that the bottling occurred before the conversion deadline.

Next time you prepare scalloped potatoes, vary the recipe by adding shredded swiss cheese to your white sauce along with a hint of basil and some chopped green onions. It's a nice flavor change from your usual recipe.

Study shows revenue sharing plan flaws

Homemade items adorn WH tree

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scraps and paper adorn this year's White House Christmas tree. "We tried to use an old fashioned theme," First Lady Betty Ford said Tuesday. "There is a sort of tradition in our family of having an old fashioned family Christmas and we brought it into the White House." "Tradition wasn't the only consideration in decorating the 2 1/2 foot fir tree in the Blue Room. "Anyone reading the paper" knows the economy is not in the best shape, she said, adding, "Increasing prices certainly affected my budget." "The tree is decorated completely with home made ornaments such as quilt balls, and other decorations made from sewing basket scraps, paper and strings. There were only a few commercial decorations. The ceiling-high tree was designed to use less than 100 watts of electricity.

New York Times Service — WASHINGTON — A year-long examination of Federal General Revenue Sharing made by four civic and public interest organizations has concluded that the $2.3-billion program has several serious flaws and has not worked out in the way most legislators intended it to.

participation in budget decisions. Also, the report said, the expenditure of revenue-sharing funds has dealt only slightly with the needs of the poor and the aged population. Further, the report said, use of the federal funds did not end job discrimination in many localities.

Review — said that they would issue additional reports on revenue sharing in the next three months. The preliminary report comes just a month after a study by the advisory commission on intergovernmental relations made some of the same criticism — but in milder terms — and urged the continuation of revenue sharing.

$15 billion to states and communities. The study found that citizen groups had formed in many areas to act as watchdog over the revenue-sharing expenditures in their communities. But their participation was judged ineffective by the local influencers and the participants. As in most budget proceedings, the watchdog groups were not put in order, the report said.

poverty worker who said, "public hearings just give citizens a chance to yell." Often, local citizens who stand to gain from the new revenue simply do not know how to take part — either because the budget meetings are not publicized, are too complicated or irrelevant to the poor, the report said. "Data in the report purport to show that local expenditures for social services averaged less than 2 per cent of federal revenue-sharing funds in 1973 and 1974.

The commissioners also announced the re-appointment of all board members whose terms expire at the end of the year. These include Evelyn Christoffersen and Robert Brackett, both Twin Falls; H. W. Pierce, Piler, and Lyle Schmitzer, Hollister.

Aides join to weaken amendment

Washington Star-News — WASHINGTON — Senate leaders are trying to weaken the House-passed "Holt amendment," which both the Ford administration and civil rights organizations say would cut enforcement of laws banning sexual and racial discrimination.

Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., have introduced an "amendment to the amendment" which would virtually nullify its effect. In the past, both leaders have joined to weaken anti-busing efforts passed by the House.

Health, Education and Welfare from investigating alleged racial discrimination in Anne Arundel (Md.) County Schools. The Holt amendment would prevent HEW from withholding federal funds from any school district refusing to provide the government with statistics on the racial, sexual or ethnic composition of its students or teachers.

The amendment also prohibits HEW from requiring a school district to assign students or teachers in classrooms on the basis of race, sex or ethnic background.

Consumer costs up

OTTAWA (UPI) — Statistics Canada reported today that consumer prices were climbing at an annual rate of 12 per cent in November, the highest rate in 26 years.

average annual increase was the highest since the period October, 1946, over October, 1947, when consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 12.2 per cent.

Senate leaders hope, however, that the House will accept "amended" amendment, because it is part of a $1.5 billion appropriations bill providing federal funds for a variety of purposes, ranging from aid to local schools to $200,000 for the transition expenses, pension and allowances of former President Richard M. Shoshone girl injured

SHOSHONE — A 20-year-old Shoshone girl was admitted to St. Boniface's Hospital Monday night for treatment of burns received when she tried to extinguish blazing oil in a pan.

Diane Sorensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Sorensen, told her parents she had left the kitchen momentarily and then returned to find cooking oil ablaze in a pan. She then picked up the pan and the blazing oil splashed onto her right side. Her right hand was most severely burned.

Miss Sorensen was alone in the home at the time. She called neighbors who took her to a Shoshone physician's office. From there she was taken by ambulance to the hospital in Jerome.

The neighbors also put out the fire in the kitchen.

Miss Sorensen was described in "fairly good" condition at the hospital this morning.

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Rev. William Johnson got his Christmas cards out early this year — all 50,000 of them.

Families and friends of Illinois prisoners should be getting them any day now.

Johnson, who has worked for 4 years with the men and women in Illinois jails, was asked by state officials last month to come up with six or seven Christmas cards for each of the state's 7,100 juvenile and adult inmates.

"I had never met the man," said Robert Colly, director of public relations for the Illinois Department of Corrections. "But I knew of his work. I guess I called him out of sheer desperation."

Colly said the state is committed to provide Christmas cards for prison inmates to send their families, but a problem arose because Hallmark Cards Inc., which normally donates leftover cards from the past year, declined this year due to the economic situation. The state has printed its own cards a few times, but by the time Hallmark made its decision, the Corrections Department thought it was too late to take on the task.

It took Johnson less than a month to solve the problem and last week the 50,000 cards, to be allotted for mailing to inmates' family and friends — were on their way for distribution. The minister considers the Christmas card project one of his most important efforts. "It was kind of a big order, but I worked it out this way," he said.

"I got Ben Bey, an ex-offender who is now director of the Freedom Through Art Studio, to design five different covers for the cards. Then I called the Beth Paper Co.

of Rockford, Ill., who supplied the paper at a reduced cost.

Herman Gee, a member of the Tinley Park United Methodist Church donated $200 for paper cost and Robert McCullough donated the use of his shop, the LaShore Press, for production of the cards.

Johnson, who serves as a chaplain at Stateville penitentiary in Joliet, said he got help in printing from Michael White, an inmate at the Pontiac Correctional Center who Johnson had transferred to the Chicago Work Release Center to help with the project.

"I've worked extensively for 14 years with men and women in correctional institutions across the state," said Johnson, also pastor of the Irving Park United Methodist Church.

"I'm always doing things along these lines, quite often helping men and women get out and start new life styles."

All advises Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali was given a VIP tour of the White House today and warned President Ford personally that his job might be in danger.

"You made a big mistake in letting me come because now I'm going after your job," Ali told Ford in an unscheduled meeting with the President in the Oval Office.

Ford laughed and replied:

"It's a great challenge. I enjoy the problems. We're going to get some solutions."

All, who symbolized growing popular opposition to the Vietnam War by refusing induction into the Army in 1967, was accompanied on his special tour by a large entourage, including his manager, Herbert Muhammad. All of them went with the champion to see Ford.

Minister locked in

SCHWALBHEIM, West Germany (UPI) — Eberhard Auer, the village pastor, began shouting and hammering on the door after somebody locked him in his church.

When nobody heard him, the 46-year-old preacher began ringing the church bells until his wife freed him about an hour later.

Andrus cautious about manpower curealls

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho urged a "manpower seminar Tuesday to use "healthy skepticism" in approaching cure-alls for solving manpower problems and patience in assessing existing programs.

Andrus said the topic of the seminar, "implementing state and local manpower policy and service delivery strategies," is a demanding challenge because "providing sound and unified direction in the area of manpower policy has not been achieved either by the Congress or by the executive branch..." In remarks prepared for the seminar, Andrus said "the lack of federal direction in this area did not simply occur by accident."

"The nation's zeal to respond to human needs and to attempt to heal more than century-old ills has created a labyrinth of programs, service strategies, and competitive and duplicating service systems," he said.

He said current federal legislation is leaving it to state and local officials to untangle the maze and make the systems work.

But without coordination, the efforts by state and local agencies will be "more successful than those of the federal level."

Andrus said the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 (CETA) gives state and local elected officials at least partial jurisdiction over manpower needs and problems.

But along with that jurisdiction, he said, has come the responsibility and the burden of accountability to the people.

Andrus said he views CETA as "our first real opportunity to bring together the many different kinds of programs and sources of funds into one unified approach for serving participants."

He suggested those attending the seminar, sponsored by the University of Oregon, "approach with a healthy skepticism, any "cure-alls, which are proposed for solving manpower problems. Don't believe for a minute that CETA is the final answer."

"Be reasonable and patient in assessing your existing programs in place which have done a good job and there are others which have not done too good a job."

He also suggested doing some "common sense planning" to make goals reasonable and attainable.

Road plans listed

BOISE (UPI) — The State Department of Transportation today announced its priority system for keeping Idaho in good driving condition during bad weather.

Roy W. Jump, maintenance supervisor, said the system was set up to take care of important and hazardous locations first.

The top priority is for danger spots, such as steep grades, sharp curves, interchanges, bridge deck and approaches, railroad crossings, ramps, and other acute hazards and for the heaviest traffic routes.

The second priority is heavier traveled sections of streets and highways, the interstate, primary, secondary systems—including routes traveled by school buses, bus lines, commuters and winter recreational vehicles.

The third priority is the lighter traveled sections of streets and highways, both primary and secondary, until all roads are taken care of.

After state highways are cleared of snow, priority then is given to public road approaches and school-bus turn-arounds, approaches to gas, food, and lodging businesses, and finally approaches to other businesses and private homes.

Smugglers plead guilty

BOISE (UPI) — Four Phoenix, Ariz., residents entered pleas of guilty to federal charges of conspiracy to smuggle illegal aliens into the Northwest from Sonora, Mexico.

U.S. District Court Judge J. Blaine Anderson at the court appearance Monday set Jan. 10 for sentencing of Antonio Valdez, 26, and his brother, Steven Valdez, 20, Fred A. Turner, 26, and Amal Turner, 22.

The Valdez brothers had been named in a 13-count indictment charging them with conspiracy and procuring transportation.

Turner withdrew a not guilty plea on the 13 counts and pleaded guilty to conspiracy and procuring transportation for one of the aliens named in the indictment.

Turner pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of aiding and abetting the procurement of transportation for the Mexican nationals.

The indictment charged the four defendants and a fifth named as an unindicted conspirator with planning, June 7 to smuggle the illegal aliens who were farm workers from Mexico.

The indictment said the four defendants rented a U-haul trailer June 9 and transported six Mexican aliens from Arizona to Idaho.

They were charged with transporting another six aliens June 21.

The first group of aliens was discovered June 10 by Boise police in a trailer near the Holiday Inn after they reportedly had been abandoned.

The second group was discovered after a contact near Ontario, Ore., was arrested by police and a vehicle carrying the six aliens apprehended.

A federal magistrate warrant has been issued for Dennis Lee Sehal, Alias William J. Hundertmark, who allegedly drove for the group and is charged with unlawfully transporting aliens.

Harry Rhodes, criminal investigator for the immigration and naturalization service, said members of the ring arranged in Nogales, Sonora, to pick the aliens on the border.

The aliens then were driven to Phoenix where they were housed until arrangements were made to drive them to their destinations, including places in Oregon and Idaho.

Idaho Power asks Oregon rate boost

ONTARIO, Ore. (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. recently received a rate increase from Idaho Public Utilities Commission, but there is a question whether a rate for a similar boost in rates will be granted in Oregon.

Oregon Public Utilities Commissioner Richard Sablin announced Monday his staff will conduct a public hearing Dec. 18 on his motion to dismiss the application for a rate increase.

The application filed in July would increase rates 12 percent and would bring an additional $64,000 annually.

An assistant Oregon attorney general acting for Sablin has filed a dismissal motion on two grounds.

The dismissal notice said the request includes increases in areas over which the commission has no jurisdiction.

The commission said that electrical power sold to the California Pacific Electric Co. for use in eastern Oregon points is not under the jurisdiction of the state regulatory body but under the Federal Public Commission.

The power sold to California-Pacific amounts to about 5 percent of the Idaho Power Company's total sales, a PUC spokesman said.

Another 5 percent of the utility's revenue comes from all of its other customers in Oregon served directly by Idaho Power.

The sales, mainly in Malheur and Baker Counties, are under the jurisdiction of the Oregon commission.

The Oregon commission said that the company application would not show a need for a rate increase if that part of the application relating to the California-Pacific form were deleted.

Grid banquet hears Ford's one-liners

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Ford became just Jerry Ford Tuesday night, something with men with both old and young who are football fanatics: just as Jerry Ford.

He had spent a trying day on affairs of state and nation but now he relaxed at the Football Foundation Hall of Fame dinner and had some observations about the relationship of the sport he played at Michigan years ago and his present role.

Introduced with the usual pompousities, he said that since assuming office as President he had received "dignified introductions, but there were variations sometimes."

With a huge smile he recalled that recently he was at a function in which he was introduced by a former teammate at Michigan.

Ford recalled that the man introducing had been a quarterback when he, Ford, had been a center and the master of ceremonies said, "In those days I had a different view of the President."

Ford spoke of the difference between Washington and football, pointing out that in football they have a football and in Washington they have a debate, which turns into a filibuster.

"In football they have Howard Cosell, and Howard takes a lot of kidding, but someone said to me Howard is 10 feet tall. I don't know who said it, but it might have been (New York City mayor) Abe Beame."

Looking back on his collegiate career, the President said he had a small collection of quotes to live by.

"Granland Rice said it's not whether you win or lose but how you play the game. My other" quote is from Woody Hayes who said, 'Bah! Humbug!'

The President also spoke of his days in Washington rooting for the Washington Redskins when the question was whether George Allen's "Over the Hill Gang" would "hake the playoffs or go on Social Security first."

He recalled with a grin the great relaxation of Sonny Jurgensen in 1961 when Jurg threw five touchdown passes against the Chicago Bears, although Sonny was suffering with a sore arm. Otto Graham, the football coach at the time, finally took Jurg out and asked how had the arm was.

"It hurts me awful," Jurgensen said. "Do you know how difficult it is to drink lethingoff?"

"Of his playing days, Ford said, 'I went out to win I suited up - yes, I did wear a helmet - because winning to me was not a shameful concept."

"We face a struggle today on the economy and in the battle against inflation and recession there can be no explanation of win-and-lose-year, we must win and not lose," Ford added.

Ford then introduced comedian Bob Hope who received the Distinguished American Award, and Hope, among other remarks, pointed out that President Ford had recently returned "from Japan, Korea and Russia, all of which had been carried by Republicans."

"Hope had one other job for Ford, his long-time golfing partner, when he said that the President had received a jeweled sword as a memento from Japanese Emperor Hirohito."

"Ford, according to Hope, gave the Emperor a WIN button, saying that millions of Americans were wearing them."

To which, Hope said, Hirohito replied: "I know, we make them."

While a record attendance of over 5,100, paying 200-a-plate, laughed among the names hanging from the balcony of the dining room, such a merriment and good one from Whittier College.

Back in grid spotlight

PRESIDENT Ford addresses the 17th annual awards dinner of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame at Waldorf Astoria Hotel Tuesday night. He likened the battle against inflation and recession to competition in sports and cautioned that the nation must prevail over its economic problems now because there may not be a second chance. Seated second left of the podium is comedian Bob Hope, one of two honorees at the dinner. (UPI telephoto).

Utah deer shun road underpass

SANTAQUIN, Utah (UPI) — The Utah Highway Department has learned it can't change the habits of the mule deer.

The department spent $108,432 to build a special underpass for Interstate 15 so the deer would not be hit by passing traffic. Each year dozens are killed crossing the highway during their migration between summer and winter ranges.

Game wardens set up an electronic control in the new underpass and it showed only two deer used it.

During the same period, a spokesman said Wednesday, three deer managed to "crawl under" an eight-foot "deer proof" fence and walked on the highway, only to be killed by traffic.

Department biologist Randy Isham said it was hoped natural landscaping in the underpass would attract more deer.

Utah State's Giammona is NCAA grid rushing winner

NEW YORK (UPI) — He hasn't gotten nearly as much publicity as another 6-foot-9 junior — Louisiana — tailback whose last name begins with G.

Utah State's "Little Louis" Giammona was acclaimed Tuesday as the National Major-College champion in rushing and all-purpose running in the final rankings by the National Collegiate sports services.

Another junior — Wisconsin — 1-former tailback — Wisconsin's Billy Marek, even shorter at 5-foot-11 Giammona and the Ohio State Heisman Trophy Winner Archie Brizel — won the scoring championship.

All three sons of college drew attention and honors in this, the year of the "Mnibus."

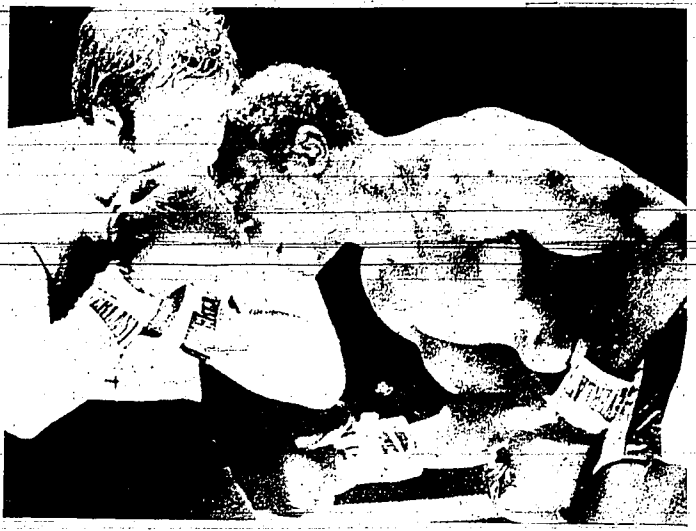

Giammona led the nation in carries with 329 per game, compared to the 213 figure for Griffin, who finished second in rushing and sixth in all-purpose running. Giammona missed the Aggies' game against Oklahoma and was held to 60 yards against Brigham Young and 76 by Colorado State, but then rampaged for 174 yards per game in the team's last seven games, including three 200-plus yards performances.

Griffin set an NCAA record with 27 straight regular-season games (22 including the 1974 Rose Bowl) in which he rushed for more than 100 yards and led the nation in yards per carry with a 6.9 average every time he touched the ball.

Marek, third in the rushing category, captured the scoring championship with 30 points in five touchdowns in the Badgers' final game against Minnesota. In that game he rushed for 304 yards, the highest total achieved this season in his third straight game over 200 yards, tying a record set in 1973 by Wisconsin's John Elway.

Landry would rather prepare for playoffs than Christmas

DALLAS (UPI) — Historians preparing his team for yet another playoff game, Coach Tom Landry can take the time this year to purchase a Christmas tree.

"It's not that Landry has any 'B's hanging," in him, but he would rather be prepping for post-season activity. He would like to be doing it this year again if only for curiosity's sake.

The Dallas Cowboys have won seven of their last eight games, but because of their early season slump, which consisted of a four-game losing streak, will not be a playoff team for the first time in nine years.

"We'll never know if we are as good as anybody in the playoffs," Landry said Tuesday, "because the teams we have been playing lately are not playing like playoff teams."

"But we looked better last Saturday in a 41-17 over Cleveland doing the things that we have in sometimes. I just wish we were at this point when the season started."

"The key this year was that we did not win the important game, Washington vs. our big game, against Miami and Denver and the first game against us, I'd say our big game, was against Minnesota and the first game with St. Louis and Washington. We lost them all and we needed to win at least two of them."

"Dallas' most recent victory lifted the Cowboys to an 11-5 record, but after Washington whipped Los Angeles Monday night Dallas was resigned to missing the playoffs."

A quick 40-point Rams lead was wiped out by Washington, helped in part by a fourth-down fake punt by Los Angeles that bucked and set up the go-ahead Redskins touchdown.

It is not Landry's style to be upset about what the Rams did or did not do against Washington, and so when that play was brought up Tuesday, he said only:

"I'm not going to second-guess the Rams' pass. I guess in that situation the Rams did not think that Washington would play up that hole. It was an important play, though. I might say."

"It just shows that you have to control your own destiny," he said. "When you have to rely on somebody else to do the job for you, you don't deserve being in the playoffs to begin with."

Hagan gets Kentucky post

LEICESTER, Ky. (UPI) — University of Kentucky trustees Tuesday unanimously approved Cliff Hagan as the school's next director of athletics, succeeding Harry Lancaster July 1, 1975.

The selection committee, formed to find a successor to Lancaster, consulted with several athletic directors at other schools and they were unanimous in recommending Hagan for the job.

UK President Otis Singletary described Hagan as "a logical choice and an excellent one" to take over the athletic reins at Kentucky.

Hagan, 43, twice was chosen an All America in basketball in the 1950s when he played basketball at Kentucky. He later went on to star in the National Basketball Association with the St. Louis Hawks.

Hagan has been an assistant to Lancaster since June 1972, and will continue in that post until he takes Lancaster's place next July.

Lancaster, former assistant to the legendary Coach Adolph Rupp, has been athletic director at Kentucky for the past six years during which many accomplishments in the program have taken place.

Among them is the completion of the more than $6,000,000 Commonwealth Stadium, which the Kentucky football team has used for the past two years. Another is the plans in the works for a new 22,000-seat Civic Center Basketball Arena for Kentucky's home basketball games.

Dr. Singletary said Hagan's roots are with the university and he knows its athletic programs, both as a former player and an administrator for the past two years.

Born in Owensboro, Ky., Hagan played 10 seasons with St. Louis in the NBA and came within 92 points of reaching the 15,000-point mark as a forward whose specialty was a sweeping hook shot. When he retired from the NBA, Hagan went into radio sportscasting and later became coach of the ABA's Dallas Chaps for two seasons. He then left pro basketball to enter private business as a restaurateur and bank executive.

Bengals test reserve passer

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cincinnati Bengals backup quarterback Wayne Clark finally gets a chance to show his stuff Saturday.

Receiver Fred "Furr" quarterback Ken Anderson is hurt, Clark will start at Pittsburgh against the Steelers.

Just as he did with the San Diego Chargers for several seasons, Clark has spent most of his first season here sitting on the bench.

However, the 27-year-old fourth year pro played most of the second half last Sunday against Detroit and Anderson suffered an injured back and was finished for the season.

Although several of Clark's passes were short, he did guide the Bengals to a touchdown, even though Detroit wiped it out with a score in the closing seconds to win 23-19.

Because third-string quarterback Mike Ernst was wrecked off the team a few weeks ago after being arrested on a narcotics charge, Clark is the only signal caller available for Saturday.

"Should Clark get hurt, Coach Paul Brown says he will move Ken Riley from the defensive backfield to let him try to guide the offense. Riley — first played quarterback seven years ago in college at Florida A&M.

As far as the playoffs go, the Bengals-Steele's clash is meaningless. Pittsburgh, 9-3-1, clinched the American Conference's Central Division title Sunday and Cincinnati, 7-6, was eliminated from a playoff spot.

However, Brown says the game is "important" for other reasons.

"This is a very important week for this football team," he said. "This is the week we'll find out who the pros are, who are the ones from within it will give us a chance to study people and appreciate them as real pros and see how tough they hang in there."

Because of injuries, Brown says 14 players from the 47-man roster are "no use" to the Bengals against Pittsburgh. They are Anderson, Lennox Johnson, Boothe Clark, Essex Elliott, Merv Holland, Bob Johnson, Sherman White, Jim Leclair, Bernard Jackson, Ken Sawyer and Lemar Larsh.

The injuries continue to leave Cincinnati's rushing statistics unacceptably low.

SIX Maryland players scored in overtime. One of the 10th-ranked Terrapins jumped to a 10-0 lead and rolled to a 16-7 victory over previously unbeaten Georgetown Tuesday night.

The Terrapins, now 4-1, were picked by forwards Steve Brown with 10 points and Owen Sheppard with 11 in their balanced scoring attack.

Cold shooting Georgetown was led by freshman Clean Esthere's 14 points. Maryland held the Hoyas without a field goal — for almost 11 minutes — early in the game while expanding a 7-4 lead to a 36-0 advantage with seven minutes left in the first half.

Lanier sets final appearance

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Lake an old mackerel, Willie Lanier will strike the tennis torches Saturday to his pro football career as a member of the Kansas City Chiefs.

The 29-year-old Lanier is considered by many to be the finest middle linebacker in the National Football League, as he is getting his last game in the Chiefs' home opener at St. Louis.

As far as playing for Lanier, Willie says that is a "hypothetical situation" and will deal with it if the need arises.

Lanier is returning as a professional football player to become general manager of a tobacco plant in Washington, D.C., for the Philip Morris Co.

Lanier's sincerity about retirement is unquestioned. He's already sold his home in Leawood, Kan., and will leave immediately after Saturday's finale against Minnesota for Washington, where he will look for a house next week.

Lanier's manager in St. Louis would be his last season and he hasn't wavered from the position.

It seems likely Chief's coach Hank Stram will attempt to make a trade, either with the Washington Redskins or Baltimore Colts, in order to get something in return for the possibility of Lanier renegotiating his contract with one of those teams.

Lanier currently has one more year on a three-year contract and says he definitely will play under those terms.

"I wouldn't say I'm dissatisfied here or I don't believe I would have played as well as I have," Lanier said Tuesday. "But there have been situations in the past that I haven't cared for."

"What it boils down to is that Lanier has a letter offer at private business."

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Freshman guard Anthony Flanagan hit a 20-foot jump shot just before the final buzzer to give the Georgia Bulldogs an 87-86 victory over Northeast Louisiana Tuesday night.

With the Bulldogs trailing by one with 48 seconds remaining, senior Billy Magarity controlled a tip and crossed the ball to Flanagan, who connected on the desperation jumper to give Georgia its second victory of year.

Ali steals thunder in D.C. visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali worked out in the White House and on Capitol Hill Tuesday. From a chairman's standpoint, he came up as a challenger to every politician in town, including President Ford.

"You made a big mistake in letting me come because I'm going after your job," Ali told the President at an unscheduled meeting in Ford's office at the outset of a triumphant tour of Washington by the champion, who once was prosecuted by the federal government on charges of draft evasion.

Ford laughed at what he presumed was Ali's political drop-of-the-gauntlet and said of the job: "It's a great challenge. I enjoy the problems. We're going to get some solutions."

Later at a reception in the same room in the Senate Office Building where the federal government was held, Ali remarked of his one-day political indoctrination: "Now that I have an idea of what it's about, I think it's great. I knew it was great but not this great."

He said of Ford's meeting with him in the presidential Oval Office: "He made a mistake in letting me see the White House."

Ali's red-carpet tour of Washington came to a sequel to a day in his honor in New York Monday as an aftermath of his rewinning the heavyweight title from George Foreman in Zaire last October.

Floral reminder

OHIO STATE COACH Woody Hayes has a bouquet of roses to remind him he has a date on New Year's day to meet USC in the Rose Bowl. Speaking Tuesday in New York, Hayes doted of a Buckeye victory over USC and a Notre Dame win over Alabama in the Orange Bowl to give his team the national championship. (UPI telephoto).

Hayes sees way for Buckeyes to be voted national champs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes is looking forward "very much" to playing Southern Cal in the first Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., but some of his thoughts that New Year's day will be 3,000 miles away.

On the other side of the country that evening, Alabama — ranked no. 1 by the UPI Board of Coaches — will try to remain unbeaten against eight-ranked Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl, gain revenge for their 24-23 loss to the Irish in last season's sugar bowl and win the national championship.

Hayes and his Buckeyes also hope to have a stake in that game.

"I'm talking about the championship as set up by the coaches," Hayes said. "I believe the coaches by and large know a little bit more about it than anybody else."

Ohio State enters the Pasadena classic as the no. 2 team, but could pass Alabama if the Crimson Tide loses and the Buckeyes win, thus gaining the spot Hayes said Archie Griffin "would trade the Heisman Trophy or his 21-game 100-yard rushing record for."

But Hayes isn't taking Southern Cal lightly — especially after watching the trojans score one of the greatest comebacks in collegiate football history over Notre Dame, Down 24-0 at one point. — John McKay's USC gridgers, led by senior tailback Anthony Davis's four touch-downs and 234 yards, roared back to score eight touchdowns in 17 minutes to embarrass the Irish 27-10.

"There is no offense that we've faced that's as versatile as USC's," John McKay's offense has great fluidity," Hayes said. "The tailback can go anywhere, from one off tackle spot to the other. Their offense can also take the ball from the tailback and pass it. Their sweep works well, too. And that end, J.K. McKay (McKay's son), coordinates well with Pat Haden (USC's quarterback). He's great enough to beat any single defender Ara has or we have."

"I'd like to have that pep talk McKay made at the halftime of the game."

The 61-year-old Hayes described the USC coach in glowing terms.

"John McKay has brought more into college football than any other coach," Hayes said. "We have copied many of our ideas for Arch from John McKay."

The key to the game, Hayes said, is "mental — for 60 minutes. You just don't get that winner until the final gun."

"The thing that'll help us is our injury situation. We've had several injuries this year; many of our players have missed several games. But we're hoping to have everyone healthy for the Rose Bowl — after watching USC against Notre Dame, they'd better be."

"The kicking situation will also be enormously important. We may kick to Davis who ran back the second half kickoff against the Irish 100 yards to give the Trojans the lead. We'll try to kick it over his head into the end zone."

But Hayes doesn't see the game as one which will concentrate on a Davis-Griffin rivalry.

"We don't play that way," said Hayes. "Arch'll take care of himself — with the help of our offensive line. Griffin is the man most aware of the offensive line's abilities. I won't let the game run that way. That wouldn't be a team game."

"But we'd be foolish not to take advantage of his ability if we didn't give him the ball 20 or 25 times in a game. With his ability to break tackles that'll mean he'll be hit at least 100 times."

Arch Griffin is the past college football player I've ever seen. But a fellow like Davis — you can never completely stop him."

Frazier wants fight to end, no recs

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — And when I mean just fight to the finish," Joe Frazier said. "I mean just keep right on fighting from the start. No rounds, either. The way they used to fight back then, 'way back then."

Frazier was elaborating Tuesday on his challenge to Muhammad Ali to meet him in a third fight, and to fight this one out to a finish, until one man drops.

All said Monday that such a bout was fine with him and "let's do it."

"If Clay wants to stop every three minutes in rest, that's OK with me," Frazier said. "I need it, not me. I'm younger than him; I'd have more going for me. My stamina is better than his."

For the record, the longest close fight was between Frazier and Jack Burke went 11 rounds in New Orleans — and the bout was a draw when neither man could continue after seven hours and 49 minutes!

Frazier, with no opponents in sight now that Australian promoters could not come up with the money for a planned

Foreman pleased

HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI) — George Foreman, beaten for the heavyweight title by Muhammad Ali, is happy that the new champ was welcomed to the White House.

In a telegram to President Ford Tuesday, Foreman said he felt he "was not waving the flag in vain in 1968," in reference to Foreman's famed reaction after winning the Olympic boxing crown.

He said it appeared to him that the "U.S.A. was joining the right way" and congratulated him for "shaking hands with the Russians and working together on world problems."

He said it appeared we have a "wise man in the White House."

Not even Namath knows Joe's future

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Coach Charley Winner made it clear Tuesday that the New York Jets want Joe Namath back next season and Namath said he'd like to play in New York again. But they both say the decision is out of their hands.

"I like this team—I don't want to leave the people here," said Namath. "I'm waiting on his opinion and becomes a free agent May 1. I don't know of a better situation for football in my 10 years here. There's never been any discussion. We could have had it this season when we were losing so bad but we didn't."

"But whatever happens will be decided by more people than me."

Namath's statement Tuesday was a complete reversal, Friday his remark before Sunday's upset of Buffalo, when he said he didn't think he'd be back playing for New York next year.

"I haven't even said one word to Joe about next year," said Winner, who announced Namath's selection by his teammates Tuesday as the Jets' Most Valuable Player. "I don't intend to tell either the last game Sunday. Then I'll sit down and ask him. But I think I know his answer—that he'll have his negotiators sit down with the club."

"But I'll let him know my feelings. He is my quarterback and I would hate to break up a good ballclub. This team has tremendous spirit, enthusiasm and pride in what they've accomplished and Joe has been a big part of that. I'd like to help Joe for as long as he's capable to play."

Winner was referring to the Jets' turnaround the last month. After losing seven of their first eight games, they have won five in a row and could a club record with a victory over Baltimore Sunday.

Namath "how earns about $250,000 a year from the Jets. As for the award, Namath said he was honored because it came from his teammates but was disappointed in his own performance."

"This is the kind of award that makes you have a great year, you feel you don't deserve it. It's one of the highest honors a guy can get. Any time the people you work with, your teammates, honor you, it's the best year of your life. But I feel like I could've done a helluva lot better. I'm a little humble because I didn't do the job that I thought I could."

ORU belts Hofstra

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The Oral Roberts University Titans ran their season record to 3-0 Tuesday night with a solid 89-72 victory over the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra.

"Employing an aggressive defense and an occasionally explosive offense, ORU" took the lead five minutes into the game and was never seriously challenged.

Sophomore guard Arnold Dugger paced the Titan offense with seven field goals and four free throws for 10 points. Backcourt mate Anthony Roberts left the game midway through the second half with 16.

Hofstra, now 2-3 on the season, stayed in contention through the efforts of Bernard Franklin, 6-2 Junior guard who averages 20.5 points on the season. He scored 22 of Hofstra's 34 first half points and finished the game with 42, hitting 20 of 36 from the field.

Second high for Hofstra were John Irving and Bob Dowling, each with eight.

"Oral" Roberts' freshman coach Jerry Hale went regularly to the bench and used 10 players in the game. The Titans will put their perfect record on the line Friday against Idaho State in the Marshall Invitational Tournament, Huntington, W. Va.

Huskers down N. Texas

DENTON, Tex. (UPI) — Nebraska outscored North Texas 13-3 in the final six minutes Tuesday night behind the shooting of Junior guard Steve Willis to defeat the Mean Green 69-56.

Willis, 5-11 transfer from North Idaho Junior College, hit 12 of 20 points in the second half to lead the Cornhuskers' scoring.

For the Eagles, sophomore Larry Spruell led the scoring attack with 20 points.

North Texas jumped to an eight point lead in the first half, but the Cornhuskers cut the margin to 34-32 at halftime. In the second half, the Eagles kept their lead until Willis tied the score at 56 with nine minutes left. North Texas scored only six more points while Nebraska hit 19.

The win boosted the Cornhuskers' record to 3-1, and dropped North Texas to 1-4.

Most mysterious are the expressions that cross a woman's face as she buys a necktie for her husband. What is she thinking? Probably, she wonders if she can get the old boy to wear this fancy crowd instead of that drab rag he so much seems to prefer. Our Love and War man is on her side in this matter. He thinks a wife-of-taste who knows her man generally can do a better job of picking out a necktie for her husband than can the husband himself.

AMONG the highly civilized nations, those three that tax their citizens the least are Japan, Switzerland and the United States, in that order. How the United States got into that elite group, I do not know. Neither Japan nor Switzerland spends any significant amount of money on the military.

HUSBAND AND LOVER
Was none other than Helen Rowland who said, "A husband is what is left of the lover after the nerve has been extracted."

Q. "AMONG the unmarried millionaires in this country, which outnumber which, the men or the women?"

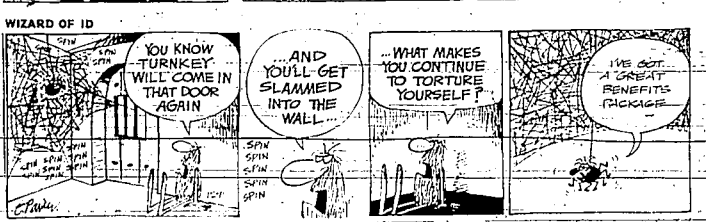

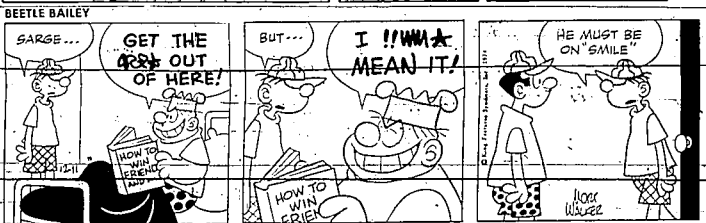

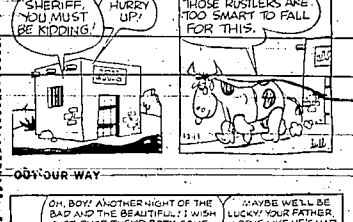

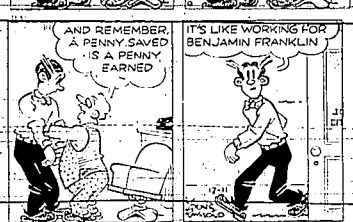

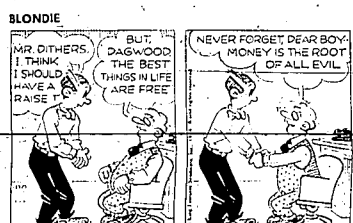

The women. By far. There are said to be 27,000 such ladies each with a net worth of at least $1 million. There are known to be only 11,000 men with that much wealth. Don't ask me where they are, exactly. Can only report most of them live in California, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio.

BUTTER
French merchants 500 years ago put rocks in their butter. To add weight. So they could charge more. This irritated King Louis XI immensely. In 1481, he decreed: Anybody who sells butter with rocks in it will be locked into the pillory. The butter will be melted on his head by the sun. Dogs will be brought to lick him. And the populace will be invited to deliver defamatory epithets without fear of offense to God or the King.

PLEASE LIST salted earthworms, too, on that long list of choice Chinese goods.

THE SAYING GOES. "Feed a cold and starve a fever," right? Now, maybe. But originally, it went, "If you stuff a cold, you will have to starve a fever," just the opposite.

Women accepted by cops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The slaying of Gail Davis, the first policewoman ever to die in the line of duty, prompted other police officers to accept women in law enforcement, according to an official of the Police Foundation.

Calherine H. Milton, assistant director of the foundation which promotes police reform, told a conference at the Washington Journalism Center Monday that the number of police women on patrol has increased from seven to more than 1,000 in the last three years — most of them in the District of Columbia, New York and other large cities.

The shooting death last Sept. 20 of Miss Davis, a 24-year-old rookie on the District of Columbia police force, had what Ms. Milton described as the unusual result of advancing the acceptance of women in police work.

"The response was very favorable as a result of her death," she said, recalling subsequent interviews with other policemen around the country. "They felt that women had finally paid their dues."

She said most policemen concluded that if Miss Davis made any mistake in confronting the suspect who killed her, it was because she was a rookie and not because she was a woman.

Ms. Milton said studies by her foundation determined that women and men join the police force for the same reasons — money, job security and public service — and their performance is similar.

Noting that the opposition to policewomen among the wives of policemen has been "played up in the press," Ms. Milton said she thought it came primarily from "women who can't trust their husbands." Although some "affairs" have developed between policemen and policewomen working together, she said she knew of "no major scandals."

Also at the conference on the women's movement, Wilma Scott Heide, former president of the National Organization for Women, said Watergate was the inevitable outcome of "the white masculinity game... to win a long price."

Barbara Kilberg of the National Women's Political Caucus said that at both the Democrats' mini-convention in Kansas City and the Republicans' meeting in Washington this weekend "the coalition that walked away with it was black and women."

Fred Wechsler, a political analyst for NWPC, predicted that North Dakota, Florida, Missouri and Illinois will vote to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment in early 1975.

TF postal machine

TF post office adds new customer aid

TWIN FALLS — Something new in the way of customer service has been added in the lobby of Twin Falls Post Office.

Postmasterloyd Libert said the machine is helping reduce postal lines as it provides many of the services previously available only at the postal windows.

By depositing the required number of quarters, dimes or nickels, the customer may buy such items as books of 10 and 25-cent stamps, books of combination 10-cent and airmail stamps, individual single stamps, 8-cent post cards, stamped envelopes for either regular or airmail use and special delivery or overseas airmail stamps.

Libert said it is especially helpful on weekends and after hours when the post office windows are closed and is helping the Christmas stamp buyers who do not have to wait in line to purchase books of stamps.

Libert said it is hoped the machine will receive sufficient use even after the holiday mailing period to warrant keeping it at the Twin Falls Post Office.

There is no additional charge for the stamps. They sell at dollar for dollar value out of the machine, he said.

Agnew dealings checked

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — An member of the Kentucky Real Estate Commission said Monday he was investigating whether Kentucky developer Walter Dilbeck and former Vice-President Spiro Agnew were acting on state law in their land deals in the commonwealth.

Robert Enos, a commission member, said he had received a complaint about the two men's apparent interest in land speculation in western and eastern Kentucky from a northern Kentucky real estate agent.

Dilbeck and Agnew, who formed their partnership last summer, reportedly were acting as brokers for Midwest and Japanese interests in the Kentucky land development arrangements.

If that is so, said Enos, the two men could be found in violation of state law because neither was registered or licensed in the state as real estate agents.

"But from what I know about it I don't think there is any violation," said Enos.

Dilbeck hired Agnew for $100,000 a year plus one-third of the profits their joint ventures might produce. The partnership was to last four years, said Dilbeck.

The western Kentucky land development deal involved the construction of high-rise apartments on the shores of Lake Barkley near the Kentucky-Tennessee border.

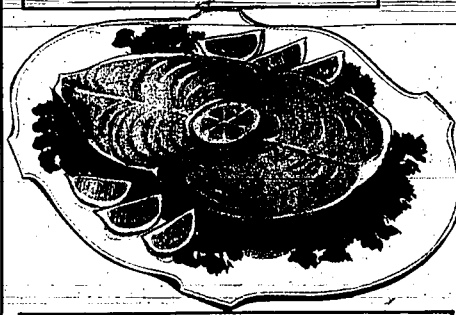

In eastern Kentucky, Dilbeck and Agnew reportedly were acting as agents for Japanese interests in the purchase of several thousand acres of coal-rich lands in Putniski and surrounding counties from Lester Bruns, an attorney from Somerset, Ky.

Dilbeck was in Somerset late last week conferring with Bruns over the purchase, which Bruns said would involve "several multimillion dollar deals."

Of the eight presidents to die while in office, four were from Ohio. Favorite son W. H. Harrison, the oldest man elected to the Presidency at 68, was the first to die in office. He served one month.

Legal action warned

HANOON, Burma (UPI) — The younger brother of former United Nations Secretary General U Thant Tuesday threatened legal action against students and monks who buried the world leader in a makeshift grave at Hanoon University.

U Thant, who died of cancer in New York City Nov. 25, was buried on the university grounds Sunday, four days after thousands of students and Buddhist monks seized his body during private family burial services.

The body of U Thant was carried aloft in a makeshift parade through the streets and then entombed in a makeshift mausoleum of bricks and other materials taken from the construction site of a new university library.

The students demanded a massive mausoleum be built for U Thant.

Since then, thousands of Burmese have streamed onto the university grounds to pay their respects to the former world leader.

Public officials and members of U Thant's family today threatened to take legal action against the students for burying his body in an unauthorized place.

U Thant, younger brother of the former U.N. leader, said he would initiate legal action against the students. At the same time, Burma's director General of Higher Education lodged a formal complaint with the police over "the loss and destruction of property" at the university.

The government official also asked that U Thant's illegally entombed body be removed from the university campus.

According to the official, the students and monks carted off bricks and other building materials worth $1,800 to build the tomb.

Foul play evidence lacking

CHICAGO (UPI) — Doctors have found no evidence of foul play in the illness of Ralph Marrera, 31, the alleged inside man in the nation's largest burglary, but authorities are not totally convinced Marrera wasn't poisoned.

Kenneth Gillis, a deputy Cook County state attorney, said Monday the lack of any laboratory evidence did not rule out the possibility Marrera was poisoned.

He said if poison had been used, it may have been absorbed by Marrera or evacuated by the time test samples were taken.

Gillis said doctors who conducted the tests may not have been looking for the right kind of poison.

Doctors at Cook County Hospital reported Monday "no evidence of foul play" in the illness of Marrera, one of six suspects in the $4.3 million Armored Express Co. vault burglary.

Marrera was listed in good condition at the hospital after coming out of a coma he was in for three days.

Doctors said Marrera was "extremely alert and responsive" and showed no evidence of brain damage.

Jobless rate up

OTTAWA (UPI) — Statistics Canada reported today that the nation's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate rose by 0.1 per cent to 5.4 per cent in November.

The government statistics bureau's adjusted figures, weighted to take into account seasonal factors, showed 20,000 more Canadians were out of work in November than in October, bringing the total number of jobless persons to 542,000.

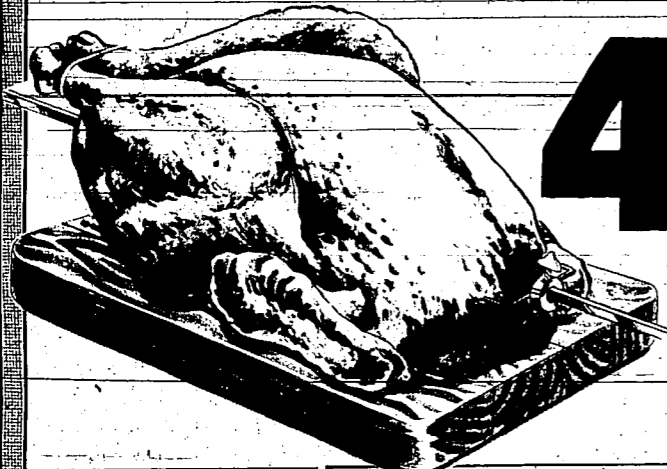

The bureau reported 34,000 new jobs were created during the month, less than usual and too few to prevent the fractional increase in the monthly report.

Unemployment increased among young persons, aged 14 to 24 by 0.4 per cent to 10.1 per cent, and for women over the age of 25 by 0.2 per cent to 3.2 per cent.

Valley lunch price up

By DIXIE DIXON Times-News writer

VALLEY SCHOOLS — Hot lunches will go up five cents per day at Valley schools beginning Jan. 6, trustees decided at a regular meeting Monday night.

Mrs. Dan Sellers, hot lunch supervisor attending the meeting, requested the increase for hot lunches and said that because of rising food costs, the lunch program is going in the hole 10 cents for every lunch served at the elementary schools and five cents for each lunch served at the high school.

The board voted to increase the price of hot lunches at the high school to 45 cents and the elementary school hot lunches to 40 cents, effective Jan. 6.

Harold Grant, school board chairman, read a letter of resignation from Mrs. Opal Newland, district clerk and treasurer. She will retire Dec. 31. The board accepted the resignation with regret. Applications for the position will be taken for two weeks at the office of school superintendent, Arlen Bodily.

Mrs. Robert Newland was granted a leave of absence from her janitorial duties from January through May. The vacancy will be filled by members of her family.

Mrs. Mary DeLeon was hired as library aide at Eden and Hazelton elementary schools under Title I. She will work two hours at each school daily.

Bodily reported that materials for the fence bordering the Hazelton school have been purchased by the district and Pat Pharris is installing it.

Bodily reported that the cost of Blue Cross insurance will increase, but the board declined to take any definite action as to whether the district or the individual teachers will pay the increase, until definite costs are known.

The board voted to raise Bodily's salary $2,400 to compensate for the student counseling work he is doing in addition to superintendent's duties.

In other action the board granted permission for 25 girls to attend a gymnastics meet in Pocatello in February.

The Red Cross was given permission to use a room at the high school to conduct Red Cross classes. The adult class is scheduled to begin after the first of the year.

Bodily reported on the Idaho School Board Association and superintendents' meetings he attended. Major concerns include the affirmative action plan being adopted by the new superintendent of public instruction, Roy Truby, he said.

The board discussed title IX federal funding involving minority races and sex discrimination and how it would affect the district.

Bodily announced that school will be dismissed for Christmas vacation at 1 p.m. Dec. 20 and students will return to school Jan. 6. He also said the music department will have its Christmas concert at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Hansen aide sworn in HANSEN — Brent Morrill was sworn in as new Hansen City councilman Monday night.

He replaces John Brashler, who resigned at the November council meeting. Morrill also was appointed vice chairman. Mayor Harold Miller Jr., named Councilman George Urie in charge of water and streets and Ken Daw in charge of recreation.

Jack Clark, Hansen resident whose home faces the alley, complained to the council about dogs tipping over garbage cans in the alley and the lack of garbage pickup in alleys. He has to carry his garbage to either end of the alley so it can be picked up on the street.

Councilmen have told Clark previously the garbage cannot be picked up in alleys because they are not in proper condition for vehicle use.

It was reported that the improved water system for the town of Hansen is nearing completion.

Ex-Montana head pleads guilty to illegal help

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Former Montana Gov. Tim Babcock pleaded guilty Tuesday to helping oil company executive Armand Hammer make $54,000 in illegal contributions to Richard M. Nixon's re-election campaign.

Hammer, head of Occidental Petroleum, is believed to be still under investigation in the case, although Thomas F. McBride, chief of a special prosecutor's task force on campaign contributions, declined to comment on the matter.

Babcock, 55, who left office as Montana's Republican governor in 1969 and now is a businessman in Helena, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge that he contributed the $54,000 from Hammer under the names of other persons including himself.

U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr. accepted the plea but delayed sentencing of Babcock, who could receive a maximum of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Babcock agreed last August to plead guilty in the case, but McBride said entry of the plea was delayed to allow further investigation of the contribution by the wategate special prosecutor's office.

The criminal information against Babcock charged that he made the $54,000 contribution to Nixon's re-election finance committee in three installments between Sept. 8, 1972 and Jan. 17, 1973.

At the time, Babcock was vice president of Occidental International, an Occidental Petroleum subsidiary. The criminal information said that although the money came from Hammer, it was contributed in the names of Babcock and Montana businessmen Jerome Anderson, Elmer G. Balsam, Gordon L. Doering and William L. Hutter.

Made public in court was an Aug. 21 letter from special prosecutor Leon Jaworski to Babcock's attorney saying the guilty plea would dispose of all illegal contribution charges against the former governor, and that Babcock had agreed to cooperate in further investigation of the case.

Fairfield school bus bids called

FAIRFIELD.—Bids for a school bus for the Fairfield School District will be opened Jan. 12. The bids for a 54-passenger school bus will be called for as soon as paperwork is completed, Supt. Harold Stroud said today.

The school board agreed to the bid opening date at its meeting Monday night.

Also Monday the board was told that satellite equipment will bring in up to four NASSA educational programs from its Denver transmission station.

According to Stroud, the federal government donates the satellite equipment which has been specifically designed for rural schools. Stroud said the program and equipment should be in gearway by the second semester, which begins Jan. 20.

Stroud also said a junior high careers class, a college class and a series of films will be added to the second semester curriculum through the use of the satellite.

The educational films may be recorded on videotape, Stroud said, and then replayed at a later date.

4-day week slated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — News and commercial employees at the Star-News will work a shorter week for less pay rather than face layoffs, the newspaper's union said today.

The newspaper's unit of the Washington Post-Newsweek Newspaper Guild agreed, by a 47-41 vote, to the four-day work week for four days' pay to implement needed economies after the merger.

The newspaper announced the plan in a front page story, saying it resulted from a Guild proposal made after several days of comprehensive talks between the union and management.

The story did not include an effective date, but it was learned that the 20 per cent cutback in hours and pay would be delayed until after Christmas.

The plan was a counterproposal "to alternative economy" measures which could have involved substantial layoffs of Star-News employees as the result of severe financial reverses sustained by the newspaper during the past few years," the newspaper said.

Jack Albertson, publisher of the Star-News, said he was "sincerely appreciative, not only of the Guild's cooperation, but of its participation in helping to solve the newspaper's difficult problems that affect all of us."

"We have a great staff, and with some additional changes yet to be made I am confident we will be well on our way toward a costly, improved product and profitability."

Philip M. Kadis, chairman of the Star-News Guild unit, said the guild "has embarked on a bold new venture in the newspaper industry and newspaper journalism."

"The stunningly large vote in favor of the four-day week is proof that our members are confident they can accomplish in four days what takes five days in six," Kadis said.

"They have demonstrated their determination to maintain, at no small cost to themselves, the excellence, accuracy and diversity of reporting and advertising services, which the Washington-area community has become accustomed to expect from them."

Kadis said the proposal was made "to preserve the paper's greatest asset, its employees, in order to restore the Star-News as a major force in American journalism in these days of 'bottom-line' newspaper ethics. It bodes well for the future of Washington and American newspapers."

Mirror baby

MARIA Argueltz, right, smiles modestly as her baby, Julian, is held by nurse Grace Racoubian at Huntington Memorial Hospital, Pasadena, for all to see. Julian, born Nov. 18, is a "mirror baby." He was born with an extremely rare positioning of his internal organs, they are reversed. His heart is located in his right side instead of his left chest, his stomach is on the right side and his liver is on the left side. Despite the extremely rare condition, the tiny boy is well enough that he was released Monday. (UPI)

Firm recalls rotisseries

CHICAGO (UPI) — McGraw-Edison Co. Monday recalled about 17,000 broiler-rotisserie units because of the possibility of a shock hazard.

The units, sold under three brand names, were made between July 1, 1973, and Jan. 31, 1974, the company said.

McGraw-Edison said it was recalling the units voluntarily after notifying the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Only units now in the hands of consumers were recalled for inspection, repair or replacement, the company said. Unsold units in distribution channels have been recalled.

From preliminary tests made on the unsold units recalled from distribution, McGraw-Edison Co. estimates that only about 2 per cent of the broiler-rotisseries manufactured during this seven-month period would prove defective," the announcement said.

The units, McGraw-Edison said, sold for between $55 and $75. Only units with certain numerical date codes stamped on the bottom are involved in the recall. It gave this description of the units involved:

Penncrest models 3590 and 4203 and catalog number 8241648 (date codes 307 through 401, July 1, 1973-Jan. 3, 1974, sold by J.C. Penney, Inc.; Sears Models 303,696000 and 303,696001 (date codes 0773 through 0174, July 1, 1973-Jan. 31, 1974) sold by Sears Roebuck and Co.

Cleric will serve time

JEHUSALEM (UPI) — State prosecutor Gilbert Bach said today no moves are underway to deport Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capucini instead of letting him serve out a 2-year prison sentence for aiding guerrillas.

"There is absolutely no indication that such a move is being considered," Bach said when asked if deportation was possible for Capucini. He was convicted of supporting and maintaining contacts with Arab guerrilla organizations.

Bach said newspaper speculation that the prelate would be released from jail and expelled from the country had no foundation.
