Valley shivers into '75

BY GEORGE WILEY
Times News Writer

Magie Valley residents endured 12 shivering and shaking as temperatures today turned toward the low end of the high pressure system's weather front. The wind was from the north and the air brittle. However, meteorologist Don Sims of the Boise office of the U.S. Weather Service issued an odd prescription: To warm up, head for the hills.

With last night's low at below zero, Twin Falls went further reporting the low for the Valley of 10 below and with daytime highs in the mid 20s. Sims reported residents take advantage of a temperature inversion and go to the mountains. Where temperatures are average at least 10 degrees warmer above 6,000 feet.

Sims said the temperature never got particularly un-unusual, but was certainly the lowest of not profound level to warm during the day and rise and go with the warmer upper air.

"Part of the reason for the cold ground level air, Sims said, was the snow cover throughout the valley.

"What we're doing is making our own air dirty," Sims said. "We're not warming up enough to get the air mixed up."

Despite the icy conditions, New Year's motorists were cautious last night, with only one man in the Twin Falls area arrested for driving while intoxicated.

While there were a few minor accidents, city, county and state police reported no serious crashes. Twin Falls police also said there had been no reported burglaries in the city as of a.m. today.

Sims said the cold snap will last at least through Sunday.

"We're not getting any storm strong enough to push this cold air out," Sims said, "and until we do that we're stuck."

Although nothing is foreseen through Sunday to change the brisk conditions, Sims reasoned that if weather patterns hold to normal, a storm sufficiently strong to disturb the cold air will probably move through the area next week.

Valley road toll climbs despite gas, speed cuts

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — In spite of reduced speed limits and high gasoline prices, tolls for deaths in Magie Valley climbed 104 percent in 1974 compared to a year earlier.

Lt. Roy Thomas, Idaho State Police, said he cannot pinpoint a reason for the increase in deaths from 63 in 1973 to 65 in 1974. He said other areas in the state showed fewer highway deaths. The fourth district, which he heads for the state police, covers the Magie Valley area.

In 1972 there were 60 highway deaths in 1971 records show 65, and only 52 in 1970.

No pattern was established on the various highways as to accidents and deaths. He said in 1974 there were 11 fatalities on U.S. Highway 91 between Twin Falls and the Nevada state line. A total of 42 accidents were reported in that same stretch of highway and no fatalities.

Lt. Thomas said the road has not changed and weather conditions were pretty about the same for both years.

On the other hand, Interstate 80 to the Utah state line has had only one fatality this year while a year ago there were 11. This could reflect a reduced speed on the interstate while drivers are inclined to disregard the limit on two-lane highways. It would not, however, account for the difference in two years, Thomas said.

Most of the accidents, fatal and non-fatal, occurred around the population centers of Twin Falls, and Burley. Rupert, and Huppert areas are populations in the Burley and Huppert areas and accidents in the two areas ran about the same.

Accident causes range from driver inattention and falling asleep to reckless driving. Most of the accidents involving fatalities were attributed to excessive speed for road conditions or driver ability and to weather conditions.

Sims summarized the 1974 statistics as follows: 9 in which weather conditions of ice, rain or dust contributed and 4 where drivers fell asleep. Only two of the deaths were attributed to drivers with too much to drink. Two others involved drivers improperly turning into one-way, inter-state lanes.

Losar pays

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A recount in the Nevada senatorial election will cost Losar $9,400.

Nevada Secretary of State William Swackhammer said Wednesday, a Democrat, sought the recount after he lost by 634 votes to Republican Paul Laxalt. The recount showed Laxalt winning by over 600 votes. Reid must pay the full cost of reimbursing counties which hired people for the recount.

Gem ruling may aid MV Hospital plans

By CRICKET BIRD
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — A decision by the Idaho Supreme Court Tuesday may provide a new way for Magie Valley Memorial Hospital to pay for its stalled building program.

The court upheld an agreement between the hospital and the newly created Idaho Health Facilities Authority which would permit the hospital to borrow money from the authority. The money would be paid back from hospital revenues.

A similar agreement was signed down for St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome.

In effect, the hospital would be able to take out revenue bonds to pay for its program.

The procedure differs from a general obligation bond issue where money borrowed is repaid from tax revenues.

Twin Falls County voters have defeated general obligation bond issues of $100 million and $5 million for hospital improvements.

Many voters objected that under a tax supported borrowing property owners would bear the burden of hospital expansion. Under the revenue bond method, patients at the hospital would pay the cost through higher bills.

According to hospital administrator James J. Rosendamm, the agreement with the authority was made as a test case to define the powers of the new authority. No amount to be borrowed was specified in the agreement, Rosendamm said.

But specific details of the court's decision are not yet available. The decision may specify what type of hospital construction can be financed by the revenue bonds and a limit requires a 75% back to voters for approval for any proposed construction plan, Rosendamm said.

Unlike a general obligation bond, however, a revenue bond traditionally takes only a simple majority and a two-thirds plurality. In the two defeated bond issues, voters gave the proposal majority approval but not the two-thirds vote needed to pass the bond.

What practical effect the supreme court's decision will have is up to the hospital trustees, Rosendamm said.

Whatever the details, the decision will cause the hospital board to go back and reassess its entire position as to what is needed and what could be financed under this particular decision," Rosendamm said.

After the defeat of the two bond issues, the hospital board gave its approval to a 1975 budget which included substantial rate increases intended to generate revenue for a partial building program.

Rosendamm said he didn't know how the decision or the new financing method would affect patient rates and declined to predict whether charges would go down, up or stay the same.

He also speculated that the hospital may need to approach the state legislature for some enabling legislation to put the court's decision into practice.

The Health Facilities authority had also agreed to call the obligation to the Idaho First National Bank.

But Rosendamm said the rates were raised and the authority went back on its agreement with the bank when its counsel advised that there were a number of questions regarding the constitutionality of its agreements.

The Supreme Court agreed that the authority should not finance St. Benedict's because it is operated by a religious group. The court pointed out that the state constitution prohibits any support of religious sects or payment in aid of religious societies.

The Supreme Court expressed an opinion on whether state aid to Sacred Heart Hospital is permissible since the health board made no findings on the question.

CIA admits spy efforts

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency has told President Ford that its agents maintained thousands of files on American citizens and participated in a wide-ranging program of electronic surveillances, break-ins, and the surreptitious inspection of mail inside the United States, well-placed government sources said Tuesday.

The sources said that William E. Colby, the director of the CIA did not provide any specific instances of wrongdoing in his report to the spying allegations that was submitted to the President last week, but he did list the domestic activities by category.

Colby's report, the sources said, reflected the fact that it had been ordered by the President in response to the spying allegations reported on Dec. 22 in the New York Times.

The report says that the New York Times charges this or that, and then says here are the facts," one source noted, adding that the CIA document seemed to be limited only to those areas of wrongdoing outlined in the initial Times dispatch.

"While I thought your article exaggerated the importance of the issue," the source said, "instinctively it was correct as to the facts."

In its Dec. 22 report, the Times quoted well-placed sources as saying that the CIA had violated its charter by mounting a massive intelligence operation in the late 1960s and early 1970s against the antiwar movement and other dissident groups in the United States.

Intelligence files on at least 10,000 American citizens were compiled, the sources were quoted as saying.

Utility defends plant estimates

By BILL LAZARUS
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co. President James Bruce Tuesday defended his company's estimates of the time it takes to build a nuclear plant.

Bruce said his original estimate of 12 to 14 years is valid because it includes "a lot of work" for planning prior to construction.

Since summer Idaho Power Co. officials have said building a nuclear plant is "unfeasible" largely because of the long, 12 to 14 year lead time.

The time lag for a nuclear plant is one of Idaho Power's primary reasons for turning to a coal-fired plant.

But, following a check with the Federal Power Commission, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Edison Electric Institute, the American Electric Research Institute and two non-western utilities involved in building nuclear plants, the Times-News reported the most common lead time estimate for both planning and construction of a nuclear plant is 6 to 10 years.

Only Utah Power and Light Co., which is building a series of coal-fired plants; also said it takes 12 to 14 years to plan and build a nuclear plant.

But citing the Nuclear Utility Services (NUS), Bruce said in a news release that "the earliest commercial operation that might be expected would be 12.5 years" from the start of "preliminary and necessary work."

Bruce said under the NUS timetable construction would not start until five years after final planning. Construction would take 7.5 years, Bruce said.

NUS, a major nuclear engineering and consulting firm, presented its lead time study to Idaho Power and Utah Power and Light in November, Bruce said.

Sirica re-reads instructions to Gate jurors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate cover-up jury, described by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica as "apparently doing a thorough job," asked today for a re-reading of his instructions on perjury and false declarations.

After a quiet and sober New Year's Eve, the jury of nine women and three men met 30 minutes earlier than usual to begin their third day of deliberations in the conspiracy case of five former President Richard M. Nixon's close aides.

At midmorning, however, foreman John A. Hoffer sent Sirica a note asking for information on the law specifically pertaining to this case: 1) perjury; 2) false declaration.

Sirica summoned the jury, the defendants, their lawyers and prosecution counsel into a courtroom and re-read his instructions. "Nothing else took place during the short session."

Speaking to reporters later, Sirica said the press and public were excluded from the decision to keep the proceedings "as quiet as we can."

"If we let the press in we'd have to let the public in. If we let the public in, somebody might cause a disturbance."

Asked to characterize the demeanor of the jurors, Sirica said: "I would like to see a very serious-minded group of people, apparently doing a thorough job."

Burley carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $2,000. Making a false declaration carries a maximum penalty of five years and $10,000. Perjury requires at least one witness and additional corroborating evidence. False declarations may be proved by any type of evidence.

Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is charged with false declaration and perjury. John D. Ehrlichman, Nixon's former domestic adviser, is charged with making false declarations to the grand jury. H.R. Haldeeman, Nixon's former chief of staff, is charged with perjury before the Senate Watergate Committee.

Israeli raiders bring back 5

By United Press International
 Israeli commandos railed southeastern Lebanon early today, blew up six houses in two villages and returned with five suspected Arab guerrilla collaborators, the military command said.
 No casualties were reported on either side.
 Military sources said the operation began shortly after midnight and that the commandos returned to Israel about 3 a.m.
 In its initial communication, the IDF, the commanding Israeli force, said the raid was a retaliation for the capture of two Israeli soldiers. It later said five captives had actually been taken.
 The Beirut command said the raiders blew up to demolish and seized three captives.
 In a speech to the Knesset parliament in Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Yigal Alon said Israel was still evaluating the possibility of military action against the Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev's planned visit to Cairo this month.

"If it becomes clear that the escalation of Brezhnev's visit signals anything other than a serious willingness by the Egyptians to enter into significant negotiations on an interim accord ... in the Sinai Desert in the spirit of principles which we have stated in our past military preparations," Alon said.
 "Moré so," he said, "it becomes clear that the situation is such, there is reason for Israel to advance negotiations on her own initiative and does not need any guiding from the outside."
 Israel said its troops crossed the frontier shortly after midnight, pushed 1 1/2 miles into Lebanese territory and raided the village of Afram. The task force reported blowing up one house and taking two captives.
 "The Tel Aviv command said the Israeli troops then moved to the nearby Lebanese village of Bnei Na'ara, destroying houses and seizing four villagers.
 "The Israelis accused the captives of being Arab guerrillas, and said the destroyed homes were used as jumping points for Palestinian raids across the border.
 "A military spokesman in Beirut said Lebanese troops engaged in an artillery duel with Israeli gunners after trying to intercept the 200-man Israeli force.
 "Our artillery shelled the enemy force while it was withdrawing to delay it and enable our forces to get to the scene and inflict maximum damage," he said. "The Israelis applied their artillery fire on our artillery positions which caused slight damage to a military truck.
 "Israeli troops went on alert to guard against an outbreak of Palestinian raids today on the 10th anniversary of the founding of the Al Fatah guerrilla group.
 "Israel and Lebanon reported a series of artillery and infantry clashes Tuesday night along their tense border."

Aides case pen lockup
 WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI) — A 24-hour lockup of Washington State Penitentiary inmates who seized hostages in a short-lived uprising was eased today.
 Prisoners were permitted to move about within the prison walls because of the New Year's holiday, they had no work or school responsibilities.
 The prisoners seized 10 hostages late Monday at the hospital and a cellblock at another part of the prison. Rioted guards later freed eight hostages, including five women, when they stormed the hospital's second floor and captured two inmates armed with scissors. Two of the women hostages suffered stab wounds in the arms.

Bigger tax bite faces paychecks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you earn more than $13,200 a year, your pay check will suffer a slight tax bite. The average payee will see a tax bite of $24.00 a year. It will mean about $17 less in this week's pay envelope, unless, of course, you are getting a New Year's raise.
 The Social Security tax bite will be bigger, too. The annual tax will be increased by $32.05, from $772.20 in 1974 to $804.25 in the new year. The tax rate of 5.85 per cent remains the same, but the base has risen from $13,200 to $14,100.
 People who earned more than $13,200 last year had Social Security withheld only until their payments reached the fixed tax amount. Their tax was refunded.
 The new year also brings the first automatic cost-of-living increase for more than 10 million Social Security recipients — including senior citizens and children. Increased benefits will be reflected in Social Security checks mailed in July.

CIA gives Ford report on US spying charges

 The Los Angeles Times said Tuesday that Colby's report acknowledged "that" the CIA kept files on more than 9,000 Americans — and stated that there were at least three illegal "cut-outs" which have not been used by the FBI since the mid-1960s, the source said. Colby stated that the operations were approved in advance by various attorney general or postmaster general.
 "No such" confirmation was made for the break-ins and bugging, the source said. Some of the illegal domestic activities are known to have taken place as long as 20 years ago.
 Asked whether he considered the Colby report to be complete, one source who has had first-hand access to the document, said, "that depends on what you mean by complete."
 "What it does," he added, "is go into some detail on some of the charges in the Times."
 "Basically Colby doesn't attempt to justify what was done," the source explained, "he just lays out the facts."
 Asked further whether the report appeared to be a satisfactory response, the source said, "It's satisfactory only insofar as it gives a factual description of the allegations in the first Times article."

Protest erupts in Cairo

CAIRO (UPI) — Police used tear gas today to scatter thousands of students and workers who stoned them and slashed store windows in a demand for more pay and freedom.
 The New Year day's protest erupted at times into pitched battles between demonstrators and waves of riot police who pushed to Cairo's larger squares.
 Demonstrators chanted slogans against President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Abdel Aziz Hegazi.
 The protest started in the West Loop of Helwan south of Cairo shortly after sunrise and spread throughout the capital. At Cairo's main center, Liberation Square, police used tear gas to drive back the growing mob.
 Prime Minister Hegazi met urgently with the ministers of Information, Supplies and local government and called an emergency cabinet meeting for 7 p.m.
 At midnight, the demonstrators stoned buses, forcing drivers and passengers to run for cover.
 Riots squads were called in. Witnesses said they saw dozens of men and boys arrested and beaten.

Top stories highlighted

AMONG the headline stories of 1974 were kidnappings, with Patricia Hearst's earning the No. 7 slot in the UPI poll. At left, Patricia brandishes automatic weapon in first known photo after her kidnapping, taken April 4. The energy crisis was voted fifth top headline. At right, Mike Hensen reads the morning paper as his wife, Carol, pedals him to work. The Watergate trial was voted No. 6 in headline value. In this ABC-TV drawing by Freda Reltor, bottom, the five Nixon associates on trial are, from left, John Ehrlichman, H. R. Haldeiman, John Mitchell, Kenneth Parkinson (profile) and Robert Mardian. Richard M. Nixon's resignation from the United States presidency was the almost unanimous choice of top story of the year, as President Ford's pardon of Nixon rates second.

'Y' sets program

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley YMCA basketball program for youngsters through the sixth grade will begin Saturday morning. Teams will meet at the Presbyterian Church gymnasium Saturday with first and second graders at 9 a.m., third and fourth graders at 10 a.m., and fifth and sixth graders at 11 a.m. Charles Apton, YMCA director, said Saturday will also be the final day on which new club members may sign up for participation in the program. He said officials are asking any fifth and sixth grade boys who wish to play basketball and are not yet on a recreation department team to reside in Magic Valley communities where no organized basketball leagues are maintained to sign up Saturday. Custom said only about 10 additional fifth and sixth graders can be placed on teams. Additional information available by calling the office, 733-4304.

Holiday lights

The holiday emphasis seems in better proportion this year, both in a lessened stress on gift-giving and a lowered wattage in outdoor displays and decorations.

Values remain

There are those who attribute the disoriented spirit of the U.S. today to a loss of common values and a consequent loss of national unity and purpose.

The symptoms of discontent are obvious enough. An off-year election attracted only a slim response from the voters.

There is every evidence that in attempting to fulfill common values the nation has overreached itself and in some ways distorted the values themselves.

Much of the present spiritual discomfort, we suspect, can be traced to a sense of erosion and impatience brought on by rapidly rising living costs, which in turn leads to fears about the future.

But we do not doubt that once the cautious government can behave responsibly it is that often motivated by worthy values and motives that have strong political support.

But that does not mean that we see no social or political dangers. The nation's political leadership has lost support.

Withal, the nation's social and economic achievements of the 20 years have been immense. They could not have been accomplished without a strong underlying sense of national unity and a determined determination to live up to the national traditions.

There is, however, a need for a new realism, to improve the level of public debate and to be done with economic mysticism and false theories.

There is a need to focus attention on the real economic growth, real wages, real social needs, real economic benefits.

After 1974, we cannot fear for years ahead

SCRAHH, Va. — Here in the Blue Ridge, even Richard Nixon — ever can fully explain the why of the story.

The year that was? Politically speaking, we have never known anything like it. We had front-row seats for it drama worthy of Sophocles or Shakespeare's drama played on a grandly built stage.

The one great question that remains is the question of why — why the whole thing happened. Most of the other questions have been exhaustively answered from the House and Senate hearings and from the cover-up trial.

This is not true of most stories of corruption in high office. Ordinarily the why is not in doubt. Ordinarily the motive is personal gain.

It was all so needless! Those who admired and supported Richard Nixon keep turning loyally to that view. There was never a need to extort millions of dollars in campaign contributions.

DALLAS — The sight of Robert S. Strauss, Democratic national chairman, receiving the homage of conservative establishment businessmen as he lunched last week at the Dallas Club...

But a similar grim election result in 1964 was followed by a fresh burst of Republican activity to regain lost ground; there is no doubt today.

When we reported from here a year ago, Republican leaders still hoped for Republican control of both Houses of Congress.

"You forgot to have it notarized." I was on a tight schedule, and obviously looked crestfallen, so the lieutenant's assistant escorted me to a nearby drug store where a notary dwelled.

"Now your personal check for $20." Personal check? There it was written on the form.

Dixie GOP dream of party realignment gone

1961 by the upset election to the U.S. Senate of Republican John G. Tower. The 1974 election here reflected the national Republican pattern.

When we reported from here a year ago, Republican leaders still hoped for Republican control of both Houses of Congress.

Democrats into his new party "Now" under federal indifference. Commonly is finished in politics. Sen. Tower, though popular, is a lone wolf without great interest in party affairs.

The more fact Sen. Lloyd Benson: The essence of Big Texas money can even be considered for the Democratic presidential nomination enhances the party's prestige with the establishment.

But most important is the presence in Austin of Gov. Dolph Briscoe, largely inactive but landslide winner of the state's first four-year term.

Highly respected Texas ranchman and progressive Republican appealing to a broad industrial base. Steedman's win and general Republican defeat, surprising to many here, might well be studied as providing an alternative formula by the fading Southern dream of ideological party realignment.

But now he has pulled away from it. He indicated the upset victory for Congress by moderate-conservative Democrat Jack Huelskamp against the former Texas right-wing Republican and erstwhile Nixon panderer.

A wholly different Republican victory plan was etched in Dallas Nov. 2 with the reelection to Congress of Rep. Alan Steedman, running as a progressive Republican appealing to a broad industrial base.

Nuclear club barriers vanish; race is on

(c) New York Times Service

PARIS — Nuclear-club members have known history less for such political situations as President Nixon's resignation under fire, the Portuguese revolution and restoration of democracy in Greece than for the fact that this was the year when the S.S. Security Council had its pretensions to control the spread of nuclear-years earlier than Western authorities had anticipated and since been steadily gaining strength. France, without U.S. assistance, started its own military nuclear program after the 1956 Suez expedition.

Until 1974, by what seems a curious accident, officially acknowledged atomic arsenals were possessed by only five nations, those recognized under the U.N.'s charter as permanent members of the Security Council: the United States, Britain, Russia, France and China — in order of their admission to the nuclear club.

China was the last one in. Of course, the Peking regime which gained atomic rank is not that envisioned by Franklin Roosevelt when he demanded that China should be a permanent Security Council member.

From the start the United States sought to discourage other countries from prying inside Pandora's box. But it transcended human logic to imagine that all foreign lands would accept continuing inferior status.

Bernard Baruch, the famous, unofficial statesman, and Adm. Lewis Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, sought to discourage anyone from joining the club. Strauss expressed a theory that the G-5's earlier revoler on America's Western frontier was called the "equalizer" because it put both strong and weak on the same level. The A-bomb, he argued, was today's equalizer and it would be folly to permit governments less peace-loving than ours to share in its disposal.

This pleasant folklore has long been a thing of the past. We have become accustomed to a world where Russia and America, scared singly of each other and by no means sure of China, can brandish nuclear weaponry. It goes the other way with China.

But now there is no more club at all. Israel's president has openly confirmed that it has been making warheads for some time, even if they haven't been openly tested. And an official report by Western-Foreign-Affairs committee refers to India's nuclear test this year as "an atomic bomb" (although New Delhi says it isn't).

The race is on—Argentina has already signed a bilateral accord with India to gain nuclear assistance, thus introducing bright-future hemisphere possibilities. The Arabs are muttering about their own need to counter Israel's proclaimed triumph. And Brazil broods about what Argentina is up to.

More, and more equalizers are being disclosed. If one fell safer than five, fell safer than seven. Now we are in for plebeia. The report that busted into the open in 1974 can't be unduly administering salt to its tail. As Janice Holden wrote of another ghastly situation: "The fire next time."

The fire next time.

Egyptians deny strains in ties with Russians

By JOE KAMALICK
(C) Chicago Daily News

BEHOLD! Reliable and informed Egyptian diplomatic sources insist that the postponement of Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's visit to the Middle East does not mark a new strain in Soviet-Egyptian relations.

On the contrary, the Egyptian sources say that the postponement is designed to facilitate peace negotiations.

The sources say that the recent talks between Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and Soviet Communist Party Chief Brezhnev were "entirely fruitful."

The diplomats say that "if the postponement were a matter of disagreement between Egypt and the Soviet Union, then Brezhnev would have postponed only the Egyptian part of his tour and would have journeyed to Syria and Iraq."

According to the informed Egyptian view, the Brezhnev visit was postponed partly in order to avoid creating Soviet-American confrontation in the Middle East peace efforts. And the sources further say that the postponement in effect "leaves the negotiating table open" for U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Since the Soviet Union has recently voiced criticism of the Kissinger approach through the official Soviet press, the sources say that the lack of even any negative reference to the Kissinger plan in the communiqué is to be interpreted as a result.

The sources said, however, that while the Soviet-Egyptian agreement "leaves the door open for further efforts by Dr. Kissinger," it does not mean that Egypt will accept another bilateral disengagement arrangement with Israel.

The diplomats indicated that Egypt and the Soviet Union now expect the United States to press Israel for meaningful concessions in order to restart the negotiating process.

The sources indicated that the meaningful concessions must involve not only further Israeli withdrawals in Sinai but movement on the Golan Heights and that both must be tied to reopening of the Geneva peace conference.

The sources also dismissed as erroneous speculation that the postponement of Brezhnev's visit to Egypt means that Egypt will not be receiving much-needed Soviet weapons.

"Although Egypt will not allow the return of Soviet advisers to a major Soviet office objective—that does not mean that the arms flow to be cut off, the sources said.

The sources said Soviet arms supplies to Egypt, as well as to other Arab countries, are continuing on the same basis as American military supplies to Israel, that is purely on a cash basis.

In Jerusalem, meanwhile, Chicago Daily News correspondent Jay Bushinsky reports that Israel sent out a new peace feeler to Egypt Tuesday in the wake of Brezhnev's sudden postponement of his trip.

A government official used foreign correspondents as his conduit to urge the Egyptians to come up with "more concrete" proposals for a second "stage military disengagement within the next 10 days.

His timing was linked to Foreign Minister Yigal Alon's projected trip to the United States due to begin Jan. 10.

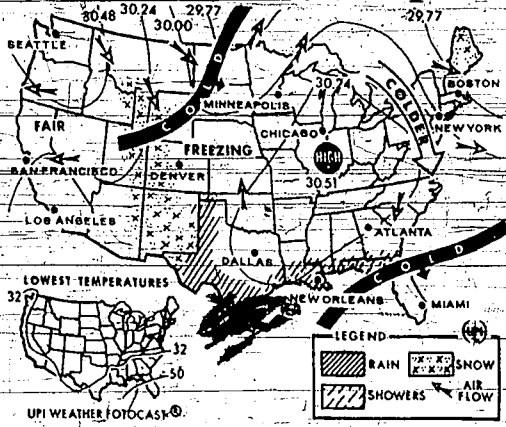

The consensus in Jerusalem is that Brezhnev postponed his trip because of differences with Egypt over the terms of new Soviet arms shipments and not because of his health.

But sources close to Israel's military defence establishment insist that the Egyptians are merely using their best assets to play off the United States side with them.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Periodic queries answered

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 44 and have been having my period for a year and a half. Since beginning I have had large blood clots which last only the first two or three days. My periods sometimes come from 19 to 32 days apart. I would like to know if this is normal for my age or should I see a doctor. Also if this is serious. G.M.

I hope my answer to you will relieve the worry for a large number of girls around your age, girls in the middle teens. Irregularity of menstrual periods is not an unusual ailment around your age and can occur in various forms. The timing may, as in your case, vary. Another worrisome situation is that in which periods start, then cease for an indeterminate time. Or, as you probably know, there can be a variation of several years in the age at which different girls start menstruation. Many start when you did; more than a few may not start until 16 or 17.

More important is that irregularity in the early years is probably more common than regularity, and in most cases the menstrual cycle presently will settle down at last into dependable rhythm. Don't worry about early irregularity.

Now as to the blood clots—that is a variable situation, and I doubt if you really "see" a doctor yet. If the condition persists, then a checkup would be in order, but I don't see cause for any great alarm.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why can't a person who has sugar diabetes have a blood transfusion have much sugar in it? I have heard that, everyone has to have some sugar in his body but is such a transfusion possible? This probably sounds like a crazy question to you, but I would like to know the answer.—D.L.

I'm not sure I understand what your question is, but I try.

A person with diabetes, if he needs a blood transfusion, can have a transfusion from a non-diabetic donor.

If your question implies that such a transfusion would lower the blood sugar level of the patient with diabetes, the answer is no, that would not be desirable for the diabetics.

First of all, a transfusion of a pint or even two pints of blood wouldn't make much difference to the six quarts of blood the average adult has.

Second, giving a transfusion wouldn't remove any sugar from the "diabetic patient's" blood.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I pass blood often in my urine. Could taking too much aspirin cause this condition? Could aspirin affect the kidneys or bladder and cause bleeding? What can be done?—M.G.B.W.

Aspirin will cause bleeding in some individuals, but only if there is enough continued bleeding to reduce the supply of platelets in the blood—platelets are particles circulating for coagulation or "clotting" their function could occur elsewhere in the body, including the urinary tract.

However—and this is important—before you blame aspirin in your case, you should have a thorough examination of the urinary tract from the kidneys on down, and also blood studies to rule out any possible defect in blood coagulation.

Note to T.E.: A varicocele does not "grow away by itself." It may get larger. Discomfort from a small one may be eased by wearing a suspensory. Larger ones can be corrected surgically and the operation is not a difficult one. A urologist can tell you what to do.

Light snowfall expected tonight

Twin Falls, northside, Burley-Rupert areas: Cloudy with chance of light snow tonight and partly cloudy Thursday. Not so cold tonight and Thursday. Highs both days 15 to 25. Lows tonight zero to 15 above.

Friday's outlook: dry and cold.

A very large cold, strong high pressure area was centered over the central intermountain area this morning, covering much of the western two-thirds of the nation.

Skies are mostly fair with only patches of fog under the high pressure area, although areas of strong winds are occurring on the periphery of this high in the southwest and extreme northwest states.

This high pressure center is now moving eastward in advance of a weak frontal system now moving into Washington and Oregon.

Nevadans offering answer to desire

FALLON, Nev. (UPI)—Anyone with a spare $5,000 and a yen to run a house of prostitution can apply here soon for a license. Joe Conforte even has an extra supply of girls.

But as of today, there is not exactly a run on the market.

Last November, Churchill County voters approved a plan allowing bawdy houses. It is believed to be one of the few, if any, counties in this country, which has legalized prostitution by a referendum vote.

County manager Jim Carter said Monday he expects the application forms to be ready sometime in the mid-January.

"No one has been licensed and there have been only a handful of inquiries from Nevadans and from out-of-staters," Carter said.

'Leap seconds' counted off

WASHINGTON (UPI)—For those of you with atomic clocks, the new year comes in a second late.

Scientists in charge of precision atomic clocks around the world have agreed to stop their timepieces for one second to let the earth catch up to the world's time scale.

The "leap second" is required because earth's rotation is slowing slightly. This means the atomic clocks which tick off hours, minutes and seconds of the same length would get ahead of the Earth after a while. Twelve noon would come earlier and earlier in the day.

By international agreement, time laboratories keep their atomic clocks synchronized as closely as possible with earth's rotation. To do this, the clocks are stopped for one second once in a while to let the earth catch up or even get a little ahead.

Since the International Time Scale begins at Greenwich, England, the extra second will be added at midnight universal time. The leap seconds will be added in other parts of the world at various times of the day depending on the time zone.

For the United States, the National Bureau of Standards will add the second at its Boulder, Colo., laboratories at 5 p.m. Mountain Standard Time.

The Bureau said leap seconds were invented in 1972 when people increased their reliance on the atomic clock instead of earth as the primary timekeeping device. The constant time provided by the atomic clocks is a necessity for such items as advanced communication and navigation systems.

The extra seconds are added in the direction of the world time-keeping organization, the Bureau of the Hour in Paris. The first leap second was added at the end of June 30, 1972, and two more were added at the end of Dec. 31, 1972, and Dec. 31, 1973.

Congressman-elect Ted Risenhoover says he favors an alternative to rationing: "Before we go to rationing, I would be in favor of sending Marines over there and kicking hell out of a bunch of Arabs," Risenhoover, a Democrat, said Monday.

Nixon group disbands

New York Times Service
 SAN DIEGO — The Richard M. Nixon Foundation is preparing to disband and abandon its plan to build a library, a museum costing $8 million to $12 million as an memorial to the former president's "historic achievements."
 The foundation's assets, including less than $2,000 in cash, will be turned over to Nixon's alma mater, Whittier College, on the outskirts of Los Angeles.
 The Whittier College board of trustees, at a special meeting on Dec. 2, agreed to accept and administer the foundation's assets, and perhaps receive the foundation's name.
 Mrs. Patricia Holt, of Long Beach, a former chairman of the Nixon Foundation's executive board and a former member of the Nixon administration, said a prime reason for dissolving the foundation was the government's withholding of certain of Nixon's presidential papers and records.

 A final poll of the foundation's 25 trustees, all of whom were selected by Nixon in 1969, from among "friends," "familiar" employees, relatives, friends and members of his family, is being made to obtain their formal approval for dissolving the foundation.
 The poll was begun by Mrs. Holt after consultations with Nixon at his San Clemente estate, where he is recuperating from his recent illness, and in agreement with the foundation's president, Leonard R. Finston, an ambassador to Belgium. Mrs. Holt said she anticipated unanimous or near unanimous endorsement of the proposal.

Bad air rapped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Russell Train, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, said today the air in big cities like New York can cause chronic respiratory diseases in children.
 In a year-end statement, Train said: "Scientists, for example, have recently uncovered disturbing evidence that children whom we had believed unaffected in any lasting way — can contract chronic and acute disabilities as a result of air pollution."
 "As many as 20 per cent of children in a city such as New York, one study showed, can develop severe and chronic respiratory diseases."
 Train also cited recent reports of potential hazards in drinking water as further evidence that much more needs to be done to improve the environment.

Mild quakes, volcano rumble

By United Press International
 A volcano erupted in Hawaii and two minor earthquakes "shook parts" of Alaska and California Tuesday.
 The only damage done in any of the three areas occurred in Alaska where telephone service was temporarily disrupted and several households reported broken dishes. No one was hurt. The tremor occurred at 5:55 p.m. EST (8:35 p.m. MST) and registered 5.0 on the Richter Scale.
 "It was centered some 300 miles north-west in a change in the same area where two slightly weaker tremors occurred Sunday and Monday.
 A "mild to moderate" earthquake rumbled through the tremor-prone central California community of Hollister without causing any damage. The quake registered 4.4 on the Richter scale. It came 20 hours after a smaller 2.5 size

Shaker occurred in the same area.
 Seismologists said Tuesday's disturbance was centered on the tiny Seiyunagi Fault line six miles north of Hollister, which is known as the "Earthquake Capital of the World" because of its numerous tremors.
 In Hawaii, the volcano Kilauea spewed flaming lava 200 feet into the air late Tuesday. The eruption occurred as a strong tremor measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale shook the entire island.
 The lava spilled into an uninhabited area and caused no damage or injury. But Dr. Donald Peterson, scientist in charge of the park geology service, warned: "We can't afford to relax. There is a possibility for further eruptive activity."

Tips by Carol Drake
 Food Consultant

When the wind is chilly and more wood is heaped on the fire, the family looks to you for hot and hearty meals to help alleviate the discomforts of winter. You want to oblige, but serving a variety of interesting, nutritious meals while keeping costs down tests the skill (and patience) of even the most experienced home-makers. To avoid remarks such as "Stew again?", use your ingenuity. Turn it into "Beef Cubes in Wine." Slow can be taken out of the ordinary with a little wine and a few whole allspice, a bay leaf, and some mushrooms. Wine cooking is popular these days and provides many low cost dishes. The alcohol in wine evaporates in cooking, leaving only the delicate flavor to enhance the other foods used. If you are watching your weight, take solace in the fact that many calories disappear along with the alcohol.
 Dishes such as Swiss Steak Burgundy, Beef Burgers or Chicken in Wine Sauce, Sole-Sauteuse, Chuck Roast in Vermouth are but a few examples of the ideas.

Jobless aid approved

(c) New York Times Service
 VAIL, Colo. — President Ford Tuesday signed two bills designed to help many Americans through the recession with jobs and unemployment benefits.
 The Emergency Jobs and Unemployment Assistance Act of 1974 authorizes $2.5 billion during the fiscal year ending next July 1 for some 100,000 new "public service" jobs and provides on a temporary basis unemployment compensation for jobless workers not now eligible for payments under federal or state programs; including state and local government workers, farm and domestic workers.
 The Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act provides an additional 13 weeks of benefits to persons who are now covered by compensated laws.
 "These are important measures which provide much needed help to our unemployed fellow citizens," Ford said in a statement. "I commend the 93rd Congress for its action on these two vital measures and am confident that the spirit of cooperation and conciliation which marked their passage will carry over into the new year and the new Congress."

Ford, who has acted on 65 bills since he began his Christmas vacation here Dec. 21, also signed a controversial bill designed to put some restrictions in a previous law effective last November, that permitted college students to examine their records — the colleges and universities involved — all of those receiving federal aid — had complained that their ability to receive honest appraisals of students impaired by open access, and the new bill was designed to meet some of their objections.

New mine bill due

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Strip mining legislation similar to a bill pocket vetoed by President Ford will be introduced shortly after Congress convenes, according to Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz.
 "My own intention is to move very quickly in 1975 and I think we can get a good, strong, but balanced and reasonable strip mining bill," said Udall, a candidate for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination and one of the architects of the vetoed measure.
 He said a new bill would be introduced in about two weeks, but he wants to confer with Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and others first, "on strategy." He also said he thought Congress would override a second veto of a strip mine bill.

Fear saps US, Ervin warns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fear is sapping the American spirit, warned Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. in a last hurrah Tuesday. Faith and courage are the answers, the retiring Democrat said.
 He told North Carolina constituents in a two-page newsletter at the close of a 29-year career in the U.S. Senate that fear is the greatest enemy facing the nation and the world.
 The former Senate Watergate Committee chairman, whose retirement was effective at midnight Tuesday, wrote: "People are probably more fearful today than they were at any time in the past."
 But Ervin, 78, said if we are to overcome fears of unemployment, loss of status, sickness and death, "We must have courage."
 "If we will seek truth, keep faith, and have courage, I have no fear that this nation can overcome all challenges from within and without," he said.
 Ervin noted that there is physical courage, "which enables one to brave physical dangers," and moral courage, "which empowers one to carry the burdens and take the heavy blows of life without losing heart."
 "One way to seem dangers which are imaginary and defy dangers which cannot be avoided is to live a day at a time," he said.
 Ervin said he said all was wrong through the realization that the alternative to the feared danger is more dreadful than the danger itself.
 He quoted Elmer Davis as saying that "atomic warfare is bad enough; biological warfare can be worse; but there is something that is worse than either — it is submission to an alien oppressor."

Policy drafted to lure Arab investors to US

(C) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — The Ford administration is drafting a policy aimed at luring — not discouraging — investments in the United States by oil-rich Arab nations despite the objections it is bound to bring from those who fear the consequences of a foreign domination of United States industry.

The American capital requirements will be met internally, and that foreign investment will be necessary, assistant treasury secretary Gerald L. Parsky said in an interview Monday.

Parsky said the need for capital by U.S. companies over the next 15 years will be enormous, pointing out that estimates for energy alone come to about three-quarters of a trillion dollars.

The new policy is being developed by treasury, with the help of the state and commerce departments; the Federal Reserve Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The hope, Parsky said, is to have it effective by the time the oil-producing and oil-consuming nations need to discuss prices sometime in 1975.

There are oil producers who are interested in discussing foreign investment as well as oil companies, Parsky said.

The treasury official characterized the thrust of the policy being developed as one based on "mutual government restraints" with "maximum safeguards" in areas relating to defense and national security.

The objective is to maintain as free and easy a marketplace as we can. That's the kind of approach we should take," Parsky said.

Parsky dismissed "concerns that oil-producing countries, particularly the super-rich ones on the Persian Gulf, want to take over American business and institutions."

"They don't have the desire or ability to gobble up U.S. firms and run them," he said. "It would be helpful to the American economy."

There is a lot of emotionalism about the Arabs, but it's a displaced concern, one Parsky said.

What could be better, he queried, than an influx into the depressed housing market which would lead to sharing up the industry and bringing down mortgage rates? Besides, he added, what's the difference between the "petrodollar" from oil producers and the "transistor dollar" from Japan — which has been investing in the U.S.?

Parsky also pointed out that America's industrial base originally was built on capital from abroad — and that the American industry has left free to invest heavily overseas.

"To just focus on ownership is wrong," Parsky said. "Ownership of American institutions is not an evil; nothing to be frightened about."

"Any investor will be subject to U.S. laws and will have to compete on the American marketplace," he said.

Estimates vary on just how much of rich countries intend or desire, to invest in the U.S. but no one seems to know that exact amount involved.

The treasury estimates that between January and November, the organization of petroleum exporting countries invested $53 billion abroad.

Charged

C. ARNHOLT Smith, California financier and a large contributor to former President Nixon's re-election campaign, was charged Tuesday on the count of illegal campaign contributions, the Justice Department announced. (UPI)

Benny estate goes to family

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Competitor Jack Benny left the bulk of his multimillion dollar estate to his wife, sister and adopted daughter, according to probate filed Tuesday.

The widow, who came to him in 1934 when he died of cancer Dec. 26, also left bequests to the Motany Picture Country Home and Hospital, the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra and to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

The amount of his estate was not disclosed. The first probate hearing is scheduled for Jan. 24.

Benny directed that his Stratfordians, and Pasadena studios, returned twice to the Philharmonic. He earlier had donated them but had retained them for use during his lifetime.

A spokesman for the orchestra said the Stratfordians could be worth between $50,000

Hearings slated to name winner

(C) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — A senate subcommittee dominated by Democrats, announced Tuesday that it would hold hearings next week to try to determine the winner of a contested New Hampshire senatorial election.

The three-member panel will first respond to a petition by John A. Durkin, a Democrat, who has challenged the two-vote victory of his Republican opponent, Louis C. Wyman.

The subcommittee will hear testimony from both candidates and from various New Hampshire officials, including the state's Ballot Law Commission.

Durkin is challenging the ballot commission's action overturning the results of a Nov. 27 runoff that found him the winner of the Nov. 5 senatorial election in votes.

The initial Senate recommendation on seating will be made by the Rules Committee's Subcommittee on Privileges and Elections, headed by Sen. Clarence Pelt, D-R.I. The two other members are Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the Senate Democrat whip, and Robert T. Griffin of Michigan, the Republican whip.

The full Rules Committee, also dominated by Democrats, would then make its recommendation to the Senate, the final arbiter on which, if either, man to seat.

Because of the narrowness of the vote margin between the two candidates, the Democratic majority in the senate may decide to seat neither man, thus declaring a vacancy in the office.

Such action would automatically shift the burden back to New Hampshire and thus require state officials to call a new election.

Venezuelan iron industry seized

PUERTO RICAZ (UPI) — Venezuela's government began the new year by nationalizing its iron industry and pledging to take over the world's fifth largest oil industry by year's end.

The Venezuelan subsidiaries of U.S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel became state property at the stroke of midnight Tuesday. The two companies will share $100 million in compensation.

President Carlos Andres Perez solemnly raised the Venezuelan flag over Bolivar Hill, a mountain of iron discovered three decades ago by a passing airplane.

The ceremony, 500 miles southeast of Caracas, was broadcast to the nation on radio and television. Demonstrators carrying banners proclaiming "The Iron Is Ours" paraded in support of the government in several cities.

Perez has said the oil industry, led by such international giants as Exxon, Shell and Mobil, will be nationalized by the end of the year. He is drafting an oil nationalization bill to be sent to congress in March.

The oil industry, which has a book value of $4.7 billion, exports a million barrels a day, more than half to the United States. The only countries producing more oil are the United States, Soviet Union, Saudi Arabia and Iran.

Under a Dec. 17 agreement, U.S. Steel and Bethlehem will operate the iron industry under contract to the Venezuelan government until a transition period is completed.

The two companies will be able to ship a minimum of 13 million tons of ore annually to the United States, compared to an average of 20 million tons over the past few years.

TF break-in reported

TWIN FALLS — Burglars broke into the U.S. Steel fertilizer plant west of Filer last night after filling their vehicle with gasoline. Sheriff Paul Corder said the firm reported a break in that the burglars were apparently only interested in gasoline as the pumps were turned on but nothing else in the building was disturbed.

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — The Caldwell night rodeo board must meet a $2,000 increase in rent for its stadium if it plans to have the rodeo next year. The board is currently paying $6,000 for the space. But the stadium board said the rental increase is needed to take care of a $15,000 payment due in March.

Solon plans to fight decision

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — A Democratic legislative leader says she plans to fight the State Board of Education's decision to eliminate the architecture program at Idaho State University.

House Minority Leader Patricia Mc Dermott said Tuesday if the board doesn't change its mind and restore the program then the legislature might do it for them.

Miss Mc Dermott contended that the board's decision to drop the program was made behind closed doors and without giving reasonable notice.

Officers originally believed that Pokorney's shotgun blew up but an autopsy indicated that he was shot in the back of the head. The inquest is tentatively scheduled for Jan. 7.

IP defends estimates

"It's clear," states in the introduction to its study report, Bruce said, "that for planning purposes, the target date for commercial operation of a nuclear plant unit is assumed to be 12 to 14 years."

He said that among the preliminary steps a company must take in the early years of a proposed project are policy planning, training of operation and maintenance personnel required by the Atomic Energy Commission, environmental surveillance and quality assurance. "By the time public hearings are held on a proposed plant, its owner already has spent substantial sums of money on the preliminary work required. If no money were spent until after public hearings it could take as long as 12 years to get a plant into commercial operation," Bruce said.

Suit names ski resort

TWIN FALLS — Almost exactly two years after the 1972 New Year's Day ski lift accident at Pomerelle Ski Area, a Pocatello woman has filed a $25,000 lawsuit because of her injuries. Tanna A. Root filed the suit in Sixth District Court in Pocatello. She claims that she received spine, wrist, and ankle injuries when the chair lift she was riding slid backward on the towline, jumped a cogwheel and threw her out. Miss Root said she fell 55 feet to hard-packed snow and has since required medical attention. The suit was filed against Pomerelle Ski Inc., the corporation which owned the ski area at the time of the accident but has since been dissolved. The ski area was sold to new owners in August of 1973.

Nineteen persons were injured in the New Year's Day accident. The lift roll-back occurred when the hydraulic braking system failed. It was later learned that the emergency brake system had been wired up for the night of the accident making it inoperable. In her suit, Miss Root asks $30,000 for general damages, $1,200 for medical costs to date and compensation for lost wages.

Suit asks jail closure

TWIN FALLS — Five prisoners have brought suit in U.S. District Court to close the Twin Falls County Jail. The prisoners, represented by Halley attorney Victor Holmboe, asked the Boise court to close the jail until prisoner living conditions can be improved. The prisoners allege the jail is inadequate, contaminated by insects, including roaches and lice, and that the county fails to provide adequate sanitation and opportunities for personal hygiene for inmates. The complaint also charges mistreatment of prisoners by jailers by failing to provide telephone facilities and sufficient opportunity for writing letters. The prisoners charged the deputy warden who serves food at the jail are not certified by the public health agencies, the food is unwholesome and medical attention is inadequate. The five who filed the suit are Samuel Dee Berry, Donald F. Guthrie, Danny Cutler, Jerome Cree and Richard Funderburg.

Multi-county unit asked to combat crime in MV

BY DAVID BOCKMAN Times-News Writer
BURLEY — Burley Police Chief Gary Booth is proposing a multi-county "strike force" to combat crime in Magic Valley. As conceived, both the "strike force" would operate across county lines. However, the force itself would be made up of local law-enforcement agency personnel. Booth would have the local officers deputized in each county. Then upon the request of county or city officials in any one of the participating communities, members of the strike force could work on a specific crime problem. Initially, eight to ten men would make up the special team of officers. Each county or city in Magic Valley would assign one of two men in the unit. Unbound by traditional political lines, the multi-county unit could send its men anywhere in the valley, Booth said. The advantage, he said, is that the unit could have men specially trained in various fields of criminal investigation. Booth said a small law-enforcement agency can't afford to train personnel in the several special criminal investigation fields required for modern law-enforcement. But, that problem can be overcome by sharing the expertise to be found on the strike force, according to Booth. Booth says the strike force, if properly funded, could meet the request by members of the Halley City council for a special narcotics investigation officer, that the team would be better, Booth said, because it would be on-going, rather than a one-time effort.

Further he says, the team wouldn't be limited to working in just one county, but could deal with drug trafficking that goes across county lines. Booth said the idea of a regional strike force is not new, but has worked successfully in other parts of the country. The existing Magic Valley Intelligence Agency is a forerunner to Booth's proposed strike force. The intelligence agency was formed last September, Booth said, as an informal association of all Magic Valley law-enforcement agencies. The agency exists to share information on people, methods of operation, and identification of vehicles used by "traveling felons," according to Booth. The agency has been used successfully in sharing information about "wrecked" dealers, burglars and other criminals, Booth said. While Booth sees the Magic Valley Intelligence Agency as a success, he still sees a need for the strike force. The agency isn't funded, and is limited to sharing of information. As envisioned by Booth, the strike force would be funded and would be an active criminal investigation unit. Booth said he discussed the idea of a strike force with Magic Valley law-enforcement officials and local government officials. He said the concept has generally been good. Booth is in the process of getting formalized agreements between the five county governments and various city governments in Magic Valley to establish the strike force.

Valley road toll rises

Five deaths involved pedestrians or persons outside of their vehicles and two involved bicyclists. There were four train fatalities and others were attributed to stop sign and yield right-of-way violations or to loss of control of vehicles for some other reason.

L. Thomas said nearly all accidents including fatalities could be prevented if the drivers had adhered closely to traffic regulations, been courteous enough to give the other driver a break, and had been paying close attention to their vehicle and the highway. If we had the manpower to provide a heavy patrol on every highway and strictly enforce all traffic regulations, we could eliminate the majority of accidents, but it is virtually impossible to cover the area to that extent, Thomas said.

In district 4 which extends from Bliss to Raft River and north to Hetchum, there are only 20 highway patrol officers on the state force. Take away those on vacation, on their day off or ill and divide by two for the day or night shifts, and it leaves a lot of highway miles per man, he said.

On the other hand, L. Thomas said, considering the increase of about 5,000 additional motor vehicle registrations annually and the number of drivers involved in accidents, the fatality rate is not exceptionally high. Thomas said the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit was strictly enforced. There is no doubt but that traffic accidents would decrease, but conditions would have to be issued about 45 percent of the drivers. Recent traffic speed checks in Magic Valley show motorist coverage about 62 to 63 miles per hour on major highways.

Only a few drive 55 miles per hour, he said. Thomas said the law establishing the 55-mile-per-hour rate expires in July and some legislation will have to be adopted or the original speed regulations will be back in effect. L. Thomas said he does not have a count as yet, but there were far more citations issued, especially for speed violations, in 1974 than the previous year.

Nebraska overhauls Florida in last period

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — With 7:30 left in the third period, it looked like the Cornhuskers would win the Sugar Bowl. Then the Florida Sugar Bowl classic. Then the seventh-ranked Nebraska touched off its New Year's Eve fireworks.

| TEAM | PTS | FG | FT | REB | AST | STL | BLK | PF | PT |
|----------|-----|-------|-------|-----|-----|-----|-----|----|----|
| Nebraska | 24 | 10-20 | 18-25 | 25 | 12 | 4 | 3 | 18 | 10 |
| Florida | 23 | 10-20 | 18-25 | 25 | 12 | 4 | 3 | 18 | 10 |

On fourth down at the Nebraska one, Galor running back James Richards ran left and then tried to cut inside toward another Florida touchdown. But cornerback Tim Bivens stopped him. The one was the end of one game and the beginning of another. With Monte Anthony, Tony Davis, Mike Coyle and substitute quarterback Terry Luck providing the offensive punch, the Cornhuskers went on from there. They drove 99 yards for a touchdown, scored all of their 13 points in the final period and formed a 19-14 Florida lead into their 13-10 triumph.

Anthony scored a two-yard touchdown and Coyle kicked 37 and 39-yard field goals; the clincher with 1:46 left. Coyle worried about the final field goal.

He said his first kick was wobbly and he was afraid for a moment that he had missed the goal.

"After that first one I overestimated on the second. I got under it too much. I thought it was going off to the right but it came back in," Coyle said.

It became the sixth straight bowl victory for Nebraska since 1969. Florida seemed headed for a relatively easy upset with a first quarter 21-yard touchdown run by Tony Green and a 40-yard field goal by Dave Posey.

More impressive, the Gators had intercepted two passes thrown by David Humm, 116, but pro prospect who had intercepted only eight times all season and formed a 19-14 Florida lead into their 13-10 triumph.

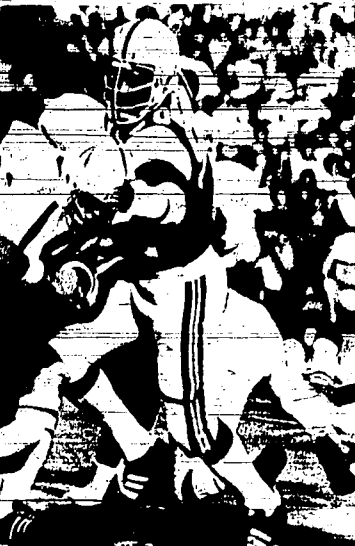

After the Nebraska goal line stand, Coach Tom Osborne replaced Humm, who hit only 2-of-12 passes for 16 yards, with Luck, a junior who had seen only limited duty this season.

"Dave is a great one, but he was having a hard time and sometimes just changing quarterbacks will give your team a lift," Osborne said.

Luck, with all but a few plays called from the bench, directed the Huskers on the 99-yard scoring drive, capped by Anthony's two yard TD run that turned the game around.

Davis accounted for 99 of the 99 yards.

"When you feel you are going down on a sinking ship and you feel it is not really gratifying. Outside of Oklahoma, I'd say this is the best we have played."

Baylor hopes to climax 50-year crusade

DALLAS (UPI) — Penn State, which is used to this sort of thing, and Baylor, which certainly is not, meet today in the 58th Cotton Bowl.

"Although this game is a long way from any national championship affair, it will represent the climax of an incredible crusade launched by a team that for years endured about the lowest reputation a major college football club could have."

Having won an average of only two games a year for the past seven, Baylor — under Coach Grant Taff — captured its first Southwest Conference championship in 50 seasons in 1974 with an 8-3 mark and all the "S" today will guarantee Baylor its first Cotton Bowl game ever.

"I'm as surprised as anyone to be here," said Taff. "A great lot of rain and darkness were forecast for the game."

Penn State, with a 9-2 mark that easily could have been 10, will be making its seventh trip to a bowl game in the nine-year tenure of Coach Joe Paterno.

As an example of the public exposure the two teams have received, this will be the fourth time this season Penn State has played a televised game, but it will be the first time in eight years the Bears have appeared on national television.

It won't be just as Baylor will be on TV, too, you know."

Both Taff and Paterno said they expected a good deal of scoring in the contest since both teams have diversified attacks — that have been difficult to stop, particularly in the latter half of the season.

"I think there will be some scoring," said Paterno. "And I usually don't like to play in a football game where I think we have to score to win. But I think they can score because they have too much balance and they have excellent people in the skilled positions."

The Bears' balanced attack begins with the running of south Texas guard, the 5-6 huskiesman — who in 1974 became the first Baylor player in history to gain more than 1,000 yards in a season.

When Bear Jr. solved the Bears turn to the arm of quarterback Neal Jeffrey, the Southwest Conference's top thrower last season.

Filling those roles for Penn State will be fullback Tom Donchez and Shauran — a quarterback who says that no matter how many times the Huskies win, the game he is not enough for him.

Crashing the middle

Revenge, emotion rank high but Alabama sees fundamentals as key against Irish

MIAMI (UPI) — Revenge and emotion are important things to consider, says Alabama's RICKY DAVIS, but when you get down to the nuts and bolts of Wednesday night's Orange Bowl game between the Crimson Tide and Notre Dame, the outcome will likely be decided by basics.

"Fundamentals," says Davis, a senior safety from Birmingham, "when two teams are as evenly matched as ours, it's the basic fundamentals that usually decide the game. A missed block here, a missed tackle there, a fumble. The team that executes the fundamentals better will win."

Most of the Alabama players feel it was poorly executed fundamentals which cost them last year's game in the Sugar Bowl. Notre Dame won that one 24-23 and the Alabama defense has "boilered the line for the first time in years."

"We let the offense down last year, and we've had it in the back of our minds ever since."

It we don't outkick Notre Dame, we're going to be in for a long night."

"I was reading the other day where I'm probably the best running back coach in history," said Bryant, who stands third in all-time yardage with 21,222. "I don't like seeing my name on that list."

Each team has three starting players on the injured list, but it now appears that only one from each team will start. Center Jack Breenman, who broke his foot, is definitely out for Notre Dame and safety Alan Pizzitola, with a sprained ankle, is very doubtful for the Crimson Tide.

Ara Parseghian of Notre Dame, who will be coaching his final game, has been saying that linebacker Greg Collins is going to let down and the Irish knee and running back Wayne Bullock "flirt with" being out, but Alabama's Sylvester Abram doesn't believe it.

"They have too much pride and they're too proud to sit this one out for those two to sit this one out," says Cronin, the Tide's center.

"They didn't get to where they've gotten without those two. Notre Dame has played only two half quarters of football all year, and they're not going to let down. We've got to go out there and be prepared for a fight."

At the same time, offensive tackle Buddy Pope "hamstringing" and offensive guard Steve Rogers "knee" of Alabama — were originally questionable, but are now probable.

Hayes hopes to keep mastery over USC

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Woody Hayes of Ohio State University of Southern California — John McKeay — coach his coaching skills in the Sugar Bowl for the second straight year today with the Buckeyes favored to win by a touchdown.

The 61-year-old Hayes is the only coach with an edge on McKeay. His Buckeyes have beaten McKeay's two times in three times being including a 27-10 romp a year ago.

"I'll ask you what Ohio State's strength is," said McKeay. "It's better start with Woody or he will get mad at me."

"They're one of the great offensive teams I've ever seen. But we're better on offense and we're better on defense and we were a year ago."

"If we win, we'll probably score 50 or more points if they win, they'll probably score a few less than that."

On the surface, the Trojans would appear to have more momentum going into their seventh Rose Bowl game in nine years than Ohio State.

The No. 2-ranked Buckeyes have a 12-1 record since November, while the Trojans won their last four impressively, taking Stanford 34-10, Washington 42-14, UCLA 34-9 and Notre Dame 24-24.

When they 55 points against Notre Dame, they were the national No. 1 defensive club, came in a 17-minute span.

Ohio State was upset at Michigan State 16-13 Nov. 9. A week later, the Buckeyes led Iowa 10-0, 14-10, at halftime before prevailing, 35-10.

In clinching their third Rose Bowl trip in a row Nov. 23, the Buckeyes didn't even score a touchdown. They won 12-10 on four field goals by Tom Kluban.

"Anthony Davis has had a much better year and their players are considerably more mature. And from the California to the Pasadena November, while the Trojans won their last four impressively, taking Stanford 34-10, Washington 42-14, UCLA 34-9 and Notre Dame 24-24.

Butkus filed suit against NFL Bears

CHICAGO (UPI) — Dick Butkus, former all-pro linebacker for the Chicago Bears, has filed suit against five doctors and a hospital, accusing the defendants of treating his injured right knee.

Butkus, specified no dollar amount of damages sought in the suit filed Tuesday in Cook County Circuit Court.

Defendants included Dr. Theodore Fox, the Bears' team physician; Dr. Robert Butkus was "forced to quit playing in 1974 because of his knee. He is involved in another legal battle with the Bears over provisions of his contract which the team claims is still in force."

The suit filed Tuesday alleges that Fox and Dr. Louis W. Kohl diagnosed and treated Butkus' injured knee between 1966 and 1973 and performed five operations in 1973. It also accuses the defendants of "knowing that he was in great pain and suffering."

Twin Falls girls cage team debuts

Girls basketball debuts Thursday afternoon at Twin Falls high school with the Bruins hosting the Minco Spartans at 1 p.m.

Coach Gary Messenger reports the first game will be free to the public, giving fans a chance to get acquainted with the game. He earlier noted the girls' rules have been changed sufficiently over the past few years to bring it close to boys type action.

Coach Messenger announced a starting lineup of Karen Brown, Melanie Hamilton, Kelly Byrre, Suzanne Thomas and Cindy Goltz.

"For only having eight practices, I think the girls look pretty good. I'm sure they will show a lot of hustle and put some points on the board," the coach said.

The 1 p.m. game will be a javvy match with the varsity class going about 3 p.m.

Sloan to stay

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Vanderbilt Coach Steve Sloan decided late Tuesday not to accept a tempting offer of a high-salaried head football position at Texas Tech.

Calling it the "hardest decision I can remember," Sloan said "Vanderbilt has been good to me. The people here gave me a chance to be a head football coach."

"I am turning down a better job. It's a job a zillion people are after but I think I have a good coaching job. I am convinced we have a great chance to win and continue to improve at Vanderbilt. We wouldn't have stayed."

Outdoors

BY STU MURRELL Regional Staff Conservationist

Fish and Game personnel in Henson are presently working hard to obtain composition of deer herds in most of the units in Magic Valley.

The work has to be completed prior to the bucks dropping their antlers as it is extremely difficult to distinguish between the units they have lost their antlers.

Antler drop varies depending upon the animal's nutrition and in this region usually occurs sometime in late December or early January.

The deer/awn ratio is the most important part of the information obtained from these counts since it is an indicator of the quality and productivity of the herd.

Food in the winter usually results in a high fawn crop and survival after birth.

How are these counts conducted? I had the opportunity of accompanying Gary Will, Region 4 Game Manager, on a deer count in the Black Pine Mountain and Sublet areas this past week. We were part of a ten-man crew covering this area.

As high up one of the major canyons as a chained, four-wheel drive vehicle would allow. We then struck out on foot, covering about a four-mile circle in the upper end of the canyon. The deer were still near 8,000 feet elevation in about a foot of snow. Normally, they would be a thousand to two thousand feet lower on winter range at this time of year.

The footing was treacherous and we were up to our waists in drifts on the lee side of some hills. At one time we had to climb a steep slope to the violent wind gusts.

We were able to classify or count during the afternoon and

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim Hunter, the man with the $3.7 million offer, signed with the New York Yankees "for more than money."

"Difficult," his family has been set up for good, during a hastily-called New Year's Eve news conference at which the Yankees announced his signing to the record five-year contract.

The 29-year-old former Oakland A's pitcher claimed, "It wasn't so much the money as where you wanted to play."

"I always wanted to play in New York," explained Hunter, who signed with the Yankees after a hurried trip from North Carolina and three hours of negotiations which began on his arrival in New York.

"I have achieved that goal along with other things. The other things include:

- Making Hunter, a four-time 20-game winner, with Oakland, the highest-paid player in baseball history and possibly in United States sports league history.

- Fringe benefits which include the endorsements available in the New York advertising market which escape him in Oakland.
- Making the Yankees automatic favorites to win the American League Eastern Division title and, perhaps the pennant.
- On hearing the news, Manager Bill Virdon said in Springfield, Mass., "We have a question now we'll have to be rated the pick to win the pennant."

The "Country Boy" from Hartford, N.C., who negotiated the historic contract, was a low-key figure when he faced the tabloid press in the news conference.

"He wouldn't even let the New York media make him say that winning is everything," a motto popularized by former Green Bay Packers Coach Vince Lombardi and championed by others.

"I don't believe that," Hunter said. "In Oakland, I had a sign over my locker which said: 'Winning isn't everything — wanting to is."

"I am setting no goals to win for the Yankees. I don't believe in goals. If you set goals, you can panic if you find yourself running behind the pace you have set. The only thing you can do is give 100 per cent each time you go out there."

Last the "thundered media suspect that he had bought a

"Buster Brown" from out of the past, Yankee President Gabe Paul promptly jumped in with an explanation.

"It isn't wrong for Hunter's attitude. His contract is better than we never would have signed him for a long term contract," he said.

Both Hunter and Paul refused to reveal the money package but UPI sources suggested the better that the pitcher had not accepted the last dollar offer. It is believed that the Kansas City Royals, for one, would have gone even higher to obtain Hunter than the Yankees did.

Bears select WFL's Pardee to reclaim former NFL stature

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bears reached into the World Football League Tuesday when they appointed Jack Pardee to coach the lowly Bears back to the respectability they once enjoyed as the Monsters of the Midway.

Pardee, 38, was a linebacker in the National Football League with the Los Angeles Rams and the Washington Redskins for 15 years. Last season he coached the Florida Blazers in a 14-week season and led 22-21 to Birmingham for the WFL championship.

"I am proud that I am to be the new head coach of the Bears," said Pardee in a statement released by the Bears. "I have the greatest tradition of all in professional football and I am looking ahead eagerly to the 1975 season."

The Bears said Pardee reached agreement on a contract with Bears General Manager Jim Finks Tuesday morning and left for his Florida, Fla., home. He was scheduled to talk to reporters Friday morning.

In Orlando, Pardee's wife Phyllis said, "It's such a good opportunity for my husband."

Finks considered several prospects, including former Kansas City Chiefs Coach Hank Stram and Birmingham mentor Jack Gotta, before picking Pardee to replace Abe Giron.

Giron got the axe after coaching the Bears to the NFL playoffs in which they could win 30 more than four games. They finished last year in the Central Division.

Finks who helped lead Minnesota to two Super Bowl games, was chosen this year as general manager by George Halas and his son George Jr. to rehabilitate the Bears.

Pardee, Finks said, is "the type of man who can lead the Bears back to where they belong."

Finks acknowledged he did not know Pardee well but said, "I am familiar" with his background and have heard nothing but the best reports. He has a temperament and disposition to be a successful coach in the National Football League for years to come."

Pardee is a native of Iowa but played high school football in Chicago. He was recruited by the Bears in 1957 and played for them from 1957 through 1970, with time out during the 1965 season to be linebacker coach at Texas A&M.

He played for Washington in 1971 and 1972 and was linebacker coach under George Allen in 1973 before becoming head coach of the newly formed Florida Blazers in 1974.

He is married and the father of three daughters and two sons.

Stram's ouster as KC coach tied to season ticket sales

By CHARLES SMITH
UPI Sports Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Hank Stram is a man whose name became synonymous with the Kansas City Chiefs. Perhaps that, as much as any other reason, is why his firing last week shocked the Kansas City and professional football communities.

couldn't allow to happen. Loss of 20,000 season tickets in one year represents a drop in income of $1,200,000 for that season alone.

Looking at these kinds of figures makes paying off Stram's contract appear cheap for the price.

Many have blamed Stram's inability to come up with realistic answers for the news media as one of the reasons Hank became "disenchanted" with him, but such thinking simply doesn't have much basis in fact.

For one thing, Stram had this problem long ago. It wasn't anything such as the playoffs and talked in circles, refusing to answer questions in a forthright manner. But he got away with his banalities as long as the team was winning and doing well.

He once ordered me out of his public relations office, refusing to use his name in the first page of every release out of the Chiefs' office. And he edited those releases to make certain, too.

On the road, he had to have anything said in whatever the Chiefs were staying. If by accident, someone was on the receiving end of it, tongue-lashing.

But, in spite of all his eccentricities, he also was a superior coach. He was an excellent tactician and in their heyday, the Chiefs always were prepared to play. And they played with enthusiasm and imagination.

But Stram, eventually surrounded himself with some less than competent people — and this isn't to say his assistant coaches weren't good. But he seemed to rely more on the judgment of others, persons who weren't connected with the staff.

In the area of the draft, he also fell on lean times after the merger between the American and National Football Leagues. Such No. 1 choices as Pete Beathard, Gene Truex, Sid Smith and Jeff Kinney just never panned out.

So, Hunt reached the point where he either had to take the scouting and draft out of Stram's hands — or the entire coaching staff — or fire him.

The decision was made. The Chiefs and Stram, too, are better off for it.

It now seems likely that whoever the new coach is, all or most of the 1975 season tickets will be renewed. Enthusiasm for the Chiefs again will be high.

And, as for Stram, Kansas City fans won't have him to kick around anymore.

Commentary

But, as one of the veteran Chiefs players said last week in a column in the bottom line — "and that's what finished Hank."

Stram's dismissal — though Hunt is committed to pay an estimated $100,000 for each of the remaining seven years on his 10-year contract — is an economic necessity. And that's where friendship and a 15-year bond ended.

The Chiefs, since moving into Arrowhead Stadium in 1972, had sold 70,000 season tickets every season. It became noticeable in 1974 when the 1975 season ticket sales were going to fall off drastically. Hunt was looking at a drop of 20,000 to 25,000 in that year.

That was something he just couldn't allow to happen. Loss of 20,000 season tickets in one year represents a drop in income of $1,200,000 for that season alone.

Looking at these kinds of figures makes paying off Stram's contract appear cheap for the price.

About 250 players expected to be drafted by baseball

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 250 players are expected to be chosen in baseball's winter free-agent Jan. 9 with all 24 major league clubs hoping for the success achieved by Texas (then Washington) in 1969.

In that winter draft, Washington chose muscular outfielder Jeff Burroughs, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1974, who drove in 118 runs for the Rangers this season. In the 1973 draft, the Rangers made another good choice, naming catcher Jim Sundberg, who spent just one year in the minor leagues before hitting .277 in 152 games as Texas' No. 1 catcher in 1974.

San Diego, with the worst record during the past year, gets the first pick, followed by California, as the 24 major league teams choose in reverse order of their 1974 win-loss marks. Baltimore, with the best record in the American League, picks last.

The draft will be held in two phases, the regular for new men, the secondary for players drafted last summer who did not sign but still are eligible to be selected.

In the secondary phase, the order of selection was determined by a drawing made by the league presidents, with Philadelphia getting the first pick and Kansas City the last.

Should any independent minor league team desire to make a selection, it would choose ahead of its major league affiliate in the fourth and succeeding rounds of each phase.

Last winter's meeting saw 257 selections made, but the number picked this time is likely to be higher because of a recently altered rule which permits collegians who have reached the age of 21, or will within 45 days of the draft, to be chosen. Previously, a 21-year-old student had been eligible only for the June draft.

The first choice at the winter draft of 1974 was Roy Smalley, Jr., a shortstop who was signed by Texas. Smalley went on to become an all-league choice in the Class AA Eastern League, where he had 14 homers, 42 RBIs and hit .251 for Pittsfield. The draft will be conducted via telephone as in the past, with the 24 teams tied into a conference call from their home offices to the New York office of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Club fight arena closed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Madison Square Garden closed out the New Year. Tuesday by discontinuing the use of the Felt Forum as the "club" fight arena.

The Forum, with a capacity of about 4,000, has been playing Monday night fights for more than a year, but the Garden has decided to concentrate on major title bouts or fights between leading contenders in the main arena of the complex.

Indian ranchers receiving funds

SPRINGFIELD, Wis. (UPI)—The federal government has approved the purchase of 2,000 head of cattle to be distributed to Indian ranchers in the western states.

The ranchers sought aid earlier in the year when it was found as many as 6,000 head of cattle were contaminated by DDT, and could not be sold in the market this fall as scheduled.

The ranchers said they needed emergency aid to pay for enough feed to last through winter and to pay for the cost of transporting the cattle to the states where they could be sold.

Women more aware of rape crimes today, not afraid to fight back

By United Press International
The potential rape victim is becoming increasingly less passive. Women are fighting off their attackers with lighted cigarettes, sharp weapons and police whistles, and are increasingly willing to prosecute them.

Women are feeling anger after an incident rather than a feeling of shame and guilt, said Pat Nicholson, coordinator for Women Organized Against Rape, said in Philadelphia. "More women want to take revenge through prosecution."

"I don't think women are using guns and knives so much," she said. "But they're becoming smart enough to carry a sharp object in their hands."

"A lit cigarette has been, as far as I've heard, the best threat in dissuading an attack," she said. "A woman I know was grabbed, told her assailant, 'touch me again and this is going to go in your eye.' He fled."

A survey of a number of American communities by UPI indicates an increasing awareness of the problem and a variety of steps to combat it.

In Carbondale, Ill., Police Chief George Kennedy said "self-defense" courses given to women do not include karate and judo instruction.

"I personally feel that karate and judo give women a false sense of security," said Kennedy. "I think a woman's best defense is a good set of lungs and being able to give a proper shove or kick if need be."

The Carbondale courses include tips on how to administer kicks to the groin, trend on instep or gouge eyes.

Police Inspector James Crowley of San Francisco's sex crime detail, said there was no need of a rape victim using martial arts against a rapist or of a woman carrying a knife on to ward off an attacker.

"Women have been sold a bill-of-goods on martial arts courses," Crowley said. "You can't teach a 30 day course and be good at it. But there are many men who will run if a woman screams." The best thing is to run if possible or draw the attention of witnesses by screaming.

Police themselves are increasing their anti-rape programs, including the use of self-defense classes.

But at least one San Diego policeman on a special task force had problems.

She caught her suspect. "But," said Hamilton, "I don't know how to handle it."

Tara Baird the Apex said she still would have been knocked on her butt and had her neck stretched. Because that's what happened. She was knocked down and stomped despite several policemen rushing to her aid.

Stevens recommended potential victims should "scream like hell," or "hide their time" until they find a way to escape and then fight.

In Los Angeles, the scream-and-run theme was echoed by Tom Prantz, a sergeant with the Los Angeles county sheriff's department.

Miss Prantz also suggested women should resist an attack in every way—scream, kick, bite, claw the eyes and take off at a run if possible.

She says she tells women to use any weapon available, including a knife or gun if they feel their life is threatened.

"Scream! Frantz warns, above all, don't cry or plead."

"It makes the rapist feel like King Kong," she said.

Reports from other areas:

—In Utah, women are being offered seminars in prevention and self-defense but nothing as sophisticated as karate lessons are underway.

—In Sacramento the county sheriff's department for several years has been sending women officers into the community to discuss rape and how women can protect themselves. In one case a woman was attacked in the bedroom of her home and drove off the assailant when she cut him with a knife.

—In Las Vegas with the third highest rate of rape in the nation, homicide detective Karen Good said she believes increased reporting is responsible for the higher number of incidents. She said none of her case victims recently said they attempted to fight back.

Men able to hold liquor better

(C) Chicago Daily News
Women's claims of competency at least equal to men's does not extend to holding their liquor.

Studies now show that women get drunk quicker and easier.

This is not explainable on the basis that women weigh less than men and have less tissue to diffuse the booze. Men and women of equal weight do not show equal tolerance.

This has been demonstrated by two University of Oklahoma scientists who matched a number of men and women on body weight, drinking habits, food intake and drinking time.

The women not only reached a higher blood alcohol level but also tended to be considerably drunker, report Ben Morgan, associate director of alcohol and drug related studies and Dr. Oscar A. Parsons, professor of psychiatry.

The scientists believe the simplest explanation for the sex difference is that a woman's body is made up of 65 to 65 per cent. water while a man's body is 65 to 75 per cent. A given amount of alcohol, therefore, is more diluted in a man's body.

Alcohol also may be related to the estrogen cycle, the scientists find. There are some indications women achieve their highest blood level for a given amount of alcohol just before the menstrual period, the first day of the cycle is the time of lowest blood level for the same dosage.

Testing a number of stereotypes, folk tales and myths about drinking—the Oklahoma investigators also found:

—A New Year's-Eve drinker often forgets by the next morning an important fact told to him at the height of his drinking but will recall it the next time he drinks.

—Drinking lowers inhibitions, but this relates to more than social taboos, like shyness. Tests show that when drinking subjects were asked to turn a small black knob as slowly as possible, they had trouble inhibiting their motor activity. They consistently turned the knob faster than subjects who took a placebo.

—A warning to drivers: people who drink are less capable of making small motor changes, such as turning the knob of a car. The uninhibited driver's chances of coping with an unexpected emergency are not good.

—Not only is a quick drink more potent than a slow one but tests on 40 volunteer medical students showed that the gurglers retain their liquor in the blood longer than the sippers.

But surprisingly, both gurglers and sippers react the same peak blood alcohol level at about the same time. So even if you've been sipping all evening and may think you're sober, you may have enough alcohol in you to flunk the breathalyzer test.

A Lovelier You
A MAJOR HEALTH PROBLEM

By Mary Sue Miller

Authorities constantly report overweight as a menace to our national health. Heaps of advice on the subject of weight control have been distributed.

You, overweight, has in no way diminished. Indeed it flourishes in spite of the millions of pills and women who try to reduce.

What possible explanation can there be? It is not as though we do not know the main cause of overweight. As always, it's over-eating. And under-exercising.

The instances of obesity from other causes are rare. Some of them have not been proven out. The belief, for instance, that you inherit weight has not been fully substantiated. More likely, what's passed down are your family's fattening recipes and eating habits.

Most of us take half measures. We diet in a hit-or-miss fashion. If we exercise at all, our program is haphazard. We are motivated by appearance reasons. Health is very seldom the incentive. For success, we must follow a healthful diet and exercise program. The word "healthful" is the key. Without health, beauty is a something thing.

Note: Watch this column for diet and exercise routines of proven merit. They start soon.

'Pills' seized by FDA

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Food and Drug Administration said today it has seized 25 million birth-control pills because the drug company which made them had engaged in false advertising.

The agency said the pills were seized at Lederle Laboratories' warehouse in Pearl River, N.Y., after the firm ran advertising in national interstate telephone directories that the pills were safer than other oral contraceptives.

The pills involved are called Zorane. In advertising which appeared in medical journals, books, newspapers and magazines, the firm said the pills were safer than other oral contraceptives. The pills involved are called Zorane. In advertising which appeared in medical journals, books, newspapers and magazines, the firm said the pills were safer than other oral contraceptives.

An FDA spokesman said the tablets - valued at $1 million - were seized Dec. 29.

The agency complained earlier in the year about Lederle's advertising campaign and for a period the firm dropped its advertising in some corrective advertising in the same journals.

But the FDA said the company later went back to the original advertising campaign, prompting it to make the seizure under charges of unjustified.

Such a seizure based on false advertising is highly unusual for the FDA.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Clifton Trabasso, V. News Synd.

DEAR ABBY: I met a very attractive man at a club and we started dating. When he refused to tell me his last name I assumed that he was married, but he assures me that he isn't.

Here is his story:

1. He works for the government.
2. He travels a lot.
3. His job is to meet people and get information.
4. When I asked for some identification, he said he didn't carry any, besides, it wouldn't be correct anyway.
5. He is obligated to this job for at least 10 more years and cannot get married during this time.
6. He is licensed to carry a gun, but does not.
7. He doesn't have an "address," but he does have an answering service.

Story is unbelievable

Abby, if this unbelievable story proves to be true, I would like to continue dating him as he is good to me, pleasant and well-mannered. However, if he is lying, I will end the relationship immediately.

How can I find out if he is really employed by the government and if he is lying about which agency?

This situation has me stumped. Any information you can give me will be very much appreciated.

January classes scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Lamaze childbirth classes will be held in the YWCA beginning Jan. 7 a.p.m.

All interested parents whose babies are due in February or March should register in advance of the seven week program. Classes will be taught once each week for the seven week period, each class lasting about two hours.

Instructor is Joani McFarlane. She is certified by the Childbirth Education Assn. of Los Angeles and is a professional member of the International Childbirth Education Association.

Mrs. McFarlane said the course will cover such topics as Lamaze breathing techniques, neuromuscular control, husband coaching, nutrition, pregnancy comfort, non-conforming labor, hospital stay, medication and the newborn infant.

Fee for the course is $30 including the text, all materials and any refresher courses desired. Additional information and registration are available by calling Mrs. McFarlane at 734-6700 or the YWCA, 733-4384.

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: The F.B.I. and C.I.A. both advise me that all bona fide agents have names which they use in their work. (Some have several.) But each agent has credentials in the name he is using. Since this man refuses to tell you what name he is using, you can consider him a phony. Both departments said that quite a few men tell girls this story to keep from getting involved; however, if they actually impersonate a government agent, they can be prosecuted.

DEAR ABBY: This is to encourage "Flat in N.J.," and all the other flat-chested women who read your column. At 28 years of age, I finally got the courage to have silicone implants performed by a reliable plastic surgeon. Even though I had been married for many years and had children, I always felt inferior and self-conscious due to my flat chest.

The results were thrilling. I wish I had had it done ten years sooner.

FLAT NO MORE

DEAR FLAT: You have many bosom buddies that you know.

DEAR ABBY: I am a schoolteacher who is very tired of being put down. Recently someone called me (and my fellow schoolteachers) "glorified babysitters."

I sat down and calculated exactly what I would earn if I were actually a babysitter.

I have 42 students. If I were to charge 50 cents an hour (which is the very least any babysitter would charge), I would make $21 an hour.

Allowing one hour off for lunch (although teachers seldom get an hour off because they are required to have lunch supervising duty during their lunch period), I would get $21 times five hours, or $105 a day, times five, or $525 a week. Or on a four-week, 10-month basis, $21,000 per year! Babysitter's fees look awfully good to me.

Happy New Year readers! We are going to start the year off with the simplest squeeze play there is. It is so simple that the only real way to avoid working it is to give up and concede down one, because you are only looking at nine top tricks.

South has a double West's four-club opening, but no one can blame him for his four-spade bid.

Many don't start out well since West cashes three clubs right off the bat. Then it doesn't matter who he shifts to. Suppose he leads a trump as is most likely. South simply runs off all his five-trumps and dis-

Indira hits rich nations

(New York Times Service) NEW DELHI (UPI)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi struck hard at wealthy nations Monday and said that the affluent had an obligation to assist poor countries such as India.

She added: "The world's resources must be developed to make equitable distribution possible. An obligation rests on the have to generate confidence among the have-nots."

Mrs. Gandhi's speech reflected the public stance of Indian officials and newspapers that western nations were, essentially, wasteful, acquisitive and consuming too much food at the expense of poorer nations.

Currently, India, whose population is nearing 600 million, is in the grip of industrial stagnation and sluggish food grain production.

Through mismanagement, government bungling, the quadrupling of oil import prices and the population spiral have jolted the nation's economy.

Mrs. Gandhi indicated Monday that foreign investment was welcome in India, but more to assist the nation than to gain any profit. In the past India's restrictive licensing policies have thwarted western investment.

Discussing the "allegation" of wealthy nations to the poor, Mrs. Gandhi said: "In order to achieve greater mutual confidence, perhaps a new approach to foreign investments is indicated, in which investments abroad are regarded more as a service to the recipient community than as an enterprise where profits and their repatriation must be secured at all costs."

The "overall perspective should be one of promoting positive cooperation for the larger good."

Mrs. Gandhi said India hoped that the East-West detente would end confrontation among the major powers and that international efforts could be directed to a more worthwhile objective—the uplifting of three quarters of the world which lives in want.

Air fare changes ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Civil Aeronautics Board has ordered airlines to reduce ticket prices for long-distance domestic flights and increase short-haul fares to more accurately reflect the cost of the flights.

The board also said Monday first class fares must be raised over the next 2 1/2 years so that the difference between first class and coach fares will be increased by up to 22 percent. The board said coach passengers now pay an unfair share for extras which go with first class seats.

The rulings, which become effective April 29, brushed aside challenges from the airline industry.

A spokesman said the board's decision was based on a finding that present fares do not accurately reflect the fact that cost per mile decreases as the length of passenger's flight increases.

Tahoe hassle rages

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)—Nevada is satisfied with the way things are going at Lake Tahoe, once called the "Gem of the Sierras."

Environmentalists complain of too many restrictions which have lowered the quality of the water. Landowners are unhappy because property cannot be developed for such uses as hotels and apartments.

Most everyone is pointing the finger of blame at the Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (TRPA) which has the job of preserving the fragile ecology.

And the future of the TRPA will present one of the most confused problems for the upcoming Nevada legislature. There are some who want to abolish the bi-state agency and return local government control to the basin.

Harold Dayton, chairman of the Nevada State Commission and one of the strongest critics of TRPA, says he is preparing a resolution for withdrawal from the agency. "We should get out of the TRPA because it has been a failure," says Dayton, a furniture store owner who lives at Tahoe.

If a regional agency is necessary, Dayton said, then it should be composed of elected officials—from governments inside the basin who would work on a cooperative basis. They can run the affairs better than outsiders, Dayton said.

Gov. Mike O'Callaghan says however "to junk it could be a disaster. My personal view is that the people in California and Nevada would not tolerate it being destroyed." He said the legislature must work to improve it.

State Sen. Richard Hattemer, D-Tonopah, is a critic of TRPA, says it's functioning but it's not getting the job done.

And if we can't make it work, we should withdraw it, Hattemer says.

But Sen. Thomas R. C. Wilson, D-Reno, chairman of the ecology committee, opposes withdrawal, saying it would be a "back step backward." He concedes the status quo needs improvement.

Each state has five members on TRPA. Three officials from each delegation represents the local governments in the Tahoe Basin and the other two are state appointees.

There is a double voting involved. If a majority of one state votes for development and the other state disapproves, then the deadlock results in default approval.

The state majority rule gained most notoriety in the case of two hotel-casinos planned for Tahoe's south shore. Nevada voted 2 in favor and California rejected 5-0. The casinos thus gained automatic approval. Now California Atty. Gen. Eville Younger is suing in the federal courts to invalidate the double majority.

Some Nevadans argue the double majority safeguards Nevada against California calling all the shots in the Tahoe Basin.

Dayton says the Nevada legislature insisted on the double majority in creating the bi-state agency and it showed "good judgment."

Wilson however says the double majority is "not very constructive."

He said the major issue before the Nevada legislature may be the double majority. "We have a large lake and what happens on the California side affects the quality of the whole lake," Wilson said. He points out that treated sewage on the California side of Tahoe finds its way into the Truckee River which supplies downstream Reno with 90 percent of its drinking water.

"The time you've been commuted by state regulations in a special area like Lake Tahoe, you're yielding some sovereignty. And we've yielded some sovereignty to California. The question is if we want California to yield some more and we want to yield some more."

Wilson said he is working on some other proposals but isn't ready to unveil them.

The other thorny question is how the delegations should be composed—how many should be from the states, how many from local governments and should the federal government have a voting representative.

In certain cases, county representatives have joined to push through development.

Sand, shale oil recovery setbacks only temporary

NEW YORK (UPI) — The sharp recent setbacks in ventures to extract oil from shale rock and tar sands are only temporary, the market research firm, Frost & Sullivan, Inc., says.

In a new study of the oil shale and tar sand industry, Frost & Sullivan said that, even if the United States succeeds in cutting its oil and gas demand by 10 per cent by 1980, it still will need an additional 1.5 billion barrels of oil from conventional sources to get oil from Canada's Athabasca tar sands.

The United States has 70 billion barrels of oil estimated to contain 18 to 20 billion barrels of oil in the Utah sands, are so hard that there is no commercial interest in extracting the oil.

The Athabasca tar sands in Alberta contain 700 billion barrels of oil but only about 15 per cent of this is recoverable by the easy surface mining techniques now being used. The plant now in operation is that of Great Canadian Oil Sands, which is 96 per cent owned by Sun Oil Co. of Philadelphia. Its capacity is 45,000 barrels daily.

Atlanta Richfield recently pulled out of a consortium that included Exxon, Gulf Oil and Cities Service in partnership with the Alberta government to build another plant with a daily capacity of 125,000 barrels. Still another consortium headed by American Petroleum plans a 100,000 barrel a day tar sands plant. Atlantic Richfield said inflation had made the project unfeasible for the present but the Alberta government appears still determined to go ahead with it.

The Saudi Union has been producing oil from shale rock in Estarim for many years but not profitably. However, the United States has the world's largest shale rock oil reserves, estimated at three to seven trillion barrels in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. Beal has shale rock deposits estimated to contain 600 million barrels.

But, like the tar sands projects, shale rock extraction has been hit hard by inflation and oil companies have abandoned some of the most advanced projects after spending many millions of dollars.

Nevertheless, Frost & Sullivan believes that by 1982, the outlays for shale oil extraction may reach $420 million a year and those for tar sands extraction $640 million a year.

In addition for these outlays, the American and Canadian people will get huge amounts of oil and an estimated $200 million a year in by-products—sulfur, ammonia, propylene, butylene and other chemicals.

Frost & Sullivan considers "in situ" shale extraction process being developed by Occidental Petroleum Corp. as the best because it does so little damage to the environment.

The report does not mitigate the obstacles to fast development of either the tar sands or shale oil. The sands, and the shale rock have to be heated to around 900 degrees F. and the use of water and other environmental perils of the extraction processes are great.

Pakistan leader appeals for help

PATTAN, Pakistan (UPI) — Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, standing over the mass left by a weekend earthquake that killed thousands, appealed to the world for help Tuesday shortly after two new tremors shook this valley region.

Bhutto continued that at least 1,200 persons were killed and 15,000 others injured and left homeless when the earthquake rumbled through this India-valley region throughout the night last Saturday.

He voiced fears the death toll would go much higher as rescue workers reached the more remote regions of the valley, tucked away in the northwestern corner of Pakistan near the Chinese border.

Relief officials feared there would be more victims from the two latest tremors Monday night.

In Pattan itself, a sleepy village on the west bank of the Indus River, ringed by snowcapped mountains of the Karakoram range, not one building was standing.

The smell of death pervaded the village as help arrived by helicopter from Karachi.

The prime minister, visibly shaken by the destruction and staggering number of casualties, spoke to a gathering of the homeless and injured, with many of them and women weeping openly.

"We tell the world to see what has happened to us," he said. "It is for the world to see the damage done. All we can do is to draw the world attention to this catastrophe and expect a positive response."

Flagged, tired and emaciated survivors straggling into Pattan Tuesday from surrounding areas, all described widespread destruction and death. They said landslides had isolated many of the villages, and there were no landing areas for helicopters and emergency medical and food supplies.

Hundreds of survivors who streamed into Pattan said bodies of men, women and children were strewn throughout villages and along roadways, many of them victims of landslides.

Army engineers worked day and night to blast open highways choked with rockslides in an attempt to reach the still isolated villages.

Author says US should raise opium poppies

(c) New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The United States should start growing its own opium poppies to guard the nation's long-term supplies of pain-killing drugs, an editorial in the latest issue of a leading medical journal says.

The editorial notes an increasingly serious shortage of pain-killing opium-derived drugs in the US and warned that this could cause great suffering in the event of a major epidemic or other national emergency.

While immediate supplies of the drugs appear to be adequate, industry witnesses before a Senate subcommittee earlier this month said raising for manufacturers of bulk opium may become necessary during the coming year. Codeine is the major medicinal drug derived indirectly from opium.

Last year Congress authorized the release of more than 200 tons of opium from the federal strategic materials stockpile to meet civilian needs. That release cut the size of the stockpile by more than half.

The editorial in the Dec. 26 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine said the amount left in the stockpile would be grossly inadequate for any national emergency.

The editorial was written by Dr. Leonard B. Greenberg, a physician in Columbus, Ohio. He has been concerned over the consequences of medicine shortages ever since the late 1930s when he was caught up in the exodus from Nanking when the Japanese captured that Chinese city. He and many companions trying to make their way to Shanghai were the only dysentery he recalls and could obtain no medicines at all.

"I would have given everything I had for some medicine then," he recalled. "The experience made a very traumatic imprint on me."

Aussies celebrate amidst ruins

DARWIN (UPI) — The cyclone-devastated city of Darwin celebrated New Year's Eve with the toast "The heck with '74. Stay alive in '75."

Pubs were closed but there was no shortage of beer and spirits in this city of tents and shacks and parties were in progress by the light of candles and emergency lamps.

The parties were a welcome relief after the long hours of cleaning up and the trauma that followed Christmas Day when Cyclone Tracy struck with 110 mph winds.

Malcolm Filer, chairman of the National Disasters Organization, told a press conference Monday that he was postponing New Year celebrations and as far as he was concerned Darwin would spend a "dry" New Year.

"As far as I am concerned Christmas and New Year will be celebrated some time after Jan. 2," Stretton told.

But New Year's Eve, in a surprising announcement, Stretton handed over civilian control of the ravaged city to Administrator Jack Nelson.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JANUARY 2, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Be poised and calm as you perform—small tasks necessary to build a better set of conditions for yourself in 1975. Otherwise, you find you become too nervous to carry out your projects.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Get into the details of any matters awaiting your attention. Plan to rest some after the hubbub of the holidays.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Charm others into doing what you desire, since you have right ideas. Help loved ones overcome fears. Have more confidence.

GEMINI (May 21 to Jun. 21): Home requires your attention, so if away from it on business give it at least some thought. Don't take kin for granted.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Drive carefully to get business attended to without trouble. Don't lose wallet, important papers.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Be economical; watch budget. Use own good judgment and you get along well, but stay away from that adviser who has your profits now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Use perfect control and don't change from one thing to another. Say little, but listen much. Show courtesy to all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Instead of trying to squirm out of promises made, keep them honorably and all is well for you in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Don't criticize your friends, but praise them. Don't be so anxious to get some personal aim which might be wrong for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Avoid tangents. Follow every regulation. A higher-up may be in a bad mood, so keep out of his or her way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 30): Study new ideas before acting on them. A new contract may seem to be very informed, but you had better check for accuracy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 31 to Feb. 19): Handle responsibilities conscientiously. You have good hunches, but only for the near future. Show spunk with a troublemaker in p.m.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Have talks with partners but remain objective, impersonal. Then all works out fine. Avoid one who opposes you, or you may have trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want everything in apple-pie order, so teach early to make allowances for human error. Then your fine progeny can do much to make the lives of others better, as well as make his or her own satisfying and profitable. One who will always make an intelligent plan first, then carry through with every detail in a painstaking way. Fine leader.

In the days of the early sailing ships, it was commonly believed by seamen that the wind could be made to blow by whistling toward the direction you wanted it to come from. Those seamen thought they had to be careful, though. A gentle whistle was all right to get a breeze. But a shrill loud whistle was expected to bring on a storm. When I was a lad for a time in the Navy town of Bremerton, Wash., I was told that was why sailors never whistled aboard ship. But my mother said no; that wasn't why. It was because all that sailors liked to whistle at wasn't often seen aboard ship.

Legal prosecutors say that murderer least likely to be indicted and convicted is the parent who kills a child.

THE WOMEN hereabouts take longer steps now than did their counterparts 50 years ago. Much longer, steps. Client asks why. Don't know, maybe it has to do with clothing. A century ago, that mining gait was required of a lady in numerous petticoats or a hobble skirt. Took a few generations of short skirts to change the stride.

BACHELORS
Q. "Tell me, sir, where a girl looking for a husband is mostly likely to find one."
A. Whose husbands are you looking for, my dear? Wait, that's too flip—According to a United Nations survey, the three most likely places in the world to meet bachelors are Alaska, the Panama Canal Zone and the Falkland Islands.

WHAT kind of car does Pope Paul VI drive?
A. A $60,000 Mercedes is what he's chauffeured around in. That trinket was a present to him from Daimler-Benz, it's maker.

DO BEARS eat meat?
A. Not if there's anything else to eat. They go for fish and nuts, though. Otherwise, class bears as vegetarians.

Forbes plans float

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Malibu Forbes took his first balloon ride yesterday, and he says he'll be off on a float across the country and then over the Atlantic to Europe or Africa.

The 55-year-old magazine publisher, who founded Time Inc. magazine, is attempting to cross the ocean in a pressurized podola hanging below 13 balloons which will hover 10 feet high. Alan has never successfully crossed the Atlantic by balloon. Twelve attempts have been made and seven men perished.

Who, then, is Forbes risking his neck on "the ultimate trip," he explains: "It's something that balloonists have talked about and dreamed about for years. I just had to try it."

But a landing spot of either of those continents is a rather vague target.

"Well, yes at us," Forbes laughed. "Actually it's not that unpredictable. We figure the jetstream will carry us either to southern Europe, Spain or Italy or to the northern part of Africa."

"On the other hand, we could become beached over the Azores. And if we get caught in the jetstream moving south-westward, we could be in the Gulf of Mexico in a matter of days. It's very unpredictable but not impossible."

The podola, Windborne, has an oxygen supply sufficient for about 10 days. Forbes expects the transatlantic crossing to take up to 40 hours and the Atlantic leg to last seven days.

"I'm not concerned for business or view of the fate of his predecessors."

"Well, not really," Forbes said. "We have studied carefully what caused failure in all previous attempts. Mainly it was a breakdown of communications. We believe we have such a communications system that we can advise at all times where we are."

February marks 'year of rabbit'

TOKYO (UPI) — Children across Asia firmly believe there is a rabbit in the moon. If so, he'll be smiling come February when the Year of the Rabbit rolls around on the Chinese calendar.

The affable rabbit is the fourth animal in the calendar's 12-year cycle and its nature, says an influence over 1975, the world is for peace and an improved economic situation.

People born in the year of the rabbit are said to be gentle and happy. Trusted by their superiors and colleagues alike. They also are said to be financially lucky, clever at business and smooth talkers.

The Chinese calendar, introduced into Japan in the early years of contact between the two countries, is based on the duodecimal system of cycles of 12 animals in harmony, originated in Hephelonia. Sometime between 480 and 250 B.C., each year in the cycle became associated with a particular animal.

According to legend, Buddha was dying and people and animals hurried to his deathbed. Twelve animals came and the years of the calendar were named after them in order of their arrival.

The crafty rat made its first appearance on the back of the ox and just before arriving there jumped in front of the ox to become the first animal. After him came the ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, cock, dog and wild boar. The year of each animal comes around once every 12 years.

The wolf-hair rabbit appears early in Japanese folklore and is often associated with the new year and the moon. He is the subject of many stories and songs learned by children, and when the moon becomes slightly blurred, children believe the rabbit is pounding rice cakes for New Year's Day.

Buddies' drinking money runs out

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Year's Day is alas, the last day for free drinks on the late Douglas S. McKelvy, eccentric millionaire who died from drinking but left part of his millions to his bar buddies who would not go thirsty. The money is running out.

More than 100 of McKelvy's former cronies have been invited to a holiday bash at Gregory's, one of two East Side watering places remembered by the millionaire in his will. That, according to a spokesman for Gregory's will drink up the last of the $5,000 left to the bar.

The rest of the money, he said, was expended on "liquid refreshments" at three previous parties in 1974 — last New Year's Day, a St. Patrick's Day party in memory of McKelvy's death in March 1973, and a birthday party from the grave. May 26 for the millionaire's last girl friend, Anita "Tom" Cerullo.

"McKelvy, who died at 41 of a liver ailment, left $5,000 each to Gregory's and Cher Madison, another of his favorite drinking establishments.

Liar's club honors world title holder

BURLINGTON, Wis. (UPI) — Robert L. Regent of Milwaukee won the title as the world's biggest liar Monday when he said:

"Folks think they have it tough these days. But we were so poor from youth that our parents couldn't afford to go window shopping."

Regent was lauded by the Burlington Lions Club at the group's annual worldwide competition. Spencer Hallock of Waldo, Wis., won an honorable mention when he told the group:

"When I was a boy, if you told that they could not run the trains because the rails had all joined together to keep warm."

Resolved: To make every day count in 1975.

Every day must show interest.
 Every day counts toward greater earnings with interest compounded daily when you save at Idaho First.

Even though several savings institutions may have the same basic interest rate, the one that compounds daily offers greater earning potential. Thus the 5% annual rate actually becomes 5.13% in a year's time with Idaho First's daily compounding.

That makes every day count... for you.
 Happy new year!

Convenience counts, too.
 Added convenience counts because it saves you time. Our new statement savings means that you need not come in and wait in line to update your passbook — unless you prefer. We'll mail a statement to you. In fact, if you like, all savings transactions can be conducted by mail. Saves time, doesn't it.

The Bank
The "every day counts" bank.

There's the difference.

And in accordance with law, 30 days after the date of this notice, the stock of the corporation shall be sold to the highest bidder at 10% discount. Second Avenue South, Twin Falls, Idaho on the third day of January 1975, at 2:00 p.m. of said day. To pay depositors as assessed. The cost of this notice and expenses of sale.
