Geneva return looming

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Warning of the constant danger of Middle East war, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that his personal diplomacy failed, he will contact the Soviet Union to arrange resumption of peace talks in Geneva.

In his first news conference since returning from his 16-day mission to the Middle East, Kissinger said he was convinced he had failed in his efforts to isolate the issues and negotiate them one-by-one on a personal basis.

He added it was "extremely unlikely" this tactic of step-by-step negotiations could ever be tried again in the Middle East.

Thus, he said, the United States' efforts to achieve peace must move into a period of "more complicated international diplomacy" by reviving the Geneva peace conference.

"We are prepared to go to Geneva and will be in touch with the co-chairman of the conference, the Soviet Union, in the near future," he said.

Kissinger emphasized that the United States remains committed to achieving peace in the Middle East and is "fully committed to the survival of Israel."

But he added, in an apparent reference to both Israel and the countries of Southeast Asia, "The United States cannot abandon its friends in one part of the world without jeopardizing the security of friends everywhere."

Kissinger said the United States has not blamed either side for the deadlock in the Middle East talks and has no intention of "punishing" either side.

"There is always danger of a Middle East war as long as the parties have irreconcilable differences," Kissinger said, adding quickly that the United States "down not believe that a Middle East war is inevitable."

If there is another war, Kissinger said the United States "will be inevitably involved, at least indirectly."

He said the danger of war would increase if the Geneva peace conference could not achieve an Arab-Israeli peace agreement.

"The longer there is a stalemate, the greater the danger of war becomes," he added.

But he said the United States would attend the Geneva conference with the attitude that it will provide "an arena of constructive progress" that would not end in stalemate.

The Geneva conference, established to end a settlement of the Middle East conflict and co-chaired by Britain and the Soviet Union, has long been in recess while Kissinger pursued his personal peace negotiations.

In his prepared opening statement, Kissinger said he aims to avoid placing any blame for the breakdown in his most recent peace mission.

"A moment of potentially grave danger is not the time to indulge in recriminations," he said.

Although he made no reference in his statement to the assassination of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Kissinger had indicated previously that he believed Faisal's death had seriously increased tensions in the Middle East.

In what appeared to be a reference to the situation in Southeast Asia, Kissinger warned: "The United States cannot abandon its friends in one part of the world without jeopardizing the security of friends everywhere."

Defending the administration's request for more aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia, Kissinger later said the basic question is "whether the United States will deliberately 'destroy' an ally by withholding aid" at a time of crisis.

"When the United States withdrew its forces from Vietnam and won return of its prisoners, Kissinger said in response to a question, there was "no question that we would continue aid" so that the South Vietnamese could defend themselves from the communists.

He said the issue of continuing assistance to Indochinese allies boils down to "the elementary question of what kind of people we are."

Kissinger said there was "no question" but that events in Portugal, Greece, Turkey and Indochina had an effect on his Mideast negotiations.

"On the part of our friends, it raised the question of the durability of our assurances," he said. "Nonetheless, the major reason for the breakdown was intrinsic to the negotiations themselves."

Tax rebate bill veto less likely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is less likely to veto Congress' tax cut bill now that a House and Senate negotiators have decided to drop several costly amendments in the Senate version.

The President is encouraged by the conference committee's whittling off amounts of money, killing amendments and acting with a certain amount of speed.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen told reporters.

The negotiators agreed on several provisions in the tax measure Tuesday, including 1974 income tax rebates ranging between $100 and $200.

The panel hopes to complete action on the measure today but still face several key issues including the fate of oil company tax increases.

Aides said Ford was "pleased" that the negotiators deleted the amendments and the overall package is getting closer to the President's thinking.

Ford is "pleased that Congress is acting responsibly," an aide said.

The President has been keeping the heat on Congress and has passed the word that he would veto a bill heavily laden with amendments which could raise the forthcoming budget deficit over the $100 billion mark.

Ford sent a letter to House Speaker Carl Albert Tuesday itemizing the amendments he considered unacceptable. But aides said that that letter is "now out of date" in view of the committee action Tuesday.

Ford said that the purpose of his asking Congress to enact a simple tax cut "as quickly as possible" was to stimulate the economy.

The letter, which also went to Sen. Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, particularly attacked the Senate version of the tax bill which he said "goes far beyond the purpose of providing a quick stimulus and mortgages our economic future in a way that is unacceptable to me."

The House and Senate negotiators, after a slow start Monday, settled a number of issues Tuesday in moving toward a compromise between the House's $19.9 billion tax cut and the Senate's $31 billion cut.

But then the confusion got beyond down on the question of how much of the oil depletion allowance to leave for independent oil companies and how long they will continue to receive it.

today in brief

Reds threaten DaNang

DA NANG, South Vietnam (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu urged his troops today to counterattack but the Imperial capital of Hue fell to the North Vietnamese army and the United States began the Herculean task of evacuating one million refugees from threatened DaNang.

In an order of the day read over the national radio, Thieu said the Indochina War had reached a final, decisive phase and that the South Vietnamese army must seize the initiative and counterattack strongly. But already half of the country had fallen to the Communists.

U.S. officials said the first flight of refugees left DaNang today aboard a chartered 727 plane of World Airways for the comparative safety of Cam Ranh Bay, the abandoned U.S. base on the coast 180 miles to the south. U.S. officials said 375 persons jammed into the plane, which normally seats 100 persons, for the 30-minute flight.

The mood of the people in this overcrowded coastal city 400 miles north of Saigon is one of gloom and doom. More and more people see it as a lost city.

The Communist drive around DaNang was closing rapidly and the mounting panic in the city was causing real concern among both Vietnamese and American officials. Refugees poured into the city in a countless stream — no one really knows how many — and the city is bursting at the seams.

The city of Hue, where so many U.S. Marines died during the 1968 Tet offensive, was surrendered without a fight today. The 25,000 government troops withdrew by sea and North Vietnamese tanks rumbled into South Vietnam's third largest city without opposition. Communist gunners killed 14 persons in an attack on the airport, most of them civilians.

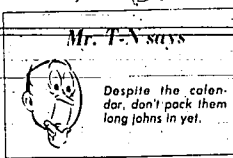

Most of the 300,000 residents had long since fled to DaNang, and the United States began the incredible task of flying out the million or so refugees or taking them out on barges formerly used to transport food, fuel and ammunition to Phnom Penh.

Those abandoned barges were under way today and expected at Da Nang by Friday with their three-tugs, also to be used in the evacuation.

The most spectacular plans for evacuation called for the use of a Boeing 747 stripped of every amenity — seats, toilets, galleys. American officials chartered one from Seaboard World Airways and hoped to jam as many as 1,200 to 1,600 persons aboard each flight for Cam Ranh Bay.

Plans called for the evacuation of 10,000 persons a day, many of them aboard the 747 which was scheduled to arrive next Tuesday. In the meantime the 727 was making one flight today, three Thursday and to continue the flights until it is replaced by the Jumbo Jet.

The airlift was being financed by the U.S. Agency for International Development using civilian planes under contract to the U.S. Defense Department and carried out with support of the South Vietnamese Ministry for Social Welfare. Most of the refugees were being taken to the three "safe" coastal provinces of Khanh Hoa, Ninh Huen and Binh Thuan, already jammed with refugees.

Artillery menaces Cambodian airlift

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — American officials said today the Cambodian rebels apparently have begun bombarding the Phnom Penh airlift with artillery in a deadly new threat to the U.S. airlift. Other rebels were only two miles from the heart of Phnom Penh.

Should the rebels force a halt to the airlift, American sources said there was a contingency plan to resupply Phnom Penh by airdrops.

Aides quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Resignation of Alexander P. Butterfield as Federal Aviation Administration administrator was accepted "with sincere regret" Tuesday by President Ford.

Butterfield "retired" — the White House taping system in the Nixon administration. Also resigning Tuesday was James M. Day, the first and only head of the Mine Enforcement and Safety Department. Both men have kept under fire for lax enforcement of safety rules.

French keep talking for release

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — France opened the second stage of negotiations today for the release of its ambassador to Somalia, but gunmen holding the diplomat were turned down by the first country they chose for asylum.

The French government agreed Tuesday night to free two separatists serving life sentences for political killings in the northwestern territories of Adals and Issac, ending the first phase of the delicate maneuvering to win freedom for kidnapped Ambassador Jean Guery.

Improving

FT. GOHNDON, Ga. (UPI) — Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, widow of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, was listed in "good condition" at an Army hospital here today.

Mrs. Eisenhower, 77, was admitted Tuesday for treatment of a bowel condition after internal bleeding. She became ill while vacationing at the nearby Augusta National Golf Course.

Beef import suspension approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With only brief debate, the Senate today approved a 90-day suspension of beef imports while it prepared to pass an emergency farm support bill.

The eventual fate of the beef suspension proposal was clouded, however. House farm leaders backed away from including beef restrictions in their version of the farm support bill passed last week.

Storm batters S. Idaho

TWIN FALLS — What weather bureau officials said is probably the strongest storm of the entire winter season moved into Magic Valley Tuesday night, closing schools and highways.

Shermy Terry, National Weather Service, Kimberly, said winds of 35 to 45 miles per hour with gusts estimated up to 60 m.p.h. were reported in Twin Falls between 7 p.m. Tuesday and 1 a.m. today.

Terry said the deep low pressure system moved into the area early Tuesday bringing widespread rain over most of the valley. The associated cold front which reached the area during the afternoon brought snow and cold winds.

The Twin Falls airport reported 55 m.p.h. winds at 10 p.m. Tuesday and the Burley flight center reported 50 m.p.h. winds at 9 p.m.

The wind pattern shifted Tuesday, Terry said, bringing cold Alaskan and Canadian air to the region. As a result temperatures were in the 20s this morning and are expected to drop into the teens Thursday. Terry said indications are highs will remain in the 30s through Saturday, warming to the 40s by Easter Sunday.

Winds caused problems for many motorists. This morning State Highway 77 between Desha and Connor Corner south of Albion was blocked by drifting snow and high winds. Zero visibility and hazardous driving conditions were reported when the route was closed at 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Interstate 80 North was closed from the Salt Lake interchange east of Burley to the Utah state line as of 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. High winds, drifting snow and icy roads were reported in that area.

Interstate 15 was not much better but was open as of 7:35 a.m. today after being closed from the Salt Lake interchange to American Falls from 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Elsewhere in the district, state highway officials in Shoshone said roads were icy with drifting snow. At Carey six inches of new snow fell but highways remained open.

Murder trial ready for jury

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer
 TWIN FALLS — The defense and prosecution rested their cases in the murder trial of Delbert Crawford late Tuesday, with the jury expected to get the case today.

Four witnesses — two for the defense and two for the prosecution — testified Tuesday.

The testimony of one witness led both the prosecution and defense to admit an impossible garbling of state, and local records.

A previous witness, Robert Hoffer, now an Idaho State Penitentiary inmate, testified he had been incarcerated in the Cassia County jail with Terry Billingsley and related several conversations he allegedly had with Billingsley.

But Don Taylor, chief deputy sheriff for Cassia County, told the court Tuesday that Hoffer had been in the county jail only one day, Nov. 6, according to his records.

Billingsley was brought to the jail Nov. 8.

Defense attorney Victor J. Rolitto, Ketchum, told the court he was completely surprised by the testimony and requested some time to check additional records.

Ray Jarvis, chief deputy sheriff in Minidoka County, then added his testimony that Hoffer had been in that county's jail beginning Nov. 25.

Hoffer had been brought to the Rhode Island's population decreased 3.1 per cent in fiscal 1974. Most of the drop was attributed to the pullout of U.S. Navy personnel from Newport and Quonset Point.

Jail by Burley police officers, Jarvis testified.

Following further investigation, the defense and prosecution both noted for the court record and jury that the Idaho State Penitentiary records and parole board records both showed Hoffer as confined to the Cassia jail, but for different time periods.

Rolitto and special prosecutor Gordon S. Nielson both stipulated that the records were considerably confused.

Presiding Fifth District Judge Sherman J. Belwood told the jury Tuesday he had hoped to have its instructions ready but some "new developments" in the case and the law involved had prevented that.

Another prosecution witness, Twin Falls deputy sheriff Jim Munn, testified that Crawford had been incarcerated in the Twin Falls County jail during the months of July, August and September, 1974.

A defense witness, also an Idaho State Penitentiary inmate, had previously told the court he had seen Crawford at a bar in Burley sometime in August.

Dr. F. L. Heyrend, a Boise psychiatrist, testified as to the possible effects of longterm drug use.

Crawford is accused of the double shotgun slaying of Paul Peterson, 23, and Greg Solosabal, 22, both Burley, last Nov. 7. If the jury finds him guilty of first degree murder as charged, Crawford faces a mandatory death sentence.

Testimony began March 15 after more than five days of jury selection. Forty witnesses were called to testify during the trial.

Attorney's office won't prosecute

TWIN FALLS — Police Chief Frank Barnett said today he has been informed by a representative of the US Attorney's office in Boise that due to conflicting information the office declined to prosecute in the KEEP radio news case.

Barnett said it had never been the hope of the police department for prosecution, but merely for clarification of the matter.

He said he was informed there was conflicting testimony taken during the investigation as to whether actual information broadcast by KEEP radio in the beating of two Twin Falls women came from the police-women-communications, or could have come from other sources contacted by the station after the original tip from the radio. Barnett said he feels, after talking with the US attorney, if the information had positively come from the police broadcast and been used for retransmission as a new item by the station, legal action would have been taken and a violation established.

He said should a similar incident occur, the department would again take steps against the news media.

KEEP radio newscaster Kelly Klaus aired a story on the beating of the two women without permission or approval of the Twin Falls Police Department and after the department had asked all news media to hold the story.

Any interested citizen is welcome to attend. For more information call the YMCA-YWCA at 733-4384.

NY neurosurgeon says Ek prognosis 'excellent'

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A New York neurosurgeon who examined cerebral palsy victim Larry Ek for an electronic brain stimulator implant, said Tuesday Ek "has an excellent prognosis."

"He is an excellent candidate and he has an excellent chance for improvement," Dr. Joseph Waltz, associate neurosurgeon at St. Barnabas Hospital in New York City, said.

Ek, a 23-year-old Twin Falls native crippled by cerebral palsy since birth, returned last week from a 10-day evaluation at the hospital where the way was cleared for surgery (to implant the stimulator) next November.

The electronic stimulator, tagged a "brain pacemaker," was developed two years ago by Waltz in association with Dr. I. Amin and St. Barnabas' chief of neurosurgery Dr. I.S. Cooper. Waltz said either he or Dr. Cooper would perform the implant surgery on Ek. "Most likely I will," he added.

Waltz said about 65 per cent of cerebral palsy victims treated with the stimulator have shown improvement.

If Ek's implant functions as expected, he said, Ek will experience decreased muscle spasticity, increased motor function (ability to move) and improved trunk muscle stability.

Waltz said study of patients already on the stimulator has indicated a tendency for the transplant recipient to improve gradually and progressively over a period of months and years.

Thus far, he said, there has been no evidence of regression with patients using the stimulators. Another type of electronic stimulator — used to inhibit pain in permanently ill or crippled persons — had shown a regressive pattern, he added, but he said there is no reason to expect that the device Ek will receive will decrease in effectiveness over time.

"All our patients who have shown improvement have held that improvement," he said.

Ek is likely to show the most improvement in the functioning of lower limbs, Waltz said. He said that a technique involving the freeing of damaged brain tissue may be used in company with the stimulator to improve Ek's upper limb functions. But, such a move will be made only if the stimulator by itself does not bring improvement, he added.

Waltz said Ek will be hospitalized for about six weeks following the surgery, but he said he did not expect him to have to undergo intensive or prolonged physical therapy.

Waltz estimated the cost of the surgery and hospitalization at $10,000.

Converter backfires

Business Week

The catalytic converter, standard equipment of 85 per cent of Detroit's cars, has apparently backfired.

After four years of promising the device as the quickest way to clean up auto emissions, the Environmental Protection Agency now believes that the converter is itself a dangerous pollutant.

Unless the problem can be overcome, the catalyst is doomed, leaving the EPA embarrassed, the auto makers confused, and the public frustrated.

The EPA has reluctantly asked Congress to delay until 1982 the final emissions standards mandated by the Clean Air Act.

The agency then spent months studying the health evidence, proposing tentative standards, and holding public hearings before issuing final rules.

That left the EPA with little flexibility to assess catalyst technology, weigh alternatives, or even study whether the auto standards were scientifically sound in the first place.

Legislation was introduced to push a stalled Detroit into the environmental age. And laws can often spur worthy technological developments, but there are obvious limits to ordering new technology on a strict timetable.

Unforeseen problems are almost inevitable, and the catalyst is not the first technology in which unanticipated risks outweigh projected benefits.

Regulation is best carried out when the administrative agency is allowed the time and flexibility to study the issues and make reasonable judgments. The job of Congress should be to legislate government policy, not to enact detailed ways to implement the policy.

On last March 4, the secretary general of the United Nations, Waldheim, put a meeting of the U.N. committee on disarmament in Geneva, in which he said the following: "Environmental warfare might soon pass from the realm of imagination to terrifying reality unless preventive action is taken promptly."

"Environmental warfare might soon pass from the realm of imagination to terrifying reality unless preventive action is taken promptly. The technology might soon exist to trigger earthquakes, steer hurricanes or release tidal waves."

The main point is the struggle for the mastery of the seas, and the economic and military exploitation of the bottom of the waters of the Earth. Back of all this Buck Rogers and science fiction stuff about broken Soviet submarines, dead sailors, and the efforts of the CIA to recover the Soviet missiles and codes, there is the much larger strategic question of who can operate effectively on the bed of the oceans.

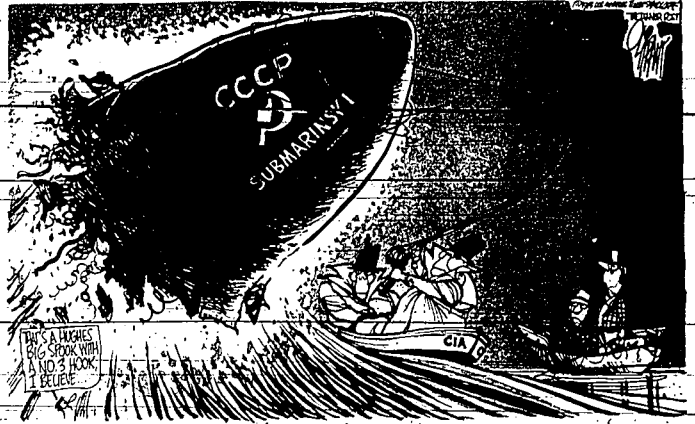

The salt-water seas and oceans cover 72 per cent of the globe. They contain not only oil but precious metals and minerals, and they contain and feed the recklessly fertile human family in the last quarter of the 20th century.

Adm. Mahon thought in the last century that control of the surface of the oceans would determine the lives and politics of nations on land. Now the same notion is being applied to the bottom of the oceans. More than outer space, it is seen as the new frontier of the coming age.

Washington is in trouble these days on the ground that it can't run an economy that it has no leadership, no leadership no vision of the future. Maybe it's not as unimpressive or crippled as it looks. It still has devices that can be a bump on the bottom of the ocean thousands of miles away, and find a submarine

The mind of this city is now, of course, is on other things—it is worrying about whether the CIA should have spent all that money on finding the Soviet submarine, about whether the CIA was right in trying to suppress the news of its operation, and whether the CIA itself is out of control and beyond the reach of Congressional supervision.

There was, he insisted, an urgent need for a convention or agreement among the major nations, to rule out the oceans, as they had ruled out outer space, as a platform for war.

Time arrives to redeploy Kissinger, Richardson

Buy car, then park

Christian Science Monitor

Buy a car to stimulate the economy, and then avoid driving it to save gasoline. This is the kind of ironic advice that is calling on Americans' sense of humor as well as sense of responsibility while their government tries to decide What To Do. To cut down on gasoline, they are urged, even as their gas dealers are exhorted to sell, sell, sell.

Television commentator David Brinkley's wry solution is, perhaps, too radical: Keep your car polished but parked, and sit in it once in a while on Sunday. More seriously, Republican Representative Peyer of New York urges government action against companies alleged pressure tactics to increase retail gas sales — "blackmailing our gas station operators into subsidizing gas conservation efforts."

Certainly the government should be ever-handed in expecting industry, as well as consumer cooperation, in energy conservation. If it isn't, one should be surprised when America's competitive system offers motorists free dishes to buy the gas the President has asked them to leave in the pump.

he has authorized his spokesman to use North Vietnam's "warrior spirit" about Saigon's difficulties because the U.S. Congress has cut back on the aid requirements. This is a waystation to the old paradigm. It is also a prelude to recommendations. It can be no solution to even the most dedicated

The President and Kissinger have said that the "détente theory" has validity, and Ford cites the fact that Thailand and the Philippines are even now reviewing their relationship with the U.S. The theory has been discredited in many quarters, but assuming that it is valid, wouldn't Kissinger do well to hustle back to his seventh floor office at the State Department to see what he can do about "saving" Bangkok and Manila in America's interests?

Richardson's no miracle worker, but he knows his way around lout and smells of clean laundry. The move by Ford "without" divert the gathering impact into the spy agency, but it could help to save it.

The occasion Edmund Burke's speech on conciliation with the American colonies. Two hundred years have passed since Burke moved the adoption of his resolutions in Commons. His desperate, eleven-hour purpose was to prevent a war that he knew England could not win, and forecast that war would be a bloody, brilliant argument of reason, sentiment, and fact. His resolutions failed, of course, and less than a month later, on April 19, came the hostilities of Lexington and Concord.

As one consequence of this "three spirit of liberty" said Burke, "Americans... will argue with government at a distance and snuff the approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze." The rebellious colonists would not abandon their love of freedom, they scarcely could be prosecuted individually on criminal charges: "I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against Burke was 46 that spring. He had been rejected to Commons a few months earlier as a member from Bristol. As an acknowledged leader of the opposition, he was growing into those magnificent powers of thought and speech that would serve him to his death in 1797. It is Burke whom American conservatives look today as the fountainhead of their philosophy. His insights, like good wine, grow better with the years.

"These echoes should give us pause today. What has become of that 'love of freedom' that 200 years ago marked the American character? Is it still strong, still lively? Does our temper still continue 'a fierce spirit of liberty'?" The melancholy answer is, no. As a people, we are less independent, less self-reliant, less passionately dedicated to personal responsibility than we were two centuries ago.

It does an injustice to Burke's speech thus to cut off its arms and legs for purposes of condemnation. The great thing was a great stylistic play on the English language like some virtuoso at a ball tower. Few statesmen have matched his ability to capture ideas in phrases that ring and echo.

"The proposition is peace," said Burke, "not peace through the medium of war, not peace to be hunted through the labyrinth of intricate and endless negotiations, not peace to arise out of universal discord fomented from principle in all parts of the empire." It is simple peace, sought in its natural course and in its ordinary habitation.

Nuclear energy option

Editor, Times-News:
An Idaho Power brochure defending the Pioneer coal-fired plant states "Nuclear plant costs would substantially increase energy costs, and require 12 to 14 years lead time."

Nuclear energy is not the total answer to this nation's energy problems but it is a viable option which should not be dismissed so insignificantly. In its defense I offer an opposing viewpoint.

A 1974 Atomic Industrial Forum "survey" concludes that utility customers would be paying about 40 per cent more for their electricity if operating nuclear plants were replaced with oil or coal-fired plants.

"Records of 21 United States electric utilities show this experience: Including capital costs, nuclear plant costs now average 30.52 mills/kWh for fossil fuel."

Based on a 1000 Mw plant operating at an 80 per cent plant factor, this amounts to $45.6 million per year savings for a nuclear over conventional fired plant.

One can argue whether the nuclear lead time is 9 or 14 years, but that is not the significant point. The decision-making process must be completed at a time when all options are viable. To do less is a disservice to the energy users.

Idaho Power's load growth has been linear since at least 1960, thus lead time is not a factor if the final decision is made at the correct point in time.

According to the Times-News, a study conducted by an architect-engineering firm which demonstrated that a coal-fired plant was preferable over a nuclear plant. The only odd thing is that the firm doing the study is a builder of coal-fired plants and was chosen as the plant A-E. According to the Nuclear News World List of Nuclear Plants the firm selected by Idaho Power has never been the A-E on a nuclear plant.

Hopefully, with experience Idaho Power can do better in the future. It's unfortunate that this

Sinking land paying 'crop'

Editor, Times-News:
Concerning the article about the sinking land near Buhl in the Sunday edition — perhaps I can add an interesting item. In 1967, my husband and I made a trip to the area.

En route we heard of this farm and went to see it. Had to pay the farmer to cross his land. We decided he was making more money that way than any other.

The sink looked as though a large chunk had fallen into a deep cavern or cave. There was grass and brush still growing and a row part of a barbed-wire fence with posts standing on it.

Sunday morning danger abroad

Editor, Times-News:

Since coming to Twin Falls several years ago I've noticed one thing even some of the best Sunday morning Christians do all the time — they're law breakers!

Yep, they're dangerous people! They run stop signs and stoplights, they speed, they park on the wrong side of the street, and they double park. They drive with one headlight for months, never getting a citation, and they drive with busted mufflers or altered pipes.

Well, you name it and they do it, and I don't mean just the Sunday morning Christians either. I never in my life have seen so much traffic violating anywhere.

Three time DWI violators get fined and released even though it is a felony. Some people

Studied abroad

WASHINGTON APPEL — The nephew who assassinated King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was an engineering and political science student at universities in California and Colorado during the 1960s, diplomatic sources said today.

Diplomatic sources said that the nephew, identified as Bin Musaid, is the son of the late King Faisal's half brother, Prince Musaid.

The assassin, the sources said, was born in Riyadh—April 4, 1944 and in 1962 came to the United States where he studied English at San Francisco State College.

In the fall of 1967, the sources said, he enrolled at the University of Colorado at Boulder, taking a course in mechanical engineering. He withdrew in the summer of 1968 but returned later that year to take a new course in political science.

He did not get a degree and returned to Saudi Arabia, planning to come back to the United States to finish his courses, the sources said.

By JEREMIAH O'LEARY
Washington Star
WASHINGTON — King Faisal, absolute monarch of the Saudi Arabians, held a unique position at the center of the confrontation between the militant Arab world and the U.S.-backed Israelis in the Middle East powder keg.

He was in the eyes of many a contradictory figure since he was on the one hand an ultra-conservative, pro-Western leader and at the same time remained an exponent of the hard line against Israel on the key question of the future of Jerusalem.

Faisal despised and feared many peace missions to the Middle East after the 1973 war.

Faisal's oil policies made him an even more important figure in the Middle Eastern kaleidoscope than the seniority of his years and the respect he held as guardian of the holy city of Mecca.

Faisal also was a somewhat puzzling figure since he was in the forefront of the 1973 embargo that quadrupled the price of world oil and yet he had been a technological influence against now-increases by the organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Faisal was aware that his petroleum-based economic strength was accompanied by military and technological weakness in the strategic relationships of the region. Within the last year, his government had concluded an agreement with the United States to supply technological assistance to his country.

Western observers noted that Faisal as a matter of practice kept the small regular Saudi Arabian army of frontier posts far away from the centers of power at Riyadh and Jidda. At the same time he reposed his personal security in the hands of elite units of the Saudi Arabian National Guard.

Faisal was always careful to see that the national guard units he kept near him were well-supplied with modern weapons and well trained to act as a balance for the less dependable Saudi army.

These crack troops, plus his personal guard and his household entourage were always near the king, whose court had the appearance of something out of the Arabian nights.

These men who saw the king in his public audiences noted that the royal executioner was always close at hand, but they were never sure whether this was for ceremonial or practical reasons.

The king ran a traditional court according to the precepts of the Koran and it was not unknown for thieves to have their hands cut off to pay for their crimes.

In his Arab garb, Faisal was an almost biblical figure, the patriarch of his people, but he turned many of the details of his international, economic and diplomatic maneuverings over to the bright young Saudi graduates of the London School of Economics, Harvard and other centers of Western learning.

He rarely negotiated his shrewd business and political deals with Westerners himself. Much of his oil policy was carried out — if not entirely conceived, by oil minister Zaki Yamani — who was as comfortable in a business suit and the English language as he was in a burjese and classical Arabic.

On a somewhat higher level, his relative Prince Faisal was the king's principle emissary to Kissinger.

Cancer therapy tested

© N.Y. Times Service
SAN DIEGO, Calif.—A Pennsylvania physician reported here Monday the development of a drug therapy that can significantly improve the survival chances of children suffering from cancers of the lymph system that ordinarily kill 70 to 85 per cent of their victims within five years.

The physician Dr. Isaac Djerassi, director of research hematology at Mercy Catholic Medical Center in Darby, Pa., has thus far achieved a 50 per cent five-year survival rate in a small group of children with advanced cases of the disease. Such children would otherwise have a very short life expectancy.

Djerassi said he has now begun to try the same treatment in adults with these diseases, 10,000 cases of which occur in children and adults in the United States annually.

This treatment involves high doses of a drug that poisons cancer cells, followed by the use of a second drug that rescues normal cells but not the cancer cells.

The two drugs—methotrexate and cytarabine factor, which counters the poisoning effects of methotrexate—were reported last year to be dramatically altering the life expectancy of children with a highly lethal bone cancer called osteosarcoma.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's son, Edward Jr., who had a leg amputated in 1973 following diagnosis of a related bone cancer, has been receiving this combination drug therapy in an effort to prevent recurrence of his disease.

This approach to treating cancers was pioneered by Djerassi more than a decade ago. He has previously tried it in children with leukemia and in adults with advanced cancers of the lung and pancreas, with marked reduction of the tumors in some cases.

Newly told the American Cancer Society's seminar for science writers here, he is applying the same principle to two difficult-to-treat cancers called lymphosarcoma and reticulosarcoma, which are common in children.

These affect the lymph nodes and spleen respectively.

Dr. Frank Rauscher, director of the National Cancer Institute, told the New York Times that the institute is planning to study methotrexate and cytarabine factor rescue in the treatment of lung cancer, which kills 50 per cent of its victims and will cause 81,000 deaths—in the United States this year.

The study will be conducted at Veterans' Administration Hospitals in consultation with Djerassi.

Methotrexate, one of the first anticancer drugs discovered, is a "poisoned" vitamin that instead of helping cells, interferes with their ability to produce. When a cell containing a large amount of methotrexate tries to divide, it is killed instead.

Cassia school panel delays policy action

BURLEY — The Cassia County School Board Monday night postponed adopting a policy statement that would commit the board to "affirmatively action" to an alleged discriminatory hiring action.

The board has come under fire from the US Department of Health, Education and Welfare, parents of Mexican-American children, and most recently, the national Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund (MALDEF) for alleged discriminatory hiring and education practices.

The State Department of Education suggests an affirmative action plan that includes a statement, saying the system shall focus on all students and staff with particular focus on race, ethnic background, women, disabled and older persons.

According to Norman Hurst, instructional director for the system, the affirmative action statements purpose is to correct years of past abuses, he said.

Hurst pointed out several areas where the board was apparently out of compliance with laws prohibiting discrimination in hiring and firing staff.

For instance, he said, the lack of women hired at the administrative level could be an example of discriminatory employment practices.

The affirmative action statement would commit the board to correct those past abuses, he said.

According to the state board of education, "affirmative action" is a positive and deliberate effort to discover and correct any existing discriminatory practices.

Hurst said.

But, Monday night, members of the school board said adopting an affirmative action statement as suggested by the state might discriminate against those that aren't included in the policy statement.

"Why give special attention to certain groups?" one board member asked.

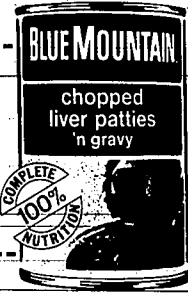

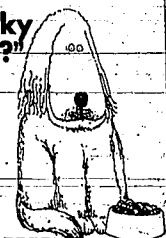

Herman Bedke, the school's attorney, said "It's the outsiders who are going to come in and cause a problem."

Action on the affirmative action statement was postponed until the board's next meeting at the suggestion of the board's only Mexican-American member, Sol Saldaña.

Salty Deal
The state of New York has been handing salt to Indians for 187 years. Under a treaty with the Onondagas in 1788, New York is obligated to give a bushel of salt every October to any member of the tribe who requests it. In return, New York received 15,000 acres of salt lands.

Q: "How do you turn a finicky nibbler into a chow hound?"

A: First, experiment with the basic flavors dogs like most: beef, liver, chicken. For example, try Blue Mountain Beef Burgers, Chopped Liver Patties, and Chunky Chicken Casserole. Find the one he likes best. Then start feeding him on a regular schedule, the same time every day. And don't give between-meal tidbits.

New Malta well slated

BURLEY — Drilling of a second test well at the Malta geothermal test site is scheduled to start next month.

John Griffith, US Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), said the second hole is to better define the hot water reservoir that was discovered with the sinking of the first well.

The first hole struck 290-degree F. water at 4,500 feet the first week of February.

The drilling at the Malta site is being conducted under the sponsorship of ERDA, Raft River Electric Co-op and the state of Idaho.

The second hole is to be sunk about 3,000 feet northwest of the first hole, Griffith said.

If promising and advisable, the two wells will be connected, Griffith said.

The drillers will go deeper into the reservoir at the first hole and drill the second hole to try to confirm models of the reservoir constructed by geologists from surface exploration.

Part of the test site at Malta is to test techniques of identifying geothermal resources through surface exploration.

Plans are also being made to generate electricity from the hot water. However, so far, funds have not been obtained for the power generation phase of the test.

TF Demo chief slaps Butz

TWIN FALLS — The chairman of the Twin Falls Democratic Central Committee has accused Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz of following a "bankruptcy theory" of farm economics.

The statement from Steve Carter came on the eve of a Butz speaking engagement in Twin Falls.

"Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz is coming to Idaho to play another joke on the farmers and ranchers of the Magic Valley," Carter said "in a prepared statement."

"President Ford should have named Secretary Butz Comedian of the Century instead of Bob Hope. I'm sure that the Butz theory of some farmers having to go bankrupt in order to solve farm and ranch problems has area farmers and ranchers in stitches. With friends like Earl Butz, farmers don't deserve grapes."

Instead of protecting farmers from the depressed prices of a surplus market, Carter argued, "Butz continues to brag for devastating full farm production in a market that ignores farmers' costs."

"Thousands of farmers," Carter continued, "are already victims of the Butz bankruptcy theory. Obviously what is needed is a national food policy which would provide fair returns for farmers and reasonable prices for consumers."

"The unrest and discontent among farmers can be instigated in one word — instability," Carter said, "which could describe the character of leadership of the Department of Agriculture."

"While Secretary Butz is in

Ford cautious about CREEP

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A committee for the election of the President is a Republican Party bogey man, and President Ford hopes he can do without one, House and Senate.

The campaign reform law passed after Richard Nixon's Committee for the Re-election of the President spawned Watergate may force Ford into setting up a committee.

The law says the party national committee cannot handle a candidate's campaign until that candidate has won the party's convention nomination. So if Ford has rivals for the Republican presidential nomination, he will have to have a committee until the convention.

Asked if Ford has learned the lessons of Nixon's CREEP, that he must keep tightest control of any such committee, White House press secretary Ron Nessen nodded and said, "He's learned the lessons."

Former California Governor Ronald Reagan and Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee may challenge Ford for the GOP nomination, forcing him to set up the pre-convention campaign committee.

Administration sources said last week Reagan supporters already were trying to line up convention delegates. The sources said Ford had ordered

Nuclear wastes worth billions?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government energy planners are studying the possibility of turning deadly radioactive wastes from nuclear power plants into useful products worth billions of dollars.

The idea, according to George Dix of the Energy Research and Development Administration, would be to separate usable waste products and put them to work generating electricity, purifying city sewage or perhaps even preserving food grains after harvest.

"It appears that various isotopes contained in the wastes have a collective future potential value of billions of dollars," Dix said in a release in Washington.

Dix said ERDA and other government agencies are examining safety and economic factors associated with salvaging beneficial products from reactor wastes.

Not all wastes could be salvaged, Dix said some have no value and must be disposed of. In addition, he said, some salvage wastes eventually would lose their beneficial energy potential and would have to be disposed of just as most radioactive waste is now.

But much of the waste material would be useful.

"For example," Dix said, "cesium-137, a byproduct of nuclear power, is used in medicine. Some work has been done during the past 20 years to use waste materials, particularly in medicine where isotopes are used to fight cancer and perform other functions. But the unavailability of separated reactor byproducts and the high cost of operating small scale separation facilities has kept these uses from growing, Dix said.

He said that in one demonstration the Navy for the past eight years has powered an isolated oceanographic data acquisition system in Alaska's Bering Straits with a generator fueled by Strontium 90. The nuclear generator replaced a propane-fueled power supply, he said, "that had incurred prohibitive technical problems and excessive logistic and maintenance costs."

Aspirin may aid cold virus

CHICAGO (UPI) — While cold sufferers may consider aspirin a blessing, researchers warn that it could adversely affect their colds and spread colds to more people.

University of Illinois researchers say that aspirin does not significantly combat the cold virus infection and apparently is a significant factor in spreading the virus to other people.

The study, published in the latest edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said the use of aspirin in treating colds "should be reevaluated."

It is common for young adults showed that aspirin increased the production of common cold viruses and the likelihood of spreading it to others.

Aspirin treatment appeared to cause a highly significant increase in the rate of virus-shedding in treated subjects," the report said.

"The increase in virus-shedding must be considered a serious event that could influence the course of the disease in the individual and increase the likelihood of the spread of the infection."

Oil producers 'quietly' buy cheap ships

© N.Y. Times Service
LONDON Quietly, sometimes operating through agents, the oil-producing countries of the Middle East have been using some of their new-found wealth to move into world shipping in a big way at an opportune time.

They are taking advantage of a glut in tanker capacity that has caused charter rates and ship prices to plummet. The glut was brought about by declining oil consumption all over the world due to the quadrupling of prices imposed by the oil producers themselves.

Numerous ships are being laid up, dozens are waiting in line for increasingly scarce cargoes at middle east ports and dozens more are steaming at reduced speeds to extend their time at sea and avoid overburdened port facilities in Europe.

Middle East countries are standing by with ready cash-to-buy second-hand ships. At cut-rate prices and take over orders for new ships commissioned by other buyers when charter conditions were more favorable. They are also contracting for new tonnage of their own.

ABU Dhabi, an oil-rich country on the Persian Gulf, recently bought the Triton, a 270,000-ton supertanker, in a $33 million transaction that attracted little attention outside shipping circles.

Iraqi buyers acquired the San Yu Mary, a smaller tanker, from an owner in Osaka, Japan. Libya bought the Intisar, a 140,000-ton vessel, from a Swedish company.

Other buyers, reported to be acting on behalf of Middle East countries, have been purchasing substantial second-hand tonnage anonymously. Sometimes they are identified as "unnamed interests" in Lloyd's Register of Shipping, the bible of the industry.

The Arab maritime petroleum transport company, a shipping consortium owned by eight Arab countries and based in Kuwait, has ordered six new supertankers with a total oil capacity of nearly 2 million tons. The company, formed in 1973, has placed all of its orders in the last year.

The entry of the producing countries into world shipping on a major scale is expected to have a profound impact on the structure of the industry. The members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now own an estimated 3 per cent of the world tanker fleet. Ship brokers in London say their percentage will grow to 20 or 30 by the 1980's.

For the first time in its history, Lloyd's is keeping a separate tabulation of tanker tonnage related to Middle East countries. It shows that the Arab countries and Iran had 33 new tankers built, a total capacity of 6.2 million tons on order as of Mid-1974.

This compares with a total existing tanker fleet of 55 ships with total oil capacity of less than 2 million tons as of the same date, the latest for which comprehensive statistics are available.

"They're coming in at the right time," said Andrew B. Carpenter, a director of J. P. Drewry Shipping Consultants, Ltd. of London. "We are already seeing these fleets being built up and the increase will be rather significant."

Gordon Bayley, director of Terminal Operators, another ship consulting and research firm here, said: "The OPEC states have achieved all of their objectives as regards the shipping business in the foreseeable future. But nearly everybody is convinced that the oil-producing countries will be a major force in the market shortly."

Faisal killing shakes OPEC

VIENNA (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries canceled Tuesday's meeting of experts to set oil prices because of the death of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia. Some oil sources said his assassination could plunge OPEC into a severe crisis.

Saudi Arabia is a key member of the 13-nation OPEC, as the world's top oil exporter and the third largest producer after the United States and the Soviet Union.

The experts were to discuss how to sever the traditional dollar link to preserve their oil revenues from the decline in the value of U.S. dollar.

Venezuelan oil sources said privately Faisal's assassination could plunge OPEC into its worst crisis. But Venezuelan government sources in Caracas said it could not destroy the cartel. They said Faisal's successor, Crown Prince Khalid, was "100 per cent" behind OPEC policies.

OPEC has reacted with deep regret to the news of the death of his majesty King Faisal of Saudi Arabia," an OPEC statement said.

"As a gesture of sympathy with the delegation of Saudi Arabia now attending the meeting of experts, it has been decided to adjourn the meeting for one day."

The statement said OPEC's secretary and staff "share with the people and government of Saudi Arabia, one of our founder members, the pain and sorrow of this sad event."

The two delegates from Saudi Arabia resigned on Monday. An OPEC source said: "Our main problem in these talks is the decline of the dollar," an OPEC source said. "We will discuss possibilities for how to cope with this problem."

The meeting, held at OPEC's Vienna headquarters, was to prepare the ground for a meeting of oil producers and consumers set for April 7 in Paris.

Venezuelan oil sources said Faisal's death had come just as OPEC was about to take key decisions on oil prices, supply and other issues, and could disrupt the organization's decision-making process.

"As the largest producer in OPEC, almost every decision hinges on Saudi Arabia," they said. "In the best of cases, the decision-making process is very slow in Saudi Arabia. Now, with the death of Faisal, it is bound to be slow."

"With so much hanging on the position that Saudi Arabia takes in the forthcoming consumer-producer meeting, the death of Faisal may have plunged OPEC into its worst crisis," the Venezuelan source said.

OPEC sources said the two main items to be discussed are inflation and the decline of the U.S. dollar against which oil prices have traditionally been figured.

Veteran ships to be sunk in Gulf

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Twelve Liberty ships that helped open the Allied lifeline across the North Atlantic in World War II are headed for the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico to become fishing reefs.

The ships, remnants of a fleet of thousands that equipped German U-boats, will be sunk off the Texas coast this year.

State officials think they will make good fishing reefs. It is successful in attracting marine life, the project could take better advantage of the Gulf of Mexico's rich food supply and help detect offshore ocean pollution.

State Sen. A.R. Schwartz, chairman of the Texas Coastal and Marine Council, sponsored the project, said the ships should provide excellent fishing and the best undersea exploration opportunities in the Western Hemisphere.

"The oceans are one truly unexplored universe left to us," Schwartz said. "I don't think anybody really knows what the productivity of the oceans could be with the artificial reefs conditions."

Schwartz has been working on the project for two years. The Defense Department of the freed coastal states surplus

Costs wither Blue Orchid's come-hither

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Her husky voice would breathe into the phone, "Hi, would you believe I'm sitting here... completely nude... waiting for you?"

That gave a charge to males all over the country who heard about the recorded message advertising the Blue Orchid nude modeling studios.

But Miss Blue Orchid has withered under the strain of higher costs and the need for more lines to handle the high volume of calls. Her number now brings up only a cold voice that says the message has been discontinued.

For three years Miss Blue Orchid contributed to unusual phone bills to businesses and government offices around the country. At her peak she received 1,000 calls an hour, and up to 80 per cent were long distance.

Item: In January 1974, 15

calls were made to the Blue Orchid Studios from the office of Florida Gov. Reubin Askew. When the calls were made public later, the office controller said the individuals had reimbursed the state.

Item: Last August, Kentucky officials revealed calls costing the state $1,500 had been made from state telephones. The state Finance Administration commissioner said he would see if the recording violated regulations "pertaining to consumer-protection-and public decency."

The Police Department in Warwick, R.I., the Milwaukee County welfare office and a Somerset, Ky., manufacturing plant were among those which found their phones coming under the Blue Orchid spell.

The number hasn't been advertised commercially since January, 1973. It's been advertised by word of mouth only," said Vic Damon, the creator of Miss Blue Orchid and co-owner of the studio until it was sold last week.

The recorded message had several variations, some with more explicit erotic appeal. But the basic message, as recorded, by a 21-year-old biology major at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, said: "Hi, would you believe I'm sitting here, completely nude, waiting for you? Then come to the Blue Orchid Studios and you can have me... or one of our other beautiful girls model in the nude in a quiet comfortable studio.

"We're open from 11 a.m. to midnight... but never on Sundays. Prices start at $15. If you'd like to know more, I'll send you a stimulating catalogue of my services, with a photograph of me, Miss Blue Orchid, and my warm, naked body.

"Send your name and address, with $3 to the Blue Orchid Studios, and remember, roses are red, violets are blue. I'll really move my tail for you."

Former inmate tries to see 'home'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John McDonald tried to escape from Alcatraz by swimming in 1928 but didn't get very far. Now he wants to get back to see the place — and he's still not getting very far.

The 53-year-old Cleveland man said Monday he didn't realize the popularity of the one-time federal prison, now a tourist attraction.

"They told me they were booked for a whole week until next Monday," McDonald said of the Rock in the center of San Francisco Bay.

"I want to see my old home, but I'm not going to wait a whole week."

McDonald served three years on Alcatraz after he was court-martialed by the Army for stealing a car for a joyride in Hawaii.

The machinist and seaman said he stopped in San Francisco enroute home from a Hawaiian vacation to see Alcatraz. He said he didn't know if he would try to visit another time.

No problems on Girl Scout cookies

BOISE — Beverly Silva, public relations director of the Silver Sage Girl Scout Council, said Friday there is no problem with Girl Scout Cookies being delivered in Twin Falls area.

She said there have been reports of a complaint and subsequent recall of some Girl Scout cookies in the Midwest. She said the complaint came from Columbus, Ohio, and the cookies being recalled were made by the Barry division of Quaker Oats.

According to Ms. Silva, the Silver Sage Girl Scout Council purchases its cookies from the American Biscuit Co., located on the West Coast and "there is no connection at all. We have no problem here."

SLIM DOWN IN STYLE...

Eat a Variety of Foods, And Limit Calories

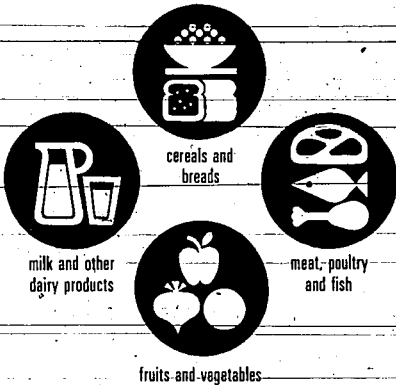

Now is the time — when your clothes start feeling tight and the scale keeps tipping upward — to do something about losing that extra weight. Not only is weight control needed for an attractive appearance but is important for health as well.

Obesity is regarded by many nutrition and health authorities as the number 1 public health problem in America today. A sensible diet that provides needed quantities of nutrients and a well regulated exercise program will solve this problem which appears to contribute to the development of a number of serious diseases.

The best method of losing or controlling weight is counting calories, not going on a crash diet where weight is regained as soon as regular eating habits are resumed. Calories, or the fuel value, from foods provide the body with energy. The amount of energy a person needs depends on age, sex, extent of physical activity and body size. For example, a moderately active man, weighing 154 pounds, needs 2,700 calories each day whereas a woman of 128 pounds needs only 2,000 calories. Authorities find that most fat people are overweight because they consume too many calories and fail to get enough exercise. Any calories in excess of what the body uses will be stored as body fat.

DIETERS NEED A BALANCED DIET...

The dieter's daily menu should include a variety of foods recommended in the Basic 4 Food Guide, and no food group or meal should be omitted entirely. Skipping breakfast, for example, usually results in loss of work efficiency and hunger pangs that can encourage eating too much at lunch.

A low-calorie cereal breakfast is a good menu for the dieter because it is high in nutritive value and low in fat producing calories. Today's vitamin-fortified cereals average just over 100 calories per serving, or only 4% of the day's recommended calories for an adult man. An appealing low calorie breakfast might include:

	Calories
orange juice, fresh, 1/2 cup	56
1 oz. vitamin-fortified ready-to-eat cereal	105
1/2 cup skimmed milk	44
1 teaspoon sugar	16
1 slice enriched bread	62
1 tablespoon jelly	50
1 cup coffee	5
Total calories	338

Lunch and dinner menus can be equally appealing. Just keep the food consumed daily within the calorie limit appropriate for your age, sex and physical activity. It helps to measure the servings of food so the dieter won't eat too much. Other suggestions might be to substitute skimmed milk for whole milk, cottage cheese for whole milk cheese, reduce the amount of butter or margarine used, and select meats that are lean and closely trimmed. Choose a variety of foods that provide needed nutrients but relatively few calories.

The following recipes keep the dieter in mind with a variety of nutritious foods.

On a diet? Don't stop eating all of your favorite foods; eat a variety from the Basic 4 Food Groups. Control your weight best by counting calories in the food you eat and keeping within the daily caloric limit recommended for you.

Anti-VD messages delivered

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — State health officials are giving college students on the annual spring pilgrimage to Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach free frisbees inscribed "Prevent VD."

For those who don't play with frisbees, the state is hiring airplanes to circle the beaches trailing banners warning against venereal disease.

"Our concern is that young people infected with VD either prior to coming here or after arriving may spread it to others," Dr. Clifford Cole, head of the state health division's VD control program, said Monday.

"All the elements are present for the very rapid spread of VD in a festive atmosphere which is conducive to increased sexual activity," he said.

Jaycees, Jayettes and mobile health care clinics are distributing "Prevent VD" messages throughout the area.

In addition, the planes display the county health department phone numbers, where treatment and advice are available.

During the Easter and spring vacations an estimated half million college students flood Florida's beaches.

Teens, seniors should get together

Teens, seniors should get together

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every year, about 1 million adolescents run away from home.

And every year, more than 1 million old people reluctantly pack their bags and move into nursing homes.

Jesse and Ida Frankel think the teen-agers and the old folks should get together.

"The runaways and the throwaways have a lot in common," said Frankel, a specialist in intergenerational problems. "Both groups feel neglected by the young and middle-aged adults whose primary concern is their careers. And both groups are forced to mingle mostly with people their own age."

And that, the couple believes, is the problem.

"Young people and old people have a natural affinity for one another," said Mrs. Frankel, who for the past several years has been helping her husband do research for a book on inter-generational conflicts.

"The young thrive on the unqualified love of their grandparents, and the old people respond to the energy and enthusiasm of the youngsters."

The solution in Frankel's opinion, is to put an end to age segregation.

"That won't be easy," he said. "Age segregation has been carried to extremes in America. The young adults are buying homes in the suburbs and putting their children in day-care centers.

"The old people are left in the city, or if they have a little money are moving into those horrible retirement villages."

His wife agreed. "When a large group of people gathers on a street corner, the cops tell them to break it up," she said.

"We're telling Americans the same thing: break it up."

As a first step, the Frankels would like to see all private nursing homes shut down. A few state-run institutions would be reserved for the very ill.

"The elderly should be allowed to live in their own homes, even if they have to be cared for there," Mrs. Frankel said. "Bringing them and thrusting them into strange and crowded surroundings is like pronouncing a death sentence on them."

The next step, according to the man-and-wife team, is to "bring the generations together."

"We're for total age mix," said Frankel, who teaches sociology at Pace University. In addition to his job as a private consultant, "We'd like to see all artificial barriers come down. For example, why not put day care centers, teen centers and senior citizen centers under the same roof?"

Age integration, said his wife, would give everybody a healthier attitude about others — and about himself.

"To see only members of your own age group is alienating," she said. "You lose a sense of yourself, for you don't see yourself as you were and as you will be. You lose a sense of the continuity of life."

Evacuation pushed

DENVER (UPI) — An adoption agency for Vietnamese children Monday said it was trying to speed up evacuation of orphans to the United States before North Vietnamese troops stopped the flow of refugees toward Saigon.

A spokesman for the agency, Friends of Children of Vietnam, said some of its South Vietnamese orphans run by Roman-Catholic nuns were currently in the Central Highlands war zone controlled by the North Vietnamese.

"Nuns have had to escape orphanages carrying kids on their backs down the highway," said Sally Berger. "The situation is desperate. We're trying to make arrangements with our embassy in Saigon to get the kids already placed for adoption in the U.S. out first."

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 -Could you comment on the value or harm in fasting? I mean from three to five days. I have heard from some sources it is a way of purging the body of poisons and toxins as well as of shedding some weight. Others say it burns away valuable tissue along with the fat. — M.S.

Give those "others" who tell you that fasting burns away valuable tissue along with the fat, a fat "A" for accuracy.

Fasting can be a very dangerous undertaking, indeed, and it should not be done without a doctor's supervision, or indeed, without his recommendation, although you won't find many recommending it.

But if you are going to do this on your own, there are some basic facts you need to know about how the body stores and burns its sources of energy — fats and proteins.

Sure, fasting will in effect result in the burning off (utilization) of some of the fat. But a by-product of this process, especially when speeded up, is a build-up of excess ketones — same as in the urine of diabetics — resulting in a condition known as acidosis. There should be a warning in this for starvation dieters.

Caution to fasting dieters

Another thing. At the same time the body is busily burning off fat, it is also falling back on its only other source of stored energy, proteins — and protein, need I remind you, is the stuff of which muscles are made. Since it takes approximately twice the amount of protein burning to produce the energy fat does, protein utilization must proceed at twice the pace. Weakness is the result.

But it doesn't end there. Take the process a step further and you will find that in the course of protein burning a chemical problem arises — an increase of uric acid in the bloodstream. This increase in blood uric acid can produce pain in the joints — as in gout.

Short-term fasting is being recommended by some of the crash-diet methodologists, but I consider it an unnecessary and potentially dangerous way to lose weight. A more pleasant way — don't you agree? — is to use a low-calorie regimen, with modest fastings at regular intervals, and some exercise. This will allow hunger, reduce weight, and avoid the pitfalls mentioned above.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 Our daughter has rheumatoid arthritis. Are vitamins ever helpful for this as treatment instead of aspirin? She is allergic to aspirin, and this also affects the baby adversely. She is nursing the little one, who is four months old. — MRS. R.E.M.

Vitamins have no particular effect upon rheumatoid arthritis. However, if your daughter is not receiving a well-balanced diet, then a mixed vitamin supplement would be in order. This is important just from the standpoint of basic nutrition.

Her aspirin problem isn't insurmountable. Your daughter could be given another form of salicylate (other than aspirin), or she could be switched to some other non-salicylate medication. She should discuss this with her doctor.

The salicylate she is now taking can be discharged in the milk and could affect the baby. It might become important for her to abandon breast-feeding because of this. At four months, the infant would be ready for bottle-feeding anyway, and this would remove one part of the problem.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 I have false teeth and use salt water for a mouthwash. Is there any danger of the salt shrinking the gums? — G.N.C.

No. Gums tend to shrink (recede) with age, but the salt mouthwash will not hasten this process. If the salt solution is too strong, it can irritate the gums.

Dieting can cause a shrinking of the gums, so if you are reducing you can expect some of this.

Melody Squares Dance Club honors GF couple

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bliss, Glenn Ferry, have been honored by Melody Squares Dance Club for 25 consecutive years with the club.

Over 150 square dancers from Mountain Home, Boise and all of the Magic Valley attended a special dance honoring Mr. and Mrs. Bliss. The dance was at the Gooding Grange Hall, the location of club dances for the club's entire existence.

Assisting Bliss with calling were Tom Wood, Don Rising and Bill Coffield, all Boise; Karl Weathers and Jim Cox, Mountain Home; Walt Anthis and Willard Allison, Jerome; Chet and Rachel Huntley and Less Hall, all Twin Falls. Maurice Oulique, Gooding, presented an engraved plaque from the club in appreciation of their long service to the group. Anthis, president of the Magic Valley Square Dance Association, presented a congratulatory plaque to the couple on behalf of dancers of the Magic Valley.

Melody Squares was organized by a few couples in the Shoshone-Gooding area who danced couple or "round dances," including "Waltz of the Bells," "Glow Worm," and the "Varsouviane" as well as other dances.

In 1950, the group moved to the Gooding Grange Hall for its permanent location and "interest in square dancing was developed." Mr. and Mrs. Bliss were asked to teach both square and round dancing. To begin with, there was no public address system and calls were done with no microphone. Music was supplied by a wind up phonograph set in the center of the hall.

Later the Gooding Grange purchased a P. A. system and made it available to the club. Now the square dance callers have good equipment and the finest recorded music to work with.

Special dances each year include the "Turkey Dance" in December with a turkey dinner and dancing for members and guests; a picnic and dancing on the Glenn Ferry tennis courts each July; and the "Mountain Dance" at Fairfield with dancing at the Legion Hall and camping at Pioneer Park north of Fairfield with a breakfast served at the campgrounds.

South did. There seemed to be no reason not to try to get back to dummy for a second club diamond. East took his ace and led his last heart to clear the suit for his partner. South had no reason not to take a second club finesse. As mentioned earlier, his crystal ball wasn't working.

West took his king of clubs and two hearts.

North decided to jump to three notrump, rather than to use Stayman in an effort to find a 4-4 spade fit. His decision was a wise one indeed. The way the cards lie, there is no way to avoid the loss of four tricks with spades as trumps.

Three notrump makes easily, if declarer knows how to go about it. Unfortunately, South's crystal ball wasn't working for him.

East won the first trick with his king of hearts and led the suit right back. South won in dummy in order to take a club finesse. West ducked without indicating any problem. He knew all about the possibility that South would refuse a second club finesse, but West also saw that he needed to keep his king of clubs as the only possible entry for the long hearts. All of this being dependent on the chance that South would fall

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the reason an aunt cannot marry her nephew, but an uncle can marry his niece: It originated in Jewish law.

The principle of consanguinity (close blood relationships) forbids sexual relationships between very near kin. An aunt would be in close blood ties with one's father, therefore a sex relationship would be forbidden according to this logic.

On the other hand, a niece is a step down in the blood lines, and therefore not as close—therefore sex with her would be permitted. This is why a man may not marry his aunt, but he may marry his niece!

Incidentally, while Judaism is a patriarchal society, all blood lines go through the mother. For example, in an intermarriage, the religion of the offspring is determined by the religion of the mother. Therefore, in all blood line relationships, the closeness of the woman determines the decisions.

Reasons finally listed

—When I was at the Seminary we used to remember the law through the following joke. It is well known that often couples quarrel and a man may be moved to strike his wife. If he hit his niece, it is not so bad. But, how would it look if he hit his aunt?

RABBI BERNARD S. RASKUS

DEAR RABBI: Thank you for the explanation. Frankly, I don't think it would "look" any better for a man to hit his niece than it would to hit his aunt. And with Women's Lib gaining muscle, a man who hits any female had better look out for himself.

DEAR ABBY: I have waited for too long to write this letter, but I am finally going to get this off my chest.

I am sick of listening to people complain about plumber's rates. No other professional earns his money working in such damp, unsanitary and uncomfortable conditions. A plumber has no set hours—He works from early morning until late at night, and when he finally does get home, his clothes are black, his boots are soaking wet, and he smells like a sewer.

A plumber is called upon to unstop, unplug, unclog, clean, dirty, greasy sinks, and he has to crawl under houses where snakes, spiders and rodents lurk.

Why does everyone think that a plumber is overpaid?

PLUMBER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: After reading your letter, I'm going to give my plumber a bonus next time I see him.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the woman who prepared so well for her husband's death that she ended up with a lover while her husband continued to live, reminded me of something that happened over 50 years ago. I knew the people involved.

A woman we knew well became very sick. The doctor said she couldn't possibly live, so her husband gave away all her clothes. Well, she recovered, bought all new clothes and outlived her husband by 20 years.

COMING UP LOVELY FOR SURE

By Mary Sue Miller

The fountain of youth is not on the horizon. But salutary ways to make the most of your looks are popping up all over.

For the care of the skin, face and body, products emphasize in-depth cleansing and moisturizing. A good thing, too, for the aim is to counter pollution and aging.

For sensitive and allergy-prone complexions, hypo-allergenic formulas are on the increase with the claims on the labels made good in the contents. Look for those labels that list active ingredients—interesting!

Within the last few seasons there's been a rise in skin-and-hair cosmetic "naturals," containing such farm and forest ingredients as beeswax, milk, lemon, cucumber, and balsam. Of course the use of those beautifiers is not new; many have a history of hundreds of years. The young girls seem especially attracted to the "naturals." And that's one-up for good grooming.

Facial masks and protein hair treatments are firmly entrenched. But the familiar aerosol container is under reexamination by ecologists. Not for harm to beauty, but for harm to the atmosphere. Several sprays have already converted to atomizers. Coming up is work on the efficacy of vitamins E, C, and B-5 in cosmetics. Be on the watch for results.

Have a beautiful spring!

Leisurely drive

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—Richard Nixon and his wife, Pat, took advantage of a sunny spring day to take a leisurely drive through this seaside town this weekend in what was believed to be their first outing in several weeks. Nixon was seen Sunday driving his limousine northward through San Clemente, followed by a Secret Service car.

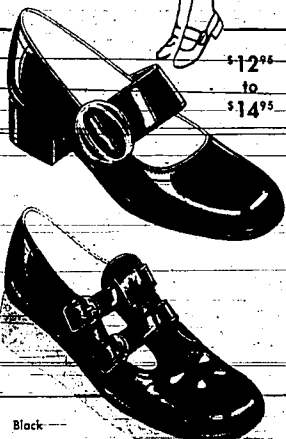

His office refused to discuss the outing Monday or confirm whether the former chief executive had returned to Casa Pacifica.

This was the first known time Nixon had left the compound since a brief stay several weeks ago at the Palm Desert, Calif. home of Walter Annenberg, former U.S. Ambassador to Britain.

Comic strip artist says life under God's management great

By ALLAN HARTLEY
Early in life I thought I'd learned the secret of success—hard work!

Certainly this was the code of my father, Fred Hartley, who served for more than 20 years in the United States Congress. Dad believed that a nation's welfare, like a family's, depended on the energy and efforts of its members.

His philosophy was even reflected in the religion he passed on to me. I remember the night after my grandfather died: Dad's father, whom he loved deeply, the casket was still in our living room, people coming and going, when Dad laid his hand on my shoulder.

"There is nothing after the grave," Allan," he said. "Heaven and hell are right here on earth and it's up to us to make it one or the other."

If I noticed the wastefulness in his voice, I didn't think about it at the time. I was wrapped up in plans for my own career in drawing comics. I handed a job, illustrating comic books. I worked hard, I married a beautiful girl, we had two children; it was going to be the greatest success story ever.

But it didn't work that way. Contrary to all my theories, the harder I worked, the worse I was in terms of earnings anyway. I seemed to do the whole comics industry in the late '40s and early '50s.

Parent-teacher groups accused comic books of promoting violence and although the particular publisher I worked for was not especially guilty, all comic book sales were hurt. Then came TV and sales plunged still further.

So I began developing independent projects to augment our income, hating myself into "one" enterprise after another, using the formula that energy equals success.

My wife—Bernice—was dismayed by all this hyperactivity, which cut more and more into our family time. She was perfectly content, she assured me, with what the comic-book work brought in. What was I trying to prove by killing myself? No matter how hard a person worked, she pointed out, some things were beyond his control.

But I just stayed on a little later, worked a little harder.

With each disappointment I redoubled my activity, neglecting my family still, neglecting sleep, neglecting God.

It was when my skill and hard work were falling miserably that some friends invited us to a service at their church. I don't even remember what the sermon was about, I just know that six words suddenly came through. "With God," the minister said, "all things are possible." (Mark 10:27)

Was that true? Friday morning I was sitting in that minister's study, pouring out my sense of failure and pain. "Wednesday night you said something about all things being possible with God. Does that mean even things like this?"

"All things," he repeated gently. "But you can't ask the Lord to take over just your business or just your health or just your marriage. You must put Him in charge of your entire life."

And so, because I was tired and beaten and frightened, I decided to give my business to God. That morning, I told Jesus that I, who was never going to ask any favors, was asking the ultimate favor of all. I'd run things myself for 40 years and made a mess; now I asked Him to run them for me.

It was the week after I'd made that decision that I learned about a new job from my boss at the comic-book publishing house. I was offered a monthly feature for a men's magazine, a comic strip for adults featuring a scantly dressed blonde. It was a well-paying job and just a few days before I would have jumped at it. Now, though, I'd asked God to take over.

Of course I gave myself all the usual arguments. If I didn't do it, someone else would; I could probably make it less objectionable than the next guy. But in the end I knew I was hedging and I turned it down. In the comics field that was suicide. There were always more artists than there were jobs and an artist who got choosy was finished. My boss fired me.

I should have been frantic. I should have started pushing doorbells, writing letters and phoning everyone I'd ever met to find another job. Instead I was conscious only of an incredible inner peace.

I had been in the comic-book field for 18 years by then and never since in all that time had anyone phoned me with a job offer. Two weeks after I lost my job Archie Enterprises called. "How would I like to work for them?"

To anyone inside the field, this—pull from the files—was unaccountable. Archie, created 36 years ago, was the most successful comic character in the world, selling more than 60 million magazines a year. They hired only four original-drawing artists and probably had 60 applicants for the job. Why telephone someone who'd never applied to them at all?

I would never have suggested such an idea on my own. But God seemed to be telling me to ask. So I did, and Goldwater was not only willing but delighted. He told me he'd started Archie back in 1947 hoping to bring a wholesome influence to American homes.

Since I stopped relying on my own cleverness, it's amazing how things have worked out. The whole family's noticed it.

In fact, 25 relatives have had a deep spiritual change take place in their lives—among them, my fighting warrior of a father. Without God, Dad's last years would have been grim indeed; for his energetic self-reliant man, who'd never depended on anyone else for a thing, suffered a series of strokes, each one leaving him more helpless.

He spent his last four months in Atlantic City General Hospital totally paralyzed, unable even to swallow, dependent on tubes and jars. But his eyes—those eyes that had looked so hopelessly on his father's coffin—shone with certainty that death was not the end.

I remember the last words he ever spoke to me. They came slowly, woodenly; his tongue would not move the way he wanted it to. His breath was shallow; I had to bend close to hear him whisper. "I am very, very happy."

I've even started a series of Christian adventures starring all the Archie gang, with the blessing of my boss at Archie Enterprises, John Goldwater.

Plotting laws upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today, in a 5-4 decision, expanded the power of government prosecutors to attack organized crime through the much-criticized conspiracy laws.

Writing for the majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell said federal gambling laws permit charges of both conspiracy and the gambling itself against five or more persons, although gambling requires mutual participation of those charged with the conspiracy.

The conspiracy decision affirmed the conviction of eight Pittsburgh men who also claimed the evidence against them came from illegal wiretaps. The Court declined to consider the wiretap issue.

The ruling limits use of the 1956-year-old Wharton Rule. Often applied to crimes such as adultery, the rule says that if the main crime requires the participation of those who conspire to commit it, there can be no conspiracy charge.

Since adultery requires willing cooperation from two persons, the Court said, the two cannot be also convicted of conspiracy.

Several circuit courts of appeals have applied the rule to gambling laws, holding that since gambling requires the cooperation of several persons, they cannot also be charged with conspiracy.

Powell said the rule should be limited to where "the immediate consequences of the crime rest on the parties themselves rather than on society at large." He said Congress, in passing the 1970 Omnibus Crime Bill, intended to give the Justice Department tools to battle organized crime, which often is financed by illegal gambling revenues.

"And Congress specifically utilized the law of conspiracy to discourage organized crime's corruption of state and local officials for the purpose of facilitating gambling enterprises," Powell said.

The conspiracy laws have been widely criticized as subject to abuse in "political prosecutions."

In another opinion today, the Court ruled 8 to 1 that federal courts should strictly limit intervening in military court martial.

The Court also ruled in an Alabama obscenity case that if a three-judge federal panel dismisses a plea for an injunction without going into the merits of the case, the appeal must go to a U.S. circuit court of appeals rather than to the Supreme Court.

Switchback city

THIS is one of the Twin Peaks 15 airline miles northwest of Challis. The 10,340-foot-high mountain sits astride the Lemhi-Custer County line. The snowbound road, twisting up the mountainside to the forest lookout station, is in Custer County. In the distance is the Middle Fork of the Salmon River drainage. The road probably is the highest road in Idaho and the snow measuring course below the peak is the highest snow course of the Soil Conservation Service in the state.

Third quint goes home

CHICAGO (UPI) — The washday load has increased again for Cheryl and Vance Shaif.

The third of their four surviving quintuplets—6-week-old Tiffany—was released from Resurrection Hospital and joined the Shaif family Monday.

Her father was lugging up the cost of diapers—the disposable kind.

Vance Shaif, 28, estimated it will cost him $26 a week to keep the youngsters in diapers. He figured they will use about 500 diapers each week.

Solons study felon summons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is considering making prosecutors send felons a summons—as is done with traffic violators—instead of arresting them, the Justice Department says.

Under the proposed change in federal criminal procedures, prosecutors would be required to send a summons, which asks an individual to turn himself in voluntarily, instead of making an arrest on a warrant unless they could convince a U.S. magistrate to make an exception.

"Imagine sending a summons to an accused felon," Assistant Attorney General John Keeney told the House Judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice Monday.

Keeney said summons used for parking violators are "less than a constant success" and that without the power of an arrest warrant a felon could destroy evidence or flee.

"The best chance of seizing contraband or recovering stolen property is by means of a search following a lawful arrest or otherwise under search warrant," Keeney said.

Convincing a magistrate a warrant is essential, he said, would mean extra delays and litigation.

Pool fund pledges accepted

SHOSHONE — Support pledges to those entering the Walkathon for the Lincoln County swimming pool fund are being taken this week.

A minimum of 25 cents a mile is required, however, according to Walkathon committee members.

The 16-mile trek will be from Richfield to Shoshone or opposite, depending upon which way the wind blows. The walkers start at 10 a.m. and will wind up in the city park of whichever town is on the end of the journey.

Refreshments will be served and there will be vehicles traveling along to offer drinks and rest for the walkers.

Myron D. Johnson, Lincoln County treasurer, is pledging to raise $500 by walking. He walks with crutches and has lined up a wheelchair for his "backup" measure.

About $15,000 is needed to provide the local funding necessary to see the pool constructed. Completion date, according to contractors Globe Seed and Feed, Twin Falls, is June 1.

Ford auto sales fall

DETROIT (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co., in the first mid-March report from the slumping auto industry, today said its new car sales fell 24.5 per cent from already depressed levels of last year.

Industry analysts said the reports from General Motors, Chrysler and American Motors, due later today, would leave the industry off about 30 per cent from the March 11-20 levels of last year. It is the second reporting period since the auto industry, with the exception of Chrysler, ended all cash rebates.
