Hansen receives prison term

By BILL LAZARUS
WASHINGTON - Idaho Rep. George Hansen was sentenced to serve two months in jail today for failing to file full financial reports on his 1974 primary election campaign for Congress.

unfairly. In giving the decision, Judge Hart told Hansen, "The court can't conceive you didn't know what the law was." UPI reported.

Hansen was not available for comment this morning. But Martin said that 13,000 other violations of the campaign act have been reported and that no other legislator has been convicted.

Martin agreed that Hansen "did not expect to be convicted to a sentence at all." But although he said there "were discussions between his attorneys and the justice department," he said no plea bargaining had occurred.

REP. GEORGE HANSEN won't yield office

$350 million evacuation fund mulled

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said today the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is considering a $350 million contingency fund for U.S. evacuation from Vietnam after receiving White House assurances that only 1,000 Americans would still be here next week.

Acquitted FORMER Treasury Secretary John Connally wears a grin after his acquittal by a U.S. District Court jury in Washington, D.C., Thursday on charges of taking a bribe for helping persuade President Nixon to raise raw milk price supports. (Story p. 8) (UPI)

Reaction varied from vigorous defense of Hansen to at least one call for his resignation. Most politicians contacted today refused to comment, however.

Water tests show hazard

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Environmental Protection Agency said today a survey of the nation's drinking water supplies shows chemicals, some of them suspected cancer causers, present in each of the 70 cities tested.

Church, a member of the committee, told a press conference the $350 million contingency fund, which is $150 million more than the committee was previously considering, would finance the evacuation and also include some humanitarian aid.

PGI retains confidence

By CRICKET BIRD
TWIN FALLS - The Potato Growers of Idaho (PGI) is confident it hasn't lost the battle over 1975 potato contracts despite success by some major processors in filling their contracts without going through the PGI.

Twin Falls County Republican Party Chairman Laird Noh today defended Hansen.

Chloroform is found in the water supply of every city tested, ranging from as high as 309 micrograms per liter in Huron, S.D., to a low of 0.2 in Tucson, Ariz.

Asked if he also understood only 1,000 Americans were to remain in Saigon by next week, Javits said, "I hope and pray that it is so."

Aid deadline won't be met

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congress appears willing to give President Ford more of the humanitarian aid he wants for South Vietnam, but far less military aid than he sought - if any.

But Twin Falls County Democratic Party Chairman Steve Carter called for Hansen's resignation. "If he has to go to jail he can't very well represent the people of Idaho," he said.

EPA ordered the survey last fall after the Environmental Defense Fund reported a significant relationship between cancer deaths and drinking water taken from the Mississippi River in the New Orleans area.

Because of this, the committee Thursday refused to take any action on a $200 million contingency fund to finance the evacuation.

Contract signing "should be completed this week," DalSoglio said today. He declined to say how many acres Simplot is contracting this year, but indicated the company had about 30,000 contract acres in south central Idaho in 1974.

Robert Linville, State Republican Party chairman, was on vacation and not available for comment this morning. In earlier statements Linville said that Hansen should resign if he were given a jail term.

The group said there would be 50 fewer cancer deaths every year among white males in New Orleans if cancer causing agents were removed from the water.

Unresolved dispute over what some senators consider to be too slow a rate of evacuation of Americans from South Vietnam could further delay funds for evacuation operations and other humanitarian purposes.

One-Ida's general manager of agriculture, John Catey, said that company has completed more than 50 per cent of its 1975 contract requirements. Catey declined to give acreage figures for either 1974 or 1975 but said totals this year would be less than last year.

Gov. Cecil Andrus issued a statement that "The congressman pleaded guilty and the judge carried out sentencing. Justice has been served and the congressman must decide whether he wishes to answer to his constituents now or at the next election."

It also was the biggest quarterly decline on record. In statistics for full years, the drop in the first quarter was exceeded only by declines of 12 per cent in 1946, during the industry's conversion to peacetime production, and the 14.8 per cent decline in 1932, at the depth of the Great Depression.

That makes the fifth consecutive quarterly drop of the real GNP, the longest decline since the government started keeping quarterly records in 1947.

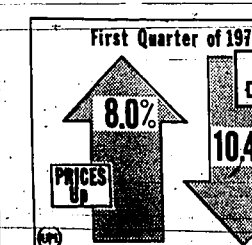

The Senate approved legislation in 1973 to restrict access to cheap handguns but no action was taken on the bill by the House.

GNP, inflation dip

WASHINGTON (Star) - The U.S. economy's total production plummeted at an annual rate of 10.4 per cent in the first quarter of this year, the sharpest decline in 29 years, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

business inventories, which economists believe will clear the way for the recession to end around the middle of this year. The strength of the expected economic upturn in the second half of the year is in doubt.

Nevertheless, Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Thursday that the White House was "pleased" with the progress Congress was making. President Ford said in a speech Wednesday he did not intend to hold Congress strictly to his April 13 time limit.

Gun ban bill offered

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Two Senate Democrats Thursday introduced a bill to ban the manufacture and sale of small handguns and to license all handgun owners.

Contracting this year, but indicated the company had about 30,000 contract acres in south central Idaho in 1974. The 1975 contract acreage will be less than last year's, DalSoglio said.

Simplot is offering that a straight $3.15 contract as well as a $3 base incentive contract. Ore-Ida's general manager of agriculture, John Catey, said that company has completed more than 50 per cent of its 1975 contract requirements.

The Senate approved legislation in 1973 to restrict access to cheap handguns but no action was taken on the bill by the House.

Noting last year's rapid rise in the crime statistics, Kennedy said "protecting the people of our nation from the lawless misuse of handguns remains an important item on the list of our national social crises."

Kennedy said that handguns account for 54 per cent of all murders in the country.

Historic laughter

The funniest sight of the year was captured in a photograph of President Gerald Ford and actor James Whitmore laughing together in Washington, D.C. Thursday.

The other suspect carcinogen studied in the survey was carbon tetrachloride. Its presence was far less common than chloroform but it did turn up to one degree or another in the water supplies of Waterbury, Conn.; Passaic-Valley, N.J.; suburban Wilmington, Del.; Huntington, W.Va.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Topeka, Kan.; Cape Girardeau, Mo.; and Dayton, Ohio.

The cities surveyed were a combination of ground water supplies and surface water sources for tap water. Other chloroform readings included, in milligrams per liter, Boston, 4; New York, 2; San Juan, P.R., 47; Philadelphia, 86; Washington, D.C., 41; Atlanta, 36; Charleston, S.C., 189; Cincinnati, 45; Chicago, 15; Detroit, 12; Columbus, Ohio, 134; Cleveland, Ohio, 182; Milwaukee, 9; Terrebonne Parish, La., 131; St. Louis, 55; San Diego, 52; Los Angeles, 32; San Francisco, 41; Seattle, 15; Denver, 14; Miami, 31; and Lincoln, Neb., 4.

The other chemicals found in the survey were bromodichloromethane, dibromochloromethane, bromoform and 1,2-dichloroethane.

EPA said chloroform and the first three of the above are formed by chlorination.

The EPA said the agency has recommended to the U.S. solicitor general that the government accept an appeals ruling, handed down by the 8th circuit Court of Appeals three weeks ago, found that Reserve's discharges violate nitrate and water-pollution laws and that they "give rise to a potential threat to public health."

The court ordered Reserve to take immediate action to remedy the air situations, and to stop dumping in Lake Superior within three years.

EPA sought a two-year deadline, claiming that ingestion of the tailings in drinking water taken from Lake Superior pose a potential threat to health.

EPA health officials testified that asbestos pollution can cause cancer, but that symptoms of the disease may not appear for another 10 to 20 years.

Last year District Court Judge Miles Lord ordered the company to shut down its plant immediately because of the long-term cancer threat. The three-member appeals court, however, granted the three-year delay, on grounds that no harm to public health had yet been proven.

EPA General Counsel Hubert Zener said EPA has established a task force to monitor reserve's cleanup.

GNP slips 10.4% in first quarter

Total output declined at an annual rate of 9 percent in the fourth quarter of last year. Since the decline began in late 1973, real GNP has fallen 7.5 percent.

A decline of 10 percent or more in the first quarter had been widely predicted by government and independent economists. Because of the way the business cycle works, this sharp drop is viewed in a sense as good news, because it is expected to lay the groundwork for an upturn in production within the next several months.

The biggest element in the decline was a reduction of $18 billion in business inventories. This followed a rise of $17.8 billion in the preceding quarter, so there was a massive swing of $35.8 billion in inventory investment.

Weak sales led to a buildup of excess stocks of goods last year. To work off these stocks, businesses sharply reduced their purchases and slashed production and employment in the first quarter of this year.

So long as sales are sustained or rise, inventory liquidation at some stage will reduce stocks of goods to manageable levels. When that happens, orders, production and employment will have to rise in order to replenish inventories to normal demand.

Many economists believe the bulk of the inventory reduction was accomplished in the first quarter, so production should soon level off and start rising. The turnaround could be delayed, however, if sales fall off, which would prevent business from reducing stocks of goods as much as desired.

Production for sales rather than inventory stabilized in the first quarter after a prolonged decline.

The 8 percent inflation rate in the first quarter was in terms of the broad GNP price index, which is more comprehensive than indexes of consumer and wholesale prices.

Inflation was below 8 percent as measured by alternative GNP price indexes, the department said. With real GNP and inflation both declining, the dollar value of total production dropped 3.2 percent in the first quarter to an annual rate of $1.419 trillion. This was the first decline since 1960.

Cancer suspect chemicals found in drinking water

The fund's study said the Mississippi itself was polluted with industrial wastes and that chlorination in water treatment-plants turned some others into carcinogens.

"Our basic conclusion from the survey released today is that the problem of organic chemicals in public water supply systems exists throughout the country," Train said. "And even at the low levels we found, the chemicals are a matter of concern that warrants the diligent carrying out of safe drinking water plans."

Train said the study clearly showed that the chlorination process contributes to the formation of four of the six chemicals studied.

"For example, our analysis of raw untreated water in the 79 locations showed no trace of the six chemicals in 30 cities, with extremely low concentrations in the other 49 cities," he said.

"Analysis of samples of treated water, on the other hand, disclosed that every one of the 79 supplies contained one or more of the six chemicals."

"I hasten to add that chlorination remains the single most effective method of preventing outbreaks of waterborne diseases, such as typhoid, cholera and dysentery," he said. "We continue to believe that the benefits of chlorine use to prevent immediate acute biological diseases far outweigh the potential health risks from chlorine-derived organic compounds."

Train said the EPA has asked the National Academy of Sciences to assess the health impact of the initial findings and the EPA will report to Congress in June in a more comprehensive fashion.

The other suspected carcinogen studied in the survey was carbon tetrachloride. Its presence was far less common than chloroform but it did turn up to one degree or another in the water supplies of Waterbury, Conn.; Passaic-Valley, N.J.; suburban Wilmington, Del.; Huntington, W.Va.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Topeka, Kan.; Cape Girardeau, Mo.; and Dayton, Ohio.

The cities surveyed were a combination of ground water supplies and surface water sources for tap water. Other chloroform readings included, in milligrams per liter, Boston, 4; New York, 2; San Juan, P.R., 47; Philadelphia, 86; Washington, D.C., 41; Atlanta, 36; Charleston, S.C., 189; Cincinnati, 45; Chicago, 15; Detroit, 12; Columbus, Ohio, 134; Cleveland, Ohio, 182; Milwaukee, 9; Terrebonne Parish, La., 131; St. Louis, 55; San Diego, 52; Los Angeles, 32; San Francisco, 41; Seattle, 15; Denver, 14; Miami, 31; and Lincoln, Neb., 4.

The other chemicals found in the survey were bromodichloromethane, dibromochloromethane, bromoform and 1,2-dichloroethane.

EPA said chloroform and the first three of the above are formed by chlorination.

The EPA said the agency has recommended to the U.S. solicitor general that the government accept an appeals ruling, handed down by the 8th circuit Court of Appeals three weeks ago, found that Reserve's discharges violate nitrate and water-pollution laws and that they "give rise to a potential threat to public health."

The court ordered Reserve to take immediate action to remedy the air situations, and to stop dumping in Lake Superior within three years.

EPA sought a two-year deadline, claiming that ingestion of the tailings in drinking water taken from Lake Superior pose a potential threat to health

Injunction blocks closure of ISU architect program

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI). — Sixth District Judge Arthur Oliver today issued a preliminary injunction blocking the board of education decision to eliminate the five-year architecture program at Idaho State University.

In issuing his opinion, Judge Oliver ruled that a contract did exist between the board and students based on representations made in and reliance on the university's class bulletin.

The judge said students represented by the class action suit were entitled to a master's degree at ISU and elimination of the program would constitute a breach of contract.

Oliver also ruled that if the parties offered no further arguments, the injunction would become permanent and the program remain intact until 1980 to allow all students currently enrolled in architecture classes to complete the entire degree program.

action, that they had gotten what they wanted.

The suit affects some 75 students in first, second and third year classes.

Judge Oliver also ruled that monetary damages would be inadequate and plaintiffs have no remedy under the law for monetary damages. The students asked that they be awarded damages to cover the costs of moving to another university town if the program were eliminated and they had to go elsewhere to complete their degrees.

He ruled that there was a mutually of obligation existing but no mutuality of remedy is required for the plaintiffs to be granted judgment.

The judge ruled in provisions for the permanent injunction that the university bulletin used for the 1973-74 and 1974-

75 school years with listing for junior year architecture offerings should be carried through the 1976-77 academic year. Those courses labeled senior year should be offered through 1977-78, and that the fifth year be continued to 1979-80 or until no first year students currently enrolled are still attending.

The ruling gives those who are supporting continuation of the program another 2 1/2 years to fight for keeping the entire program at Pocatello campus.

Mr. Hay said it would cost $80,000 additionally to accredit the program at ISU and that the board decided against continuing the program on basis that it felt there should be no program of arch in Idaho. The program at the University of Idaho meets requirements for national accreditation.

Scout-a-rama set Saturday

FILER — Boy Scouts from the Falls District will present the annual Scout-a-rama at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds Saturday.

The exhibition of Scouting skills and activities will be open to all interested persons from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Cub Scout, Boy Scout and Explorer units from the district will take part.

The theme for the show — "Be Safe — Be Fit" — is the theme for the show, one of four to be presented this spring in the Snake River Area Council.

The amount represents money donated in lieu of trophies for the recent bowling tournament and personal donations from bowlers and the Magic Bowl.

Women prisoner move set

BOISE (UPI) — Women prisoners at the Idaho State Penitentiary will be moved to other sites, mostly in Nevada, to make room for the growing male population at the new prison south of Boise.

"Our prisoner count is up in 560 and we just don't have the room here for all the men and the women, too," said Warden Dick Anderson.

"We have waited on our decision to see if the women's facility would fill up. It hasn't, and we had to make a decision about what to do with them," he said.

There are 11 women at the prison. There is room for 24 in the women's section.

"We are accounting for every bed in the facility, and there is no flexibility in handling prisoners," he said.

Idaho authorities have examined Nevada's female prisoner program and believe it is "extremely adequate and offers rehabilitation efforts that we are not able to match here."

Four federal prisoners will be returned to federal authorities and will be transferred to Nevada at the request of federal officials. Idaho state prisoners will be transferred to the Nevada State Prison and Anderson said the women probably still will be together.

They will be sent to Nevada in two groups, traveling by auto, between April 28 and May 25-30. Anderson said the total number of prisoners that will go to Nevada is seven.

Other women prisoners will be returned to court for evaluation of 120-day commitment recommendations.

Anderson said he does not know what has caused the increase in the prisoner population.

"The number of women sent here is down, but the male population is skyrocketing."

"The same sort of situation happened after World War II and after Korea, and it's happening now after Vietnam," he said.

New school head speaks

JEROME — The new Jerome school superintendent spoke in Jerome and heard appeals to keep high school students off the streets at noon.

Percy C. Christensen, Hansen, who has been hired as the new superintendent for the Jerome district, was guest speaker at the Jerome Chamber of Commerce luncheon Wednesday.

Christensen said he has no immediate plans for the district. "Everyone keeps asking me what are my plans for Jerome. I have not made any plans at this time," he said.

He said he wanted to become more familiar with the school district and the community before he began making any change. "I will not make any changes without the approval of the school administration, school board and community."

He said he felt a school should give a student the basic foundation of education, noting that extra-curricular activities are also important. He said he was very pleased with the plans for the new high school and highly impressed with the school district's personnel.

The new superintendent pointed out that there was a lack of public relations between the district and the community.

Christensen said he would be willing at any time to listen to the community and would make every effort to keep them informed.

During a question and answer period it was brought out that the local merchants and residents were upset and concerned about the number of students that are dragging Main Street and running around town during the noon hour.

Howard DuBois, chief of police, said the major problem with the students has not been their dragging Main Street but shoplifting. He noted he was late for the luncheon because they just had caught another student shoplifting.

Christensen was asked if a closed campus could not be enforced at the new high school. He said he would definitely consider the matter.

Lyle VanOrman, school board chairman, said the trustees have been approached by residents requesting the closed campus. He said the board is now considering it.

"Several years ago the school district tried to have a closed campus at the present school and it was met with nothing but protest from the community," VanOrman said.

TF man faces felony charge

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was arrested Wednesday on a felony charge of delivery of a controlled substance.

According to Twin Falls police chief of detectives Tim Qualls, the arrest of David Dean Moorehead, 21, Twin Falls, followed an investigation by Twin Falls police, state narcotics officers and Twin Falls County Sheriff's officers.

Qualls said Moorehead was arrested at his Twin Falls home about 6:10 p.m. Wednesday after an arrest warrant prepared by the three law enforcement agencies was issued by the courts.

Qualls would not say what types or amounts of drugs were involved in the arrest.

Moorehead was scheduled for arraignment this morning. He was being held in the Twin Falls city jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Fifth District Magistrate Judge Daniel Meehl, who set the bond, said he fixed the amount of the bond on the recommendation of state narcotics officers.

The amount of bond can be lowered at a later date if bond hearing testimony indicates such action is appropriate, Meehl added.

He said he did not know what drugs were involved in the arrest.

Gas prices on the rise

TWIN FALLS — Gasoline prices seem to be on the rise after remaining stable the first part of the year.

The average price for regular at eight major brand service stations surveyed by the Times-News was 37.6 cents a gallon for regular and 63.1 cents for premium. Regular's average price was almost 2 per cent higher than in March and premium's 4.6 per cent higher than in March.

Self-service prices were lower at an average of 52.9 cents for regular, a 2.5 per cent increase from last month's average. Self-service premium was 54.6 cents on the average, or 1.2 per cent higher than last month's average.

In April 1974, a Times-News survey showed prices averaged 54.3 cents a gallon for full service regular and about 58 cents for premium.

MACOS subsidy step down the road to 1984

WASHINGTON — Over the past 10 years, the National Science Foundation has paid out more than $6.5 million in public funds for the development and promotion of a social studies course intended for use at the fifth-grade level.

The course is now under attack in the House of Representatives. The matter merits your attention.

The row has to do with "Man: A Course of Study," known for short as MACOS. The teaching materials were developed under an NSF grant by Curriculum Development Associates, a private Washington firm. Dr. Jerome Bruner, an experimental psychologist long identified with Harvard and later with Oxford University, was in charge of the undertaking.

Work began on MACOS in 1963. In 1970 the completed course of study became available. Since then, an estimated 1,700 schools have put it into use. Some school districts have tried MACOS and discarded it under parental fire.

Much of the course of study deals with animals, birds, and fish. The most controversial portion has to do with the Neolithic Eskimos, whose tribal characteristics are approvingly examined. Congressman John B. Conlan of Arizona has catalogued some of these characteristics: adultery, bestiality, cannibalism, incest, infanticide, murder, revenge, robbery, and wife-swapping.

Critics contend, to the contrary, that the values promoted by MACOS are not regarded as values except by a highly sophisticated minority; and they say the barely concealed purpose of MACOS is indeed to teach children how to think — to think, that is, as Dr. Bruner would like them to think.

Questions arise. To judge from Conlan's compilation of complaints across the country, the course of study is offensive to hundreds, perhaps thousands, of parents. It is reasonable to assume, however, that no course of study — except the most bland and innocuous material — could be made offensive to everyone.

Did the NSF have any responsibility, once it had agreed to get into this thing, for the course content? The question arises because the NSF director, H. Guyford Stever, last week yielded to the queries from Conlan and from Olin E. Teague of Texas. Stever tentatively agreed to cut off current as well as future funding for MACOS.

Finally, the most serious question: Is it wise for the federal government, through NSF or any other agency, to commission the writing and promotion of any textbooks at all? Is this not an ominous echo of the Soviet Union's promulgation of official scientific theory?

It seems so to me. For my own part, I am repelled by the manipulative theories of such behavioral scientists as Bruner and B.F. Skinner. Skinner's stuff gives me the creeps. But even if they were propounding sound doctrine, they would have no right to pursue academic freedom with the people's money.

Once the notion is accepted that government has power to commission and to subsidize textbooks in social science, we move a significant step down the road to 1984.

Vanishing shield

New York Times

So varied and numerous in recent years have been the warnings of hazards from environmental contamination — an ice age caused by air pollution, cancer from substances in wide use, and the like — that one tends to become inured.

A new threat, however, represents special problem. It concerns a phenomenon remote from our direct ken, essential to our lives, yet strangely fragile.

This is the presence of ozone thinly distributed through a region of the atmosphere that begins about eight miles overhead. Few, until recently, have been aware of its importance. Fewer still understand the complex chemistry whereby it is constantly destroyed and replenished.

According to a study of the problem made public recently by the National Academy of Sciences, more than 250 chemical reactions are involved.

There is no doubt that this ozone (a gas whose molecules are formed of three oxygen atoms) absorbs those wavelengths of ultraviolet light from the sun that otherwise would make the land uninhabitable. Nor does recent research leave any doubt, according to the Academy report, that oxides of nitrogen occurring in that region of the stratosphere are the chief factor in breaking down ozone in its natural cycle of depletion and reconstitution.

It was the fear that exhaust from supersonic transports would introduce additional oxides of nitrogen that in 1971 led to early warnings of severe ozone depletion. But now what appears to be a far more serious threat has emerged.

It is suggested that the seemingly stable gases, widely known by their trade name, Freon, used as refrigerants and as propellants in spray cans, are broken down in the stratosphere.

This process releases chlorine, which is six times more efficient at ozone breakdown than the oxides of nitrogen. There is evidence that these gases have already begun to penetrate the stratosphere and will do so in greater quantity following the recent rapid rise in their production.

A federal interagency task force has been formed to recommend how the severity of this threat can be determined more precisely and to explore what might be done to regulate the manufacture of such gases and cushion the impact on industry, if such regulation is deemed necessary.

The subtlety of the ozone threat leads one to wonder what other products of this industrialized society may be at work in ways that, as proposed for Freon, could pass unnoticed until it was too late.

The need for international, global monitoring programs such as those discussed (with only modest results) at the 1972 United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in Stockholm, has become unmistakably clear.

Cynicism builds each day as America's 20-year strategy in Southeast Asia becomes unworkable. President Ford blames the chaos in Vietnam on Congress for failing to send money and more guns to the Thieu regime. But Thieu's troops have abandoned more than $1 billion worth of American weapons and Thieu himself is trying to find a way to ship $73 million in gold bars to his family, already safe in Switzerland.

With the growing cynicism is growing awareness here at home that little of what has been told by American officials about Vietnam in the last two decades was true. The American plan for Vietnam, doesn't work and never worked. Saigon's army, known as ARVN, fought first alongside the French against the Vietnamese people. ARVN was defeated in that war. It was defeated again in 1964 before Lyndon Johnson decided to show the world what a Texas commander-in-chief could do with the world's best air force and 550,000 soldiers and Marines.

Now ARVN has been defeated again.

Should the press help the CIA keep secrets? CIA director William Colby says it should help the government keep "good secrets." "Bad secrets," like the Bay of Pigs which the New York Times sat on, and "nonsecrets," the current debate on investigations of the CIA, he implied are fair game. The only trouble is, who is to be the judge of good, bad or nonsecrets? Not the government surely. That leaves the press with the task of wrestling with its obligation to publish the news vs. its obligation not to injure the national interest. Obviously, neither the press nor government has a monopoly on wisdom. But the makers of secrets are hardly the ones who should judge their worth. And if the press becomes party to covering up government's secrets, it loses its credibility and its ability to keep government honest.

US military power limits apply only in Indochina

Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary James Schlesinger has reminded critics of Congress that U.S. military power has been expressly barred by law only in the four states of Indochina.

"Southeast Asia is unique," Schlesinger has declared in emphasizing that America's treaty obligations in Japan, Korea and Western Europe "remain the highest law of the land."

In a sweeping analysis of the "historic ebb and flow of American sentiment" about this country's proper role in global affairs, Schlesinger told the Overseas Press Club in New York Tuesday night that U.S. defense commitments are "in fact."

"Our forces are deployed notably in Germany in support of our NATO allies," he said, adding: "It will be understood in all nations, east and west, that an attack upon our forces supporting the alliance will immediately bring to bear the full weight of American military power."

With the "slaking of passions" over South Vietnam and Cambodia, Schlesinger predicted an "improved perspective" regarding the U.S. role in the North Atlantic community and said that the "true American stake in the external world is undergoing serious re-thinking and validation."

The defense chief expressed his confidence that "though there is no desire to be the policeman of the world, there is a developing appreciation, to revise Carlyle, that without the constabulary there can only be anarchy."

Declaring that he could not predict precisely how successful the Saigon government would be in attempting to stabilize its position after its collapse in the northern provinces, Schlesinger said the Vietnamese "defense not only, for hope for success, but our continued support."

Schlesinger called the "flagrant violations" of the Paris peace accords an "object lesson regarding how much constraint on the actions of at least one Communist state such pledged treaty obligations have when the force balance becomes favorable."

He said it illustrated "how our valid hopes for detente directly depend upon the retention of an underlying equilibrium of force" in areas vital to the free world.

Schlesinger, noting the "alternating patterns of enthusiasm and disenchantment" that have marked the American attitude after past wars, warned that changes in the public mood can be "quite exaggerated in the course of public discussion."

He declared that U.S. society is not only "highly resilient," but has shown itself to be "remarkably tenacious of purpose, as I think the over-all history of war in Southeast Asia would indicate."

Today's disenchantment with U.S. policy, he said, has not matched the low point of the 1960's, as reflected in the Nye committee investigation when there was "a search for conspiracy, the mixture of paranoia and self-flagellation as the substitute for seeking an understanding of history, as well as quasi-Marxist nonsense about the merchants of death — which replaced freedom of the seas, unbridled submarine warfare, Wilsonian idealism and astute British propaganda as the explanation of our involvement in World War I."

Historically, he said, the mixture of idealism and disenchantment has resulted in "a quest for novelty in foreign policy," but in the world today "there are no novelties suddenly to be discovered."

The United States will be "obliged either to support its more or less permanent interests or withdraw into the North American continent," he said.

PETER LISAGOR

Concern about secrets

WASHINGTON — Tucked into President Ford's speech to Congress warning that secret operations of the Central Intelligence Agency must be protected from "altered" congressional oversight that threatens "essential secrets."

Ford's purpose: repeal of an oversight provision requires the President to notify "appropriate committees" including the notoriously leaky Senate Foreign Relations and House International Relations committees, before approving any overt CIA operation abroad.

This presidential concern comes not a moment too soon for the few friends of the CIA still willing to buck the political lynch-mob psychology which began with disclosures about the CIA's clandestine work in Chile and illegal spying on American citizens.

Indeed, the apparent reluctance of both the White House and embattled CIA director William Colby to shout their fears about destruction of the agency has infuriated semi-minded intelligence experts. "For the life of me," one such expert told us, "I cannot figure out why President Ford and Colby have handled this 'assassination' issue so ineptly."

Asking anonymity, this official continued: "As far as I know the CIA never killed any foreign leaders. Plotting may be something else again, but if every thought a man had were translated automatically into action, there would be a few of us out of jail or still alive. But assassinations, no sir, and I defy anyone to prove differently."

But when the charge of possible CIA assassinations of foreign leaders surfaced, the White House reaction was to hand that issue to the presidential commission headed by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

Colby, a straight arrow without guile, is trying to hold back the floodgates by offering his full cooperation to the separate, year-long probes about to start in the Senate and House.

Colby's policy is passionately debated by him and top-level CIA officials, with their own conflicting views. Colby contends that in today's political climate, his job is to reveal almost everything to any duly-constituted Congressional committee and claim executive privilege only in extraordinary cases.

Some former intelligence officials believe he has no alternative.

But another faction violently disagrees. Their thesis: almost everything the CIA has done was under direct orders from a President of the United States. Yet the agency is now asked to take the rap for extra-legal activity. So, take the heat — but tell nothing that could compromise the CIA's daily routine.

EVANS AND NOVAK

In fact, daily routine is already compromised to a point that the agency is now engaging in a bare handful of covert "operations" abroad, none particularly sensitive.

Colby is well aware of criticism against his policy of total cooperation with the multitude of investigators. His aim is to avoid an "adversary relationship" with congressional probes, depending on their self-control to preserve national security.

The President's signal that he intends to tighten the oversight role of Congress serves as a somber warning to the two investigating committees. If their 21 members cannot keep the CIA's past and present secrets, Congress will not have a long-range oversight role. The CIA will, have died, an unnatural death.

NATO's worries should be halfway around world

N.Y. Times Service

BRUSSELS — NATO leaders like to comfort themselves these days by assuring each other: "The alliance is doing well; not the allies."

What this means is that there is general recognition of the problems facing the West and that ultimately some difficulties with individual pact members, such as Greece and Turkey, may be surmounted.

But not Portugal. That is regarded as NATO's present Achilles heel and virtually doomed to opt out, after giving the advance notice legally required. Nor can the alliance for even an instant contemplate applying a kind of reverse Brezhnev doctrine. Interpreting in Portuguese affairs as Russia did those of Czechoslovakia, to insure it remains tied to NATO under a pro-Western regime.

All this being said, it is surprising how few of the missions attached to alliance headquarters seem sufficiently concerned with grinding shifts in world power balances being produced by gains of pro-Soviet factions in Southeast and Southwest Asia. Vietnam is rarely discussed among NATO diplomats and China never.

No matter how ugly the potential Portuguese problem may prove, with its Azores and Iberian ramifications, Moscow's strategic ascendancy on the largest continent should be a matter of concern. And this concern is that also of Russia's vast neighbor, China.

Chairman Mao's government is aware of this fact. For years it has been urging the West to keep military strong and united.

Obviously as Soviet political clout and military ascendancy rise, it becomes harder for NATO to maintain its crucially important position in Europe. Allied populations are increasingly interested in paying for little own protection when everyone talks about detente; and the United States is in no mood to extend its own obligations. NATO must therefore focus its energies on keeping itself from crumbling.

Sihanouk sees eventual Red takeover in Cambodia

By ROBERT KAYLOR

Several years ago when Prince Norodom Sihanouk was still running Cambodia, he passed during a self-conducted tour of a new tourist hotel to talk politics.

The rotund prince, his voice rising in a characteristic note, maintained that "I am no Communist" despite his close relationships with North Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the Chinese.

"But I will tell you one thing," the prince went on. "After I leave, the Communists will come and Cambodia will be Communist."

Through the years Sihanouk has been known for changing his statements with the political winds, but he has also been known for his flashes of candor.

In that light, his statements of former years fit in with those of the past few days that he does not expect to hold power again in Cambodia because "I do not want to fight with people whose ideology I do not share."

The handwriting appears to be on the wall that despite Sihanouk's title as chief of state in exile and his role as mouthpiece for the insurgent movement in Cambodia for the past five years, it will be others who will be in charge of whatever new government comes into being.

Sihanouk, now 52, was a literal one-man government in Cambodia since 1960. He was ousted in a coup led by Field Marshal Lon Nol in 1970 during a lengthy absence from the country.

Since then, there have been indications that Communist leaders in Peking and Hanoi did not look upon Sihanouk as the man with whom they wanted to deal.

When Khieu Samphan, tabbed by a Sihanouk spokesman as the man who will administer the new regime, visited Peking last year, official Chinese accounts of the visit relegated Sihanouk to the last paragraph. Diplomatic observers said later the prince's role was little more than as a pro-forma interpreter.

Relations between Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan are not likely to be cordial. The prince jailed Samphan in 1967 as a member of the Khmer Rouge Communist movement and according to some accounts planned to have him killed; but Samphan escaped.

PRINCE NORODOM SIHANOUK

...handwriting on wall?

Letters Nation's birth began April 19

Editor, Times-News:

"Listen, my children, and you shall hear of the midnight ride of Paul Revere. On the eighteenth of April, in seventy-five; Hardly a man is now alive who remembers that famous day and year. He said to his friend, 'If the British march by land or sea from the town tonight, hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch of the North Church tower as a signal light - One, if by land, and two, if by sea; and I on the opposite shore will be, ready to ride and spread the alarm through every Middlesex village and farm, for the country folk to be up and to arm.'"

Those stirring words written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow were learned by this and every other school boy who grew up in Middlesex County, Mass., where the nineteenth of April is a memorable holiday.

It is the day which commemorates the day when the "shot heard around the world" was fired at the Battle of Lexington and Concord.

Although 1976 is the year we are commemorating the birth of this nation in a bicentennial year, we need to remember that it began here. That is, it was here that the handful of farmers, merchants, boys, who had hardly done more than "play soldier," took on most powerful army in the world.

"Rabbits" they were, and began a struggle which lasted for six long years until the British finally surrendered at Yorktown in 1781 and we began to become a united states.

But it just didn't happen. It took many, many years to become a nation - Not because there was great opposition, but because, just as now, there was great apathy; people were too interested in the status quo to become involved.

But, every now and then, we can pause - and "listen" - "So through the night-ride Paul Revere; and so through the night went his cry of alarm to every Middlesex village and farm - a cry of defiance and not of fear, a voice in the darkness, a knock at the door, and a word that shall echo forevermore! For, borne on the night wind of the past, through all our history, to the last, in the hour of darkness and peril and need, the people will waken and listen to hear the hurrying hoof-beats of that steed, and the midnight message of Paul Revere."

REV. ALBERT E. ALLEN

Other Sihanouk characteristics do not fit the analysis. He married six times and with 14 children, Sihanouk devoted himself to the good life in yearly trips to France. His pastimes included playing the clarinet and singing in nightclubs, as well as producing movies in which he starred.

Of medium height and portly build, Sihanouk was crowned king by the French colonial government in 1941, when he was only 19 years old.

No one expected Sihanouk to develop nationalist tendencies in the dozen years that followed. The young king soon acquired a string of pretty girls, and began to play his life away.

His last marriage, in 1951 to Princess Monique, a half-Italian, half-Cambodian beauty queen he met at a girls' pageant that year, was the one that lasted.

Sihanouk himself told his people in a radio broadcast some years later: "It is true that from 1941 to 1952 when I was king, still young and handsome, certain pretty specimens of the feeble sex liked my company and it came about that I sinned."

The turning point in his life came in 1952, when his five-year-old daughter died suddenly: "I saw her death as a supernatural sign of punishment for my sins," Sihanouk said, "and resolved to lead my people in the fight for total independence from France as atonement."

Cambodia was granted independence along with the rest of the Indochina states in the Geneva accords of 1954 and Sihanouk reaped the reward. He was hailed by his people as the man who brought them freedom.

Shortly afterward, in February of 1955, Sihanouk renounced the Cambodian throne in favor of his father, Norodom Suramarit, and proclaimed himself prime minister. "I want to show that I do not cling to power, authority and privilege," he said at the time. "Besides, as King I saw only flowers and heard only lies."

Many observers believe Sihanouk could still be useful to Cambodia's new rulers if he is willing.

His inclusion in a figurehead role as chief of state would give the government added legitimacy, both with third world countries who have supported him in exile and with the Cambodian peasantry who worshiped him as a Buddhist monarch.

"After the war, perhaps for some years, they the Communists need Sihanouk for the outside world," the prince said in an interview some time ago. "After that I don't know, I don't know."

FBI sets criminal data plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Federal Bureau of Investigation has unveiled plans for a complicated new system in which it would switch information about criminal records among states.

If the bureau's plan is approved, it would go into effect Sept. 15 and would eventually cost more than $40,000 a year.

The proposal ran into immediate objection from Sen. V. Tunney, D-Calif., new chairman of the Senate's constitutional rights subcommittee. In a letter to Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi, he said it was a minor step into the control of the flow of criminal history information.

In the past, there has been strong objection both from some states and other federal agencies to any plan that would centralize in the FBI's Washington headquarters control over the flow of criminal history information among states.

The FBI plan made public Wednesday by Deputy Atty. Gen. Harold R. Tyler Jr., seems to include a number of features designed to reduce criticism, but the bureau would still have its controversial central message-switching role.

A key feature of the bureau plan is the division of its criminal history records into separate categories. It would keep full records on those arrested for federal offenses and those arrested in more than one state. But it would create a separate category for those arrested in only one state.

Entries in the second category would contain only enough information to identify the person, and any additional information, including details of the person, and any arrest record, could be obtained only by a separate inquiry to the state where the person had been arrested.

US court jurors acquit Connally

© N. Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — John B. Connally was acquitted late Thursday of bribery charges by a jury in United States District Court.

The 58-year-old former secretary of the Treasury displayed no emotion as the foreman of the jury stood, glanced quickly at Connally and declared "the jury finds the defendant not guilty." Moments later, however, Connally broke into a broad grin, shook hands exuberantly with his defense attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, embraced his wife Idanelle, "You bet," Connally said when he was asked if he was happy at the verdict.

The jury deliberated five and a half hours before finding Connally not guilty of two separate charges that he had accepted a total of $10,000 as an illegal gratuity from a dairy farmer organization in 1971.

Connally, who had been considered a prospective Republican candidate for the presidency before he was indicted last August, hinted that the acquittal verdict might prompt a resumption of his political career.

"I hope as long as I live I never lose the desire to participate in public affairs," he told reporters as he clutched his wife's hand. "I've seen the system work today," Connally said, "and it has made me more deeply committed to preserving the system."

Members of his family, some of them with tears in their eyes, surrounded Connally as he strode briskly, head erect, from the courtroom where his future had been at stake for three weeks. He said that he would have an announcement sometime in the future about what the verdict might mean in terms of the 1976 election year.

The jury's decision came as a surprise to spectators who had packed the courtroom at 5:30 p.m. in expectation of a decision by Chief Judge George L. Hart Jr. to send the panel to dinner.

Connally's attorneys, who had been in court since the government and defense attorneys, Hart took the bench and announced, "The jury has reached a verdict."

A loud collective gasp spread through the courtroom. The jurors filed in slowly, took seats in the jury box and the foreman, a 37-year-old historian, whom Hart returned to identify by name, rose to report.

He said that the jury had agreed on verdicts of not guilty to each of the two charges involving $5,000 of the alleged payoff money.

Hart's court clerk then asked the jury if that was the verdict of each and every one of the panel members.

"It is," they replied in chorus.

Lebanon clashes continue

BEIRUT (UPI) — Edgy Palestinian guerrillas and rightwing milliamen put their forces on alert today after a new round of fighting temporarily shattered their shaky truce and left more than a dozen people dead or injured.

Despite the violations, the government-arranged ceasefire ending four days of warfare appeared to be holding again in most parts of the city.

Police said at least 10 persons were killed and several more injured in an outbreak of bombings, snipings, machinegun and mortar attacks Thursday.

The new casualties brought the estimated toll in five days of fighting between the Palestinians and Lebanese Phalangists to 145 dead and more than 250 wounded.

Both sides, wary of further attacks, ordered a state of alert and manned roadblocks around their respective areas of the city today.

Beirut remained shattered. Its streets deserted of all but steel-helmeted security forces patrolling intersections in armored cars.

Residents of the battered, rubble-strewn capital, vented-out Thursday for the first time since the clashes began Sunday, but quickly retreated inside again with the newest outbreak of violence.

Heavy fighting with mortars and machineguns erupted for about an hour Thursday in a residential district near central Beirut.

Occasional bursts of gunfire could be heard elsewhere in the city.

A bomb blew apart a clothing store a block away from Beirut's fashionable Hamra street after another blast wrecked a store in the southern port city of Sidon two hours earlier, witnesses said.

Drama, comedies head Emmy lists

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "QB VII," a special dramatizing Leon Uris' novel, drew the most Emmy award nominations Thursday, taking 13, and "M-A-S-H," the black comedy of blood and hanky panky in a Korean war Army hospital, led the series ranks with 11.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and the special "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," drew nine each.

The nominations were made by the 1,200 members of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, and the winners, to be picked by select committees, will be made public in televised award ceremonies May 19.

"M-A-S-H" was nominated for best comedy series, and won nominations for Alan Alda as best actor, Loretta Switt as best supporting actress and MpagLea Stevenson as best supporting actor in a comedy series.

Competitors in the comedy series category are "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," its spinoff "Rhoda," and "All in the Family."

Opposing "QB VII" for best special of the year are "The Law," "Missiles of October," "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom" and "Love Among the Ruins," which drew best actor and actress nominations for its stars, Laurence Olivier and Katharine Hepburn.

Nominees for the best dramatic series were dominated by police shows: "The Streets of San Francisco," "Police Story," "Kojak," "The Waltons," and the British-made "Upstairs, Downstairs."

"QB VII" was nominated for best special and drew nominations for Jack Hawkins, Anthony Quayle, Juliet Mills and Lee Remick as best supporting actors and actresses and in other categories.

Nominated for best actress in a dramatic series were Angie Dickinson of "Police Woman," Michael Learned of "The Waltons," and Jean Marsh of "Upstairs, Downstairs."

Four of the five nominees for best actor in a dramatic series were in top playing detective — Karl Malden of "The Streets of San Francisco," Robert Blake of "Baretta," Telly Savalas of "Kojak," and Barry Newman of "Petrocelli."

"Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," a special about a romance between an older man and woman, won best actor and actress nominations for its stars Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning.

Research assailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire said today the government has spent almost $500,000 to find out that when people are angry, stop smoking or hear loud noises, they clench their jaws.

Proxmire called the expenditures by three federal agencies to a Michigan scientist his choice for "the biggest waste of taxpayers' money for the month of April."

The Wisconsin Democrat said the funds were spent by the National Science Foundation, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Office of Naval Research to determine under what conditions rats, monkeys and humans bite and clench their jaws.

The research was conducted the past seven years by Dr. Roland R. Hutchinson of Kalamazoo State Hospital.

Senate strengthens apparatus guards

© Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate passed 88-5 Thursday a bill to strengthen federal authority over the marketing of medical apparatus such as intra-uterine devices (IUDs) and cardiac pacemakers.

The measure, sponsored principally by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was adopted after meaningful debate after the Senate unanimously approved an amendment by Sen. Gayland Nelson, D-Wis., making the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare directly responsible for any decisions to waive safety regulation.

The measure now goes into limbo pending house action on a similar but less stringent bill that has been introduced but not yet scheduled for hearings on floor debate.

An almost identical bill to the one passed Thursday was adopted without dissent by the Senate on Feb. 1, 1974, but had to be re-introduced and re-adopted when the House failed to vote on it before the 93d Congress adjourned at the end of last year.

While a bipartisan chorus of legislators stressed the need for the new bill to bring safety regulation of devices onto a par with safety regulation of drugs, a lawyer for Ralph Nader's public citizen movement said the federal Food and Drug Administration already had even broader powers which it was not using.

FDA has contended it has no regulatory power over the marketing of medical devices unless and until a device is proved unsafe. The import of the Kennedy bill is to give FDA the right to require scientific testing of devices before they may be marketed.

The FDA contention is untrue, attorney Anita Johnson of the Nader Health Research group said after the Senate vote.

Services to mark official beginning of Bicentennial

CONCORD, Mass. (UPI) — It all began 200 years ago tonight. On April 18, 1775, shortly after 10:30 p.m., two lanterns appeared in the steeple of Boston's Old North Church. Paul Revere and William Dawes set out on their famous midnight ride to Lexington and Concord to warn rebel colonists that the British were coming.

At 5 a.m., April 19, 700 British regulars met 130 Minutemen on Lexington Green, 10 miles northwest of Boston.

"Lay down your arms, you damned rebels and disperse!" Shouted Captain John Pitcairn.

"Stand your ground!" Captain John Parker replied to his men. "Don't fire unless fired upon. But if they mean to have a war, let it begin here."

A moment later someone fired "The Shot Heard 'Round the World" and the American Revolution was on.

President Ford will mark the official beginning of America's Bicentennial at a special service tonight at the Old North Church to commemorate the hanging of the lanterns.

At Concord and Lexington Saturday, the President will participate in wreath laying ceremonies to honor the eight Minutemen killed during the initial engagement at Lexington Green and the two who died in the ensuing volleys at Concord's North Bridge. Three British troops died at the bridge.

Peter Ramsbotham, British ambassador to the United States, was to join Ford in the Concord ceremonies.

Residents and officials in Concord and Lexington are geared for an onslaught of visitors — estimated at up to 250,000 for the two towns — with hundreds of police officers and backup reserve forces.

Concord police plan to block off all vehicle entries to the town when they estimate 120,000 persons are in the area.

However, the National Weather Service was forecasting rain for Friday night and Saturday morning. Officials said foul weather would considerably limit the turnout.

In addition to the official events, the Peoples Bicentennial Commission planned a "counter ceremony" at Concord's North Bridge shortly after midnight Friday. The group was founded in 1971 as an alternative to traditional and government-sponsored groups.

While Boston officials anticipated a large crowd near the Old North Church, they said the city's tourist crunch would not begin until, this summer, when the influx of visitors is expected to double the normal 3 million.

Ford mixes politics, pleasure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford mixes politics with the opening of America's 200th birthday party today in travel to New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

In Concord, N.H., Ford was invited to address the state legislature. Tonight at Boston's Old North Church, Ford speaks at ceremonies marking the steeple lantern lighting that triggered Paul Revere's ride rousing the colonists against the British 200 years ago. Air Force One was scheduled to leave Andrews Air Force Base at 10:40 a.m. EDT and arrive at Manchester, N.H., at 11:45 a.m.

Ford will fly back to Washington after joining Patriots Day celebrations in Lexington and Concord, Mass., Saturday morning.

He told the New Hampshire lawmakers the Granite State deserves special praise for carrying on with no state income tax, no state sales tax and no state budget deficit. He sounded his frequent warning that unless federal welfare spending is slowed federal spending will eat up the economy.

Ford said Americans must reject the politics of promise, such promises as "the government will make your dreams come true."

Ford to ask federal agency slash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will ask Congress to gradually do away with some major federal regulatory agencies and believes this could save each American family about $2,000 a year, aides said today.

Targeted for elimination were such agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board, they said.

The aides said Ford planned to announce this afternoon at a White House sponsored conference in Concord, N.H., that he will send proposals to Congress in 30 to 45 days aimed at deregulating much air, truck and railroad transport.

According to Ford, there are too many federal agencies, regulating too much, spending too much and adding too much to consumer costs. He believes some of the agencies were set up for reform purposes but have outlived their usefulness.

He wants Congress to eliminate them not with a legislative pullout but by phasing them out.

It is part of an overall reform of regulatory agencies which, according to government economists, would mean up to $2,000 a year saving to America's 135 million families through lower federal taxes and lower consumer costs.

Here are some examples, cited by White House aides, of the type of agency regulation

the President wants wiped out:

— Trucking: Under current ICC regulations a Texas farmer who sends a truckload of strawberries to Chicago can bring the truck back loaded only with raw farm products. Often the truck returns empty, and the farmer's cost and the strawberry eater's costs are boosted.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I see eye to eye on almost everything, but we have one major difference of opinion. I can't stand people who use dirty four-letter words, and my husband says that that's the way some people talk, and that I should accept them for what they are and try to get over my hangup.

Sorry, but I can't. I wasn't brought up that way. It's not that I'm a prude, Abby. I've heard all the words and I know what they mean, but I don't see why people who talk dirty can't get out of their way to avoid offending those of us who have this so-called "hangup" about four-letter words.

What is your feeling about this?

HUNG-UP

DEAR HUNG-UP: I'm hung up, too, because I wasn't brought up that way, either. But some of the most humane, constructive and interesting people I know occasionally resort to four-letter words. And some of the most intolerant, hypocritical, narrow-minded bigots wouldn't think of using such language.

She's offended

The sensitive, considerate person who normally uses four-letter words will wish his language out of respect for those in his company whom he knows are offended by it. But one can't always judge a person's word and character, by his language any more than one can judge a book by its cover.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle an argument. Rob and I had a large church wedding for which we sent out formal invitations six weeks prior to the wedding.

The c.e.s.v.p.'s were addressed to my parents and stamped, so all the people had to do was sign their name and drop it in the mailbox.

Out of 175 invited guests, we heard from only 150. We also had a formal reception, and of those who accepted, 15 couples didn't show up. My parents had to pay for 30 dinners that were not touched. (We never received a note or even a phone call from the no-shows.)

I am all for sending each of these "no-show" couples a bill for their dinners. Rob says to drop it and forget the whole thing. What is your opinion?

BURNED IN METHUEN

DEAR BURNED: I'm with Rob.

DEAR ABBY: Everywhere I go, I see more and more "how-ay" books.

The interest in trying to make love. I have nothing against that. I'm sure a lot of people need help in that area, but I would like to make one comment.

We read so much about the importance of "foreplay." (Most men are in too big a hurry to get right down to the sex act, not realizing it takes a woman longer to get warmed up.) Very little, however, is said about "afterplay" — which, I think, is equally important.

If a man would just take his lady love in his arms and hold her, and maybe give her a little kiss on the nose afterwards, it would mean so much.

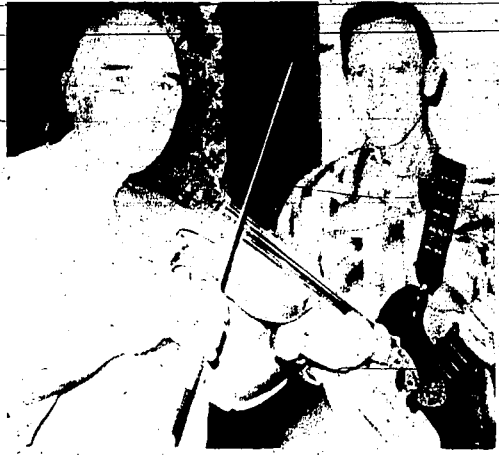

So many men just roll over and give the little lady their backs for the rest of the night. Abby, will you please pass this along to your male readers, if you think it has merit? Thanks.

LOVES TO BE LOVED

DEAR LOVES: Consider it passed. I wonder how many women have suffered in silence from such a seemingly minor oversight?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped $200 envelope.

Baldeman turned down

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (UPI) — Former White House Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman tried to enlist author William Manchester to write his memoirs but was turned down cold.

Manchester said Wednesday that Haldeman is the "second to last" person he would do it for.

"I don't do that sort of thing, but if I did Haldeman is the second to last person I would do it for," Manchester said. The last person, he said, would be former President Richard Nixon.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I had a free urine test at the kidney mobile unit recently. They found protein in my urine. Is this serious and what does it mean?
— Mrs. M.

Probably not very much, except that now you are armed with just enough information to make you nervous, and probably unnecessarily so.

You can't tell much from just the finding of protein (albumin) in a single specimen, especially since the sample may have been contaminated by vaginal secretions which can produce the same positive protein readings. More about this below.

Infection in the urinary tract (including the kidney and bladder) which is not uncommon in women would cause a positive albumin finding, but there would be other symptoms. A microscopic examination of your urine might reveal the presence of pus cells or blood cells. Also, a blood nitrogen test and a single specimen of your blood pressure would be important for a reliable diagnosis of kidney disease.

As for the albumin, a very common cause of this is a condition known as orthostatic proteinuria, a fancy-sounding phrase with a simple background. In this, the first urine specimen of the day is free of albumin but specimens obtained after being up for a while contain it.

Her urine test shows protein

Dr. George Thosteson

So it is essential, first of all, for you to offer as "clean" a sample as possible when having a urine test to avoid any of the natural contaminations I mentioned earlier. By clean, I mean that you should wash the exterior of the genital area before voiding.

Unless such precautions are taken, the finding of albumin can mean very little. When you go in for your next check up, be sure you void in a clean sample. Better, bring in two samples, one obtained immediately upon arising and a second after you have been up a while. Label each accordingly.

If the mobile unit test was complete (and most are these days) you could have a copy of your findings sent to your doctor.

I wouldn't become overly excited about a little albumin in your urine. It can occur, incidentally, in both men and women, and doesn't have to mean a disease is present. It is often caused by minor peculiarities in the kidney's filtering system.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
Could you please tell me what causes dark circles just below the eyes? Mine are dark and unsightly, especially during menstruation. How can I get rid of them? — Mrs. R.R.

The skin around the eyes is particularly thin and loose, a fact you can prove for yourself by gently pinching a fold of this skin between your thumb and forefinger. Its transparency allows more of the blood pigment to show through, more so in the fair-skinned than in the dark or thicker-skinned persons.

The problem becomes more noticeable during menstruation because at these times the body retains liquid more readily, often causing the puffiness around the eyes and exaggerating the transparent effect.

No solution beyond the cosmetics counter, I'm afraid.

Note to Mrs. E.C.

You apparently have misread what I wrote. I said gall stones cannot be removed readily by dissolving them. Research has been going on in this area. It is being done experimentally with certain bio-enzymes, a long process. But as yet no substance has been found to do this without unacceptable irritation to the gall bladder. Thus, if your doctor has found stones in your bladder and is recommending removal, then my advice is to have it done. Stone removal usually means removal of the entire gall bladder. You will be better off without it.

A STITCH IN TIME

By Mary Sue Miller

A lovely writes: My skin just does not fit my face. It is loose, and droops on the jawbone and under the chin. I didn't think this would happen to me until I was too old to care. I'm in my mid-forties and care terribly. Your advice, please.

The answer: A woman never gets too old to care. And that's why she should always take special care of herself. Take a stitch in time, like my friend of 92 years. She has a shock of marvelous white hair, pink cheeks and the kind of good-looking clothes we all wish we had. No, she isn't rich; she just takes care... and is organized.

Back to the problem: in the throat and chin areas, crepey conditions are hastened by careless posture and haphazard skin care. If the head were always drawn out of the neck and shoulders—into an erect column—the jaw muscles would resist the laxity that age brings.

The skin in the area requires as much pampering as the face. Yet it is a victim of neglect. You know it. The skin-care product stops at the chin. Whenever you use a cleanser, emollient or moisturizer—once daily is minimal—it should be smoothed upward and outward from the base of the neck to the hairline. After 40 there's a need for specialized throat oils or sticks so as to firm and tone textures.

It's never too late to take care.

BANISH CREPEY THROAT AND CHIN

To firm and uplift sagging facial muscles and flesh, use my unique method. It works wonders through corrective exercises, massage, skin care and makeup. Procedures are detailed in the new BANISH CREPEY THROAT & CHIN. Sister captures robber

CHICAGO Daily News — A nun ran after a robber and just taken nearly $3,000 from her church.

The public is invited to all of the programs. No tickets are necessary.

She said he first asked to see a priest, then grabbed the bag and ran, shouting, "Don't follow me or I'll blow your head off."

Police identified the man as Paul Dismuke, 28, who was charged with robbery.

Bellevue church plans week of revival meets

BELLEVUE — Barbara Kriley, Bellevue Community Church aide, says in true frontier fashion the church will begin a week of revival meetings Monday.

The meetings will close April 28.

Guest evangelist will be Troy Costlow, Eugene, Ore. Costlow has been on the staff of the Voice of Calvary in Eugene since 1956 and has held meetings throughout the United States.

Kriley says the Bellevue church is 64 years old and still going strong.

The church's history dates back to Jan. 17, 1882, when Presbyterian missionary R.W. Hill wrote to his mission board in New York: "I am getting things in better shape in my work here in Wood River Valley, both in Bellevue and Halley."

In Bellevue, a bustle of over 10,000 population, three churches had already been built — the Methodist in 1880, the Presbyterian in 1881 and the Catholic Church. The Presbyterian Church is still in use.

Rev. Edward Pratt, coming to the valley in 1880 to serve the Methodist Church, became the first regular minister of both the Bellevue and Halley Presbyterian churches in 1882.

In 1891 the College of Idaho came into being at a Presbytery meeting in Bellevue. A group of women convinced the assembly that there was great need in Idaho for a Christian college.

Sometime before 1917, a roomy, two-story manse was built next to the church. Three times the interior of the church has been refurnished and rebuilt, so that today it has little resemblance to the original point and calsonime.

In 1960, being unable to provide a minister for Bellevue, the Presbyterian Church considered designating the church building as a Presbytery museum. It was then the oldest Presbyterian Church west of Denver.

However, the congregation, not wanting to give up its church, was able to purchase it from the Presbytery. Then it became affiliated with Village Missions, an organization which furnishes and helps pay ministers for small rural churches.

According to Kriley, Bellevue Community Church has been an integral part of Bellevue, dwindling during the periods of closed mines and booming as the mines boomed.

Today the church is growing, as Bellevue enters another period of rapid growth, related not to the mineral wealth but the wealth of beauty in Wood River Valley, she says.

Guru's financial adviser resigns

DENVER (UPI) — Beneath the spiritual bliss of the Guru Maharaj Ji's Denver-based Divine Light Mission lie more than $300,000 in unpaid bills and a never ending fund drive, according to the Guru's former financial analyst.

"The material wishes of the guru, which take out 60 per cent of the income, are the most important thing in the Mission," said Michael D. Garson, 35. "And nobody much worries about the unpaid bills."

Garson became a devotee in May, 1974, and took over as financial director in August. He resigned in February "because I could not tolerate the contradictions."

Garson said there is a continuing $300,000 debt caused by declining revenues and the demands of the recently married 71-year-old Divine Master.

"When the Guru wants something, he'll get a $30,000 car or a new house, he gets it," according to Garson. So far it includes eight sports cars, mansions in Denver and Los Angeles, an assortment of stereo gear and expensive watches and clothes.

Meanwhile, other Mission bills go unpaid. For example, Millennium 73, the Mission's huge festival at the Astrodome, was paid for only after Mission equipment and files were repossessed.

Garson said many fiscal problems are due to a lack of business understanding.

"They say they are a spiritual group and not a business organization," he said. "They just don't understand that it is the law of the land that you have to pay for things by the date promised."

Another part of the problem, according to Garson, is the economic status of the followers.

"Most of them cannot hold a job that pays more than $2 an hour and then there are those in the Ashrams—those who work for the guru alone—who total $75 a day are totally supported by the Mission," he said.

It is understandable that a recent titling program proved fruitless.

Garson said one method used to balance the budget is asking rich premises—those who have recently become devotees—for donations, preferably their entire savings.

He said one woman, Darby McNeal of Canada and her $400,000 trust fund, is a good example of that.

"Bob Mishler, the Mission's executive director, talked Darby into signing over power of attorney shortly after she joined," said Garson, who says he was instructed to collect the money for the Mission.

Jehovah's Witnesses assemble

JEROME — Jehovah's Witnesses in the local area are making final preparations to attend the semi-annual Circuit Convention.

The gathering is slated to be held Saturday and Sunday in Jerome High School Auditorium.

According to Roy V. Shaw, local presiding minister, the event will draw over 200 delegates from 20 congregations in southern Idaho.

Shaw said, "The program is designed to aid both young people and adults toward the application of Bible principles in their lives. The subjects cover: 'Have We Kept Our Senses and Been Watchful?' is drawn from 1 Peter 5:8. It deals with each Christian maintaining Christian balance in these troubled times. There will be discussions on subjects such as 'Being Alert To Discern Jehovah's Will In Our Lives' and 'What Is In Your Children's Hearts'." Practical demonstrations will be used to illustrate how to apply the principles learned.

"A committee of people attend the entire assembly program right along with their parents the same as in our regular congregation meetings," Shaw continued. "This way all learn together so there is no place for a communication gap between parents and their children."

"About 175 volunteer workers are needed to care for the needs of those who attend! Here too, children work right along with their parents to man the 20 convention departments, including cafeteria and refreshments. All the volunteers give their time free for this service," Shaw concluded.

Highlight of the assembly is a discussion by George B. Cook, district supervisor of over 210 congregations in the northwestern United States, entitled "Stand Still and See the Salvation of Jehovah," Sunday at 2 p.m.

Shaw invites all interested persons to attend the free assembly program.

K of C plans TF gathering

TWIN FALLS — Dr. John H. Griffin, North Haven, Conn., chief medical officer of the Knights of Columbus, will be the featured speaker at the group's state convention here April 25-27.

Dr. Griffin will speak at the main banquet to be held Saturday night at St. Edward's Catholic Church Parish Hall.

Over 300 knights and their wives are expected to attend the state convention, the first to be held in southern Idaho in over 20 years.

Bishop Sylvester Trelenn, Catholic bishop of Idaho, will address the convention Friday night and attend most of the convention functions.

A native of Peabody, Mass., Dr. Griffin was a physician in the US Navy and a general practitioner before being named supreme physician of the knights in 1966.

He joined the knights in 1947 and served as grand knight, district deputy and vice president of the state and as state secretary and state deputy of Maryland. He has been active in the National Fraternal Congress and currently is serving as a member of the board of directors and vice president of the congress' insurance organization.

He was named Knight of St. Gregory the Great by Pope Paul VI in June of 1966.

Ready for weed wars

SPRAY RIGS at the Shoshone Weed Control Department are available for either rent or for custom hiring from the department, according to Byron Hall, weed supervisor. There are 15 rigs in all. Hall said, available at $5 a day rent or a $440 yearly fee. If the weed department does the spraying the cost runs about $5 an acre.

Roundup scheduled in Nevada

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — The federal government is looking for cowboys to round up 400 wild horses in a remote central Nevada valley.

Gene Nodine, manager of the Battle Mountain district of the Bureau of Land Management, said the roundup is necessary because the range in Stone Cabin Valley, 25 miles east of Tonopah, is being overgrazed by domestic and wild horses.

Nodine is working with protective organizations, such as "Velma "Wild Horse" Johnson's Wild Horse Organized Assistance (WHOA) to find suitable homes for the healthy horses in the herd.

The sick and injured animals among the 400 will be destroyed under terms of the Wild Horse Act of 1971, the BLM official said.

"Most of the horses can be rounded up through trapping at water holes... attracting them into corrals for a drink," Nodine said.

However, there has been an abnormally heavy rainfall in the area this spring, so that technique may not work. Most of the herding will have to be accomplished by men on horseback.

"But that kind of work is damn tough on saddle horses," Nodine said. "Most of those mustangs can run a horse carrying a man into the ground. The law prohibits use of airplanes or motor vehicles for gathering wild horses."

The roundup will be handled by contractors. Nodine is soliciting bids for the project, which will begin about the middle of May and last until the end of August.

Fertilizer cost rise hits crops

Courtesy Sinclair & Co. CHICAGO (GIN) — Because of the "skyrocketing" cost of fertilizer, farm output of especially soybeans, Illinois will be cut back this year, according to Robert J. Williams, director of the Illinois Department of Agriculture.

He said today soybean production may be down one-third, compared with 1974.

Nevertheless, he said Illinois farmers hoped to increase their overall exports this year.

Williams said the Middle West was among the areas in which Illinois farmers would try to increase their exports.

As to higher production costs, he quoted University of Illinois agricultural specialists as saying that it would cost $200 an acre for soybean and $300 an acre for corn production.

"Those costs are up 20 per cent over last year," said Williams, operator of a 1,500-acre soybean and livestock farm.

He explained that planting of soybeans follows the wheat harvest, but farmers may not plant soybeans this year because the "price isn't going to be there."

Stock trouble probed

DENVER (UPI) — Studies of animals born deformed at a ranch near the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant turned up no traces of radioactivity. The Colorado Health Department said Wednesday.

Robert Siek studied the animals owned by Lloyd Mixon were performed by department veterinarians.

Siek said, however, the agency will investigate Mixon's latest complaint to a task force investigating past leaks of radioactivity to the area surrounding the plant.

In a hearing Tuesday at Broomfield, Colo., Mixon held a squealing piglet by the ears, showing the task force the animal's stunted hind legs. He said the piglet was born one week ago.

Mixon said he was told last September the Health Department decided the problems on his ranch "were caused by infectious diseases and unsanitary conditions."

"These charges simply aren't true," he said. "Obviously, something is wrong with it, causing the reproductive problems in the livestock and fowl. Whether it is caused by radioactivity, bacteria or something else, I don't know."

Mixon's ranch is located five miles southeast of Rocky Flats.

Mayor John Elliott Jr. of Broomfield said the city was seeking federal funds to replace its water reservoir because the reservoir apparently was contaminated by radioactive matter escaping from Rocky Flats.

Elliott said traces of plutonium, radioactive hydrogen and nitrates had been found in the reservoir and said the discoveries had "caused a negative impact in our city."

Threat cases

Courtesy Sinclair & Co. LUXEMBURG (GNS) — A fundamental threat to the continuation of the EC common agricultural policy has been averted.

The intention of the French government to continue a ban on the imports of Italian wine threatening the basic principle of free movement of farm goods in the nine-nation community — was averted by joint community action.

Output dips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board said today industrial production in March declined for the sixth straight month, but the 1 per cent decline was the lowest since October.

Accounting for the slowdown in the production slump was a rise in factory output of consumer goods and cars.

The 1 per cent increase in the index for March was attributed largely to business equipment, whose production continued to drop sharply, and was 12 per cent below its peak of last September.

farm BLM urges usage of water service

TWIN FALLS—The Bureau of Reclamation is urging farmers in participating irrigation districts to take advantage of irrigation management services being offered as a water saving tool.

Irrigation management services are now available through the Minidoka, A and B, Falls and Black Canyon districts in southern Idaho. The service provides information concerning soil, water, plants and weather characteristics and directs farmers how to apply the information to their farm operation.

According to the bureau, the amount of water each crop uses, the waterholding capacity of the soil and potential crop rooting depth must be known to make the most of irrigation water. Field and laboratory tests determine that information.

Crop information is also necessary, including a plant's ability to use available water, rooting depth and when a plant becomes stressed by lack of moisture.

In addition, optimum water usage depends on knowledge about the weather, including average air temperature, dew-point temperature, sunshine radiation, wind movement, rainfall.

From this data, an irrigation efficiency rating is obtained for the farm or field and then entered into a computer which estimates the next irrigation date and amount of water to apply. If the service is requested, a field technician visits the farm and takes necessary data. Computer printouts then are mailed once or twice a week indicating when to irrigate and how much water to apply.

The bureau reports that some benefits from the irrigation management service can include yield increase, quality improvement, labor savings, water savings and reduced fertilizer losses.

Sugar processing closes

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Amalgamated Sugar Company announced Wednesday that it has completed its shortest processing season in over 20 years with the end of processing at its Nampa factory.

The company said normally it keeps the Nampa facility operating into the summer.

But it ended the processing season because of the reduced acreage planted last year through the company's three-state growing area of Idaho, Oregon and Utah.

Officials said all sugarbeets from the 1974 crop were sliced by early January and the Nampa factory initiated its annual sugar syrup processing run.

The 1974 beet crop produced just under five million bags, the company said.

The Twin Falls factory, which normally has a sugar syrup run that extends into March each year, completed its operations at the end of December. Operations at the Mini-Cassia factory were concluded near the end of December and processing work at Nyssa, Ore., was finished in early April.

Pesticide lack cuts production

Courtesy Sinclair & Co. ROME (AP/CL) — Developing countries are losing one-third or more of their crops because of shortages and high prices of pesticides, the U.N.S. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said today.

FAO said its director general, Addeke H. Boerma of the Netherlands, made the assessment at an international consultation of pesticides last week.

John A. Hannah, executive director of the World Food Council, said "If we could find the means of reducing food losses to about one-third of their present day level, this could provide enough food to cover the increased needs of the rising population of the developing countries for about five years."

The study group recommended that food, in cooperation with the World Health Organization, set up a global information system on pesticide demand looking 5 to 10 years ahead.

US grain use gain forecast

(Courtesy Sinclair & Co.) WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. grain consumption should recover in 1975-76 at least three-fourths of its 1974-75 20 per cent setback, the Agriculture Department predicted today.

Since world production is expected to improve substantially, foreign grain usage will likely be fully resumed at its rate of growth prior to 1974-75, USDA said.

World grain production should be just slightly less than a billion metric tons if weather is normal, an increase of almost 88 million over the 1974 crop, USDA said in a new Foreign Agricultural Service grain circular. The United States is expected to account for 56 million tons of the increase, the USSR 14 million and competing exporting nations another seven million, USDA said.

Total world grain usage for 1975-76 is expected to be 972 million tons, USDA said. That USDA's big production and consumption estimates mean that year end world stocks could be up about 25 million tons by the close of 1975-76 marketing years, with about half the increase in wheat and half in coarse grains.

Coyotes may be facing ultimate threat its efficiency by coyote body counts. Compared with a poison called "Thallium" the principal toxicant used against coyotes for 20 years, 1004, saturated on bait, proved much more deadly and much faster, Ryden writes. It exceeded the kill rate of Thallium's regime, and victims usually expired in two hours, he says.

Alarmed, conservationists and wildlife groups petitioned the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to prohibit use of all poisons on public lands used for grazing.

And—incidentally—a Lumber Interior Department study agreed that while coyotes did cost ranchers some losses, "massive extermination of coyotes... produce no economic benefits," while animal losses remained about the same or a bit higher.

Richard M. Nixon as president signed an executive order in February, 1972, prohibiting use of poison, in 1980, on any public land. That order remains in effect, Ryden writes, but its retention is becoming less and less likely.

Meanwhile, she adds, under pressure from ranch state congressional blocs, EPA authorized "experimental use" of what she calls a "coyote getter," a device named M-44, which has been used in the past.

Its up-to-date version, McHyden says, is a cyanide-filled capsule. She writes, "I thought of it as a safe and selective against coyotes," M-44 is not so discriminating that it prevents skunks, raccoons, foxes, bears and red wolves, and particularly dogs, from swallowing it.

"Poison is seeping back, not that it ever was totally absent," The author quotes a letter from a friend who is a trapper:

"There is enough poison in the hands of individual sheepmen to saturate the state of Wyoming for the next 200 years. The airplane furnishes them with a method of sowing poison that is almost impossible to police."

Last August, Ryden says, Western governors released a resolution on behalf of their sheep raising constituents asking that use of M-44 be permitted again. They also asked that predator control be switched from the Interior Department to the Agriculture Department.

The latter, declares, "has no mandate to protect the nation's wildlife, and therefore would make every decision in the exclusive interest of the sheepman."

Ryden, who probably knows as much of it not more than anyone in this country about coyotes, calls the animal one of the most adaptable.

versatility is undoubtedly what has enabled the species to survive man's every effort to extirpate him," she writes.

But if 1980 once again is permitted for predator control, then the coyote probably is doomed, she says. Man, however, will be the loser, she asserts, because that coyotes kill live sheep or cattle, preferring that decay be in progress before they begin to eat.

Rare bird creating problems

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Wanted, dead or alive. The red-whiskered bulbul.

This rare bird, originally from southern Asia and India, craves tomatoes, grapes, pears, avocados and peaches.

Luckily there are only between 10 and 15 of the birds in California, according to the Department of Food and Agriculture. All are suspected to be in the Los Angeles area.

Michael Keffer, a department biologist, said the bulbuls, because of their appetite for many of California's prime agricultural products, "are a potential pest, but not an immediate threat."

Sixty bulbuls have been captured alive or shot with pellet rifles since 1968, he said.

"Our whole goal is to prevent any exotic animal from establishing itself as a pest," he added.

The bulbul has a gray-brown body and a white breast and chin. The head has tufted feathers similar to a cardinal or jay. Under the eyes are delicate bright red whiskers.

The bulbuls probably escaped from exotic bird fanciers, Keffer said. State law now prohibits the sale, possession or transportation of the birds.

Suspected sightings of bulbuls should be reported to the local county department of agriculture, he added.

2 Camas teachers cleared of 'atheism'

Teenagers charged

BURLEY — Cassia County authorities have charged three teen-agers with second degree burglary following a house break-in in Elba.

Sheriff's officers said Malcolm West, 18, Rupert; Jim Steelman, 18, Paul, and a juvenile also of Paul were caught as they were allegedly burglarizing an unoccupied home in Elba Thursday night.

Deputies said the home was being used to store furniture. An unidentified Elba resident apprehended the young men and called the sheriff, officers said.

Following a court appearance this morning, West and Steelman were released on their own recognizance and the juvenile was released to his parents.

Juvenile arrested

TWIN FALLS — A 17-year-old juvenile was arrested by Twin Falls city police Thursday night on charges of reckless driving, peit lozenge and carrying a concealed weapon.

The youth was observed at Layne Bowler Pump Co. on Kimberly Road where officers said he was siphoning gasoline from a truck in the firm's yard. Police reported that as officers approached he got into his own vehicle and backed into the truck in an effort to get away.

Officers said he then put his vehicle into forward gear and appeared to be attempting to run over officer Jim White. White then drew his gun and the subject stopped.

Officers charged he was carrying a knife under his jacket when arrested. Damage to the truck at the pump company was estimated at $150.

Kill break-in probed

KING HILL — U S Post Office officials are investigating a possible break-in at the King Hill Post Office the weekend of April 12-13.

According to the postal investigator's office in Boise, mail was taken from a post office box rented to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Greer, King Hill, some time over the weekend and probably Saturday afternoon.

Investigators are also looking at the possibility the combination lock on the box may not have been securely shut, the Boise spokesman said.

Prosecutor resigns

MONTEPELIER, Idaho (UPI) — Bear Lake County Prosecutor Gary Williams has submitted his resignation to the county commissioners to become effective May 12.

Williams announced today he was moving to Hayden Lake in the near future.

The commission has appointed Ardee Helm to replace Williams. Helm has recently served as county prosecutor in Indiana.

Andrus named honorary member

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus became Thursday an honorary member of the "Fly the Flag" Crusade.

— Jack Poulson of Bloomington, Minn., made the governor an honorary member. Poulson is traveling the western portion of the country in hopes of bringing about a change in the attitude of the nation toward the democratic principles.

Poulson said the crusade was started after a group in Minneapolis noted dissent nationally toward the flag.

However, he said Thursday, that he and his wife, Artis, had traveled through 34 states for the sole purpose of motivating veteran groups and others to join the fly the flag crusade and had noticed a much better attitude, especially among the younger people.

Kimberly plans kindergarten

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly school system is planning for one classroom of about 35 to 40 kindergarten pupils next fall, Clinton Bugg, superintendent, said today.

A meeting was held Thursday night to determine the approximate number of children who will be enrolled for the first public kindergarten class. Bugg said plans are to use an extra classroom in the Kimberly Grade School for the children.

Peggy Exon has been hired to teach the classes and Bugg said the Thursday meeting was called to give the school administration an idea of the size of enrollment so plans can be made for bus transportation, housing and hours for the class.

Bugg said only the kindergarten issue was discussed Thursday night.

Cassia theft probed

BURLEY — Cassia County sheriff's officers are investigating the theft of farm equipment reported stolen from a ranch near Burley.

Deputies said John Rencher, Burley, reported the thefts late Thursday.

Rencher said he is missing a tractor, a plow, a bean cultivator, three five-foot sections of a harrow with a draw bar, a potato cultivator, a clothes washer, and 25 to 30 peeled posts. The missing items are valued at $3000.

Deputies said the thefts apparently took place within the past 10 days.

Student study project eyed

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City-County Joint Planning Council Wednesday night discussed a possible study project in Twin Falls County by students from the University of Idaho.

A team of students from the university studied current land uses along Rock Creek last summer.

According to planning director David Richey, another study project could be set up in the county this year, but "we first must determine whether our elected officials are interested."

The university will require local governments to pay $100 per month per student for the study team, Richey said. The school only charges for local transportation costs during the Rock Creek study.

List of potential study subjects has not been compiled according to Richey.

The joint council also: — agreed to request an additional $800 in federal funds to help pay for maps and graphic materials in the comprehensive land-use plan. The panel has already requested $5,400 in federal matching funds, but the extra money is needed to cover inflated costs.

— discussed the draft segments of the comprehensive plan that were issued last month.

— discussed the land-use planning measure passed by the last session of the Idaho legislature.

FAIRFIELD — The Fairfield elementary principal and a teacher charged with teaching atheism and of being a "California influence" were cleared by Camas school trustees Thursday night.

Fran Wallace, high school English teacher, and her husband, Warren Wallace, eighth grade teacher and elementary school principal, both denied the allegations brought by a citizens committee.

Five of Mrs. Wallace's students testified that she had not preached atheism and did not read students' journals aloud in class without the students' permission. About a dozen students attended the hearing.

The special meeting, which drew about 40 patrons, was called by the school board after the citizens group approached Supt. Harold Stroud last Saturday. Stroud said he was asked to meet with a committee of five persons Saturday night, which he did.

Spokesman for the group was Bjli Sweet, former elementary principal. Others were Olan Beal, LDS Church official; Bill Simon, manager; Mrs. Gwendolyn Krahn, and Jack Frustensund, Sunday School teacher at the Community Church.

Stroud said he was told the parents and concerned citizens had met last Friday night and decided that something "needed to be done about these charges." When Stroud presented the matter at the regular board meeting Monday night trustees decided "because of the seriousness of the statements and the emotion involved" that the best method of complying with the law was to have a formal meeting.

Mrs. Wallace, who teaches junior and senior and eighth grade English and Journalism, is new in the Camas County school system this year. She taught the past two years at Mountain Home and has seven years experience.

The charges include preaching atheism, reading students' journals aloud, telling students they are Hicks "over and over," using the school newspaper to run down both the community and the school, being a "California influence" and having "something bad" in her background.

Mrs. Wallace said she sees the charges as a confrontation between "fundamentalism and academic freedom in the classroom," and a "real concerted" attempt to discredit me and my husband.

Wallace was specifically charged with teaching atheism in the classroom and having lack of discipline. Mrs. Wallace said her husband has been honored in the San Diego schools where he taught for 23 years and he belongs to Phi Delta Kappa, teachers and administrators honor.

"I teach the right of every citizen to believe as he sees fit," Mrs. Wallace said. She said the trustees told the citizens group they could not go into the sixth charge of personal accusation at a public meeting. If such material was presented the board would have to go into executive session, so this allegation was dropped.

Mrs. Wallace has been in California for about a month because of the illness of a daughter at tending the University of California, Berkeley, but returned to Fairfield for the hearing. She is going back to be with her daughter for a few more weeks.

"Not one person came to speak to me as one human being to another to get any explanation," Mrs. Wallace told the Times-News. She said the charges came "from a lot of gossip and we all were reluctant," but "I felt the problem should be ironed out." A former school board member, Mrs. Krahn said she felt the matter need not have gone into a formal hearing but should have been handled at the regular trustee meeting.

"We felt if fairness the Wallaces should have a chance to clear themselves before the thing got completely out of hand," Mrs. Krahn said. Sheriff Harold Lee and Jack Varin, county prosecuting attorney, attended the meeting, as did Bob Day, Idaho Education Association, who represented the Wallaces.

Coal, uranium use for future stressed

By BART QUESNELL
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — A clean environment depends on increased electrical energy, according to the president of Idaho Power Co.

President James Bruce, addressing a three-day energy conference here, said "the gaseous and liquid fuels that have dominated this century are nearly exhausted and the world must turn away from petroleum and natural gas to an era of solid fuel coal and uranium."

Any impairment in energy will upset the quality of civilized life, Bruce said.

"If it were not for the torrent of false information about the realities of the energy crisis these charges," Bruce said.

He blasted consumer advocate Ralph Nader for telling the American people that nuclear power was dangerous and uneeded.

"Nader, who is constantly referred to as a consumer advocate, may be doing the consumers of the 1980s and 1990s as large a disservice as any industry baron could dream up," Bruce said.

Coal is the most abundant fossil fuel, he said.

Today over 75 per cent of our total energy needs are supplied by oil and gas, which are being depleted, he said.

"It should be evident to anyone that for immediate future, we must utilize our abundant coal supplies, our undeveloped water resources and nuclear fuel," he said.

"The need to conserve fossil-fuels will mean a shift to use of electricity, he said, which must come through the construction of coal-fired generating plants.

"Hydro sources have been largely used up, or like the Salmon river, are unavailable, due to environmental restrictions," Bruce said.

"Through additional units on existing dams appear to be a reasonable solution to our energy problems, they in fact are not."

"The Idaho Power Co.'s Snake River plants are already equipped with generating facilities that utilize all available water during the majority of the year."

Bruce said his company's studies show, that dependable capacity will be substantially less than estimated loads which will require additional generating capacity.

"A coal plant can be built in Idaho that not only will satisfactorily meet applicable environmental standards, it will not cause any danger or detriment to the health of the people of the state," Bruce said.

When asked if Idaho Power intends to install scrubbers to wash coal before it is burned in the Pioneer plant, Bruce replied "we have not made a final decision to install scrubbers. We think scrubbers will not be needed."

He said the plant will use low sulfur coal which will make it possible to meet class 2 state standards.

"Coal plants can and are being built that do not destroy or impair our well being," he said. "At the present time, over 45 per cent of all energy generated in the United States comes from coal-fired generating plants."

Our problems with energy are not a lack of know-how — expertise, but of skilled men and women of technology, of safety procedures or of desire. Instead they are caused by the interference of various individuals and groups that apparently fail to realize or do not care as to the potentially dire effects of their opposition."

Bruce said the power firm is not arbitrarily building more plants.

Expert says change needed in man's energy attitude

KETCHUM — Men must turn from self-satisfaction to a survival ethic for mankind, a noted environmentalist told energy conference participants in Ketchum Thursday.

Ed Kormondy, vice president of Evergreen State College, Olympia, Wash., said man's "myth of the cornucopia" or "unlimited resource potential" will end in the death of mankind within a few years, if this irrationality continues.

"People will have to live with less, be content with less, and people will have to learn to produce less people," Kormondy said. "There is no question we will have to learn to do all these things."

Kormondy said any system given an optimum living condition will grow. Mankind must learn, however, that as he grows his natural resources do not grow with him, he added.

The world growth rate of mankind if continued at the present two per cent annual increase will double the world's population in 35 years, Kormondy said. Over two-thirds of the world's population are at the minimum or below level minimum of caloric intake.

"A good portion of the world," he said, "is on the very edge of widespread famine."

Man's own technological genius has made him produce more than we need, he said. Most of man's needs today are manufactured of non-renewable or non-recyclable resources.

"Man must realize there can't be enough to supply an infinite demand," he said.

The ethic of survival must spread worldwide if the earth is to survive, Kormondy said. He added that he was very interested in Idaho Power Co. president James Bruce's speech that there would be no acid rainfall from pollutants from the proposed Pioneer plant near Orchard.

"Mr. Bruce was probably right that acid rainfalls would not occur in Idaho, but what about the area to the east?" he asked.

The major radioactive fallout during World War II, he said, did not settle in the Pacific but in Lapland.

DDT found in the South Pacific recently came thousands of miles on ocean currents, he noted.

Asked to comment on Bruce's insistence for more energy, Kormondy said he could understand Bruce's position and forceful approach from his position as Idaho Power Co. president.

He said Idaho Power, however, has made its assessment on current rates of demand and current trends.

"Let's change the trends," Kormondy said. "I'm not going to go back and live in an igloo, but I know we cannot continue to grow and expand at the rates we are using our resources."

TF patient load 'high'

TWIN FALLS — The patient load at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital reached a record high Thursday evening with 146 adults, children and babies registered as patients.

According to Mary Goe, public relations officer, 130 patients filled the adult and pediatric wards and 16 babies were in the hospital's nursery.

Hospital officials are in Boise today requesting approval for an expansion program at the hospital from the state Comprehensive Health Planning agency.

Mrs. Goe said three patients were in beds in the hall, two were in treatment rooms and two were in a lounge.

The hospital is licensed for 126 adult and pediatric beds and 23 cribs, Mrs. Goe said. Three beds in the obstetrics ward were vacant, she said, but added those beds could only be filled with obstetrical patients.

Growers keep stiff lip company had found the PGI "unwilling to move very far from their last year's contract," which was clearly too high.

The other processors, including Sniplot, Idaho Frozen Foods and Magic Valley Foods, also failed to reach agreements with the PGI, bargaining union and growers to go directly to the growers.

The PGI maintains the cost of producing potatoes has skyrocketed, and says the contracts offered by the processors don't give the growers a fair return.

Negotiations continue with at least four other processors, however, with our additional processor, A & P, still apparently willing to begin negotiations.

Jim Chapman, field manager for Lamb Weston, which last year contracted between 500 and 1,000 acres in the Bell Rapids area, said he was "not optimistic we'll reach an early settlement" with the PGI.

"We would like to negotiate a contract, however, we must at the same time stay competitive," Chapman said.

Also still negotiating are Carnation Co., which contracted about 1,000 acres last year in the Bell Rapids area; and R.T. French, Co., and Sunspined Inc., which both declined to say how many acres they contracted in 1974.

Players' back pay hurts WFL chances

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — One of the first hurdles for the resurrected World Football League seeking permanent stability is the question of players' back pay.

In the case of the Jacksonville Sharks, where salaries stopped after last September, about 45 players are owed between $600,000 and $700,000 for 10 months.

The new WFL recently sent release-from-liability agreements to the ex-players promising to pay "no more than 15 per cent" of the debt before April 30.

The balance, according to the agreement, would be paid over a period of six years at 6 per cent interest.

Kim Hammond, former Sharks quarterback and currently a Daytona Beach Fla. attorney, told UPI by telephone Thursday that most of the players he had talked with "felt we should compromise and signed the agreements."

Some felt that 15 per cent

was a very small percentage of what they are owed but they're willing to gamble that the league will be a success," Hammond said.

Hammond still has two backlary suits pending on court and punter Duane Carrell. He indicated they wouldn't be withdrawn until the players receive their first checks.

"Had the players not compromised and signed these agreements," Hammond said, "there would be no league this year. The lawyers' fees for defending against all the suits would be astronomical."

Hammond said he understood the WFL intends to set up a trust fund to pay off its old debts, including the players' back pay. Money for the fund would come from this year's gate receipts and other proceeds.

"Many of the players had a chance to go into the National Football League (NFL) which offered them more security,"

Hammond said. "If they are cut they would come back."

Carrell, for instance, now plays with the NFL Dallas Cowboys. Johnson has left pro football and returned to his native Tennessee.

He said the former players who signed the release agreements "are not obligated to enter into contracts (with the new owners) for the 1975 season."

Former Sharks fullback Tommy Durrance is one who has declined to sign the release agreement. Durrance has filed his own suit against the former owners of the Jacksonville franchise and the WFL.

If the new league management reneges on its promise, Hammond said he has 30 players who want him to represent them in court.

"If this fellow, Chris Hemmeter, has some sound business people willing to bite the bullet for a couple of years maybe they'll be able to put something together," he said.

Buck chief decries state of pro sports

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — William Alverson, president of the Milwaukee Bucks, said Thursday he's concerned about "the obvious sorry state of affairs" in sports — particularly professional sports.

Many of his words sound like heresy coming from the president of a major sports team, but he said he felt they must be said.

Speaking at a meeting of the Milwaukee Pen and Ink Club, he said there are many things that need attention in sports, and while he laments the trend from fun to big business, he feels that since it has happened, teams and leagues today have to be run like a business.

"Along for the days of the Art Rooney and the Bill Alversons," he said. He said he was disturbed at the "general atmosphere that money trees never stop growing dollar bills and the growing immorality in sports," and said he opposed owners who look on their teams as playthings and also the tax breaks now given sports organizations.

"The 41-year-old Milwaukee attorney, a member of the National Basketball Association board of governors, said that for too long sports teams have been run by 'wealthy individuals who look on (ownership) as a hobby and an ego trip."

He said such individuals have for too many years aimed to purchase sports teams, operate them for a few years at a tax loss and then ultimately make a profit when the team is sold.

He said he hoped the courts or Congress will soon take action to remove such tax benefits — things he described as a "ripoff" of the ordinary taxpayers.

"I'm for the Bucks," he said, "are trying to run our team as a business. That means when we make a contract, we honor it — even if it hurts. And we have honored some that have hurt. We're not going to be pushed around either."

"And we're trying to have the club generate a profit so we can pay our bills, pay our taxes, so we can be an asset rather than a hidden drain on the community."

He said the "hidden drains" in the way of tax writeoffs and such things as subsidies for athletic facilities were becoming more prevalent in sports, but "there are good omens in Congress and the courts that the tax laws will be changed."

Alverson denied he was being negative.

"This is one of the fundamental problems of sports — to pretend everything is fine," he said. "I just want you to know we're aware of things and not trying to hide them."

He described the sports world as a "microcosm of society" and said the problems are a symptom of more widespread troubles.

But he said, "sports is something that is news on its own. What happens in our world gets covered by the press. What happens in the supermarket business doesn't. But that doesn't mean things don't happen in the supermarket world."

Andrus urges Oregon to let Idaho have say in fish runs

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Idaho's Governor sent a message to the Oregon legislature Thursday urging the approval of a bill that would give Idaho a voice in the Columbia River fish compact on the management of salmon and steelhead.

The statement from Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, drafted by his special assistant, Matthew Mullany, pointed out that "Idaho is a major producer of fish in the Columbia river system and should participate in the regulatory management."

"Between the years 1962 and 1974 Idaho produce 56 per cent of the upriver spring chinook entering the Columbia river system, but less than 16 per cent of these fish returned to Idaho waters," he said.

"For some time period

55 per cent of the summer steelhead entering the Columbia river system, but only 23 per cent of that returned to Idaho's waters. Adequate returns of fish to our waters are essential for perpetuation of the runs and in addition, we feel that our people are only entitled to a reasonable take in our sport fishery."

The statement delivered to a hearing on the Oregon legislative proposal said Idaho is "asking for a voice only in the management of runs of fish of importance to us" as they pass through the Columbia river. These runs are the upriver spring chinook, summer chinook and summer steelhead.

In 1973 the Oregon state planning board studied the commercial fishing operations on the Columbia and also recommended an interstate compact which would include Idaho.

Andrus said Idaho can continue to produce substantial runs of fish but only so long as Idahoans support the program and with the decline in the fish returns, the people of Idaho are "becoming discouraged."

"We have a huge investment in watershed protection to maintain suitable anadromous fish habitat. This is a primary purpose of the Selway-Bitterroot wilderness, the Salmon River breaks primitive area, the Idaho primitive area and the Sawtooth national recreation area. These lands have our most stringent form of protection from man's activities and total 5,318 miles."

Andrus pointed out that Idahoans have continued in their support for the fisheries this past year despite the deteriorating upriver runs.

WFL players may compromise on pay for good of league

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Former pro quarterback Kim Hammond, now an attorney, says most of the players owed money by World Football League are in the mood for compromise in order to get the WFL going again.

The new WFL recently sent release-from-liability agreements to the former players promising to pay less than 15 per cent of the debt by April 30 and to pay the balance with 6 per cent interest over the next six years.

Hammond said Thursday most of the players he had talked with "felt we should compromise" and signed the agreements.

Some felt that 15 per cent

was a very small percentage of what they are owed but they're willing to gamble that the league will be a success," Hammond said.

"Had the players not compromised and signed those agreements, there would be no league at all this year," Hammond said. "The lawyers' fees for defending against all the suits would be astronomical."

Hammond, a former reserve quarterback for the New England Patriots in the NFL, was with the WFL Jacksonville Sharks last year.

He said if the league reneges on its promise, he has 30 players who want him to represent them in court.

As it is, he still has two that want to continue their backlary suits — center Tom Johnson and punter Duane Carrell. He said those suits won't be withdrawn until the players receive their first checks.

Former Sharks fullback Tommy Durrance is one who has declined to sign the release agreement. The former Florida running back has filed his own suit against the former owners of the Jacksonville franchise and the WFL.

Hammond said the former players who signed the release agreements "are not obligated to enter into contracts (with the new owners) for the 1975 season."

Bonds' play hurt by pressing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Virdon asked Bobby Bonds whether he could see him a minute, to speak with him in his office privately, and Bobby Bonds said the same thing all ballplayers say whenever the manager comes over with a request like that — sure.

Managers generally talk to their players informally. Anytime they ask them to step into their private office, the players say to themselves, uh, oh, something must be wrong.

Bobby Bonds knew what was wrong when Bill Virdon called him in the other day. "How could he miss knowing? Some ballplayers try to create the impression they don't pay that much attention to their batting averages. They pay attention, all right, much more when the figures are higher than when they're lower."

At the moment Bobby Bonds' batting average has fallen down into a well somewhere. He's .40r-27 and .148 for the stumbling, last-place Yankees so far, with no home runs and only two RBIs. And what makes it all the more embarrassing is that the Giants were supposed to have gotten the short end of the deal — at least that's what everybody said. But the fellow they got for Bonds, Bobby Murcer — the one who was supposed to have all kinds of trouble hitting in Candlestick Park — is up there at .345 with 10 for 29 and six RBIs.

Bill Virdon isn't concerned with Bobby Murcer any more. That wasn't why he called in Bobby Bonds for that little talk in his Shea Stadium office.

"I've seen you play over in the National League and I know you haven't been playing lately the way you normally do," said Virdon, who knows Bonds from when he managed Pittsburgh. "You're pressing."

"You're right," replied Bonds, not arguing at all. "I've never really been a fast starter, but I wanted to get off to a good one this time. I know you're looking for right-handed power and I've been trying to do too much, too quick. I know that."

"Nobody here is pushing you," Virdon reassured Bonds. "What you're trying to do is hit 80 home runs and knock in 500 runs. Don't try to be The Almighty all by yourself. Just relax and be Bobby Bonds. Nobody here is expecting you to do it all by yourself. And remember this — I'm one hundred per cent behind you."

Bobby Bonds knows that. He has a deep, genuine affection for Bill Virdon, who is as straight a manager as there is in baseball history.

"I'd do anything in the world for him," says the Yankees' new rightfielder. "He's an honest man. Completely honest. That's what I respect so much about him."

The poor start by Bobby Bonds wouldn't be that noticeable were it not for the fact that Catfish Hunter isn't doing any better. With the two of them dragging along the way they are, and so much expected of them, why it's naturally a source of self-consciousness, if not embarrassment, to both players as well as to the Yankee management.

Catfish Hunter knows what his problem is — he's pressing too hard. And Bobby Bonds knows what his is — the same thing.

"I was trying to lead the league in home runs the first few days," says Bonds, smiling as he says it. "I was trying to be around eight years he realizes he should know better."

Bobby Bonds wanted to hit every baseball thrown up to him over the light towers and into the middle of downtown traffic. He wanted to show the fans and everybody else that last year was a misprint, that all these stories about him with the Giants were straight out of Grimm's Fairy Tales, that the Yankees had made themselves one bull elephant of a deal.

"I've been my own enemy," Bonds reflects. "He's right, because 30 per cent of the balls he has hit he has pulled. He has yet to hit a ball with his usual solid authority to right center, which is his regular alley and the area he ordinarily patronizes when he's having the kind of year he did two years ago. In that 1973 season he had 39 homers and 96 RBIs for the Giants.

Bobby Bonds knows he's going to be all right. Bill Virdon knows it; the Yankees know it; but when?

Bill Virdon knows that, too. "As soon as Bobby Bonds starts being Bobby Bonds — himself, in other words — there won't be any more problem."

Barry shoots Warriors past Seattle 105-96

SEATTLE (UPI) — Golden State's Rick Barry scored 33 points but it was his playmaking in the final quarter that spurred the Warriors to a 105-96 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics in NBA playoff action Thursday night.

The win lifted the Warriors to a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven quarterfinal series and avenged a one-point loss to the Sonics on Golden State's home court just a night earlier.

With the score tied at 88-88 in the fourth quarter, Barry flipped a couple of flashy passes to teammates for goals that gave the Warriors the lead for good.

Golden State held a 52-50 halftime lead in an intensely physical game. There were three shoving matches and one flagrant foul in the first six minutes.

Warrior center Clifford Ray had to be restrained by coaches and officials early in the second period but he struggled to trade punches with Talvin Skinner.

Seattle failed to hit a field goal in the first six minutes of the second period but Scottie Rolen's foul shots matched a shooting exhibition by Barry, who poured in 10 of 14 first half shots and had 23 points at halftime.

Golden State ran off eight straight points to lead 70-62 in the third quarter but the Sonics cut it to just 78-74 as the final period began.

Warrior guard Charlie Johnson added 24 points while the Sonics were led by rookie center Tom Burleson with 25

Import of endangered species bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interior Department today displayed $500,000 worth of furs, jewelry, shoes, handbags and other goods seized from Americans because the items were made from endangered species abroad.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton told a news conference the problem of contraband was growing and "becoming more critical and threatening the very life of endangered species."

Woman preacher heals by 'faith'

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — "What more can we say, dear God, but thanks—thanks a million!" Kathryn Kuhlman stands center stage, legs apart and arms extended toward the heavens. Her face, encircled in rust-colored curls, is dominated by a wide and radiant smile. The fundamentalist preacher, along with a 6,000-student crowd that jammed Pittsburgh's Syria Mosque for the "miracle services," had just heard testimony of a cure. And there was more.

"There is a healing taking place at this very moment. In the top balcony there's someone with a brace. Take it off, you don't need it any more," said the woman in white.

"In the right balcony there was a ruptured disk. It's healed. We rebuke that ruptured disk."

The lucky ones stood dazed and flushed to the stage to report cures of cancer, heart conditions, cataracts and any number of other afflictions.

Miss Kuhlman, her eyes as wide in wonder as theirs, has them run circles around the organ, touch their heads to the highest once arthritic arms in the air. She sent one man, the victim of rheumatoid arthritis, skipping down the stage steps with his cane swung jauntily over his shoulder.

Miss Kuhlman attributes the healings to God, but her critics call them psychosomatic.

A sobbing woman relates how doctors diagnosed her ailment as cancer of the liver and gave her three months to live. She tells how she came to the healing services in desperation and how she felt the "healing power of the Lord" come upon her.

"I can't believe this is happening to me. I have no pain," she said.

Many of the 6,000 came long distances in chartered buses, and some of them came in ambulances to listen to the preaching and hope they might be among the lucky ones.

They sit in rapture, a conglomerate representing both sexes, all ages, races and social classes, as Miss Kuhlman extends an arm draped in billowing chiffon high above her head as if to snatch some of that healing power right out of the air.

The alleged healings in Pittsburgh could all have been explained as emotionally induced without further verification that a disease had been cured or that other ailments had been accurately described.

But in her books, "I Believe in Miracles," and "God Can Do It Again," doctors are quoted substantiating various healing claims.

Dr. Richard Owlen, a member of the cancer research department of Johns Hopkins Hospital, often attends Miss Kuhlman's services and testifies to various healing he said has investigated.

Miss Kuhlman takes no credit for the healings, however. To those who thank her again and again she says, "The almighty God didn't have a thing to do with it, this is the almighty power of God come into this room."

But many who travel the long distances to her services come only to see Kathryn Kuhlman—she moves her audience to tears, then laughter, then tears again.
