Panel drafting tax cut bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With both sides predicting tough bargaining, House and Senate negotiators today began drafting a final compromise tax cut bill.

Chairman Russell Long, D-La., indicated the hardest issue to resolve probably would be held for last—whether to allow independent oil producers to permanently retain a portion of the oil depletion allowance.

importance in the bill is enactment of a tax reduction for this year and rebates on 1974 taxes. The House version calls for rebates between $100 and $200 while the Senate measure sets rebates at between $100 and $240.

might be "a little much." The Senate measure included special tax breaks for home buyers, retired people, working parents, financially troubled corporations and others. Both versions would repeal the controversial oil depletion allowance.

Hue totters before Reds

DANANG (UPI) — The outer defenses of Hue crumbled today under North Vietnamese tank and infantry assaults and the Communists opened fire on 80,000 refugees trying to escape by sea.

To the south, the Communists captured the seacoast provincial capital of Tam Ky, cutting South Vietnam in two.

The coastal enclave of Quang Ngai, 23 miles south of Tam Ky, also came under heavy assault. Many refugees from the central Highlands were reported heading for Quang Ngai, taking so many casualties they changed the name of their group from the convoy of tears to the convoy of death.

The government bolstered the Saigon defenses, setting up a new defense perimeter by stationing two full divisions in an arc 15 miles from the city. Self-defense militiamen inside the city were on full combat alert.

If the Communists do manage to capture Hue, they will convert only soldiers and civil servants, a few penniless refugees and empty buildings. Virtually everyone with the means to travel left last week after reports of an imminent Communist attack swept the city, which straddles the Perfume River.

Airlift resumes despite rockets

PINOM PENH (UPI) — American officials today took a "calculated risk" and reopened the airlift of food, fuel and ammunition to Cambodia despite continued—and increasingly more accurate—rocket fire on the city's airport.

On the political front, a group of political and military leaders Sunday stepped up their efforts to try to persuade President Lun Nol to resign for the good of the country.

U.S. officials reportedly said the airlift, halted on Saturday when two planes were ripped by shrapnel from Chinese-made 107mm rockets, would remain suspended until the Tuol Leap operation decreased the incoming fire at the airport.

But U.S. embassy officials decided at mid-morning to resume the lift to keep ammunition stocks from being depleted and to avert the psychological blow to morale caused by its suspension.

The decision to start the flights again is a calculated risk, one embassy official said.

Ford examining Mideast policies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford told congressional leaders today he was reexamining U.S. policy in the Middle East following a breakdown of Arab-Israeli peace initiatives.

But the leaders said Ford expressed no fear of imminent war in that part of the world.

Emerging from a grim, 1½ hour White House meeting with Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Republican and Democratic congressional leaders alike expressed support for Kissinger's diplomatic efforts in the Middle East.

At the same time, however, the Senate increased taxes on the foreign income of U.S. oil companies.

The conference was closed to the press and public.

To most Americans, the major item of importance in the bill is enactment of a tax reduction for this year and rebates on 1974 taxes.

Idaho solons adjourn after historic steps

BY BILL LAZARUS Times-News Capitol Bureau

BOISE — Idaho's 43rd legislature ended its first regular session at about 4 Sunday morning after taking historic steps in education and land-use planning.

After more than five years of consideration, the legislature established non-mandatory, public kindergartens.

Kindergartens had passed the Senate for a number of years, but had been blocked in the House. This year kindergarten supporters started the pill in the House and, backed with extensive lobbying and home town support, managed to put it through on a 38-33 vote.

The going was not so smooth for land-use planning bills as the Association of Idaho Cities.

planning bills introduced seven land-use planning bills to the legislature.

Four died in the Senate, three went on to the House. But of these three, only one bill made it out of committee.

This bill requires planning by local governments and sets guidelines along which the planning should be made.

But supporters of land-use planning see passage of this initial measure as a root in the door. The key 2-17 vote believe will clear the way for more planning legislation in the future.

One of the groups backing the land-use planning bills was the Association of Idaho Cities.

The AIC, comprised of city officials from around Idaho and lobbyist Floyd Decker, emerged as one of the most active lobbying groups of the session.

TF officers seeking 5 in S. Hills

TWIN FALLS — A search was being made today by Twin Falls County sheriff's officers for five Twin Falls persons missing since Sunday afternoon in the South Hills.

Mrs. Keith Kenny, Twin Falls, notified the sheriff's office about 12:45 a.m. today, saying her husband, brother and three children had failed to return home.

When they failed to return by midnight she called officers. A search was started this morning. Snow machines were being used to check the cabin and roads—in the Shoshone Basin area where the family might be stranded.

Mrs. Kenny said they had matches but no food when they left Twin Falls.

The local sales counteracted a momentum trend of fewer vehicle sales.

State figures showed a higher increase during January — up 39 per cent — but a slight decline in February compared to last year.

In January, 157 passenger cars were registered as sold in Twin Falls County, a 28 per cent jump from the 123 cars sold in January, 1974.

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County car and truck sales rose above last year's levels during the first two months of this year, according to state figures.

Apparently stimulated by widely advertised rebates on new purchases, car sales rose in both January and February when compared to the previous year's levels.

Mideast tension rising

By United Press International
Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said today the collapse of the Kissinger peace initiative intensifies the seriousness of the Middle East conflict but that Arab threats of war will achieve nothing.

Rabin spoke against the background of Syrian military exercises with the armament, Egyptian warnings of new warfare and a weakened barage of fighting on the Lebanese border; Israeli troops were patrolling the border under a full alert.

Interior Department lists 41 kinds of butterflies as endangered

NEW YORK — For the first time, insects are joining some of the last animal cousins on the United States government list of creatures that may be facing extinction.

The Department of Interior announced Thursday that 41 of the nation's butterflies in the United States, it is putting 41 on its list of threatened and endangered species.

They will be the first insects to come under the provisions of the Endangered Species Act of 1973. Twenty-six states are involved.

The butterflies, most of them small and relatively unknown to the general public but well-known to lepidopterists (butterfly and moth specialists), will join such officially endangered or threatened animals as the blue whale, the tiger, the gorilla, the grizzly bear, the whooping crane and the eastern timber wolf.

Publication of the butterfly list in Thursday's issue of the Federal Register in Washington marked the first step toward protecting the butterflies from interstate shipment, commercial sale and mass collecting.

When the list is finally approved after review within the next few months, it will be illegal to capture even a single butterfly of a species listed as "endangered," with less stringent restrictions for those species listed as "threatened."

The announcement by the office of endangered species in the Interior Department was received with enthusiasm by the principal lepidopterological groups in the country.

"We're thrilled that the government is going to use its power to save beneficial insects," said Robert M. Pyle, director of the Xerces Society, an organization named for an extinct San Francisco butterfly, the Xerces blue, and publisher of the Butterfly Bulletin, Atala.

One of the most valuable aspects of butterflies to scientists is that butterflies are very delicate, said Pyle, who is a graduate student of lepidopterology at the Yale School of Forestry and Environmental studies.

"Because butterflies are both so conspicuous and so fragile, the size and well-being of their populations serve as excellent monitors of environmental change and of rises in pollution levels," he added.

Pyle noted that insects are estimated to comprise about half of the total of all living matter on Earth, both plant and animal, and that insects in general and butterflies, in particular, are correspondingly important links in the food chain, providing nutrition for uncounted millions of other animals in Washington.

Dr. Paul A. Oppler, who prepared the butterfly list as head of the section of the Office of Endangered Species, said that the forerunner of lists of other insect species that are faced with possible extinction.

"We're looking into the problems of moths and other insects, sponges, snails and fresh water mussels," he said.

"We picked butterflies first because they're the most conspicuous and their distribution is better known and it's easier to count them."

Most people, he explained, are not aware that butterflies like the honey bee, are excellent pollinators of flowers and food crops. The work of the alfalfa and cabbage butterflies are examples of how butterfly species can help the growth of farm plants, he said.

Cancer victims have hope

(C) Newhouse News Service SAN DIEGO — One of every two cancer victims who starts treatment today will be alive in five years, the president of the American Cancer Society predicted Friday.

And if that still seems grim in a nation that is spending $800 million a year to fight cancer, consider that 25 years ago only one in four survived five years, said Dr. George P. Rosenmond, a Temple University surgeon. Today the figure is one in three.

"We're not jumping up the clicking our heels because we're doing so well," Rosenmond admitted at the American Cancer Society's 17th science writers' seminar here. "But we have been making slow but steady progress in the last few years and are on the verge of a decade that may be the most exciting we have had in cancer control in this country."

Advances have been made in both research and treatment, but given the time lag in getting new knowledge into wide application and the five-year period before improvements show up statistically, significant changes cannot be expected before about 1978, he said.

Rosenmond said the celebrated war on cancer may turn out to be another war we didn't win.

"To wipe out cancer may be more than we can expect," he said, "but I can foresee getting it under reasonable control."

Cancer death rates in both men and women, he said, have been inching downward except for lung cancer. Rates for lung cancer deaths in both sexes are soaring.

More than 81,000 Americans will die of lung cancer this year, statistics show. Rosenmond said that figure could be reduced by 80 per cent if cigarette smoking were entirely eliminated.

Although deaths from lung cancer are up, deaths from ovarian cancer are up, those from uterine, rectum, stomach, bladder and lip cancer are down.

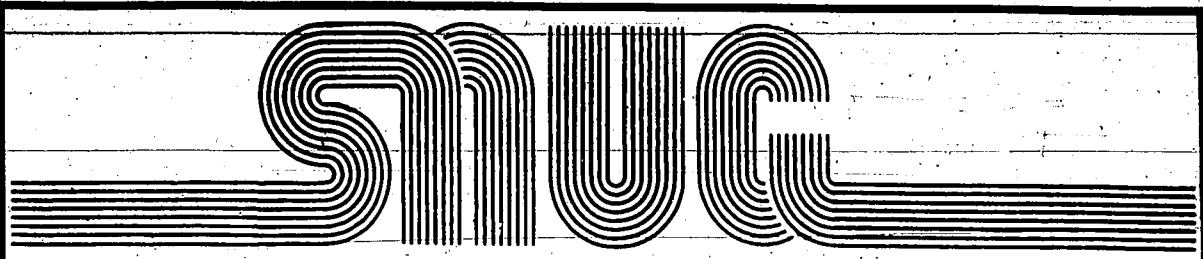

Five-year survival rates have risen substantially for cancers of the prostate, uterine corpus, thyroid, kidney, bladder and larynx, melanoma, Hodgkin's disease and chronic leukemia, Rosenmond said.

Democrats score GOP

BOISE — In a prepared statement, state Democratic Chairman Deekle Rice criticized Republican officials for making statements about Sen. Frank Church's stance on gun control.

Rice "advised Republican officials who have falsely accused Frank Church of altering his opposition to federal gun controls to stop shooting of their mouths with unlead minds."

"This systematic attempt by the Republican hierarchy to dilute the record of Senator Church's unswerving opposition since 1957 to gun control legislation undoubtedly stems from their jealousy over the fact the senator is well recognized as Idaho's foremost and original opponent of such legislation," Rice said.

The Pentagon will have $104.7 billion to spend in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1976, if Congress approves the record defense budget proposed by President Ford. Actual spending is projected at $92.8 billion. The Total Obligational Authority consists of annual appropriations granted by Congress (or requested in the case of fiscal 1976) plus unused appropriations from previous years. Outlays are funds actually paid out by government agencies.

Bloated costs imperil weapons

BY DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — The B-1 bomber is in political trouble in Congress. Defense critics, outraged by its soaring costs, are questioning the need in the missile age for spending $2 billion on the aircraft.

Other weapons projects suffering from bloated costs are in peril as the Pentagon's critics — there ranks swollen in the November elections — seek to cut at least $5 billion from the record $105-billion defense budget.

Pentagon supporters concede that the amount requested for defense probably will be cut and that the B-1's chances are marginal.

Each of the 24 B-1s scheduled for production, according to the Air Force, will cost $94 million, a dramatic increase from the $30 million projected in 1970 and even from the $76 million figure announced by the Pentagon in mid-1974.

And some B-1 opponents now are predicting the unit cost eventually will go as high as $100 million.

"One of these years it will be cut. Whether this is the year is not certain," predicted the top aide to Sen. Thomas J. Meloy, D-N.H., chairman of the armed services subcommittee that will probe the project's costs.

Although the Defense Department views the B-1 as essential to a well-balanced nuclear force that also includes land and sea-based missiles, critics question the need for manned bombers when intercontinental missiles are less vulnerable and able to reach their targets much faster.

The attack on the B-1 reflects wide sentiment in Congress that the over-all 1975 defense budget of $104.7 billion is too high.

Although Secretary Schlesinger has warned that cuts in the record Pentagon request would place the United States second to the Soviet Union in military power by 1978-80, some members of the Senate and House are demanding that the budget be cut by at least $5 billion, an amount equivalent to reductions in the last two years after the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

And even staunch Defense Department supporters in Congress concede that an amount in that range might be trimmed from what the Pentagon calls its "rock-bottom request." Here again, the new crop of freshmen in Congress may make the difference. "There is a stronger disposition in the House this year to make cuts," Rep. Sikes notes.

Besides the B-1, opposition in Congress is mounting over other defense programs. Including the sale of weapons to allied nations, troops levels stationed abroad, the world. Army plans to increase the number of its combat divisions, military aid to Vietnam and Cambodia and another Air Force plane that is planned to direct air battles over foreign territory.

Equipped with large radar screens and computers, the $1 AWACS (airborne warning and control system) aircraft would cost $111 million each, becoming the most expensive plane ever purchased by the Air Force.

The project is controversial because of charges that its electronic systems are vulnerable to enemy jamming devices. Critics say that it is doubtful the plane could exist for long in a wartime air environment in Europe.

Some key members of Congress are having second thoughts about AWACS even though Schlesinger has certified that the plane is "cost effective." In that its radar system could not be easily jammed, and the Air Force is prepared to begin releasing funds for production.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Melvin Price (D of Illinois) has warned Schlesinger that "there are lingering doubts in Congress on the matter," and that the committee plans to take a "second look" at the aircraft's cost effectiveness.

If a showdown develops over both the B-1 and AWACS, "you may run into a situation where defense critics have a good chance to pick off one but not the other," said a defense spending analyst. If that happens, Sikes predicted, it would be "easier to make people see the need for the radar plane" than the B-1.

Looking more like a fighter than a bomber, the B-1 is designed to succeed the B-52, the aging mainstay of the nation's manned bomber fleet for the past two decades. The plane's advantage over the B-52, the Air Force maintains, would be its ability to take off faster and from shorter runways, carry a greater number of nuclear weapons, and more easily penetrate enemy missile and radar networks.

While Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger acknowledges the "high unit cost" of the plane, he reminds the B-1 critics that the $84 million-a-copy estimate "is an unconscionable increase in price. It's the reason you're going to have problems with Congress this year."

One of the B-1's most ardent defenders, Rep. Robert F. Sikes, D-Fla., gives the aircraft only a "50-50 chance" of surviving another congressional funding battle.

"It's a different ballgame this year," Sikes said, referring to the newly elected defense spending critics and the skyrocketing cost of the B-1.

WASHINGTON — In its latest blast at cigarette smoking, the Federal Trade Commission has raised the pitch of debate from a tolerable C-natural to a shrill F-sharp.

It is the difference between advocacy and zealotry, and does the FTC no credit.

The government's unrelenting campaign against cigarettes provides one more example — if one more example were needed — of the excess of Big Brotherism. Back in 1964, with great fanfares of publicity, the U.S. surgeon general proclaimed to an indifferent world what an indifferent world already knew: Cigarettes are dangerous to one's health.

Such a conclusion had been evident for 30 years. From the time John Balfour rolled the first stogie, smokers have been coughing and panting. Tobacco has been scorned as the "dirty weed," and cigarettes have been known as coffin nails. The surgeon general's report served chiefly to add pages of statistical documentation to a vast body of instinctive wisdom. In any government with a decent respect for self-determination and individual freedom, the matter would have stopped right there.

But our government was not content to leave its citizens alone. On the holy-holy theory that Papa Knows Best, the government then embarked upon a crusade against the vile, unhealthy habit. Through measures of doubtful constitutionality, the manufacturers of a perfectly legal product were forbidden to advertise their wares by radio and TV. The makers of cigarettes were compelled to adorn every package and every printed ad with a dire warning that the surgeon general had determined that smoking is dangerous to one's health. This has now been going on for 11 years. In 1963, some 52.9 billion cigarettes were consumed. Last year, according to the FTC's report to Congress, consumption reached an all-time high of 54.5 billion cigarettes. This is an increase of about 13 per cent. An unrepentant people, fully aware of Papa's warnings, evidently choose not to follow Papa's advice.

This is not all. If the FTC crusaders have their way, every package of cigarettes would have to carry a declaration of fat and nicotine content. If further study isolates "additional hazardous components," these, too, would have to be listed. The FTC plan is offended by current cigarette advertising. To the agency's disgust, manufacturers depict "young, attractive, active and sophisticated people" in their ads. The makers have the gall to speak of the "lure of red lightning," of "realistic," of "more of a statement for a real man." The FTC particularly complains of a "predigious use of the words 'alive,' 'fresh,' 'refreshing' and 'natural.'" The FTC is aggrieved by ads that show smokers in "delightful outdoor settings."

To counter this terrible propaganda, the FTC "strongly urges" an appropriation of unstarred millions of dollars to finance advertising in print and on the air to discourage cigarette smoking.

The whole thing is ridiculous. Almost half of all adults in America either smoke or have smoked. As the acting Commissioner, Mayo J. Thompson, put it in a recent report: "We already know the dangers. The government has given the people abundant information — and it is not the government's job to act on that information."

That is sound advice. His overzealous colleagues would be well advised to put it in a pipe and smoke it.

to play Europe yet... one expert told us. "Portugal is turning into an unknown experiment for them and they obviously did not expect events to go this fast."

But the Kremlin learned bitter lessons in Chile, such as the need for absolute control over the press and the army. Those mistakes are not being repeated in Portugal, where army and press are kept in check.

Congress is now working on a Portugal aid bill for about $20 million, a pittance but symbolically significant, and the White House intends to continue technical assistance planning for spending that money in Portugal. To announce withdrawal of the aid would play into the hands of the far left in Portugal.

Yet, at some point in the future the aid may have to be withheld. Otherwise, the Communist-controlled regime might try to claim American support.

The loss of important U.S. Navy facilities in the Portuguese Azores, particularly anti-submarine reconnaissance, is slowly being accepted as unavoidable. So is the prospect of Soviet military stations on Portuguese Madeira Island, where the U.S. does not even possess a regular diplomatic outpost. Likewise, the odds strongly favor a Communist-dominated Portugal leaving NATO by its own decision.

These deleterious prospects are dwarfed by more subtle effects on the European democracies of a Communist-controlled government running Portugal with the U.S. helplessly on the sidelines. That may explain deep anxiety in Bonn last month when Alexander Shelepin, former boss of the KGB secret police and now chairman of the Soviet Central Council of Trade Unions, arrived as head of a Soviet trade union mission.

Shelepin, a key politburo member, is due in London on similar mission next month. Against the tragic backdrop of Portugal, such visits are evil omens for level-headed statesmen here and in Europe.

"Sell it, we said... 'We can always get more,' we said"

Q Mr. Ford, How would you describe the policy of your administration?

A Elastic.

Q You mean it can stretch a long way without breaking?

A There is stretch in my policy that hasn't even been named yet. It is so elastic that it can cover anything, and, what's more, it can stretch in any direction.

Q That's a large boast. Can you document it?

A Sure. Remember a few months ago when I said the greatest problem facing America was inflation and war and that we had to bite the bullet, lighten our belts and spend less?

Q Everybody remembers that, but what was elastic about it?

A I applied the old elastic afterwards when I announced that the greatest problem facing America was recession, and warned that every taxpayer ought to get $1,000 from the government so they could loosen their belts and spend more.

Q Why were you so pessimistic in your budget message?

A You mean when I told the Congress that the economy was in terrible shape and wasn't going to get any better for the next two years?

Q Yes, were you being elastic there?

A Sure. Right after forecasting two years of bad times, you may remember, I went down to

The FTC's response is to intensify the anti-smoking campaign. The idea is to compel the makers to print upon each package of cigarettes a still more formidable notice: "Warning: Cigarette Smoking is Dangerous to Health, and May Cause Death from Cancer, Coronary Heart Disease, Chronic Bronchitis, Pulmonary Emphysema and Other Diseases." The next step, one assumes, is to require that every package contain an anti-smoking tract.

Atlanta and denounced the Democrats for spreading gloom about the economy. Some people accused me of showing off about the elastic in my policy, but I figure if you've got it, flaunt it.

Q Where else is your elastic policy creating the kind of confusion you can be proud of?

A I don't want to boast, mind you, but look at the middle East. One day I've got Henry talking about the possibility we may have to go in there and fight for oil, right? At the same time I am selling them — the people we would have to fight — our own weapons. Weapons so advanced that we haven't even tried them out ourselves.

Q Did you want to make sure the Arabs would be able to beat us if we carried out our threat to fight them?

A When you follow the elastic policy, you don't tie your hands by thinking about questions like that. The point is to keep plenty of stretch in your position.

Q Are you equally elastic in your politics?

A Are you kidding? Remember when I was being confirmed by the Congress as Nixon's vice president, and I told them that if I succeeded to the presidency I would serve out the remainder of Nixon's term and not run for the job on my own merits?

Q I certainly do, but you were running for it on your own merits, aren't you?

A Of course. Anything else would be inconsistent with my elastic policy.

Q Does the elastic policy place great demands on your time and energy?

A Endless demands. I can't even think up warnings, demands, promises and programs that can be abandoned before the week is out. I work at it full time. Sometimes I fall so far behind in the work that I find myself abandoning programs before I've gotten around to thinking them up.

Q Can you cite an example?

A Yes. I've already done it. I can't even think up warnings, demands, promises and programs that can be abandoned before the week is out. I work at it full time. Sometimes I fall so far behind in the work that I find myself abandoning programs before I've gotten around to thinking them up.

'Sorry mess' in US charged

Editor, Times-News:
The old parian prayed long and fervently, condemning and damning those past and present. He flayed the compassions of Christ and the weakness of God's dictates.
Pausing at last he glowered at his wife and, "Sometimes I feel that all in this world are crazy save thee and me Deborah! And I have my doubts of thee."
The same mental aberrations might be detected in a person who pours too long over folders of information on the sorry mess we call government.

Since the concept was conceived for the US to finance the governments of the world we have listened to "We can't aid Nixon X because those people have made graft a way of life." "We can't aid Nixon Z and Y because those governments are riddled with graft and corruption."
Mighty plous words until one looks at the records of the past 55 years, and specifically the last seven of United States history. Here the record shows 59 congressmen, cabinet members, high officials, governors (state legislators by the baker's dozen) charged, indicted, convicted of bribery, tax evasion, perjury, in fact every felony and petty swindling usually ascribed to the cheapest ward heelers or police bent on sharing the take of the town (heh).

Men aspiring to the presidency have been caught redhanded in falsifying tax reports, openly and knowingly taking illegal contributions and personal "gifts" ranging from briefcases packed with $100 bills to cash and stock amounting to the hundreds of thousands.
A candidate without a kitty of $20 million is a dead duck. Are we buying men or slick advertising?
Since World War II the US has labored mightily to welcome new nations. But whatever motive seems motivating, two years an ambassadorship has been the reward for political donations and faithful service to the party.
Nowadays an administration keeps a "Blue Book" on each nation in the best used car tradition. A $100,000 donation must rate an African post, a $50,000 gift an island kingdom and lesser try a consulate.
The knee brithers and bow tie jobs to defeated congressmen and men in impeccable pocketbooks.
And then we listen while those in high office piously declare, "We can't help these people. Graft and dishonesty is a way of life there." There has to be a better reason.

Ford may face GOP challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Some Republicans think Gerald R. Ford may not get the free ride to his party's presidential nomination traditionally afforded incumbents.
It's not something that has been widely discussed, but the unusual circumstances which elevated Ford to the Presidency, without being chosen by his party and elected by the people.
Hand-picked by Richard M. Nixon to fill the vacancy left by Spiro Agnew's resignation, Ford was never been considered by his party for higher office during the quarter century he served in the House.
Thus, some Republicans are beginning to express the feeling that Ford does not have the traditional entitlement to the nomination that is almost automatically rendered to elected Presidents or former vice presidents.

His vulnerability on this score was first exposed when Sen. Howard W. Baker, R-Tenn., announced earlier this year that he may challenge Ford in the primaries.
Even though Ford has repeatedly said he will seek the GOP nomination, Baker says he may run anyway.
"The best interests of the party might be served by someone competing against the President even for the party's nomination," Baker says.
In a recent interview with the Washington Star, Baker summed up this way:
"I think it is unmistakably clear that this presidency is to be distinguished from one in which the President comes to the White House fresh from the field of battle, with a mandate from the country."
Earlier this month, some conservative senators and congressmen held a strategy meeting. Afterwards, the key organizer, Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., announced the group expects the 1976 convention to be "wide open."
The 26 conservatives agreed that no candidate, including Ford, has a lock on the presidential nomination.

Editor, Times-News:
For some time I have intended to write you a note concerning having the Doonesbury strip on the cartoon page of your paper.
I take it as an insult to the intelligence of myself and my family to have this trash enter my home every day. I cannot see how anyone could possibly be interested in this sort of nothing.

'Clean up' urged

Editor, Times-News:
"Comics" or "Funny Papers" should be that: a dash of light, entertaining, pictorial newspaper reading that children read and probably most of us adults, too.
They are a part of American gratification enjoyed by many decades of our youth. Some are satire; others are merely "funny."
But — the recent themes of the "Doonesbury" strips carried by your paper is extremely distasteful.
Our children need not be exposed to a "Minister of Marijuana" who supplies dope to the hero who passes out in a cloud of smoke, muttering "hee, hee, hee."
Nor need they wonder what the hero needs six "sacrificial virgins" for to get him through the winter.
Clean up the funnies; cancel "Doonesbury."

Mall litter cited

Editor, Times-News:
I was shopping in downtown Twin Falls last Saturday. Was appalled at the litter and dirt in the new mall.
It seems the city and street department would take more pride in maintaining what is supposed to be one of the newest urban shopping redevelopment in the state.
Perhaps a spring cleaning needs to be put on the calendar of the city.

'Whole story' asked

Editor, Times-News:
I read your letters and articles daily about the alleged interception of a police broadcast by radio station KEEF.
What I want to know is, when are you going to hear the true story of what really happened at the house where the two women were assaulted?
It seems to me the news media, somewhere along the line, is not giving out the whole story.

Colorado park offered Texas

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Gil Felts has offered 40 acres of the Rocky Mountains to the State of Texas for a park and Colorado politicians don't like it a bit.
"I think they're being unfair, the dirty birds," Felts said of members of the Colorado House of Representatives who, alarmed by the plan, tentatively have approved a bill barring another state from owning or operating any land in Colorado for park or recreational purposes.
"We (Texans) appreciate the Rockies and we're not going to turn them in to a bunch of gravel pits like the people down here," Felts said.
"I want Texans to have their own park right in the middle of Colorado."
Felts has offered 40 acres of land outside Colorado Springs to Texas for a state park. The land is in an area which Felts hopes to develop under the name of "Texas in Colorado."
"Visitors from Texas spend nearly $100 million annually in Colorado," said Felts, a former resident of Terlingua, Tex., a tiny town in Texas' Big Bend country. "Yet, people from this state seem to want Texans to spend their money here and quickly disappear."
Colorado state Rep. Forrest Burns, who sponsored the bill to ban the plan, said if his proposal passed the legislature, "You can bet one of the first things I do will be to send a copy of it to the governor of Texas."
Felts said Texas officials first turned down his offer of land, saying laws prohibited the spending of state money on property outside borders of the Lone Star state.

Reader defends Common Cause

Editor, Times-News:
Normally, I disregard any forum letter from the Adrian Arps of Twin Falls, but I cannot ignore their latest distortion of the political scene.
Their blatant misrepresentation of the background and purpose of Common Cause must be corrected.
The Arps contend that the Rockefeller family provided the "seed money" for the founding of Common Cause. In fact, during the four years of Common Cause's existence, the Rockefeller family have contributed $70,000, which is one-third of one per cent of Common Cause's income.
"To me, that is indeed paltry "seed money" from a clan of the Rockefeller wealth. All of their contributions were publicly reported. There is no basis for accusations that large contributors dominate Common Cause."
In 1974, 94 per cent of CC's income came from the $15 individual dues paid by individual members, plus contributions of $100 or less.
The Arps assert that Common Cause "... will be working to further the liberal goals of the Rockefeller and the super-rich."
They are unaware that Common Cause, under the leadership of chairman John Gardner, strenuously lobbied for US withdrawal from Vietnam while Nelson Rockefeller was a staunch support of the Johnson and Nixon war policies. On Rockefeller's nomination as vice president, Gardner was among those asking a full public financial disclosure.

Obviously Gardner does not let his position as trustee for the Rockefeller Brothers Fund guide his actions.
Common Cause members are not a "front" for any moneyed interest.
Policies are set by the member-elected board of 50 people which represents an amazing cross-section of the electorate: Indian, black, and ethnic leaders, labor union leaders, university professors and administrators, housewives, lawyers, students, clergy, women's right workers, doctors, business executives.
I doubt any lobby in the nation has an equally eclectic background.
In my years of Common Cause membership, I have not seen an advocacy of the "... deficit spending and foreign give-aways ..." and the Arps believe "have nearly ruined the Republic."
I am sorry they feel our country is on the brink of destruction; that feeling may make their daily existence a sad one. Personally, although it's difficult at times, I find much to be optimistic about.
The fact that 66,000 people from all walks of life can, through Common Cause, effectively lobby for all citizens' interests is a healthy sign that individuals are taking their civic responsibility seriously.
And that, I think, would brighten even the Arps' day.

Ammunition ban opposed

Editor, Times-News:
I am definitely opposed to the new United States of America from buying any type of handgun ammunition as proposed by the Consumer Product Safety Commission.
The ban is obviously a sleazy, backhanded tactic to gain eventual and total gun confiscation.
As a matter of course, it follows that I am opposed to the commission itself. The arbitrary power of a few people (appointments made by the elected United States of America) to prevent our citizens from buying any particular product, based on political reasons, certainly does not reflect the type of government that was meant to be under our constitution.

The possibility of the ban itself is a beautiful example of how far downhill our government has been taken by certain, powerful factions in our country.

This letter is in response to B.D. Rice's letter in regard to the cartoons.
To answer Mr. Rice's first question, The Times-News probably prints "Doonesbury" and "Andy Capp" for the same reason they print "Family Circus," because a lot of subscribers enjoy reading them.
Just because you do not like or understand the satire of "Doonesbury" or the ethnic humor of "Andy Capp" does not mean that all of us readers dislike them.
I, for one, enjoy these cartoons and I know several others who also enjoy them. I personally don't think you have the right to dictate my preferences in cartoons. I really don't care for "little kids in the want ads," but I don't oppose the printing of them because I know people enjoy them.
I'll make a deal with you, Mr. Rice. I'll hold your horse while you shuffle through the want ads to find "Family Circus" if you hold mine while I enjoy "Doonesbury."

Chorale offers Bach oratorio

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Chorale's Palm Sunday presentation could best be described as a religious musical experience.

The audience for Bach's oratorio, "The Passion According to St. John" had opportunity for active listening since the text of each of the numbers was printed in the programs.

As Roger Vincent, director and founder of the Chorale, points out the "Passion" is a religious music drama of the arrest and crucifixion of Christ in which the music is designed to intensify the impact of the words, so it is essential that the listener be able to understand them.

Therefore the text of the oratorio, which is not too often performed, was sung in English. An oratorio is usually scriptural while a cantata may or may not be sacred, is a musical drama done without aid of costumes or props.

Bach's purpose in writing the St. John Passion, which was his first, was to educate about 250 years ago in Leipzig, was to teach a lesson. As the drama unfolds, such events as followed with the moral to be drawn for application in the listener's lives.

Jack Van Buren, who teaches German at the Twin Falls High School, ably filled the demanding role of narrator who in his recitatives is cast in the role of evangelist who explains the dialogue of the characters.

The singers represent the congregation of believers voicing their emotions and thoughts as they listen, as well as the biblical characters who enact the last hours of Christ's life on earth through recitatives, arias, chorales and choruses.

Bach originally intended for the chorales, a fundamental type of church music, to be sung a cappella while the chorus numbers were to be accompanied, but this was not followed completely in the Chorale's spring performance.

The words Jesus spoke are sung by Harold V. Smith, general director of College of Southern Idaho; Craig Davis; Jerome, portrayed Pilate; Mrs. Byrle Carr; maid; Clarence Hally, servant; and Chris Showers, Peter.

Mrs. David Mead was soprano and Mrs. James Cox, alto, while a solo quartet included Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Cox, Jay Fowles, tenor, and Davis, bass.

One of the loveliest numbers, was Mrs. Mead's aria, "I Follow Thee in Joy" with Debbie Colner providing flute accompaniment. The Chorale singers were supported by a small orchestra, with Helen Colner and Joan Martin playing cellos; Ron Brackett, bass; Miss Colner, flute, and Phyllis Van Nest, piano.

Bach built upon an ancient church custom begun in the Middle Ages of singing the Passion story with one voice chanting the Gospel narrative and other voices representing the protagonists.

Palm Sunday which ushers in Holy Week, has traditionally been a time for special music throughout the Christian church and Sunday was no exception in Twin Falls.

Many denominations featured special numbers and at the First United Methodist Church Vincent was baritone soloist for that choir's presentation of Dubois' sacred cantata, "The Seven Last Words."

Other soloists were Clarence Dudley, tenor, and Shirley Vernon, soprano, borrowed from the Christian Church and the presentation which replaced the usual sermon, was enhanced with organ and piano accompaniment by Bob Thompson and Mary Baun.

Charles Looney's sonorous voice as narrator also added greatly to the service.

Coal production shift hits snag

© New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — A joint government and coal industry plan to shift the center of United States coal production from the established coal fields of the East to more profitable and "productive" new strip-mines in the West is running into obstacles that many observers now believe will sharply reduce the speed and scope of one of the most potentially sweeping industrial migrations in the rural West.

West, which depends on irrigation. The "snags" is to replace natural gas from wells, the fuel that is expected to be in the most critical depletion by 1985. But critics of imposing a new coal gasification industry upon the West contend that it could more rationally be located in the East, where water is abundant. Moreover, the fact that sulphur is removed from coal in its conversion to gas

Eastern, high-sulphur coal, which might otherwise have to be left in the ground. Against these arguments stands the large stake in Western coal of the mining and coal processing industries. They are now heavily controlled in the West by major petroleum corporations, which forehandedly took on as subsidiaries during the 1920's many of the largest coal mining companies.

Britain's prime minister fights to head off crisis

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson today fought to head off a government crisis over Britain's Common Market referendum.

British newspapers said Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan had threatened to quit or fire six cabinet ministers who are campaigning to pull Britain out of the European community.

Wilson has ordered a referendum — the first in British history — in June to decide on the first in Common Market membership. Former Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath led Britain into the European community in January, 1973, but Wilson claimed the entry terms were unfair.

Last Tuesday, after two difficult sessions totaling seven hours, Wilson's ruling Labor party cabinet agreed to back a new package for Britain's continued membership and called for a "yes" vote in the referendum on a tie vote.

In a bid to take the heat out of the disagreement, Wilson said the anti-Market cabinet ministers would be free to campaign for a "No" vote in the referendum. But instead of taking the heat out of the dispute, his decision appeared to have added fuel to it.

The Observer newspaper said Wilson threatened to quit at a cabinet meeting Tuesday and the Times of London said he has "hinted at resignation" by both Callaghan and himself if the rumpus continues to boil.

GOP nomination still open field

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gerald Ford did not gain the presidency through the normal electoral process. Some Republicans say he will have to go through that experience and earn his party's nomination before running for another term.

The Washington Post reported today Ford will organize a campaign committee outside the White House by July 1 for fund-raising purposes and to head off a possible challenge within the conservative camp.

In an interview with the Washington Star, Baker explained: "I think it is unmistakably clear that this presidency is to be distinguished from one in which the President comes to the White House fresh from the field of battle with a mandate from the country."

Earlier this month, 28 conservative leaders held a strategy meeting. Afterward, Sen James Buckley, R-N.Y., announced the group expects the 1976 convention to be "wide open," that no candidate, including Ford, has a lock on the presidential nomination.

Haldeman eyes tape decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former White House chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, says Richard Nixon once considered destroying the presidential tapes as the Watergate crisis developed. Haldeman said he mistakenly advised against it.

Other White House tapes, he said, will show Nixon as "the great, strong, incisive and decisive leader that he was 90 per cent of the time."

Haldeman made the statements during two days of interviews with Mike Wallace of CBS News. The first portion of the interview, for which CBS paid $25,000, was televised Sunday night. The second half will be broadcast next Sunday.

Haldeman offered few details about the possible destruction of the tapes. He said Nixon raised the possibility once and neither ordered the taping system halted nor the tapes destroyed.

"The President raised the question, '...shouldn't I be done?' and I advised no," Haldeman said.

Wallace asked whether that was a mistake.

"Yes, sir," Haldeman replied.

"But at the time I — it was a very honest opinion," he said. "I thought it was a good idea to keep them for the historical value. And beyond that, because — at that time Watergate was developing, I thought they would be valuable to the President in knowing what had actually been said at various meetings in his office."

"And I never stupidly — didn't really think the thing through to the point of realizing that, nor did I think through the enormous damage that would be done to me and to Richard Nixon and to all the other participants..."

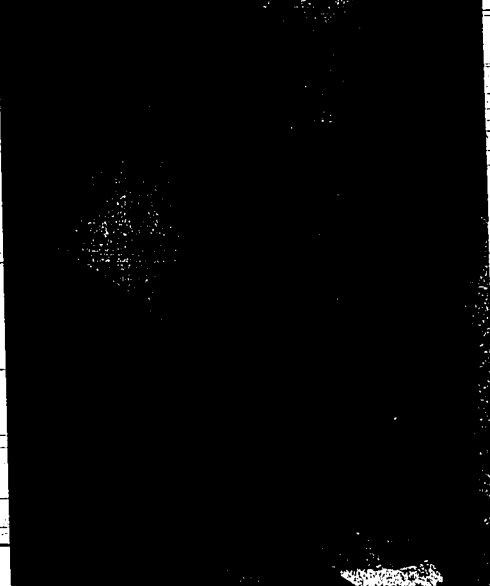

The tapes were not destroyed. They eventually played a large part in driving Nixon from office and convicting Haldeman in the Watergate cover-up trial.

Haldeman denied the Nixon White House was guilty of "irreversible" power, "a disaster that he and Nixon were cruel — 'I'd use the word tough' — and said the entire Watergate scandal had been characterized with "verbal excess."

Haldeman said the spying of former White House aide Anthony Ulasevich "was a purely political activity that in retrospect I don't think anybody is really proud of."

The White House "plumbers" break-in at the office of FBI tagon Papers defendant Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, he said, "totally inexplicable to me."

Haldeman, whose association with Nixon goes back to the early 1950s, said the former President was "probably one of the least understood, most complex, most confusing men who has ever sat in the White House."

Kissinger returns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on his arrival at the White House Sunday, Kissinger flew home from the abortive peace mission to the Middle East.

Questions and answers given on talk efforts

By United Press International

Questions — and — answers following the breakdown of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's efforts to bring about a new agreement between Egypt and Israel:

Q. What was Kissinger looking for?

A. Kissinger was seeking a second stage agreement between Egypt and Israel for a further Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai desert which Israel occupied in the 1967 war.

Q. What is a second stage agreement?

A. After the last Middle East war in October, 1973, Kissinger's first shuttle mission between Egypt and Israel resulted in a troop disengagement under which Israeli troops pulled out of their bridgehead on the west bank of the Suez Canal. Lines were drawn on the east bank with a United Nations Emergency Force in a zone between the two armies. That was in January, 1974. Later, Kissinger negotiated a similar troop disengagement agreement between Israel and Syria in the Golan Heights.

Q. What did Egypt want in the time?

A. Egypt wanted to get Israeli withdrawal from two strategic passes further east in the Sinai desert, the Gidi and Mitla passes, although it was content that the UNEF occupy them. Egypt also wanted return of the Abu Rodels oil fields further south.

Q. What did Israel want?

A. Israel wanted an Egyptian pledge of nonbelligerency, which would have ended the state of war that has existed since the establishment of oilfields which President Anwar Sadat had said repeatedly was the goal of the negotiations. Israel was unwilling to give up more than half the passes leaving the United Nations in the other half in return for the lesser pledges and the UNEF force. While it did offer to let Egypt have the oilfields, Israel would have continued to hold all the surrounding territory thus controlling access.

Neither country was willing to give in, so the talks broke down Saturday night when Israeli leaders gave Kissinger their final word. They actually appear to have made the decision Friday but asked for another 24 hours then to think it over.

Somber Henry home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger failed to bring the end of his Middle East peace mission and possibly the end of his step-by-step method of diplomacy. American officials said the secretary could not get a new agreement between Egypt and Israel, that the danger of war in the Middle East this year has increased, and that U.S. influence in the Arab world suffered a major setback.

On previous trips he had returned sometimes without result, sometimes with diplomatic triumphs such as President Nixon's trip to China, withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam, and the Middle East. But the hostility between Israel and the Arabs that has built up since 1948 and the religious hatreds that has festered for centuries was too much.

President Ford stood hands behind his back on the South Lawn of the White House Sunday as the helicopter brought Kissinger back from his 44th-49th, 18,000-mile including four shuttles between Jerusalem and Aswan — that began March 5.

They shook hands, exchanging smiles of reassurance. A moment later, then Ford led Kissinger before the television lights. Both were somber and Kissinger appeared all talked out.

"The necessities that produced the mission continue and the need for a lasting peace remains," he said.

Ford took Kissinger to the White House living quarters where they talked for an hour and 40 minutes. Today the secretary briefs the congressional leadership at the White House.

Ford and Kissinger both said talks were only suspended, that the United States would continue in its searching. It could not achieve Middle East peace, Egypt said Kissinger's diplomatic methods were dead.

American officials did not expect any more shuttle diplomacy by Kissinger. This was his last trip.

Easter grass could burn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission says some artificial grass used to line the insides of Easter egg and candy baskets may be highly inflammable.

Some materials used for artificial grass, it said Sunday, can catch fire easily.

The problem involves grass made out of shredded cellophane or wax polypropylene. Although most manufacturers now use polypropylene, a plastic that burns less quickly, the consumer has no way of knowing for sure which type he has.

'Minimum fees' eyed by court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major case involving the minimum fee schedules charged by doctors and lawyers will be argued in the Supreme Court Tuesday.

In many states, professional organizations of lawyers, doctors, dentists and other "learned professions" set minimum fee schedules. Members may risk disciplinary action if they charge less. Consumer organizations call it price fixing.

The Group Legal Institute of California told a Senate subcommittee that because of an absence of competition, lawyers overcharge their clients about $1.5 billion a year.

The case before the court was started by Lewis Goldfarb, a Federal Trade Commission lawyer, who with his wife Ruth bought a $54,000 house in suburban Reston, Va.

A title search is required to purchase a house and the ethical standards of the Virginia Bar Association that restrict this research to lawyers.

Goldfarb, with 20 attorneys, filed a set fee for title searches and similar services. They paid a lawyer $67.50 for title insurance, a deed of trust and other papers. The charges matched the minimum fee schedules issued in 1969 by the Fairfax County Bar Association.

The Goldfarbs sued, on Feb. 22, 1973, telling the U.S. District Court in Alexandria that this uniformly violated federal antitrust laws.

Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. ruled for the Goldfarbs, saying fee schedules prevent lawyers from determining the value of their own services and give the public no idea of whether they are reasonable.

The Court of Appeals reversed Bryan's findings.

Ask Dr. Thosteson:
I went to an ophthalmologist because I have been seeing black spots. He called them "floaters." He said that they were not serious, and he said there was no cataract of glaucoma. Can you give me some information about "floaters"? — A.R.
Nearly everyone has had one or more floaters at one time or another. They are more prevalent in older folks, but they can occur in any age group.

Vitreous floaters — which is the full name — are flecks of tissue, often displaced blood cells, that flake away from the inner surface of the eyeball into the fluid — filled cavity behind the lens. When this happens, they cast a shadow against the retina, producing the impression of speckling spots.

In extreme situations, such as a severe blow to the head, a flurry of floaters can resemble the miniature snowflakes produced in one of those little glass ball ornaments. The flecks disappear quickly and the snowstorm ends. It's the same with floaters.

Although usually harmless, floaters should be reported to the eye doctor, which I'm pleased to see you have done. They can be symptoms of certain eye diseases, especially if they recur with frequency.

Floaters are most prominent when the eye returns to a subdued gaze. Sometimes they will appear as bits of thin thread. I had one of these for years, but I can't seem to make it perform for the anymore. It must have disappeared.

Ask Dr. Thosteson:
I am 43 years old and a worrier. I had pneumonia when I was a year old, and again when I was 7. Ever since then I have dreaded the disease.

Recently I was told that after you have had pneumonia twice, your body develops immunity to the disease. I would like to know if this is medically proven. — R.M.

It might be partially true. Some immunity does result from the antibody formation in the body upon invasion by the pneumonia germ. But how much and how long this persists, I just can't tell you.

And this immunity would only hold for that specific germ. There are several others that can cause pneumonia, so it's possible to have the disease time and time again, each time involving a different organism.

Your misconception may arise from the erroneous notion that if both lungs are affected, one cannot contract it again. This, of course, is patently untrue.

TF home economist tells plans

TWIN FALLS — Celia Black, new home demonstration agent for the extension service in Twin Falls County, has announced plans for 4-H and home demonstration club programs.

She said one of the coming events will be a leaders training program on the metric system. Leaders meet to gather information which they can return to their clubs.

Because Twin Falls County is without a 4-H agent, Miss Black said she will be working closely with the youth clubs in getting summer projects started.

She joined the Twin Falls County agent's office March 10, having graduated in December the University of Idaho. Miss Black is a native of

Playtime exercise

Filer play school will start April 1

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News writer
FILER — The Filer annual play school will begin April 1st and continue through May 16 at the Filer High School.

Parents of children ages 3 1/2 through 5 years are invited to bring their children to attend the school which is sponsored by the advanced home economics classes. There is no charge for the sessions.

The purpose of the program is to give practical experience of handling children to the high school students in the classes and also serve as a community service project.

During the semester, the high school students have studied child psychology, the handling of common behavioral problems, and have had a short course on children's literature and music. They also have completed a short course in prenatal care and the development of the fetus which was presented by Eugenia Whitley, public health nurse.

The play school is a type of pre-kindergarten class. The children attending will be instructed in pencil play, art and science projects, group games, co-ordinated exercises and nutrition, all supervised by the child development students. The play school has been held for several years and has met with great success, according to Mrs. Arlene Sommers, home economics teacher. This year she has 21 girls and 10 boys in her class. The group has worked at building and refurbishing a small play-house, furniture, slide, seesaw and other play articles.

Two members of Filer's Teachers Corps program, Patti Whitehead and Barbara Bartlett, spent one afternoon demonstrating co-ordination exercises to the students and explaining the importance of developing better motor skills.

The exercises, designed to build better coordination for pre-school children, are also used by the corps members in the first grade of the elementary school. The motor perception program was developed after it was found that the better coordination a child has, the better student he will become. By training the pre-school child, he will be more ready for school by the time he is ready to enter first grade.

Eye floaters discussed

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Ask Dr. Thosteson: Is there some way to prepare beans to avoid the gas problem they cause? — H.G.

Add a bit of baking soda to the water in which they are boiled.

Ask Dr. Thosteson: Please write something about cerebral ischemia. Can it be cured or checked, and how does a 77-year-old patient go about his business having it? I mean as to diet and exercise. — J.U.

Cerebral ischemia means there is inadequate blood oxygen reaching the brain. It implies an arterial hardening, is usually associated with aging. At 77, it would be surprising if you did not have some degree of this.

Yet, it is a diagnosis too lightly made, often ignoring other possible causes. Anemia and low thyroid activity are possibilities and they should be looked into because they are correctible.

And, in true cases of cerebral ischemia one cannot do very much to alter the toll time exacts from the arteries. There is no special diet to change the picture at your age. Your letter is written in a fine, strong hand, which indicates you are a vigorous 77.

Keep up any exercise that doesn't overtire you. Walking is best, and it will perk up your circulation. It is important, too, for you to remain mentally active — read, play cards, etc. "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of Dr. Thosteson's newly revised booklet, expelling what sinus trouble really is and what can be done about it.

For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P. O. Box 3999, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Major provisions of tax cut bills outlined

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Major provisions of the tax cut bills:

Rebates
Senate cut: $9.7 billion. Action: 12 per cent rebate of 1974 taxes; maximum $240, minimum either $120 or the tax actually paid if less than $120. Husband and wife filing separately each get half the rebate. Over $20,000 income, maximum rebate phases down until none making over $30,000 adjusted gross income get only $120. Who is helped: all taxpayers.
House bill: 10 per cent, $200 maximum, $100 minimum, same phase-down.
Personal Exemption
Senate cut: $1.1 billion. Action: allow taxpayers to subtract $200 directly from tax bills instead of each $750 personal exemption deduction. Who is helped: Couples generally making less than $20,000 and single persons making less than $10,000, because the tax credit is worth more at lower tax brackets than the exemption, which is merely deducted from taxable income instead of directly from taxes.

House bill: $5.1 billion cut by raising the standard deduction. Both could be accepted in conference.
Rate Reduction
Senate cut: $2.3 billion. Action: Lower tax rates on first four income brackets (to $4,000). Who is helped: everyone because this would lower tax bills. Taxpayers with over $4,000 taxable income would get a $40 tax cut.

House bill: no similar provision. Stands a good chance in conference.
Ways Bonus
Senate cut: $1.5 billion. Action: A direct government payment, regardless of whether taxes are paid, of 10 per cent of earned income up to a maximum $400 payment at 40 per cent income. Maximum payment, gradually phased out, between $4,000 and $8,000 income. Who is helped: Only working poor families with children.
House bill: A similar 5 per cent credit, but going to all working poor regardless of whether they have children.
Home Purchase Credit
Senate cut: $1 billion. Action: A 5 per cent tax credit up to $2,000, on the purchase price of a newly constructed home bought between March 13 and Dec. 31 this year. Who is helped: new home buyers.

House bill: no provision. Outlook in final bill is questionable.
Social Security Payment
Senate cut: $3.4 billion. Action: A one-time $100 payment to every recipient of Social Security, Railroad Retirement or Supplemental Security income the federal welfare program for the disabled, blind and elderly. Who is helped: 33 million recipients.
House bill: no provision. Outlook in final bill is questionable.

Ailing admiral, daughter united

ORANGE PARK, Fla. (UPI) — Retired and ailing Rear Adm. Jackson Tate was united in scenery Sunday with the daughter he had never seen. Tate, 77, and his daughter Victoria Fyodorova, 29, reportedly met at the home of a family friend. A spokesman for the family said they might stay in seclusion as long as three weeks.

"They are first taking some time to get to know each other," said Ron Gillam, a family spokesman. The arrangement was a last-minute change of plans so father and daughter could get acquainted privately, Gillam said. Original plans called for Miss Fyodorova to arrive Sunday night, followed by a press reception. Jacksonville television station WJXT quoted Tate's son, retired Navy Capt. Hugh Tate, as saying his father was "shocked to death" over the reunion and Victoria was "very, very happy."
According to the younger Tate, Jack Cummings, an old Navy friend of his father's who is now with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, was also with them. He speculated this was to discuss the possibility of Victoria's recasting an American movie part, or a possible plan to make Tate's wartime romance and reunion 29 years later into a movie.

Safeguards slow shale use

DENVER (UPI) — A spokesman for the leaseholder of more than 5,000 acres of northwest Colorado land for oil shale development says inflexible environmental rules are deterring the project's goals.
"We don't need to diminish our environmental effort," said Dr. Richard Schwendinger, staff ecologist for the Rio-Alamos-Oil-Shale Project. "But we could be doing a more meaningful job for the effort and money expended."
He said Rio-Alamos was imprisoned by the volume of data it is collecting and. "We don't know what the data means."
Schwendinger referred to the monitoring of existing air, water, soil, wildlife, plant and other studies on the Colorado oil shale tract where Rio-Alamos is evaluating a proposed 50,000-barrel-per-day shale-oil plant.

He said he favored archeological examinations for roads, pipeline routes, drilling pads and other sizable areas.
"We are learning we don't need all the detail we are required to do," Schwendinger said. "We are, in effect, prohibited from taking advantage of what we learn."
Rio Alamos is a consortium formed by the Gulf Oil Corp. and Standard Oil of Indiana to develop the Colorado tract. The firms bid $210 million for 20-year rights to mine oil shale.

US crude refining capacity increases

TULSA (UPI) — United States crude oil refining capacity reached 14.8 million barrels per day as of Jan. 1, a 4.4 per cent increase over the previous year's figure, the Oil and Gas Journal reported in Monday's issue.
The weekly trade magazine said small refiners accounted for 75 per cent of the 629,000 barrel per day increase.
Smaller refiners increased their crude capacity 415 million barrels per day, while larger refiners—those with 200,000 barrels a day capacity or more—contributed a 214 million barrel a day increase, the Journal said in its manual refining survey.

The Journal said a major reason for the increase was federal allocation programs that forced refiners with larger than average supplies of domestic crude oil to share their production with refiners who relied primarily on high-priced foreign oil.
Another reason, the publication said, was the optimistic economic outlook for refining operations in the pre-recession days of 1973 and early 1974.
Shell, Amoco and Sobilco-BP recorded the biggest expansions among the larger refiners, adding about 50,000 barrels per day each. Mobil, with the shutdown of its east Chicago, Ind., refinery, and Exxon reported the only declines in crude capacity, the Journal said.
The number of small refineries included in the survey totaled 150, compared with 138 a year ago. Larger refineries numbered 129, compared with 110 a year ago.

United States plans to ship 40 musk oxen to Siberia

Dental office robbed

RUPERT — Burglars extracted $200 worth of gold from a Rupert dental office early Thursday morning.

Rupert city police said dentists Howard Toews and Gerald Woodworth reported a forced entry into their office, apparently in the early morning hours.

Burglars took the gold which was to be used for fillings — and $200 in cash.

Police said the investigation of the burglary is continuing.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The musk ox, an ugly but hardy beast that ranged as far south as Iowa during the Ice Age, has grown so plentiful in Alaska that the United States will ship 40 of them to the Siberia, where they are extinct.

With the help of Eskimos at Nunivak, about 40 musk oxen descended from a herd acquired from Greenland will be shipped to Siberia, one of their original homelands until climate changes and primitive hunters destroyed the stock in Asia.

The original Alaskan herd of the musk ox was hunted to extinction about the time of the Civil War. In the 1930s the United States brought 31 animals from Greenland and put them on Nunivak Island where the herd now numbers about 700. The Fish and Wildlife Service said the 40-year-old program of restoring the shaggy beast to Alaska has been so successful the population must be culled because the vegetation isn't adequate to support a large herd.

The oxen were once plentiful in Asia, and crossed to Alaska and Canada via land which once bridged the Bering Strait. A joint Soviet-U.S. scientific exchange agreement provides for the musk oxen to be shipped back to Russia. This time by airplane.

Although the Interior Department says the oxen are extinct in Asia, there is one, a female named Mathilda, safely housed in a China zoo; the gift of Richard M. Nixon after his visit to China in 1971.

Mathilda's mate, Milton, died last month but San Francisco mayor Joseph Altolfo has offered to replace him with a 10-month old full brother, named Bullwinkle, on behalf of the Council of Mayors.

Musk oxen feed on creeping or dwarf shrubs found on the desert-like wastes of the Arctic where snowfall is light and the wind keeps the ground bare.

The musk oxen number about 1,500 in Canada's mainland, perhaps 5,000 in Canada's arctic islands and about the same number in Greenland. There are also herds in Spitzbergen, Norway.

The Interior Department said Eskimos will share the animals with nets from speedy snow machines and sled them to the village of Mekoryuk where they will be penned for air transfer to Russia in Russian planes.

Man with saleable eye returns to work

KANE, Pa. (UPI) — A Pennsylvania man who offered to sell an eye for $5,000 so he could pay his bills and purchase a used mobile home returned to work Friday.

Donald S. Schlopy, 52, was among 22 furloughed workers called back to work by Affiliated Industries at its plant in the northwestern Pennsylvania community.

Schlopy became despondent when he was laid off last week and placed an ad in an Erie newspaper offering to sell his eye for $5,000 or "the best offer."

He said he was $4,000 in debt, had nothing of value left to sell, and that his wife abandoned him and three teen-age children four years ago.

The ad attracted wide attention. He has received several hundred pieces of mail. Some of the mail contained money, some contained offers to take care of his children and some contained job offers. Practically all urged Schlopy not to sell his eye.

A Colorado woman who asked to remain anonymous sent Schlopy a check for $3,000.

"I'm sending this money so you don't have to sell your eye. They are your most precious possessions," she wrote.

Schlopy at the recommendation of an Erie, Pa., reporter placed $4,800 in cash and checks and a stack of unopened mail three inches high in a vault at a bank here until he obtains legal advice.

Schlopy said he would sell one of his eyes if a concrete offer was made. He said he had received two possible offers one from Fresno, Calif., and one from East Liverpool, Ohio.

He said he has lost a lot of sleep because of the newspaper ad but he is not sorry he did it.

Gem jobless aided

BOISE — A public service job program is aiding in alleviating unemployment in Idaho, according to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Andrus met with local Idaho authorities during January and February to explain the program known as Title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

He urged local authorities to cooperate fully in the project.

"Reports we are now receiving show that the program is achieving results," Andrus said. "In many communities these public service jobs are a source of income for families that otherwise would be hard pressed to keep food on the table."

The governor said an additional $2.6 billion has been made available nationally for the program, assuring its continuation.

County-by-county reports are being submitted as of March 14 and Andrus said they are being updated continually.

In Twin Falls County, Andrus said $3,888 has been allocated for the program.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's diplomatic failure in the Middle East touched off a selling spree on the stock market Monday, sending prices plunging broadly in moderately active trading in the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off 15.88 to 747.18 shortly before noon EDT. It had been down more than 20 points in the first half-hour, one of the sharpest setbacks in its history in that period.

Turnover during the first two hours amounted to around 10,500,000 shares, compared with 9,200,000 traded during the same period Friday.

Analysts, noting the market already was in a four-session slump, said Kissinger's failure was bringing peace to the Middle East and the growing crisis in Indochina touched off considerable selling and profit taking.

Wall Street fears another oil boycott should war erupt in the Persian Gulf.

Further disquiet an economy that is just now showing signs it might have reached the bottom of a severe recession.

Oil, chemical, and coal and related issues were among the heaviest traded during the international news.

Prices: time to fall in love?

Although prices vary among stores and geographic areas, the declines have been most pronounced in beef, fruits and vegetables that are in ample supply now.

For consumers, the trend in beef prices may be somewhat obscured by sales specialists with change from day to day.

There is little confusion about such staples as potatoes, which sold here at 58 cents for five pounds last week, compared with $1.07 one year ago.

The potato farmers' market, equally to the consumer's benefit. Watching the recession spread, many growers were led to believe economy-minded consumers would substitute more potatoes for meat, so they planted more.

But Americans are consuming beef today at the same rate they did last year — 116 pounds per capita at an annual rate and with prices down are now likely to continue.

Another reason for the potato glut today is that consumers are buying less of the expensive chip, instead mashing frozen french fries and products.

The stunning five-fold rise in sugar prices last year added to the cost of a multitude of foods processed with the sweetener, ranging from baked goods to soft drinks.

Many chains have been featuring concentrated frozen orange and grapefruit juice in their special offers.

Another factor that has tended to stabilize or reduce food prices recently is the change in consumer buying patterns. Whole milk prices have been steady because people are buying more powdered or condensed milk, which cost less.

For years, cattle have been fed on large amounts of corn and soybeans, which add fat to consumers paid for at the same rate as meat.

That a strong argument can be made that beef prices today are lower than they appear to be, because there is less fat in the meat.

The potato farmers' market, equally to the consumer's benefit. Watching the recession spread, many growers were led to believe economy-minded consumers would substitute more potatoes for meat, so they planted more.

Chain stores also report a sharp increase in sales of flour and a decline in purchases of frozen cakes, cookies and the like.

The decline in many kinds of clothing has been more dramatic than food. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that clothing prices fell 2 percent from last December to January.

Significantly, the Bureau of Labor Statistics' annual survey does not include discount clothing prices in their indexes. Nor do they bother to survey drug appliance or other discount stores.

Proxmire opposes 'redlining' by banks

(c) NEWHOUSE News Service
WASHINGTON — Big-city banks should tell the public whether they are issuing mortgages in their own neighborhoods or mainly in the suburbs, Sen. William Proxmire D-Wisc. said Friday as he began new efforts to curb "redlining."

Proxmire, new chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, said housing activists believe that by issuing little or no mortgage money in some other neighborhoods metropolitan banks contribute to urban blight.

Their practices discourage inner home ownership and allow real estate speculators to move in, which "really makes the neighborhood decline," Proxmire said.

"To try to combat this so-called redlining, Proxmire Friday introduced a bill to require lending institutions to maintain locally a public list of the numbers and dollar amounts of mortgage loans compiled by zip code.

Proxmire's committee also plans to hear hearing into redlining.

Some banks receive much of their money from the community who live in the small surveys, Proxmire said.

Then there's the pervasive matter of emotion. A person who owns a stock that is going up is automatically elated and a person who owns a stock that is going down is automatically depressed.

The elder Proxmire tends to the long-term approach to the stock market. His son likes short-term trading and even figures himself as adept in the dying art of tape reading.

Earth turned at Jerome building site

Jerome dealer breaks ground

JEROME — Construction began Wednesday in Jerome on a $450,000 sales and service building for Jerome Improvement Co.

A formal groundbreaking ceremony was held with H. C. Bentzinger, turning the first shovel of dirt for the new building. Also attending the ceremony was Mike and Larry Bentzinger, co-owners with H. C. Bentzinger. Also on hand was John Bonnett, contractor; Mike Pacer, manager of the Jerome Branch of First Federal Savings of Boise, and Joe Byrne and Mike Buhler of Bank of Idaho, Jerome branch. Wall Bentzinger said the new building will contain 3,400 square feet and will be sited south and west of the present location.

Access to the new sales and service area will be from West H Street to provide adequate parking and safety for customers. The present building faces South Lincoln and backing onto the highway is a hazard, according to Bentzinger. He noted that the present building would be torn down after the new structure is completed.

Contractor for the Butler steel building is Briggs Bonnett Builders, Twin Falls. Completion of the new building is scheduled for early November.

Beet sugar buy backed

NEW YORK (UPI) — A leading marketer of cane sugar Thursday told its customers they probably will do better to buy beet sugar than cane sugar under present market conditions.

Sucrest, Inc., informed customers that it could not meet the prices and terms at which beet sugar is currently being offered.

"Obviously we cannot buy raw cane sugar at 30 cents a pound and sell refined sugar at 31 cents," Sucrest said.

The company said an increase in the due of payment from the traditional 10 days to 15 days as put in effect by some sugar beet companies requires a significant increase in cash requirements. Sucrest also said it is obvious that raw cane sugar bought at a firm price cannot be guaranteed against a price decline.

Therefore, Sucrest said it will not try to meet the new terms and pricing policies announced by the beet sugar processor.

Sucrest said its New York, Boston and Chicago refineries will continue to operate to the degree possible under the competition of the new beet sugar marketing policies.

Repellent, sauce may save sheep

RED BUTTES, Wyo. (UPI)

— A University of Wyoming biologist is trying to curb the coyote's taste for mutton by spraying sheep with a commercial dog repellent and a concentrated form of hot sauce.

"It's like the principle ingredient in Tabasco sauce, only 1,000 times hotter," said Robert McCulloch, a UW biochemist. "The first time a coyote tries to kill sheep, it will turn him off and maybe he'll find something else to eat."

McCulloch's best customer is Hank Harlow, a UW biologist seeking ways to make coyotes stop eating sheep. Since the Environmental Protection Agency banned the use of poisons, shepherds have clamored for more effective ways to reduce the coyote population, which they say is steadily increasing.

Harlow discovered the hot sauce alone only kept the coyotes away for about seven days. Then he experimented with a commercial dog repellent called "No-Chew," which has two offensive-smelling ingredients and tastes like something else to eat.

"The predator could then be expected to subject himself to repeated trials until the flavor and spoor of the sheep becomes aversive. Subsequently when foraging it would turn away before it sights sheep."

Critics said Garcia and Gustavson couldn't make such general statements from using only seven coyotes in their experiments. They also said using lamb meat could cause coyotes to avoid eating carion, one of the wild coyote's staples.

University of Colorado biologist Steve Bekoff says another weakness in the Gustavson Garcia experiment was the injection of coyotes with the lithium chloride. Bekoff said the injections make the proposed method of control impractical because of the difficulties of performing the operation in the field.

Discovery could reduce weeds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government scientists are on the track of a discovery that could greatly ease the nation's $3 billion a year weed problem.

The Agriculture Department officials said studies by Drs. Raymond B. Taylorson and Sterling B. Hendricks have identified several compounds that may be useful in inducing weed seeds to germinate at times when they can be easily wiped out by man or nature.

Weeds traditionally have been costly pests in agriculture, as well as for homeowners. Farmers and ranchers currently spend vast amounts of money applying weed-control chemicals to more than 100 million acres annually, about 50 per cent of the nation's harvest crop acreage.

These control efforts, widespread as they are, don't kill all the weeds. The total weed bill—including the cost of controls and the damage done by weeds that survive—is about $5 billion a year, a specialist said.

"The need for extensive controls could be reduced if scientists succeed in finding ways to reduce the vast quantity of weed seeds in the soil. The trick is to get all the weed seeds to germinate at the same time. Then, sold weeder would zap them or a single application of a herbicide would finish them off," a report added.

Spokesmen said Taylorson and Hendricks, experimenting with several compounds previously shown capable of waking weeds from dormancy, have found how the process works. The test compounds inactivate a seed chemical, catalase — that maintains dormancy.

"The discovery of the basic mechanism by which the test compound works to stimulate germination gives promise for field use of this principle," Taylorson said.

Experiments so far have involved artificially stimulated germination of dormant pigweed and lettuce seeds. Yet, more studies are needed to determine if the process works as well in other types of plants, officials said. Taylorson added, however, that there has already been "some corroborative evidence" that the new studies may be leading to a practical improvement in weed controls.

Camp jobs open

BURLEY — Three camp staff-position openings at the Milner Youth Conservation Camp have been announced by the Burley district of the Bureau of Land Management.

Applications must be picked up at state employment offices located in Burley, Gooding, Twin Falls and Jerome before Friday and submitted to the Burley BLM office before 5 p.m. April 9.

The positions are for three group leaders and one work coordinator who will work for a 9-10 week period this summer. The camp opens June 1 and will have 20 enrollees between 15-18 years of age.

According to a news release by the BLM, wages will be "approximately the equivalent of the average high school teacher's salary."

The emphasis of the camp will be "environmental education, work projects, and coordinating jobs with the Bicentennial Commission on the Milner segment of the Oregon Trail," according to the release.

Interested persons over 18 years of age should submit a short resume and a completed Standard Government Form 171 to the district manager, Burley District office, Bureau of Land Management, Rt. 3, Box 1, Burley, Idaho 83402.

Church asks review

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, has joined other Western senators in urging the Ford Administration to meet with affected groups and review federal policy on control of predatory animals.

Current policy prohibits the use of chemical taxicants to control predatory animals on public lands.

"It is only fair," Church said, "that any review of this policy include the views of those groups most directly affected by any change in the regulations."

Church and the other senators said in a letter to the President that the great concern in their states is over increasing losses of livestock and wildlife to coyotes and the resulting economic hardships caused to livestock producers.

The senators said alternative methods in many areas have not been found to replace the toxic means of controlling predators.

They also stressed that ample protection against the misuse of chemicals is now provided by the Federal Environmental Pesticide Control Act of 1972, which was enacted after approval of the pesticide ban.

Multinational team wins Sebring endurance classic

SEBRING, Fla. (UPI) — "The last lap was agony." That was Brian Redman's confession in the flush of victory. The personable Englishman, a German, an Australian and an American had just successfully completed a joint mission: win the 12 Hours of Sebring endurance race for BMW. Four times denied victory in this racing classic, Redman asked his teammates to let him drive the final leg. It appeared the team from Munich had the race won with a 20-mile lead, but Redman remembered his disappointment of three years ago. Driving a factory Ferrari with Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni in the 1972 race, Redman had a 25-mile lead with just 10 miles to go. The Ferrari caught fire. "Would it be a replay Saturday night?" Redman said. "I tried not to think what could happen." Redman said. "It's harder when you're not under pressure. I imagined every possible thing that could happen to the car. Every noise made me feel something could be going wrong. The last lap was agony." But nothing did. The sprightly BMW that never spluttered in a 1,200-mile trip around this old bomber base got the checkered flag a good 20 miles ahead of four Porsche Carreras, which never really presented a threat. He set a Sebring speed record, averaging 102.64 m.p.h. "I couldn't believe I was finally going to win." Redman said. "I requested to finish the race. I felt it was my car. I had prepared it and worked on it and I had driven 6 1/2 hours out of the first eight hours." Team Manager Joachim Neerpasch had sent a sister BMW driver by German Hans Stuck and Californian Sam Posey out as a "rabbit," hoping the other cars would burn up trying to keep up. It worked. John Greenwood's quick white Corvette, which had challenged the pole-sitting BMW for the lead early in the race, went out halfway through with a fuel transmission. The BMW team got another break when defending champion Peter Gregg, the Porsche Carrera ace from Jacksonville, Fla., bumped into another car on a turn and broke a shaft. The stage was set for an unusual four-driver attack when the Stuck-Posey car developed an oil leak and his engine blew. "Australasian Allen Moffat, who had been driving with Redman, knew Stuck could handle the BMW better than he could. "I had to relinquish it to Hans and I was very happy to," said Moffat, winner of four races in the Far East in the past three months. "In the '60s' stages of the race, Hans had the wheel." There was no objection when Redman asked for the honor of taking the flag. "This is the most closely-knit team I've ever worked with," said Californian Sam Posey, Stuck's partner. "It's fabulous." "It's one of the few times this kind of thing has ever happened," said Moffat. Finishing four laps behind the BMW on the 5.2-mile Sebring track was a Carrera driven by George Dyer of Jacksonville, Fla., and Jacques Bilenweck of Baptiste, Quebec, Canada. Then came Carreras driven by John Graves of Miami, John O'Steen of Florissant, Mo., and Dave Helmick of Miami, another piloted by the Mexican team of Michel Jourdain and Gustavo Botanos, and a fourth shared by the Illinois team of G. W. Dickson and Bill Webb.

Gay Style wins handicap

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Jockey Bill Shoemaker combined his talents with those of Gay Style Sunday to score a neck victory in the $50,000 Santa Barbara Handicap for fillies and mares on the turf at Santa Anita. Gay Style, a Kentucky-bred mare who started her racing in Europe, scored her second American stakes win with the Santa Barbara victory, but had to catch Move Ahead in the final strides to gain first money. La Zanzara was third and Mercy Dee finished fourth in the field of six. Despite a soft turf, Gay Style raced the 1/16 miles in the good time of 2:01.25. Installed the 65 favorite by the crowd of nearly 45,000, Gay Style returned $4.40, $3.60 and $2.40. Move Ahead paid $7.20 and $2.80 and La Zanzara paid $2.80. For Shoemaker, who sets a record with every victory, it was his 6,008th career win, his 61st stakes victory and 12th at the meeting. The win also tied him for the lead in the jockey race with the injured Laffit Pincay Jr. at 76. Move Ahead attempted to

NCAA semifinals due Saturday

By JACK SAUNDERS
UPI Sports Writer
A "great" basketball team will test a "loved" squad and the "intangible" meets "an extremely strong team" Saturday in the NCAA Championship semifinals at San Diego. Kentucky, self-styled by Coach Joe Hall as having "played a great basketball game" while Indiana played a good basketball game, "best top-ranked and previously undefeated Indiana 92-90 Saturday in the Midwest Regionals at Dayton, Ohio. The fourth-ranked Wildcats held off a furious comeback attempt by the Hoosiers to end Indiana's 34-game winning streak. Trailing 89-81 with 1:42 remaining, Indiana pulled to within 92-90 with 14 seconds left. But after Kentucky's Jimmy Dan Conner missed a free throw with one second on the clock, the Hoosiers' Kent Benson, who grabbed the rebound, missed a desperation court-long shot. Mike Flynn led a balanced Kentucky attack with 21 points, while Conner and Kevin Grevey added 17 apiece and Mike Phillips and Rick Robey chipped in 10 each. Benson was the game's high scorer with 33 points and Steve Green added 21 for Indiana. The game was not played peacefully. Early in the second half, a fist fight nearly broke out over a foul for a rebound and a battle almost erupted over Indiana's fouling of Conner with one second left. "I could tell we were going to win," said Hall. "Our strategy was to go for that early shot and get it before Indiana set and their good half-court 'pressure sag' defense. "Indiana was good, but we were great." The physicalness of the Wildcats will now be tested against the luck of Syracuse, which took advantage of a fouled-up Kansas State team in overtime to post a 96-87 overtime victory in the East Regional at Providence, R.I. "Up there, somebody must love us because someone has given us another chance to win," said Syracuse Coach Roy Danforth after Rudy Hackett's basket at the buzzer enabled the Orangemen to send the game into overtime at 76-76. Kansas State member Jack Hartman complained that Hackett was walking before the shot, but his protest was to no avail and the foul-plagued Wildcats quickly returned to 31 points by Syracuse guards Jim Lee and Jim Williams. Syracuse had also been the beneficiary of favorable refereeing in its 78-76 upset win over North Carolina in the regional semifinals. Lee's jumper with three seconds left was the clinching basket, but the refs missed a foul by the Orange's Dave Parker against the Tar Heels' John Kuester, which would have given North Carolina a 96-95 lead. "But no foul was called and later the ref apologized to Kuester: 'I blew it.'" Danforth, with that lucky streak going for him, said before knowing his opponent would be Kentucky: "I don't care who we play in San Diego, whether it's the Celtics or the Lakers." UCL A, out at the West Regionals in Portland, Ore., had trouble getting past Montana in the regional semifinals and was extended to overtime in its first round game against Michigan a week earlier. But with Marques Johnson pouring in 35 points from inside and outside, the Bruins easily topped Arizona State, 89-75. That UCL A intangible, that you can't put your finger on—did it—said Arizona State Coach Ned Walk. "It is tournament experience. There is no substitute for it." The Bruins, seeking their 10th NCAA title in 12 years, broke the Sun Devils' full-court press, with Johnson hitting 20 points in the first half and Richard Washington contributing most of his 16 points at the beginning of the second half as UCLA took a 60-40 lead. UCLA McCarter's deft ballhandling broke the ASU comeback effort, triggered by Scott Lloyd's 20 points and Lionel Hollins' 16. John Wooden's men will now meet Louisville and Denny Crum's forces. Crum, a former player for and assistant to Wooden, and Louisville had a tough Maryland team to overcome at Las Cruces, N.M. in the Midwest Regionals, but Phillip Bond's 23 points enabled the Cardinals to take a 96-89 win over the Terps. "Sportswriters in the East and West kept saying we weren't this good," Crum said after the win. In 1972 Crum led Louisville to the national semifinals before losing, but this time around Crum thinks the result will be different. "We are a better team than we were, mainly because of our depth. Bond has given us one of the things we didn't have last year—quickness—at the guard. "When we are all healthy, we are an extremely strong team." Bond, the tourney's MVP, hit 60 per cent from the field in the first half as Louisville's balanced attack, with all five starters in double figures, stopped Maryland's fast break. Allen Murphy hit for 20, Wesley Cox 16, Junior Bridgeman 13 and Bill Burton 12. All-America guard—John Lucas hit for a game high 27 points, but the Terps were unable to counter the Cardinals' man-for-man defense. In the National Invitational Tournament in New York Sunday, Princeton's clawing defense allowed it to become the first Ivy-League team in the 38-year history of the tourney to win the championship, 80-69 over Providence. Never trailing in the contest, Princeton was led by Mickey Stewer's 26 points and Tim Van Blommestein's 23 heading the Tigers' patient offense.

Italian wins World Cup

ORTISEL, Italy (UPI) — Italy's Gustavo Thoeni had just won his fourth World Cup Championship in five years by outtracing the hottest young skier on the circuit but he wasn't happy with the way it happened. The event that won Thoeni his title Sunday was a parallel slalom, a series of heats between pairs of skiers down similar courses never before raced in World Cup competition. "There is too much tension involved," the 24-year-old Italian champion said. "Thoeni had been locked in a three-way tie for the title with 19-year-old Ingemar Stenmark and 20-year-old Hans Klammer, 20, of Austria going into Sunday's final event. Klammer, a downhill specialist who won eight of the nine World Cup downhill races this season, had dominated in the first round but Thoeni and Stenmark met head to head in the final round. Thoeni won when Stenmark over shot the last gate on the first heat. "I knew I had to win the first run against Thoeni because the red course I was on is a little bit faster. I just went too fast," Stenmark said.

Stenmark was under special pressure in the parallel slalom because he was the only Swede in the event. Thoeni had the advantage of meeting a team mate, Tino Pietrogiovanna, who abandoned to let him advance to the quarterfinals. Ingemar knew he had to win every race himself. Thoeni said he preferred the traditional alpine events in which skiers follow each other down the same course, racing against the clock. His first parallel slalom had done nothing to change his mind. He said, "It is good for the spectators but not so good for the skiers." The organizers of the finals said they were pleased with their take of about $130,000. Serge Lang, chairman of the International Ski Federation's World Cup Committee, said he considered it a success. "It's something you can watch without a clock," he said. "I think we should not only keep it for the finals next year but have another one during the season." Walter Friesch of Switzerland took third place in the event, followed by Fausto Radici of Italy in fourth and Greg Jones of Fresno City, Calif., in fifth. Thoeni added the 1975 championship to the victories he won in 1971, 1972 and 1973. The 1974 winner, Piero Gros, finished fourth this season behind Stenmark in second place and Klammer in third. Erik Haker of Norway was fifth.

Laver defeats Mexican

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Australian Rod Laver used his mastery and precision Sunday to bridge a 15-year gap between him and young Mexican Raul Ramirez to win the 20th Alltmaria Tennis Championship, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2. The third Alltmaria title, including 1961 and 1962 championships, and earned him $10,000 for the singles title. Ramirez, 21-year-old Davis Cup sensation, fought bravely, tying the first set 6-6, but was overwhelmed in the tie-break. Laver took command in the second and final set, breaking Ramirez' service twice. "My service was one of the big things," Laver said following the match played before 3,000 fans at the Alltmaria Tennis Club on a cloudy but warm afternoon. "I also had consistent volleys." Laver praised his opponent, citing him as "a good player with a great future." Ramirez admitted that the match was a tough one: "It was very hard for me," he said. "Laver is a great player." In the first set, Ramirez played well with his characteristic style of rushing the net and placing the ball well. He lack Laver's consistency, however, to back up his youthful flashes of brilliance. Laver's mastery and precision dominated the second set. Ramirez won the first game but Laver tied immediately and built up his lead, winning the next two games. Ramirez managed to win the fifth game, but from there on Laver was in complete control. NICE PLACES FOR RENT are offered to nice tourists with Warm Beds. To list vacancies call 723-0931

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 25-1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until shortly after noon, much of the confusion and muddled thinking of yesterday morning persists, so don't be misled by false, misleading conditions. Later you find you can analyze just what is occurring about you and make some worthwhile long-range plans for yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Improve health early and plow into work to get it behind you easily. A fellow worker could depress you if you permit. Be silent and all is okay.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plans for entertainment fall through during day, but something better turns up tonight. Improve appearance. Get bills paid, work done.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You find it difficult to clear up that situation at home in a.m., but later all works out just fine, so be patient.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may receive a letter that could be upsetting, but if you study it well, it can result in benefits for you. Use care in mailing.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be careful in money matters and you get along better. Consult with an expert or adviser later in the day, since the a.m. isn't good for such.

VIRO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The a.m. is apt to be depressive but later the gloom lifts and you can get much done, be happy. See persons who help you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Get boring-work done and then off to more pleasant activities that you enjoy. Help a good friend, but avoid strangers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 23) Don't ask advice or favors of friends in a.m., but do so later for good results. Enjoy social life in p.m. Dress beautifully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 24 to Dec. 21) Take care of full duties only so you do not get into trouble. Use your business dealing with others. Romantic in p.m.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You want to make some change, but wait for afternoon to be certain about decisions. Later in the day get ideas from wise person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be accurate when working on statements and reports or you could get into trouble. Use your business dealing with others. Romantic in p.m.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You don't understand exactly what an associate is driving at in a.m., so study it well tonight before agreeing. Don't make commitments early.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have rather strange ideas early in life about what is going on about him or her. You would be wise to straighten out the thinking early and give the proper religious training so that there will be greater clarity of vision. Stress the ethical side of life. Then the child becomes a potent one and your youngster would do well in humanitarian lines of endeavor. Sports are a natural here. The stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Woman claims prayer for large house comes true

By ELLEN AKERS
Winnemucca, Nev.

Three years ago my husband began working on a new job in Winnemucca, Nev.

Returning to our home in California from a weekend house-hunting trip in that area, I felt terribly discouraged. No money to buy a house, nothing available to rent.

I flopped into a chair in the dining room and gazed dazedly out the window. What now? I thought.

My mind began to churn. Wasn't God supposed to help God people? What did I really know about God anyway? Did He take children in Sunday school that God is love; that He cares. But was I really sure? Did He care about a home for my family and me? Did He really care? Now, was the time to find out. I got down on my knees. I poured out my frustrations and hopes that Monday morning in my dining room in California.

"Oh, Father, after so many years of tiny houses I would just love something bigger — at least a living room and four bedrooms. Our two boys could each have a bedroom and I could have a sewing room."

The more I thought about it, the more excited I became. My mind ran ahead of my words as I visualized the little things that would mean so much to me.

"A big yard and lots of trees. It would have to be terribly cheap — rent because we're so broke right now and I really don't care how old and beat-up it is — just an old barn would be fine."

All week I had such a feeling of anticipation and excitement — like a little girl with a big secret. I didn't know what would happen, but I could sure dream.

The following Monday morning I was sitting in the same old chair, and the thought occurred to me that quietly, inside myself, I could dedicate a part of this dream house to God. But what part?

"Father," I began a little sheepishly, "if there were five bedrooms, we could use that extra one for a foster child or anyone who needed a home. But You know that my husband has never been much for having people in our home for long periods of time, so You'll have to work it out with Him."

That afternoon the phone rang. It was my husband Ray calling from Winnemucca. We had talked about how nice it would be to have four bedrooms; but he knew nothing about my five-bedroom prayer. Let alone all the details.

He was quite excited and said, "Just listen to this. I was walking down the main street today and I saw a 'house for sale' sign in the window of Glenn's Camera Shop. I went in and asked about it. He said I probably wouldn't be interested because it was sort of an old barn. But I wanted to see it anyway, so we went up just to look. As soon as I saw it I knew you'd like it."

"And it has five bedrooms, right?" I quipped. "Yes, it does," he answered quickly, then hurried on to tell me more of the details of his find. "The living room is 30 feet long and there's a big yard; lots of trees; a large garage; laundry porch — all these bedrooms. It's not in awful good shape, but we can take care of that later."

I stood there trying to get things organized in my mind. Was this the house? No, waiting, no trials?

"But we have no money," I said. "Oh, that's all worked out," Ray rushed on. "Glenn is financing it for us at payments we can afford and my old truck will be the down payment. We can draw up the papers this afternoon and sign them in the morning — that is, if you don't mind buying the house without seeing it."

Then he added cautiously, "Honey, you know the fellow I've been staying with here? Would it be okay with you if he came and stayed with us for a while? We do have that extra bedroom."

The next morning, one day after I'd said the five-bedroom prayer, the house was in our name. A few weeks later I made a trip to Winnemucca to see the house. I pulled up in front of it and prepared to feast my eyes. It was just an old blue house with a lilac bush trying to leap over the fence, but it was beautiful to me. My heart went up in joy as I thanked God.

As we settled into our new house further blessings revealed themselves — a lot of things that could only have meaning for me: a playhouse for the kids; producing fruit trees; so that I could can; a wonderful nook in the kitchen; a cubbyhole in the entry hall that is just right for my petbelled stove.

When the extra bedroom was empty again; we arranged to keep three small foster children in our home. Tracy and Theresa were toy-headed, blue-eyed, 3-year-old twins. Veronica was their tiny sister.

God continues to work in our family now that we depend on Him. And I'm sure He has provided us this old blue house so we might do His work, too, sharing our love and our home with those He sends to us. For now I know He cares about His children. He really does, down to the last detail.

'Happy hooker' admits to marriage

TORONTO (UPI) — Xaviera Hollander, the onetime "happy hooker" in New York, confirmed Friday she is secretly married to 40-year-old Toronto antique dealer Frank Allen.

She said the ceremony took place in Toronto last October.

But the 31-year-old Dutchborn blonde denied that the marriage is aimed at helping her best government moves to deport her from Canada. "It's love, not for immigration reasons," she said. A deportation order has been issued against her on the grounds she is a self-confessed criminal through statements contained in her books. An appeal is expected to go before the Supreme Court of Canada in late June.

Miss Hollander said she met Allen in Toronto three years ago. The couple is living in a well-furnished apartment in the downtown area. She said it was Allen's first marriage. Had she been married before?

"No comment, to that," she laughed. "It's not important!"

Miss Hollander, who once won a "best secretary" award in Holland before moving to New York, said she hopes to continue a new-found career as a movie actress. She is taking weekly drama lessons.
