Death overtakes Heidi on journey's last leg

HEDDA FAYELE — Hawaiian vacation a "dream vacation" for Heidi Biggs. But she died in her mother's arms on her last day there. She spent the last seven days of the two-week vacation in a hotel room because her condition suddenly worsened. Her weight down to 62 pounds, she was under heavy sedation and merely conscious in crucial days.

Her mother, Laeger Biggs, said Heidi knew that "time was running out fast for her."

Heidi turned to her hotel room in Honolulu last week. She asked me to "please take her back to Bellview" soon, her mother said. She wanted to return home.

The earliest flight they could get was a nonstop trip Sunday morning.

Heidi, unconscious, was removed from the phone on a stretcher and taken to a waiting ambulance at the St. Louis airport.

The ambulance headed for her home since Mrs. Biggs wanted to keep her daughter out of the hospital for her remaining days. Doctors told her there was nothing more they could do.

As the ambulance neared the outskirts of Bellevue, an attendant noticed Heidi had stopped breathing. She was taken to Memorial Hospital here, where she was pronounced dead at a respiratory arrest. Her mother and step-father gathered at her bedside.

"I think she knew I kept my promise to bring her home," said Mrs. Biggs, her voice breaking.

People around the world had contributed money to send Heidi on her trip to Hawaii. She spent the last seven days of the two-week vacation in a hotel room because her condition suddenly worsened. Her weight down to 62 pounds, she was under heavy sedation and merely conscious in crucial days.

Heidi had spent the first week of the vacation on the sand and beneath the palms of Hawaii. She went horseback riding, shopping, sightseeing and walking along Waikiki Beach.

"She was on top of the world," said Mrs. Biggs, whose three other children —

Gem lawmakers optimistic

BOISE (UPI) — As the 1975 Idaho legislature began its eighth week and 50th day today, it was attempting to clean up some of the major issues confronting it in an effort to adjourn by its 60 day legal deadline.

It disposed of the thorny question of state employee salary increases and the rescinding of the Equal Rights Amendment last week and opened the door to consideration of other crucial issue blocking an early adjournment.

Legislators are optimistic about adjourning by the 60th legislative day which is March 13, or at least by March 15. But to do so, they will have to wrestle with such issues as highways, land use planning, kindergartens, and appropriations early this week.

The legislature's main problem is getting state agencies funded for fiscal year beginning July 1. The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee should finish setting its budgets today and have them to the house for final consideration early this week. If the House can consider the measures Friday that immediately was condemned by Democrats as an attempt by the Republican-dominated legislature to water down the land use legislation.

Committee Chairman Kyle Cobbs, R-House, an avid opponent of land use legislation, indicated he would have his committee reconsider the amendment today since they started such partisan battles. Cobbs has pledged the bills will be killed in committee.

One of the amendments would make land-use or dimension optional rather than mandatory.

Group leaders

Swine Producers auxiliary formed

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Porkettes, an auxiliary of the Idaho Swine Producers, has been organized in the area.

The group will promote the buying and eating of pork through education, promotional events and related projects. Any woman interested is invited to join.

Mrs. Robert Hopper, Burley, was elected president of the Magic Valley Porkettes. First vice-president is the Idaho Steam Sale. Mrs. Vava Jensen, Caribou, is co-chairman and Mrs. John Gerard, Burley, secretary-treasurer. Directors include Mrs. George and Mrs. Vernon Lass, Elmore.

Mrs. Ruth Crowley, Pater, was appointed medical project chairman. The group assembled literature Friday afternoon to be distributed in the area with the hope they will tell their patients of the nutritional values of pork and meat.

Egyptian-Israeli fuss flares anew

United Press International

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi summoned U.S. Ambassador Herman Eells today and informed him of what he called Israel's "stubborn and irresponsible" position in not attaining the International Red Cross' transport food and "relief materials sent from Egypt to citizens of Al-Arish and other areas of Sinai which were hit by floods during the past weeks," the Egyptian agency said.

The agency said Fahmi also told the American diplomat,

"Egypt cannot be silent toward this position which stops far from performing its duty toward citizens who are living on Egyptian soil."

This position clarifies the real intentions of Israel, which are far from humane and violate the simplest rules and traditions of international cooperation, Fahmi said.

Israeli government sources in Tel Aviv and Israel has set up a special five-man board to prepare a list of options for next week's negotiations with Egypt on a second-stage troop withdrawal accord in the Sinai Desert.

"They are preparing white-papers on options which they expect to be the essence of negotiations during Kissinger's visit next week," one source said.

US trusteeship eyed in report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Inter-American Committee found "a patently bad management situation" in the Interior Department's administration of Pacific islands under U.S. trusteeship. Its report, to be released today, makes no accusations of actual wrongdoing.

A spokesman, Daniel A. Dreyfus, said the committee staff went to Micronesia last October. There are 414 islands in the trusteeship, taken over by the United States from Japan during World War II, including the Marshall, Mariana and Caroline chains and such former battlefields as Tinian, Saipan and Palau.

The report says, in effect, that the physical situation is not adequate given the level of appropriations in terms of roads, water supply, medical care and air traffic. "We said 'first service,' the islands are not in good shape and not likely to

Ladybug lobby hits Texas aide

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The ladybug lobby is swarming all over Rep. Tom Uher with a request to approve a resolution naming the ladybug the Texas state insect.

The Bay City Democrat sent the proposal by Rep. Jim Kaster, D-El Paso, to a subcommittee and said he had no intention of bringing it out. Uher is now being besieged with letters from school children denouncing his action and supporting the ladybug bill.

"I think you should get off your can for once and give the ladybug act passed," said Dana Rogers of El Paso's Pasadena School in a letter to Uher. "If it is not passed, don't be surprised if you get a bomb in the mail that ladybugs pop out of."

As dead as a doornail

© New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The art of the simile is as dead as a doornail.

Here we are making do with expressions like "smart as a whip," "blind as a bat," "happy as a lark" and "sound as a dollar," which were coined centuries ago.

The simile's less explicit cousin, the metaphor, is constantly being refined and updated. Thus economy is treated as a metaphoric automobile, slumbering on bridges and overheating its engine. The political system, still a work picture ship at stale, charts "new directions," while critics charge it is "off course."

But the simile—the specific during its tensity—that an idea is similar to a symbol—lives there, flat as a pane of glass, nine square inches of irreverence.

A generation ago, tough-guy fiction writers like Dashiell Hammett and Raymond Chandler revivified the art for a short time; Chandler's classic of the genre was a description of a heroine "blonde enough to make a bishop kick a hole through a stained glass window."

American discourse, however, is reflected by not determined by — novelists, Pervasive political writers and speakers. The "cold war" was coined by Herbert Bayard Swope for Her bert Harbach, from curtain to Churchill and the Earl of Munster. "To hell with eyeballs" by Dean Rusk and "hawks and doves" by Alvin

Almquist, and "political committee" by James

W. M. Coughlin, have become part of our language.

Why, then, have today's political speechwriters stopped making a chance for a soundbite or two? They are exceptions. William Safire of Manchester has written a total of 100 that daunt us "as clear and crisp as a Kennedy order." And Daniel Patrick Moynihan seems so long and talkative his programs are evanescent as the interlocutor Sam Clemente on "The Today" program.

The new, more genteel similes tend to play on the characteristics of famous people, about the lines of "rich as Croesus," "blameless as Epictetus," both of which are easier to write than to pronounce. Today's relatives of Montaigne, self-effacing as Rockford, and "overshadowed" as Reagan, spring to mind, as well as "unapproachable" as Nader and "unavailable" as Kennedy.

More imaginative are the categorical similes, such as "pear as a church mouse." This spawns — "pear as an investigative reporter," "pearlike as a historian," "leaky," "a Sedan committee" or "fresh as an unpoached hen."

The rhyming simile — "sung as a bug in a rug" — can be approached as "cheeky, as a chic shank," but the lost art of the specific metaphor is best illustrated in its situational form, the analogy at a causeus, "as greasy as a public opinion poll," or "as fast as a moralist in a fogbank of delente."

This gives rise to — as anxiously revered as a freshman at a caucus," "as greasy as a public opinion poll," or "as fast as a moralist in a fogbank of delente."

© WILLIAM SAFIRE

Situational similes come into their own on purely political matters, as confident as a ways-and-means chairman on a tax-cut rate, and, contrastive, "as nervous as a WASP mate," Nixon's failure to find a cabinet.

On the one rainy days ahead, let a simile be your umbrella. The inventive, whole-some activity enlivens the language and enlivens jaded speeches, and it can also be convulsive as the "shock therapy" of a hot topic.

This week in Kathmandu, Nepal, for example, a young man was crowned absolute monarch of that high-race Himalayan land, and the words he spoke were royal in their simplicity.

For the joyance of the people, if am ready to be the king," declared Birendra Bir Bikram Shah Deva. Just before the high priest of the kingdom placed the crown on his head, the 29-year-old ruler-to-be made this pledge:

"I will be popular like the rainbow. I will be friendly like the sun."

Where are you going to look for speeches like these days? Back to the fundamental device of the simile, with a single twist that turned a political promise into my civic education of water and light, crowning his coronation like a rainbow in the sky.

Apprenticeship, maybe

Lundberg recently has plass atoms part of an analysis of current unemployment in the United States, due to a Committee of Economic Advisors, which said almost $7 billion of the $21 billion increase in transfer payments from 1972 to 1973 was attributable to Social Security.

"Part of our trouble is that we have been selling a story that the increase in the per cent and age, really asking the senior citizens the people who are to adjust to their standard of living — the difference between their present we may allow them the higher per cent that they are facing with the lower per cent, resulting in a shell game where the vulnerable end up the losers.

For the elderly who earn little or no taxable income and who depend primarily on Social Security, Ford's rebate plan would mean they get only a few dollars back. The rebate certainly will not make up for the loss of Social Security income they will need if the President's proposal is approved.

Robert Ball, a former Social Security commissioner who was a cardholder of his jurisdiction the Nixon administration, said that the full cost-of-living increase would simply restore the average Social Security recipient's purchasing power that Social Security recipients had lost in the past 12 months. The proposal "is also bad economic policy," he said. "A recession is no time to penalize 30 million persons who would spend the money right away."

Considering the long-term problem caused by the falling birth rate, the proposal could lead to "active workers will not have to support any more non-workers than they do today as a result of this changed fertility rate," he says, "they will be supporting more older people and fewer young people."

Earlier this month, a panel of experts commissioned by the Senate Finance Committee warned that the benefit structure of the system would have to be overhauled and additional financing found. Unless some action was taken, they predicted that "the present trust fund will be seriously eroded in the years immediately ahead, and will be exhausted by the late 1980s."

The panel particularly accounted for the cost of living benefit, which is set to take effect July 1.

The escalator provides, irrationally, changes in the inflation rate, the experts contend, giving income-based workers a higher standard of living after retirement than they enjoyed immediately before retirement.

But a second group, composed of five former secretaries of health, education and welfare and three former Social Security commissioners, declared Ford in that "attacks on the system designed to create doubts of its soundness and players, and employers. As a result, unemployment compensation is likely to increase significantly all year, as did the monthly seasonal and cyclical variations in demand for labor and unemployment benefits.

He gives an example: A man and wife in Boston with two children are earning respectably $30,000-$32,000 before the wife becomes unemployed for one month; he loses $500 in gross earnings but less than $100 net income.

© WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

"How does this occur?" A reduction of $200 in annual earnings reduces his federal income tax by $83. His Social Security payroll tax by $65 and his Massachusetts income tax by 22¢. The total reduction in taxes is $74. Unemployment compensation consists of 40 per cent of his wages plus dependent allowances of $8 per week for each dependent. Unemployment compensation is therefore $282. The payment is not part of taxable income. Nor income tax rates reflect the tax-free period for the month he is unemployed; the $500 gross earnings less $104 (fixed) to the $202 plus as unemployment compensation.

"The combination of taxes and unemployment compensation causes a net reduction in marginal tax rate of 77 percent." The taxpayer net earnings fall by only 13 per cent of his gross pay ($54).

When he is unemployed for a month, his reduction in tax after he finds a job is only $120 higher than if he retires after three months. Moreover, part of this increase in income would be offset by the cost of transportation, food and other expenses associated with employment.

It is important to study these findings without biasing morale.

I Irving Kristol once remarked that he can understand people, but he cannot understand people who resent people's fulfilling themselves of high levels of welfare payments if they are profligate by society. More anon.

How will they believe?

© New York Times Service

We are gathered at home to watch the end of the world on television.

It is special. We are watching it on our old black-and-white set. A touch of sentimentality here.

A neighbor with color invited us over, just we felt the tug of loyalty. At the start, we said, "we'd rather be with our family old black-and-white set, than with the family that the great reassurance."

Somebody believes the world is really ending, just with the neighbors have to write about it or it'll call everyone's gaze around father.

It is 1 o'clock in the morning. For months the networks have tried to persuade the world to come prime-time. "In prime time," they said, "it could top the ratings of the Super Bowl." "Surely the end of the world is not like a Republican national convention. It is the last thing left that can say no to television."

President Ford will address the nation in a few minutes. According to NBC, which broke the release date on his speech, he will say that the end of the world is a historic event for all Americans.

The children are restless. They would rather watch "Abbott and Costello meet Frankenstein" on Channel 8.

Foolish, foolish childhood. Sometime everybody will remember exactly what he was doing the night the world ended. How said the children would be if they had to say, "they was watching "Abbott and Costello meet Frankenstein."

Someday, they will thank us for this depravity.

John Chancellor is showing film clips of the events leading to this night's event. Pictures of the last well-being day. Of the participants essential upper-layer breaking down under aggression. "Roses." Of well-dressed and carrying briefcases paying $1 admissions to participating houses of the country, including Broadway.

I always told you that credit cards and automobiles would be the end of you," says grandfather.

Mother wants to switch to CBS. She feels that so far as Walter Cronkite is handling the end of the world every thing will turn out all right.

Marvin Kalb is entering an airplane with Henry Kissinger. Kissinger is smiling. Why?

Kalb says Kissinger believes the end of the world may make the Arabs and Israelis more receptive to peace negotiations.

There is an Exxon commercial. Exxon is working to build a better life for everyone after the end of the world.

The cats are bored. We see him of San Clemente, Richard Nixon, watching the end of the world on television.

He is the last to leave. He is the last to be heard.

This is not a rocket-launching from Cape Canaveral, it bel her. "It is the end of the world."

Russell Baker

The children are fractions. If there is nothing more to the end of the world than oil spills, dollars, mounting fire, dry oil wells, and well dressed men carrying briefcases, going to dirty movies, they would prefer to watch "Abbott and Costello meet Frankenstein."

I want to tell them to shut up, the end of the world is important, but I cannot, because I am a movie. You get to be a movie by growing up in a world you know, never come to an end. My entire life has been spent mastering movies.

And this is the way the world ends?" asks mother.

"Not with a bang, but a whimper," says Cronkite, showing him of the stream in the world running full of oil.

"And think," says mother, "when will we get up tomorrow in the morning the world will have ended?"

"It's like yesterday morning," says grandmother.

The cats are asleep. We turn off the TV. It is so quiet at the last hour the people streaming my mad at the last hour to make sure I still believe in the future of America.

Fragments of the last of the vitally essential ozone layer fall on the roof with the sound of small rocks breaking. The children plead to see the end of Abbott and Costello. Why not? They might have some way to remember the night the world ended, or else how will they ever believe?

"EXTREME RIGHT-FULL RUDDER"

Social Security ceiling: Pros, cons

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — In an effort to hold down a already bloated federal budget, President Ford in his fiscal 1976 budget message proposed a 5 per cent ceiling on cost-of-living increases built into several federal retirement programs, including Social Security.

Without that limitation, which must be approved by Congress, Social Security benefits would increase an estimated 8.2 per cent on July 1. With the automatic cost-of-living adjustment authorized by Congress in 1972, the average retired worker's monthly benefit would increase $450, from $1,085, with a 5 per cent ceiling instead, the recent review reports.

That would be a savings of $1.2 billion annually to the system, according to the proposal.

Rep. John J. Durkin, D-Mass., chairman of the House Ways and Means Social Security Subcommittee, said he could not even hear the proposal from his Burke, Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., and House Majority Whip Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., together with all their cosponsors, introduced a resolution stating the cost-of-living increase was not a 5 per cent limitation should be enacted.

Opposition was even more overwhelming in the Senate, where 54 members, a majority, cosponsored a similar resolution. Proponents that bill was Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa.

In order to offset partially the effects of his 5 per cent ceiling plan designed to stimulate the sagging economy, Ford said it was absolutely necessary to hold back other federal spending programs. His cost ceiling, he said, was made "in the context of the very large increases that have occurred in these programs, especially in the cost of living."

"In just seven years," he continued, "each benefits under Social Security programs will have risen from $20 billion to $45.5 billion."

By 1976, six Social Security benefit increases will have occurred since 1970. Automatic cost-of-living adjustments to benefits are now provided by law. Allowing for the temporary 5 per cent ceiling proposed on benefit increases between now and July 1976, taken together, will total 77 per cent. This far exceeds the increases in the cost of living (51 per cent) estimated for this period.

Ford's concern over the rapid growth of inflation has led to a proposal to reduce Social Security benefits by 5 per cent.

Advisors, which said that almost $7 billion of the $21 billion increase in transfer payments from 1972 to 1973 was attributable to Social Security.

"Part of our trouble is that we have been selling a story that the system would have to be solved," To meet increased benefits, they said, Congress should raise the tax rate, increase the amount of wages taxed or finance some benefits through general revenues.

In any event, the size of the problem over the next 25 years is easily manageable and certainly does not constitute a financial crisis."

The group admitted that the system did not have imaging problems that would have to be solved. To meet increased benefits, they said, Congress should raise the tax rate, increase the amount of wages taxed or finance some benefits through general revenues.

In any event, the size of the problem over the next 25 years is easily manageable and certainly does not constitute a financial crisis."

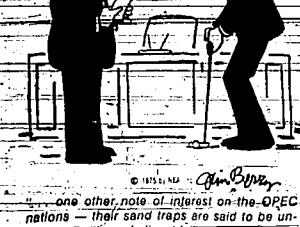

Considering the long-term problem caused by the falling birth rate, the proposal pointed out, that "active workers will not have to support any more non-workers than they do today as a result of this changed fertility rate," he says, "they will be supporting more older people and fewer young people."

Earlier this month, a panel of experts commissioned by the Senate Finance Committee warned that the benefit structure of the system would have to be overhauled and additional financing found. But a second group, composed of five former secretaries of health, education and welfare and three former Social Security commissioners, declared Ford in that "attacks on the system designed to create doubts of its soundness and

"one other note of interest on the OPEC nations — their sand traps are said to be un-beatable".

ERA stance 'cop out'

letters

Editor, Times-News:
Letters to the Times-News appear to be about six or seven of one against ERA and your stand on it. Small wonder as the reasons in your editorial weren't much more than a "cop out."

As do most proponents of this nefarious piece of legislature you ignore the real issues. Many questions asked more than once haven't been answered. If we are about to amend the constitution, shouldn't all questions be answered? All problems being considered rather than ridiculed? Well then, let's consider these areas.

1. Has the amendment been published in its entirety? If not, how can anyone even intelligently discuss or vote on it?

2. Why so many interpretations of meaning? Is it so vague that only 2 people can agree on it? If so, how then can the voters be expected to understand it?

3. Even considering the proponents claim that so much confusion as to its meaning, For example, would anyone even pretend to expect the League of Women Voters and the women's lib to have the same goals? If then ratified, which demands will prevail?

The militants' (women's lib) make the most noise. You guess.

4. TN makes a feeble attempt at pacification in stating the ERA really provides nothing new. Nothing that the Constitution, OEO, civil rights, labor laws, etc. don't already give us. Then why do we need it? This question has been asked often but no attempt at an answer.

Isn't ERA really saying then, "We'll pass a law-making it illegal to break a law"? How redundant? What we're really doing is asking big "brother" to take over our living room tax dollars to enforce the existing laws? If they're the same? As you say...

Opponents have given many good reasons why ERA should be rescinded. Women, draft, no separate facilities such as rest rooms, school buses, shower rooms, high school even? No, the lib. pro-abortionists and sterilization are responsible for almost all child support, and on and on.

These fears are groundless. Editor's note: The Times-News editorial to writer you refer included the full text of the amendment as follows:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article. This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

The proponents are so poverty stricken for facts they can only call names and accuse of "scare tactics." Where are their facts? The facts should scare us. If the court rulings stand (many will) what horrible precedents are set? Talk about Pandora's Box!

Listen ladies, don't be misled by the ERA's flowery rhetoric. The beneficiaries of this bill are a few with special and selfish interests. They're concerned with the American home and family like Karl Marx was concerned with free enterprise. When God made woman, He made her not from a foot bone - that man should tread on her; not from a head bone that she should lord it over him; but from a rib, that bone that is closest to and protects his very heart.

Don't let people like women's lib and other disgruntled female drop-outs fool you. From where God has placed you in the world to what ERA might give is beyond me.

TF zoning called 50 years behind

Editor, Times-News:

I read in the Feb. 19 Times-News that the mobile home problem is reoccurring again.

When the county commissioners think they have a problem settled, residents in said areas complain - "We don't want mobile homes near us."

Ten years ago I was building my dream home and became handicapped before the house was finished. I moved back to the midwest and when there are no houses for sale that one can afford and none to rent, a mobile home looks mighty good for somewhere to stay or call home. After a few years, being home for Idaho, I moved back to Twin Falls. Again house hunting.

We ran into neighbors who tried to find a place to build affordably at their expense.

We even went to mobile home looking too. To my amazement we found many of the double-wide mobile homes had quality built in them that I never saw in the mobile home parks.

I think that many of these people who are doing so much complaining about mobile homes are just jealous. They just can't accept the fact that mobile home production can build quality at less cost.

ROBERT D. LANG

many are nice, but the developers have gone overboard. I think that if a mobile home meets a certain standard, structurally, financially, and outward appearance, why not subdivides areas where one buys his own land and eliminate the parks.

If T. H. E. Public would examine his or his home before he criticized his neighbor or the home, we'd all enjoy our neighborhood better.

As to zoning, Twin Falls is just 50 years behind times.

Mobile homes, if a zoning program had been started years ago, one might get across town without getting trapped in a maze which are plentiful in Twin Falls.

Take your city map, look at Borah Avenue. How many dead ends did you find? Where is it going - two miles east of Blue Lakes Boulevard? Why don't developers who subdivided land a mile or two out of town look at city map and survey the existing streets?

Twenty years from now one will burn two gallons of gas to cross town which is only one gallon from home when we will have no gas.

Editor, Times-News:

An open letter to Gov. Cecil

D. Andrus:

There has been much publicity concerning the flood problems in Idaho, especially where the flooding occurs in or near inhabited communities. May I suggest to the state of Idaho leaders write to the city of Caldwell, Colo., to obtain the methods used to combat South Platte River rampage there? Perhaps their methods could be applied in Idaho localities.

There is much concern about food production losses due to encroachment of communities upon arable land areas.

However, in my travels in the western and Rocky Mountain states, I saw many evidences of land waste because of too much acreage for highway and highway necessities, wide right-of-ways for roads, power and telephone lines and railroad lines and in some even unnecessary roads.

Also, now that we (man) possess truly big earthmoving equipment, why do we persist in preempting the best productive agricultural land for city sites?

We could build cities where land is of little worth agriculturally and leave productive land for agricultural use solely.

In every city I traveled in, a good portion of the city is occupied by vacant lots. Should not these lots be built upon, before expansion of our card is permitted? There are ways of curbing the greed of the lot owners.

Disposal of atomic energy waste by-products is promising us, but - may it not be possible that with slight modification of utilization procedures, these same wastes could be made to power central heating units, saving small accessories, using the thermal energy in the waste to help deal with garbage disposal through conversion of garbage into various products such as fertilizers, heating that thermal energy for converting saline or brackish waters into potable water, using the heat for various large-scale evaporation operators (Great Salt Lake and similar waters); using the heat for remote or difficult to reach locations where people must work, foresters, rangers, road crews, park attendants, and campers, etc., private heating for Alaskan or Canadian natives, etc. Perhaps some inhabitants, etc.

Thanks for reading this letter.

Where tax dollars go

Editor, Times-News:
Enclosed is a copy of a Paul Harvey news item from KELX Twin Falls station last week. I was so impressed that I typed it. I have tried to copy it verbatim.

I believe these facts should be made known to a greater number of people. Let them know where their tax dollar is going, of the caliber of men that are representing them in Congress and making laws of this country. Surely a Congress of grade schoolers could do no worse, and yet the wages of these congressmen have been raised again and again by themselves.

You used to print Paul Harvey's news items once in a while, and I for one think it would be of great benefit if you made this factual unbiased feature a regular part of your paper.

Some of the people in this area don't get to hear the radio program and would be able to read them and they could make these pertinent facts known to other voters and thus might make a difference in the vote next election.

Editor, Times-News:

May it not be a sign of the times when a family sits down after supper in front of the television set to watch a good movie and gets this movie censored, adults, material parental guidance recommended?

Yes - we can send the children to their rooms, change channels, change the game movie isn't there also, or simply push the shut-off button.

But why must we be forced into these measures?

Have morals slipped that far?

Why can't the networks or our local TV stations bring these movies on after 9:30 p.m. when our small children are tucked in their beds dreaming of the sandman instead of four-letter words, sex and other adult material?

I am concerned, parents, are you?

Cut eyed on school lunch subsidies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration wants to cut federal school lunch subsidies for children from middle income homes, and Agriculture Department experts say up to 6 million children could be involved.

About 15.2 million youngsters currently pay "regular" school cafeteria lunch prices ranging from 40 to 60 cents a day in most of the country. About 1.3 million children, who are considered needy, get free or token-priced lunches and breakfasts.

The administration's budget request wants spending on child nutrition held to $1.6 billion in the year starting July 1, about $200 million less than present programs. Over the next five years, the plan would save $14 billion, officials said.

Under legislation expected to go to Congress soon despite a cold preliminary reception subsidies for nonpoor children in school lunches, breakfasts and other feeding programs including a special milk subsidy plan would be halted. A new "block grant" plan would be submitted, giving states more money for their third nutritional needs of poor children.

The states could put the money in Agriculture Department, experts said, school cafeteria prices would have to be raised 21 cents per meal, or $1.05 per child weekly, to offset federal subsidies which now hold down the "regular" lunch price.

Economist Stephen J. Hinesman said studies last year indicated that such a hike would reduce the number of students eating in schools cafeteria by about 6 million.

An Agriculture Department spokesman insisted it was not necessarily a good assumption that there would be an mass departure from school lunches because of price increases caused by the proposed cut in federal subsidies.

Agriculture officials said more youngsters could be shut out by a tighter definition of poverty. The proposal estimates an average of 8.3 million children would be eligible instead of the present 9.8 million.

"Poverty" income for a family of four is currently estimated at $4,510 a year.

Most states now give free lunches to youngsters from homes with incomes up to 125 percent of the poverty line, or $5,630 a year. Families with incomes up to 175 percent, or $7,839, are eligible for token price meals for their children.

Under the administration plan, free meals would go only to children from families earning $4,510 or less.

Tokon priced meals, it states could stretch their grant money could go to youngsters from families earning up to $5,630.

Another cost-cutting Agriculture Department proposal, to raise the price of food stamps, was rejected by Congress last month.

GOP party

issues not clear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fewer than two of every 10 Americans call themselves Republicans because the party has failed to properly identify itself and tell its side of a public issue, says the GOP's top professional spokesman.

Edward Mall, executive director of the Republican National Committee, said a "comprehensive" public opinion survey conducted for the GOP in 42 states showed the party was in the mainstream on its position on the issues.

It's a matter of getting our story across, Mall said. (UPI) Washington, D.C. — The survey will be presented this week to the Republican National Committee by Chairman Mary Louise Smith.

At the meeting, and at other conferences at 1,300 GOP state and local meetings, Mrs. Smith will lay out details of an organizing series and political reorganization campaign aimed at increasing GOP allegiance across the country.

White said the survey by the Budget Teeter organization showed a voter party identification of 48 per cent Republican, 42 per cent Democratic and 4 per cent independent does not mean the public rejects GOP ideas.

They do see the Republican Party as representative of many of the things they believe in themselves, Mall said.

In fact, there is no doubt that there is a confidence problem with the Republican Party. There is an "image" problem. What we are perceived as being, they don't perceive themselves as being in terms of individuals.

As to issues, Mall said it is clear that Republicans have been regarded as against the little people, when really, "if we were able to get out the reasons why we oppose these pieces of legislation, why the ultimate total cost of these things are ultimately going to do in the little man with everybody else, I think it would be very compelling argument."

Mall opposed the current tax cut, but he supported the tax break from your taxes under the old 15 per cent rate and under the 45 per cent rate just as you would on April 15. The difference is your tax cut

Farm production supply outlook improving

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farmers still can't get all the production supplies they want. But the outlook for delivery of the supplies needed to produce bigger stocks of foods this year is improving. Agriculture Department specialists report.

In contrast to the situation in early 1974 when many farmers feared their tractors would be sidelined with empty gas or diesel fuel tanks, experts said growers now have few fuel worries.

Gasoline and diesel inventories are well over a year ago," economists said.

"With the rate of increase in total domestic use of gasoline somewhat reduced, there appears to be no shortage of this fuel. Diesel fuel is plentiful and appears sufficient to meet base demands (although local supply problems could develop if severe winter weather increases demand for distillates," the report added.

Experts said the outlook is "less rosy" for L-P gas which is used to power some farm equipment and will be needed to meet competing equipment later in the year. Estimates by the Federal Energy Administration indicate L-P supplies will be up 4 per cent short of seasonal needs due to the high cost of the year and 12 percent short later in the year.

Farm products are theoretically guaranteed access to 20 per cent of their current L-P needs under the FEA's priority allocation program. But even with priorities, farmers may find delays in getting L-P deliveries at times, the Agriculture report said.

For other key supplies needed on the nation's farms this year, the report gave this analysis:

The fertilizer situation is "tight" but has improved over 1974. Nitrogen supplies are expected to be up 6 per cent from last year, though still short of needs. Potash supplies will be up 5 per cent, and no major shortages are likely.

Phosphate supplies will be up an estimated 16 per cent.

The pesticide situation will remain "tight," except for a few bright spots. Corn farmers could face some serious problems because the Environmental Protection Agency has ruled out the use of aldrin for controlling insect pests and supplies of substitutes including chlordane, heptachlor, carbophen and phorate will probably not be enough to fill the gap.

Farmers should have little trouble getting hoppers and smaller tractors this year, but they may find delays in delivery of some larger equipment through midyear. Manufacturers who had long waiting lists last year are operating near capacity, but inventory levels for some equipment will not be back to normal until late 1975.

While the availability of supplies is improving, however, Agriculture economists add, that farmers will face another round of increases in prices of items they buy while prices for some important crops are down. From last year's peak, fertilizer and machinery prices are expected to rise at a slower rate than in 1974 while pesticide costs probably will advance more rapidly, experts said.

Overall, Agriculture analysts said, increases in farm production costs this year will be somewhat smaller than the 16 per cent jump which added $1.7 billion to the total farm cost bill in 1974.

farm*New Gem grains increase income

BOTSY — New wheat varieties released since 1970 have brought Idaho wheat farmers an estimated additional $10.8 million in annual income, according to a report published by the Idaho Wheat Commission.

Information contained in the commission's Progress Report — 1975 lists the cost of research work performed in developing six new varieties of wheat at an estimated $65,000 — meaning a benefit-cost ratio of 16 to 1.

In 1966 he was president of the latter organization's Magic Valley Chapter. He is also a member of Gamma Sigma Delta, honorary agriculture society.

He is listed in "Who's Who Among American Scientists in the West" and "American Men of Science." He has published about three dozen technical articles and papers.

Two soft white, semi-dwarf spring wheats — Twin and Spring Field — were the first of that-type short enough to be used with shell-move irrigation systems. Twin has averaged 18 bushels per acre more yield than realized from previous varieties.

In 1973 there were some 130,000 acres of spring wheat under irrigation in southern Idaho, most of which was planted to the two new varieties. With wheat prices reaching $1.50 per bushel by December of that year, it is calculated that the extra yields provided an additional income of $2.8 million.

Three smut-resistant varieties — Jeff, Franklin and Ranger — provided double benefits over former winter wheat varieties that were susceptible to the diseases. The new wheats are reducing losses to the disease plus providing slightly better yields resulting in an increased income valued at almost $2.3 million.

Range spreading

POCATELLO (UPI) — Despite humans, coyotes are spreading their geographic range, according to Dr. Edson Fischer, professor at Idaho State University.

Fisher and Zoology graduate student Roger Woodruff, Idaho Falls, are in their third year of a 10-year study on coyote dispersal and home ranges on Idaho National Engineering Laboratory land near Idaho Falls.

Despite traps, poison snowmobiles and other man-made hazards, coyotes have spread their geographic range in the last few decades, said Fischer. The success of the coyote is because of its versatility, said Fischer.

"They are highly adaptive animals that can change with their environment," said Fischer.

Range bull evaluation*course set

GODDING — A course on physical trait evaluation of range bulls will be held Saturday at the Godding Livestock Commission yards.

All cattlemen are invited to attend the course sponsored by several Magic Valley Grazing Associations and the University of Idaho Extension Service.

According to Gene Gibson, area livestock specialist, grading systems have traditionally failed to evaluate animals on the basis of individual traits.

Gibson said grading should concentrate on live physical traits, including weight, freedom from waste, size of frame, soundness and texture.

The course will begin at 1 p.m.

It follows a test in 1973 on a 20-acre plot to find out how practical it would be to delay blooming to protect fruit from frost.

Kimberly plant aide retires

KIMBERLY — An Idaho plant scientist whose work has helped increase food production around the world retired from the University of Idaho Saturday after 30 years of work in the state.

He is Dr. L. E. Bill Dean, known in agricultural circles for his research on developing disease-resistant edible dry bean and snap bean varieties. He has 15 varieties to his credit and is conducting final evaluation of about 150 bean lines.

Dean, research professor of plant sciences at the University of Idaho College of Agriculture Research and Extension Center, Kimberly, will be guest of honor at a March 10 retirement dinner in Twin Falls, his birthplace.

The renowned UI plant scientist began his Idaho research career in 1942, the year he graduated from the University of Idaho College of Agriculture with a bachelor of science degree in agriculture. He also has a master of science degree in agriculture from UI.

Initially, he was officially a plant pathologist with the Idaho Pest Control Commission. His work was funded by the Government Office.

However, after a year of patental purposes, he became a UI faculty member, the Plant Pathology Department. He remained his last year as chairman of the department.

He is listed in "Who's Who Among American Scientists in the West" and "American Men of Science." He has published about three dozen technical articles and papers.

Even jobs are dependent upon agriculture. About 1 in 6 in a full-time agriculture job takes up as much as 3/5 of it.

That's because between 40 and 60 percent of all goods and services produced in the state depend in some way upon agriculture.

Idaho is second only to South Dakota in the percentage of personal income that comes directly from farming.

In fact, Idaho is more dependent upon agriculture than any other state in the West.

As the state's major industry, it's also the major taxpayer. Agriculture accounted for more than $25 million in real estate taxes last year, and millions more in sales taxes and income taxes.

Annually, Idaho's farmers and ranchers spend over $380,000,000 to help run the state's economy.

Agriculture is Idaho's single most important industry. As such, it needs the understanding and support of us all. We have to have vital and productive agriculture to keep our economy healthy and productive.

US plans increased food aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department says the United States will ship another $57 million in wheat to Bangladesh this year. The 350,000 tons scheduled delivery by June 20, are part of a promised five-year, $100-million food aid under the Food for Peace program.

The latest announcement brings total U.S. wheat shipped to Bangladesh to 300,000 tons, worth about $93 million.

Under pressure from critics, President Ford increased the money for Peace program last year by $22 million, to $1.6 billion.

Safety play brings in slam

By Abigail Van Buren

1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You could perform an even greater service than you do with your advice column if you were to set up a "Dear Abby Swap Shop."

The Dear Abby Swap Shop, which could be called "DASS," could arrange swaps between spouses. For example, the wife of Gules, in New York, who complained because she was still single after a year of marriage, could swap notes with another wife, who is always complaining about her husband's lack of leave-taking long enough for her homework assignments.

And that poor 45-year-old wife who is dead tired from working a 10-hour shift in a laundry could swap notes with Louie, who acts like he's still a teenager, for a man like "Enough's Enough," who's all burned out at the age of 50.

There are lots of couples who need to swap plates, and you and DASS could do it. Abby: What do you say?

Oswald: "The safety play here is to lay down his ace of clubs! This time he drops the king and has no trouble finessing against the jack and making all the tricks. If an honor failed to drop, he would go over to dummy and lead the nine of clubs. Then make a safety play against a guarded jack holding in the East hand.

Jim: "I had South bid seven he would have never taken the best play for all the tricks which is a first round finesse of the queen. It would have been miserably bad this time, but it still would have been the best play."

TWIN FALLS Kathy Sue Malone and Robert M. Lundgreen were married Feb. 22 in the Twin Falls Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Webb Malone, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Lundgreen, Huntington Beach, Calif.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. P. Maughan. The chapel was decorated with candelabra and baskets of apricot, carnations, yellow gladioli and chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by Rev. P. Maughan, the bride wore a gown of french tulle lace designed with a fitted bodice, sash and neckline, long full point sleeves and a bouffant skirt of lace tiers. The skirt formed a cascade of tiers which fell from a Chapel train. Small seed pearls and sequins were scattered on the ruffled edges of the tiers and outlined the neckline. A large satin bow was tied at the waist with long streamers flowing over the skirt.

Her reticule length butterfly veil of silk illusion was held in place by a headpiece of chantilly lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and apricot carnations with a background of baby's breath.

The bridegroom, sister of the bride, was Rev. Mrs. Betsy Jackson and Connie Heath helped with gifts.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I fell recently and received a torn cartilage in my knee. There are things I am unable to do now. If I do not have the surgery will I ever fall off my leg?

What are the chances with surgery? — Mrs. R.E.H.

The cartilage to which you refer, and which causes most trouble in knee injuries, is the semilunar (half-moon) cartilage. These are two sections of flat, moon-shaped, gristle-like matter located at the knee between the place where the high bone and the main leg bone meet. They serve us cushions to absorb the pressures to which the joint is subjected.

A portion of the torn cartilage is usually pulled away from its underlying attachment, and there is accompanying pain, swelling, often a "locking" of the joint to the point where the leg cannot be straightened. Since the location of the injured cartilage often does not allow effective X-ray diagnosis, the decision as to whether or not to operate is based on the severity of the symptoms.

Now, if your cartilage will not heal itself, and if the pain persists, surgery is necessary to remove or correct it. This is a common operation in football where wrenching knee injuries are easily come by and where it is necessary to restore the player's limb to full use. This usually takes a few months after surgery, although some discomfort may linger longer.

Your Good Health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Physical therapy is required after such surgery.

An operation for you would depend on the seriousness of the tear and just how important 100 percent use of the knee is to you in your work.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
What are the do's and don'ts for a person having gall stones that have never given any trouble? I was told of the stones after a X-ray for another condition — Mrs. N.W.

The don'ts are easy. Don't eat fatty or spicy foods and don't eat too much at one time. The do's are a bit more complicated. Should the gall bladder be removed or not? This is a question you may face, and the answer would depend upon several factors — the size of the stones, your age, and your health generally. It's estimated that 20 to 25 per cent of our population have gall stones which "give no trouble." But they do often harbor problems for the future.

The commonest symptom of gall bladder disturbance are pain and digestive distress, and this makes me wonder why you had the X-rays in the first place. Were you being examined for digestive problems? Gall stones are commonly discovered while examining patients for such complaints.

If this is your situation, your decision may already be made for you. The stones can mean further trouble. If they are small they may pass into the intestine and be excreted. But any size stone, when attempting to pass, can cause obstruction in the bile ducts, resulting in colic, extreme pain, and jaundice as the bile backs up into the bloodstream.

If you are in good health, you may want the gall bladder removed now to avoid complications of surgery later when your health may not be as oily. I go along with removal; a rather common operation that solves the stones problem forever.

I think my booklet, "You and Your Gall Bladder," will help your understanding of the matter. For a copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope to me in care of this newspaper.

New energy plan drawn by panel

WASHINGTON (UPI)

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., says the House Ways and Means Committee which he chairs has energy legislation which could serve as a "compromise" between the programs proposed by President Ford and congressional Democrats.

The Clinton plan was the third major energy program in a month. Clinton criticized the Democratic package, which was unveiled in general terms Friday, as being "watered down" to the point where the Ways and Means Committee doesn't believe it "will adequately fulfill its job."

All three solutions were on his committee's schedule for hearings today.

Speaking of his program, Clinton said, "I think it could very well do that this will be the point of compromise." It's comprehensive, and it does not call for all of the requirements of an energy program that will last for years. The point of committing the use of energy, conserving our use of energy, limiting the import of expensive foreign oil, and adopting conservation programs that will really have teeth, and developing capital incentive programs that will accommodate some of the conversion needs," Clinton was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation." He said the committee plan included:

"A tax increase on excess use of gasoline over a base limit, beginning with a nickel a gallon and increasing to 49 cents-a-gallon by 1979. The money generated would go into a trust fund for energy research and development."

A Federal Petroleum Purchasing Agency that would buy imports from the nation which supplied the lowest cost oil.

Additional import restrictions with a gradual cutting back imports by one million barrels per day over two to three years; their further decreases and a reduction of 15 per cent accomplished in the first year.

A revenue minimums with price and economy and a possible tax credit for those who reduce mileage.

A annual profits tax based on the assumption of gradual devaluation of oil and natural gas prices.

Incentives for research and development of alternative energy sources and for conversion of electric power plants from coal to

Man-booked in slayings

SMITHFIELD, Calif. (UPI)

An overnight manhunt went berserk Sunday night and killed four persons with a high-powered rifle, a suspect was arrested three hours later in Oregon.

Sheriff's deputies converged on the Shipwreck motel in this northern California fishing village after receiving a frantic telephone call that a man was shooting up in the place. Shots were heard in the background.

Officers arrived at the oceanside motel in drizzling rain and found the motel manager, his wife, a maid and a guest shot to death. Two others were hospitalized in critical condition.

Robert Paul Sander, 21, Cincinnati, Ohio, was arrested three hours later on the Redwood Highway near Grants Pass in southwestern Oregon. He was booked on four counts of murder.

"According to witnesses, the gunman had opened fire from a balcony overlooking the ocean, killing Barbara Hartman, 30, Fortuna, Calif., and critically wounding her husband, Percy.

Thermal dangers cited by study

(UPI) — Analysis of environmental pollution by one of the world's largest geothermal power projects has led to a warning that "indeed stringent precautions are taken" in the widespread development of such energy sources could be as detrimental as the proliferation of conventional powerplants.

This finding contrasts with statements made earlier that geothermal energy is "clean." The analysts suggest, however, that the pollutants certainly cannot be controlled.

The study was done by Robert C. Astham, professor of chemical engineering at Princeton University's Center for Environmental Studies. His findings, reported in the March issue of the journal Environmental Science and Technology, relate to the geothermal field at Wairakei in New Zealand. There the energy from 145 megawatts of hot water and steam extracted from some 20 wells generates about roughly seven per cent of New Zealand's needs. The plant reached full power in 1964 and little has been done to minimize its environmental impact.

According to Astham, if discharged untreated as much waste heat as a comparable fossil fuel plant, such as one burning coal, and 5.5 times as much water, its emissions of hydrochloric acid with a rotten egg smell are believed to blacken surfaces and brass in nearby villages.

At the same time, the geothermal plant is discharging water with a world climate of their atmospheric discharges of heat and carbon dioxide. Large amounts of the latter, the analysts believe, are believed to an increase retention of solar energy by the earth.

Fossil-fueled plants, Astham said, emit copious amounts of carbon dioxide, whereas the emissions from geothermal plants vary regionally depending on the amount of that gas in water and steam coming from the ground.

Thus at Wairakei the emissions are less by a factor of 60 than those of a nearby fossil-fueled plant. Yet at Monte Amiata in Italy, a comparable geothermal plant might discharge 10 times more carbon dioxide than the fossil-fueled one.

Water from geothermal wells like water from hot springs tends to be laden with chemicals. The residual water at Wairakei is discharged into a river whose fish population immediately downstream seems to have been affected. The pollutants include arsenic and mercury, but their levels in the river, under normal circumstances, do not greatly exceed the maximum recommended for drinking water.

Some of these pollutants could probably be extracted and sold, according to the analysis, including sulfur and carbon dioxide for industrial use.

At the geysers field in California, polluted water is discharged into wells that have been drilled, rather than into streams. According to Astham, this has not yet been attempted at a plant using wet steam steam at the geysers is dry.

A third type of geothermal plant at currently experimental stage would circulate water from the surface through deep rock fissures to increase the water supply. Should this be developed it will be difficult to predict its environmental effects.

The first memorial building of World War I veterans is located at Welch, W. Va. It was dedicated on May 30, 1921.

Long-term effort set between union, Gallos

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The young woman in the television commercial says in a Spanish accent that her family is making Madrid "Madrid wine in California" in the Spanish tradition.

She is Ofelia Gallo, an Argentinian whose husband and uncle, of Italian ancestry, operate the Gallo Winery of Modesto, Calif., which makes one third of all the wine produced in California.

Kennedy made the announcement Sunday afternoon Secretary State Henry Kissinger told a Civic Club luncheon in Houston the Ford administration was ready to develop "new principles and practices" with regard to Cuba.

"Now with the Secretary of State expressing a willingness to change that policy, it is appropriate to complement his initiative with legislation to remove the statutory embargoes on our current policy toward Cuba," Kennedy said in a statement.

For example, Gallo could have to be listed as the manufacturer on some products including Home's Farm Apple and Thunderbird.

Regardless of the outcome of the investigations, the case could produce a major change in the system under which wine and liquor have been promoted for years. If that happens, the original intent of the禁酒运动 would have been fulfilled.

"The impression, then," FAW says, "is that Madrid is turned out by a small family winery run by Spanish Americans who cannot afford an office."

Regardless of the outcome of the investigations, the case could produce a major change in the system under which wine and liquor have been promoted for years. If that happens, the original intent of the禁酒运动 would have been fulfilled.

"The impression, then," FAW says, "is that Madrid is turned out by a small family winery run by Spanish Americans who cannot afford an office."

today in brief

Burglars beat movers

RUPERT — Burglars beat the moving men to the household goods of a Rupert woman Sunday.

Sandra Sparks, 1052m St., Rupert, told police burglars broke into her home sometime Sunday, taking a movie camera, color TV, sewing machine, vacuum cleaner, clothes and other items.

According to police records, the burglars forced an entry into the house, while movers were transporting one load of household items to Sparks' new residence.

Police said other items could be missing, but Sparks couldn't be sure until she finished unpacking at her new residence.

In an unrelated incident, the Cassia County Sheriff reported the theft of three batteries from county equipment.

According to police records, batteries were taken from two pick-ups and a street roller parked at the shops in Rupert.

Camper damaged

TWIN FALLS — W.C. Malberg reported $24 damage to his camper which was parked in the fire behind his home at 60 Ave E Sunday.

Officers said it was believed youngsters playing in the alley started a fire in the camper trailer window. Investigation is continuing.

Gooding sets quota

GOODING — Mrs. Earl Skidmore-Gooding Red Cross blood drawing chairman, said the quota in today's drawing is 100 units.

Mrs. Skidmore said the hour of the drawing is from 3 to 6 p.m. at the War Memorial Hall.

She said that all repeat donors are encouraged and issued a special invitation to give donors to come help meet Gooding's quota.

Miners have new contract

MIAMI, I.D. — Miners of the Lucky Friday Mine went to work today under a new contract that provides for wage increases totaling 54.3 cents a three-year period, and a pension plan.

The miners, members of Local 514 of the Steelworkers Union, approved the contract with the Hecla Mining Co. Saturday meeting.

The previous contract expired at midnight Saturday.

The new contract calls for an 18 cent an hour increase for the first year, with 25 cent and 25 cent hourly wage hikes the second and third years.

A new dental program along with improvements in the medical plan and the pension plan were also called for in the new contract.

Students protest

BOISE (UPI) — An informal group of about 150 students has gathered at Boise State University to protest too much administrative control of student affairs.

A spokesman said student government as best as present in a "facilitator" and too many student-government decisions require administrative approval before they are valid.

Political campaign overhauled

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Republican Central Committee thoroughly overhauled its structure at its political convention.

Chairman Jack Lavelle, Jr., of Boise, said Saturday the meeting was one of the most "critical meetings we've had."

He said the changes in formulating and executing the Republican election campaigns were necessitated by the far-reaching effect of amendments to the federal election campaign act this year.

The changes are to provide tighter control of the Republican party process in Idaho by the state's political committee, Lavelle said.

"We have a dower kind of job in a dower kind of year," he told the committee.

Suit dismissed

BOISE (UPI) — An Idaho penitentiary inmate's suit for damages was dismissed hours after it was filed in U.S. District Court Saturday.

The suit was filed against the Idaho State Journal of Pocatello by Russell Slove Sr., 46, now serving a sentence in the Idaho prison for aggravated assault.

The suit contended inaccurate statements printed by the paper destroyed his personal standing and had a damaging effect on the outcome of his trial. He was asking for $500,000 in damages.

Judge Blaine Anderson ruled the suit did not state a charge on which the court could grant relief.

Kokomo plan brings skirmish

BOISE (UPI) — The U.S. Postal Service and Boise mailmen union officials are engaged in a skirmish over the service's new Kokomo Plan.

The plan calls for computers to measure mail carriers productivity. The union fears 15,000 jobs may be eliminated if the plan is implemented.

The union is blaming delivery problems on post office policies and not on the deliverers.

The mail carrier comments were made in a letter to the Idaho Statesman. Union officials didn't have comment on the letter or the matter.

Albert DeLoia, temporary Boise post office head, said he would not "dignify" the charges by discussing them.

National mail carriers have threatened nationwide strikes over the Kokomo Plan.

Hit and run probed

MT. RYRHY, Idaho (UPI) — Millard Preston Jones, 55, of San Jose, Calif., was killed Saturday in a hit and run incident on U.S. 95, 10 miles south of Marsing.

Murphy police said they are holding for investigation Elmer Junior Smithfield, 50, Marsing, in connection with the incident.

Police said a day later the incident still is under investigation. Jones was dead at the scene.

Search for work

BOISE (UPI) — Americans left out in the cold by the rising unemployment in the nation are drifting through the Boise area in search for work, according to local service agencies.

Reserve Mission Director John Droweck said he is seeing more new faces of his mission during the past year.

"There is a tendency for the fellow passing through to be younger," he said. "They really are trying to find work."

Droweck said the mission has fed and housed job seekers from all over the country recently. He said most of them are not heading for any particular place.

World ski teams expected in SV for World Cup event

By KIT ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Sun Valley goes international next week with 50 teams from all over the world plus about 700 American skiers expected.

A team of 42 Japanese skiers, plus skiers from many other countries will participate in the World Cup, March 8-15. Press representatives from all over the world, plus television crews will be on hand to cover the World Cup events.

In addition for the first time in Sun Valley's 29 year history, a gathering of black ski clubs will visit. About 700 black skiers are expected along with families and children.

Attending the Black Summit, the ski clubs will come from all over the United States with the greatest number from the east and midwest.

The Remps will be housed in Sun Valley Lodge, Sun Valley Inn and condominiums throughout the Valley. Activities are planned each night at the Lodge Inn and Village Village.

Barbie Clay of the Chicago Sun-Glovers, the host ski club, has coordinated the Sun Valley Black Summit, but the direction of the event comes from Sun Valley, Roger Brock and Bruce Hittner, of the marketing department. Terry Lazar, director of ski club sales; Betty Wilson, reservations director; and Linda Dondero, continental coordinator, among others.

Glenne Janss, wife of Sun Valley president Bill Janss, said she feels that is going to be very interesting and she hopes some of the hinge employees will react well to this.

The first Black Summit met at Aspen in 1973 with 500 participants. It was considered a success by all involved. There, the National Association of Black Ski Clubs was formed to serve as a coordination and communication center for Black skiers. Goals are to promote skiing within Black communities, to establish programs by which underprivileged Black youth can be introduced to the sport at an early age.

Sun Valley might not be the same after the Summit, but Blacks are no strangers to skiing.

An increasing number are peering slopes all over the West. State and European summer住戶數目為五百萬名美國人。

Several Black ski clubs have been started, among the major institutions the Cascades Ski Club, Chicago, Jim Dandy Ski Club, Detroit, Four Seasons Ski Club, New York, Four Seasons West Ski Club, Los Angeles, and All Seasons Ski Club of Berkeley, in addition to the Sun-Glovers.

Awareness week begins

In addition, the patient would have the right to know possible side effects of medication, and, in the event of any medical experimentation, the patient would have the right to know not only that the experimentation is taking place but also to participate or not in his or her variation.

The patient would also have the right to examine all medical records pertaining to his or her case.

In addition to the morning sessions, afternoon panels today were scheduled at 1 p.m. in the theater and genealogy and genealogy panel would be held at 2 p.m.

Tonight at 6 p.m. psychiatrist Richard Worst will lecture on "Women and Stress, Alcoholism and Drug Abuse."

Worst's lecture will be followed by a question-and-answer period.

"Women's Awareness Week" is being sponsored jointly by the YWCA and CSI.

Panels and presentations later in the week will cover the woman's role in law and economics, politics, education, and the arts. The week of events will conclude Saturday at the YWCA with panels on the widow and the divorced single woman.

Except for the Saturday panels, all presentations will be held at CSI.

Admission is free to the public with the exception of a $4.50 fee for a chartered bus to the legislature in Boise Wednesday, and nominal fees for child care available through the Presbyterian Church Nursery.

In some cases donations will be asked.

"This is not a woman's job meeting. It is being done to make women aware of their special problems and some solutions to them," said Joan Boen, a member of coordinating group for the events.

A complete schedule of events may be obtained through the YWCA.

For further information call the Y at 233-4284. For room number of an event call CSI at 733-7354.

Registration for the sessions and an information center is located in the east wing of the Student Cafeteria on the second floor of the Student Union Building.

Murphy claims Inverrary title

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI)

Pudgy Bob Murphy knocking a spectacular second shot to the lip of the cup for a par-four birdie on the 18th hole; won the $22,000 first prize in the Jackie Gleason Invitational Golf Classic Sunday.

Young Eddie Pearce had just tied the green-clad Murphy with an equally deadly second shot on the 18th hole for a birdie three. But seconds later Murphy read it with his iron shot, giving him a four-under-par 68 for the round.

Murphy finished one shot ahead of Pearce at 273 and two shots ahead of Nicklaus, who has gone into the round leading porce by shot and Murphy by two. Artie Palmer, who also was in the four-way tie, Murphy shot a four-under-par 71 Sunday for a total 279.

Next behind Nicklaus at 276 was Miller Barker, who shot a 60 Sunday. At 277 were Hale Irwin with a 70 and windwise Lee Trevino, who had the best score among the leaders, a 66.

Nicklaus had gone into the back nine with a one-shot lead over Murphy and Pearce with an even-par 36 then blazed to two straight birdies on the 10th and 11th holes.

But then it started to go bad for Nicklaus. He hit out of bounds for a double-bogey on the 12th hole and bogeyed the 14th and 15th. He tried to get back into contention by shooting a 30-foot chip for a birdie on the 16th, but then Murphy came in with a 25-foot birdie putt on the seventh hole and a five-footer for a birdie on the eighth while Nicklaus was struggling to make bogeys.

That put Murphy in position for his major victory.

Murphy had taken the lead over Pearce on the 15th hole, but Pearce tied him with a 10-foot putt on the 17th for a birdie.

On the 18th hole, Murphy assured his first win since the 1970 Greater Hartford Open by putting from 35 feet.

It was Murphy's fourth tour win and his best performance since a painful thumb injury kept him out of action four months during 1974.

Murphy, chewing on a cigar on the front nine but dropping it for the finish, got off to a stark start with a bogey on the first and fifth holes.

But he hit a 25-foot birdie putt on the seventh hole and a sixfoot putt for a double-bogey six.

Palmer, playing with both Nicklaus and Murphy before a massive gallery, then bogeyed the seventh but got that stroke back by putting a seven-foot birdie putt on the eighth.

Pearce refused to hold throughout the day, shooting a one-over-par 27 with one bogey on the 10th hole, then rallying with a birdie on the 11th and another on the 13th.

Nicklaus showed signs of trouble when he three-putted from 40 feet for a bogey on the seventh and missed a six-footer for a bogey on the eighth.

Palmer all but shot himself out of contention on the fifth hole when he drove next to a tree, had to punch onto the fairway and then missed a sixfoot putt for a double-bogey six.

Palmer, playing with both

Nicklaus and Murphy before a massive gallery, then bogeyed

the seventh but got that stroke back by putting a seven-foot birdie putt on the eighth.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAR. 4, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Confusion is rampant early in the day and whatever decisions are made could work out to your disadvantage. Make sure you study every aspect of a new program you have before putting it in motion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to regular duties instead of going off on some activity that seems lucrative but isn't. Apply clever economy measures.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle monetary and property matters early in the day. Listen to more carefully and don't run away from your obligations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You choose to handle thorny association matters cleverly now or there could be trouble give family more of your time tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have many duties to finish and should not delay any longer in doing so. Take no chances with your reputation now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't worry over some pleasure that is no longer in your life and concentrate on new ones that are better. Strive for happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look into the reason why you may feel you are not being treated fairly by kin. Use that ability you have to solve problems. Be calm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you are cautious in motion today. A prominent person can give you the advice you need. Be precise in your dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Look about for new interests so that you can add to your income in case a source of revenue is suddenly cut off. Think logically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Concentrate on the ways to attain your personal goals. Your devotion for mate needs bolstering. Sidelight a troubemaker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get rid of the obsolete and change in a more modern way of operating and become more affluent. Consult a business expert.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go along with what an expert has to suggest now. Don't bother a good friend who is busy at this time. Make long-range plans.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take no risks where your career or credit is concerned and protect your reputation. Perform your duties in an efficient way.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he, or she will possess much wisdom but must not be permitted to express advanced ideas until they are approved by higher-ups. Give as fine an education as possible. There could be fame in this chart. Ethical training is a must.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

what's what

that practice of talking with the hands is more prevalent among women than men, among Latin Americans than Anglo, among young than old.

THE PENAL CODE in Lebanon permits a man to divorce a wife, sister, mother or daughter whose sexual promiscuity shames the family.

MISTER, when ill-dressed appears to go to business, if you don't have 10 pockets, counting the one on your shirt, you're just not average.

FEAR

It's widely known that the two most basic human fears are the fear of falling and the fear of loud noises. Highwire performers with circuses long have gauged on the falling fear to fascinate audiences. But sometime back, a particularly clever tightrope walker decided to take advantage of the other fear, too. Throughout his act, he screamed and bellied when eliminated the bit by touching off a string of firecrackers as he fake a fall. Was too much. The performance shook up the onlookers so badly it hasn't repeated.

Q. Do snakes have nostrils?

A. Inside their mouths behind their teeth, they do. That's why they can't breathe while biting or chewing. Doesn't bother them much though. They can hold their breath for a long time...

GEMINI

Those Gemini people tend to be good in sales. Highly effective talkers. It's not that they necessarily talk a lot, but they get their points across fairly strongly. Or, so say the star-gazers.

TRIFF was selling his wife's camphorine this morning - that he hadn't bought a new dress in the last 10 pounds.

THAT-ORIGINAL physician Hippocrates contended that the massage practitioners always should stroke toward the heart. At least he got that right; medical experts now say veins that carry blood toward the heart are closest to the body's surface, that's where the veins are located.

Attributed to Hippocrates, 400 B.C. From Work 14, 76167.
