US-Israel rift may develop

By United Press International

An Israeli government source hinted Thursday at a possible rift in relations with the United States because of differing approaches to a second-stage disengagement agreement with Egypt.

Only sporadic light weapons and bazooka fire was reported along the Israeli-Egyptian border during the day. But there was talk of a new war in the Middle East.

Laxalt sworn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Paul Laxalt, the newly elected senator from Nevada, was sworn in at ceremonies here Wednesday.

Laxalt took the seat vacated by Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev. He was sworn in by Sen. James O. Eastland, R-Miss., the president pro-tempore of the Senate. Laxalt is among several newly elected senators who have taken their seats early in order to build up seniority.

US Steel chairman defends hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of U.S. Steel, the nation's largest steel maker, today defended an 8 per cent price hike against mounting pressure by President Ford to reduce or delay it.

Edgar B. Speer, in an interview in the Journal of Commerce, a New York financial newspaper, said even with the price hike the company's profits would be lower in 1975 than in 1974.

Senate passes $5 billion for jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate today approved $5 billion to create new jobs for 200,000 Americans and extend unemployment benefits to millions of others.

The measure, passed by voice vote, was sent to conference for an expected quick compromise on a $4.8 billion jobs appropriation bill passed in the House Wednesday.

Both houses Wednesday authorized the government to spend $5.5 billion on the jobs program, but their bills to actually fund the program were less than $5.5 billion.

Ex-Nixon aide draws prison term

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Edward L. Morgan, the young lawyer who falsified papers to help Richard M. Nixon obtain a massive, unreserved tax deduction, today was sentenced to four months in prison.

Morgan, 36, pleaded guilty Nov. 8 to a single count of conspiracy to impede, intimidate and obstruct the proper and government functions of the Internal Revenue Service. The charge is a felony and Morgan could have received as much as five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Has chance

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — When actress Amanda Blake retired from "Gunsmoke," she said she wanted to devote more time to animals. Now she has the chance.

One of the African cheetahs obtained for breeding purposes by Miss Blake — and her husband, Frank Gilbert, gave birth Nov. 23 to five cubs at a compound at the couple's home here. There are three males and two females.

S. African leaders want UN seat

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Opposition political leaders said today South Africa must remain in the United Nations despite a provocative Security Council resolution demanding an assurance Pretoria will quit South West Africa (Namibia).

Foreign Minister Barendse warned on Wednesday that South Africa might withdraw from the United Nations because of what he called "a whole series of absurdities," including pressure on South Africa to quit South West Africa, a neighboring area twice the size of California.

Dollar continues climb; gold eases

BIRSELS (UPI) — The U.S. dollar today continued its climb back from the record lows it hit earlier this week in European money markets. Gold eased back from near record highs.

But the American currency rose slightly at today's opening to 37.18 francs compared with Wednesday's close at just under 37 francs.

Soviets deny China border clashes

MOSCOW (UPI) — The official Soviet news agency Tass today denied press reports of renewed fighting between Russian and Chinese forces on the Mongolian-Chinese border.

The reports appeared in the London Daily Telegraph. Tass accused the newspaper of spreading "anti-Soviet lies."

AF Dam project at impasse

By DAVID BOCKMAN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Irrigators failed Wednesday to agree on a plan to rebuild the deteriorating American Falls Dam.

American Falls Reservoir majority spateholder irrigation districts were unable to convince minority spateholders to accept Idaho Power offer to help rebuild the dam. Spateholders from the Upper Snake River Valley and Burley had argued the utility should increase its contribution to the project.

Regional Director of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation Rod Vissia said he was "disappointed" because the meeting failed to resolve the impasse.

Chairman Charles Marshall of the Committee of Eight of the reservoir district which had called the meeting, said he had hoped the meeting would create a "reasonable meeting ground" for the irrigators. He said afterwards that despite lack of agreement the meeting was a success.

During the meeting, John Barker, chairman of the American Falls Reservoir District No. 1, the single largest spateholder, implored all the spateholding districts to hold elections on the project. Barker said individual irrigators should have an opportunity to vote on the project as now conceived.

Barker said now is the time to act because interest rates appear to be falling, and within the last few days steel manufacturers have called to say they are without work, and ready to bid on the project.

Previously, some steel suppliers, said they were committed too far in advance to make a bid on the project, and indicated that long lead times were required before steel could be delivered, according to Barker. If the spateholding districts act promptly and contracts are signed, steel construction start, Barker said.

Even with falling interest rates, a year's delay beginning construction would result in higher costs, Barker said.

The loss of one year at the 10 per cent inflation in cost, even assuming 7 per cent interest rather than 8 per cent, will cost the water users $124,225 per year or $4,981,000 net dollars over 40 years," Barker said.

"The hour of decision for the American Falls project has arrived," Barker stated. It's time for the directors of the spateholding districts to "fish or cut bait," he said.

Despite Barker's plea, spokesmen for the districts, so far unwilling to hold bond elections, refused to alter their positions.

William Holden, a spokesman for upper valley spateholders, said "there is no change in the position of people in the upper valley, at this time."

IP ante goes up or down

BURLEY — Idaho Power Co. officials say economic changes may cause the company to reduce its offer to help construct a new American Falls Dam.

But some irrigator representatives are saying that economic changes instead should permit the company to increase its offer.

Idaho Power may lower its offer to pay $19.5 million to harness spilled water from the American Falls replacement dam, according to Robert Hogg, company consultant.

But at least some irrigators are expecting a higher Idaho Power ante because of rising costs of generating the same amount of power from other sources.

Idaho Power President James Bruce said Wednesday that the new cost estimate for the proposed coal-fired plant south of Boise is up to $600 per kilowatt capacity, or 50 per cent from its original $400 per kilowatt price tag.

Because the power company has said it is willing to pay the difference between the cost of producing hydro electric power, and more expensive coal-fired power in making its bid, Burley Irrigation District spokesman Norman Nielson said the increased cost "should strengthen the irrigators' bargaining position."

(Related editorial, p. 4)

However, Hogg said the opposite is likely to happen. "It kind of looks like the offer might be reduced some because the cost of hydro plant has gone up a little more than the cost of a thermal plant," he said. Hydro power costs, he said, are dependent on interest rates which have "gone up fairly substantially." Coal-fired plant costs are dependent on both the cost of money and on the cost of workers' wages and coal.

Generally speaking, that does not mean up all about the same," he said, adding that this time the interest charges seem to be rising faster. Hogg said a reduced bid has not been worked out in detail. He said the change, if made, would be "very slight."

When Idaho Power initially made the $19.5 million offer for the replacement dam cost was to be $22 million. Now the cost is expected to be about $40 million.

William Holden, representing Upper Valley spateholders, who are opposed to accepting the Idaho Power terms, called for the irrigators to hire their own consultant to evaluate the worth of falling water rights at the dam site.

Holden said the power company's goal is to generate power at the cheapest rate possible. So it is consistent with the power company's goal to pay as little as possible for the right to generate power at the American Falls dam site, he argued. In order for the irrigators to be in a favorable bargaining position, it behooves spateholders to know the value of filling water to an electric utility, he said.

Official go-round

WHITE HOUSE staff and cabinet changes announced Wednesday involve three men. John Robson (left), transportation specialist, is expected to be nominated by President Ford to succeed Claude S. Brinegar (center) as transportation secretary. James T. Lynn (right), housing secretary, will succeed Roy Ash as director of the Office of Management and Budget. Brinegar resigned Wednesday (UPI).

EPA may ease AF quality

By DAVID BOCKMAN
Times-News Writer

BURLEY — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reportedly is "inclined" to waive strict water quality standards that could be a stumbling block to replacement of the American Falls Dam.

EPA water quality standards for the quantity of dissolved oxygen in the Snake River below the proposed new dam would have required injection of large amounts of oxygen into the water at high cost.

Lower state standards had been approved, but would not take effect unless EPA approval was received.

A letter from Clifford Smith Jr., regional EPA administrator, read at a meeting of American Falls spateholders in Burley said "The EPA is now in the process of evaluating the information received to date. Because the fishery agencies have been unable to supply any conclusive evidence that downstream uses will be affected by the proposed revisions, we are inclined at this time to grant approval" of the request to waive the strict water standards.

The letter was addressed to Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

However, the letter cautions a final decision has not been reached and a higher standard might yet be required. The letter goes on to state, "... another factor which must also influence our evaluation of this matter is the national concern over the appropriateness and legality of modifying water quality standards downward."

The revised, or lower standard, would require a dissolved oxygen level in the forebay of 6 parts per million (ppm) after water had passed through power generators to be installed by Idaho Power. The higher standard would require a ppm level of 90 per cent saturation, whichever is greater.

Irrigators estimate that meeting the lower standard will cost $170,000 annually, while the higher standard would cost $545,000.

Because the costs, whichever standard is set, will be incurred only because of the inclusion of a power plant as a feature of the dam, negotiating team representing irrigators demanded that Idaho Power cover all such costs.

In a counter proposal the power company agreed to pay half the costs of meeting the lower standard. So far, the company has refused to commit itself to paying any of the costs associated with maintaining the higher standard.

Idaho coal fired power plant cost soars 50%

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Company's estimated cost for its proposed coal-fired power plant south of Boise has jumped 50 per cent.

During the summer and throughout the fall power company officials said the million kilowatt plant would cost about $400 million. Today company president James Bruce said the plant should cost about $600 million.

Bruce said he does not know why the unexpected cost increase will affect customer bills. Inflation is the culprit, Bruce maintained. He said the original cost estimates for the plant were based on the cost of building the first 500,000 kilowatt unit of the Jim Bridger plant near Rock Springs, Wyo.

That unit, which went into operation this fall, cost $200 million. Using this figure, Idaho Power determined the one million kilowatt plant to be in operation in 1980-81 would cost $400 million.

Bruce said the power firm had considered inflation in determining its $400 million plant cost estimate, but had figured the costs of constructing a plant in Idaho would be less than constructing a plant in Wyoming.

With a more mild climate in southern Idaho, there would be more productivity from the workers" in building a plant here, Bruce said. "We assumed it would help make a difference," he added when asked whether worker productivity could cover years of inflation costs.

Bruce said the $600 million cost estimate recently was made by Stearns-Rogers Inc., a Denver, Colo., consulting firm which Idaho Power retained to develop the plant proposal. He estimated the new cost figure probably is based on a 10 to 15 per cent inflation rate for constructing the plant. Depending upon what happens to the company, Bruce said the $600 million estimate could change.

The company president said he does not know the current total production cost of electricity estimated for the proposed power plant.

It is not finalized yet," he said.

Bruce said power from the Bridger plant has been estimated at 10.8 mills per kilowatt hour. But this estimate was based on an 8 per cent interest on borrowed money, which he said now is closer to 13 per cent. He said he does not know what the kilowatt hour cost of Bridger power will be.

This summer Bruce estimated the cost of coal-fired power plant production at nine mills per kilowatt hour, up 30 per cent from six mills per kilowatt hour for hydroelectricity. He then released data showing the company was expected over four years time. The rate increases would be needed to cover inflation and the higher cost of coal-fired plant electricity, he said.

Rocky becomes VP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With confirmation a foregone conclusion, the House today opened an expected six hour debate on the nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller to vice president.

Rockefeller was scheduled to be sworn in as the nation's 41st vice president in a televised Senate ceremony tonight, shortly after the main House vote. The Senate already has confirmed Rockefeller.

President Ford, who nominated Rockefeller four months ago, will attend the ceremony along with the new vice president's wife, Happy, and their two sons, Nelson Jr., 19, and Mark, 7.

Liberal Democrats, who controlled two of the six hours of debate, attacked Rockefeller's immense family wealth, his gifts and loans to associates and his involvement in a book critical of a political opponent.

Rockefeller was defended on both sides of the aisle by congressmen who argued there had never been a scandal directly touching Rockefeller in his 40 years of public service, including 15 years as governor of New York.

Before the debate, congressmen predicted there would be about 200 votes against Rockefeller.

Rockefeller, the richest man ever to hold high public office in America, apparently will play a major role in administration domestic policy.

The confirmation — and Ford's succession to the presidency after Richard Nixon resigned — was the story of the day. The President and vice president were put in office through a vote of Congress and not by the American people.

Ford said recently he expects Rockefeller to be a "full working partner," with special emphasis on domestic programs.

White House sources said the President was considering naming Rockefeller to head a newly created Domestic Policy Board composed of cabinet officers and top presidential advisers.

Rockefeller has told newsmen he has not discussed his role with Ford extensively and noted that his only constitutional responsibility is to advise over the Senate.

Rockefeller's confirmation was originally thought to have posed no problems, based on his 15 successful years as governor of New York.

But revelations that Rockefeller had made gifts and loans of $2.5 million to close associates, including Henry Kissinger, clouded the nomination.

Trade debate delays solons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House delay on a key trade bill is expected to delay the probable adjournment of the 93rd Congress.

The Senate meanwhile okayed $5 billion to finance 330,000 jobs and provide benefits for millions of jobless Americans not presently covered by unemployment insurance.

Democratic Leader Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass, said the House would not get around to a vote on the controversial trade bill until Friday, partly because of today's vote on vice presidential nominee Nelson A. Rockefeller.

The controversial trade bill, which would grant favored nation trading status to the Soviet Union, was expected to be reported out of a joint conference committee and to receive Senate approval later today.

The $5 billion unemployment package was sent to a conference committee from the Senate for resolution of differences in a $4.8 program.

Mine settlement hits new snag

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers bargaining council has approved a revised contract proposal for about 4,500 mine construction workers whose picketing has kept many of the nation's soft coal mines closed.

The tentative agreement between negotiators for the construction workers and the Association of Bituminous Contractors was announced Wednesday night, and within hours the union bargaining council approved letting the rank-and-file vote.

A spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said the bargaining council, which rejected contract proposal Dec. 10, approved the revised package "virtually unanimously."

Union officials said they expected a ratification vote to start Saturday or Sunday. Terms of the contract were not announced.

But even with rank-and-file approval and the end of picketing, the truck drivers could keep some of the nation's largest mines shut down.

Bargaining between the UMW and the Western Pennsylvania Coal & Oil Association broke off Tuesday night when the truckers turned down the UMW agreement with the coal operators, ratified by the miners Dec. 6.

"About 90 per cent of the independent coal truck drivers in the United States are in western Pennsylvania," said management spokesman Steve Cabot.

Indochina war enters 29th year

SAIKON (UPI) — Indochina began its 29th year of war today, with heavy fighting throughout South Vietnam, including a rocket attack against the nation's second largest city.

The most costly clashes were in the Mekong Delta, where Communist forces attempting to control the winter rice harvest stepped up pressure on a besieged district county capital.

The upsurge in fighting came on the 28th anniversary of the beginning of the French-Indochina war. On Dec. 19, 1946, Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh forces blew up Hanou's French-run power stations and fled to the country side.

The Communists have battled French, American and South Vietnamese forces since then. Peace has been declared three times, but Vietnam has yet to witness a full year without fighting.

Military sources said the special alert would continue "for a few days" to head off Communist attempts to mark the anniversary of the late North Vietnamese leader's 1946 raid.

In addition, the Communists will celebrate the 14th anniversary of the founding of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front on Friday and the 30th anniversary of the founding of the North Vietnamese army on Sunday.

A command spokesman said the Communists might attempt a "spectacular" show of force in the Saigon region over the next few days, but the nationwide fighting is expected to fall off before Christmas.

Solon suspicious of plant plans

BOISE (UPI) — Rep. Bill Ottweiler, R-Boise, said Boise newsmen Wednesday he is suspicious that plans for a coal fired plant in Western Idaho are steps to turning Idaho into an "ashcan" for the Pacific Northwest.

Ottweiler told newsmen at the Idaho Press Club luncheon that federal studies have shown coal fired generating plants ought to be located either where the coal is or where the need is, not in between.

He said Idaho in the past has been an exporter of power because the peak periods of use in the Gem state are in the summer months when farmers are pumping irrigation water while the rest of the north-west has the peak in the winter for power needs.

"Idaho might be in the making to be the ashcan for the Pacific Northwest," he said while discussing power plant siting legislation.

He said the state should plan for the average need rather than the peak need, because when Idahoans make the greatest demand for power there is power available from neighboring states.

"I don't think we need to build for peaks," he said, because when you do that, you are building to be a power exporter."

He said the proposed plant Idaho Power wants to build in the desert southeast of Boise provide power for the state's needs 20 years from now.

That, he said, would not take into account the additional power that might be available in the Boise River or in existing hydroelectric dams.

He referred to information he had found that Pacific Power and Light had provided for the critical needs of the Willamette Valley and said Idaho Power apparently decided to build the coal plant in the Boise area after getting the cold shoulder from Montana, Wyoming and Oregon.

Public urged to obey road rules

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Highway District has asked users of the Rock Creek and Magic Mountain recreation area to observe rules and regulations in effect to protect the public.

As in previous years a weekend and holiday check station has been established at Fifth-Fork to close off uphill traffic into skiing and snowmobiling areas from 3 p.m. to 5 a.m.

The closure will be enforced for the remainder of the winter season, with those violating the regulations liable for prosecution for a misdeamnor. A deputy sheriff was stationed at the Fifth Fork game checking station to enforce the regulation.

Other regulations require skiers, snowmobilers, tubers and sledgers to keep out of the roadway except at designated pedestrian crossings.

"We've had snowmobilers, tubers, skiers right out in the road," said highway district engineer Keith Anderson.

"This is the kind of thing we're trying to stop before we kill somebody up there or seriously injure somebody."

Highway district regulations also make it a misdemeanor to park in the roadway right-of-way, except in designated parking areas.

— operate any motor vehicle above Third Fork without chains, snow tires, or other adequate traction equipment when conditions of the roadway as determined by the officer in charge warrant.

— exceed a 10 mph speed limit in the vicinity of the ski lodge and the Rock Creek ranger station.

According to Anderson, the road may also be closed to traffic while it is being plowed following a snowstorm.

During a Christmas tree cutting last week in the recreation area, motorists encountered severe problems, Anderson said, with several vehicles becoming stuck in soft snow areas which had been deceptively packed by snowmobilers.

According to Sheriff Paul Corder, in addition to part-time deputies at the checking station and the ski resort, a full-time deputy equipped with a snowmobile has been assigned to the Rock Creek-Shoshone Basin area, including the patrol of the ski area and forest service camp.

Usury law change sought

POCATELLO (UPI) — The Idaho Bankers Association plans to ask the legislature to change the state's usury law to enable the Idaho ceiling on interest for commercial loans to stay above the national prime rate.

Pocatello area legislators met Tuesday with representatives of the Idaho Bankers Association and about 15 local bankers.

The banker expressed concern about keeping Idaho banks competitive with the banks nationwide in the area of short term loans to commercial borrowers.

Charles S. Leavitt, executive secretary of the association, told the group about the association's proposal to up the usury law ceiling.

In a study for the association, ISU Professor Gary H. Wells said the maximum existing statutory interest rate ceiling exceeds or barely exceeds the national market interest rate.

The association commissioned Wells to study the usury rate limits in Idaho. His conclusion prompted the proposal for the legislature.

TF lodge dance set

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Moose lodge will hold a Christmas dinner and dance Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Moose home.

Members were reminded of the event at the monthly business meeting. Tuesday night Mrs. Gary Craver, schlor regent, conducted, and Mrs. Claude Severt, recorder, read communications from Mooseheart.

After the meeting members wrapped toys donated for the family being sponsored by the chapter.

It's holiday time,
And that's a good reason
To serve the great drink
That has its own season.

There's nothing like egg nog,
It's a season tradition.
And it not only tastes good,
It's full of nutrition.

Can't get it in the summer,
Can't get it in the spring,
But you can get it now
And make the season ring.

But remember,
All egg nog's not the same,
And just in case
You forget the name,

So when you're planning a party,
Or trimming the tree,
Or fixing-up a snack
For "Mr. S. C."

Just look for the check
In the middle of the "Q."
It means Quality Chedk,
And that's important too.

It's got the full, rich flavor
That you've come to expect
From all the great products

JAMES RESTON

Lippmann said it better than any columnist

One of Walter Lippmann's regrets after the collapse of his two favorite New York papers, the World, and the Herald Tribune was that he never wrote a column for the New York Times. He did age 85 in New York. Here is a column in his own words. He said it better than any of us — James Reston.

Lippmann on fear:
From what source come these unmanly fears that prevail among us? This despairing impotence? What is it that has shaken the nerves of so many?
It is the doubt whether there exists among the people that trust in each other which is the first condition of intelligent leadership. That is the root of the matter.
The particular objects which we debate so angrily are not so important. The fate of the nation does not hang upon any of them. But upon the power of the people to remain united for purposes they respect, upon their capacity to have faith in themselves and in their objectives, must depend the success of their actions.
It is not the facts of the crisis which we have to fear—they can be endured and dealt with. It is demoralization alone that is dangerous.
On leadership: The springs of greatness in a public must be finally in the conviction that he must serve the truth and not opinion, that he must do what is right whether or not he is sure to succeed... This is the way of greatness. In the supreme moments of history, there is no duty, truth, justice and mercy—which in our turbulent hours are tired words—become the measure of decision. We, unhappily, are acting as if we had forgotten them.

We are trying to be too shrewd, too clever, too calculating, when what the anxious and suffering peoples try out on us for is that we practice the elemental virtues and adhere to the eternal virtues. They alone can guide us through the complications of our days...
On the apogee of change: "Drift and Mastery": 1913; We are unsettled to the very roots of our being, there isn't a human relation, whether of parent or child, husband and wife, worker and employer, that doesn't move in a strange situation.
We are not used to a complicated civilization, we don't know how to behave when personal conduct and eternal authority have disappeared. There are no precedents to guide us, no wisdom that wasn't meant for a simpler age. We have changed our environment more quickly than we know how to change ourselves...

On cheating: A big change has come into American life: It is not that our behavior is demonstrably worse than it used to be. It may in many respects be considerably better... The big change is that we are much more lax in what we think about our conduct.
Why is it that I had to shrug off the ideal standards of honesty in politics, business, and love? Because it defeats us and frustrates our lives. If we do not harden ourselves by stretching ourselves to reach upward to these not wholly attainable ideals, we slump down and settle into flabbiness and foolishness and boredom.
It is a mistake to suppose that there is satisfaction and the joy of life in a self-indulgent generation: in one interested primarily in the pursuit of private wealth and private pleasure and private success. On the contrary, a self-indulgent generation in large part is an unhappy one. We are very rich, but we are not having a very good time...
On the duty of officials: Those in high places are more than the administrators of government bureaus. They are more than the writers of laws. They are the custodians of a nation's ideals, of the beliefs it cherishes, of its permanent hopes.

of the faith which makes a nation out of a mere aggregation of individuals. They are unfaithful to that truth when by word and example they promote a spirit that is complacent, evasive and acquiescent.
In defense of filibusters: The genius of the American system, unlike I believe among the democracies of the world, is that it limits all power, including the power of the majority... the American idea of a democratic decision has always been that important minorities must not be coerced. When there is strong opposition, it is neither wise nor practical to force a decision...
American democracy: It has worked. I am convinced, for two reasons: The first is that government in America has not, hitherto, been permitted to attempt to do too many things. Its prohibitions have been kept within the capacity of ordinary men. The second... is that outside the government and outside the party system, there have existed independent institutions and individuals: the free churches, the free press, the free universities, and no less important to the preservation of democracy, free men with sufficient secured property of their own, farms, factories, shops... protected by an independent government upon the will of elected or appointed officials.
On the "doomed issue": The deepest issue of our time is whether the civilized people can maintain and develop a free society or whether they are to fall back into the ancient order of things, when the whole of man's existence, their consciences, their science, their art, their labor, and their integrity as individuals were at the disposition of the state...
On codes of conduct: There is no mechanical god by which the moral level of public life can be maintained. There is no spear of popular righteousness which will raise it much for very long. All depends on the code of conduct which is fashionable. All depends on the working rules of behavior which the leading and conspicuous men and women in a society practice because their consciences, their sense of duty, and their integrity as individuals were at the disposition of the state...
On hope: When we ask ourselves what should be done about it all, I myself do not despair. It is clear, I think, that moral life beyond their private tastes and wishes, and whims and ambitions. It is not surprising that they are so numerous... for they have been living in a decade... in which private purposes have had the right of way over public purposes. This will pass. The nation is growing and changing, and the problems which cannot be ignored are mounting. They will generate public purposes. And when they do generate public purposes, they will overcome the moral indifference...

Good news for AF dam project

A statement by Idaho Power President James Bruce about rising costs of a proposed coal-fired power plant near Boise may be the key to rebuilding the American Falls Dam.

Bruce said today Idaho Power has raised its cost estimates for a coal-fired plant near Boise to $600 per kilowatt capacity up from earlier estimates of $400 per kilowatt.

What does that have to do with the American Falls Dam? It may mean Idaho Power can afford to pay more toward the dam project.

The American Falls Dam reconstruction project has been stymied because a number of irrigation districts have said Idaho Power should be willing to pay a larger share of the new dam's cost. Idaho Power has offered to pay $19.5 in exchange for rights to generate power. Originally the irrigation district would have paid the remainder of the cost, less than $2 million, a prospect that was greeted with enthusiasm. But new cost estimates for the dam have risen to over $40 million, raising the irrigator's share to over $20 million.

In response to irrigator demands, the power firm has agreed to pay in addition half of anything in excess of the $40 million current estimate. Still, the latest offer was unacceptable to enough irrigation districts to stall the project.

But how does a rising cost estimate for a Boise coal-fired plant affect the amount of money Idaho Power can contribute toward the American Falls Dam?

Idaho Power used a sensible approach in calculating its maximum offer on the American Falls Dam.

The company said it would pay the difference between the cost of building a hydroelectric plant at the dam and the cost of generating the same amount of power at a coal-fired plant someplace else.

In computing how much money it could afford to pay on the American Falls Dam, the utility figured the cost of a coal-fired plant at about $400 per kilowatt capacity, which led to the company's offer to contribute $19 million.

Since that original calculation, the estimated costs of building the dam have risen rapidly, as the irrigators have found in their chagrin Idaho Power, still using the $400 kilowatt estimate for a coal plant, said it could not afford to contribute more, so the entire cost of inflation at the dam would have to be carried by the irrigators.

But with the revised estimate of the cost for coal-fired electrical generation, the Idaho Power calculations now can be fairly revised.

By using a new estimate of $600 per kilowatt for a coal plant, the cost of a 100,000 kilowatt coal plant the size of that planned at American Falls would rise exactly $20 million. That means Idaho Power should be able to pay much more toward the dam project without exceeding what would have to be paid to produce the same electricity elsewhere.

However, there should not be $20 million available to sweeten the pot. The reason is that the cost of Idaho Falls (not including the dam) presumably is rising as well.

Any increase in the price of the dam power plant would have to be deducted from the additional $20 million.

Just how much money that should free is unknown. Idaho Power has steadfastly refused to release its calculations. So all the irrigators have is a guess in the dark.

One thing they reasonably can infer is that there should be more Idaho Power money in the pot. That might be just what is needed to break the deadlock and permit the desperately needed dam reconstruction project to proceed.

Lacking gains, Sadat faces political upheaval

WASHINGTON — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's inability to stop political success from his turn to the U.S. after the Arab-Israeli war last year now threatens him with a probably political upheaval sometime in 1975.

Such a calamity could occur even if Secretary of State Henry Kissinger does arrange a secondary Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula. At the end of any second-stage negotiation there must be Israeli agreement to return either the seized Egyptian oil wells in the southern Sinai or the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, both of which Israel publicly says it will not return under present conditions.

But the harsher fact is that, despite everything, Kissinger is now trying to do to arrange that second-stage negotiation, most experts here already writing it off. The snap of grace would be delivered after Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev makes his visit to Cairo next month.

The lightning box in which Sadat now finds himself explains the sudden upsurge of highly nationalistic rhetoric from Sadat's chief aides.

for any long-range Arab-Israeli peace, Fahni demanded an end to all Jewish immigration into Israel for the next 50 years.

Moreover, Fahni's list of political demands was triggered by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's blunt characterization, last week of Egyptian as the key Arab country in any Arab

EVANS AND NOVAK

Israeli peace equation, while such belittling Arab status as Moscow and Lebanon is being aimed to the hill by Moscow. Such comparisons compound Sadat's political problems.

Arab diplomats here are now saying Sadat has given up virtually all plans for making a state visit to Washington. He is instead waiting in Cairo waiting for the arrival of Brezhnev, but his leverage to bargain with the Soviet leader is being reduced every day.

In the first place, the Brezhnev visit is a symbol of the drastic decline of Sadat's postwar hopes—of economic, class and permanent relationship with Washington. Almost a year has now passed without a single word of progress by Kissinger on getting Israel off the Sinai Peninsula. Thus, Sadat's invitation to Brezhnev by itself hints at the bankruptcy of his pro-American policy.

But more important is the fact that Sadat's army commanders, deprived of Soviet weapons—particularly spare parts—during the long U.S. courtship, now desperately want a resumption of Soviet arms, even though they fear and distrust Moscow. The reason is that the Middle-East is slipping past into expectation of war next spring and Egypt's army has grave military shortages.

Brezhnev's bargaining power, then, is high indeed in Sadat's Cairo. The Russians did send a couple of low-tonnage transports of military gear to Cairo last spring—the only shipments since Sadat began his love affair with "my friend Henry" a year ago—but they carried jeeps and trucks. Sadat's army, confronting an Israel in which U.S. arms are now stacked like cordwood, badly needs weapons against the possibility of a no-war.

There is only one place he can get them, and that is from Brezhnev.

Accordingly, unless Israel makes a highly unlikely offer to Sadat of withdrawal from the Sinai, at the least including either the Egyptian oil wells seized in the 1973 war or the strategic passes in the north of Sinai, Sadat's precariously perched will soon become politically untenable. Either he will be forced back into the Soviet embrace or his political enemies, always skeptical about his alliance with Washington, will try to do him in.

There is one other alternative: a decision by Egypt that Moscow be given equal partnership with Washington in all future efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli struggle. But to present just such a "partnership" has always been one of Kissinger's fundamental policies since he began his courtship of Sadat.

"How do I know you're not really Nelson Rockefeller?"

Let's talk arms cuts

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger has got to learn to be less thin-skinned.

He may well go down in the history books as the Republic's wisest and most competent secretary of state of the 20th Century, but in the meantime he must accept the fact of Washington life which says no man's opinion is sacred.

Kissinger's opinion is that the arms control agreement reached by President Ford and the Soviet Union's Leonid Brezhnev at Vladivostok represents a "breakthrough." He may be right, we should all hope so. At the same time, of course, that all matters of public policy, foreign as well as domestic, are open to debate.

Thus Maitz Street would do well to address itself to Sen. Henry M. Jackson's criticism of the Vladivostok pact, not being even wiser than those agreed upon by Ford and Brezhnev. This would be inconvenient, perhaps, and probably would take some doing, but it would, not to mention necessary for Gerald Ford to get back on his word to Brezhnev. There would be no stigma attached to a Ford suggestion in the interests of arms control—that he and Brezhnev take another look at their agreement to see if both sides could save a little more money.

But Kissinger's feelings have been hurt, again. His position is that those who want to reopen the talks must be prepared to raise the U.S. arms budget $5 billion to $10 billion. Then he says, "The world would provide the only incentive for the Soviets to consider lower limits.

Baloney. No one has suggested that the U.S. government announce an expanded nuclear arms program in order to persuade them to consider waging a nuclear war. Instead, both sides are almost frantically trying to avoid such a holocaust, for the simple reason that nobody could win it. Each side, of course, wants to be in a position to say in the other: 'Don't start anything, brother, but the warning would be effective if both sides cut their nuclear arsenals in half.'

Finally, Henry Kissinger should ponder the good counsel of one of our more distinguished diplomats, George Kennan, who years ago laid down the rule that the way to get along with the Russians was to make as few concessions as possible and always to insist on strict reciprocity.

The Russian leaders have, always been practical businessmen who whenever necessary have given a quid for a quo—and have been quick to take advantage of any nation that approached them with hat in hand.

Gem solons favor closer scrutiny for health, welfare programs

By MARGARET BAILEY
 BOISE (UPI) — Idaho legislators favor 2-to-1 closer scrutiny for health and welfare programs such as the Desert Survival Training that last summer ended in the death of a Pocatello boy.
 In a survey conducted by UPI, the legislators said not only special programs but the whole health and welfare department should be under closer review.
 Only 11 of the legislators who answered the preview questionnaire said they would like to see the Survival Training Program stopped. The program conducted by the department last spring and summer was stopped when Jeff Hodgson, 11, became lost from his group and died in the desert.

 "This program not only ended in tragedy but it also pointed out an area of extreme wastefulness in public expenditures," said Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder. "The legislature must eliminate such waste."
 Rep. Lyman Winchester, R-Kuna, said he believes "the entire Health and Welfare Department needs closer scrutiny. It is an unworkable bureaucracy with the top level unable to supervise the numerous programs adequately."

 Rep. William Roberts, R-Twin Falls, said, "There is too much expenditure by this agency of federal funds with no knowledge before them by the legislature."
 "If the legislature had known of this survival program beforehand, I'm sure it wouldn't have been authorized."

 Rep. Steve Antone, R-Hupert, also in favor of closer review, said he feels the agency "is too big to herd."
 Rep. Wayne Tibbitt, R-Lorenzo, wants "a general overhaul of Health and Welfare" because he feels there are "too many speculative projects of unknown benefit to those involved."
 "I recommend that all programs of this sort be discontinued," said Rep. Herbert Flitz, R-New Meadows. "If education is needed it should be handled under the Department of Education."

 "At the present time I feel it should be discontinued and not renewed until the legislature gets a sound look at it."
 While the sentiment is strongly in favor of review for the health and welfare programs, there are legislators who would support better enforcement, better planning and supervision for the programs, and making sure that outings would be conducted by trained personnel.

Congress pushes toward adjournment

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The 93rd Congress pressed toward adjournment tonight or tomorrow after sending President Ford legislation on foreign aid, unemployment and federal highways.

Final confirmation of Nelson A. Rockefeller as vice president and an international trade bill involving a controversy over Soviet emigration were the only major items on the docket.

The House scheduled six hours of debate on Rockefeller, beginning at noon, and his approval by a big margin was certain.

He will be sworn in this evening in the first televised proceeding ever held in the Senate chamber. President

Ford, who plans to give Rockefeller the major role in domestic policy-making, will be there.

House and Senate conferees reached agreement on a trade bill Wednesday night, unopposed by objections from the Soviet Union.

The bill authorizes President Ford to negotiate lower world tariffs and to give improved tariff treatment—most favored nation status—to the Soviet Union, provided it allows its citizens, particularly Jews, to emigrate freely.

On Wednesday the Soviet government announced understandings on the level of emigration acceptable under the bill.

These supposedly had been worked out in negotiations between the Russians, Secretary of State Henry M. Kissinger and Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.).

The bill is still expected to be approved by both the House and Senate.

Congress Wednesday sent to the White House legislation that would:

- Authorize $2.7 billion for foreign aid and allow President Ford to resume military aid to Turkey, but only until Feb. 5.
- Provide $5.5 billion for public service jobs and benefits for the unemployed.
- Provide $752.8 million in aid for highways.

The bill also allows heavier trucks on interstate highways, orders states to enforce the 55 mile an hour speed limit under threat of losing federal highway funds and bans jumbo billiards which sprang up within sight of federal highways, after Congress banned billboards within 600 feet of the highways.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., a delay in adjournment if a bill creating a Consumer Protection Agency, which he opposes, came to the Senate floor. An agreement was made not to take it up.

Other legislators threatened to keep Congress in session until Ford acted on a bill assuring the government sole custody of former president

Richard Nixon's papers and documents. But the White House sent word Ford will sign the bill without delaying adjournment.

Price rollback sought by Ford

By United Press International

President Ford—presured U.S. Steel Wednesday to roll back prices and Congress moved to fight the recession by passing a bill to create hundreds of thousands of jobs.

In other economic developments, union leaders asked striking mine and steel workers to accept a new wage pact and General Motors announced massive new layoffs.

announced it would lay off by the end of January 16,000 more workers than originally announced. That will idle 91,000 workers indefinitely—nearly one-fourth—the plant—and company's hourly work force.

Gas tax asked

INTRODUCTION of five energy conservation bills was announced Wednesday by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill. Percy said one measure called for a 10 cent a gallon federal gasoline tax aimed at cutting U.S. oil consumption by 10 per cent by the end of 1975. (UPI)

Government agencies reported worsening recession, higher unemployment and a near-record balance of payments deficit.

The White House said Ford will reply to the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability. Friday, but a spokesman indicated the company planned to stand firm on the price hike.

US personal incomes cut $2.2 billion

(c) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON—Factory layoffs and the coal strike reduced personal incomes in the United States by $2.2 billion last month, the biggest drop in 3 1/2 years, the Commerce Department reported today.

Increased unemployment compensation—benefit payments and government pay raises provided a cushion, preventing an even sharper decline in total income.

Besides reflecting the severity of the recession, the drop in income suggests that the economy is in an accelerating downward spiral.

As income declines, consumer buying falls off, production is cut back and more workers are laid off.

The $2.2 billion decline in total personal incomes is a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.83 billion, followed by a rise of $7.1 billion in October.

It would also provide unemployment benefits for 12 million jobs not covered by state-federal unemployment compensation programs. Ford is expected to sign the measure promptly.

United Mine Workers executives approved a proposed wage pact covering 4,500 striking mine construction workers. The union leaders submitted the contract for a ratification vote by members.

Approval would allow thousands of miners who have refused to cross the construction workers' picket lines to go back to work.

But hopes for a full return to the coal fields were dashed when 150 western Pennsylvania trucking firms, which haul coal refused to sign a contract with the UMW.

In Detroit, General Motors

announced it would lay off by the end of January 16,000 more workers than originally announced. That will idle 91,000 workers indefinitely—nearly one-fourth—the plant—and company's hourly work force.

Loopholes let 10 big firms evade taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ten major corporations with combined profits of nearly $1 billion paid no federal income tax in 1973 because the tax laws let them, says Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio.

In his third annual survey of tax payments of 160 major U.S. corporations, Vanik said Wednesday there were 20 other corporations, with profits of $5.3 at effective rates of 10 per cent or less.

"Let me stress," Vanik said in a House floor speech, "that these corporations have done nothing illegal in lowering their tax rates. They have simply taken advantage, quite effectively, of the magnitude of tax subsidies which have been enacted into the tax laws over the years."

Vanik, a member of the Taxworking House Ways and Means Committee, said the report illustrates the need for tax reform in the next Congress.

The 10 companies that paid no tax, according to Vanik, were:

Bancorporation, Chemical New York Corp., Bankers Trust N.Y. Corp. and Continental Illinois Corp.

The second 20, and their effective rates of income taxation, were:

International Harvester Co. (0.051), Kennecott Copper Corp. (0.1), LTV Corp. (1.2), Anacosta Company (1.4), Occidental Petroleum Corp. (1.8), Texaco Inc. (2.3), Chase Manhattan Corp. (2.5), Gulf Oil Corp. (3.1), McDonnell Douglas Corp. (3.2), Standard Oil of Ohio (3.5), El Paso Natural Gas Company (4.5), Mobil Oil (5.2), Unifroyal Inc. (6.5), International Minerals & Chemicals (7.1), Chrysler Corp. (7.5), Gulf & Western Industries (7.6), National Cash Register, Co. (9.1), Southern Railway (9.1), Union Oil Co. of California (9.6) and Continental Oil (9.9).

At a news briefing, the Federation of American Scientists said the present system subjects the N.I.H. director to pressures from Congress, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. These pressures, they charged, force scientists to be responsive to political constraints that interfere with the quality and continuity of their work on behalf of human health.

In particular, the panel views as threatening the dismissal of Dr. Robert Charles C. Edwards, assistant secretary for health, for allegedly having failed to integrate N.I.H. activities sufficiently with those of H.E.W. as a whole.

Panel wants NIH out of politics

(c) Washington Star-News

WASHINGTON — A panel of distinguished scientists at the National Institutes of Health — including three Nobel prize winners — has urged Congress to repeal that part of the National Cancer Act which specifies that the director of the N.I.H. be a political appointee.

The directorship has been in this basis since the act became law in December, 1971.

Cops hunt bombers

LONDON (UPI) — Police raided homes in the port city of Bristol today in search of outlawed Irish Republican Army members accused of bombing a crowded shop-lined street and injuring 20 persons.

The Bristol bombing Wednesday night was the second explosion in Britain blamed on the IRA in less than 24 hours.

In Bristol late Wednesday night a small bomb tucked behind a carriage can suddenly exploded along a fashionable shopping street. Dozens of police, firemen, ambulance attendants and bystanders rushed to the scene just in time to get caught by a second, more-powerful bomb.

Parkinson says he kept Dean informed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Kenneth W. Parkinson, counsel for President Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election committee, testified Wednesday it was "quite correct, natural and proper" to take a message from a Watergate conspirator's lawyer to the White House.

"I felt it was important to bring these same matters up with John Dean, the counsel to the president," Parkinson said under cross-examination at the Watergate cover-up trial in which he testified in his own defense.

"He had made it clear to me, ... he wanted to be kept informed. I felt it was quite correct, natural and proper."

"He was not your client, was he?" Assistant Watergate Prosecutor J. W. Volner asked.

"No," Parkinson said in one of his many terse answers during two days on the witness stand.

Parkinson testified that William O. Bitman, attorney for former White House consultant E. Howard Hunt Jr., one of the original Watergate defendants, gave him a one-page memo between Nov. 20 and Dec. 1, 1972.

Parkinson testified he never looked at the memo in delivering it to Dean. Re-election committee aide Fred LaRue, former White House assistant, has testified the memo was a "laundry list" of needs the original defendants faced as their January, 1973, trial approached.

Today may be the last day of testimony in the trial, now in its 57th day. Jacob A. Stein, Parkinson's lawyer, was expected to call four or five defense witnesses. A source indicated chief trial prosecutor James F. Neal would call one or two witnesses to bolster the case against former Assistant Attorney General Robert C. Mardian.

After that, Neal will begin closing arguments in the case, which now is expected to go to the jury the day after Christmas.

Parkinson said his firm represented the re-election committee at a price of $30,000 from June 22, 1972, five days after the break-in at the Democratic national offices, until last March.

The prosecution case against Parkinson is based on two charges — that he ignored deputy campaign director Jeb Stuart Magruder's statement to him a month after the break-in.

Volner asked: "You went to Magruder and he told you he was guilty and you chose to believe Albritton who said he wasn't?"

Parkinson testified that two days after Magruder's so-called "confession," Magruder wrote a statement that Mrs. Volner contended was "inconsistent" and contained the cover-up story.

"You didn't ask him what happened, what all the changes were about?" Mrs. Volner asked.

"I told him when he came to the office that I wasn't going to suggest anything to him."

Soviets save face by accusing US of interference

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Soviet Union's denunciation of U.S. interference in its domestic affairs was more a face-saving gesture than a move to repudiate trade or détente, officials and some senators believe.

They saw Wednesday's developments as angry declarations intended for Soviet officials who may have reservations about party leader Leonid Brezhnev's policy of détente with the United States.

The Soviet comments came in a statement by the official Tass news agency and the publication of an Oct. 26 letter from Foreign Minister Andrei

A. Gromyko to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Brezhnev denounced as "unacceptable" on Oct. 15 congressional efforts to exact freer emigration procedures from Moscow in return for nondiscriminatory trade treatment from the United States.

He did so even as he, and other Soviet leaders, were privately indicating to Kissinger that the Soviet Union was prepared to issue emigration visas, eliminate harassment and even entertain U.S. inquiries on specific cases.

On Dec. 3, Kissinger testified before the Senate Finance Committee on these understandings, warning at that time that loud public discussion of the deal could embarrass the Soviets and undermine the assurances State Department officials had given Wednesday that they did not consider Moscow has repudiated the understandings worked out with Kissinger or torpedoed the 1972 Soviet-American trade agreement.

The Soviet statement follows extensive broadcasts by the Voice of America of the debate in the Senate, where Sen. Henry M. Jackson warned the Russians to live up to the emigration understandings of risk losing most-favored-nation status.

The Soviets so far have not said specifically they would reject this trade status. They continue to support the Vladivostok agreement on limiting the arms race.

They have regarded trade and arms control as essential elements of détente.

Jackson, who authored the trade-off of non-discriminatory trade treatment for easier emigration, said Wednesday he viewed the Soviet statement as being "in the face-saving category."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said he was confident

President Ford would cut off most-favored-nation treatment for the Russians if they do not ease emigration for unhappy citizens.

The House-Senate conference, which has been reconciling House and Senate versions of the trade bill, completed its work without paying heed to the Moscow statement.

The conferees retained the controversial trade-emigration provision.

"We are passing a law," said Sen. Russell B. Long, "to provide that we can trade with the Soviet Union on certain conditions. If they want, they can trade with us, and if not they can forget it."

Discuss letter

SENATORS Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., left, talk to pressmen Wednesday about a letter from Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger outlining the Soviet position that emigration was an internal matter. (UPI)

New trial asked on Indian leaders

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Justice Department has asked a federal appeals court to order a new trial for the leaders of the Indian takeover of Wounded Knee, S.D., for 71 days early last year.

Assistant Attorney General Hoyt Petersen filed a brief Wednesday in St. Louis asking the court to re-open the case, which ended Sept. 16 with acquittal of American Indian Movement leaders Russell Means and Dennis Banks.

The trial was made available here.

Petersen said trial judge Fred J. Nichol was wrong in dismissing the charges on grounds of alleged misconduct by the prosecution and the FBI.

Petersen said the decision was based on unsupported allegations and that the dismissal of indictments "serves no purpose beneficial to either the administration of justice or the public."

A series of clashes between Nichol and the prosecution climaxed with the judge throwing out the charges when a juror became ill after the seven-month long case went to the jury and the Justice Department refused to accept a verdict from the remaining 11 members.

Nichol said chief prosecutor R.D. Hurd had misled the court on numerous occasions and made "errors of judgment and errors of negligence."

Nichol also said the FBI agents involved in the case had repeatedly engaged in misconduct, including presenting misleading witnesses and offering false testimony.

"Dismissal of an indictment is a remedy reserved for a sequence of which the guilty may go free because the prosecution has erred," Petersen said in his brief. In this case, Petersen said Hurd had not erred.

Despite questions, FDA will OK dye

(C) New York Times Service
NEW YORK—The Food and Drug Administration has decided to approve the permanent use of an artificial food coloring although some of the agency's own scientists say there are questions about whether it may cause cancer and fetal death.

The dye, Amarant or FD&C Red No. 2, has long been the most widely used color in the nation's food supply. It is inexpensive, produces a durable, almost perfect, red, and is used in an almost endless array of foods, including many ice creams, processed cheese, cakes and jams.

It makes fish whiter, cherry pie redder, and in some cases hides blemishes and makes low-quality food look more appealing. Even dog food contains the coloring—to please the eye of the owner since dogs are color blind.

The controversy over its use involves conflicting interpretations of laboratory experiments conducted by the food and drug administration. Some scientists have concluded that the dye can have two adverse effects on health: that fetuses can be killed or born deformed if the mother ingests even moderate amounts of the dye and that Red No. 2 can cause cancer.

Three years ago, the federal agency, acting on the basis of its own tests on laboratory animals that indicated the dye caused fetal toxicity, announced it intended to drastically limit the allowed use of red No. 2, a coal tar derivative.

Yule cheer could be deadly

(c) Chicago Sun-Times
 CHICAGO — The cup of Christmas cheer can be a deadly potion for a child. But it is only one of the poison-and-accident perils that tend to increase for children during the holiday season.

(2) Ronald B. Mack, a pediatrician who has specialized in poison problems for more than a decade, says alcohol poisoning of children is known in his hospital as "the Sunday-morning syndrome." The name comes from the fact that young victims of hard liquor often suggest it by getting up early on Sunday before their parents and drinking from glasses left over from a Saturday-night party.

Mack, director of the MacNeal Memorial Hospital Poison Control Center, says two to three ounces of whiskey can be a dangerous dose for a child, although lethal amounts have not been clearly established. The physician said research on the subject is sketchy and sometimes contradictory.

However, there is no doubt that even a single "overdose" can kill a small child, Mack says.

"It was horrible," he said, referring to a 3-year-old who died in the hospital after drinking from a pint whisky bottle.

While alcohol may spell pleasure for adults during the holiday season, it can kill small children for two reasons — a precipitous reduction in blood sugar or depression of the nervous system. The second cause — which can be fatal by itself in some instances — is very similar to the effects of a sedative overdose, Mack said.

Which brings up another source of danger in the Christmas period of entertaining and visitors.

Accidents and poisonings are not common whenever there is a change in a child's routine," Mack observed. That's true at any time of the year.

Family will honor Mr. and Mrs. Jessie O. Cox

Two-ring ceremony unites couple

TWIN FALLS — Norma Jean Bankhead and Benjamin Dean Christensen were married in a double-ring ceremony Nov. 29 at the Twin Falls LDS Church.

Bishop Richard Stogeh officiated the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.T. Bankhead, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick Christensen, Boise.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white satin with a train of English lace attached at the waist. The dress featured a high neckline and long full sleeves gathered to wide cuffs with pearl buttons. The dress and the bridesmaid gowns were made by the bride. Her elbow-length veil was held by a tiana of marquisette roses and seed pearls. She carried a nosegay bouquet of lily of the valley, Stephanotis, white roses and gardenias.

Glenda Bankhead, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Linda Bankhead, sister of the bride, and Billie Stevens, Basin, Wyo., were bridesmaids.

Flower girls were Becky Haskins and Kristen Lee, cousins of the bride. Michael Bankhead and Kegie Warren, nephews of the bride and bridegroom, were ringbearers. Fred Christensen, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Dan Potnick, Castleford, and Bob Bankhead, near ushers. Mrs. Helen Herzinger played the wedding music and served as accompanist for a trio — Nadine Stoehel, Arlene Thompson and Carolyn Knudsen.

The couple was honored at a reception following the ceremony in the cultural hall of the church. They greeted guests before an Austrian grape backdrop accented with red floodlights and red lanterns.

The three-tiered wedding cake was decorated in white and was topped with two wedding bells. The cake was placed over a red fountain. Two heart-shaped cakes bearing the couple's names were attached to the cake with red streamers.

Guests were seated at quartet tables covered with white lace over red satin. Red flowers in brassy suiters were center pieces.

Assisting with the cake and wedding gifts were Mrs. Larry Spiers, Mrs. Ray Haskins, Mrs. Randy Lee, Beth Hafer, Kathy Thomas, Cindy Sweet and Linton Jensen, all Twin Falls.

Mrs. John Davis and Debbie King Hill, and Colleen Dawson and Patti Perkins, Hermiston, Ore., were in charge of the guest book.

The bride was honored at a pre-nuptial shower given by the faculty of Hermiston Junior High School. The couple teaches there.

Special wedding guests were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Stull, Outman, Ariz., grandparents of the bride.

Out-of-town guests attended from Boise, Moscow, Salmon, Sunburst, Cathlamet, Eugene, Ore., and Basin, Wyo.

Hansen site of wedding rites

TWIN FALLS — Loryne Slarry and Richard Lee Lawrence were married Dec. 14 in Hansen at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lawrence.

Judge Paul T. Smith performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Phillips, Twin Falls.

The bride wore a floor-length elizabethan-style gown in a heather color. The dress was trimmed with ivory lace. The bride carried an old fashioned nosegay bouquet of pink rosebuds, daisies and heather.

Mrs. Roderick Bollin, Twin Falls, was matron of honor. Chuck Spencer, Jerome, was best man.

The couple was honored at a reception at the Lawrence home following the ceremony. Flower arrangements carried out the pink and heather color scheme in the home. Helping with the reception were Mrs. Mel Spencer, Mrs. Christ Wageman, and Christy and Kim Wageman, all Jerome, and Terri Wood, Twin Falls.

The couple resides at 433 Quincey, Twin Falls. The bride is employed by the attorney general's office and the bridegroom is employed at the sugar factory.

The expert could count eight sure tricks. That eight of spades would be trick nine, and it looked like his best play for that ninth trick.

So he led the jack of spades right back. West cashed five spade tricks, but then West made a mistake.

He remarked maliciously, "You can fool some players most of the time and most players some of the time, but you can't fool me all of the time."

Why was it a mistake? The Unlucky Expert hit him and was promptly exonerated by all present.

The Unlucky Expert studied the first trick carefully before turning the cards over. West had opened the five of spades. Assuming it had been a fourth best lead West would not have more than four spades left in his hand. Assuming it was fourth best from a five-card suit and that West would have opened the 10 from queen-10-nine, East would be left with a singleton 10 or nine and the play of the jack of spades at trick two would bump that 10 or nine and allow dummy's

MAGIC TRICKS WITH MAKEUP

By Mary Sue Miller

It never fails: when you aim for a perfect makeup, there's a slip-up. Either your skin acts up or your cosmetics streak.

During busy times like now, the skin is prone to flake and bluish from lack of sleep, excesses of rich food and the fast, pressured pace. Happily, chaf and flake yield to several filmy pre-makeup applications of moisture cream, lotion or toner. Encapsulated moisture products promise a moisture that last for hours.

Blemishes respond to comfortable hot-water compresses, followed by a covering of medicated spot stick. For such emergencies, of course, you must have the remedies at hand. Better not wait another day to stock needed supplies.

Now to deal with makeup mishaps: once a cosmetic goes on badly, do repair the damage immediately. Let one slip go-by and it will trigger others. Powder streaks over the tiniest puddle of powder base; blushers, then blotch.

It takes only seconds to make repairs. Lighten a too heavy coat of powder base by firmly blotting (don't rub) with folded tissue. Streaky applications require further blending. It is best done by filming the fingertips with a bit more base. Powdery cosmetics of all kinds are toned by quick whisks of a cotton ball. Cotton swabs, dipped in skin freshener, tidy up streak cheek color, eyeshadow and mascara.

As for lipstick, carefully remove a faulty application. Powder the lips and start again for a lovely finish.

Boredom leads to divorce court

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Someone searching for the reasons for divorce in America these days might do well to start looking in Tulsa County, where the divorce rate is more than double the national average.

The county's divorce court judge says as far as he can tell the chief reasons couples split up are the sagging economy, personal success or boredom.

About 500 more couples have filed for divorce in Tulsa County this year than have been married.

The projected national divorce rate for 1974, according to figures released by the National Center for Health Statistics in Kensington, Md., is 4.6 per 1,000 population, but the rate in Tulsa is an estimated 12.5 per 1,000 for this year.

"With the economy going bad and credit so easy, the crunch is on," said Special District Judge Ed Glass, who handles the county's divorce cases. "Bills are cropping up more and more often in this courtroom as the reason.

"Of course, these are only surface problems in the marriage. They are factors that cause the real problems to come out."

Glass said one of the reasons for Tulsa's high divorce rate was the boom from a provincial, quiet town to a "sophisticated, cosmopolitan center."

"We are also a fairly well-iddo community and this increases divorce," Glass said. "Success is a hard thing to handle in a marriage. As the man or woman rises, it materially alters their lifestyle and changes their personalities."

But he said the less affluent also come into his court in increasing numbers.

"I think the less wealthy people are just tired of the mundane life they are led to," he said.

"Let's face it, a family of three kids with daddy making $3 an hour is a life sentence.

"Being stuck must be a horrible feeling and perhaps divorce is the way they get to get away."

Diet theory success

LONDON (UPI) — A British psychiatrist has reported success in treating mental illness through a change in the patient's diet.

Dr. Richard Mackenzie estimated that a third of all mental illness is likely to be the result of unrecognized food allergies.

Writing in the National Association of Mental Health magazine, Mind Out, he claimed 75 per cent success during the past 10 years in testing his dietary theory. For example, he said, one woman patient had been hospitalized for seven years and was in and out of hospitals 13 times. He made her fast for five days and they carried out controlled changes in her diet.

He said he found she was sensitive to eggs, cereal, instant coffee, veal, tongue, ham and chocolate. Eliminating these from her diet, she was able to give up all drugs and was no longer depressed.

Abby

Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married, 28-year-old woman with a problem I've never seen in your column. All my life, I've been unhappy with my teeth. They are strong and healthy, but very yellow. I can't tell you how much I want lovely white teeth. Abby! I've tried everything I've seen advertised, but nothing has worked for me. Last evening I sat next to a dentist at a dinner party, and I mentioned that I would love to have my teeth capped for vanity's sake. He laughed and said, "Forget it. No ethical dentist would destroy healthy teeth for cosmetic reasons." Abby, why not? They're MY teeth, and if I want them capped for cosmetic reasons, why wouldn't an ethical dentist do it? After all, plastic surgeons "destroy" healthy noses every day to reshape them to make people happier with their appearance. What's the difference?
HATES TO SMILE

Teeth cause heavy heart

DEAR HATES: Your dinner partner should have told you that some dentists are reluctant toinker with Nature's original work, because it increases the possibilities of problems. However, my dental experts do not agree that an ethical dentist would perform cosmetic dentistry on healthy teeth that are unightly. When skillfully done, such dentistry does not "destroy" teeth. Many ethical dentists practice cosmetic dentistry to the delight of grateful patients who have learned to smile again.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Jane, is 25, attractive and holds a responsible position. She is also quite naive and unsophisticated. For the last two years Jane has been seeing a young man who could easily get married if he wanted to. He has Jane effing out of his hand, but this relationship seems to be going nowhere. Jane refuses to date anyone else, but this young man openly dates others, which hurts Jane deeply.

Every time we attempt to discuss this one-sided relationship with Jane, it results in an emotional outburst and she tells us to please stay out of her affairs. What can we do? My husband would like to tell this young man to either fish or cut bait, but I don't think we should interfere. What do you think? JANE'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I think you're right. Any pressure on father's part would send the young man running for the hills. Let Jane handle it, and don't compound her problem by attempting to discuss it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Second Thoughts" prompts me to write. (She wanted to know whether to go ahead and marry a man who had beaten her up in a fit of jealousy because she dated with another man.) I'm glad you advised her against marrying him: I spent 20 years as a detective with Scotland Yard, and as such I've had a lot of experience with emotionally unstable persons. Obviously, a man who would beat a woman is in need of a woman to be legally chained to such a person. My own observations have led me to believe that persons with uncontrollable tempers have a basic emotional defect, and they certainly will not improve after marriage. They sometimes improve, however, when they see someone with a slightly bigger stick than the one they wield.

Couple recites vows in LDS Temple rites

GOODING - Janet Louise Conrad and Tim Smith were married Nov. 30 at the Idaho Falls LDS Temple.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Conrad, Gooding, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ron Smith, Coos Bay, Ore.

LDS president Winters conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The couple was honored at a reception the same evening in Gooding. They greeted guests before a backdrop of gold brocade with green and blue baskets of flowers at each side.

The bride wore a gown of white sheer styled with an empire waistline, high neckline and full sleeves of lace. The sheer skirt was edged with wide lace and the train was edged with a lace ruffe.

Her elbow-length veil of net was held by a lace and pearl crown. She carried a bouquet of white carnations and red roses tied with dark blue ribbon.

Make quick pumpkin pie

Bake a graham cracker crust, adding 1 T. cocoa; chill. Combine 2 c. canned pumpkin with 1/2 c. milk, 1 pkg. (2 1/2 oz.) vanilla pudding and pie filling and 1/4 c. each ground cinnamon and nutmeg. Cook, stirring, until mixture bubbles. Let cool about 5 minutes, then stir in 1 T. of chopped toasted almonds and 1/2 T. rum or sherry. Spoon into crust; chill well. Top with whipped cream; garnish with toasted almonds and shaved chocolate.

Carolyn Bateman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Connie Glauner, Karen McBeth and Ellen Ball.

Merv Smith, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Grooms-men were John Johnson, Jim and Bill Conrad.

The white cake was placed on a cherub fountain with blue and green chrysanthemums at the base. The top of the cake was decorated with a miniature temple.

The bride's table was covered with dark blue satin with a white skirt. The table was placed before a backdrop of chrysan.

Mrs. Karen Smith, Mrs. Marilyn Johnson, Betty Yearsley and Gail Pope assisted with serving. Helping with gifts were Marlene Gardner, Diane Eckles and Katherine Smith.

Kim Conrad was master of ceremonies for a short program. Mrs. Patty Marrise, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Garff, Lorraine Shaver and Pam and Diana Durfee presented numbers.

The couple was also honored at an open house in Coos Bay Dec. 7 with the bridegroom's parents as hosts. The couple resides in Provo, Utah.

Deputy resignation asked

BOISE (UPI) — Mrs. Kay Pell, director of the State's Office of Aging, is asking for the resignation of one of her deputies, Wilfred E. Overgaard.

Mrs. Pell said Wednesday she had not put the request in writing but that she had asked for Overgaard's resignation by Jan. 1. She indicated that the reasons for the requests may be made known at that time.

"She knows why he is being asked to resign," she said, refusing to elaborate. "It's not public information. It's just between me and him."

Overgaard, who has been with the department for nearly five years, declined to discuss the matter.

Gold coin coupons canceled

BOISE (UPI) — Territorial gold coin coupons a Boise man wanted to cash with the state treasurer already have been canceled, according to the Idaho Attorney General's office.

Jerry Messman of Boise brought the four $50 coupons to the treasurer a month ago and asked if the state still had a legal obligation to pay off the warrants which were issued before Idaho obtained statehood.

Messman said the coupons belonged to his grandfather who had invested in other lands issued by the state territory as well.

An opinion issued by Deputy Attorney General Donald Harpala said that although the coupons had not been stamped with the state's cancellation mark, research by the Idaho Historical Society showed the coupons in question had been redeemed, Dec. 8, 1891.

Pink snow geese?

BOISE (UPI) — Chuck Steiner of Orcana looked twice before reporting seven bright pink snow geese resting on the waters of Spencer Reservoir in Owyhee County to the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

Dick Merrill, state bird supervisor, checked the records and learned that bright pink is the color used by the U.S.S.R. for marking snow geese.

Russia and Canada are requesting American cooperation in reporting place and date whenever marked snow geese are sighted. The Canadian geese are dyed a bright orange color.

The Russian geese are hatched and reared in Siberia and now are migrating to wintering areas in California's Sacramento Valley.

Group to continue sugar boycott

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Members of the Committee for Economic Survival say they will continue their sugar boycott and may expand it to other products containing sugar.

Karen Fullmer, Newton, told a rally Wednesday night, "We've had a tremendous response from the public."

She told the meeting petitions will be distributed for signatures and will be sent to government officials "at all levels."

She said the group will also organize a boycott of soft drinks which have increased in price because of higher sugar prices.

Estimated cost mounts

BOISE (UPI) — The estimated cost to build a coal-fired generating plant at Orchard has increased to $600 million from $500 million, the Idaho Power Co. president said Wednesday.

James Bruce said the $600 million price tag assumes construction costs would be climbing at the current rate and not take sudden downward surges.

"The $400 million figure was based on what it cost us to build the Jim Bridger plant in Wyoming," Bruce said. "Since then, we have obtained the first definitive cost. It appears those costs have been going up faster than we expected."

More people using food stamps

BOISE (UPI) — The State Health and Welfare Department has found the use of food stamps by Idahoans on the rise as a result of economic struggles in the nation despite the stigma attached to the welfare program.

A report carried by the Idaho Statesman noted that in Ada County alone the number of food stamp recipients applying at one office in a 30-day period was four times larger than for the same month the year before.

Robert Jensen, director of eligibility, said food stamp recipients just do not have enough money to make ends meet.

"The cost of food, shoes and everything else has gone up — everything except salaries," he said.

Police seek armed robber

TWIN FALLS — Police today were searching for an armed robber who escaped early this morning with an undisclosed amount of money from a Twin Falls bar.

According to a clerk of Detective Tim Qualls, the South Park Lounge was robbed at about 1:15 a.m. this morning.

Qualls said the suspect, whom he would describe only as young and slightly built, had been a customer in the bar prior to robbing a lounge employee "with a handgun."

Qualls said the suspect "walked out" of the lounge after the robbery.

Investigation is continuing.

Burglaries probed

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police today were investigating two burglaries which were reported Wednesday.

In the first case, George Dewelver of Dewelver Brothers Inc. told police the equipment company shop and storage building was broken into and about $135 in plumbing supplies taken.

The burglary occurred between 5 p.m. Tuesday and 11 a.m. Wednesday, Dewelver said. He told police a door was pried to gain entry to the storage building.

In the second case, Charles Drake, Filer, told police a tape player and tapes worth about $250 were stolen from his car while it was parked in the Magic Bowl parking lot Wednesday evening.

Ketchum youth listed 'critical'

KETCHUM — A Ketchum youth, Jason Cudahy, is in critical condition at St. Alphonsus Hospital, Boise, following an accidental shooting here Tuesday.

The boy was struck in the eye with a .22 caliber bullet after a gun his brother was carrying accidentally discharged in a Ketchum home. His brother or brother-in-law was either shooting or showing the gun to Jason when it discharged about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to Ketchum police.

The boy was rushed to Moritz Community Hospital, then transferred to St. Alphonsus where he is being treated on the basis of his skull surgery. He has been placed on the life support system, according to hospital personnel.

He is the son of Audrie Cudahy, Ketchum.

American Falls Reservoir spaceholders mull dam replacement, but fail to agree

Idaho coal fired power plant cost leaps 50%

On another matter which might affect the cost of the plant, Idaho Power does not know whether expensive "scrubbers" to remove sulfur dioxide will be required for the proposed plant.

Scrubbers for a million kilowatt plant could jack the cost up another $57 million, according to US Environmental Protection Agency estimates. They are required on power plants burning all but the lowest sulfur, highest energy coal.

Idaho Power public information officer Robert Brown previously had said that the company is not planning to install scrubbers on its plant. Based on the quality of the coal contracted, he said, it does not appear that scrubbers would be required.

But today Bruce told the Times-News that he does not know whether scrubbers will be required.

He said the contracted cost is between 9,500 and 10,000 per year in BTU energy value, at 10,000 BTU, scrubbers are required for plants burning coal with sulfur contents of 6 percent or higher. Idaho Power originally announced the sulfur content of its coal at 6 percent. But Bruce said that early testing has shown the coal to be a percent. The testing is not complete and "hopefully it will be closer to 5," he said.

According to the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality, coal in the Black Springs area ranges from 7,300 to 11,000 BTU per pound and from 1 to 2 percent sulfur. Idaho Power has contracted for coal from a field just east of Black Springs.

AF Dam meet at impasse

According to Holden, all issues should be resolved before submitting the proposal to individual spaceholders.

Specifically, Holden mentioned the decisions yet to be made at the federal level on fire-free bonds, water quality and a license to install a power plant.

While all the spaceholders agree that a new dam has to be built, "the prudent thing is to wait and see," how those issues are resolved, Holden said. Voting members should be offered "something definite and positive," not "speculative," Holden stated.

George Murray, a spokesman for the Woodville Canal Co., asked for year's delay in making a decision on rebuilding the dam.

Murray said upper valley spaceholders were willing to do "all we can" to share with the downstream users. But, he said, the current recession has lowered farm prices and "to have a hypothetical program like this starting us in the face is not acceptable," he said.

Murray said the irrigators needed 12 months to see what will happen with the economy. "We want to know if we're mortgaging our farms with the risk of losing it," he said.

One of those present responded that a delay might be worse, especially if there is a short water year. Others said one can predict the future, or that conditions "might be worse" for starting a year from now. But, Murray stuck to his position, stating "things are confused now" and it's best not to "stick our necks out."

Murray's position was echoed by Holden, who said he believed it "prudent to wait and see" and "unwise to jump into the wild blue yonder."

Others present said the recession might end up bringing a help in getting the dam rebuilt.

John Rechel, Twin Falls attorney, who represents the Committee of Eight, said that because of the recession, there is plenty of steel available.

Kimberly aide to retire

KIMBERLY — Kimberly School Supt. Clinton Bagg will resign effective June 30, ending 10 years of service in public schools in three states.

Ron Ballard, school board chairman, said Bagg's retirement was accepted at a special school board meeting this week.

Bagg, who has been both a teacher and administrator, feels today's high school youth reflect the general public's loss of pride in themselves and their institutions.

"Years ago, even the poorest 'white trash' in the south would wear the sloppy clothes the students do now," Bagg said. He believes that when students dress sloppily, they get careless and lose pride in their work, buildings and community.

"America has lost its pride," he said. "People today would rather go on relief than go to work. When a person quits working for a living, he doesn't have much to look forward to."

Asked if he feels the sloppier dress today is a reflection of inner decline, or a contributing factor to such a state, Bagg said, "It works both ways."

He pointed out that when there are dressup days at the high school, the students act like they are dressed.

"When you go on a picnic you dress for the occasion," he said, "and when you go to church you dress differently."

Bagg began his career in the fall of 1935 in a Chicago high school in the business section. He taught and taught science and mathematics. The next year he went into administration where he has been, except for five years, ever since.

He taught in Missouri for 8 years and spent the last 29 years in Idaho, including all three schools in Lincoln County, Mackay, Glenns Ferry, Bruneau and Grand View. He has been at Kimberly the past five years.

Bagg feels youths today are as intelligent as they ever were, have more advantages, but are not taking as much advantage of their opportunities.

"You had to do it, and the next thing they want something else," he said.

Ballard said the board is seeking applications for a successor to Bagg.

Bagg said he plans to stay in Kimberly at the moment. He is quitting 10 years before the mandatory retirement age "to make way for younger persons."

The court sources also said that "a substantial out-of-court settlement, amounting ... to several thousand dollars, was declined by the attorney for the plaintiff Knecks after being offered by the attorney for the defense."

SC health unit budget hiked 34%

By DAVID HORSEMAN
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — South Central Health District board members Wednesday adopted a 1975 budget of $22,213, a 34 per cent boost over this year's $28,714.

New federal money was responsible for most of the big hike. The district added $90,000 in federal money for an early and periodic screening program and $28,500 for a family planning clinic.

Local dollars in the new budget increased about 5 per cent. The eight-member counties will contribute $23,721 in 1975, compared to $22,123 this year.

To provide the local dollar boost, the district board increased county assessments to $2.25 per capita from $2.15.

Twin Falls County will pay about $94,000 under the new assessment; followed by Cassia, $38,000; Mintoka, $35,000; Jerome, $23,000; Gooding, $19,500; Blaine, $19,000; Lincoln, $7,000, and Cama, $2,000.

State money in the new budget totals about $140,000. The health district office will generate about $29,000 on the 1975 budget — $16,000 for issuance of sewage system, installation permits and registration fees, $7,000 in clinic receipts and $6,000 for medical consultant services.

About 40 per cent of the new budget, $206,000, will be spent on physical health programs. Other expenditures will include environmental health, $166,000 (31 per cent); early and periodic screening programs, $89,000 (17 per cent); family planning, $83,000 (16 per cent); administration, $25,000 (12 per cent); and health board expenses, $6,000 (1.1 per cent).

Included in the expenditures will be a 5.7 per cent increase in district employee salaries, from a total of about $223,000 this year to $268,000 in 1975. The district also will hire several employees to provide new programs, adding about $60,000 in salaries.

Travel expenses will increase about 20 per cent in 1975, to $37,500 from $30,000, because the mileage allowance for employees was hiked to 15 cents from 12 cents per mile.

Miscellaneous expenses rose 21.5 per cent because off-inflated costs for supplies, furniture and other essentials. That category was boosted to $22,000 from $17,000.

In other action Wednesday, the district board approved a policy to monitor the location of industrial pesticides stored in Magic Valley.

The voluntary program provides that pesticide vendors notify the health district and local fire departments on the location of the chemicals.

"Some pesticides are toxic when burned. The storage information will enable the district to warn the public in the event of a fire at or near a pesticide stockpile and will forewarn firemen who might fight the fire."

Murtaugh bid opening set

MURTAUGH — Bids will be opened at 4:30 p.m. Friday on a new Murtaugh water system.

Hugh Hedges of J-U-B Engineers, Twin Falls, said the project to be financed by an FHA grant will include drilling a new well, erecting a 25,000-gallon redwood storage tank and installing a pump, several booster pumps and a building to house them.

The Murtaugh City Council was notified last August that money for the $73,000 grant had been approved. Since the engineering firm has since drawn specifications for the bid, the district to award the contract.

Hedges said his firm will advise the council as to the best approach following the bid opening.

Jerome hearing labeled 'futility'

By CHARLOTTE BELL
Times-News writer

JEROME — The man who attempted to defend a Jerome teacher said today hearings for a teacher before a local school board were an exercise in futility.

Robert Day, director of public relations for the Idaho Education Association, had represented Elmer Hicks, a Jerome sixth grade teacher who was fired by the Jerome School Board following five days of public hearings in which Hicks had been accused of physically abusing students.

Day reticulated the procedure set forth by Idaho law and the State Board of Education in contract non-renewal or the dismissal of a teacher. According to Day, the policy places the local school board in an unstable position.

He said the option of non-renewal that the Jerome School Board had reached a previous decision was shrewdly others within the school district, because, according to Day, from time to time during the course of the hearing, Hicks, members of the community would say "the board has rifled up its mind. You are wasting your time."

"By law, however, this administrative process must be followed before a judicial review can be initiated," Day said. He said the association's attorney is reviewing the hearing held for Hicks to see if there are sufficient grounds to go to court for reinstatement of Hicks.

"Whether or not we go to court will be up to him [Hicks]," Day said. He said Hicks will not make any decisions until the matter to court until he has talked with the association's attorney.

When Day was asked if he thought Hicks received a fair hearing, he said "I am not sure from the very beginning that the chances of Mr. Hicks being reinstated to his job were extremely remote. Student recall of the various incidents, regardless of when they happened, was too vivid, past and repetitive to be valid."

"Past experience with people, especially children, is that their response under normal circumstances is 'I will not be harassed at work. If I am, I will be harassed at work.'" Day said.

"After the first two or three witnesses, it was obvious that the testimony of Mr. Hicks was imminent," Day said.

Day and Hicks had been employed in the Jerome School District for 17 years and that the Jerry Williams incident was apparently the first time school officials had questioned the disciplining of students.

Day said any effort had been made by the Jerome School District to review school board policy with the staff, specifically the policy dealing with corporal punishment, as to its meaning, implementation and consequences.

"The administration and the board, however, saw fit to place Hicks on probation on March 11, 1974, for other inconsequential, general, nipping-and-tucking procedures for supervising students in the classroom."

The administration criticized, but offered little help to this teacher in assisting him to overcome these so-called reasons for his probationary status with the school district," Day said.

Day added that although the school district applied the law as it pertained to placing a continuing teacher on probation, the board failed to comply with the law in that it failed to adopt policy in this regard and also failed to develop guidelines and procedures for supervising and evaluating teachers placed on probation, as required by the Idaho Code.

Grand Teton try set by Petzoldt

LANDER, Wyo. (UPI) — A climbing party of 21 led by 66-year-old Wyoming mountaineer Paul Petzoldt will try to make the peak of 13,770-foot Grand Teton for the ninth time this New Year's day.

Petzoldt, who founded the Outdoor Leadership School in Lander, has led his instructors and students up the peak in Grand Teton National Park as a winter survival ritual for nearly a decade.

The climbing groups have successfully scaled the tripod, wind-torn peak in mid-winter four out of the nine times. They succeeded the last two years.

Although they have had relatively good weather the last two years, Petzoldt said last year's climb, which celebrated 50 years of climbing the Teton for him, was a tough one.

"We had continuous temperature might-and-day below 20 below, and we had unusual winds out of the north which raked the northwest side where the difficult climbing is," he said.

Petzoldt will be one of three instructors leading 18 students on the climb as part of their instruction at the Lander school. No women have signed up for the trek this year, although they have in the past.

Haven Hilsapsky, an instructor at the school, said the party will outfit Dec. 27 at the school in Lander. They will depart the next day from near the park headquarters for the base of the mountain. They hope to reach the summit by New Year's Day and return between Jan. 2 and 5.

"The party will follow the route they normally follow," he said. "We have had two good years in a row now. It could really be something this year."

Ethnic newspaper begins publication

BOISE — A new newspaper — "Voice of the Basques" — will begin publication Saturday as a 12-page tabloid for the Basque communities of Idaho, Nevada, Utah and California.

John Street, publisher, said the first press run will have 7,000 copies.

The first three issues will be circulated to Basques at no charge, he said. After that, the annual subscription rate for the monthly paper will be $8.

The publication will include announcements of engagements, marriages, anniversaries, a senior citizens' column, Basque recipes, songs, poems, a calendar of Basque events and an in memoriam column on Basque people who have died since the preceding issue.

Street predicted success for the new publication because it is an ethnic newspaper and not in competition with anyone.

"We're trying to do a service for the Basque people by giving them a communication tool," Street said.

Street said the new publication will be mailed to out-of-state Basques on Monday.

He said the majority of the paper will be written in English although some songs and poems will be in Basque.

Kootenai Indian tribe fires leader

BONNERS-FERRY, Idaho (UPI) — Doug Wheaton, who successfully led the tiny Kootenai Indian nation to nonviolent "war" against the United States in September, has been fired by the tribe's chairwoman Amy Mrs. Trice, without elaborating, said Wheaton and the tribal secretary: Elfen Lowley, were fired for not doing their jobs properly. Wheaton has left the area and was not available for comment.

The 67-member tribe declared "war" against the United States Sept. 29 in an effort to bring attention to its demands for a settlement of ancestral lands it contends was seized by the government 129 years ago. In November, Congress approved, and President Ford signed, a bill giving the tribe 12.5 acres of land near this Canadian-border city high in the Panhandle of Northern Idaho.

New BLM advisory panels face change

SALMON — The advisory boards of the Bureau of Land Management go out of existence Jan. 5 and will be replaced by broader representative advisory committees.

The Federal Advisory Committee Act of 1971 provides that all statutory advisory boards terminate that date.

The BLM's state director will recommend members for the new advisory committees which will be appointed by the secretary of interior. The boards have been elected in the past.

The present advisory boards consist of livestock representatives and a single wildlife member.

The Idaho BLM noted that the only important conflict between the new law and the old is that the new ones state that any legislation to establish an advisory board should require the membership of the advisory committee to be fairly balanced in terms of points of view represented and the functions to be performed.

The BLM continued: "This principal can be reasonably fulfilled in Idaho by augmenting our district board structure by representatives of additional interests."

Telephone tax drops one per cent Jan. 1

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal excise tax on the average telephone bill will drop about 7 cents a month beginning Jan. 1, the Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday.

In its annual reminder to taxpayers, the IRS said the new rate for the federal excise tax will be 7 per cent, down from 8 per cent in 1973.

The federal excise tax, which was set at 10 per cent from 1932 until 1972, was reduced 1 per cent in 1973 and 1974. Next month's reduction will be the third in a calendar scheduled to run out in 1982.

The federal excise tax on telephones was first imposed in 1913 when telephones were considered luxuries. It was used intermittently as a revenue raising measure until 1932 when it became permanent.

The tax raises about $200 million a year for the federal government.

Gold mine on sale block

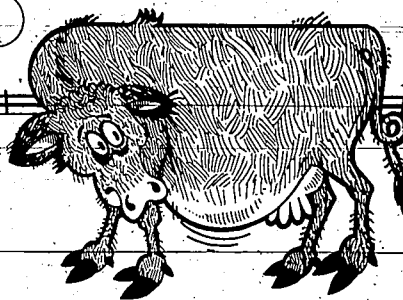

ROSAMOND, Calif. (UPI)—For sale: Gold Mine. Amount of gold remaining not certain. Price, $2 million.

Glenn Settle, general manager of the Tropico Gold Mine, purchased the mine, its mill and 700 acres of land up for sale Tuesday.

The mine produced $1 million worth of gold in the days when it sold from $20 to $35 an ounce, but the digging was closed as a working mine in 1965 when operating costs went higher than the government-fixed gold price.

The mine became a tourist attraction, ran the world gold panning championships every year and its old west buildings have been the location for filming many television and movie westerns.

Settle said that now that gold prices are rising and other mines reopening, the Tropico would probably be profitable, too, but he is planning on retiring so he put it up for sale.

Show entries set

DENVER, Colo. — A total of 5,610 entries, the second highest number in the 69-year history of the show, met the Dec. 1 entry deadline for the 2975 National Western Stock Show, Jan. 10-18, according to general manager Willard Simms.

The figure is second only to the 4,932 animals shown at the 2974 National Western. The totals do not include entries in the large carload division, poultry and rabbit shows or cattle and horses consigned to breed sales.

Simms said livestock exhibits are up over last year in most classes, but the absence of national breed shows this January accounts for the lower total.

Last January, Charolais and Polled Hereford national breeding cattle shows here drew 914 entries compared to 500 exhibits, 198 Charolais and 202 Polled Hereford, for the two breeds this year.

Except for Angus (700), all other breeding cattle shows, Hereford (412), Shorthorn (223), Galloway (104) and Santa Gertrudis (62) attracted more entries than last year.

Overall, national and horse show exhibits also top a year ago.

The Junior show drew 1,202 entries from 14 states, compared to 1,136 from 15 states last year. The figure includes 735 cattle, 151 steers and 164 breeding heifers, plus 212 market lambs, 30 eye lambs and 225 swine.

Horse show exhibits number a record 1,644 versus 1,556 in 1974. The halter classes brought in 733 Quarter Horse, 367 Appaloosa and 101 Paint entries. Another 443 horses are entered in the performance classes.

Short Soviet harvests wreck consumer goals

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union today admitted failure to meet the five-year plan to shower shoppers with consumer goods. It blamed poor harvests, construction delays, and lagging production.

State Planning Chairman Nikolai K. Baibakov said the Soviet Supreme Soviet, the Soviet parliament, that consumer goods production targets for the 1971-1975 five-year plan will not be met.

He said next year's economic effort will concentrate on oil, coal, fuels, and heavy industry, a swing away from Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev's original five-year-plan target of "saturating the market with consumer goods."

He said the nation's agriculture, Baibakov said the grain harvest fell this year by 24.5 million tons compared with last year's record harvest of 220 million tons.

In spite of poor weather, he said, the 1974 crop was the second largest in Soviet history.

Western experts said the crop, though a large one, was not enough to meet the Soviet Union's grain deficit. In 1972 the Soviet Union was forced by a poor harvest to import large amounts of grain from the West, and just last October President Ford blocked another $500 million grain sale to the Soviets.

Baibakov said in spite of the setbacks for consumer goods, Soviet national income would grow next year by 6.5 per cent.

Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov announced a 1975 defense budget of $22.9 billion, the lowest of the five-year plan.

Undefeated T.F. easily tops Idaho Falls Tigers 66-45

The Twin Falls Bruins easily defeated the highly regarded Idaho Falls Tigers 66-45 Wednesday night.

Dennis Bowyer led the Bruins attack with 22 points followed by Gary Miller with 17.

Twin Falls grabbed an early lead in the first quarter and led 17-10 at the end of the quarter. Kelly Newton and Bowyer each scored six points in the opening minutes.

Miller scored two quick baskets to lead off the second quarter to boost the Bruins to a 21-13 margin. Bowyer gave Twin Falls the biggest lead in the quarter at 12 points before Idaho Falls rallied to come within five at 25-20 with 4:40 remaining. Newton scored the final basket before the intermission to put Twin Falls ahead 29-22.

Bowyer and Miller quickly gave the Bruins a 13-point spread early in the third quarter. Then in the final minute and a half Miller added six straight points to lift the Twin Falls lead to a commanding 39-22 score.

Although Bowyer and Graydon Stanley fouled out for the Bruins in the final period the game was out of reach for the Tigers. The Bruins led by as many as 23 points in the final eight minutes.

Twin Falls limited themselves to eight turnovers for the evening and the Bruins were 14 out of 17 from the charity line.

Friday night the undefeated Bruins, with three conference wins, face the Borah Lions at the Twin Falls gym.

ABA committee narrows choice

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Association's executive committee Wednesday narrowed its choice of commissioner to two candidates — John Mackey and Bob Cochran — and said it would be at least 30 days before the ABA would name a successor to Tedd Munchak.

Muckey, a former tight end with the Baltimore Colts, has administrative experience as a past president of the National Football League Players Association. Cochran, a former director of NFL broadcasting.

"The committee wishes to further screen the two candidates and I will remain as commissioner until my successor is selected," said Munchak, who will take over a Cincinnati franchise in the ABA next year. "They are impressed with their credentials but asked for more time to define certain portions of their investigation."

Munchak said other purposes of the current meeting were to qualify certain alternatives he has taken and to find a national network interested in televising our games.

The league all-star game at Southampton, Pa., Jan. 29 will be televised by an independent network.

"We must find a man of all purposes to coordinate league matters. We haven't had one man who could get a merger, get TV contracts. Maybe we've been going about it the wrong way. Maybe we should determine exactly what the job consists of and then go out and pay a man the best price to do the job."

Munchak said basketball is not rated very highly on television as a pro sport. The ratings are better than hockey, but fall far short of baseball and football.

"We must take a long range look at TV for better teams and programming," said the silver-haired millionaire sportsman. "The NBA had problems last season with announcers and production."

Munchak said he was as positive of the ABA's future as he was of his own personal business dealings.

"We'll get a clarification of position on televising of ABA games and once we do, it will go a long way in developing exposure of our league." We're looking ahead to a 15-16 team league in 1980—unless the economic situation worsens.

"Then, there's the annual 'spring folly' of an accommodation with the National Basketball Association. Maybe this time something will get us together again for merger talks."

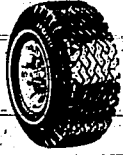

Munchak said if the industry pro basketball is healthy, the ABA will have no trouble surviving.

Ivory Crockett shocks track world with time

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Even when it finally happened, it was a shock. Especially considering the man who did it.

"The world's first nine-foot dash was not turned in by Valery Borov, Russia's double gold medal winner at the Munich Olympics of 1972. Neither was it done by wonderfully talented Steve Williams or powerful Tennessee freshman Reggie Jones, considered the best bet to regain the world's sprint supremacy for America at the Montreal Games in '76."

"On May 11, 1974, at Knoxville, Tenn., Journeyman Ivory Crockett, the 1969 and '70 National AAU 100 winner, shaved one tenth of a second off the global mark first set in '63 by Bob Hayes and later equaled by a host of others: Harry Jerome, Jim Hines, Charlie Greene, John Canters, Willie McGee and the brilliant Williams.

"I wanted to cry, I wanted to laugh," the 25-year-old IBM sales representative and former Southern Illinois sprinter said. "I didn't know what I wanted to do first. It was simply overwhelming, a great feeling."

Crockett, a 5-foot-11, 147-pounder, averaged 22.73 miles an hour in his history-setting race.

However, Crockett, rated only the No. 10 sprinter in the world in '73, wasn't a factor at the National AAU track and field championships at Los Angeles June 21-22. Williams, competing for San Diego State, won the 100-meter dash in a world-record equalling time of 9.9 with Jimmies' Don Quarrie second in 10.0 and Jones third in 10.1. Crockett was seventh in 10.2.

In a dual meet against Russia at Durham, N.C., Reggie Jones was the sprinter, winning the 100 and 200 meters and anchoring the 400 meter relay team as the U.S. men downed the Soviets, 117-

102. However, Russia's powerful women's team defeated the U.S., 99-97, and that gave the Russians overall margin of 192-184 for its ninth victory against two defeats and a tie in the international series.

The year saw 1973's No. 1 track and field performer in the world, 21-year-old middle distance star Ben Jipcha of Kenya, turn pro and dominate the second year of the International Track Association season.

There was plenty of speed left among the amateurs, though. Filbert Bayi of Tanzania turned in a fabulous 1,500-meter run, a world record of 3:52.2 at Christchurch, N.Z., in the British Commonwealth Games. Bayi obliterated Jim Ryan's 62-year-old world record of 3:33.1. And the nonwinning times were stupendous, too. In only his third international class metric mile of his career, young New Zealander John Walker also broke Ryan's 1,500 record with a 3:32.5 clocking.

Ryan, still competing on the pro track, says it's just a matter of time before his 3:51.1 mile record goes, too. And one of the runners who could break Carolina's Tony Waldrop. He moved into the No. 5 place on the all-time world list with a brilliant 3:52.3 in winning the Ben Franklin Mile at the Penn Relays April 27. His 3:52.2 mile was the equivalent of a 3:45.9 1,500-meter clocking.

Waldrop, who claims to be still just a country boy, ran the fastest indoor mile in history, a 3:55.9, at San Diego Feb. 17. The slender, modest Waldrop admitted, "I really don't think I could run that fast."

Redskins caller is uncertain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The identity of the Washington quarterback for the playoff game against Los Angeles was uncertain Wednesday but whoever he is will be throwing passes to a trio of receivers rated among the best ever to perform in pro football championship play.

Redskins coach George Allen continued to postpone a decision on whether Bill Kilmer or Sonny Jurgensen would start against the Rams Sunday but all-pro Charley Taylor, Roy Jefferson and tight end Jerry Smith all worked out at Wednesday's closed practice.

Washington end coach Jack Bledsoe described them as "the best receivers in football" and compared them as a unit with all-time great pass-catching threesome that played with the championship Green Bay Packers and Baltimore Colts.

"Take all the great receiving trios — Carroll Dale, Max McGee and Ron Kramer of the Packers — Raymond Berry, Jimmy Orr and John Mackey of the Colts — anybody you want to name. This threesome we have has to go down with the greatest groups in the game."

All three sound up in the top ten of leading receivers in the NFL this season, totaling 141 receptions among them and accounting for 12 of Washington's 38 touchdowns for the year. Their contributions were sorely needed as the Redskins rushing game spluttered most of the time because of injuries to Larry Brown and the loss of Charley Harraway to the world Football League.

Minnesota, Dallas fill NFC roster

NEW YORK (UPI) — Minnesota, the Central Division champion, placed seven players and Dallas had six on the NFC team named Wednesday for the "Pro Bowl" game Jan. 30 at Miami.

The AFC, which has won the game the last three seasons, will have 10 players from Miami and nine from Oakland on its 48-man squad.

Seven best starting players, selected by a vote of the league coaches, will be appearing in the Pro Bowl for the first time — quarterback Jim Hart of St. Louis, wide receiver Drew Pearson of Dallas, center Jeff Van Note of Atlanta and middle linebacker Bill Jersey of Philadelphia for the NFC; running back Otis Armstrong of Denver, wide receiver Cliff Branch of Oakland and offensive tackle Bill West of Washington of San Diego for the AFC.

Billie Jean King miffed at failure to retain top spot

NEW YORK (UPI) — An outspoken Billie Jean King said Wednesday she was miffed over her failure to retain the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association's No. 1 ranking. It had nothing to do with curfews or the 1975 tournament schedule or signing a six figure contract as an ABC network sports commentator.

"Teen-age sensation" Chris Evert, the 1974 Wimbledon champion, was awarded the top U.S. ranking, with Billie Jean dropping to second place after four years at the top.

"Why did the USLTA have to change its method of rating the No. 1 player this year?" asked Ms. King who has conducted a running war with tennis officials for most of her career. "In the past the rule was that if you won the nationals, which I did at Forest Hills this year, then you get to be No. 1."

The 30-year-old spokesman for female professional athletes emphasized that she beat "young Chrissie" in two out of three meetings in 1974 and was entitled to top consideration.

"It's a front," Ms. King recalled that the USLTA wouldn't rank me in 1969 or '69 because I was a contract pro. Now this is another slant."

Billie Jean expressed that an international scale Chris Evert should be rated the best woman tennis player after her victories in the national championships of England, Italy and France.

Then shrugging her shoulders, Ms. King added, "I guess I really don't mind it. I know I'm No. 1. I've been there before. I suppose nobody is considered the best all the time, especially in tennis."

Billie Jean will cut down her tournament schedule to concentrate on her new job in television. The Virginia Slims circuit, which she pioneered, will be limited to San Francisco and Sarasota, Fla. appearances, while she will devote most of her time playing for the Philadelphia Triangles in World Team Tennis and championing the rights of women in sports.

"At this point, I don't know about Wimbledon and Forest Hills. I'm tired of being involved in just tennis. I want to help athletes in different ways and find out what makes them tick. I'd like women to get more sponsorship money in sports because right now only tennis and golf have heavy backing."

"I have no further goals in tennis for myself except to see that WTT secures a firm footing since that's where the future of the game lies."

"Six years ago there were only nine women pros and we had no idea how far we could go, and in what direction. Today there are over 250 women clamoring for membership in the Women's Tennis Association."

Billie Jean said she defeated Australia's Evonne Goolagong for the 1974 U.S. title on "guilt and spirit—I was out of shape."

She recently returned to Montreal where she underwent an extensive "shaping up" exercise program and figures she's in better condition than last year.

"If I get better as a player, I'll stay in the game. If I don't have what it takes, I'll get out."

Terms of Ms. King's ABC contract were not disclosed, but grinning, she said, "You know I wouldn't take less than a guy."

Interest is high for Chicago Bears job

CHICAGO (UPI) — Alie Ghironi has been out as coach of the Chicago Bears for only one day and already general manager Jim Flinck has received seven telephone calls applying for the job.

"They're not formal applications," Flinck said. "But they indicate interest in the job. Some of them are from people whom I possibly would consider."

Flinck said that he plans to search for "other possibilities before he makes up his mind on the new man and that he will not "wait too long" before initiating his own inquiries.

He said some season-closing business matters must be cleared up before he will have full time to look for a coach and among them will be talks with quarterback Bobby Douglas, fullback Jim Harrison and wide receiver George Farmer, who were playing out their options during the 1974 season.

Douglas had said two weeks ago that he expected to sign for next year, however, and indicated he had no contractual problems. Harrison, though, has indicated he would prefer playing elsewhere.

"If they don't sign," Flinck said, "they would be free agents as of May 1, and I would like to find out what their position is before they leave town."

Flinck said he had "no way of knowing" when he might settle on a new coach.

"I have no timetable," he said. "I just hope to get it resolved before the draft meeting at the end of January."

Griese studies Oakland defense

MIAMI (UPI) — Has Bob Griese detected another flaw in the Oakland Raiders' defense? He won't tell.

It was Griese's study of the Raiders' defenses last year which helped pave the way for the Miami Dolphins' 3-10 victory over Oakland in the American Football Conference title game.

The Miami quarterback, rated the brainiest signal-caller in pro ball by his coach, Don Shula, twice ran the ball in key third-and-long situations to set up two of Larry Csonka's three touchdowns.

"Griese's two runs broke our backs," said Oakland linebacker Phil Villipiano after the game.

Just a few hours before the game, Griese conferred with Shula and the pair installed a new play. The quarterback pointed out the Raiders sent in five defensive backs when opponent faced third down with long yardage needed for a first down. Four of the backs double-teamed the two wide receivers.

The first time he ran, it looked like Griese was lucky on a scramble, going 27 yards to the Oakland 11 from where Csonka backed through for Miami's first touchdown.

But, with the score 17-10 and Oakland gaining momentum in the third quarter, Griese called his own number. The play sent both wide receivers and tight end Jim Mandich deep to move the five defensive backs out of the way. Center Jim Langer and guards Larry Little and Bob Kuechenberg cleared a hole in the middle and no one was left to tackle Griese.

Three Georgia starters are ineligible for bowl contest

ATLANTA (UPI)—

Prohibition rules. When Georgia Coach Vince Dooley learned that three of his senior starters were academically ineligible for Saturday night's Tangerine Bowl game, he must have felt like the boy who found switches under the tree on Christmas morning.

The Bulldogs, losers of three of their last four games, wound up with a 6-5 season and desperately need an upset Tangerine Bowl victory to meet their critics at bay.

Playing unbeaten, nationally-ranked Miami of Ohio makes that goal tough under any conditions. But losing 200-pound all-Southeastern Conference offensive tackle Craig Bertweg, 250-pound defensive tackle Dan Taylor and cornerback Steve Taylor all in one fell swoop makes it tougher than ever.

Some colleges have their quarters so that players eligible for the regular season are automatically eligible for a bowl. But Georgia's fall quarter ended two weeks before the Tangerine Bowl and Hertwig, Spivey and Taylor fell by the wayside.

David Thompson, the human-jumping jack, has entered an early bid for the Nittany

Trophy, the award that goes annually to the nation's top college basketball star and which went the past three years to Bill Walton while he was at UCLA.

The 6-foot senior, pacing top-ranked North Carolina State to a 6-0 start, is averaging 36.8 ppg while also ranking among the Atlantic Coast Conference leaders in field goal accuracy and rebounding.

There's a freshman at Tennessee who could be entering the Nittany picture after Thompson leaves the college ranks. He's 6-5 Bernard King of Brooklyn, N.Y., who is averaging 33.8 ppg going into the Big Sun Invitational at St. Petersburg, Fla., starting Friday night.

Look for the Kentucky Wildcats to climb well above their No. 20 national ranking in the next two polls.

The Wildcats (3-1), losers only at second-ranked Indiana, play their next five games either at home or at friendly Louisville when they knocked off ninth-ranked North Carolina. Included in those five games is one against 11th-ranked Notre Dame at Louisville.

Kentucky hosts its own tournament this weekend, playing Washington State Friday night and either Oklahoma State or Villanova Saturday.

College football's No. 1 team, Alabama, would have liked a different script for its Orange Bowl game with Notre Dame.

The original script favored the Crimson Tide because the Tide has been waiting since last New Year's eve for a chance to revenge that one-point Sugar Bowl loss to the Irish.

But the humiliation of blowing a 23-point lead in a 55-24 season finale loss to Southern Cal plus the fact that the Orange Bowl game ends the Notre Dame coaching career of Ara Parseghian, has given the Irish renewed desire for a New Year's night victory.

Pittsburgh president recalls leaner years

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The Pittsburgh Steelers, like the ancient Hebrews, walked the desert of frustration and disillusionment for 40 years before reaching the Promised Land.

Art Rooney, president of the National Football League team recalled those lean years Wednesday.

"They were days of frustration, of sorrow, of headaches, but I still found a joy being in the business," he said. "As an ex-athlete and coach, I treasured my associations with the coaches, players and fans."

In 1972 the Steelers won their first championship ever when they took the Central Division title of the American Football Conference. They went on to beat Oakland in a playoff game in the last five seconds when Franco Harris scored after the now famous "miraculous reception" of a deflected pass.

But Miami beat them 21-17 in the AFC championship game. This is the third consecutive season the Steelers have made it to the playoffs.

"I think we can beat Buffalo Sunday," Rooney said, rolling his ever-present cigar between his fingers. "Our defense is as good as any in football and our offense has the potential of catching up to the defense."

Rooney learned football as a halfback at Indiana Normal College and Duquesne University. He weighed only 150 pounds.

His brother, Dan, who turned down $5,000 to join the New York Yankees in the 1920s, because he aimed for the priesthood, also was a star in football.

Dan became Father Silas, a Franciscan priest who spent several years as a missionary in China. Now retired, he makes his home with Art, and offers Mass each morning at the Holy Childhood Chapel, adjacent to Rooney's Victorian-style home on the city's North Side.

In 1925 Art and Dan played for Wheeling in the Mid-Atlantic League, which developed many major league baseball stars such as Terry Moore and Joe Medwick.

Art, an outfielder, led off that season as the league's second best hitter and Dan was third with .369.

"I signed with the White Sox," Art said, "but did not go to training camp. I wound up with the Cubs but after one swing around the league, I decided I didn't have it."

The Rooney brothers excelled in boxing, Art winning the international amateur welterweight championship in Toronto in 1918.

Judge lets Hunter start negotiation

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A California judge Wednesday declined to restrain Cy Young Award winner Jim "Catfish" Hunter from negotiating or signing contracts with club owners other than the Oakland Athletics.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Seymour Avakian said he felt there was little chance realistically that a contract would be signed before the merits of the case were argued in court. He set the case down for arguments Jan. 2.

He said he and the Oakland A's would suffer great and irreparable damage if Hunter were allowed to sign with another club because Hunter was "a uniquely and specially talented pitcher of professional baseball who in his last season won 25 games," along with the Cy Young Award.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn had designated a six day period during which owners could talk to Hunter about signing for the 1975 season but said that no signing could take place before Dec. 21. Finley's attorney, Neil Papiano, of Los Angeles, argued that Finley would be damaged in several ways, including loss of revenue from season tickets, if a restraining order were not signed.

Joseph Freitas of San Francisco, attorney for Hunter, and Richard Moss, attorney for the Baseball Players' Association, said there would be no such damage. They told the judge that in California, courts give great latitude toward arbitrators and do not even review merits of arbitration unless they feel the award is "fraternal."

Both sides told the judge they welcomed their day in court and the judge indicated that two court days might be necessary to try the case.

"Arguing that the baseball clubs were presently ready to go ahead and sign Hunter, Papiano said he had talked to an owner of two clubs who asked if there was any level

"Realistically, I don't think there will be a contract signed before then because the clubs would be leery of signing Mr. Hunter with court action pending and Mr. Hunter would be anxious to get the top dollar," Avakian told attorneys at the close of an in-chambers session.

Avakian said a different judge would hear the actual arguments.

A's owner Charles O. Finley was in the courtroom when the petition was submitted but did not take part in the in-chambers discussion which was limited to attorneys and the press.

Finley had filed a petition to vacate an arbitrators' award which made Hunter a free agent.

The petition claims that the arbitrators, who gave a $1 decision, had neither authority nor jurisdiction to declare Hunter a free agent.

The arbitrators' authority extended only to determining whether the contract had been complied with, Finley said.

Christmas comes early for former Army coach

CORNWALL, N.Y. (UPI)—Christmas came a week early for Tom and Bonnie Cahill this year.

A year ago, Tom was dismissed as Army football coach on a chilling, icy day when winter's bitter winds were whipping the Academy and Army brass and cadets were musing over a football season that had been an utter disaster.

Tom had called from Schenectady to tell Bonnie and the children that he was back in coaching, signing on to direct Union College.

That little of that had been Cahill's fault could not be taken into account. That had led Army to some of its last great seasons, when he took over from Paul Dietzel back in 1966 did not matter, nor did it matter that Tom had been his peers' selection as coach of the year in his first season.

Tom's cadets had lost all 10 games, and the finale had been a 51-0 defeat at the hands of Navy.

That little of that had been Cahill's fault could not be taken into account. That had led Army to some of its last great seasons, when he took

Stale and other national powers, but to Tom the thing that counts most is being back with "as he says," "just good kids. Unlike a good school, and I've never been happier than when I've worked with good kids."

In the fall of 1975, he'll be sending Union teams against teams like Alfred, Williams, Hobart and others "in NCAA Division II and Division III, but he'll send them out just as if he were facing the kind of schedule Army plays."

Market Review

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, a winner the first two sessions, opened lower Thursday in moderately active trading in the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained more than 16 points in the previous two sessions, was off 0.78 at 692.71 shortly after the opening. Declines led advances, 70 to 135, among the 407 issues comprising the top.

Many investors were waiting for the NYSE report before the market closes, on short interest, which is expected to be high. Some say this could indicate the market is in a position to make a bid on shares that must be bought back.

Another thing investors are waiting for is the Federal Reserve Board report on bank loan demands, and the nation's money supply. The FRED has pumped more money into the banking system this week, according to reports.

Many observers have been pleased with the volume in the past few days.

New sugar law backed

Courtesy Sinclair & Co., WASHINGTON (CNS) — Six of seven sugar merchants testifying before a House subcommittee of the reasons for high sugar prices and they privately felt Congress should pass some form of new sugar legislation next year.

Carroll's sugar division told the subcommittee he felt the free market concept would supply the United States with an adequate amount of sugar and provide the incentive to increase production.

The other six merchants, explaining it was their private view and not that of their companies, said they felt legislation was needed to establish the rules of the game under which they operated. If there is to be no sugar act, he said, it needs to be known soon.
