Not even edgewise

ALBION — Woody Anderson, owner and operator of the Pomerelle ski area, has called for creation of an Idaho tramway board.

The board would conduct ski lift inspections replacing what terms present "inadequate" U.S. Forest Service inspections. In a statement issued Saturday, Anderson said the creation of such a board would better serve the interests of skiing safety.

These states include Utah, Oregon, Washington, Colorado and several eastern ski resort states.

"Ideally," Anderson said, "a tramway board should be comprised of persons with an active interest in skiing safety. The Utah board, for example, is made up of citizens who represent the skiing public at large, area operators, lift manufacturers, and insurance carriers who underwrite casualty coverage for ski resorts in the state."

Anderson was instrumental in establishing the Utah Tramway Board while serving as manager of the Park City skiing complex. The Utah board, he said, issues annual permits to ski area operators after a thorough inspection of their lifts and laws.

Anderson said most state boards begin by bringing in outside experts to trail engineers within the state who can then carry on the board's safety program. Some states, he said, have also passed companion legislation making it a misdemeanor for someone to conduct himself in a fashion that would endanger the lives of other lift passengers or jeopardize the safe operation of any existing facility.

The Pomerelle operator compared such legislation to state motor vehicle laws which establish penalties for driving behavior that jeopardizes the safety of fellow motorists.

TWIN FALLS — The nation's top environmental official, in a letter to Gov. Cecil Andrus, has confirmed that the Idaho Power Co. coal-fired power plant will escape stringent new federal air pollution controls.

SURROUNDED by sign-carrying labor union members, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., is shouted down as he tries to address a rally in Washington, D.C., Saturday. The rally collapsed into disorder as those present demanded jobs.

Accused Texan gripes

AUSTIN, Tex. — (UPI) — Robert Elmer Kleasen, charged with the murder of two Mormon missionaries, says he is being harassed in the Travis County Jail.

"The harassment has continued," Kleasen told reporters who asked about his federal court-suit-complaining-he-is-being-mistreated. Defense attorney Roscoe R. Halley advised him not to elaborate.

Kleasen's lawyers, Halley challenged federal agents' justification for searching the travel trailer where they found a bullet-riddled name tag and watches belonging to the two missionaries.

District Judge Tom Beckwell delayed a ruling until next Friday on defense motions forbidding prosecutors from using evidence seized in the search.

Law officers testified at an inquest Jan. 2 they found the missionaries' watches, car keys and a bullet-riddled name tag inside Kleasen's trailer. Some blood-stained clothes were discovered nearby. Officers said they recovered hair and body tissue matching mine-missiles on a hand saw at a nearby taxidermist's shop.

The state will ask the death penalty in Kleasen's May 19 trial for the murder of Gary Smith Darley, 20, of Siskiyou Valley, Calif., and Mark J. Fischer, 19, of Milwaukee.

'Y' pool delayed

TWIN FALLS — Another delay in opening of the swimming pool at the YM-YWCA has been announced.

Minor equipment problems have postponed the opening again but officials are now shooting for a target date of May 5.

Charles Upton, executive director of the YMCA said about 600 persons have signed up for swimming classes but a few openings are still available for adult beginners.

Gunshot kills man

CASTLEFORD — Jasper J. Griggs, 67, retired Castledorf area farmer, died at his home early Friday.

County Coroner Clyde Edwards said he died instantly of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

SHOSHONE Falls is now at its spectacular best for the season says Al Peters, manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co. He said the falls now has about 16,000 to 17,000 second feet of water falling over the rocks and persons wanting to see the falls at their best will have another week to ten days to visit the park area. After the water volume will probably begin decreasing, depending on the pattern of the snow melt in watershed areas.

Utah Symphony plays to houseful

BY LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Utah Symphony was enthusiastically received Friday night in what hopefully can become an annual appearance in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

The concert, sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club in cooperation with the First Security Bank, drew a full house, an accomplishment in itself when many cultural events this season have been performed before a half empty house at CSI.

Under the direction of Maurice Abravanel, the Utah musicians, many of whom are youthful, presented a well balanced program of two contemporary numbers and Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony." This work was conscribed by the composer to be one of his best and his last. It was who heard it Friday night would question his judgment.

"The Adventures of Mercury" by the French composer Erik Satie opened the concert. The 12 short musical sketches are based on classical Greek mythology and are descriptive of their titles such as "Dance of Mercury" and "Bath of the Graces."

The clean, simple harmonies show Satie's determination to break with the romantic tradition and pretentious structures of the past. The music was composed for a ballet, commissioned for a series of avant-garde theatrical pose performances in Paris in 1924, the year before Satie's death.

The second number, Aaron Copland's Suite for "Billy the Kid" also is from a ballet score. Copland, considered one of America's most distinguished living composers, tells the story of Billy the Kid from the "Open Prairie" through a rousing gun battle where the percussion section is shown to advantage, through celebration and Billy's final capture.

The suite includes familiar cowboy tunes and players responded with precision to Abravanel's interpretation of the varying "Celebration."

For the traditionalist, however, the highlight of the evening was the Beethoven number, about which endless words must be written and critics have put forth conflicting ideas of what the composer was trying to say.

It really doesn't matter whether one believes the symphony depicts a political revolution, gay wedding or a procession in the catacombs. What matters is that each time it is heard the music speaks for itself to each listener as a "Musical experience."

Beethoven himself, directed the premiere performance in Vienna in 1813, as a benefit for wounded Austrian soldiers. The concert marked the beginning of his great popularity, but while it brought him praise it also evoked the comment that the first and last movements could only have been written in a "drunken state."

The second movement, the "Allegretto," with its haunting melody and steady rhythm, became such a favorite it often was substituted for the slow movements of others of Beethoven's symphonies in his day.

The joyful exuberance of the third movement, a scherzo, where the themes are interchanged between the strings and winds, is enhanced by the energetic and showy final movement.

This "Allegro con brio" is brimming with riotous movement and evoked the comment from one critic that "it was indeed the work of an intoxicated man, but one intoxicated with poetry and genius."

One of the best things about the Utah Symphony is that despite the group's international acclaim, members do not "play down" to audiences on their tours. The director's graciousness and sincere interest in the people in each town he visits is reflected in the players who mingled with patrons at the reception following the concert.

The group played in Pinedale Saturday before returning home. They presented concerts in Colorado, southern Utah and Arizona on this spring tour.

On May 19 the symphony departs for a 17-day tour culminating in London, including performances in the Kennedy Center, Carnegie Hall, Glasgow, Scotland, and towns around London.

Kindergarten signup urged by officials

TWIN FALLS — Parents of children who will attend Twin Falls kindergarten next fall are urged to get them enrolled by Tuesday.

"All they have to do is lift up the phone and call the school where the child will attend," Lynn Affleck, citizens committee chairman, said.

She said it is important that the school administrators have a reasonably accurate count of the number of children to anticipate so they will know how many rooms to allot and how many teachers and supplies to order.

The state funding to assist with kindergarten costs also depends upon the enrollment anticipated, Mrs. Affleck said.

Thieves burglarize several TF places

TWIN FALLS — Thieves entered the YM-YWCA building, caused $250 damage and took $265 in cash, police reports Saturday revealed.

Police said a forced entry was made in the "Y" building sometime Thursday night. It was discovered about 8 a.m. Friday. Burglars ransacked all of the building offices and storage rooms after forcing locks on the doors, officers said.

A tape recorder, camera flash attachment and $265 in cash were taken from the offices and storage areas. A number of other items were moved from one place to another. Damage to doors and file cabinets and desks plus the lost totaled $729, officers said.

Burglars also entered the First Baptist Church at 579-9th Street and Ninth Avenue East Thursday night, taking only $23.70 in cash.

The building was entered sometime prior to 8 a.m. Friday. Here the office area was ransacked but only the cash was reported missing.

A Union Pacific Railroad car was entered when the seal was broken on the main door. Police said the car was parked behind the Idaho Frozen Foods plant and contained a quantity of paper products and similar items. About $200 in paper printers and some flashlight batteries were taken, officers said.

Mary Vanderpool, Jerome, told Twin Falls police someone entered her unoccupied car at the Bowldrome parking lot Thursday night and took $168 worth of stereo tapes and a tape container.

Bid review planned

TWIN FALLS — Bids for a sedan and pickup truck for the Twin Falls County sheriff's office will be reviewed Monday when county commissioners are scheduled to select the successful bidder.

The awarding of a purchase contract is scheduled for 11 a.m. Monday. Sheriff Paul Corder will check the bids for compliance with specifications.

Those firms submitting bids and the prices quoted include Ace Hansen Chevrolet, $33,913.67 for a 1975 4-door Belair and $3,562.72 for a 1975 half-ton pickup; John Chris Motors, $4,428 for a 1975 Pontiac and $3,649, a half-ton GMC pickup; Dave Monroe Chevrolet, Buick, $4,401.39 for the sedan and $4,318.37 for the pickup truck; Bob Reese Motor, $4,374.78 for the sedan and $3,199.69 for the half-ton Dodge pickup; and Bill Workman Ford, $4,339.69 for a 500 Custom sedan and $3,341 for a half-ton pickup.

Commissioners have announced approval of a lease to Fred Montgomery, Twin Falls, for two acres of pasture adjacent to Rock Creek west of Twin Falls. The land is leased for $75 per year. One other bid was received from Virgil Olsen.

State health officer sets TF talk

TWIN FALLS — The state public health officer for Idaho will be the speaker at the mental health association's annual membership dinner Wednesday night.

Dr. John Ashley, Boise, who also is administrator of the division of health of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare (IDHW), will discuss current health legislation at the Twin Falls County Mental Health Association's banquet.

The event is scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday in the cafeteria of the College of Southern Idaho, multi-use building.

State Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, will serve as master of ceremonies, according to Rev. Robert Van Ness, president.

In addition to Dr. Ashley's talk, brief reports will be given on the Hotline and Community Friends projects, both sponsored by the association.

Dr. James J. Harris, of the regional mental health center, Twin Falls, will outline services offered by the center.

Before joining the department of health and welfare, Dr. Ashley was the medical director for professional affairs at Kansas City General Hospital and Medical Center in Missouri.

He has been an instructor for the division of health administration at the University of Colorado School of Medicine, and assistant professor at the University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Medicine. He is licensed to practice medicine in Missouri, Colorado and Idaho.

He served his internship at Colorado General Hospital and was granted a research associate fellowship at the Colorado School of Medicine.

There are six bureaus under the Idaho division of health in IDHW. Rev. Van Ness said, each which, Dr. Ashley has responsibility. These include preventive medicine, licensure and certification of health facilities, emergency medical services, health planning and resources development, child, health and department of health and welfare laboratories.

Anyone interested in invited to attend. Tickets are $1.50 for the dinner and will be available at the door, but reservations are needed. They must be made by Monday noon by calling Rev. Van Ness at the Presbyterian Church, 733 702.

UN forgotten by most parties in Asian mess

Spring brings renewal of hope

Among the legends of Paul Bunyan is the tale of the year of two winters. That was one so long and severe that it was two winters rolled into one. That was a good many Magic Valley residents, it almost seems like Idaho is being subjected to something nearly as extreme this year of 1975...

Aubrae is now arguing there that a cease-fire in the next few days is not only the best way to avoid a bloody battle for Saigon, but probably the only way to assure Hanoi of substantial international economic aid for the relief and reconstruction of the country.

Teacher takes dim view of MACOS

Others denounce it. Some taxpayers resent the expenditure. Others resent it. There seems to be no middle ground.

The price of survival is killing; the co-players are re-enforced by the story of the old woman who was left on the ice today because she could not contribute to her society.

Lack of impression leaves Ford vulnerable

MARENGO, Ill. — The political vulnerability of Gerald R. Ford after nearly nine months as President is appallingly apparent in this conservative, rock-ribbed Republican farm town where he has still made no impact as a forceful national party.

Thus, our Republican voters, asked whether they had a generally favorable or unfavorable opinion of Ford, asked out four to one favorable. And when we asked him to rate his overall performance as President, 37 — well over half — rated him favorably.

"He's for us people," a foundry superintendent told us, "but he doesn't have enough influence to put things over." It is true, of course, that we conducted our interviews during one of this country's most embittered and depressing periods.

just under 50 per cent, with Rockefeller and the "don't know" far behind. Likewise, despite Ford's "nice-guy" image, Reagan outscored him — and routed all other possible 1976 Republican presidential contenders — as the party leader with the highest "favorable" rating.

Thought for today

A thought for the day: David Starr Jordan, American naturalist, said, "Be a life long or short, its completeness depends on what it was lived for."

The contradiction between lack of confidence in the President's ability to run the country and high esteem for his character and personality seems unique in contemporary presidential politics. With the help of national pollster Patrick Caddell and two of his Cambridge Survey Research field workers, Henrice Taylor and Marcella Seitz, we found this contradiction at the heart of Ford's predicament.

EVANS AND NOVAK In our specific questions about Ford's performance, he rated highly only on his handling of the honesty-in-government issue, with 48 voters giving him an excellent or good score. But unhappily for Ford, that high rating, and his equally high scores as the "kind of decent honest man everybody needs" is only a base on which to build a strong presidency.

No close contenders

Los Angeles Times WASHINGTON — Chutzpa is a Yiddish word which means "unmitigated effrontery or impudence." There is no comparable word in the English language. The classic example of chutzpa is the young man who murdered his parents and then asked the court to show mercy because he was an only child.

The money could belong to Jacobson then, but since it was given to him by AMPI with the clear understanding he would give it to Connolly, there is some question if Jacobson carried out his instructions. Since Jacobson is bankrupt the $10,000 presumably does not belong to him but to his creditors, and the government could turn it over to them.

ART BUCHWALD This leaves our friends at AMPI. To their credit, although they have said they gave Jacobson $15,000, they are only asking for the return of $10,000, which shows they're all heart. After reviewing all the facts in the case I have concluded it's only fair that AMPI be given their $10,000 back, but with a few strings attached.

Grandfather expansion ahead?

By NEA-London Economist News Service
 In the two decades to 1974 industrial production in the world's richest capitalist countries — members of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development — rose at an annual average rate of 5.5 per cent.

Britain notched up only about half that average rate, and Japan scored double it, but all countries prospered until the 1973-74 slump. Last year OECD industrial production fell, by over 15 per cent at the annual rate — almost as bad as the 19 per cent drop in 1931. For 1975 we have only January production figures for Germany (down another 3.5 per cent compared with last October), December for France and Britain (each of them broadly unchanged), but February figures are available for America and Japan, each showing an extraordinary 9 per cent drop from last October-December (think that of an annual rate — over 40 per cent).

These five countries together account for 80 per cent of OECD industrial production. Even if no further drops are shown anywhere throughout OECD, when full February and March figures are available — and of course some will be — it is already certain that OECD industrial production will have fallen even faster than 15 per cent, at an annual rate, in the first quarter of 1975. This is now a major slump.

The bigger the slump, the bigger the boom. This grandfather of all postwar recessions will bring in tow the grandfather of all postwar expansions. Here is why. The 5.5 per cent a year average rate of growth in industrial production from 1953 to 1975 was no accident. It reflected the appropriate long-term growth of output potential — the industrial technology and productivity were steadily increased by technological advance and investment.

An expanding labor supply helped, and so did shifts in employment from backward to advanced sectors of each economy. One can argue whether the trend rate in 1953-75 will grow a bit because of accelerating technology or drop a bit, but it is clear that over the coming three to four years it is unlikely to change very much. Down to, say, 4 per cent at worst.

The growth in potential output (or capacity) measures the rate at which actual output must grow if any given level of employment and capacity utilization is to be maintained. While actual output is growing by less than potential output, employment will increase and plant will become idle. Even when actual growth catches up with potential, it will take up to a year before unemployment stops rising. Before unemployment can be reduced and idle plant can be brought back into use, actual production must, for a time, rise faster than potential output.

The slump is opening the gap between actual and potential output. How fast? Assume (1) maintained 5.5 per cent annual growth in potential, (2) no further fall in OECD industrial production after this month, (3) steady recovery from the middle of this year to the long-term 5.5 per cent industrial growth rate by its end — then 1976 will begin with a 15 per cent gap between actual and potential output.

The gap will not be precisely 15 per cent. The growth of potential output could have slowed down, that would reduce it a little. The assumption that the slump will bottom out in the middle of this year could be optimistic; that would increase it. On balance, the best guess is that the end-1975 gap will be above 15 per cent, but that governments will by then be reacting frenetically against it.

Most governments have already turned their policies around to fight against recession. Monetary policy has been eased and interest rates have tumbled. America's expected budget deficit seems to grow bigger with each news dispatch. But inflation takes time to have its effects, and it is working against a strong recessionary tide. The tide now seems unlikely to turn until 1976.

Even if it does turn before that, a double-figure gap between potential and actual industrial production is certain by the end of this year. Government will want to close it, because (1) unemployment is already high and will go on rising well into 1976 even if output turns up before then, and because (2) inflation seems to be receding (except in Britain) and the commodity price slump will help it along.

The rise in unemployment is likely to set the pace for most governments' policies, especially in countries like the United States which will now probably enter its recession year of 1976 with unemployment above 10 per cent.

To get back to the 1953-74 average level of unemployment, OECD industrial production will need to spur by 15 per cent more than its normal 5.5 per cent annual growth trend. To do this in a single year would require 20 per cent growth; spread over two, 13 per cent in each year; and over three, 10 per cent a year. So far the sharpest world increase has been that of 1972-73, which doubled commodity prices in a year. Just to get partway back to pre-slump levels of unemployment will require a 1972-73 sized boom. Going the whole way back will require the 1972-73 boom multiplied by three.

If countries march off to step into the boom, it will be slowblurring; if they march in step, it will explode, and next-boom inflation will be ratcheted up another 5-10 percentage points. Will they be in step? America and Germany are leading the way to inflation, Japan is holding fire, but probably will join in. The European countries with the fastest inflation and largest current account deficits, France, Italy and Britain, are also being slow to restimulate demand, but France and Britain were slow into the slump.

On the reckoning, the upswing should gradually gain momentum during 1976. But remember, unemployment in most countries will still be rising.

Nobody foresaw the speed of the 1972-73 upswing. Few foresaw the severity of the 1974-75 world slump. But people learn. This world boom should be seen coming. This could influence governments against over-reflation — but it would also influence corporate and consumer confidence in a way which helps the boom along. Late 1976 to late 1977 looks like a period of rapid expansion everywhere.

This 1977 boom may reproduce all the worst features of the previous one — a bigger, commodity price inflation and so the return of domestic wage-push inflation. So far each successive bust after a boom has left inflation higher than before. The 1977 boom is very likely, in its turn, to breed another big slump. The international economy looks like becoming dangerously unstable.

If the cycle is to be stopped, now is the time for governments to put their heads together to see what can be done about producing a controlled boom. It will be no good waiting until the damage has been done and then trying frantically to pick up the pieces. A world economic conference on control of the 1977 boom is needed this year.

© The Economist of London

To a world on a knife edge between recession and depression, that may sound like a bad joke. But if economic experience — i.e., the bigger the slump, the bigger the subsequent boom — is any guide, "this grandfather of all postwar recessions will bring in tow the grandfather of all postwar expansions."

Hansen case bias dismays

Editor, Times-News:
 I am a little dismayed at the prejudice that has been evident by the Times-News regarding the recent developments concerning Rep. George Hansen.

Your reporting of the incident, as well as your editorials seem somewhat biased for a newspaper charged with the responsibility of reporting all kinds of news that so strongly affects the thinking and reactions of its readers. I have no quarrel with those whose pictures were in the paper and expressed their opinion regarding Hansen. As a matter of curiosity, however, I am interested in knowing what would have been printed by your paper if one of those interviewed would have stated that Hansen had been found guilty of armed robbery? One of those interviewed did state something to the effect that "They didn't know that felons were allowed to serve in Congress." Could I assume that your news reporter would have advised the person the difference between a misdemeanor and a felony? — It is a most severe test of my credulity to believe that six people were interviewed at random ... and five of them either thought that Congressman Hansen should resign, or that the sentence was justified.

This, from a community of voters who voted Hansen into office, with the knowledge of the alleged violation of technicalities prior to the time they cast their votes. Also, in view of a recent report in the Statesman of a radio station telephone poll of 75 persons ... not one of whom felt that Congressman Hansen should resign. It would be interesting to know how many other candidates could have the same number of investigators that covered Hansen's alleged irregularities, and come out as clean as he did, with two unintentional technical violations, reflecting no intent of fraud or cover-up. I have never been a registered Democrat or Republican. I like to vote for the candidate of my choice regardless of party affiliation. Comes on Times-News. Let's give everybody a fair shake where professional journalism and freedom of speech in news reporting is by far the most important media of free expression that we have in America today. These freedoms insure altho' our continued constitutional rights. These thoughts I have just expressed are a prime example of this sacred right that all of us are still privileged to enjoy. GORDON L. Idaho can't afford loss

Editor, Times-News:
 I am sure that you will have plenty of say editorially about Rep. George Hansen. My family and I for one group of people, certainly do not want him to resign. Why has he been stung out? Why such a completely stupid, ignorant, biased, unfair, asinine decision such as this was given. Why I probably will never know. About 13,000 complaints and Rep. Hansen is being shafted? It is certainly clear that Judge Hart did not know that the whole thing is about or he does and is busy carrying out other orders. Ever since George Hansen beat Orval Hansen in the primaries someone has certainly been out to get him and I don't think that we have to look very far to find out who. We finally have a man that will represent our interests (the state of Idaho) and not his own or outsiders and someone is trying desperately to destroy him and our faith in him. I am certainly appalled at the complete lack of fair play or sense of true justice meted by our courts. Murderers, rapists, kidnapers, etc. go free or receive minimum sentences. Drug peddlers that destroy lives get a slap on the hand. Where in the world are we going? There was nothing criminal done and anyone who has had volunteer help such as there are during campaigns, knows that things such as this happen. Also don't repeat the pure garbage about how, "Well, he pleaded guilty so he must have done something terrible wrong." Have you ever been through a court trial? Try it sometime. It takes time and money. Time in particular. Then, besides, why go through the whole hassle over something so minor. But I guess he should have spent your money and mine trying to defend himself from something so ridiculous. I for one hope that he does not resign. Idaho cannot afford to lose this man. MRS. ARNETTA RATTO Ketchum.

Text powers questioned

Editor, Times-News:
 Under title "Aide seeks backing for textbook pick" it would seem executive secretary Wayne York of the IEA is urging the IEA (Idaho Education Association) to back up the state board of education in its selection of textbooks for classroom use.

Wayne York, "there are too many time honored American democratic principals to acquiesce quietly to minorities" (PARENTS) of course we only pay their salaries and give them the children but why should we have anything to say about their teaching? York spoke out against books containing hard-core profanity, vulgarity and obscenity where there are no redeeming social or literary values." I don't understand in what form you can put hard-core vulgarity, obscenity, profanity in, and then believe it to have some value for good. But let's face it, Mr. York only wants a little power such as teachers should be free from all available material to select classroom material to their choosing but; "should be guaranteed and protected from assault or erosion." Sounds like he is going to teach something you would want your child to learn, in a pig's eye. No thanks sir York. THOMAS A. ANNETT Filer

Jail sentence appalls many

Editor, Times-News:
 Two-thousand of Idahoans were appalled at the two-month prison sentence given Rep. George Hansen for technical violation of the Federal Campaign Act of 1971.

"The punishment is not 'stern but fitting' as indicated in your Sunday editorial but a harsh and unequal application of justice. Out of hundreds and possibly thousands of similar technical violations why is Idaho's Congressman Hansen being singled out? The complexity of federal law and regulation that make almost every citizen an unintentional law breaker is one of the important reasons why we need more George Hansens in Washington. Justice demands an immediate commuting of his prison sentence by President Ford. JAY L. MCBRIDE Rupert

Sunday edition article almost ruins entire day

Editor, Times-News:
 The Sunday, April 13, 1975, Times-News page 5 almost ruined the entire day. I have seen the illustration by Lou Grant showing the entire United States as a blood bath, due to "Gun Law Laxity" and the "Gun Control" article by Nancy Hicks, N.Y. Times-Service, which was as jarring, occupying the better half of a full page, it was hard to suppress a scream. There isn't much can be said about that illustration except it smells, shows lack of homework on the part of the artist, and reflects the opinion of an individual. As for the article by Nancy Hicks, she has used the same old stories that have been used since gun controls were advocated: One statistic not listed was the number of suicides by guns. Perhaps she failed to list that number because someone might point the fact that it's much easier to shoot oneself than it is to beat yourself to death with a stick. It would be interesting if we had more details on some of these deaths, particularly the police officers. A classic example from Pennsylvania: Jennifer Wallace is six years old. Because she is a victim of cerebral palsy she can neither walk nor talk. Until recently she depended upon her father to dress and feed her. Little Jennifer has been waiting nine months for her father, a Pitts- burgh police officer, to come home, to hold and hug her and make her smile again. But Officer Patrick Wallace won't be coming home. He was gunned down in the street shot to death in the line of duty. The man arrested for murdering Officer Wallace is a convicted felon enjoying a prison furlough at the time of the shooting. Shall I go on? The same people that cry for a ban on firearms at the same time go right on advocating weekend furloughs for criminals in prison for crimes of violence, who are being used for this legislation. But the fact is there are already enough laws to do the job if enforced. Check the 1968 gun law (P.L. 90-618) and the omnibus crime control and safe streets act (P.L. 90-351). I would like the same police as Nancy Hicks was awarded to counter her statements, but to get my views published I will have to suffice with this example. But if she really is interested to uncontrolled murder and deaths of innocent I wonder where she would rate abortion on her list? I hope her article and the illustration by Lou Grant will serve to help people to become active in local affairs such as supporting our local police and keeping them independent. Also a push to convict the guilty and inform the public of leniency where it is not due. Efforts by some attorneys, who have only money and fame to protect and use the tactic ignore the accusation, destroy the accusers should also be brought to light. Let's become informed. Views like those made mention of by Lou Grant and Nancy Hicks have a ring of someone bought and paid for! A. R. KENT Twin Falls

Registration encouraged

Editor, Times-News:
 We are fortunate in Twin Falls to have a school district which is willing to meet the needs of the community and provide a public kindergarten program. Now each of us has one single job to do — round up every child who will be five years old by Oct. 15 and ask their parents to call or go to their neighborhood school and register for that new kindergarten program. Why pre-register? The school district has to order desks and supplies. The rooms must be set up and qualified teachers hired. Without an accurate count of who will be attending next fall, it will be difficult to provide these services. Support your school — whether private or public and don't let any five-year-old child miss a place in that school next year. Call or visit your school and reserve a place for your kindergarten — Now! MARY LONDON CARTER Twin Falls

Prayer for today

We don't like to be criticized, God. We'd like to get to the place where criticism wouldn't bother us. We should be mature enough that we wouldn't try to defend ourselves, but we aren't. We know we can't please everyone, so we really should expect criticism. The hardest part is to listen and weigh what is said to see whether we can gain anything from it. Even if we feel we are being judged unfairly, help us not to be overly concerned. Help us to remember that "One who desires above all things to know what God thinks will not be too anxious about the judgments of men." ULETTA MARTIN Buhl.

Ford asks tougher US penal code, swift justice

Hijack foiled

HANDCUFFED, hijacker identified as Francis Page Covey, 43, Richmond, Va., sits in Atlanta after he surrendered to FBI agents at Atlanta, Ga., Friday night. He demanded to be flown to Cuba was foiled when he went to the toilet. (UPI)

John Barleycorn clips hijacker

ATLANTA (UPI) — Francis Page Covey, a chronic drunk with a long string of arrests in his hometown of Richmond, Va., awake in Atlanta's Fulton County Jail Saturday to find himself charged with air piracy.

Covey, 43, is accused of capping his latest fling Friday by threatening to blow up a United Airlines flight with 67 persons aboard unless the pilot flew him to Cuba to see Fidel Castro.

But Covey, who witnesses said was overly fortified with vodka gin, got his game plan muddled and was captured when he forgot his mission and took time out to use the toilet.

He will be taken before U.S. Magistrate Allen L. Chancy at 9 a.m. Monday for a formal reading of the charges against him.

"Federal law provides for a sentence of not less than 20 years for conviction on air piracy charges. It does not spell out a maximum penalty."

Richmond authorities said records there show that Covey has been arrested 75 times between 1959 and December of last year including public drunkenness, drunk driving, assault on officers and resisting arrest.

Covey allegedly took over United Airlines Flight 344 as the big Boeing 727 jet was over Washington, D.C. on a flight from Raleigh-Durham N.C. to Newark, N.J.

Witnesses said Covey had been drinking heavily at the airport bar at Raleigh, and continued ordering drinks after the flight was airborne.

Stewardesses said Covey suddenly plunged his hand into a flight bag he was carrying, said the bag contained nitroglycerin, and announced he wanted to go to Cuba.

The plane was diverted to Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport to pick up additional fuel for the flight to Cuba and while on the ground the stewardesses persuaded Covey to let everyone get off the plane except the pilot, co-pilot and engineer.

According to authorities, Covey then said he had to use the restroom. While he was in the toilet compartment the flight crew escaped by jumping from the cockpit exit.

Two FBI agents then went aboard and took Covey without a struggle. He did not have a gun and there was no nitroglycerin in the flight bag.

Moratorium proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An agency of the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended today a two-year moratorium on abandonment of railroad branch lines in the northeast and midwest.

The ICC's Rail Services Planning Office said the data used by the U.S. Railway Association in determining which branch lines to abandon was faulty, as was the railway association's use of the data.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — President Ford will ask Congress to toughen the federal penal code to assure "swift justice" and more realistic sentencing and to show the way to the states in their dealings with law violations from street holdups to white-collar crime in high places.

The sweeping recommendations will be requested by the President when he sends a long-awaited law enforcement message to Capitol Hill in six weeks to two months. It was learned that the Department of Justice already has submitted a suggested program to the White House and that the specific recommendations are being reviewed by the Domestic Council.

Ford gave a preview of the program toward which he is leaning in an address Friday before the sesquicentennial convocation of the Yale Law School.

The law enforcement "message" had been promised by the President shortly after he assumed office last Aug. 9, but was delayed pending the appointment of Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi and Domestic Council officials.

The speech before Ford's fellow Yale alumni — including Supreme Court Justices Byron White and Potter Stewart — was curious in one respect. The man who issued a blanket pardon to former president Richard M. Nixon seemed to go out of his way to condemn law violations by government officials, both federal and state, and told the receptive audience:

"As far as law violations in high places are concerned, let me stress this point: In this nation, I have made it a matter of the highest priority to restore to the executive branch decency, honesty and adherence to the law at all levels. This has been done. It will continue to be." The points Ford made in his anti-crime address have been advocated strongly by Levi, the former president of the University of Chicago whom the President recruited to the administration as the first Democrat in his cabinet — and the chief executive appears to be going Levi's route.

He expected that the principal role of the federal government in crime-fighting is to provide financial and technical assistance to the states. But the President noted that even while the constitution puts crime control largely in the hands of the states, there are areas where the government can take the lead.

The President suggested in his speech and is expected to propose in his message to Congress:

— A modified federal code to make more sentences mandatory — and therefore punishment more certain for those convicted of all violent crimes.

— The appointment of more judges, prosecutors and public defenders to the federal system to accelerate the administration of justice.

— A severe cutback in "plea bargaining," a process under which accused persons plead guilty to a lesser crime and save the prosecution the cost of a trial, generally themselves a prison sentence.

The mandatory jailing of repeaters, and perpetrators of violent crimes, especially with the use of firearms or by individuals with criminal records.

Ford declared prisons should be used for the incarceration of those convicted of major crimes and to "minimize the detention of persons convicted of minor crimes." Moreover, the Chief Executive said, jail terms need not be "cruel" — the imposition of a one- to five-year term often is enough punishment, he said.

Idaho GOP panel wants Hansen in

Dennis Olson, the Chairman of the Bonneville County Republican committee, said he found many instances where Democrats had violated the same law or laws similar to the statutes Hansen had been charged under.

He attacked Rep. Wayne Hayes, D-Ohio, and blamed him with many of Hansen's troubles.

Hayes insisted that the Justice Department carry on the investigation, Olson said, while not supplying Hansen any information on charges.

He asked those haven't filed reports are not criminals," Olson said. The national and state government's have just created a monster of a law.

"There has been no prosecution of anyone else, and I'm not urging prosecutions. But many people are calling for Rep. Hansen's resignation for filling late and filing on the wrong forms," Olson said.

"Under those circumstances, it is highly improper that he should be requested to resign."

He asked those requesting Hansen's resignation to search their own minds.

"I think all those asking for resignation better search their own records and search their own consciences... then maybe we should request an investigation of the Democratic Central Committee."

Olson strenuously objected when several members of the committee mentioned Hansen's guilt after the resolution passed.

George Neiland, the Blaine County chairman, said the committee was confirming Hansen's guilt, but he was cut short by protests from Olson.

"I'm afraid we're about to perform a great disservice to the party," Neiland said before the passage of the Sunshine Law resolution.

"The Democrats are not going to respond... this is terribly dangerous to the party in general."

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Midvale, disagreed.

"I think this type of response will bring the legislature into action next year," he said.

Panel calls CIA men

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Central Intelligence Agency Director William E. Colby and former director Richard Helms will appear before the Rockefeller Commission Monday in the continuing investigation of alleged domestic spying by the agency. It was announced Saturday.

It will be a return appearance by Colby, who has directed the CIA since 1973.

Helms, now U.S. ambassador to Iran, headed it from 1966 to 1973 — a period during which the alleged activity took place.

ROK chief ready

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean President Park Chunghee said Saturday his country faced the danger that North Korea, encouraged by the collapse in Indochina, may "play with fire."

He said his government was ready for any Communist invasion.

"If our people are determined to defend their own country for themselves any invasion of North Korea's President Kim Il-sung may stage is not to be feared," Park said on an inspection visit to Cheju Island.

Cosmetic measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional Democrats promised a tough alternative to President Ford's energy program — but the House Ways and Means Committee so far has produced only what one member calls "a powderpuff."

Having reached tentative agreement on some relatively non-controversial provisions, the panel turns this week to prescriptions for stronger medicine.

However, some Democratic members are pessimistic about any real legislative breakthrough, citing lack of public support and a round-swell lobbyist opposition. — It appears impossible for even the Democrats to get together on anything of real substance, according to one of them, Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida.

Rep. William J. Green, D-Ga., said any major action to conserve energy and develop new supplies would have an impact on the pocketbook and lifestyle of the average American — a strong deterrent to congressional enthusiasm.

DENVER (UPI) — Authorities Saturday scoured the former neighborhoods of two convicts who seized four hostages, including a sleeping baby, in an escape from state prison.

Pomerelle head proposes Gem ski lift inspection

"Jumping out of chairs and deliberately swinging chairs on ski lifts," he explained, "is a violation of the safety rules and is a cause capable to jump its track, thereby endangering the lives of other passengers. Clearly such behavior should be as illegal as speeding or running stop signs on a street or highway."

Anderson said since purchasing the Pomerelle ski area two winters ago, there has been no serious mechanical malfunctions of the lift facilities. Not one ski day has been lost to mechanical problems in two years, he said.

He said, however, all lifts can be dangerous if proper maintenance is not accomplished on a regular schedule.

"The Federal Aviation Agency would not permit an airline to fly passengers without assuring the public of strict adherence to standards of safety," he said, "and yet thousands of passengers every day, all winter long are conveyed along miles of aerial lifts — often at considerable heights above the ground with no public guarantee of adherence to safety standards."

Presently, Anderson said, aerial tramways located on U.S. Forest Service land are inspected annually by forest service personnel. Anderson said he and other area operators feel these inspections are inadequate, time consuming and a waste of taxpayer money.

"The forest service does not have enough personnel qualified to perform such a service," Anderson said.

"The limited number of forest service people in the area have been charged with a list of responsibilities many of which call for highly specialized knowledge. It is unrealistic to expect the agency's small field staff to have a comprehensive understanding of land-use planning, recreation facilities and usage for snowmobiling, skiing, camping, etc.; avalanche control, wildlife, water resource management, timber and grazing management, fire surveillance and control, management of mineral extraction and of necessary specialized engineering knowledge assuring safe construction and operation of aerial tramways," he said.

He said the forest service has extensive written manuals and regulatory memorandums covering this wide list of responsibilities, but books and words cannot ensure knowledge and under these circumstances occasional misjudgments are inevitable.

Anderson said a state tramway board would be concerned exclusively with safety of the skiing public. They would be no cost to the public, he said, as ski area operators would pay for any fees or inspections.

Most of the ski resorts in Idaho are on forest service lands and operate under special use permits. Those not on forest lands have no inspection at all, he said.

Mediator?

CONSTITUTIONAL obstacles to Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh taking over the South Vietnamese government and ending the war with the Communists were removed Saturday when the Saigon Assembly empowered President Tran Van Huong to select a successor if he could not negotiate peace. The Communists have not discounted Minh as a mediator. (UPI)

Idaho Power ordered boilers and steam turbines for the plant last summer. Under a loophole—definition—in the new federal regulations, construction was started on the plant when the equipment was ordered. As a result, the new rules would not apply to the power plant because they only cover pollution sources which go under construction after June 1 of this year.

The federal definition holds even though Idaho Power has not yet received required approval from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to begin construction of the plant.

The opinion given Holdren said that, although the Idaho Power plant "may possibly not be required to meet" the new pollution rules, it would emit a quantity of sulfur dioxide that could "entirely consume" allowed pollution increases in the area.

"This could then prohibit another prospective emitter of sulfur dioxide from constructing a facility in that same area," according to the opinion.

The new rules establish three "classes" of pollution increases. Class I allows a slight increase, Class II permits a greater pollution post and Class III allows pollution to climb to maximum levels. The entire nation was given a Class II designation when the new rules took effect last January.

The ERA opinion received by Holdren indicates that the Idaho Power plant could use up the entire Class II pollution allotment in the Boise area and eliminate any chance for construction of additional pollution sources.

In his letter to Train, Andrus said, "The impact of the interpretation contained in (the opinion given Holdren) upon the health and welfare of Idaho citizens concerns us greatly."

Andrus asked Train if the Idaho Power plant would be considered under construction even if the equipment orders could be cancelled prior to June 1 "without recourse by the manufacturer."

Train replied that, if that is the case, the plant would not be under construction because the purchase orders would not be "binding agreements or contractual obligations."

However, the Times-News learned Friday that the equipment manufacturers can impose

"penalties" on Idaho Power for cancelling the orders and that the penalties (probably fines) make the orders binding.

Robert Brown Jr., news director for Idaho Power said, "There are penalties involved (for cancellation), as I remember it." Asked if the penalties make the orders binding, Brown said, "I think that is a legal determination that is beyond our capabilities."

But Douglas Tjassan, director of the air and hazardous materials division at EPA's office, said, "If there is a penalty, it would appear to be binding agreement. I would say yes if there is a penalty."

Andrus also asked Train if the Idaho Power plant would be included in the "baseline air quality concentration" under the new rules. The "baseline" is the pollution that existed during 974, plus pollution estimated to result from sources granted approval for construction prior to Jan. 1 of this year. It is the "beginning" pollution level which will be used to gauge the effects of future pollution sources in determining whether they should be permitted.

Train said the Idaho Power plant would be included in the "baseline only if it was granted a construction permit under state air pollution rules prior to Jan. 1.

Murray Michael, supervisor of air quality programs for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, told the Times-News Friday that the Idaho Power plant has not received state approval for construction.

That effectively means that the plant will not be included in the "baseline." Its pollution therefore will consume some or all of the allowed pollution increase in the Boise area.

In answer to another question from Andrus, Train said, emissions from a source such as (the Idaho Power plant), as well as emissions from sources subject to the new federal rules, would be considered in determining the impact of a proposed source on an applicable air quality improvement.

The Idaho Power plant's emissions could therefore use up the pollution allotment and prevent construction of other facilities which would add more pollution.

CIA pressing secret probe

(N.Y. Times Service)

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency is exerting "extensive pressure" on the Securities and Exchange Commission to handle in total secrecy its investigation of the company that was involved in a project to recover a sunken Soviet submarine and to keep the findings from the public, authoritative sources have disclosed.

If the SEC were to agree to total secrecy in this case, this action would have the effect of lifting its investigation and would violate the Securities Exchange Act, these sources said.

Many federal officials and Congressional sources privately believe that the handling of the secret CIA contract with Howard R. Hughes the billionaire industrialist, and the subcontractor, Global Marine, Inc., of Los Angeles, poses a broad question of whether private companies conducting covert operations for the CIA can, in the interest of national security, be excused from complying with United States regulatory laws.

The Global Marine case has apparently become a behind-the-scenes battleground on this issue. Ray D. Garrett Jr., chairman, other high SEC officials refused to comment on whether they had discussed the Global Marine case with CIA officials. Other SEC officials, moreover, said that they had been "ordered" not to discuss whether they had been in contact with the CIA.

Russians flayed

CAIRO (UPI) — Russian reluctance to meet Egypt's industrial and military requirements has led to 25 percent of Egyptian factories and is posing a threat to the nation's socialist development, Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said Saturday.

Fahmy told the weekly magazine Rose El Youssef, "The real danger to socialist development in Egypt now is not the activity of the right, but the Soviet stand."

"When one fourth of our factories are idled and when military supplies are not forthcoming smoothly to our army which is fighting a war of liberation, what will the reaction of millions of Egyptians be when we tell them that our Soviet friends are responsible for this?"

Is THIS YOUR HEARING AID?

Is It in a Drawer — Unused?

If you are among those persons who own a hearing aid but are not wearing it, here is a message of vital importance to you.

The experienced hearing aid dealer knows (and tells his customer), that learning to use an aid is not a simple, overnight process. He evaluates his customer's hearing thoroughly and scientifically. He selects and carefully adjusts the proper aid for each person's individual hearing problem. Most important, he works with the new owner to help him become accustomed to the many new sounds he will be hearing, and to help him get maximum benefit from his aid — so it doesn't end up in that drawer.

If your aid is "in a drawer" for any reason, we have a special offer for you: Bring your aid (regardless of make) to our office. Tell us why you are not wearing it. Then, while we check, clean, adjust and install new batteries in your aid, WITHOUT COST TO YOU, we will make a complete evaluation of your hearing — also without charge. We will offer you all possible assistance to help you use your aid. If we cannot help you, it won't cost you a cent.

We feature the finest in quality hearing aids from MAICO — Most Respected Name in Hearing for nearly 38 years. We would welcome the opportunity to "acquaint you with Magic Valley's finest hearing SERVICE, where we are proud to offer hearing help, not merely sell hearing aids. Our service to you only begins with the purchase of your aid!

Due to the terrific response to our previous ads, we have a good supply of used aids starting at $25.00 and up.

Temperance group falls off wagon

LONDON (UPI) — It took 119 years to do it, but the Temperance Permanent Building Society finally fell off the wagon Friday.

By a margin of nearly 7 to 1 its shareholders voted to abolish a revival rule of the nation's 14th largest building society.

But if the smallest shareholder spotted a director drinking anything stronger than coffee the director faced instant dismissal.

Last year the Temperance merged with another group renamed itself the Gateway Building Society, and began to get worried about Rule 22 '53, which required a majority of the board of directors to be "total abstainers from all intoxicating liquors."

But Bell and his eight other directors fear what would happen if one of the five nondrinkers died, resigned or was caught drinking.

By its constitution, the company would have to go out of business within six months or "by hook or by crook," find a non-drinking executive to replace him, Bell said. He quailed at the difficulty of finding a non-drinking executive.

Thus, despite impassioned opposition from temperance campaigners, Sir Cyril Higgs and a warning that Britain's largest temperance organization would withdraw its deposit from the society, the matter was put to a vote Thursday night at the stockholder's annual meeting.

"Do not snuff out this small candle of temperance in a neonit world," pleaded Arthur Davis, secretary of the Temperance Council of Christian Churches. He said it would inflict "serious wounds" on the abstinence movement.

But the shareholders voted 426 to 64 to abolish the temperance rule, and Bell and four other trustees on the board became free to have a drink if they wish — which, Bell said, none of them do.

Democrat campaigns
REXBURG, Idaho (UPI) — It may be too early for some to be thinking about the 1976 election but not George Willmore, a Rexburg Democrat who is considering making a bid for Idaho's Second Congressional seat.

Bircher sets talk
TWIN FALLS — R.D. Patrick Mahoney, John Birch Society member who served over 20 years in the Air Force intelligence, will speak at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Mahoney will deliver his speech on "Spies, Lies and Betrayal" at the Twin Falls Holiday Inn. During his talk he will discuss present foreign and domestic policies of the government and the effect he expects them to have.

Mahoney will draw on personal experiences to give his appraisal of where communism fits in the world conspiracy and what it really means to Americans.

The public is invited to the presentation.

Vietnam settlers shunned

By United Press International

Vietnam war refugees have received abundant sympathy from the world's nations, but few governments want them as settlers.

Many Southeast Asian nations, closest havens for tens of thousands who want to leave a Communist-run Vietnam, will let refugees pass through but not settle there.

European governments have said little. The United Nations is concentrating its efforts on getting the thousands made homeless by the Communists' month-long military push that has gobbled up three-quarters of South Vietnam.

The United States, which has eased its immigration rules, is contemplating accepting up to 130,000 South Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees. It has also asked friendly governments for help in settling others. State Department sources in Washington said.

The sources said the placing of South Vietnamese and Cambodian evacuees would be handled by U.S. voluntary agencies such as Church World Services, the U.S. Catholic Conference and other groups.

"Singapore will try to move people from points in the region," said Lee Kuan Yew, prime minister of the former British crown colony at the pattern tip of the Malaysian peninsula in the South China Sea.

Australia, which once sent soldiers to fight in South Vietnam and recently supplied planes for its own babyfift, says it will take only "a few hundred" refugees.

Australian officials said "these would be mostly spouses and children of Australians in Vietnam or relatives of Vietnamese students at Australian universities."

Thailand, which has closed its doors to fleeing Cambodians, still has 60,000 Vietnamese refugees who fled there after France pulled out of Indochina. Informed Thai government sources say the country doesn't want any more.

Officials in Japan and Taiwan said they hadn't decided whether to accept refugees. Philippine immigration officials said it was a political choice. President Ferdinand Marcos would make.

South Korean officials said privately that accepting Vietnamese refugees could never be considered.

Welfare organizations in Germany say they can take only limited numbers and prefer persons with professional skills.

"We've probably got room for a few thousand, but they would have to be carefully selected," said an official at a West German welfare organization.

"We've got over a million unemployed here and Germans are not going to like it if the government adds more."

The West German Foreign Ministry said it was studying the problem.

France, which took in thousands of Vietnamese after it left Indochina in 1954, says the United States has not approached it for aid in resettling refugees.

Mining control law hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal energy chief Frank G. Zarb says strip mine control legislation before Congress would force extra oil imports costing $2.3 billion, wipe out up to 35,000 mining jobs and cost consumers $53 million in new taxes and higher prices.

In addition, he says, the strict environmental measures passed by the House and Senate would block the United States from tapping between 9 and 53 per cent of its total 117 billion tons of known coal reserves.

Joining a chorus of opposition raised by coal operators, Appalachian miners and President Ford, Zarb released a letter Thursday to Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz. It said the strip mine bills now before a House-Senate conference committee threaten U.S. energy independence efforts and should be changed.

Zarb told Udall, the conference committee chairman, "the bills favor environmental and public-interest concerns too much. He said Congress should strike a better balance with energy and economic needs."

"The administration favors action to protect the environment and reclaim land disturbed by surface mining of coal and to prevent abuses that have accompanied such surface mining in the past," Zarb said in the letter, dated Tuesday.

"But surface mining legislation also involves other fundamental national objectives and issues including (a) energy independence, (b) outflow of dollars to other nations, (c) unemployment, and (d) higher consumer costs, particularly for electricity."

FEA move concerns oil men

©Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — A change for the worse in oil prices and the government's move to nationalize the industry caught in a bureaucratic nightmare.

That is what most oil specialists expect if and when Congress approves legislation to create the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) the sale of imported oil into the United States.

Concern among oil industry officials about such a possibility grew last week amid new signs that attitudes in Congress toward the oil industry is changing. On Wednesday, the House Ways and Means committee, long considered friendly toward the oil industry, approved a measure today that could enable FEA to buy all or part of the nation's oil imports.

The measure, also pending in the Senate, would allow FEA to buy oil from foreign countries and then resell it to domestic consumers.

The bill would seal off foreign oil suppliers, thereby driving down the bids for foreign supplies, thereby driving down the worldwide price of oil, supporters of the measure maintain.

The Ford administration opposes such federal purchasing, but if the presidential authority to order it were only stand-by and not mandatory, the White House would accept it, administration officials said.

The measure approved by the ways and means committee would provide stand-by authority, Rep. Martha Keys, D-Kan., who wanted mandatory authority, called the provision, "innocuous."

She said the effort to implement it would be to become the exclusive buyer of all imported oil.

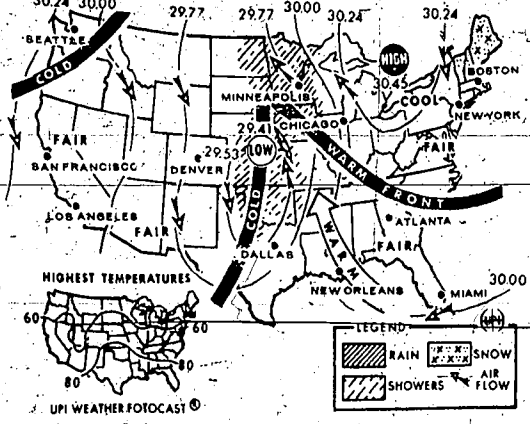

However, James Cross, vice president of the step toward nationalization of the industry, said, "If the government were to exercise economic leverage and impose political conditions on the sale of oil, foreign countries we are dealing with."

'Open door' evokes caution, compassion

WASHINGTON - President Ford's open door policy for South Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees is evoking general sympathy across the country.

But some elected officials react with as much caution as sympathy.

The forecast is mostly cloudy skies with widely scattered showers and a little warmer today. Clouds and chance of rain increases Monday. Highs will be in the 50s both days and lows tonight near 30. Precipitation probability is 30 per cent today, 20 per cent tonight and 50 per cent on Monday.

These officials voiced their mixed reactions in response to a Newhouse News Service poll of sentiment on refugees.

Some, like Mayor Lee Alexander of Syracuse of N.Y., queried the welcoming inscription on the Statue of Liberty: "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses."

Others, like Suffolk County executive John V.M. Klein, pointed to local unemployment rates and soaring public welfare costs, saying, "At the risk of sounding uncharitable and unkind, I am deeply troubled."

Most local officials don't know what to expect because U.S. government officials don't know how many of them will come to live in the United States.

Dean Brown, President Ford's refugee relief director, said Thursday that no one community would be deluged with refugees.

Both California senators, Alan Cranston and John Tunney, demurred, adding that they had received assurances that South Vietnamese refugees resettling in the United States would be distributed among the states roughly in proportion to their population, rather than concentrated in such stopping places as California.

In Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, was extremely cool to the notion of Vietnamese refugees coming to his city.

"My mother said something I suppose I shouldn't say it," said charity headin-at-home. "What about the people that we have in our city that need to be taken care of and need to be taken care of?"

I know that all of us want to be charitable and all of us want to be Christianlike and I suppose it's sacrilegious for me to say something like this, but I don't make any pretense. I'm for the kids in Chicago."

New York City, a spokesman for Mayor Abraham Beame declared: seeking refuge and asylum. And in that tradition, we welcome groups from all over the world - including the Vietnamese refugees. This is the history of New York City. That's what makes it the great city it is."

The spokesman added, however, that the refugee problem was national. "It's not just a local problem. It's a national problem. It's a financial aid to municipalities that must absorb the refugees."

In Missouri, Gov. Christopher Bond said, "people from oppressed lands are always welcome in our state and country."

St. Louis Mayor John H. Puelker said: "I have the greatest sympathy for the Vietnamese who have been forced to flee from their ravaged country. I do not believe that the impact of these refugees on St. Louis will be significant, but it must be pointed out that St. Louis does at this time have a high unemployment rate and an inadequate supply of safe and sanitary housing."

Portland, Ore. Mayor Nell Goldschmidt said his city would have "an obligation" to welcome South Vietnamese refugees, but had no funds in the city budget to provide special social services for them.

The mayor pointed out that a small town 10 miles from Portland, Me. Angel, Ore. already has accepted 118 South Vietnamese refugees, mostly job-trained and educated children, who arrived Wednesday. About 100 local residents wanted in a cool rain outside the town's Octoberfest beer hall to welcome, feed and clothe the refugees, who were escorted by nine South Vietnamese nurses and Father Robert Crawford, operator of a Saigon orphanage.

In Huntsville, Ala., city council president Dr. James Wall said "In recent years Huntsville has had a number of residents from other countries and I would have to say, 'The Southeast Asians' would certainly be treated warmly."

A spokesman for the city of New Orleans said the city "long one of this nation's melting pots where people from many nations have chosen to live when they immigrate to America" will welcome the Indochina refugees if they choose to make

New Orleans their home.

However, he cast a somewhat gloomy outlook over the problem of employment.

"New Orleans has one of the highest number of families at or below the poverty level in the nation," he said. "The unemployment picture here is usually higher than the national average because we are an under-industrialized city."

"But because of the fact that we have historically absorbed so many nationalities, we certainly would try to make the transition as smooth as possible for these unfortunate people."

Birmingham, Ala. Mayor George F. Siebels, Jr. confessed to "mixed emotions" but said "We don't want to turn our backs on anyone. America is a big-hearted country. But bringing in refugees is a big economic undertaking. We did make a commitment years ago to the South Vietnamese and now that everything has fallen to pieces the question is are we going to try to help relieve their destruction and suffering. No one could be against it."

Justice Department has backlog of 4,000 campaign act violations

Following a week of protest that the representative had been denied an unfairly and following a special hearing for reconsideration of his sentence, Hart lifted the prison sentence and gave a $2,000 fine instead.

That meant no one will have been sent to prison for violating the act.

Stevenson would not say what caused the justice department to prosecute Hansen.

He said that when the department receives a complaint from the secretary of the U.S. Senate it sends out a warning that if no proper report is forthcoming prosecution will be undertaken.

In 79 plus per cent of such cases, Stevenson said, the proper report is filed and the case is dropped.

Hansen has maintained all along that he has made every effort to comply with the justice department's requests.

Stevenson would not say whether the justice department received cooperation from the representative. He said he would not discuss specific cases.

Behind the eight candidates who have been convicted of violating the law, Stevenson said the justice department has 40 or 50 more cases of possible violations pending.

The reason for 4,000 "apparent violations" of the act coming before the justice department, he said, is that "when this bill came into effect there were an awful lot of people who did not understand it."

"I would expect the same type of problems" with reporting to arise from future elections," he said.

Figures from the secretary of the U.S. Senate's office show

Hansen relieved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressman George Hansen expressed relief Friday at the federal district court decision that reduced a prison sentence against him in favor of a fine and said he was thankful justice had been done.

"I've always believed in law and order and the necessity of obeying the law," Hansen said in a news release. "I've met this matter head on; I put myself in the hands of the law. I was thoroughly investigated. It took some time for all the facts to be known and now, thankfully, justice is done."

"My continued contention that there have been no intentional violations of the law has been upheld," he said.

"Conkie and I are very grateful to have this unfortunate and difficult matter resolved."

Guerrillas target

MADRID (UPI) — A state of emergency in Spain's Basque provinces Saturday gave police special powers to combat separatist guerrillas.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his ministers decided on the emergency step Friday. It took effect Saturday as authorities pushed their hunt for Basque gunmen blamed for the slaying of four policemen in the last four months.

The special decree gives police unlimited powers to search homes and to arrest and hold suspects for an indefinite period without bringing charges.

The last state of emergency in Spain was declared Dec. 4, 1970 in the Basque province of Guipuzcoa. The new measure again affects Guipuzcoa, and also Vizcaya province.

that for the 1972 election alone there were 1,835 "types of apparent violations" of the election law referred to the justice department. When a candidate apparently made the same violation more than once, it was not counted in the total apparent violations.

Nineteen candidates and three political committees were referred to the justice department for failure to file reports, and 1973 candidates and 369 committees were referred for failing to file on time for the 1972 election year.

The secretary of the Senate also noted that about 5,000 of 8,161 or 61 per cent of the campaign reports received were either incomplete or erroneous in some aspect.

Forms were sent out for correcting the incomplete or erroneous reports. In a sample study of the candidates the secretary of the Senate found that only 59 per cent of those candidates asked to correct the errors or complete the forms responded.

Partisan stances on Hansen penalty

POCAHELLO (UPI) — Political party leaders in Congressman George Hansen's home district took partisan views Friday of U.S. District Judge George Hart's comment in removing a prison sentence that the Idaho Republican is stupid.

James Johnson, Bannock County GOP Central Committee chairman, said his reaction to the change in the prison sentence imposed on Hansen "is one of greater confidence in our judicial system."

"I felt at the time that the sentence that was given to Congressman Hansen was rather harsh and uncalled for, in light of what I felt to be unintentional errors on the part of the committee and Mr. Hansen," he said. "And so, I was quite pleased to see that this change of sentence came about."

Johnson's reaction to the judge's comment on Hansen being stupid was "that I know that George Hansen has a rather high IQ — some where in the 140's — and so I think the choice in language on the part of Judge Hart is rather strange language indeed."

"I am confident that George Hansen is neither an evil man nor a stupid man."

Gary Gould, Bannock County Democratic Central Committee chairman, said he thinks the change in sentencing is all right.

"I think the interesting thing is that Judge Hart indicated that he didn't consider George Hansen an evil man. Just a stupid man. I still feel that we should have a new election and let the people here in the second Congressional District decide if Congressman Hansen is the type of man we want representing us in Washington," Gould said.

Accord changes asked

(N.Y. Times Service)

MANILA — The Philippine government has told the United States it wants to modify long-standing security agreements, especially the one authorizing American bases here.

Information Secretary Francisco Tatad said that "the status quo is no longer tenable in the light of present realities."

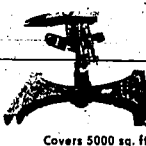

He said President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his foreign policy advisers had discussed a number of alternatives that included outright abrogation of the military agreements.

Tatad said the United States has been notified of the desire for consultations.

Germans jail terrorist band

BONN (UPI) — Four terrorists deported from Sweden after attacking West Germany's Stockholm embassy were taken to separate prisons under heavy guard Saturday to await trial on kidnapping, arson and kidnapping charges.

Police in Sweden and other Scandinavian countries continued their search for other accomplices believed to have been connected with Thursday's attack on the Stockholm embassy which cost the lives of two West German diplomats and one of the anarchists.

A justice ministry official said police were put on high security alert to prevent sympathizers of the four urban guerrillas from attempting a new attack.

"Since we have to count with possible further actions by members of the Bader-Meinhof band, the strictest security measures were put into effect," he said.

The reference was to Andreas Baader and Ulrike Meinhof, jailed as alleged leaders of a West German band of anarchists called the Red Army Faction, responsible for a series of bombings and other violent crimes over the past few years.

Authorities linked the Stockholm attackers to Baader and Meinhof.

The fifth surviving member of the Stockholm attackers remained in a hospital in the Swedish capital in serious condition. A sixth attacker died of gunshot wounds.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who returned from Sweden where he negotiated extradition of the prisoners, called for concerted international action against political terrorists.

Bandits hold up bank, slay 11

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — President Luis Echeverria led top law officers at funeral services Saturday for eight policemen, together with three civilians, were machine gunned to death by a Communist terrorist gang in one of Mexico's bloodiest bank holdups.

With two of the 12-member gang in custody, police pressed what they vowed will be a "tireless search" for the other 10, including four women, who escaped with at least $16,000.

Two other policemen, another civilian and one of the two captured terrorists also were wounded.

Police said their investigation was being extended to the Acapulco area for any possible connection between the bloody Bank of Comercio robbery here with a far bigger holdup in the town of Tecpan de Galeana, near the famous Pacific coast resort.

In a smoothly staged operation there, six heavily armed men held up a branch of the Bank of Mexico Friday, about 90 minutes after the Mexico City holdup and escaped with $57,000. No one was injured there.

Boy survives crash

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Nine-year-old Ricardo "Dickie" Del Real, found naked and delirious in Lake Ponchartraine, told authorities Saturday he managed to stay afloat for two days without a life jacket following the watery crash of his family's plane.

Dickie was found Friday by two fishermen near the north shore of the lake, 18 miles from the site of the crash. The body of his mother, Rosalind, 35, was found three miles away. The body of a young girl believed to be one of Dickie's sisters was found Saturday.

Public jobs pass Senate

© N. Y. Times Service WASHINGTON — The Senate passed a $6.1 billion appropriations bill Friday aimed at either creating or continuing one million public service jobs to stimulate the economy and keep workers off unemployment insurance and welfare.

Approved by a vote of 53-14, the measure goes to a conference with the House, which passed a slightly different version six weeks ago.

The Senate version's main difference is an added $100 million with $87 million of this increase earmarked for 920,000 jobs for needy youths this summer, an increase of 160,000 in such positions over last year's level.

The $1.6 billion would be used to underwrite 310,000 public service jobs between June 30, 1975, and June 30, 1976.

9 nabbed

LONDON (UPI) — Police acting on a tip arrested nine suspects on a Thursday and recovered more than $300,000 in cash stolen in a common-law bank raid on the Mayfair branch of the Bank of America that may have netted holdup men as much as $4.8 million in money and valuables.

The nine — seven men and two women — were picked up in pre-dawn raids on homes in north London.

Beefalo appear in Magic Valley

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — What happens when you cross a buffalo with domesticated beef cattle — you get a beefalo, whose boosters claim is a far superior animal to any cattle breed around.

But it's not simple. A man named D.C. "Bud" Basolo Jr., Tracy, Calif., spent 15 years and made more than 1,000 experimental crosses before he came up with what he feels is the best.

Beefalo are on the way to Magic Valley. Garry Miller, Twin Falls, is a partner in the business of selling frozen buffalo semen for ranchers interested in breeding their cows.

Miller, a young, enthusiastic supporter of beefalo, says several ranchers in the Twin Falls area have already bred their cows to produce beefalo calves and he predicts more than 700 cows in the Magic Valley will be bred with beefalos this year.

The new cross was developed after decades of unsuccessful attempts to mix buffalo and cattle. Often the offspring in the experiments were infertile.

But Basolo solved the infertility problem. He won't say just how, but success came only after extensive testing of many buffalo bulls and their semen.

His beefalo bulls are usually a mix consisting of 75 percent Charolais, 25 percent Hereford, and they can also be 1/4 Shorthorn, 3/4 buffalo, 1/4 Angus and 1/4 Hereford.

To an untrained eye, the calves — those produced from the beefalo semen and a domestic cow — look about like a regular calf. Very little buffalo look comes through with their 75 percent buffalo blood.

But supporters of the new type of animal say many buffalo advantages come through with that much buffalo blood.

Foremost among the advantages is that a beefalo calf can reach a market weight of 1,000 pounds in less than 12 months of grass alone. Basolo has said his calves reach market weight in 8 or 9 months of his grass. If allowed to mature a beefalo calf will weigh 3,000 pounds and higher.

Supplements like oats and hay will boost the rate of gain, according to Basolo.

Miller pointed to the ability of the beefalo to be quickly grass-fattened as significant.

"Grass-fed cattle is the meat of the future because of the expense of grain," he said.

Beefalo supporters claim the new animal will be a boon for consumers, also.

The meat is supposed to be more tender. Some people find the flavor pungent, according to Newsweek; others describe it as rich with a beefy flavor. The meat also has health and nutrition benefits, according to supporters.

A Safeway test of the meat showed beefalo had 4.9 percent fat, while beef normally has about 30-35 percent, Miller said.

The same test showed the beefalo to have about twice the protein, 19-20 percent, that beef does, at 10-12 percent.

Beefalo backers also claim the meat will be less expensive than conventional beef because of the shorter time and less cost needed to ready a beefalo for market. Supporters say when the beefalo meat finally becomes available, it will retail for 25-30 percent less than beef.

Miller said, "The whole idea behind beefalo is inexpensive meat."

Other advantages claimed by beefalo boosters are better resistance to cold, rough weather, with good adaption to range heat. According to Miller, their hair count is 15,000 to 18,000 per-square-inch compared with a Hereford's 5,000 per-square-inch count.

In addition, a farm magazine reported the beefalo hide can be sold for $5 to $100.

Beefalo calves are usually small, dropping at about 65 pounds. This calf size eliminates many of the problems in calving, according to backers. And they live longer, too, according to Miller, who says the cows can reproduce from 20-25 years.

Beefalo cattle have shown some resistance to common cow diseases such as pinkeye and grubs, a farm magazine reported.

A test sale in Stockton, Calif., last May, produced a sellout of 30 beefalo carcasses in a day and a-half, Miller said. People waited as long as hours to line to try the new meat, he said.

But Twin Falls won't be one of the first places to get beefalo meat, it may even be toward the last.

Miller said the beefalo will be marketed in special outlets through the World Beefalo Association. The first outlet, which will sell beefalo as a separate meat and new product, is set to open in San Mateo, Calif., near San Francisco later this year.

The meat won't be sold through supermarket chains, Miller said, because beefalo producers want to cut out the middleman. The chances that a community the size of Twin Falls will get an outlet quickly are slim, Miller said.

But he added, "I'd derive from here to Boise to buy beefalo if it was available."

In the meantime, beefalo are becoming big business. Originator Basolo, who owns nearly all of his 35 purebred beefalo bulls in the world, recently sold one of his prizes to a Canadian company for $2.3 million.

Selling the bull's semen is a successful business venture, too. The semen is extracted electrically twice weekly, and divided into ampules each containing about 60 million sperm cells. Each bull produces semen worth about $10,000 to $15,000 weekly, according to one account.

The semen is kept in a container of liquid nitrogen and frozen to 220 degrees below zero, Miller said. The process of freezing and thawing is very delicate, he added. He sells the ampules for $10 each, and ranging to $50 for a special bull's semen.

Miller predicts that beefalo will invade the cattle field and that by 1980 one-quarter of all cattle will be beefalo.

Others claim there is not that much difference between beefalo and cattle.

Meanwhile, D.C. "Bud" Basolo is planning for his next project: crossing the African cape buffalo with cattle.

JUDY CROCKETT... valedictorian
MARIANNE WHITE... co-leader
JOYCE BARNETTE... shares honor

HANSEN — Judy Crockett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Crockett, Hansen, has been named as the 1975 valedictorian of the Hansen High School graduating class.

Judy has participated for three years in the drill team, and was a junior varsity and varsity cheerleader. She has been her class secretary and treasurer and also the student body secretary and Drama Club vice president.

She has been in the concert band for four years; played varsity volleyball and participated in track for four years. She has been valedictorian and attended Girls State. She attended State Youth Legislature for two years. She is co-editor of the school paper and annual staff member. She belongs to the Ski Club.

Judy plans to attend the Utah State University in Logan, Utah.

Marianne White, daughter of Mrs. Marge White, Hansen, and the late David J. White, Fitchburg, Mass., has been chosen as a valedictorian of the graduating class of the high school.

Marianne has been active in the Pop Club, Ski Club, drill team, paper staff, yearbook staff, youth legislature and has served as class president, student body treasurer, drill team president, teacher's aide, office aide, P. E. aide, served on the student council and was a junior varsity and varsity cheerleader. She was chosen as homecoming queen this year.

Joyce Barnette, daughter of Mrs. Ruth E. Mitchell, Hansen, and William E. Barnette, Powell Butte, Ore., has been chosen co-salutatorian of the graduating class.

Miss Barnette is co-editor of the school paper, annual photographer and senior class secretary. She has been featured in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" for two years and has been a member of the band, choir, the volleyball team and has attended State Youth Legislature.

She plans to enroll at the College of Southern Idaho for a secretarial course.

Scoop gains campaign aid

ELIZABETH WHARTON
United Press International
Sen Henry A. Jackson, D-Wash., lotted up small contributions from enough states to qualify for federal campaign money Saturday. Rep Morris Udall, D-Ariz., launched a primary campaign in Wisconsin, and Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., warned GOP conservatives to quit pushing or suffer defeat, defeat, defeat.

It is 15 months or more until presidential candidates are named at the national party conventions next summer, yet presidential politics are boiling from East Coast to West Coast, and points in between.

President Ford insists whenever the subject comes up that he is planning to seek nomination for his own term in the White House, but won't announce formally for a while yet.

Already there are five contenders for the Democratic nomination to oppose him: Jackson, Udall, Alabama Gov. George Wallace, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, and former senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

Wallace already has qualified for the federal matching funds, and Jackson triumphantly announced in his home state Saturday that he has raised $1.8 million, including $265,276 this year in donations of $250 or less from the required 20 states.

The new financing law requires a candidate to raise $5,000 in at least 20 states in donations of $50 or less. The federal government will match these contributions to a maximum of $5 million.

Wallace's announced goal is $6.5 million; Jackson's, $7 million.

Udall, who has not yet qualified for matching funds but is working on it, set up an 81-member campaign committee to direct his effort in the Wisconsin presidential primary, and scheduled a statewide swing by plane Sunday with stops in Milwaukee, Green Bay, Stevens Point, and Madison.

Udall said the key to the 1976 primaries under the new campaign laws is strong district-level organization. He has been busy for the past several weeks building a similar organization in New Hampshire, where the first primary will be held next March.

In New York, meanwhile, moderate

Vote boosts Socialists

LISBON (UPI) — The Socialists emerged as Portugal's biggest party Saturday in returns from national elections and hinted they might consider an alliance with the Communists, who ran a distant third.

With votes from Friday's balloting counted in about 90 per cent of the country, the Socialists held 30 per cent of the vote, the Liberal Popular Democrats 25 per cent and the Communists not quite 13 per cent.

The ruling Armed Forces Movement said the results gave new impetus to its determination to turn Portugal into a leftwing socialist state.

Information Minister Jorge Jesuso rejected suggestions at a news conference that the turnout for the Socialists and Popular Democrats was a vote for moderation. He said these parties, along with others, signed a statement beforehand pledging to support the military's efforts to build socialism.

He also said there would be no change in the composition of the government to reflect the voting strength of the parties.

Socialist leader Mario Soares, haggard from only two hours sleep, said, "We are a majority with the Communists and even a bigger majority with the Popular Democrats now."

The Communists have invited the Socialists several times to talk about cooperation, but the talks never got anywhere.

"The talks broke down before because they (the Communists) treated us like junior partners," an Socialist official said. "Now maybe we will talk with them from a greater height."

In a television appearance with other Socialist leaders, Soares said, "We are not anti-Communists. We defended them in certain circumstances. We consider the Communists essential to democracy in this country."

"It is an unprecedented gesture of hospitality," he said.

The 30 U.S. and 10 Canadian Clergymen, all deans of cathedrals, will celebrate the mass Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Church of San Stefano degli Abissini, Cave said.

The clergymen, holding their annual Informal Conference of North American Cathedral Deans, were given a warm ecclesiastical welcome by the Pope Wednesday at his general audience.

Occupation ends

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Both sides expressed satisfaction Saturday with a compromise on Brown University's ethnic and budget policies that ended a two-day occupation of the school's main administration building by minority students.

Students took time to clean up historic University Hall and shut off the lights on their way out in silence late Friday night, having staged the first seizure of a building since the Ivy League school opened in 1764.

Republican Javits warned a stiff GOP conference that if the party permits itself "to be reduced to an appendage of extreme conservatism—even reaction—our chances for survival, revival and victory will have been almost irretrievably lost."

He said the President is being subjected to an "unprecedented challenge from the right wing of his own party," and concluded:

"There is every reason for us to presume that if we permit a Neanderthal wing in our party to dominate its processes, we can count on only one outcome—defeat, defeat, defeat."

Mass set today

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — In an unprecedented ecumenical gesture, Pope Paul VI has invited 40 U.S. Episcopal and Canadian Anglican clergymen to celebrate a Protestant mass in the Vatican, a spokesman for the group said Saturday.

The Rev. Jeffrey Cave, canon of Washington Cathedral, said he believed it will be the first time the Anglican Episcopal mass is said in a Vatican church.

"It is an unprecedented gesture of hospitality," he said.

The 30 U.S. and 10 Canadian Clergymen, all deans of cathedrals, will celebrate the mass Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Church of San Stefano degli Abissini, Cave said.

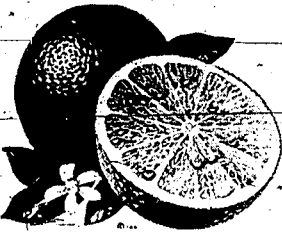

The clergymen, holding their annual Informal Conference of North American Cathedral Deans, were given a warm ecclesiastical welcome by the Pope Wednesday at his general audience.

Pontiff blesses throning

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — More than 150,000 Roman Catholic pilgrims from around the world filled St. Peter's Square for overflowing Friday for Pope Paul VI's first outdoor Holy Year audience.

Tanned and smiling, the 75-year-old pontiff stood standing up in a bright blue Japanese Toyota Jeep into the sun-drenched square where the crowd had been collecting since early morning.

The Pope chose Italy's World War II Liberation Day holiday to begin a series of weekly open-air audiences for Holy Year visitors. The Vatican estimated that a million visitors have come in the first three months of the jubilee year.

Seated on a throne placed on a low platform before the massive baroque basilica, the Pope said he would remember Friday's anniversary of the World War II uprising against Fascism in his own country when he prayed for peace throughout the world.

"We are not ignorant of this historic moment that engrosses and exalts the Italian nation," he said. "We will have it present in our prayers, invoking peace, justice, pardon, renewal for everyone."

But he devoted most of his discourse to Holy Year as a time for pilgrims to search their souls and rediscover their true selves.

"We begin with the words: the jubilee of the Holy Year must be above all a reawakening. A new search for one's self under the beacon of this Roman light."

With the broad stairway to St. Peter's Basilica at his back, the Pope said the pilgrimage too "is like the ascent of a stairway, of a holy stairway. At the first step is yourself; take consciousness of yourself; of your being, of your life."

Winners selected

FIRST place winners in the 15th annual Northwest Judo event in Spokane over the past weekend were Tracy Buettler, left, and Bill Benkula. Buettler won in the 150-pound white belt division and Benkula in the lightweight division. He is a brown belt.

2 Twin Falls youths win judo trophies

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls youths have returned from the 15th annual Northwest Judo Tournament in Spokane with first place trophies.

Bill Benkula, 139 pound lightweight-brown belt and Tracy Buettler, 150 pound white belt, each received a first place award in their divisions.

Mable Tan placed second in the lightweight women's class and Carla Kay was a second place winner in the women's middle-class event. All are from Twin Falls.

Bill Benkula and Wiley Dobbs will represent the Twin Falls High School in Dallas, Tex., May 9 and 10 for the National High School Tournament.

Other recent winnings by Twin Falls Judo performers include first place for Buettler and Greg Dobbs in the April 11 event at Hill Air Force Base, Utah, and second place for Bill Benkula at the same event.

All three qualified for the semi-finals in the National AAU Junior Olympic Tournament which will be June 14 in Layton, Utah.

Winner of this event will go to New York for the finals.

Meadow leased twice by agency

BOISE (UPI) — A meadow area at the Old Idaho Penitentiary that the Land Board has agreed to let Girl Scouts use for a bi-centennial campment is the same area they leased to Boise Mormons to build a baseball diamond.

Representatives of the Silver Sage Girl Scout Council discovered that the stakes already were in the ground laying out the playing field when they toured the meadow earlier this week checking its suitability for the 176 campment. The camp is expected to draw 1,500 girls from eastern Oregon and Idaho.

The governor and other members of the Land Board signed a $25 per year lease March 21 giving use of the land to the Boise Stake Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The lease runs five years.

Boise television station KBOL has learned that the church plans to put more than $100,000 in lights at the field, level the land and provide all necessary improvements.

Meanwhile, the State Historical Society is paying out more than $50,000 in federal funds for a consulting firm to come up with an acceptable master plan for the entire grounds around the old prison. That work started this week and will not be finished until later in the summer, after the baseball diamond already is in use.

Church officials have said the public will be allowed to use the field when it is free but indicated that might be only Monday nights. They said it was too soon to know the field schedule.

The scouts will be able to use land at the old prison site but council representatives noted the land they would use would not be quite the same as the meadow they had in mind when they sent their request to the Land Board.

Stolen auto storage charges pile up for months

ATLANTA (UPI) — Anne Hirsch was elated when police called her with the news that her car, stolen from outside her home in January, had been found. Then she got the bill for $225 for the storage costs on the car.

"No way I'm going to pay that fee," said Mrs. Hirsch. DeKalb Police Sgt. R.E. Davis, head of the auto theft division, said the car was found in January, but the wrong owner had been notified.

"It's just a matter of people and computers," said Davis. "If you don't punch that number on the crime information computer exactly right, you won't get the correct listing, and mistakes happen because often a 's' looks like a '5' or something."

The car had been impounded at Nicholson's Wrecking Service, where it had piled up three months worth of storage costs.

Davis said he has talked the wrecker service into the cutting the storage fee to $12.50 and the owner of the service says she can probably get it "for a lot less if she comes down here and talks real sweet."

Richfield burglary probed

RICHFIELD — Lincoln County law enforcement officials are investigating a burglary at the Pheasant Club, Richfield, where an undetermined amount of bottled wine was taken from shelves. The break-in and theft were discovered Thursday night by owner Alvin Gorrell, Gooding, when he came to open the business. Gorrell said the lock to a door was broken.

Wreck hurts 3 near Barley

BURLEY — Three persons were injured in a two-car accident on the slickened Burley Heyburn bridge early Saturday morning. Treated and released from Cassia Memorial Hospital were Halle Young, 24, and Dennis Zemke, 24, both Heyburn; and Shane Thuesen, 21, Burley. Burley patrolman Paul Farley said Young was driving south across the bridge. She lost control on the icy pavement, her car spun around and came to a stop across the right-hand lane. Zemke, driving another car in which Thuesen was a passenger hit Young's car "head-on," Farley said. All three were taken by ambulance to Cassia Memorial Hospital. They were treated for cuts from broken glass and released, according to Farley.

GF accident causes suit

BOISE (UPI) — A woman injured in a traffic accident near Glens Ferry in 1973 has filed suit in Fourth District Court in Boise to recover $350,000 damages. Thelma C. Altherton has charged William Huntington Hayes with negligence, carelessness and recklessness resulting from a two-car collision on U.S. Highway 30 on May 11, 1973. The suit seeks to recover $25,000 for general damages, $35,000 for past and future medical expenses and $900 per month to compensate wages while the plaintiff is unable to work.

On Tuesday residents of Hailey and Bellevue will meet with the school board at 8 p.m. in the Wood River Junior High School. Ketchum residents will meet with the school board at 8 p.m. in the Wood River Junior High School. Representatives of the school board will attend each of the three public hearings along with elementary school principals and teachers.

Fairfield teachers cleared of charges

TWIN FALLS — The two Camas County School District teachers charged with allegations, including teaching atheism, were cleared by the Camas County School Board Thursday night. The board and a five-member citizen committee met to discuss issues raised at a meeting last Thursday when the committee charged that Warren and Fran Wallace had preached atheism, read student journals aloud without students' permission, used the school newspaper to run down the Snake River community and being a California influence. School board chairman LeRoy Packham told The Enterprise of Gooding that "everything is under control now." The Wallaces are in their first year of teaching at Fairfield. Mrs. Wallace teaches junior, senior and eighth grade English, journalism and is adviser for the Snake River newspaper. Wallace is elementary school principal and teaches eighth grade. In a prepared statement, Mrs. Wallace said she was not an atheist. She said none of the parents making the allegations had spoken to her about them and that the problems were the result of gossip. One of the committee members told the Gooding paper that there had been "extreme overreaction."

Workshop demonstration

FRESH water organisms and the effects of pollution on them are demonstrated to a group of teachers by Fran Golding, biology teacher at the College of Southern Idaho and Gary Muckle, soil scientist of the Soil Conservation Service at Saturday's environmental workshop at Camp Roach.

Plant life inspected

SPECIMENS of plant life are shown by members of the environmental education team at Saturday's workshop at Camp Roach. Environs studied at Camp Roach

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Getting the student involved is a basic requisite in the process of all learning, according to Dennis Carter, teacher at Morningside school. With involvement, the student will use his observation senses of hearing, seeing, tasting, smelling and feeling, and will then proceed to the processes of identifying the classifying objects and ideas, measuring, inferring, predicting and communicating, he said.

The process approach in observing the environment was demonstrated by an environmental education team to a group of teachers from Magic Valley schools Saturday at a workshop held at Camp Roach, Boy Scout camp near Hagerman.

The involvement approach can be applied in any area of study or learning, not just environmental, said Carter. Students can be led to explain what they know and are already familiar with, after which their interests will be whetted to investigate the unknown, to inventing their own systems of classifying, to proceeding to a higher level of thinking and prediction, and to gaining confidence to communicate clearly and precisely.

Saturday's environmental workshop sessions were conducted by Stuart Murrell, Idaho Fish and Game Department; Fran Golding, biology teacher at the College of Southern Idaho; Gary Muckle, soil scientist of the Soil Conservation Service; Arthur Selin, U.S. Forest Service; Bill Harris, State Soil Conservation Commission, and Dave Wilson, superintendent of the waste water treatment plant at Rupert. The sessions were divided into four classes which included the study of aquatic insects, plant life, wildlife and soil, and the effects of pollution on them.

Samples of water from a lake near the camp were gathered and the class was shown how water containing sulphuric acid, potato wastes and other pollutants can destroy insects, many of which are essential to our environment.

Carter conducted a session on plants and workshop participants were given samples from a number of trees and told to make up their own keys to identifying them. The group collected core samples from trees, discussed the approximate age of the trees from the dark rings in the cross section of logs and listed factors in the environment surrounding the trees which might have affected them.

Plants were also examined for evidences of grazing, feeding, diseases and the like, and their good or bad influences on plant life. At the pond the group gathered a number of sub-surface fresh water organisms which abound in the water such as shrimp, leeches, cyclops, planaria and others.

This type of environmental teaching could very easily be utilized right in the school yards, Carter said, as students could be taken outdoors to observe the trees and plants, classify them, study the insects and soil situations. Careful planning by the teachers could result in many phases of conservation and protecting what we have in our environment, he added.

During the evaluation session each teacher was given several natural drawing materials such as charcoal, flower petals, leaves and soil, and told to make a simple drawing. Murrell demonstrated how a drawing of a flower could be painted pink by rubbing rose petals on it, also using bits of green leaves for green coloring. The class was given five minutes to write a simple poem about the scene.

The workshop concluded with a simulation game where the teacher was given background information and maps on the Big Wood Valley near Ketchum, and then told to make decisions such as public officials might meet in land-use planning.

The group formed committees to represent land uses and developed imaginary plans to present to the county commissioners. A panel of commissioners was elected and plans were presented to them, after which the commissioners made their decisions. The use of conservation groups in land-use decisions was discussed.

Reorganization costs Gem State

SHOSHONE — Reorganization of state agencies has resulted in 852 more employees on the state payroll. James Yost, R., Wendell, from Legislative District No. 23, in speaking to North Side Reorganization, Inc. members Thursday evening in Shoshone, said the reorganization cost the state $3.5 million to provide the same programs that existed before.

He said "What we need is less government, not reorganization of government."

He also spoke against participation in many federally funded or matching funds projects, stating "they cost us more than they are worth" and a burden to taxpayers. There is a limit to what we can afford and from which we benefit."

At this time 25 per cent of the people in Idaho are state supported, either by wages or on welfare.

State funded kindergartens came under fire from Yost, who said the smaller school districts will be paying for the program in larger districts. As an example, for what it would cost in Wendell to support their own kindergarten at $15,000 will now cost $23,000. He also pointed out other school programs may have to hold the line as the kindergarten funding is $3.5 million or "whatever it takes."

"No-fault insurance is not all it is cracked up to be," Yost said, and he said people who have a good medical coverage of their insurance policy have better protection than would come under no-fault. He said he does expect a revised form of no-fault to pass next year.

Yost also discussed land-use planning; benefits for senior citizens; HB 33 pertaining to sales tax levies by cities; HB 11, pertaining to the governor being allowed to appoint district judges, the latter of which he expected will be revised.

Spring cleanup set by Wendell council

WENDELL — The Wendell City Council Thursday night set Monday as the date to start general city cleanup. City crews, chamber of commerce members and students from James Benham's high school agriculture class will participate. A special effort will be made to remove junked and unlicensed cars from city streets, according to Gwen Collett, city clerk.

Sen. James Yost was sworn in to fill a park board vacancy created by the resignation of Phyllis Bunn.

The council also heard from Frank Coleman, who asked for a change in his irrigation water delivery. The council will inspect the matter.

Clifford Kirk, asked for removal of construction debris on the street at Fifth Ave. West.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Williamson requested signs on Fifth Avenue West to slow traffic for children who play in the street.

Filer aides favor mayor

FILEN — Members of the Filer City Council have issued a joint statement in support of Mayor Paul Shover who faces a recall election Tuesday.

The council members, Gilbert Chandler, Charles T. Crawford Jr. and Jake Pierce joined in issuing the statement Saturday to clarify their views and feelings in the recall issue.

"The council members are fully aware of the so-called 'conflict of interest' being charged by the people initiating the action (recall) against Mayor Shover. The council pursued the course taken whereby Mayor Shover acted as building inspector because we were unable to retain the services of anyone in the Filer area qualified and willing to accept the position," the councilmen said.

Those circulating recall petitions against the mayor have charged a conflict of interest because Shover serves as mayor and works for the city as building inspector. They have also charged he has failed to enforce ordinances.

The joint statement of the council members said the services of the mayor on building inspections was with the full knowledge of the city attorney who advised there was no other alternative until someone was located to fill the building inspector post.

"To the charge of failure to enforce ordinances — that is the responsibility of every citizen in the community regardless of position," the statement said. "Mayor Shover was very active in enforcement of ordinances whenever problems became apparent and in no way hesitated to pursue any violations and see them corrected."

"The organizers of the recall movement, we feel, did not do so with valid charges or issues, but on a personal grievance between themselves and Mayor Shover. A recall election, in our opinion, was not put in the state code to solve personal disputes and should not be used in this manner," councilmen said.

"We as a council are firmly behind Mayor Shover and believe he should be mayor of Filer. We urge the citizens of Filer to vote 'no' and retain Mayor Shover," the statement concluded.

Traffic control signal planned for canyon

TWIN FALLS — Mayor Winston Jones' Twin Falls will accept a $4,000 check Monday from J.D. McColium, district manager of the J.R. Simplot Co.

The money is provided by Dow Chemical Co. as part of an agricultural marketing promotion program and will be used to purchase and install a one-way traffic control signal on a portion of the road leading into Snake River Canyon on the southside of the river.

Presentation will be made during a noon work meeting of the Twin Falls City Council.

"McColium said the road will provide access to the canyon between Rock Creek and Pillar Falls.

City Manager Jean Millar said the money will combine with city funds for the traffic signal. The road also serves the Twin Falls City sewage treatment plant and pump station for the city's water supply.

A housing development by McColium and a golf course are also reached by the south side canyon road. One section is wide enough for only one-way traffic and additional use of the roadway will require the one-way control light for safety.

Jerome panel delays townhouse decision two weeks

JEROME — A recommendation on a proposed townhouse ordinance has been delayed for two weeks pending further investigation by the Jerome City Zoning Commission.

A public hearing on the ordinance was held Friday night by the zoning commission in an effort to obtain citizen input on the ordinance and on two proposed townhouse complexes.

The hearing was continued until 7 p.m. May 9 at which time it is anticipated the commission will formulate its recommendation on the ordinance for presentation to the City Council.

A request from Barney Kleinkopf, zoning commission chairman, to have a closed-meeting in order for zoning board members to vote secretly on the ordinance was objected to by city attorney Bill Hart and the news media.

Kleinkopf, in making the request for the closed session, said members of the board are in business in the town and it would be better for them if the citizens did not know how they voted.

Rowland said the idea is similar to condominiums except that a townhouse dweller owns his own unit, the land which it is situated and a minimum of 400 square feet of lawn space. Rowland said a home owners association is organized by people who live in the development.

"Each member pays dues to the association. This is set aside to hire a professional landscaper who takes care of all yard work, maintenance of the outside of the building and all repairs. When one unit needs to be reroofed, the entire complex is reroofed. All units would also be painted at the same time," he said.

The townhouses will be constructed in clusters of four and six with separate units sharing common walls and yard space. Because of the present city ordinance requiring five feet from the walls of a home to the property line, the special townhouse ordinance was proposed.

Lynni Bingham, city building inspector, fire chief and zoning board member, said the area where Rowland wants to build is presently zoned for multi-family dwellings and Rowland could, if he wanted to, build an apartment complex in the area with no trouble.

Bingham said an apartment complex would have a lot more people crowded into one building than the proposed 36 units of the townhouse.

Rowland said after the meeting, "If I had known it was going to be so much trouble, I guess I would have gone ahead and built a large apartment house."

complex would provide more housing for people per acre than single family units. Being a farmer, I am all for doing whatever we can to protect our prime agriculture land and if this means stacking people in townhouses I personally am for it," Kleinkopf said.

The zoning commission has recommended a minimum of 50 per cent of the land area of every townhouse development be comprised of open space on a 10 per cent retained for recreational use. The height of all buildings is to be no more than 25 feet and a minimum of 100,000 square feet be required for a townhouse development.

Following discussion, a compromise was reached between the zoning board and the contractor on the minimum distance required between buildings.

The zoning board had recommended 25 feet but reduced this to 15 feet.

A townhouse project planned for 10th Avenue and Buchanan on five acres of land by Neal Brutsche, Twin Falls, was discussed without protests in the hearing.

It was pointed out the zoning commission only has the authority to make recommendations on the rezoning of the townhouse complexes and on the adoption of the townhouse ordinance. The final decision is up to the City Council.

Securities regulations changes looming

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives approved legislation Thursday providing for a comprehensive revision of securities industry regulations and laying the foundation for a national market system.

The vote was 376 to 13.

At the same time, its Banking and Currency Committee announced a major review of the nation's financial institutions and their regulation by the federal government. The study begins with the premise that the financial system and institutions composing it are "a chaotic and jerry-built" and that federal banking regulations are "a patchwork structure."

The House action on the securities measure sent it to conference with the Senate for compromise with the version passed earlier by that body. No major obstacles to an early agreement were foreseen and supporters of the bill expect it to reach the President's desk by the May 11 deadline for ending fixed brokerage commission rates on public stock orders.

House passage of the measure culminates four and a half years of studies and hearings by House and Senate committees and the SEC One of its major provisions mandates the initiation of competitive negotiated rates by May 1 while reserving to the SEC the right to continue or re-establish fixed rates if certain specified conditions are met.

The measure significantly expands SEC authority over stock exchanges, including authority to impose or veto new rules and alter or abolish old ones. It would also empower the SEC for the first time to require stock exchanges to enforce their own rules such as net capital, which were sometimes ignored during the back-room "paper crunch" of 1968-70.

The SEC also is given broad authority over bank transfer agents but inspection and enforcement functions over such entities are left to federal banking authorities.

Institutions such as banks and insurance companies would be prevented under the bill from transacting, through brokerage affiliates, trades for accounts they manage. To be eligible for stock exchange membership a broker-dealer would have to be licensed with the public.

This is a major difference with the Senate bill, which ties the abolition of fixed commission rates to institutional membership and provides that the performance of investment management and brokerage services for the same institutional account would be permitted while fixed commission rates remain in effect.

Neither bill attempts to blueprint the new national market system. Both provide for a national market system advisory board to implement a system linking all exchanges and the over-the-counter market by means of a composite tape reporting price.

A consolidated quotation system would enable investors to buy and sell securities at the best available prices, regardless of whether the trade took place on or off an exchange.

Both bills require the exchanges to scrap any rules that restrict off-board trading by exchange members.

The Big Board recently submitted a proposed modification of its rule regarding this — Rule 39 — to the SEC. It would eliminate the current requirement that a member obtain permission of a floor governor before soliciting a third market maker, reducing the circumstances under which bids and offers on the floor could displace a nonmember's bid or offer.

L. James Koutnik presents Richard G. Messersmith with reactor of year award

Award to Messersmith

TWIN FALLS — Richard G. Messersmith was presented the Reactor of the Year award at the awards dinner of the Twin Falls Board of Realtors and Multiple Listing Service Tuesday.

Messersmith is broker-owner of Gem State Realty, and received the award for his achievements in civic affairs, business, activity in the local board, activity in the state association and the National Association of Realtors. He will compete on the state level for State Reactor of the Year.

L. James Koutnik was master of ceremonies. Speakers were William Brooks, executive vice president of the Idaho Association of Realtors and Jerry Miller, education director of the Idaho Real Estate Education Council.

Special recognition also went to W.A. Orlander and John E. Bishop for their continued support and membership in the Twin Falls board since 1947.

Each past president was honored with a past president's plaque and Carletta Cox received a special award for her outstanding committee work during the past year.

The next meeting of the Twin Falls Board of Realtors will be May 6 at the Holiday Inn.

Idaho spuds dip; meats, grains post sharp gains

COURTESY SINCLAIR & CO. — Idaho potato futures were down Friday while Maine futures closed mixed but mostly higher.

In other futures trading, meats were sharply higher and grains were generally stronger, although sugar continued in the doldrums.

The May delivery of Idaho russets closed 50 cents lower at 6.80 per hundredweight.

Commodity News Service said Maine futures closed mixed but mostly higher with 9 point gain in the near term.

New-crop spuds would up with final quotes from 4 point; declines to 5 point advances.

Volume was placed at 1,457, reflecting covering in May and switching in back options.

Live hog futures hit the highest level in eight months, bolstered by a confident tone in cash markets. Retailers continued strong buying of the pipeline in flowing smoothly. June hit 46.45 before edging down and finishing 17 point gain in the near term.

and June trailed with 30 cents higher.

Bellies closed limit up in all but May 1976 after posting new seasonal highs in all old crop contracts. Stronger cash markets and higher storage input were major factors in boosting the market.

Wheat futures closed higher despite commercial selling, posting gains of 2 to 4 1/2 cents. Seasonal considerations and the stocks report were major factors. Brazil bought a million bushels and Jordan was rumored to have made a like purchase. Cash basis at Chicago was nominally unchanged; Gulf basis was 28 cents over Kansas City July.

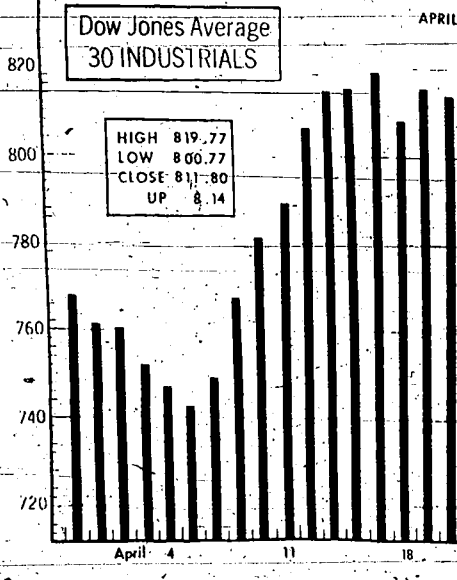

Corn futures posted a strong performance on the basis of the stocks report. March export figures of 124.5 million bushels and added moisture emphasis.

At the close, futures were 2 to 8 cents higher with the larger gains in current crop months. Chicago cash basis was unchanged.

After an erratic session, the soybean complex wound up mixed, with beans from fractions to 4 cents higher, meal unchanged to 2 3/4 higher and oil 20 points higher to 30 points lower. Chicago cash basis for beans was 2 cents lower at 5 over May while Gulf basis was a cent higher at 20 over May. Beans drew some

Operating smelters fail EPA standards

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — A Bunker Hill Co. vice president said today there are no smelters in operation now that are meeting sulfur dioxide emission standards proposed by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Gene Baker, vice president for environmental affairs, said his conclusion is based on studying a list of smelters the EPA contends are meeting the same emission standards proposed for Bunker Hill.

The EPA is in the process of formulating a set of regulations concerning SO2 emissions at Bunker Hill's lead and zinc smelter here.

The EPA has proposed that Bunker Hill control 85 per cent of its SO2 emissions by July. That means holding sulfur dioxide emissions at or below 2,000 parts per million.

But Bunker Hill, which now controls about 72 per cent of such emissions, contends the 85 per cent goal cannot be physically met this year.

In support of its proposal, the EPA had earlier this year said smelters throughout the world were meeting the same standards proposed for Bunker Hill.

But Baker said the EPA had failed to substantiate its own claim.

"Our study of the EPA list indicates there is no smelter meeting the EPA proposed standards," Baker said.

For example, "this list contains the name of a Yugoslavian lead smelter which has an acid plant, but it is not in operation."

Baker said despite the fact the plant has never operated, the EPA used it as an example of a sulfuric acid plant consistently being controlled to the level proposed for Bunker Hill.

Baker's comments regarding the EPA list of smelters as well as other testimony was included in a report submitted by Bunker Hill to the federal agency in response to proposed regulations.

New rate approved

BOISE (UPI) — The IPUC today approved new rates requested by the Intermountain Tariff Bureau for the shipment of rubber and plastic materials from Jerome to Boise that reflect reductions as high as 75.2 per cent.

The tariff schedule approved by the commission today will affect rates charged by Browning Freight Lines, presently the primary carrier for Tupperware products from Jerome to Boise, would drop from $151.50 to $85 — a reduction of 78.2 per cent.

The cost of shipping 10-pound-load would drop 23.3 per cent while the reduction in shipping costs for a 20,000-pound-load is five per cent.

The tariff schedule approved by the commission today will affect rates charged by Browning Freight Lines, presently the primary carrier for Tupperware products from Jerome to Boise, would drop from $151.50 to $85 — a reduction of 78.2 per cent.

Order clarified

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has issued a clarification of its earlier order authorizing Utah Power & Light Co. to increase rates by 10 per cent on a temporary basis.

The commission said the findings in its earlier order did not correctly set forth the intent of the commission.

Commissioners said their findings should have read that it is in the public interest to authorize the applicant to place into effect an interim rate increase amounting to 10 per cent, subject to refund pending final determination by the commission.

They also said that the interim rate should be allocated equally to all individual rate blocks except that credit shall be given to Monsanto Company and the Atomic Energy Commission (now the Energy Research and Development Administration) for that portion of the 10 per cent increase that has been recovered since the last general rate case through fuel costs adjustment clauses, and should apply to all energy consumed on or after May 1, 1975.

Earnings increase

PORTLAND, Ore. — Equitable Savings reported first quarter earnings including subsidiaries of $710,306, or 21 cents per share according to William F. Love, chairman of the board.

This compares with earnings of $745,611 or 41 cents per share for the first quarter of 1974.

Love said, "Equitable's first quarter operating earnings, excluding subsidiaries, were $621,496 on gross income of $114.0 million, compared with operating earnings of $659,046 on gross income of $117 million for the first quarter in 1974."

Net savings gains of $30 million were recorded in the first quarter, a 30 per cent increase, over the first quarter of 1974. With loan demand at a low level, savings inflows were used to reduce higher cost bank borrowings. First quarter mortgage loan acquisitions totaled $28.2 million compared with $29.0 million for the same period in 1974.

Area pioneer recalls early days

BY IRENE LINK
Times-News writer

HANSEN — Clara Brose, of 92 years of age, is happy, witty and in possession of an excellent memory especially of Diamondfield Jack and the early days at Rock Creek.

Rock Creek was a major way station for the Pony Express at one time and the Stricker cabins, which were the stopping point, are still standing as a landmark.

The Brose homestead is only a few miles away and the Oregon Trail ran just several hundred feet from the front door. Miss Brose recalls that historic trail—it was heavily traveled by the many who were headed West to seek their fortunes.

Miss Brose's father, Robert, came to Rock Creek in 1886 with a brother, and together they homesteaded 160 acres. For the first few years they subsisted on money earned by building and repairing fences for the Sparks-Harrell cattle ranches in Idaho and Nevada.

Soon they felled trees in the South Hills, squared the logs and built a log cabin. The original cabin still stands today, but has been enlarged and covered with siding.

The Twin Falls Canal Co. didn't begin to deliver water until 1905. Before the 160 acres could be farmed, Brose and his brother had to hand-dig a two-and-a-half-mile-long ditch. The ditch ran from the Ryeck Creek in the South Hills to the homestead site below. This provided them with irrigation water.

The first crops consisted of oats and hay for the horses and wheat for flour. Occasional trips were made to Oakley to have the wheat ground into flour. That griststone and mill are preserved as a monument now.

Miss Brose recalls the treks to Oakley and Shoshone with her father for supplies. By horse and wagon, three to five days had to be allotted. They camped out by the side of the road en route, and to her, it was a holiday. Because of the mode of travel and the length of time required for each trip they were kept to a minimum.

The Stricker Store had been opened in 1870. It consisted of the Pony Express station, a Chinese laundry, a big livery stable and bunk houses. Besides the Stricker place, there were scattered homesteads here and there.

"The first crops consisted of oats and hay for the horses and wheat for flour."

But when Clara and her mother and brother left Detroit in 1891 to join Brose in Idaho, the neighbors were literally few and far between. The immigrants who camped in the yard of the Brose cabin were greeted warmly.

Not so warmly welcomed were the Indians who still roamed the countryside in those early days. Clara vividly recalls her first encounter with them. She, her mother and her brother had been out in the yard. When they returned to the house, they found two Indians crouching behind the cookstove. The three of them were "scared silly" as Miss Brose puts it. To make matters worse, Brose was gone for the day.

Clara's mother, remembering what her husband had told her to do should this ever happen, gathered her wits about her and brought out a huge loaf of bread and a large roll of pork and set it on the table for them. This satisfied the Indians and after feasting they went on their way.

Another time, Clara's father was in the Coal Pit area of the South Hills getting logs. Much to his dismay he found a band of war-painted and feathered Indians on horseback coming his way. Fortunately they just looked him over and then rode off.

Brose and the men of the area wasted no time in building the Rock Creek School and in 1892 all the young children of the area were in class. Clara Brose was not only a student there but later was the teacher.

"Much to his dismay he found a band of war-painted and feathered Indians on horseback coming his way."

Sixteen years after coming to Idaho, Clara and her family moved into the large, new 13-room house. Built from cement blocks made by Brose, the house took two years to complete and was without a doubt, one of the finest homes in southern Idaho.

There are few people who can say that they knew the legendary Diamondfield Jack, but Clara Brose can. As any student of early Idaho history knows, Diamondfield Jack, was jailed after being accused of killing two sheepherders on Deadline Ridge in the South Hills during a cattlemen-sheepmen dispute over grazing rights. He was later acquitted.

While Clara attended high school in Albion she boarded one year with the deputy sheriff's family. The deputy was in charge of taking meals to prisoners in the local jail. When the deputy was unable to deliver the meals, Clara was asked to perform this task.

Diamondfield Jack was a prisoner in the Albion jail at that time and he and Clara encountered one another over jail-house food. As a result, she is the proud possessor of a rare photograph of this famous (or infamous) man that he personally gave her.

Clara recalls Diamondfield Jack as a self-made man but a well-educated one. He passed the long days in the jail by reading classics and by making bridges and spurs. Her long conversations with him through the cell bars gave her some first-hand insight into the major figure in Idaho history.

Miss Brose has spent 28 years of her life teaching school. Some of those years were spent in the Rock Creek school house.

She is also an accomplished artist with many of her own oil paintings adorning the walls of her unique house. Her early training at the University of Chicago Art School gave her the fundamentals for oil painting, and later, for china painting. In 1914-16 she painted a complete dinner service for 12, including numerous serving pieces. These are now beautifully displayed in her antique china closet.

Clara Brose is one of the last of the early Rock Creek settlers. After spending 84 of her 92 years there, she concludes that there is no other place that she would rather be.

Pass the bread, Monsieur le President

PARIS — (NEA) — The latest game with Parisian hostesses these days is, "Guess who's coming to dinner? Giscard!" Then, the discussions start.

When the French president declared that every month he would share a dinner with a French family, most people thought this was just a gag. But it happened that he meant it and the Cucheantier family was the first to play host to the French president and his wife.

The secret was well kept, no journalists or photographers anywhere near. It was only the next day that the Cucheantier's were interviewed, photographed and seen on TV.

The next time, said Giscard d'Estaing, he would select a family outside of Paris. Now housewives in the nearby provinces (counties are wondering whether they will be the next to be so honored.

Helpful hints have been offered by all. First, the French are warned, you must make sure the president is really coming to avoid being the victim of a hoax. This happened to a Limoges truck driver, his wife and 11 children. A telephone call informed them of an intended visit by the president in three weeks. From then on a frenzied agitation reigned in the family. The wife bought dozens of frogs' legs (this was supposedly one of D'Estaing's favorite dishes).

The evening came but no president showed up. Frogs' legs were on the family table for days after that. Madame d'Estaing sent them a large hamper of goodies to make up for their disappointment and sons of the expense.

When the president said he intended to get nearer, the people to learn what they were thinking he insisted he was a moderate eater and one of his favorite dishes was scrambled eggs.

The Cucheantier's invitation was one of 1,700. The family chosen next will receive a letter from the Elysee Palace fixing the day. All communications are to be made by letter or telephone with the secretarial and the warning to eager hosts is in no event should one take for granted a telephone call alone. This should be checked, not once but several times. The French also are warned not to believe any person who introduces himself as an envoy of the Elysee even, and more especially, if he is dressed like a lord.

The president's secretarial asks for a maximum of secrecy. Otherwise the selected home will be inundated by onlookers and the president probably will not show up.

Other guests can be invited if the official permission is given. They, too, are expected to keep their mouths shut, and should be limited to three or four persons besides the family.

The menu? Very rich dishes are shunned by presidents and all V.I.P.'s, but there is still a minimum meal to consider. In the event of any problems or doubts, one must phone the Elysee and ask for suggestions.

Should the children be tucked away out of sight? Theoretically the answer is "no" but they are not to ask for autographs or use a flash camera.

Other tips circulated for possible hosts:

Don't think of redecorating the living room. Keep the atmosphere serene. Don't turn on accordion music to greet your guest, even though everybody knows d'Estaing is an accomplished accordionist.

How to dress? Monsieur should definitely wear a suit and tie and well-polished shoes. The word to Madame is: wear a simple, short dress, foregoing doyleites. Have shining hair, discreet make-up and nail polish. Far better to be underdressed than overdressed. Madame la Presidente dresses very simply.

Etiquette and protocol are reduced to the strictest minimum. D'Estaing should be addressed as Monsieur le President. He will be seated on the host's right and everybody should forget about etiquette, but he will not start to eat nor rise from the table before the hostess does.

Don't linger at the table; pass into another area for coffee if you are limited to a single living room. The president drinks wine but eschews cordials. Although he doesn't smoke, he won't mind a host lighting up a cigarette. Don't switch on either TV or the radio and don't say "so soon" when the presidential couple gets up to leave.

But during the brief conversation time Frenchmen are warned not to mention taxation or other controversial subjects. The president is rather a shy man but, it is said, he will talk about music, hunting, shooting, skiing or tennis. He also enjoys telling anecdotes. It is natural, adjectives suggest, that a host should take advantage of this and be a good listener.

4-H club holds meet

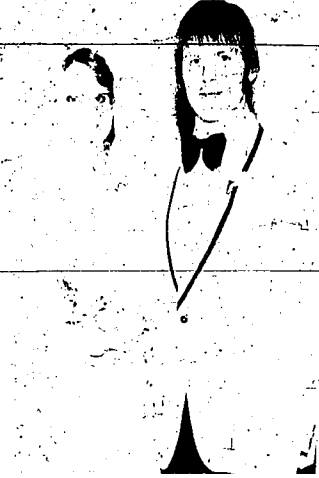

TWIN FALLS — The Happy Go Lucky 4-H Club met Thursday at the home of Kathy Parks.

The flag salute was led by Karen Hillbert and the 4-H pledge was led by Shelley Parr. Discussions were led by Christine Britt, leader, on making milk drinks and preparing raw vegetables.

Mrs. Fred Britt, assistant leader, led a discussion on different ways to cook eggs and on planning a lunch or dinner.

A demonstration was given by Miss Parks on making an angel food cake from a mix.

The next meeting will be Thursday at the home of Arlene Smith.

TOPS

TWIN FALLS — "Lose a little, smile a lot" was the feeling in TOPS No. 3 when a nine-pound loss was recorded Tuesday.

The best loser hamper was pinned on Hlene Lapray with a loss of 9 pounds.

Gainers for the week are to write a poem on gaining weight as their assignments. Play money was passed out to the losers, which will go toward an auction.

For every 1 pound lost, $5 is paid to the loser. Tops receive $10 for staying at or below their goals.

A club day was reported. A $25 was raised at the white elephant sale held last week. The next money-raising project will be a personal tax that each member will figure out about themselves.

Two new members have been added to the membership during April, these being Linda Waggoner and Bonnie Hamilton. Anyone wishing to lose weight is invited to visit the club on Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. at city hall.

HANSEN — "You feel great when you lose weight, so stay straight and quit hating freight!" was the opening thought given at the TOPS No. 84 Club meeting held at the home of Doris Steinhilf.

The opening thought was given in the leader, Mary Beth Howard.

Linda Wills was the best loser of the week.

As a penalty, gainers must eat from a small plate this week.

A no-host meeting will be held Monday with all members bringing a wrapped white elephant gift.

The March losers and the quarterly losers will be given recognition.

As the program feature, a silent auction was held to help raise funds to send the queen to the State Recognition Day at Coeur d'Alene.

Miss Wright, Clough exchange promises

TWIN FALLS — Elaine Wright and Tony Clough were married in a double-ring ceremony April 12 at the First Southern Baptist Church.

Rev. Guy D. Ward conducted the ceremony before an altar flanked with two baskets of white chrysanthemums with blue cushion chrysanthemums. The altar was decorated with two candles in brass candlesticks.

The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Bennie Wright and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Clough, all Twin Falls.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of white double-knit polyester, designed by her mother. The dress featured a long chapel train and white pearl buttons.

Her veil was held by a cap trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white tea roses and white carnations on a white Bible.

Maid of honor was Chris Shindle and Judy Wright, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid.

Brent Fenstermaker was best man and Ray Crumbliss was groomsmen.

Paula Wright, sister of the bride, was candlelighter and was in charge of the guest book.

David Wright, brother of the bride, and Andrew and Gregory Blair, cousins of the bride, were ushers.

Mrs. Howard Gibbs was pianist.

The couple was honored at a reception following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

Mrs. Howard Gibbs was covered with an eicu lace table cloth and decorated with crystal candelabra holding blue candles.

The all-white wedding cake was decorated with blue cushion chrysanthemums at the base. Linda Garus served the cake.

Punch was served from a crystal punch bowl by Pat Simmons and Irma Held was in charge of serving arrangements.

The couple resides in Twin Falls.

Exhibit planned

SHOSHONE — Members of the North Shoshone Home Improvement Club are growing flowers to exhibit in the county fair this fall.

Flower seed packets have been distributed by Mrs. R.B. Kelley for the women to plant.

Pamphlets were distributed on how to raise gardens more productively.

The next regular meeting is May 15 at the home of Mrs. Clifford Stutzman, North Shoshone. Mrs. Ada Sande is hostess, and the roll call topic is "Poems to Mothers."

Experiment with 'pot'

ROANOK, Va. (UPI) — More young women at Hollins College have tried marijuana than cigarettes, according to a survey by psychology Professor Paul Woods.

Woods said his survey of 15 per cent of the student body showed that 70 per cent of the students had smoked marijuana and 54 per cent had smoked cigarettes.

Canadians smoke report

MONTREAL (UPI) — Canadian smokers puffed on 57 billion cigarettes, 591 million cigars and 3.4 million pounds of pipe tobacco in 1974, the Canadian tobacco industry reported Thursday.

The industry said in its annual review that cigarette sales were up 4.1 per cent in 1974 over the previous year while cigar sales were down slightly and pipe tobacco sales decreased 6 per cent.

Women cautioned against breast X-ray

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women under the age of 35 who have no symptoms of strong family history of breast cancer should be cautioned against routine breast X-ray examinations, a Food and Drug Administration official said today.

Dr. William S. Cole, associate director of the FDA's Bureau of Radiological Health, said caution is needed not because there is a "known health risk, but because no one knows what the health effects of low dose radiation could be."

Cole commented on an FDA advisory panel report which made the recommendation. While the agency is still considering what final policy to adopt on the matter, Cole said right now "we think asymptomatic women below the age of 35, should be cautioned against it."

There has been a marked increase in breast X-ray examinations, called mammographies, since the wives of President Ford and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller had breast cancer surgery.

Mammographies, Cole said, "have increased greatly. We had reports of thousands of women coming in in New York, but of course we have no way to confirm that. We really don't know how much it has increased but there has been a rather marked increase."

The advisory committee also called into question the effectiveness of routine mammographies for women.

"Serving Magic Valley Since 1935"

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a physician (G.P.) and ours is a good marriage. But like everyone else, I have a problem.

For the last two years, I have been wanting to get a facelift, but my husband says, "If you get a facelift, I'll look like your father, so please forget it."

ABBY: Can you imagine a man being so vain as to deprive his wife of a facelift because he doesn't want her to look younger than he?

He says, "If you put on a little weight, those wrinkles in your face will fill out, and you won't need any plastic surgery." Isn't that a ridiculous way for a doctor to talk, knowing that my weight is perfect for my height?

The plastic surgeon is tops and says he would gladly do me, but not unless I get my husband's permission.

I am a year younger than my husband, but I look older because I am prematurely wrinkled. I hate to look in the mirror. What should I do?

PRUNE FACE

She wants facelift

DEAR PRUNE FACE: You have three options: (1) Spend the rest of your life dodging mirrors and bating it. (2) Find a plastic surgeon who will give you a facelift regardless of what your husband thinks. (3) Make your husband realize that he is a selfish, egotistical little boy, and get him to change his mind.

DEAR ABBY: The people in our office refer to our boss as a "ladies' man." We are having a difference of opinion as to what that means.

Would you say that a "ladies' man" is a man who is interested in a lot of ladies?

CURIOS

DEAR CURIOS: No, a ladies' man is a man who has a lot of ladies interested in HIM.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that no one can answer for me, so I'm asking you. Can you get married if you aren't baptized?

I wasn't baptized, and I have a neighbor who is a good Catholic. She asked me one day if I was baptized, and I told her no. Well, right away she started calling me an animal and all that. Then she told me if I wasn't baptized, I couldn't get married.

ABBY: Is it true that if you aren't baptized, you can't get married?

NOT BAPTIZED

DEAR NOT: I am informed by the Lutheran Church (Missouri Synod, Minnesota South District Office) that there is no stipulation in its religion that a person must be baptized before he can be married in the Lutheran Church. The Baptist Association Headquarters informs me that there are no restrictions at all in the Baptist religion regarding a person being baptized in order for him to get married in the Baptist Church.

And Father Kevin of the Catholic Basilica St. Mary said that a person must be baptized (in a Christian faith) in order for the marriage to be considered a Christian marriage. When a Catholic wants to marry someone, from a non-Christian religion, a Monsignor, for example, the Catholic Church performs a marriage that is considered "quasi-sacramental," i.e., it is not a sacrament, although the Catholic Church recognizes it as a valid marriage. But it is not considered a Christian marriage because one of the partners is not a Christian.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

'Pill' takers need checkups

HOUSTON (UPI) — Women taking birth control pills should have their blood pressure checked every six months because of an increased chance of developing hypertension, which causes heart attacks, according to a Dallas physician.

Dr. Norman Kaplan, professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, said only 1 per cent of women normally develop high blood pressure, but a study has shown women taking oral contraceptives increase their chances by 2.6 times.

"There has also been an increase in the frequency of strokes in young women," Kaplan said. "It's not a tremendous number, but we're talking about young healthy women not expected to develop a stroke."

Kaplan, attending a conference on hypertension, said Thursday in an interview 10 million women in the United States are taking the pill.

"It's the most popular because it's the most effective," he said. "But there's still a question of safety involved."

First, he said, doctors worried about blood clots developing in women's legs because of the pill, but that risk has been reduced. Now, it appears the pill somehow affects blood pressure.

Kaplan cited a five-year study of 46,000 women by England's Royal College of General Practitioners.

"In five years, a woman taking the pill has a 5 per cent chance of developing hypertension," he said. "That's 2.6 times higher than those not on the pill. And the longer they stay on the pill, the greater the chance of developing hypertension."

Sunday favorites

SAUSAGE HAWAIIAN
 1 29 oz. can pineapple chunks in pineapple juice
 1 1/8 oz. can sweet potatoes, sliced 1-inch thick
 1 1/2 oz. pkg. smoked link sausage, sliced at 1-inch intervals
 3 tablespoons brown sugar
 2 tablespoons cornstarch
 1 teaspoon salt
 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
 Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add cold water to juice to make 1 1/2 cups. Arrange pineapple chunks and sweet potatoes and sausages in a 10-by-6-by-1 1/2-inch baking dish. In a small saucepan combine brown sugar, cornstarch and salt. Gradually blend in reserved pineapple juice mixture. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir one minute more. Remove from heat. Stir in butter.

 Pour over sausage mixture in casserole. Cover and bake for 35 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves four to six.

BONNA BAUER engaged

TF miss, Mueller plan rites

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Wayne W. Bauer, Twin Falls, announce the engagement of their daughter, Bonna Lucette, to Douglas Scott Mueller.

Mueller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Mueller, Twin Falls.

Miss Bauer will graduate this spring from Twin Falls High School where she has been a member of the symphony band and is a student in the Distributive Education Program. She is employed by Hudson's Suburban Shoes.

Mueller is a 1974 graduate of Twin Falls High School. He attends the College of Southern Idaho and is employed by Buttrely's Foods.

The couple plans a June wedding and following their marriage plan to live in Twin Falls.

Idaho banks drop sale of welfare food stamps

BOISE (UPI) — Half the food stamp outlets in Idaho are getting out of the welfare business.

The State Department of Health and Welfare said 10 bank branches have stopped selling the stamps since March 1. By Aug. 1, 34 more are expected to drop them.

Bob Sobelson, chief of H & W's food programs, said there will be some rural counties where there is no place to buy the stamps. He said the department may have to deliver them by mail.

Bank officials said they are dropping the stamps either because of the expense in selling them or because of overcrowded facilities.

Art club hears report

TWIN FALLS — Edna Wall reported on the College of Southern Idaho spring art exhibit at a meeting of the Mary-Davis Art Club Wednesday.

The meeting was at the home of Mrs. Eldred Taylor.

Each member was presented an illustrated edition of "The Living New Testament" by Mrs. Edna Wall. A report was given about the northside hobby show by Clara Walton.

Paintings were shown for criticism by members. Instruction in the use of acrylic paints were given.

The next meeting will be at the home of Clara Walton.

Review presented

TWIN FALLS — "Lust for Life" by Irving Stone was reviewed at a meeting of the Belles Letters Literary Guild Thursday at the home of Virginia Christensen.

President Helen Haroldson gave the book review and Diane King presented the author's sketch. Co-hostesses for the meeting were Betty Ainsworth and Helen Haroldson. New member Hazel Bowen was welcomed.

New officers for the coming year were presented: President, Frances Buhler, vice president, Christensen, secretary Pearl Ryal, treasurer Betty Ainsworth.

The installation luncheon will be May 2 in the Colonial House. All members should attend.

by GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write something on the subject of "carpal tunnel syndrome." I believe this is my problem. Recently, I suffered a Colles fracture and was in a cast for a month.

Since then I have had an abnormal sensation in the tips of the index and middle finger of the affected hand. I mentioned this to the orthopedist and he said it might clear up or it might become permanent.

This is a very peculiar sensation in my fingers and inasmuch as this is the major part of my work, I am hoping you can hold out some hope for me that it might eventually disappear.

If not, do I have any way to obtain relief? Will there be any deterioration to my hand. — Mrs. V.T.L.

Wrist damage stymies typist

"Carpal" refers to the wrist. In each wrist there is a "tunnel," actually a tiny passage formed by the wrist bone and the tendons. The median nerve serving the thumb and two adjacent fingers passes through this space, which is just sufficient to allow the nerve through. Any encroachment on this nerve can produce the carpal tunnel syndrome, which is as you describe it, numbness, tingling and pain in the affected fingers.

For some reason, it is a problem middle-aged women encounter more often than men. But your Colles fracture would have been sufficient to disturb this nerve-trunk and cause the symptoms. The syndrome can also result from a swelling around the nerve, a tumor, scar formation from a wrist fracture, or even from such occupational hazards as those involved in operating a pneumatic hammer.

Carpal tunnel has been linked in some cases to use of the contraceptive pill, as swelling prompted by the pill interferes with the nerve tunnel. Relief comes with discontinuation of the pill.

Otherwise, treatment for the problem consists of injection of hydrocortisone into the tunnel. Thyroid extract has been helpful and, in severe cases, so has surgery to relieve pressure on the nerve.

Although not pertinent to your case, gout can be a cause, and symptoms disappear with appropriate treatment.

I have to tell you that there can be a wasting of the muscles of the affected hand if none of the treatments help. It would be tragic for this to happen to you, since your livelihood seems to depend on finger agility.

It is important that you keep the hand immobilized until healing from the fracture occurs completely, and perhaps, in your case, four weeks may not have been sufficient time, although usually is.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me what causes a painful jaw (both sides). The pain travels as far as my ears and forehead. I wake up during the night with a palpitation of the heart and my jaw begins to ache. X-rays show nothing wrong.

Would tension cause this? — Mrs. N.B.
Tension could very well be the cause. I have encountered this in tense individuals who grind their teeth during sleep. I understand there are devices available for teeth-grinders who check with your dentist about that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I think I might have a stomach problem — of warm water before breakfast. This is a simple remedy for most types of constipation. That's all. — Mrs. G.H.C.

If it has worked for you, good. Actually this can be beneficial in establishing bowel activity as I've noted in discussing this problem on other occasions. But why make it so tasteless? Why not use fruit juice?

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." Send your request to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 3999, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

162 women answer man's ad

METAMORA, Mich. (UPI) — Wayne Bennett wants a wife who doesn't believe in "all that women's lib stuff," and 162 women think they fit the description.

The 41-year-old widower is still getting letters from women who saw an advertisement he placed in the Oxford (Mich.) Advertiser that read:

WANTED, ONE WIFE: Experience not needed; will train the right person.

Bennett said answers have come from as far away as Arkansas and Pennsylvania.

"It's a lot more work than I thought at first," he said. "For one thing, every date uses up one night."

Bennett, a native of East Prairie, Mo., said he decided to advertise for a wife because he does not like bachelorhood. His first wife died last summer, leaving him with two teenage sons.

"I said I don't want anybody who isn't single or anybody who wants to work," he said. "Being a wife is a full-time job. Also, I don't want anybody who believes in all that women's lib stuff."

So far, he has dated a dozen of the women who answered the ad. He has talked over the phone with another 30.

"I'll get married again, that's for sure," Bennett said. "I hope one of these women works out for me."

In addition to the 162 replies, Bennett said he has received dozens of calls. But he doesn't expect them because his ad said he would not accept telephoned applications.

Bennett, who came to Michigan to pick strawberries in 1948, operates a real estate firm in nearby Oxford. The ad, he said, has increased business he had intended the ad is no publicity stunt.

TF couple slates open house May 4

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Molyneux will observe their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house May 4 at the YM-YWCA building, 153 Elizabeth Blvd.

The event will be from 1 to 4 p.m. Hosts for the event will be the couple's sons, Bill and Vance Pulsipher, and their nieces and nephews.

Attend meet. — Members of the Baptist's Women's Mission Society attended the Central Association meeting at the Bull Baptist Church April 18.

Mrs. Robert Gehrig, was in charge of installation of new officers. Other women who attended included Mrs. Omer Shock, Mrs. E.C. Hahn, Mrs. A.L. Warrington and Mrs. Roy Webb.

Molyneux was educated in Deep and Albion schools and attended the University of Utah. His wife, the former Donna Pulsipher, attended Deek's school.

The couple was married May 4, 1925 in Burley, and lived on a farm at Dravo until 1942, when they moved to Twin Falls.

Molyneux farmed until his retirement in 1967. The couple purchased ranchland at Piegho in 1932 and still own property on Silver Creek where they spend some time each summer.

Both enjoy boating and are active in the local rock club. They have won several awards for their displays in the rock shows and Molyneux makes jewelry from some of the rocks they gather when traveling.

Friends of the couple are invited to attend the open house. They request to gifts.

 Opening lead — ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby
 The Lightner slam double is used by practically every expert player in the world. It does have two weaknesses. One is that it may drive the opponents out of a losing slam into a winning one. The other is that when you expect to beat a slam if your partner makes his normal lead, you can't afford to double.

The Lightner Slam double asks partner for an unusual lead. You want that normal lead. East's bidding of today's hand turned out to be very effective. He merely bid one heart the first time, jumped to four hearts next and then stuck. Friendsart led over North's Blackwood four notrump.

This five-heart bid put a lot of pressure on South. If he and his partner were playing one of those special conventions to show aces after Blackwood is interferred-with-he-could-have shown his one ace. But obviously they didn't have any way to do this.

So South studied a while and finally jumped to six spades. If North had the ace instead of the king-queen of diamonds six spades would wheel in, but as you can see both East's aces were winners.

East was sure of this, but he was using the Lightner slam double and the double would call for a club lead. So he passed and took a mere 100 point profit.

A Mother's Day Tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Joe Jahnke, 1512 N. 10th St., at 2:30 p.m. on Friday, May 2.

Mrs. George Warberg is co-hostess. Report was made on the garage sale and appreciation extended to Howard Winterrowd, Immanuel Lutheran Church, and Rev. Robert Van Nest, Presbyterian, and the women's society of the Pentecostal Church for their help with the event.

Mrs. Steve Carter was chosen girl of the month. Officers will be installed May 11 at the home of Mrs. George Warberg, adviser.

50 high schools to compete in industrial arts exhibit

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Students from 50 high schools show an estimated 700 items ranging from grandfather clocks to pottery items Friday and Saturday in the state industrial educational exhibit here.

Bill Jacobsen, instructor in the Twin Falls school and Industrial Education Association president for Idaho said the unusual "fair" type event is held annually and is open to all industrial education students. This year there is even an elementary school section.

The Twin Falls industrial education classes have been working since Christmas to design and cast trophies for state winners. These include some 150 bronze shields which will be mounted on polished wood for the first and second place winners.

For the eight "best of show" winners the last students are making pewter type plates. All are hand cast from bronze or an aluminum metal.

They are poured into sand molds after the metal is melted in the department's hot-dip furnace at temperatures of 1,400 to 2,000 degrees. To make the 150 trophies, some 400 castings have been made. Those with flaws are simply melted down again and recast.

Molds for the castings consist of a special sand mixed with oil rather than water so they will be more durable in handling.

Jacobsen said the exhibit will be judged Thursday and will then open to the public Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the school gymnasium.

"We want the public to attend the fair and see what our students around the state are doing in the industrial education programs. I do not if many people realize the degree of skill and training these boys and girls are receiving," Jacobsen said.

The last time the exhibits were in Twin Falls, the winning award of the event was an entire bedroom set including a poster and canopy bed, matching dresser and other items, all made by the student.

"Everything exhibited is made by the students in the grandfather clocks, a specialty of one of the north Idaho classes, everything but the clock works themselves are individually made and assembled," Jacobsen said.

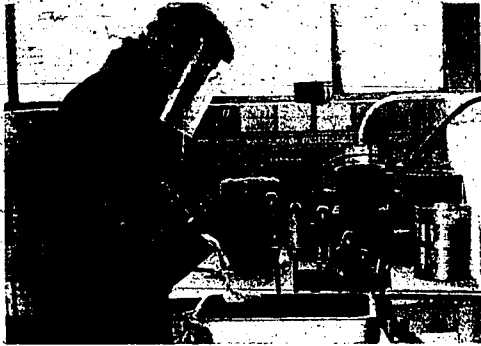

There will be eight divisions in the exhibit, including metals, crafts, drafting, electricity, plastics, elementary industrial arts and mass production.

Everything from drafting and mechanical plans to finished, cuckoo clocks, pottery items, ceramics, wrought iron, lapidary and leather work, furniture, scale models of buildings and other unusual items of all sizes.

The exhibit is held in conjunction with the Idaho Industrial Education Association convention and workshop session to be held during Friday and Saturday. Teachers will be meeting in Twin Falls to hear talks from specialists in various phases of industrial education.

James Dixon, Washington, D.C., who serves as coordinator of professional services for the American Industrial Art Association, will be keynote speaker for the first day's program for industrial teachers.

Other speakers will be attending from Utah, Illinois and California, including Lou Roth, Los Angeles; Cliff, manager of Craftaid Co. He will conduct workshops in new techniques in leatherwork, lapidary and similar fields.

Castings poured

LIQUID metal, at about 1,400 degrees, is poured into sand molds to make pewter-type trophies for the sixth annual Idaho Industrial Education show in Twin Falls Friday and Saturday. Craig Wright pours castings. Exhibits from throughout Idaho will be on public display.

Awards readied

BRONZE and pewter type awards, all hand made by the Twin Falls Industrial Arts classes, are being readied for the annual state-wide exhibit. Among the students making the awards are Randy McBride, Dan Briscoe and Chet Paulson, from left. About 150 trophies will be given.

Plaques completed

FINISHED products after many hours of work are shown by Dan Briscoe, left, holding first and second place bronze on wood plaques, and Chet Paulson, showing the pewter type "best of show" awards. Winners will be selected in eight divisions.

Polish plaques

GIRLS in the industrial arts classes, Pam Kelley, left, and Kathy Halousko, helped, too, here they polish the wooden plaques on which bronze trophy shields will be mounted. Some 700 exhibits are expected in the show.

Trophies buffed

AFTER the trophies are cast and cooled, they must be buffed to a high gloss. Working on brass castings are Vernon Weisman, left, and Frank Newberry.

Community singers join CSI for Schubert's Mass

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho and community singers will treat Twin Falls to an hour of singing May 4 in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

Franz Schubert's Mass in B-flat for chorus, small orchestra and soloists will be performed without charge, according to director Harold Smith of the CSI Music Department.

Mary Walker, a local teacher who studied in New York and has sung in other community productions, is the soprano soloist. Valeta Burke, a CSI student who studies in town, is the alto soloist.

Tenor solos will be sung by Jess Torres, a trumpet player who recently turned to singing. Roger Vincent, director of the Magic Valley Chorus, will be the bass soloist.

The college's small choral ensemble will sing madrigals and other pieces as the first part of the program.

The mass, written in the 19th century, follows the usual order of Catholic Church services: Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, Benedictus and Agnus Dei, according to Smith.

The mass has never been performed in a Catholic Church, Smith said, because Schubert left out the words "and in one holy catholic and apostolic church" when he wrote the music for the Credo.

Smith said that the mass uses "imaginative harmonies and exciting instrumental writing" which should make the mass enjoyable even though it is sung in Latin. A translation of the mass will be printed in the program.

Smith, who will direct the program, said it is "the kind of thing I take particular joy in." He sang for five years in the symphonic chorus in Indianapolis and has found the mass to be "pleasing to a lot of people."

"I'd be delighted to have the auditorium full," Smith said.

Finalists named in state bowling meet

BOISE — Mary Schaeffer of Boise earned a trip to the regional tournament Saturday but 10 other competitors will have to fight through six lines Sunday for the other titles in the state graduating senior bowling tournament.

Action will resume at 11 a. m. Sunday at Bull's Sunset Bowl in three divisions. Miss Schaeffer took the girls open class with a 1022 total and also booked the best girls individual game of the game at 201.

Each of the other divisions, boys open and handicap and girls handicap, has been whittled to six finalists. The winner from the state event advances to regionals in Boise in June and if successful there will go on to national competition in St. Louis later this summer. At stake are $1,500 scholarships.

Boys handicap — Tracy Dawson, Twin Falls, 1204; Paul Wetzel, Buhl, 1165; Michael Adair, Gooding, 1150; Terry McGregor, Paul, 1139; Mark Wade, Shelley, 1108, and Kevin Wilding, Rexburg, 1107.

Girls handicap — Lori Bea, Twin Falls, 1028; Iris Champlin, Twin Falls, 1026; Lori Townsend, Boise, 1012; Kathy Doerr, Twin Falls, 992; Debbie Albee, Idaho Falls, 980, and Robin Lamb, Twin Falls, 978.

Rod Durrington, Idaho Falls, had the top boys game Saturday at 235.

Islanders beat odds

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The New York Islanders became the second team in pro sports history to overcome a three game deficit and win a best-of-7 playoff series when captain Eddie Westfall scored with 5:18 remaining Saturday night to defeat the Pittsburgh Penguins 1-0.

The New York victory ended the last of the quarterfinal playoffs in the National Hockey League and sent the Islanders into the semifinals, beginning Tuesday night, against the defending champion Philadelphia Flyers.

Buffalo and Montreal begin play Sunday in the other semifinal.

Falcons trade Ellis

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons traded former All-American defensive back Clarence Ellis to the Denver Broncos Saturday for wide receiver Jerry Simmons, safety Charles Green and a future draft choice.

Ellis, a 6-foot, 195-pound safety who earned All-American honors playing under Ara Parseghian at Notre Dame in 1970 and 1971, was the Falcons' No. 1 draft choice in 1972.

U.S. all-stars win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Bernard 'Boone' of Yonkers, N.Y., scored 26 points Saturday night to pace the United States All-Stars to a 95-89 triumph over a team of all-stars from Kentucky and Indiana in the third annual Kentucky Derby Festival Basketball Classic.

Boone, outmaneuvering his taller rivals in the pivot, earned Most Valuable Player honors for his game, which stayed in command all the way by grabbing the lead 10-9 on a jump shot by Brad Holland of La Crosse, Calif.

Ryan to miss one turn

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Nolan Ryan will miss at least one turn on the mound for the California Angels and possibly two because of a strained hip flexor tendon in his right arm, the team physician said Friday.

The fireballing right-hander had to quit Thursday night in the seventh inning of a game against the Texas Rangers when he hurt his arm. He took his first loss after four victories.

Dr. Julius Sainski examined Ryan at St. Joseph hospital in nearby Orange and confirmed the diagnosis of a strained tendon in the upper arm made at the game by Dr. Joe Triggs.

The days of postponement are just for many high school sports as now and unless the weather starts cooperating a little, some championships are going to have to go vacant or competitors are going to have to get out on the ice.

The spring, described as the most miserable in 30 years by veteran spring sports watchers, is only wetter than last year which set a record for wind. The combination of the two has put the girls track season, boys A-3 and the SIC baseball chase in a must play situation.

In the eastern division SIC, only Twin Falls and Coach Ron Watson are running on schedule. They have two games this week. But Mimico and Pocatello grouped so many as seven and Idaho Falls and Skyline six Monday night Saturday to decide who the division champion is.

It is no better on the west side where the total western division schedule is something like seven games behind. The two division champs were to play for the conference title just prior to going into district playoffs in two weeks.

The girls class B sub-district track meets are slated for Tuesday at Murtaugh and Gooding State and just about have to be run on that day because the district finals are set for Friday at Filer. There is one day's grace, however.

The weather also is crumming the Southern Idaho Conference track situation, the eastern end qualifying meet in Pocatello being snowed out Friday. That means the easterners will run Tuesday — as will the west in Boise — with the top eight in each event qualifying for the conference finals in Idaho Falls Friday.

The delay could have helped Bruin distance ace Rick Murray who is having knee problems but could come back with the extra couple days' rest.

The boys A-3 district will be run Wednesday and Friday at Murtaugh, all preliminaries going at 3 p.m. Wednesday for everything but the long distances. They'll come back to Murtaugh for the finals at 12 p.m. Friday.

Best ball tourney put on 1-day format

Although the competition and the field probably will be cut in about half, the annual Twin Falls Invitational best ball tournament will try to get off the ground at 8:30 a. m. Sunday.

The two day event was abruptly sliced to one day — at best — by snow Saturday morning. Host professional Clyde Thomson said the pairings and tee-off times announced for Saturday would stand for Sunday.

Thomson said he had no idea how many would show up if weather permitted starting Sunday.

In addition, the weather also is threatening the annual added money pro-am at Jackpot Monday. The weather was holding out hopes for temperatures in the 50s by Monday but a 50 percent chance for rain at the same time.

Jackpot received a little more snow than Twin Falls many Saturday.

Thompson leads CSI to third in all-Idaho meet

BOISE — Sophomore Brent Thompson sailed 22 feet, five inches to win the long jump Saturday to help the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles place third in the annual all-Idaho track and field meet.

Idaho State and North Idaho Junior College passed up the meet which was won by Boise State with a whopping 216 points. Idaho was second at 100 while CSI had 82. Ricks 46, NWC 27 and College of Idaho 15.

Thompson, a Twin Falls product, managed the only victory of the meet for the Golden Eagles. He searched on two efforts that were considerably better than the winning jump.

Rains ranging from downpour to drizzle stayed with the meet the entire day and temperatures were cold. However, the wind was present only on a part-time basis.

The Eagles had several runners-up in the individual events. Premier quarter miler Doug Gilkey lost in a stirring stretch duel with Boise State's Rollie Woolsey. Gilkey was caught in 49.7, considerably over his best time, while teammate Duane Atwood claimed fifth.

Neal McIntyre was second in the 100-yard dash in 10.1 and Kevin Blaisdell was third at 10.2. Blaisdell was fourth in the 220-yard dash in 22.4 with McIntyre fifth at 22.8.

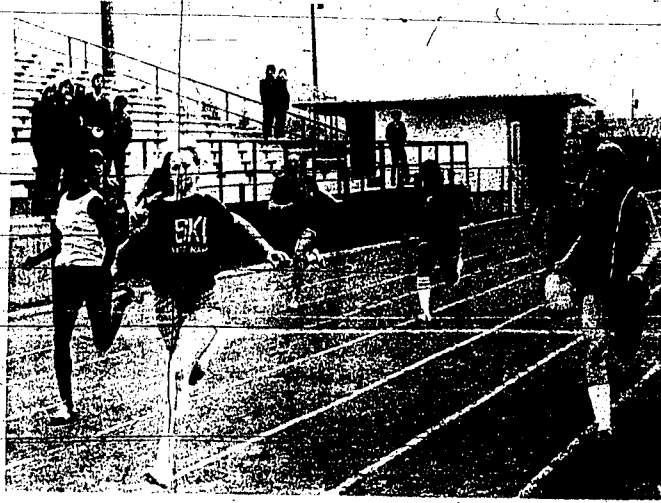

Bruce Cooper placed second in 56.3 and Jerry Dely third in 58.0 in the intermediate hurdles. The quarter mile and mile relay teams garnered runner-up spots in 42.7 and 3:24, respectively.

Fresh John Hunter again proved that the steepchase is probably his event by placing third in 9:42.3 while Steve McCalley was fifth in the three-mile at 15:07. Fresh Randy Collier grabbed third in the pole vault at 14 feet even.

Larry David won the shot put for Boise State with a personal best of 55 feet-39 inches. Sprinter Sam Jenkins, as expected, won the 220-yard dash in 31.8 seconds, but was disqualified in the 100 on a false start. But Jenkins helped the Broncos to another win as he ran the anchor leg on the victorious quarter-mile relay.

Mike Bennett was the only double winner, taking the 100-yard high hurdles in 14.5 seconds and the intermediate hurdles in 55 seconds.

Rick Stubbs of Ricks also came away with a personal best, taking the javelin on a throw of 199 feet, 5 inches.

SKYLINE SPRINTER Kelly Chappel eyes the tape at the end of the 100-yard dash portion of the girls eastern division, SIC, championships Friday. Sue Marsh of Twin Falls, right, chases her across. Miss Chappel hit a solid, but wind-aided 11.5.

Twin Falls girls romp to SIC division championship

Tracy Engelhart and Debbie Breeze doubled up for victories Friday afternoon in leading in Twin Falls girls to an easy victory in the eastern division, SIC, track and field championships.

Miss Engelhart took the hurdles and the long jump while Miss Breeze overpowered everyone in the half mile and mile.

Those 40 points helped Twin Falls pick up 183 against the other five teams in the division. Skyline, showing good strength in the sprints with three girls, was second, but well back at 81.5.

Agam Coach Bill Ingram's girls showed great strength in the middle distances. The Bruins took the first four places in the 400-yard dash and that, of course, added up to an unimpressed victory in 1:29.3 in the mile relay.

The other double winner was Miss Standridge of Highland who took both weights.

The girls now are pointed toward the district eliminations slated for Friday afternoon in Filer. That will be the start of eliminations toward the state runoffs in Idaho Falls in three weeks.

MISS WOKERSTEN in Twin Falls takes the tape and victory in the 220-yard dash Friday. Miss Wokersten garnered points in three events to help Twin Falls run away with the eastern division SIC championships.

Greek Answer wins

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Heavily favored Greek Answer, ineligible for the Kentucky Derby next week, defeated three Derby candidates Saturday in winning the $15,000 Stepping Stone Purse by threequarters of a length over Gatch.

Greek Answer, skipping the Derby in favor of a shot at Canada's Queen's Plate, led nearly all the way, although Gatch closed strongly to wrest second place from Fashion Sale before an opening day crowd of 23,730 at Churchill Downs. Gatch and Fashion Sale are both Derby nominees.

Foreman whips five, clowns with Ali

TORONTO (UPI) — George Foreman, the former world heavyweight champion, got $200,000 Saturday in a boxing ring, and he earned it.

Not necessarily for disposing of five little-known boxers, but for the crowd pleasing show he and Muhammad Ali, the man who took his title away, put on.

Ali was supposed to be doing a ringside commentary on television but instead, he kept interrupting the five "fights" by mocking Foreman's boxing style and challenging him to step out of the ring.

Somewhere along the line Foreman managed to score technical knockouts over three guys named Alonzo Johnson, Jerry Judge and Terry Daniels. After Daniels was knocked down a second time, one of his handlers started trying to punch Foreman. The handlers for both fighters took up the cause and the crowd roared with approval.

Finally, after Ali stood up and pretended to show Foreman covering up or gasping for breath, Foreman easily outslugged Charley Polite and Boone Kirkman.

Foreman who checked in at an overweight 232 pounds, kept the act up after he finished his work in the ring. Just like after a real fight, he gave interviews to a much amused press corps, but no one could take what he said seriously any more than they could take seriously what he did in the ring.

"No more Mr. Good Guy for me," Foreman said angrily. "I've been abused and put down too much. I'm putting up with no more of it." Now that I've whipped five, I want to whip three — Joe Frazier, Ken Norton and Muhammad Ali, that low-down, good-for-nothing powerpuff. I want to light them from seven in the morning till 12 at night, then retire from boxing."

Foreign runners dominate finals in Drake relays

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Eastern New Mexico and Western Kentucky, relying on foreign-born runners, dominated the final day of the 66th annual Drake Relays Saturday, which was disrupted by a controversy over a disqualification in the special 100-yard dash.

In that event, world record holder Ivory Crockett of Philadelphia was disqualified for a false start that drew a chorus of boos from the sellout crowd of 18,000. Crockett, who owns the record of 9.0 seconds, admitted under existing rules he should not have been allowed to run, but the jeering fans forced two additional delays in starting the race.

The event was won by Hasely Crawford of Eastern Michigan in 9.4, equalling the old Relays mark held by Charlie Greene of Nebraska in 1959. Three other major relays featured Saturday after three were broken and one was tied Friday.

Mike Boll, who set one of the records Friday, anchored his Eastern New Mexico team to victories in the 400-meter distance medley in 9:55.4 and sprint medley relay in 3:21.7. The native Kenyan's efforts helped his team sweep the 400-meter major Midwest track and field meet at the Kansas and Texas—in those events.

Western Kentucky, a winner in the four-mile relay in record time Friday, also enjoyed a successful day. The Hilltoppers ripped Kansas State in the final 100 yards to win the university distance medley in

Challenge concentration Connors beats Newcombe in million dollar match

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, playing seriously for a change except for a short outburst late in the fourth set, crushed in one of sports' biggest paydays ever Saturday when he beat Australian ace Pat Newcombe, 3-1, and won close to $500,000 in their $1 million tennis challenge match. "It's always a thrill to beat a star like Newcombe," Connors said when it was all over, but it wasn't his biggest thrill of a meteoric tennis career that has shot him among the front ranks of the game's greatest.

"Winning Wimbledon last year still is my biggest thrill," said the 22-year-old star. "But this victory comes close. You can't pass over winning so much money that lightly."

Connors, playing his usual forceful game, cleaned up Newcombe in a little more than three hours by scores of 6-3, 46-62, 6-4, and then announced he was taking a six-week vacation to get away from it all.

"I'll do some water skiing, hunt-for-an-apartment—and generally do a lot of nothing," said the bull-shouldered Connors. As for his on-again, off-again romance with tennis star Chris Evert, he said he'll work on that, too.

Connors won the third set 6-2 on a pair of service breaks for a 2-1 advantage, then won the fourth set 6-4 with a decisive service break in the seventh game to close out the best-of-five match.

Connors, who won a similar challenge match three months ago three sets to one over Ivan Laver, took the opening set 6-3 with a service break in the fourth game, while Newcombe, who won close to $200,000 as a consolation prize, took the second set 6-4.

Connors had four service breaks during the four sets and eight aces. Newcombe, noted as one of the game's best servers, had only six aces and double-faulted eight times.

Total receipts from the match were expected to top $1 million with Bill Riordan, Connors' manager and promoter of the event, taking home another $300,000.

The match was televised nationally as well as to a score of nations in the far east and Europe plus Canada and Mexico.

Newcombe likes format

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — John Newcombe, beaten 3-1 by Jimmy Connors Saturday in their $1 million challenge tennis match, blamed his serve for the loss.

Newcombe, who won close to $300,000 despite the defeat, said he was satisfied with his play except for his serve.

"I felt my first serve deserted me and it upset my tempo," said the Australian star. "Serving to him, (Connors) is like pitching to Hank Aaron. If you keep giving him the same thing, he's going to hit it out of the ballpark."

Newcombe said the challenge format is a good one and he would like to see it continue.

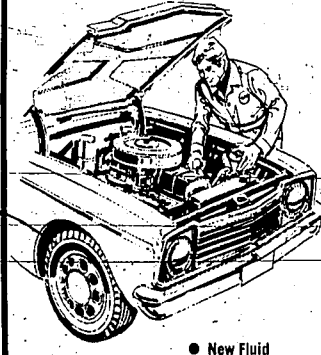

"However," he said, "you can overdo a good thing. The challenge format is good for the game because it gives it maximum exposure but it would be limited to the top player and the two directly beneath him."

Newcombe also said he would like to see the challenge format used in golf, and especially for a match pitting Jack Nicklaus against Johnny Miller.

"I think it would be fantastic to sit with a cool beer in my hand and watch Miller play Nicklaus for $1 million," Newcombe said.

Susan's Girl nears million-dollar mark

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Susan's Girl moved a step closer to $1 million in earnings Saturday when she raced to a half-length victory in the ninth running of the $13,200 Long Beach Handicap on the turf course at Hollywood Park.

Curry, the 10-year-old, 112-pound, Susan's Girl with the wings, won her first victory at Hollywood Park after having been turned back six times. She fought off the closing challenge of Bold Ballet to register her win in the good time of 1:48 for the 1 1/8 miles on the grass.

Argentine sensation Dulcia was third and Child-in-bed Times finished fourth in the field of six.

The win was the 20th stakes victory in the career of the 5-year-old daughter of Quadrangle, and the winner's purse of $25,200 increased her lifetime earnings to $387,137 as the leading United States-campaigned mare in turf history.

Only European racers Allez Francaise and Dahlia have earned more money than Susan's Girl.

Despite her record, Susan's Girl was sent out for the second time in the wagering and paid $6.40, $3.60 and $2.40. Bold Ballet returned $5.20 and $3.20 and Dulcia paid $2.60.

In the early stages of the race, Tiana and Victorian O'Brien led the field and were followed by Move Ahead-Jockey, Jorge Tejera kept Susan's Girl in fourth position

Chris worries but wins

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (UPI) — Chris Evert, admitting her mind was on boyfriend Jimmy Connors, came from behind twice to dispatch Martina Navratilova, 7-5, 6-4, Saturday and win the $25,000 first prize in the Family Circle Tennis Tournament.

Miss Evert said she had hoped to win the match in two sets so she could quickly find a television set and watch Connors' $1 million challenge match with John Newcombe. Connors won in four sets.

"I was thinking so much about that match that I made a lot of errors," Miss Evert said. "I really wanted my match to go just two sets."

Both Miss Evert and Miss Navratilova agreed the turning point in their match came in the first set with the Czechoslovakian holding a 5-4 lead.

Miss Evert went up 40-love on her own service but Navratilova came back to tie. On the deuce point Miss Evert hit a lob and her opponent "choked" it.

She hit it way out and threw her racket in disgust.

On the next shot Chris passed her at the net to even it at 5-5 and went on to win the set.

"At the last second I looked at her to see if she was running," said Navratilova. "Suddenly I realized I had set point and I've never won a set from Chris on clay."

"Then I choked very badly—I hit it way out," she said disappointedly.

Geiberger blasts out of sandtrap

Geiberger goes on birdie binge to hold meet lead

CARLSBAD, Calif. (UPI) — Amiable Al Geiberger, reeling off birdies on five of his first 12 holes, shot a two-under-par 70 Saturday to hang onto a three-hole lead over one-time PGA champion Lee Trevino before a three-round $200,000 MONY Tournament of Champions.

Trevino, the happy-go-lucky Mexican-American from El Paso, Tex., also shot a three-under 70, the same score tied in by first-round leader Jim Colbert, who held down third place by himself, four shots back.

Gary Player, winner of the Masters and the British Open crown last year, had the best record of the day—a four-under 68—to move into fourth place at 210. Player's 31 on the front side equalled the La Costa Country Club course record for the first nine holes.

Geiberger, the 16-year pro from Santa Barbara, Calif., who is a steady but unspectacular player, ended an eight-year victory drought by winning the Sahara International at Las Vegas, Nev., last October. But he missed the cut at the Masters two weeks ago with a 79-71.

With a 54-hole total of 204 on 115 birdies, one bogey and one double bogey for three days, Geiberger not only has a shot at the $40,000 first prize in the T. of C. but also has a crack at the 72-hole course record of 273, 15 under par, established by Frank Beard in his winning—the 1970 tournament here.

Geiberger, who shot a pair of 67s in the first two days, was sailing along five under par Saturday when he doubled bogeyed the par three 202-yard 14th hole when he put his ball into a trap and then three putted. He had birdied the hole the first two days.

Geiberger, a former University of Southern California star, missed a four-foot putt on the 16th hole for a bogey.

"On this golf course, you can make it up," said Trevino. "I shot a 65 on the second day and Colbert shot a 65 or the first day."

"Somebody five or six under could shoot a 65 tomorrow and take the whole thing."

Following Geiberger, Trevino (207), Colbert (208) and Player was Buddy Allen, a runner-up here one year ago, who shot a 70 in the third round for a 212 total.

Jack Nicklaus, who won a record 14th Masters two weeks ago, carded a 71 and was at 213.

Suit over NFL injury dropped

DENVER (UPI) — A federal court spokesman says attorneys for Cincinnati Bengals fullback Charles Clark have asked dismissal of a $500,000 suit filed by Denver Broncos linebacker Dale Hackbart for spinal injuries suffered in a 1973 game.

On Friday, Hackbart's suit was transferred back to U.S. District Court with a claim by Clark's lawyers the statute of limitations covering the case had expired.

The suit was filed April 10 and alleged Clark, "intentionally, wantonly and maliciously struck and injured Hackbart with his fist and forearm at the base of the skull and neck."

The suit claimed the blow fractured Hackbart's spine and caused damage to his nervous system. According to Hackbart, the injuries prevented him from playing for the remainder of the 1973 season and benched him last year.

Massengale fires four-under par 68 to lead Tallahassee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Rick Massengale, making his finest move ever on the PGA tour, fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday to lead Ralph Johnson by four strokes after three rounds of the Tallahassee Open.

Massengale, who has had at least a share of the lead since the first round when he was tied with five other players, took sole possession of first place Friday with his second straight 67.

He had a 202 total for 54 holes.

Johnson, who came in with a 69 Saturday, was at 206, one stroke ahead of Bert Vancey who had 68 Saturday.

Spike Kelley turned in a 69 to move into fourth place with a 204 total.

Massengale said he felt his game was really at its peak. "You can't complain with the rounds I have been having. It all seems to be fitting together, though I didn't like the three bogeys I got out there today."

Two share lead in women's tournament

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Gail Denenberg and Kathy McMullen survived a storm which destroyed the play of most golfers Saturday and finished two rounds with a narrow lead in the $15,000 LPGA Charity Classic.

Miss Denenberg, among the leaders after Friday's first round, led by six strokes at one point, but bogeyed three of the last four holes to fall to second under-par 133.

Miss McMullen had a 72 Friday, but fired a 67 Saturday, the day's best round, to leap past a score of other competitors who fell victim to the 25-30 mile an hour wind.

On Friday Joyce Kaminski fired a course record 65, but blew up to a 77 Saturday and was tied with five others in fifth place. The second place finisher from Friday, Jan Ferraris who had a 66 Saturday shot an 80 which included a triple bogey eight on the ninth hole.

Murtaugh, Hagerman claim league titles

MURTAUGH — There were no surprises Friday — even the usual wind and cold were there when the Hagerman girls and Murtaugh boys ran off with championships in the annual Magic Valley Conference track and field finals.

Both divisions were scored on the 10-8-6-4-2-1 system that has been adopted for district through state use this spring — giving six places instead of the usual five.

Hagerman's girls piled up 171 points against 93 for runner-up Hansen. For the boys, Murtaugh amassed 195 points while second-place Hagerman had 134.

Wendell girls take Little Five crown

WENDELL — The Wendell girls took three relay victories and showed depth in all the other events Friday afternoon to win the Little Five Conference track and field championship.

The relays were the only victories Wendell managed in the cold, blowy day — but the Trojans still picked up 63 points. They were followed by Glenns Ferry at 50; Valley City, Kimberly 46 and Shoshone 27.

All the teams will compete at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Gooding State track in the northside sub-district, first step toward the state finals.

Sub-districts are held at Gooding and Murtaugh that day. The survivors will advance to the district finals at Piler Friday afternoon.

The boys also head into district, which will be hosted by Murtaugh. Preliminaries in all events but the three long distances, are slated for 3 p.m. Wednesday. Those qualifying will return at 1 p.m. Friday for the district finals.

The top placers from that one will advance to the regionals against their third district counterparts: the following week.

Team scoring — Hagerman 171; Hansen 93; Wendell 63; Glenns Ferry 50; Valley City 46; Kimberly 46; Shoshone 27.

Individual scores — 400-yard relay — Valleys (Burton, Galtner, Blum, Haggren) 5:48.5; 800-yard relay — Wendell (Hendell, Shoshone, Kimberly) 5:58.7.

400-yard dash — Howell, GF; J. Glick, W. Cason, W. Galtner, GF; Mike W. 1:19.9; 800-yard dash — Howell, GF; J. Glick, W. Cason, W. Galtner, GF; Mike W. 2:43.2.

1600-yard dash — Howell, GF; J. Glick, W. Cason, W. Galtner, GF; Mike W. 6:54.9; 3200-yard dash — Howell, GF; J. Glick, W. Cason, W. Galtner, GF; Mike W. 14:05.1.

1 mile relay — Wendell (Shoemaker, Hagon, Galtner, Lang, C. Galtner, Kimberly, Glenns Ferry, Valley 2:16.6).

100-yard dash — Glick, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 12.0; 200-yard dash — Glick, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 24.5.

400-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 2:16.6).

800-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 4:33.2).

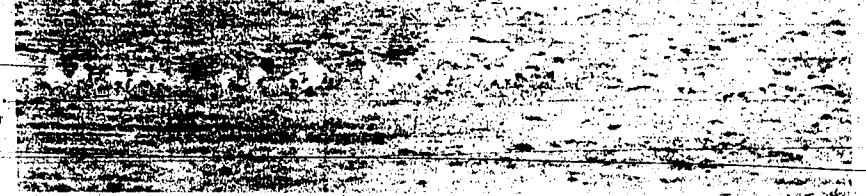

1600-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 8:66.4).

3200-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 17:32.8).

6400-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 34:65.6).

12800-yard relay — Hagerman (Lutz, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 69:31.2).

1 mile relay — Hagerman (Gardner, Lutz, Jolly, Lutz, RR; Lutz, Hag; Morris, Hag; Jolly, Hag; Ben Han 4:33.2).

Snow geese visit Lemhi on way north

SALMON — For the past two weeks snow geese have been flying down the Lemhi River Valley, heading northward toward their breeding grounds in the Arctic.

Small groups have stayed over for a few days, feeding in the fields around Salmon.

On April 17, Hadley Roberts, wildlife biologist for the Salmon National Forest, observed a marked goose in the group of 60 feeding birds at the mouth of the Lemhi River.

The markings with Dick Norrell, game bird supervisor for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, who said the bird had been banded in July, 1974, on northeastern Wrangel Island, Siberia, as part of a research project.

Salmon Roberts noted, is on a direct route between Siberia and the Gulf of Mexico, a major wintering area for snow geese.

Roberts surmised that the bird may have wintered along the Gulf Coast. If this is correct, the goose had completed about one third of its 4,500-mile journey.

Other species of migrating waterfowl and shorebirds also have been showing up in the Salmon area with the snow geese.

Among these are pintails, wigeon, teal, canvasbacks, redheads, red-bagasted mergansers, buffleheads, whistling swans, cormorants, long-billed curlews and avocets.

Local residents may not feel that spring is here, but at least the birds do, Roberts commented.

NBA resolves matter of Jazz payments

CHICAGO (UPI) — The matter of overdue payments on franchise fees by the New Orleans Jazz to the national basketball association was "resolved satisfactorily" at a special meeting of the NBA board of governors.

With the lack of a sponsor, the team was unable to distinguish a red neck collar with "PAC" inscribed on it, Roberts said he checked out the markings with Dick Norrell.

Kenedy did not amplify what resulted from a brief discussion of the New Orleans situation, but it was understood that back payments would be made.

The owners of the Jazz, which played its first season in the league this year, paid $6.15 million for the franchise and were to make periodic payments on this amount.

The governors did not act on two other issues, which were discussed along the Gulf Coast. If compensation to the Milwaukee Bucks by the Atlanta Hawks for rights to Julius Erving, and selection of a commissioner to succeed Kennedy.

Rozelle rule trial opens again Monday

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A lawsuit brought by 16 present or former National Football League players trying to overturn the controversial "Rozelle" rule resumes Monday to U.S. District Court.

Testimony in the trial ran two weeks last February before it was recessed until last Monday. It was postponed another week because two Rozelle rule suits resumed Monday to U.S. District Court.

The suit challenging the "Rozelle" rule was initiated by players who became free agents May 1, 1972. Defendants are the NFL, its club owners and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The rule empowers Rozelle to set compensation before a player who plays on his option can be signed as a free agent by another team.

Plaintiffs contend the provision is "monopolistic" and "very restrictive since there is no deal unless teams reach agreement on compensation."

Attorneys for the NFL say the rule "is a compromise mechanism to preserve team

CSI resets twin bill

College of Southern Idaho and Ricks will try to get in their four game baseball series this week but the format has been altered.

Due to the CSI awards banquet at the Holiday Inn Monday night, if weather permits play Monday the doubleheader will be held at Twin Falls Cowboy diamond.

CSI would return the visit Wednesday, if all Ricks well.

The winner of the best of four series will advance to the regional tournament in Oregon May 15.

Broyles has grid equalization plan

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Frank Broyles, athletic director and head football coach at the University of Arkansas, said Saturday he has devised a plan to equalize the "haves" and "have-nots" in college football.

Broyles told a news conference he did not know what action may have been taken on his proposal at the NCAA's special economic meeting Thursday and Friday in Kansas City. He provided a copy of it to the delegates.

He said his plan was aimed at Division I only. Under the Villanova takes long relays

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Emmott Coghlan and Ken Schappert led Villanova to victories in both the four-mile and two-mile relays Saturday in the 81st annual Penn Relays.

Coghlan, who was named the meet's outstanding athlete, ran the anchor leg mile in the four-mile relay in 3:59.6, for his second sub-four-minute anchor leg mile in two days.

The Villanova team finished the four-mile relay in 16:27.4 in bringing their team home with a 90-yard victory over Fordham

In the two-mile relay, the Dublin harrier ran a 1:51.9 second leg and Schappert a 1:51 third leg to set up freshman Mark Belger for a 1:51.4 anchor leg and a 50-yard win over Tennessee.

Schappert also ran with Coghlan Friday when Villanova set a world record in the two-mile distance medley.

Seton Hall also won two events Saturday. The Pirates took the 880-yard relay when "Bibey" Brewer out defended champion, Tennessee. Both

Bullet-Colt series gets underway today

BOSTON (UPI) — After winning the playoff series everyone knew they would, the Boston Celtics got down to the nitty-gritty Sunday, kicking off their semi-final series against the Washington Bullets, a matchup everyone has been expecting.

The Celtics and the Bullets fought it out for the league's top record, with the team's tying, but Boston won the extra money and home court advantage based on their intra-conference record. The Celtics won the Atlantic Division, while the Bullets, coached by former Celtic K.C. Jones, were the class of the central division.

The Bullets, like the Celtics, are a running team, paced by the hot shooting of guard Phil Chenir and forward Elvin Hayes.

In Friday night's game against Buffalo, Chenir dropped in 39 points, with Hayes and Kevin Porter adding 24 points each to lead a 115-96 victory.

Washington was a 23 point lead midway in the second period, and a 56-38 halftime spread. Washington was ahead as much as 25 points in the final period before Jones pulled his first team.

The Celtics, coming off the comparatively easy quarter final series with the Rockets, know things won't be nearly as easy this time. The defending NBA champions used their experience and expertise of defense to end the Rockets season. Boston sent the young club home Thursday night with a 128-115 loss.

The Celtics really didn't expect to lose to the Rockets. "I never thought Houston wouldn't beat us," Celtic guard Jojo White said. "They're a good team but experience speaks for itself. Even if they beat us in Boston Thursday it would just be a matter of time."

The Celtics say this series, which kicks off Sunday at the Boston garden, won't be nearly as easy.

FTC asks if plant care tags needed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a move attacked by one of its members as about as useful "as a pair of socks on a rooster," The Federal Trade Commission Friday announced an investigation to find out if care and feeding labels are needed on all plants sold in America.

Such labels may be a good idea, the commission staff said, because there are indications that perhaps 40 per cent of the $2 billion worth of plants sold by nurseries every year die before the first year is out.

There also is a question of whether owners should be advised that some plants are poisonous if eaten, it said.

But Mayo J. Thompson, one of the five FTC commissioners, filed a lengthy and vigorous dissent on the investigation, calling it a waste of the agency's time and energy. It's not the FTC's business, he said, to "close the gap left by the school system and the Agriculture Department."

"We are going to tell the country's green-thumbed how often their plants need watering, how much and what kind of fertilizer they need, the kind of soil they require, the amount of sunshine they thrive best on and — one trembles to say it — perhaps the kind and amount of personal 'talking to they would find most pleasant and gratifying," he said.

"All we have to do, the staff says, is to sit down and draft a law saying that every plant vendor in the nation must attach one of these little mini-roadsters to every plant he sells and we will have accomplished, at a stroke, what philosophers and utopians have sought for so long — the final greening of America," he added.

Such "bureaucratically ordered" tags, Thompson said, "will have about, as much usefulness to the American public as a pair of socks on a rooster." Before long, he said, the $1 potted plant will have a "disfigurement label billowing upward like a Spanish galleon under full sail."

Thompson was joined in his dissent by Commission Stephen Nye, but the other three FTC members voted in favor of the investigation.

Care labels are not without precedent at the FTC. The agency some time ago required the clothing industry to sew them in garments.

Worker output takes decline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department reported Thursday that non-farm worker productivity dropped 1.1 per cent during the first three months of 1975, making the current slump the longest on record.

But the figures for the entire private economy were brighter, according to the government statisticians.

The department said overall productivity rose at an annual rate of 0.6 per cent, the first upturn following two consecutive quarters of decline. The fourth quarter, 1974 drop was measured at an annual rate 5.1 per cent.

In the nonfarm sector, output declined 12.6 per cent and manhours dropped 11.6 per cent.

In the manufacturing sector, figures indicated that the decline in both output and manhours were the largest in the post-war period. Manufacturing productivity dropped 7.2 per cent in the first quarter, which occurred because output declined 31.4 per cent and man-hours decline 26.1 per cent.

It was the eighth consecutive quarter that nonfarm productivity has dropped, the longest stretch of decline since the government began measuring output per man-hour in 1947.

"The large declines in output and man-hours may be indicative of a drawing down of inventories, in which sales are not replaced by immediate new production of goods," the Bureau of Labor Statistics said in its quarterly report.

Check shows retail beef prices rise during April

DENVER — Retail beef prices are up from March, according to a monthly survey of supermarkets conducted by the American National Cattlemen's Association.

The April ANCA survey showed the first meaningful upward shift after a six-month decline in beef prices.

The average price of five representative beef cuts on April 10 was $1.34 per pound, compared with a national average of $1.27 in March. Although retail prices increased by an average of 7 cents over March, they still were 29 cents per pound lower than in February, 1974, when the ANCA survey was started.

The recent increase is a result of a reduction in beef supplies, said ANCA President Gordon Van Vleck.

"It's a classic case of supply and demand in a food commodity like beef," he explained. "When production drops and supplies decrease, prices increase."

According to Van Vleck, the current reduction in beef supplies is to some degree seasonal in nature. "In the spring, with the coming of new grass, cattle farmers and ranchers tend to keep more of their animals on grass," he said.

"This means fewer grass-fed cattle going to market. Because of the continuing cost-price squeeze for cattlemen, we also have fewer grain-fed cattle than a year ago. The result is a decrease in total slaughter."

"At the same time, there have been reductions in pork and poultry production. Total red meat supplies have declined substantially in relation to demand."

The latest survey shows the ground beef, average, at 79 cents per pound, a nickel higher than in March; round steak, at $1.47, was a cent higher; sirloin steak rose 12 cents; T-bone steak was up a dime; and chuck roast was 5 cents higher than last month.

Average prices for the five cuts were down from March in three of the cities and higher in the other 15.

Cities with the highest average prices — all $1.40 per pound or more — were New York, Portland, Atlanta, Baltimore, Detroit, Omaha and Washington, D.C. The lowest averages — all $1.20 per pound or less — were in Denver, Cleveland, Houston and Memphis.

Van Vleck said it is difficult to predict the duration of the higher cattle and beef prices with any degree of accuracy.

"Much will depend on the weather and its effect on the availability of grass and on the grain crop and grain prices," he said. "By mid-summer, slaughter of grass-fed cattle may pick up again, and feeding volume also is beginning to increase. However, it could be late summer or fall before total beef production approaches the record high levels of the past winter."

Idaho bank sets marks

BOISE (UPI) — Assets, deposits and earnings hit an all-time first quarter high this year for the Bank of Idaho, Joseph Blanco, chairman of the board, announced Thursday.

Blanco said the bank's assets climbed $25 million over the first quarter of last year to nearly $350 million. Deposits also gained $25 million to a new first quarter high of $318 million. Net operating earnings for the quarter were five per cent greater than the first quarter a year ago.

FB seeks federal budget cuts

PARK RIDGE — Based on recent action by the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation, William J. Kuhfuss, president of the nation's largest general farm organization, Friday called for drastic action by the Congress to reduce the size of the projected federal deficit for fiscal year 1976.

"The future potential for renewed inflation based upon current budget projections demand firm action by the Congress to demonstrate fiscal responsibility and determined inflation control," he said.

Kuhfuss reported that the Executive Committee action calls for the House and Senate to adopt a concurrent resolution mandating that so-called "uncontrollable expenditures in the 1976 administration budget be reduced by a minimum of 5 per cent through basic changes in legislation where necessary. At the same time, appropriations committees of both Houses are being called upon to reduce the controllable programs by 10 per cent."

"If these actions are taken, a saving of $25 billion can be expected," Kuhfuss said. "While this would not eliminate the estimated 1976 deficit, it would reduce it sharply and cut down its potential for fueling runaway inflation."

Among the so-called uncontrollable areas of spending cited by Kuhfuss were basic grant-in-aid programs, welfare programs, and revenue sharing.

"We're asking, for example, that Congress amend basic revenue sharing legislation to reduce its 1976 level by 5 per cent — from $6.3 billion to just under $6 billion," he said.

"We don't think this is too much to ask in this time of economic crisis."

As examples of controllable programs, he cut, Kuhfuss listed certain defense programs, foreign aid, and transportation. In pointing out that a 10 per cent reduction in the federal government's plan for a $10 billion transportation program for the year would save $1 billion, he also observed that his would leave

Idaho is three-fifths agriculture

By charting the significant industries of our state upon Idaho, agriculture would take up as much as 3/5 of it. That's because between 40 and 60 percent of all goods and services produced in the state depend in some way upon agriculture.

Idaho is second only to South Dakota in the percentage of personal income that comes directly from farming. In fact, Idaho is more dependent upon agriculture than any other state in the West.

Even jobs are dependent upon agriculture. About 1 in 2, a full 19% of all jobs in the state depend on agriculture directly. And when you figure the jobs related indirectly, it jumps to 40 to 60%.

As the state's major industry, it's also the major taxpayer. Agriculture accounted for more than $25 million in real estate taxes last year, and millions more in sales taxes and income taxes.

Agriculture is Idaho's single most important industry. As such, it needs the understanding and support of us all. We have to have vital and productive agriculture to keep our economy healthy and productive.

Farm Food Prices...

MARCH 1975

AVERAGE WEEKLY cost of a market basket of farm foods fell in March by 17 cents to $35.02, the Agriculture Department said Friday. The March price was still $1.42 higher than the 1974 average. The decline was due to a slump in farm prices. The basket price is for a hypothetical family of 3.2 persons. (UPI)

Congress may consider bills affecting US meat industry

By BERNARD BRENNER, UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is moving toward consideration, perhaps this summer, of two major pieces of legislation that could have far-ranging impact on the nation's meat industry.

One of the bills, introduced recently by Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, would forbid large meat packers and grocery chains to fatten cattle in feedlots.

Smith contends that packers and chains who feed their own cattle are able, when beef is in surplus, to depress prices for independent cattlemen without passing the savings on to consumers.

Smith said an Agriculture Department study in 1966 found that one out of every 10 animals in cattle feedlots at that time was being fed by "a packer or an interest associated with a packer."

When those cattle were marketed, the study concluded, they were producing "more than 10 times the downward pressure on the live cattle market than the same number of cattle would have if marketed by independent producers," Smith said.

"Since 1966, the percentage of cattle owned and controlled by packers and chain stores has obviously increased and thus the anticompetitive forces would be much greater," Smith added.

Cattle producers, in the past, have been divided on proposals to force packers out of the cattle growing business.

Some, largely in the Midwest, have favored the idea at least in principle, an industry source said. But the big American National Cattlemen's Association has traditionally opposed the idea.

W. C. McMillan, ANCA vice president, said in an interview that leaders of the group probably will review their policy at a meeting soon. But for the present, at least, McMillan added that, "We have a policy that this is a two-way street, and if you prevented packers from feeding cattle you'd also be blocking feeders who wanted to get into the packing business."

The second piece of legislation pending in both the Senate and House would authorize the Agriculture Department to require packers to post "reasonable" bonds for the protection of farmers who sell livestock to the packing plants. The bill was drafted after American Beef Packers, Inc., encountered financial troubles recently and left midwestern farmers unpaid for millions of dollars worth of cattle and hogs.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., chairman of a House subcommittee which has jurisdiction over both bills, said no dates have been set for hearings on either. But Poage said he expected to open consideration of the packer bonding bill, "before long" and might hold hearings on the packer feeding bill afterward.

Smith is also expected to hold hearings on the packer feeding legislation in a small business subcommittee within about two months, an aide said.

European Common Market drops subsidies, averts cheese war

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A "cheese war" between the United States and Europe has been averted by a European Common Market decision to abandon export subsidies on several major cheese types, administration officials said Thursday.

Spokesman for the National Milk Producers Federation, however, said they would not abandon legal proceedings in the cheese case until they see full details of the European action in an expedited cable from Brussels.

Treasury Department officials told a news conference the Common Market has agreed to remove its export subsidies on cheddar and cheddar-type cheeses. The spokesman said Common Market export subsidies on some specialty cheeses, such as Limburger and Roquefort, would be left unchanged.

As a result, the officials said, the U.S. is dropping threats to impose a "countervailing duty" on European cheese.

Countervailing duties are authorized by law to offset export subsidies on products entering the U.S. market. The duties, in effect, lift the selling price of the imported product back to where it was before the exporting country applied its subsidy.

A spokesman for the National Milk Producers Federation said he understands that European subsidies will be continued on a limited list of specialty cheeses, but that the overall subsidy reduction program will "meet the needs of American dairy farmers."

If the published regulations contain expected sections safeguarding dairymen against future renegeing of the subsidies, he said, the NMPP "will be satisfied."

The federation currently has pending in federal district court here an appeal for court action on a lawsuit aimed at forcing the Treasury Department to impose countervailing duties on subsidized cheese.

If final reports show subsidies on the specialty cheeses have been "reduced enough," the suit will probably be dropped, a dairy farmer spokesman said.

"First, we may continue with the case," he added.

Common Market officials in Brussels said the market's executive commission had dropped the cheese subsidies "to avoid a trade confrontation, although it felt the American intention to impose countervailing duties was not justified."

US wheat stocks up, feeds decline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nationwide stocks of wheat on April 1 were up 17 per cent from a year earlier, but stocks of livestock feed grains were down 26 per cent, the Agriculture Department reported Thursday.

The quarterly grain stocks reports estimated wheat in storage on April 1, three months before the end of the 1974-75 marketing year, at 638 million bushels — 17 per cent above a year earlier but the second smallest April 1 stock since 1952.

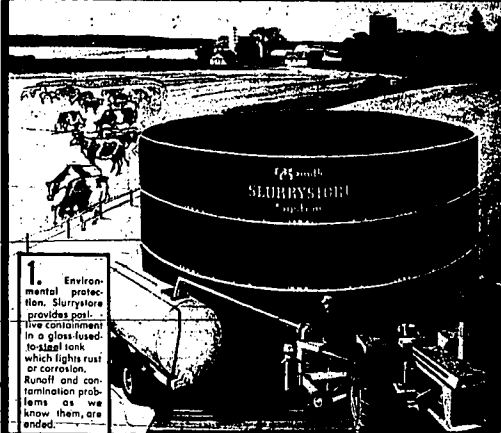

Department economists have predicted wheat stocks remaining when the marketing year ends June 30 will be down about 250 million bushels, unchanged from a year earlier. Experts were scheduled to meet Friday to review the latest stocks report and to decide whether any revisions in their forecasts are called for.

The stocks report said corn supplies on April 1 were 2,200 billion bushels, 23 per cent below a year earlier and the lowest for the date since 1955. Grain sorghum stocks were 209 million bushels, 45 per cent below a year earlier.

A department economist said the stock report on feed grains appeared "about in line" with the earlier expectations of department experts who have predicted corn stocks will be down to about 360 million bushels when the 1974-75 season ends Sept. 30.

The corn and feed grain stocks, however, also will be analyzed by government experts to determine in detail whether previous forecasts

Ten reasons why new Slurrystore is the best way to manage manure.

1. Environmental protection. Slurrystore provides positive containment in a glass-lined tank which lights rust or corrosion. Runoff and contamination problems as we know them, are ended.
2. Economy. Slurrystore, once you have a manure until the ideal application time. Result: You replace high-priced commercial fertilizers and enjoy significant savings each year.
3. High efficiency pumping systems permits chopping solids and thoroughly mixing slurry in all kinds of weather.
4. The Slurrystore operating valve is 12 inches in diameter, made possible through the use of the optional jacking kit adapter which allows the Slurrystore pump to be used like a high pressure hose.
5. Redistributing agitation mixes and blends slurry to keep the right consistency for use in filling any spreader or irrigation systems.
6. The Slurrystore high volume pump can be adapted for use in filling any spreader or tank currently available.
7. Complete pressure clean out of the Slurrystore tank is made possible through the use of the optional jacking kit adapter which allows the Slurrystore pump to be used like a high pressure hose.
8. Storage tank over 15 feet high helps keep odors checked and high, smooth-sided tank reduces danger to children and livestock.
9. Land use. The compact Slurrystore tank does not take up a large piece of valuable farm land as does a lagoon.
10. Reception pit construction designed to meet the requirements of the individual farm operator. Allows the operator to pump slurry into the storage tank when it doesn't interfere with other chores or field work.

Disaster loan policies studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress should begin studying whether federally subsidized disaster relief loans for farmers should be continued in areas where natural disasters strike repeatedly, an administration official said Saturday.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary William Erwin, appearing before a House agriculture subcommittee, said he was not ready to make any recommendations on the subject. But Erwin said a preliminary study of the department's disaster credit programs showed that "apparently there are some areas that tend to repeat over and over."

"This raises questions which need to be studied... whether repeated use of subsidized loans in such areas is an equitable use of tax money," Erwin said.

Erwin showed the subcommittee a number of state-by-state reviews showing that a varying number of counties in all of the states checked had been designated as eligible for disaster aid four or more times between July 1, 1966, and March, 1975. A few scattered counties were shown as having been given disaster aid authority following floods, droughts or similar catastrophes — six times in that period.

Erwin, appearing to testify on a Senate-approved bill liberalizing several features of the current farm disaster aid law, said the administration would support most of the proposed changes provided applicants who are unable to obtain sufficient credit elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms.

Rep. Bog Bergland, D-Minn., the subcommittee chairman, said he also endorsed that "credit elsewhere" test — which is included in the bill — as a step to make sure the 5 per cent interest disaster loans go only to farmers who really need the aid of the low interest rate.

Also, Erwin said, the administration is revising its earlier position to demand that 5 per cent interest loans made to cover disaster losses be limited to $100,000 per applicant. Additional credit to cover disaster losses and to continue farming operations should carry interest rates based on current market rates, he said.

British harvest up

LONDON (CNIS) — Final estimates of the 1974 British agricultural crops place the total grain harvest at a record level of fractionally under 16 million tons.

This was mainly due to a record wheat crop of 5,937 million (4,923 in 1973) tons while barley reaped was 8,939 million tons (8,865) and oats 9,960 million tons (7,863).

In complete contrast the sugar beet crop was low at an estimated 457 million tons, according to the official ministry figures. However, the British Sugar Corporation — the monopoly refiner of British grown beet sugar — says that final production was 4.15 million tons of beet yielding 559,273 long tons of sugar white value.

The previous season yielded 918,000 tons of sugar from 7,310 million tons of beet.

Final estimates of the 1974 British agricultural crops place the total grain harvest at a record level of fractionally under 16 million tons.

Officials conclude vice probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Department officials have formally closed their investigation of alleged prostitution in the agency's headquarters offices, a spokesman said today.

"We found no evidence of prostitution... (the allegations were not substantiated)," L. L. Free, a spokesman for the agency's Office of Investigation, said in response to a query.

The probe began late last year as part of a broader investigation into rumors of after-hours crap-shooting, drug peddling and commercial sex in the huge South Agriculture Building. The building is part of the agency's headquarters complex housing some 10,000 employees.

Washington metropolitan police were called in last fall on some phases of the matter, resulting in the arrest of one Agriculture employe on a charge of prostitution.

Agriculture officials said several employes resigned during early stages of their own preliminary investigation.

Salmon area said not wilderness

Salmon breaks don't qualify

JOEL L. Frykman, consulting forester from Ogden, Utah, maintains Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas do not meet the qualifications of wilderness. He cites numerous aircraft using the area, such as these planes at the Flying B Ranch "strip" left, and Harrah's ranch and its Middle Fork Lodge, above, both are on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River in the Idaho Primitive Area.

L. SALMON — A former U.S. Forest Service official says the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas do not meet the qualifications of wilderness.

Joel L. Frykman, who for many years until his retirement was in charge of timber management in the region 4 office of the forest service in Ogden, said that under the Wilderness Act there is no area today that will qualify for wilderness.

The forest service has proposed establishment of a wilderness area in the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas.

Frykman listed as reasons the areas should both be classified as wilderness:

The numerous airplanes that fly overhead without landing let alone those that land and depart repeatedly from many airstrips in the two primitive areas.

The numerous boats, non-powered on the Middle Fork and both powered and non-powered on the main Salmon River.

The uncounted rural stumps designated as hunter-packer camps, the necessary forest service administration developments, the bridges across the Middle Fork and the main Salmon Rivers, the old campsites both abandoned and recently used.

The necessary trail system, old telephone lines, the marks of men everywhere caused by miners, hunters, campers and the forest service employees; the present and necessary airstrips, farming activities.

"Palatial resorts, such as Harrah's Middle Fork Ranch. All these deny loud and clear to those without closed minds that the whole area does not qualify for administration under the Wilderness Act," Frykman said.

Frykman said he was describing from experience by having made a detailed examination on the ground and study of the Idaho and Salmon River Breaks Primitive Areas.

Frykman, now consulting forester for private industry, said there is no such thing as defect to wilderness as "this is a pure figment of the imagination. There is only unroaded and undeveloped land awaiting development."

Rupert girl honored

MOSCOW — Debbie Schenk, Rupert, has been named University of Idaho's Miss Campus Chest, 1975, nominated by Delta-Delta Delta sorority, the drive's top fund raiser for the fourth straight year.

Miss Schenk is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Schenk, Rupert.

Women hurt

NEW YORK (UPI) — The average woman is almost three times more likely to be injured in an automobile accident than the average man.

according to a recent study. Most frequent injuries are to the ribs or breastbone — and women are more likely to suffer these injuries than men, according to an article in the current issue of The National Enquirer. The article is based on a study of 128 car accidents involving 169 people. The study was conducted by L. M. Patrick, a professor at Wayne State University.

Health hurt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Geologist Michel Siffre, spent half of 1972 buried alone in Midnight Cave, near Del Rio, Texas, in order to study the effects of prolonged isolation from the rhythm of the earth's days and nights. Now he says his health was impaired during his ordeal and the ill effects continue.

Parking problem reaching crisis in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — Parking problems are reaching crisis proportions in the state's Capitol Mall and new and planned construction there is going to make it even worse.

Construction of one new office building in the mall has eliminated 75 parking spaces and, when the structure is completed, will create the need for 600 to 700 more, state officials said.

He pointed to the 200 spaces that will be lost by summer — at a time when replacements virtually are unavailable in downtown Boise — and urged state employees to "share" car pools, ride, take bus, ride bicycles or, if feasible, walk to work. He rides a bike.

Some studying the parking problem have suggested the city's parking ordinance might help. This requires a certain number of parking spaces for new office or business buildings — based on a formula involving square feet and type of business.

They said this possibly could be used to force the legislature to appropriate funds for additional parking stalls.

Chilberg reminded state employees that the city now has computerized car pooling whereby workers can "match up" with neighbors working in similar areas of town.

"The state is participating with other employers in the area in the computerized car pooling service," he said. "It's not only the right thing to do in the sense of conserving energy and helping the nation through the fuel shortage — for us it's ever more demanded by the shortage of parking in the Capitol Mall area."

Fund cut said disaster

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cuts proposed by President Ford in the budget for dealing with alcoholism represent a human disaster, the administration's top alcohol abuse official told Congress.

The cuts would result in 100,000 fewer alcoholics and drunk drivers receiving subsidized community services next year, said Dr. Morris Chafetz, director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

help industrial workers with drinking problems.

"The impact from a humanistic point of view, and I realize there are economic considerations, would be disastrous," Chafetz told Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

Bayh said he found Chafetz's statistics on drinking children and teenagers "particularly alarming."

of a 70 percent recovery rate in 12 months among drunks receiving community services.

Chafetz said one government study shows 2 per cent of all seventh-grade children and 14 per cent of senior boys in high school get drunk once a week. While most young people don't abuse alcohol, "what does alarm us is that 1.13 million of these youngsters show evidence of serious alcohol abuse," he said.

For community alcoholism programs, Ford's budget proposes a $25.8 million reduction from the $116.9 million being spent this year.

Chafetz said he has evidence

Gem economist sees tax rebate stimulation

By Bill Lewis, Moscow Freshman Journalism Major

MOSCOW — The tax rebate earned by Congress and signed into law by President Ford last month will stimulate the economy by putting dollars where they are needed most, according to a University of Idaho economist.

Dr. Max Fletcher, professor of economics, said the rebates will provide substantial help to persons with low incomes and added that President Ford's warnings about the dangers of resultant budget deficits aren't as serious as they might sound. Fletcher said he is not too worried about the projected $60 billion deficit for fiscal 1976 because, in relative terms, the deficit is smaller than those of the Great Depression and amounts to a smaller percentage of the gross national product than it did in 1933. He said because the GNP is the most reliable source of the country's debt-paying ability, the smaller debt percentage represents a smaller relative deficit.

Fletcher praised Congress for passing the $22.8 billion rebate, almost twice what Ford asked for. According to Fletcher, Ford's proposal was just a "drop in the bucket" and Congress deserves the real credit for approving the rebate.

Although the rebates will stimulate the economy, Fletcher said it is too early to tell if the recession will be "bottom out" and things will begin to improve by the end of the year. There are some hopeful signs, he said, but it is "wistful thinking" to term the signs conclusive evidence that the recession is ending.

The rebates will help lower income individuals, according to Fletcher, but other factors — such as high interest rates maintained by the Federal Reserve Board — restrict their buying power. The board's restrictive lending policies have contributed to the recent decline in the housing industry, Fletcher said, and as a result no housing is available for those in lower tax brackets. Fletcher said the rebate program is a complicated addition to an already complicated tax system and said Congress should review the system with an eye toward eliminating loopholes and making taxation more uniform.

But, he said, the newly-passed laws add to the present confusion and "make more work for lawyers and accountants."

No candidates yet in Rupert

RUPERT — With only a week left to file a candidate petition for the upcoming Minidoka school board election, there are no candidates.

Hopefully, voters in Minidoka zone 5 will have an opportunity to elect a new trustee May 20. But school officials say so far only one nominating petition has been picked up.

Jo Hillis, Norland, said she picked up the petition for a potential candidate but he has since decided against running.

Zone 5 incumbent, Sherril Stallings, after serving for six years, said he does not intend to seek a third term.

"Candidates" have just one week — until May 2 — to file a petition.

While the school board trustees election is limited to voters in zone 5, the entire school district will be voting on a 10-mill over-ride levy.

If approved, the levy will raise $275,000 for an expanded vocational education program.

Vehicle workshops begin in Hailey

TWIN FALLS — Workshop sessions covering motor vehicle registrations this week in Magic Valley will begin Monday in Hailey.

The workshops are for county assessors and their deputies and for others involved in motor vehicle registration, such as auto agencies and financing institutions.

The first session will be in Hailey beginning at 1 p.m. Monday in the National Guard Armory. Sessions will be held in Twin Falls on Tuesday and Wednesday also in the national guard armory beginning at 8 a.m. and again at 1 p.m.

Final sessions will be in the Burley National Guard Armory Thursday at 8 a.m. and again at 1 p.m.

A story in the Thursday's Times-News incorrectly stated the Twin Falls workshop would be Monday and in Burley on Wednesday.

Top scholar

JEROME — Jon Adamson has been honored by national Intergoliate Knights service fraternity as one of the outstanding scholars in America.

Adamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Adamson, Jerome, received the award on the basis of his school and community service, grade average and fraternal leadership.

A business major, Adamson plans to attend law school after graduating from Boise State University which he now attends.

"I don't know why, unless money is looser," making loans for housing construction easier to obtain, Howard said.

Inflation accounts for some of the 1975 increase. From March 73 to March 1975, when building permit valuations went up 29 per cent, the cost of living rose 20.7 per cent. After adjusting for the cost of living, which includes building materials costs, permit valuations rose only 8.3 per cent from March 1973 to March '75.

From March '74 to March '75, the cost of living rose 10.3 per cent, making the actual increase in building permit valuations 47.7 per cent rather than 58 per cent.

Trustee zones

TRUSTEES representing zones 2 and 5 in the Twin Falls School District will be chosen in the school board election May 20. Voting will be restricted to residents of the two zones: Richard Sayers, the current zone 2 trustee, has announced he will not seek re-election. Dr. Howard Honk, the zone 5 trustee, said he will run for the post again.

First quarter building permits in TF show hike

TWIN FALLS — Building permits bought in the city during January, February and March represent more construction dollars than ever estimated since 1970.

Total estimated construction for the first three months of the year was $1,959,492, or 29 per cent higher than the previous big first quarter of 1973, when building construction was estimated at $1,517,792, according to records filed with the city building inspector.

The 1975 amount was 58 per cent higher than in 1974, which hit a low at $821,040.

About $600,000 worth of construction for multiple family buildings will be undertaken, judging from building permits purchased for March, compared to $237,000 worth represented by permits issued last March.

The value of commercial building permits also increased this March from $211,500 worth this month compared to $22,553 in March 1974 but down from $34,000 in March 1972, according to city building inspector Darrell Howard. Alterations on commercial buildings were on the rise, with $89,000 worth planned for March, $21,000 in March last year and $26,250 in March 1973.

Builders bought only six permits for single family houses this March compared to 10 last March. Permits for residential alterations were also down, from $23,600 last March to only $5,900 this March.

What caused the quarterly increase is not clear.

"I don't know why, unless money is looser," making loans for housing construction easier to obtain, Howard said.

Inflation accounts for some of the 1975 increase. From March 73 to March 1975, when building permit valuations went up 29 per cent, the cost of living rose 20.7 per cent. After adjusting for the cost of living, which includes building materials costs, permit valuations rose only 8.3 per cent from March 1973 to March '75.

No car pool for Andrus

BOISE (UPI) — Although he wants to see State employees form car pools, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus draws the line at his own door.

Andrus' personal views on the matter surfaced today in an exchange of correspondence between him and Deputy Attorney General Rudy Barchas.

Referring to a recent news story about Andrus' request for employees to form car pools, Barchas wrote the governor: "I was delighted to read that you advocated the forming of car pools by state employees to alleviate congestion at the Capitol Mall."

"My residence is temporarily at the corner of Protest and Boise Avenues. What time can I expect you to pick me up? I will, of course, provide transportation on alternate weeks, if we can use your parking spot."

Andrus said he was "extremely pleased" to receive Barchas' letter. "I regret, however, that I will be unable to accept your generous offer because of two reasons."

"Secondly," Andrus replied, "I have taken to riding my motorbike and I only have one helmet."

That's the average residential use of Idaho Power customers. We made phone calls to other companies to ask what the same use would cost for residential customers in their service areas, including fuel adjustment charges, as of January 31, 1975.

How much would it cost if you lived in:

- PHOENIX? $36.63
- ATLANTIC CITY? $48.05
- BOSTON? $43.37
- CHICAGO? $35.75
- DENVER? $30.92
- KANSAS CITY? $26.16
- NEW YORK CITY? $74.79
- SANTA BARBARA? $41.33

Soon Idaho Power Company will be requesting a rate increase. Even so, your rate still will be far less than it would be in many other places.

Income tax credit offered on insulation

RONALD Conner, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Conner, Twin Falls, is one of the lucky children who has been helped by the Shriner's Hospital. Ronald came home this winter from the hospital with braces which he will be able to discard in the future. He is shown with his father and Vic Graybeal, Shrine member who sponsored him.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With an eye to saving some home heating and cooling fuel, the House Ways and Means Committee has settled on a way to reward people who insulate their homes.

The committee voted Thursday to offer an income tax credit to cover part of the costs of insulating weatherstripping and the like that people add to their homes to save on their heating and air-conditioning.

The formula adopted, at least tentatively, by the committee, would provide a 30 per cent tax credit on the cost, up to about a $150 credit. The offer runs out at the end of 1977.

The committee staff estimated that will save about 200,000 barrels of oil a day by the end of its three-year run and will reduce tax revenues by approximately $800 million.

The committee will take up the energy tax bill again Monday, having left the thorniest issues for last: The gasoline tax, the auto fuel efficiency tax and the details of the import quota system the committee has discussed so far in broad outline.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said he hopes for some accommodation between his committee and the House Commerce Committee on how to approach the matter of fuel efficiency.

The bill before his committee would tax cars on the basis of how many miles a gallon they get.

Ullman said that idea may be difficult to get past Congress, and a subcommittee of the Commerce Committee is considering imposing instead some mandatory fuel standards. Ullman said there are signs the auto industry would go for a tax on the weight of cars rather than on fuel efficiency.

After some angry debate on the topic Thursday, the committee but the whole matter off to next week.

In keeping with the sensitivity of the committee's work, it has reversed itself a few times in votes on the energy tax bill and is less than a week away from what it considers a deadline.

President Ford has said he will impose a new tariff increase on imported oil May 1 as a way to discourage fuel use by making it more expensive.

The bill before Ullman's committee was drafted as an alternative to the Ford plan.

Antique show slated May 3, 4

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ronald Conner, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Conner, wears braces now but the time will come when he will be able to walk without them.

Ronald is included among the fortunate children who are helped each year by the Shrine Club who maintain a children's hospital where children receive treatment entirely without cost.

Ronald was born with cerebral palsy which left the muscles in his legs affected. He entered the Shriner's Hospital, Salt-Lake City, last October and returned home in January of this year after an operation involving the muscles in his legs.

He may have to undergo further surgery sometime in the future but doctors believe by the time he is 16 or 18 years of age, he will be able to walk perfectly without any kind of help. The operation which he had this winter is 99 per cent perfect, according to doctors at the hospital.

Ronald has been nominated for the 1976 Easter Seal Child. He attends classes at the Child Development Center and will be enrolled in kindergarten this fall. Ronald has a sister, Lisa, who is 2½.

Vic Graybeal, Shriner, sponsored the little boy entering the hospital for his first examination and tests. The doctor's diagnosis was that he stood a very good chance of being completely cured.

One method by which the Shrine-Club raises money for their hospitals is by its annual antique show which is scheduled for May 3 and 4 at the Filer fairgrounds. All proceeds will go to Shriner charities and hospitals. The show has been sponsored by the Twin Falls group for the last six years and this is the fourth year it will be at the fairgrounds.

More than 70 antique dealers from Idaho and surrounding states are expected to be on hand for the show and sale. This year's show should have the best variety ever, according to Tom Newbury, show chairman. Dealers may still make reservations for space by contacting Newbury or William Moran.

The Tom Parks Pavilion where the show will be held will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday. Dealers will set up their displays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday.

Included in the show will be all kinds of antiques, guns, coins, bottles and collectibles.

An extra attraction on Sunday will be Horsemass Carriage Club cars which will be on display on the grounds.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 27, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider how you want to expand activities, whom you would like to be allied with, and the principles under which you would like to operate in the future. Then tonight contact those able to help, telling your plans.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Look into new projects, study newspaper for ideas, good opportunities for the future. Contact key persons who can help.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your intuitive faculties since they are most accurate. You can now make your relationship with mate truly excellent.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with partners today and accomplish a good deal over the tetraps. Show discrimination in accepting new friends into your life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) There are many duties for you to perform now, so get at them to clear the deck for more important activities later.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Prepare early for amusements tonight. Study philosophies and a creative idea that is bound to bring more success in future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Lounge around at your ease and restore lagging energies for the busy week ahead. Fine results come from pleasurable entertaining in p.m.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Attend lectures, etc., for spiritual uplift, then mix with good friends and relatives. Enjoy hobbies and correspondence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact successful persons and learn how to make your own life more prosperous. Ask for advice. Plan better material order.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study what your true aims are, then get wheels rolling in the right direction later in day. Accept a job invitation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Converse at length with experts from whom you want advice, information. The p.m. then becomes happy romantically.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make fine acquaintances who can be helpful and enjoyable. Visit with old friends, relatives. Dress carefully early.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Joining with others early is the best way to make progress now. Stop laboring under some unnecessary pleasures. Plan week's activities.

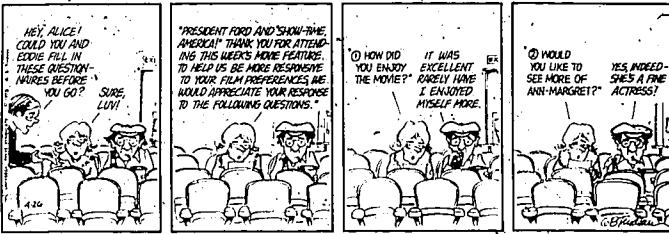

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be full of interesting ideas and can express them to others well, so provide a good education, otherwise the great promise here will be lessened. A fine career in this chart, especially in foreign lands and in outlets of real magnitude. Add foreign tongues to the curricula early. Sports are good but not extraordinary. Religion in moderation.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Do numerous psychiatrists carry on romantic activities with their lady patients? So inquires a feminine client. That happens, certainly. Still, fewer psychiatrists than general practitioners do so, according to a study at the University of California School of Medicine. The obstetricians, gynecologists likewise are said to be more active in this field of physical romance than are the psychiatrists.

Q. "SAYS here an Iranian is not an Arab. Then what is an Arab?"

A. Anybody whose mother tongue is Arabic. The Iranian speaks Persian.

HAIR

The wig makers say they like to work with the human hair that comes from India and Indonesia, but have a tough time with the hair from Japan. European hair is good, but not as good as the hair from Southeastern Asia. Besides, there's not enough of it.

A NEW ROMANTIC wrinkle has sprung up in Belgium. Recording studios there invite lovers to cut special records of passionate poetry and even matrimonial proposals which are to be sent to the objects of their affections. What's intriguing about it all is the records are made with a peculiar plastic which deteriorates so those hot messages no longer can be heard a year later.

CATS

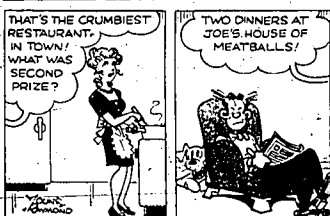

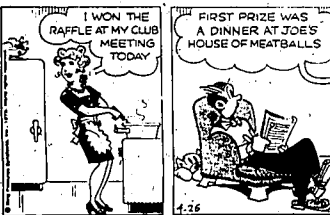

What, you can't remember the names of President John F. Kennedy's two cats? Tom and Kitten. Franklin D. Roosevelt's two cats were Tom Quartz and Slippers. Calvin Coolidge's two cats were Tiger and Blackie. I don't remember the names of Abraham Lincoln's cats, and neither did Abraham Lincoln. They were numerous.

YOU SAY your color TV set only cost you $500? Don't count on that. According to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the set will also cost you $350 in repairs plus $120 worth of electricity. Should be noted, too, that your $400 refrigerator can be expected to tally up another $65 in repairs plus more than $600 for power.

SCHOLARS who study the sky say they now know that outer space contains astronomical quantities of ethyl alcohol, enough of same to put the kint into billions- and billions of fifths of whiskey. Don't know that it's needed for liquor, but if it could be captured, wouldn't it make a dandy source of energy for engines?

700 AND UP	300	700	1100

Here's the best news since you found out you were getting an income tax refund in the first place. Because as it says in the big type above, we will match your tax refund up to $1100 when you buy a new Ford from us. It's like getting two checks, instead of one. Just bring in your tax refund check (or other proof of a refund), pick out the car you want, and we'll match it up to $1100 off the sticker price. The Tax Matching Guide above will show you just how much you'll get.

As you see, the amount varies depending on (1) how big your tax refund is, and (2) which car you buy. Simple and straightforward. So if you were thinking about what a nice down payment your income tax refund check would make on a new car, just think how much nicer a down payment it will make when we match it up to $1100 off the sticker price. Don't wait too long. Opportunity — and offers to match your income tax refund up to $1100 knock but once.

DON'T FORGET ABOUT YOUR USED CAR TRADE-IN. USED CAR VALUES HAVE NEVER BEEN HIGHER!!

Valley comment

Question: What do you think of having Amtrak rail passenger service from Portland through Boise and Shoshone to Ogden? Would you use it?

Jim Guest, Jerome:
I think it's a good idea. I believe it's a situation where a lot of people don't have funds for the airplane. Economically, maybe it's a better way to go.

Mrs. Roselee Reagan, Fairfield:
I think it would give people more of a choice of the kind of transportation they want. I'd use it if it went to Seattle.

Myrtle Hubbard, Twin Falls:
I think it would be nice. It's needed from Pocatello to Malad, too ... I used to ride the Portland Rose to Denver.

Jamie Graham, Twin Falls:
Amtrak would be great. I'm from back east (Vermont) and I used it back there. Definitely, I would use it. It's cheap.

Kathy Dwyer, Twin Falls:
I think it would be a good thing. Possibly.

Fred Gettelman, Hagerman:
It's a super idea. Absolutely. I would undoubtedly use it, especially getting to the coast.

Mark Jacobson, Rupert:
I think it's a really good idea. It's a lot cheaper to travel. Yes.

Julie Schwarz, Hazelton:
I think it would be a good idea. A lot of people want to go up to Portland.

Each one

EVERY building in the northern California town of Eureka—8,000 in all—has been photographed in an unusual historical project by Milton Phegley, 22, a student at Humboldt State University. He volunteered when the Local Heritage Society announced plans for an architectural survey of the city. (UPI)

Official serves gay community

By CARRICK LEAVITT
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Jo Daly, 29, may be the first official anywhere on a government payroll whose job is designed to serve members of the gay community.

Assisting San Francisco's estimated 100,000 homosexual men and women seeking "a fair deal from employers, landlords and police" is a perplexing vocation, she says.

Ms. Daly started work March 5 on her $7,400-per-year job as a member of the city's Human Rights Commission. Wearing faded jeans, a blue sweater and bright blue suede coat with silver snaps, she sat in her downtown fifth-floor office, answering the telephone and sipping black coffee.

Overhead, a poster quoting Women's Liberation Movement leader Gloria Steinem said: "There is no such thing as masculinity or femininity; but in fact, there is humanity first."

At 5-foot-4 and 140 pounds, Ms. Daly is a little plumpish. But her brown eyes dance with excitement as she sprints through Human Rights Commission reports and the surveys beginning to accumulate on her desk.

"Employment is the biggest area that can be documented," she said. "We have to identify the people and the employer. I'm just beginning a big program at the telephone company. They have a policy against gay people."

"Homosexuals do work at the telephone company," she said, but "they must remain closeted. I've had three complaints today from workers there who are gay."

"What can she do?" "People have fears that we're always trying to convert others into a gay lifestyle," she said. "There's no need to worry. After all, I grew up in a heterosexual environment, and it didn't rub off on me."

Student snaps entire town

EUREKA, Calif. (UPI) — Every single building in Northern California's city—8,000 of them—has been photographed in an unusual historical project by a young college student.

Milton Phegley, 22, a student at Humboldt State University, trudged throughout the city on foot during the past year and a half with his 35-millimeter camera and rolls of film. After many more hours in the darkness, assisted by his brother, Riek, he has completed the unique pictorial history of Eureka's architecture.

The local Heritage Society is preparing data to go with each of the photographs.

"Most of the people in a single-family structure knew a little history of the building," says Phegley. "They knew when it was built and some of the people who had lived there."

The photographer said he was chased by only a few dogs, and occasionally a nervous resident thought he was from the assessor's office and that "we wanted to raise their taxes."

Phegley volunteered for the massive photographing project when he read about the local Heritage Society's plan for an architectural survey of the city.

Why the whole town instead of just the "significant" buildings?

"The reason the decision was made to photograph the entire city is because we weren't the ones to say what was significant and what wasn't—a subjective and evaluative type decision," Phegley said.

The Heritage Society will have experts examine the photographs to make any evaluations about buildings that perhaps ought to be preserved as historically important.

"I know where there are some very interesting architectural types that, according to all the books on architecture, don't belong in Northern California," says Phegley. "In comparison to other cities, this means that Eureka is unique in its mixture of architectural styles. This was because the city wasn't built up in large tracts. There was scattered building throughout the city over a continuous period of time."

"The survey is an unprecedented historical document," said Ted Loring, of the Heritage Society. "Can you imagine, what a sociologist or anthropologist interested in architectural styles and conditions would learn from this 50 years hence?" from this 50 years hence?"

Defective system

DALLAS (UPI) — The Federal Executive Board has ordered the Santa Fe Federal Building vacated because of unidentified antigens spread by the building's air-conditioning unit.

COLUMBUS could hardly have guessed what he was starting when he set sail for what he thought was the Far East... and discovered a New World, and adventure we remember this month.

Over the centuries the Spanish influence and heritage has waxed and waned, through never entirely leaving the scene. Right now it is more dominant than ever in one special area: home interiors and decor. Mediterranean furnishings, from rich fabrics to elaborately carved woods and bold colors, are among today's most popular.

That influence is very much part of the carpet scene. There are beautiful Spanish-inspired prints, for instance, suggesting the artistry of Spanish tiles.

There are textures and colors especially designed to blend beautifully with those Mediterranean style furnishings.

Even in luxury shags you'll find patterns reminiscent of Moorish tiles, part of the big new trend toward patterned shag that features everything from waves to plaids to stripes in captivating color mixes.

Discover your New World of carpets in our showroom... where quality, service and value add together. In everything from space-dyed nylon to exciting new prints and patterns, we put it all together.

Cat crunchies may be trouble

By LINDA MERRY, D.V.M.
Question: Is it true that crunchies cause bladder trouble in tom cats? I know of altered females who nibble on dry food every day and seem to have no bladder problems. I would appreciate your answer in your column.

Answer: Cat crunchies don't cause bladder trouble but they may add to it. Bladder trouble begins with a capital T for male cats. It's Trouble that may kill them, give them unfiled Torture, and recur Time after Time.

pet

The Trouble starts in the bladder with infection (usually viral, sometimes bacterial) and formation of small stones. Unfortunately neither the trouble nor stones stay in the bladder. They are passed along with the urine into the urethra where they often lodge, pack up and obstruct urination. Stones don't belong only to male cats. Female cats probably have as many bladder stones as males but no one realizes it. The males' urethra is much smaller than the females. Just that anatomic distinction makes the difference between a rolling stone and one that's stuck.

Prevalence of this disease is reported to be between 3 and 10 per cent in male cats. No one knows the prevalence for females since a rolling stone causes few problems and gathers no statistics.

The cat is basically a desert animal who takes most of his water from his food. Cats that eat dry foods ingest less water and produce more concentrated urine than those on moist diets. Formation of crystals and cellular debris is more likely to occur in concentrated urine. There you have the whole theory behind cutting down dry food for cats with urolithiasis (bladder stones).

It's a good idea for owners of male kittens to bear that in mind when they pick a diet. Cats develop definite food preferences very early and once they make up their minds they can be unshakable.

It's wise to give them some moist foods as well as crunchies at a tender age. Then if a problem arises they can be shifted to a moist diet. For the cat who refuses anything that doesn't crunch, then dry food should be moistened with water.

Question: I am writing you this line to see if you have a suggestion for my problem. I have a black and white, 3-year-old cat. He jumps to the kitchen window sill outside. I just can't keep it clean. He jumped the other day and hit the glass with his nose. It cracked a little now and now it's up to the top. It costs about $9 or $10 so maybe you will tell me what to do? New Mexico.

Answer: Get the window replaced. Then anchor either a wooden or wrought iron grill over it — flush with the outer window sill. That should look authentic in your part of the country and effectively "screen" nosediving pussy cats.

If you have a question about your pet, send it to the Merry Pet in Care of the Times-News.

Brown lends a mouth

TWIN FALLS — Every now and then a "special" dog or cat shows up at the Twin Falls County Humane Society Shelter.

Shelter workers say "Brown" is such a dog. She was found abandoned in the county several weeks ago, was half starved and about to deliver nine puppies.

Homes were found for most of the puppies, but the golden Labrador herself is still looking for a new owner.

In the meantime, she helps out around the shelter. Brown knows when it's time to feed the other dogs and goes into the storage closet to get the feed pail. She carries it from dog run to dog run while the workers feed the animals, and then puts it away.

Shelter workers believe she is a good hunting dog and say she does a number of tricks. If given a chance she goes fishing in Roan Creek behind the shelter but always returns.

Lunacy sparks cartoons

By ANDREW TULLY III
NEW YORK (UPI) — If the comic strip, Li'l Abner is political, it's an accident. Al Capp says. But political, or not, the cartoonist insists it is art.

"All I'm trying to do is raise a laugh," said Capp, who was in town for an exhibit of his cartoon at the New York Cultural Center. "And politics has provided me with a lot of laughs."

"The job of the cartoonist is to find lunacy and then expose it," he said.

"But there's no mission. It's just what you do," he said, his mouth curling in the smile that is so familiar on the faces of Dogpatch.

"If you're a cabinet maker," Capp said, "you make cabinets. If you're a satirist, you make fun of people. Praising the laugh is the mission."

"A laugh usually comes from someone else's problems," Capp said, "but not real problems."

There are a lot of shootings in my strips; and everybody comes out full of holes and bandages. But nobody's really hurt.

"We get comfort from that," he said, "because this sort of situation is impossible. But when you turn on the TV and see Vietnam on the news — that's real. That can't happen because it is happening. Nobody could laugh about that."

Capp's works on display at the cultural center are paintings on canvas he has done based on the familiar citizens of Dogpatch.

Woods flavor winter fireplaces

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

FIREPLACE WOOD: It's aife to say more people burned fireplaces this year than ever before.

Some readers have written to tell us their fireplace has cut their fuel bill in half and if fuel keeps going up they plan to use their fireplaces even more.

Many ask if fireplace wood brings in termites or wood-boring beetles into your home. We doubt very much if any house has been infested with termites, carpenter ants, powder-post beetle or the old-house borer (all pests of lumber) from fireplace wood.

Infestation is possible but the risk of introducing a serious pest in fireplace wood is limited. So start saving wood for next year.

Here's a poem which describes the burning qualities of wood:

Beechwood fires are bright and clear
If the logs are kept a year

Chestnut's only good, they say,
If for long it's laid away

Birch and fir logs burn too fast, blaze up bright and not last.

Elm wood burns like a churchyard mold,
Even the very flames are cold.

Poplar gives a bitter smoke, fills your eyes and makes you choke.

Apple wood will scent your room with an incense like perfume.

Oak and Maples, if dry and old,
— keep away the winter cold.

But ash wood wet and ash wood dry
A king shall warm his slippers by.

green thumb

Green Thumb note: Any seed will burn and give off heat, but if you have a choice select those mentioned in the poem. And don't worry about being plagued with termites or borers. A big fuel bill can take a bigger bite out of your wallet.

"SEEDLESS TOMATOES"

A reader asks for the names of seedless tomatoes because tomato seeds "give her appendicitis." The human body is a marvelous machine and it's doubtful if many people ever got appendicitis from eating tomatoes. We'd like to hear from doctors on this.

Some tomatoes are more seedy than others. Those with the fewest seeds include the oxheart, a large pink tomato, solid thick and firm; Ponderosa is another one with few seeds. Beefsteak also has less seeds than others.

Most of these tomatoes are mild. There's no such thing as a seedless tomato.

Most of these tomatoes are mild. There's no such thing as a seedless tomato. If any gardener has raised a tomato with few seeds, will please write and tell us the name of the variety? Meanwhile, please do not worry about getting appendicitis from eating tomatoes.

HANGING BASKET CARE

If you kept your hanging basket over for the winter, take a look at it and see if it needs rejuvenating. Pull out any dead or sickly plant, remove old flowers, seed pods and dead material which could encourage insects and disease.

If plants are spindly, cut them back and if the soil has been used more than one year, I'd mix up a batch, using equal parts of sand, peat moss and loam (loam is ordinary garden soil).

For an 8 to 10 inch diameter pot, use two plants in the center and three or four trailing plants on the outside. Drainage is important, so put small pebbles, pieces of broken pots or ground charcoal in the bottom to keep soil from becoming waterlogged.

Plants for sun — try Ageratum, asparagus fern, cherry tomato, coleus, dianthus, dusty miller, dwarf marigold, english ivy, fuchsia, geranium, impatiens, ivy geranium, jantana, morning glory, nasturtium, petunia, portulaca, salvia, shrimp plant, sweet potato, verbena and wax begonia.

Plants for shade — arbutus plant, asparagus fern, boston fern, Browallia, caladium, creeping fig, english ivy, grape ivy, impatiens, kangaroo vine, lobelia, pansy, pepper, philodendron, pick-a-back, plectranthus, pothos, tradescantia, tuberous begonia and zebra plant.

Incidentally, string beans make a fine hanging basket plant. Right now we're eating fresh string beans from our own hanging baskets.

POLKA DOT PLANT:

One of the best terrarium plants you can grow is the Hypoestes or polka dot plant or "freckle-face" plant. The word's part of growing this plant is pronouncing the name. We pronounce it phonetically, HI-poh-ess-ees.

Plant tends to get a bit spindly, so frequent pinching is needed to make it compact. Grown in light, the spots take on a deeper color and the entire leaf surface will be red. If grown in too much shade, "freckle-face" will lose its freckles.

Best soil mixture is one part each of sand, peat and loam; keep soil evenly moist. You can start new plants from seed, or cuttings stuck in sand or perlite. Avoid overwatering.

Sometimes the plants die back to soil surface, not due to disease. If yours does, keep soil barely moist (not soaking wet) until new growth begins.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D.F. of Twin Falls: "Every year we plant some lettuce in the garden, but most of it gets so bitter taste. Does that mean something is lacking in the soil?"

The reason the lettuce becomes bitter is because of slow growth. It needs lots of water, especially during the dry days. Lettuce is a cool weather plant and should be planted early for best performance and flavor.

As warm weather gets hotter and days become longer, growth is apt to slow down and flavor may change too. Also, some varieties are apt to become more bitter than others in warm weather.

For our money, one of the best lettuces you can get is an intermediate form between a head lettuce and the leafy lettuce. These are called semi-heading or butterhead type, and the one we've grown ever since it came out is Buttercrunch.

We like it because it stands up better in hot weather without becoming bitter, or without going to seed. Its leaves are buttery and crunchy, easy to wash.

Another good one is Summer Bibb, an improvement on the old Bibb lettuce. The old Bibb used to go to seed and become bitter, but the new Summer Bibb stands the heat better.

Like the Buttercrunch, it forms compact heads or dense clusters of leaves with the hearts blanching to a creamy white. We start our lettuce seedlings indoors and transplant them out as soon as the weather permits.

D.F. of Burley: "We have a rhubarb patch that produces nothing but spindly stalks. Also, something makes holes in the stems and we can't figure out what does it."

Spindly stems are usually a sign that the plants need dividing. I'd get out the spade and do the job in early spring. Spindly stalks also can be attributed to a lack of feeding. Where the leaves and stalks are eaten the trouble can be attributed to humpbacked insect called the Curculio (pronounced Kerr-Q-Loe-Oh). It stings the stalks and leaves, depositing eggs, and making a mess.

CONTROL: Cut leaves and stems with rotenone in May before the pest comes along.

Anyone who doesn't have a rhubarb patch should consider setting one out now. Valentine is a good red type, as is Canada Red. Stalks are red all the way through and what color sauce they make. Perhaps your neighbor has a patch that needs dividing. He'll be glad to share it with you.

Man offers thousands for woman to bear child

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)

An unidentified man is offering $10,000 to any English or Northwestern European woman who will bear a child for him through artificial insemination. "When I found out my wife couldn't have children, I felt like killing myself," said the man, who placed a want ad in nine California newspapers.

"I don't want to meet the woman face to face, much less have sexual relations with her," he said.

The man, who wants to remain anonymous, said the prospective mother of his child would have to be in good health, be of average intelligence, and "shouldn't have any serious inherited defects in the family."

The would-be father said he is a member of Mensa, an organization of persons with IQs in the genius range. He is also described as a Sunday school teacher and lay leader of his church.

He said he went to Denmark and Sweden in search of a woman willing to have the baby for him, but was unsuccessful. A family doctor recommended he may have some luck finding a mother for hire on the West Coast.

Glacier disclosed

IDAHO'S only glacier (see enclosed area) is located just below the peak of Mt. Borah. A Boise State University student discovered the glacier last September and released his findings April 19 at the Idaho Academy of Science meeting. (Bruce Otto photo).

She'd only be worth 4 million

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Hey, television is putting together a six-million-dollar woman to go with the six-million-dollar man," I said to my husband.

"If she does windows and floors, it's a real bargain," he said.

"What kind of a chauvinist crack is that?"
 "No crack. I just meant six million dollars is a rather conservative figure. Face it, I built you from scratch. The day after our wedding you fell apart like a television set the day after the warranty runs out."

"Are you suggesting you have put six million dollars into me?"

At Wit's End

"All I know is we were married in August. In September, you had your tonsils out, a kidney infection, and a case of the mumps."

"What control did I have over the mumps?"
 "Why didn't you get them when you were a little kid like everyone else?"

"Because we were poor!"
 "In October, it was your feet. You had bunions and corns removed and an operation on your small toe. I'll never know how you got down the aisle!"

"I was pushed!" I said bitterly.
 "In November, your teeth began to deteriorate, followed by that mysterious rash on your chest."

"Are you finished?"
 "I have just begun. In December it was an iron deficiency and back problems. The rest of that first year runs together but I know your eyes went in the spring and you graced your thumb with the green pepper and you had a plantar wart removed from your foot before the year was up."

"The way I look at it," I said, "is you built yourself a first-class machine. I run on black coffee and peanut butter, which is less than four cents a mile, do not overheat in the summer, start easily in the winter, haven't started using a lot of oil yet, have ample trunk space, a fairly good paint job, take you where you want to go, get you there on time, have withstood the wear and tear of children, don't take up a lot of parking space, and am still attractive enough to trade."

He didn't say anything for a minute, then he patted me on my trunk, smiled and said, "Forget it! Even with inflation, the most I could get for you on a trade would be four million."

Student discovers first real glacier in Idaho

By LARRY BURKE

Boise State News Bureau
BOISE—Hiking and climbing have become so popular in the past few years that it might seem like nothing in the Idaho outdoors has gone undiscovered.

But Boise State University geology student Bruce Otto has proven that there are indeed new things to find because last September while hiking on Mt. Borah in central Idaho he discovered what is now believed to be the Gem State's first and only bona fide glacier.

He documented his findings in a carefully prepared research paper delivered to the Idaho Academy of Science at its April 19 meeting at the College of Idaho in Caldwell.

Otto says the glacier is located at the 11,000 foot level on the northern side of Idaho's highest peak. His preliminary studies indicate that the exposed portion is 320 yards long and 700 feet wide. He estimates its depth to be between 150 and 250 feet. It is pushing a 200 foot high moraine, he says.

He has taken his share of kidding from his back packer friends who claim they see glaciers all the time when they go into Idaho's wilderness areas. But Otto is sure his discovery is no routine snowfield and he has the backing of the scientific community to prove it.

Dr. Monte Wilson a Boise State glacial geologist who has studied glaciers in Alaska, Canada and the Rockies says he is sure Otto's discovery is the real thing. "There are many perennial snow fields in Idaho that backpackers mistake for glaciers. Some of these are true glaciers though because they do not contain flowing rivers of ice," he says.

Wilson adds that in actual glaciers there is a lower layer of blue-ice that is so compressed by the weight of the snow that it assumes the properties of plastic and actually "flows." Before this ice can form, the snow on top must be at least 150 feet deep. No other snow field yet found in Idaho does this, except for Otto's glacier.

In four research trips last fall he has confirmed the presence of blue ice and located several crevasses, some of them 40 feet deep. In one area Otto says there is a crevasse field as large as a square city block.

The story about Bruce Otto's unusual discovery began three years ago when he was climbing Mt. Borah and noticed what he now calls a "peculiar formation." Last September, as a research project for Wilson's geology class, Otto decided he would take a closer look at what he then thought was just an unusually large snowfield.

But on his second trip he nearly fell into a huge crevasse, and began to realize that what he had been studying was no ordinary snowmass. As he "burned" his way down he had 40-foot crevasses in a permanent snow field.

As he examined the area, he noticed that 75 per cent of the glacier's surface is covered with rocks. "This is not too uncommon, but it did fool me at first because I didn't realize how big it was," Otto says.

He feels that no one has discovered the glacier because it is partially hidden. But more important, it is not on the "tourist route" up Mt. Borah and therefore is seldom seen. Although it is not a difficult climb, he says you have to "know where it is" and there is no trail into the area.

Otto and Wilson say they plan to lead a research team next summer that will take a closer look at ice flow, thickness movement and surface features. To help them transport the delicate geophysical equipment they are now looking for a helicopter.

Both Otto and Wilson cautioned that the glacier could be dangerous to hikers, especially in the summertime when the huge crevasses are still partially capped with snow. "Hikers should be very careful if they go onto the snow field," warned Wilson.

Otto is still modest about the discovery that will put him in the pages of Idaho's geological history books. Glaciers are traditionally named by their discoverer, but Otto says he is going to wait awhile before going that far. Right now he just says he is "thrilled" with his accomplishment and that he hopes the glacier can still remain unspoiled once the public hears about it.

In the meantime, this summer and fall Otto plans several independent trips on Mt. Borah so he can become even more familiar with his new discovery.

Crevasse danger

HUGE crevasses located on the surface of the Mt. Borah glacier pose a danger to casual backpackers. The depth of many of these will not be known until a study by Boise State University students and geologists is completed next summer. (Bruce Otto photo).

Opera teacher

DANNY KAYE, starring in "Danny Kaye's Look-in at the Metropolitan Opera," on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" series Sunday, April 27 introduces audiences to the myriad elements employed in an operatic production.

"I like to poison their minds when they're young," is the way Danny Kaye puts it, explaining why this remarkable artist will, on Sunday, April 27 conduct "Danny Kaye's Look-in at the Metropolitan Opera," to be seen on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People."

"Utter Kaye-os" is the way one will describe Kaye's "Look-in" presentations. (He's been doing them at the Met since 1972, but this is the first time one is being presented to a nationwide audience.)

As usual, the Met will get up in its richest panoply and spread out on the stage like a row of royal coronations. And, also as usual, it will keep a blind date with hilarity.

For an hour, it will lend itself to Danny Kaye, con-tortionist, mine and sleight-of-tongue artist.

With the whole Met as his foil, and his own bottomless bag of comedic turns, Kaye will preside over what the Metropolitan mezzo-soprano Regina Resnik once called "an operatic laugh-in."

But it's not all for laughs. There are lessons to be learned. Kaye serves as an introduction to the many stage machinery, lights, costumes and props, etc.

Under Kaye's tutorage, however, his lessons is far from ho-hum. "If they want an academic exercise," he says, "I don't think I'm their man."

Indeed, moving like a professor of musical history gone berserk, Kaye teaches lessons to appall a purist.

Yet that's typical Kaye. He's been performing that way since he played a watermelon seed in a school play at P.S. 149 in Brooklyn, N.Y. He was 5½ years old. At 17, he was doing the Borscht summer resort circuit in the Catskills. There, besides being an entertainer, he was known as a "turnler," an aide of the hotel manager sent out to "make

Kid's day at the Met

They came streaming into the Metropolitan Opera house from a flood of school and charter buses. Most of them were 4 years or two on either side of 11 years-old, and must had never been inside an opera house. Let alone such a revered mecca of music as the Metropolitan.

The occasion was the taping of "Danny Kaye's Look-in at the Metropolitan Opera."

The idea was to meet the kids with an enthusiasm for Opera from which they might never recover.

Kaye had everything going for him: the entire Met, in fact. At one point there were 600 people, all Met employees crowded behind Kaye, all giving out with the melodic "ahhh."

Three stage ships went through a storm so fearful that the orchestra needed lifeboats, not exits. A head popped out of the prompter's box and grinned. Superstar Beverly Sills did a musical turn with Kaye (complete with a saltshaker finish), and the afternoon concluded with a full scale scene from "La Traviata."

In 1940, Kaye married Sylvia Fine and one month later was a howling success. Miss Fine (as she's known professionally) writes virtually all of Kaye's musical material.

Through the years one of Kaye's abiding loves has been children. He's been widely praised for his work for UNICEF for example.

"Danny has a unique affinity with children," says Miss Fine. "Recently, a 5½ month-old child was visiting our apartment. Eventually he became restless and cranky. I put him down. Danny, who was taking a nap in the bedroom. In about 15 minutes, the baby stopped crying. We walked to the bedroom and there, face to face, was Danny and the child. They were having a conversation."

British crime isn't what it used to be

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Ted Greeno was on holiday at a seaside resort when he saw a pickpocket pilfer a wallet. Always a cop, he grabbed the thief by the collar.
"Here," the pickpocket said, "who are you?" This ain't your manor beat."
"I'm Inspector Greeno. Where's the nick police station?"
The prisoner doffed his cap respectfully.
"Greeno of Scotland Yard?" he asked, awed.
"Right this way, Gur'nor. It's an honor."
They tell stories like that around Scotland Yard to underline how radically things have changed since the old days when unmarked professionals on either side of the law adhered to an unwritten code, often with a measure of respect.
"It's a fair cop" was an underworld cliché meaning "you've caught me this time," and the crook would go off to a fate he accepted as an occupational hazard.

There are no rules in the violent confrontations of today with armed criminals and terrorists prepared to kill and maim when necessary, and-aven- skyeper.
Eight years ago Scotland Yard moved out of its old headquarters, built with granite blocks hewn by prisoners it sent to dreaded Dartmoor, into a new skyscraper.
They kept the famous cable address "Handcuffs London" but that's about all. No one on the other side was playing the game by the rules anymore.
Few at the Yard know more about crime than Commander Bob Huntley, 36, of the bomb squad who recently opted for early retirement to become chief of security for the British Broadcasting Corp.

A shrewd and sharp-eyed former coal miner, Huntley successfully headed the three most important commands in the metropolis — the murder, drug and bomb squads — during his 35 years with the force. "In my early days," he said, "if we had a robbery with violence it was an absolutely unique case."
"Now it's virtually an everyday happening — some poor unfortunate is hit over the head or has ammonia squirted into his face. A burglar used to take pride in professional skill. Now, rather than learn their trade, they use a pickaxe handle or a gun. It's quicker and if anyone is crippled for life — so what?"
In an interview, Huntley talked about bombs, maybe because it was his last command. He has been at and learned from every bomb incident in metropolitan London in the three exhausting years that capped his career.

He said the escalation of violence was dramatic. "Before World War II, even blackshirted fascists marching through London usually entailed no more than an occasional slugging match with police and irate citizens."
After the war, a new type of gangster used a few Molotov cocktails to challenge the old guard for control of territory, and there were scattered small bomb incidents dotting the 1960s.
"In 1969, the troubles in Ireland really got going," Huntley said. "But we in this country didn't feel them much until Feb. 22, 1972, when a bomb exploded at the parachute officers mess of Aldershot barracks, killing seven and wounding 19. After that it got worse.

After that political bomb incidents became more frequent and spectacular.
On March 8, 1973, one person was killed and nearly 200 injured by car bombs in Whitehall, seat of British government, and in front of Old Bailey, the central criminal court. One 200 pound car bomb was discovered outside Scotland Yard itself.
Huntley said there was worldwide consultation by law enforcement officers, on urban guerrillas — he has been to some in the United States and elsewhere and lectured to the FBI.
"Everything's on their side," Huntley said of the urban terrorists, but he added, "We're ahead of them in detection."
He dismissed the idea that urban guerrillas might hold a whole city hostage for ransom with the threat of exploding a nuclear bomb.

"I wouldn't have thought that would be a problem in this country," he said.
"But we're going to have to face the problems we have now — kidnaping, hostage taking, bombing — for many years. This is the trend going into the Age of Extreme Violence. The facts and figures show it."
From his days as head of the drug squad, Huntley thinks Britain's "maintenence" program, which gives registered addicts enough of their particular drug to keep them functioning, has saved it from the drug-related crime problem plaguing the U.S.
"An addict who finds himself in a desperate situation can get help in this country," he said.
"He's not forced to resort to mugging or robbery."

Best sellers in this library club in cages

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (UPI) — The best sellers at the Pet Library Club live in cages.

Children in this San Francisco Bay Area community not only get a chance to read about animals, they also can take home one of their furry little friends.

The unusual club, which works like a regular library, is part of the Alexander Lindsay Jr. Museum which contains hundreds of wild and tame animals children can touch and hold.

"Only the tame, domesticated animals can be checked out by the children, of course," said museum director Sam Smoker. "The wild animals are just too erratic in behavior."

Still, the youngsters have their choice of 250 animals to pick from to take home for a week. The animals include rats, rabbits, guinea pigs and chinchillas.

"We probably have the most extensive checkout program of its kind in the country," said Smoker. "Mostly we try to have animals that are native to our area."

The purpose of the lending library is to give children an opportunity to learn the responsibility needed for taking care of a pet. The museum provides a cage and food.

"The children have to be 6 years old and parents must sign a form," Smoker said. "It is very rare that we have a case of mistreatment."

The museum conducted a study over a two-year period and found that 10,046 children and teachers borrowed animals for a total of 70,322 days.

"This is equivalent to one person having an animal out for 192 years," Smoker said.

Smoker attributes the library's success to an army of 300 volunteers who "have instilled new enthusiasm throughout our entire program."

Adult volunteers work with local schools and help with the animals while youth workers take part in various programs that simultaneously teach them skills and keep the museum running.

The animal lending library is only one aspect of the extensive museum.

Visitors can also come in contact with hundreds of "lame" wild animals they can pet.

"It's only through getting to know and understand the wild creatures that people can learn to appreciate and protect them," Smoker said as he walked through the museum reptile room.

"People have fears regarding certain animals and by getting to know them these fears can be overcome."

As he talked a rattlesnake, separated from the viewer by a window, began to rattle. A newsman walking with Smoker jumped a little and then stepped back.

"See what I mean," the museum director said.

In a cage next to the rattler was "Claire," the resident boa constrictor.

Volunteers frequently take Claire on tours to local schools where children can pet her.

The museum literature tells children they can discover "for yourself that snakes aren't cold and slimy. How? Why? by touching and handling some of them, silly!"

If the visitor is bothered by the sound of the rattler he'll jump again when he steps into the next room and sees two giant un-caged black vultures flapping their wings.

It may be hard to convince a city dweller, but staff members insist that to "know a culture is to love a culture."

Other favorites in the museum are two San Joaquin foxes, a ringtail cat, a great horned owl, a raven, and a raccoon.

"Porky" the porcine is one of the animals vigilors love to pet, usually after museum workers rid them of fears by telling them "she can't throw her quills any farther than you can throw your hair."

Maya Pyramid

DALLAS (UPI) — An archaeological team at Southern Methodist University says it has found the oldest and largest Maya pyramid yet discovered.

The team says the pyramid was found in Belize, formerly British Honduras, and is approximately 12 stories tall. The archaeologists also believe there may be two other pyramids more, similar pyramids which in conjunction with the first one formed a religious complex.

Scaley whale

Patagonia features whales, dusty eggs

Having spent 18 months filming them, Des Bartlett knows his whales and he knows he can trust them. "We developed a philosophy, after working with them, that they weren't deliberately going to hurt us," he says. "We would drift in a little rubber boat right onto the back of the whale, and a few times the boat was lifted out of the water on the whale's back." Considering that an adult right whale weighs more than a Boeing 737 jet plane loaded with 100 passengers, or half again as much as a diesel switcher locomotive, that "littering" experience is likely to put one's trust to the test.

Des and Jen Bartlett, the husband-and-wife team who won an Emmy Award in 1974 for their work on "The Incredible Flight of the Snow Goose," filmed right whales in the waters off the bleak, windswept Patagonian coast of Argentina. "Magnificent Monsters of the Deep," special narrated by Orson Wells, will be presented Wednesday,

AS an adult whale, upwards of 60 feet long, basks in the sea off the bleak Patagonian coast of Argentina, three men in a life raft approach—very cautiously—to take pictures, in "Magnificent Monsters of the Deep," one-hour special narrated by Orson Wells, Wednesday, April 30. The white patches on the whale's head, callouses, are natural skin growths and not barnacles, as often thought.

April 30. "Although the whales are so big—60 feet long—they seem to know where every part of their body is," says Bartlett. "They will pass you—underwater—and stay within inches of you. At times they came within four inches of the camera, and just didn't touch it. They're so fast underwater, swimming at 10 to 15 knots, that there's no way you can keep up with them, or even be with them, unless they want you to be there."

Some of the incidents in "Magnificent Monsters of the Deep" have never been filmed before, such as seen from underwater, a right whale feeding. The whale engulfs a mouthful of water, squirts it out through the baleen sieve which descends from its upper jaw and swallows the food that's trapped and left behind.

"In that shot," says Bartlett, "you're looking straight into its mouth. A person could stand on that tongue and not reach the roof of the mouth. It's probably eight feet high."

Bartlett, an affable Australian, has been filming documentaries for 25 years in areas ranging from the steaming jungles of New Guinea, where he filmed—the three-month-long initiation rites of the Sepik headhunters, to the frigid forests of the far north where while swimming under the ice, he filmed beavers.

Although there were no headhunters or frozen rivers to contend with in Patagonia, that area did have its own discomforts. "The average daily wind velocity" throughout the year is 15 to 18 miles an hour," he notes. "So if you have a calm day, you know you're going to get storms of up to 50 miles an hour to equalize it. The temperatures are around freezing, and even in the summer—the water temperature is in the low 40s.

"In camp, you have to cover everything with plastic to try and keep the dust out. Dust is a big problem there. A typical Patagonian breakfast is eggs with dust."

Good-hearted gambler

'Big Eddie' a softie

Sheldon Leonard stars in the title role of a good-hearted gambler-businessman from Broadway's glorious past in "Big Eddie," to be broadcast Friday, May 2, on "The Friday Comedy Special."

Also starring in the half-hour comedy is Sherree North as Eddie's new wife, and Quinn Cummings plays his granddaughter, of whom he has custody. The show was created, written and produced by Bill Persky and Sam Denoff and directed by Persky.

Big Eddie Smith owns and operates a successful rental business (he'll find anything you want for a price) on Manhattan's east side—with the help of some colorful confederates from his past, played by Lonnie Shorr, Billy Sandys, Milton Parsons and Cliff Fellow.

When Eddie's granddaughter's private school is on the verge of closing because of outrageous rent increases and unnecessary building repair requirements, Big Eddie calls on his connections to discover the real reason for the threatened eviction.

The comedy was filmed before an audience in Hollywood as a Deez, Demz and Doss production. Others in the cast are Greg Mullavey, Bernie Kuby and Marjorie Bennett.

Phil Silvers signed an exclusive agreement to produce theatrical movies and television films for Columbia Pictures.

Lawyer misled

JACK WARDEN will guest star in the role of Investigator John St. John, Badge No. 1 of the Los Angeles Police Department, a fictionalized TV version of one of the veteran investigator's most difficult cases, written by reporter Al Martinez of the Los Angeles Times, on "They Only Come Out at Night," Saturday, May 3.

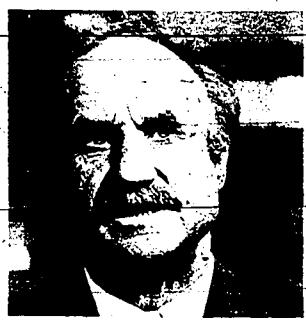

Gypsy, orphan girl star in foreign films

An orphan girl with a fanciful imagination leaves her stark surroundings for the world of fantasy in "Lucy and the Miracles," a motion picture from Czechoslovakia which will be rebroadcast on The CBS Children's Film Festival (Originally presented on the Network Sept. 15, 1973.)
Lucy (Viktoria Cermakova), who has been adopted, sets out, through fantasy, to find parents for her orphan friends. Since the story is told from a child's point of view, it unravels without logic, weaving in and out of reality. The cinematic technique is highly stylized and often reminiscent of the old "Kesteven Kops" silent movies.
In the final scene Lucy is back at the orphanage, bidding good-bye to the last occupant, who is about to join his new father. All the people Lucy has met during her remarkable world-of-make-believe wanderings have taken children home.
"Lucy and the Miracles" was produced by the Barrandov Film Studio in 1970 from a story and screenplay by Ota Hofman, Ota Koval directed.

"Mauro the Gypsy," a film from Scotland about a young Gypsy boy and his travails in the alien atmosphere of a small Scottish village, will also be rebroadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival."
When Mauro (Graeme Greenhow), a gentle and sensitive lad, arrives with his family at the village seeking a permanent camp site, the local council grants them permission to remain provided they cause no trouble.
But thanks to the work of two local troublemakers, a petition against the Gypsies is circulated in the village, and events force Mauro into hiding.
Then, because of a succession of brave and selfless acts on the boy's part, the barrier between the Gypsies and the townspeople is surmounted to allow everyone to live in peaceful coexistence.
"Mauro the Gypsy" is a production of I.F.A. Ltd. for the Children's Film Foundation, Ltd. The film was directed by Laurence Henson from a screenplay by Patricia Latham.

Burr Tillstrom's Kukia.

Fran and Bille with Fran Allison are hosts for "The CBS Children's Film Festival."

FRANK & LAUREN
... she was at the party

BY ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: Do people really think something supernatural was involved when actress Mary Ure died suddenly the night she opened in the London Play, "The Economist"? — D.V., Nashville, Tenn.

A: Mary's husband, Robert Shaw (who was so great in "The Sting"), has no faith in the occult and "ridicules" such talk. But Frederick Granville, co-producer of the play, berates himself for not going ahead with his original plan to hire an exorcist and clear the theater of "demons" before opening night. He points out that Miss Ure apparently choked to death in her sleep — a traditional hazard for the "possessed."

Q: Has Secretary Kissinger cut himself off completely from his old girl friends since his marriage? — J.L., Stockton, Calif.

A: Well, Jill St John (or perhaps her press agent) announced that Kissinger sent around two dozen red roses to mark her first day of shooting on a new TV series. If this is true, Kissinger, with his present worries, must be the best organized executive in the world — or the most gallant.

Q: Is it true the Sandy Dennis-Gerry

Hayworth and the late Prince Ali Khan? — F.P., East, Okla.

A: Yasmin Khan, 24, is doing just fine, she is reported to be on the verge of becoming engaged to German Count Faber Castel. You don't have to be German to have heard of Faber pencils, right?

Q: Is it true that Elliot Richardson, our new Ambassador to England, has a bad reputation for drinking? — J.F., Rochester, N.Y.

A: It is true that the Ambassador's Democratic political enemies have helped develop such a reputation for him by spreading around his driving record — eight minor offenses and two convictions for drunken driving, one when he was 18, another in the early Fifties. The whole thing makes Richardson so mad he always insists on it being made part of the record. He does drink socially, but as his wife puts it, "It is an example of how hard it is to prove a negative."

Q: Where does Muhammad Ali actually live? Is he a good family man? — J. H., Terre Haute, Ind.

A: The Champ has just bought a big new home in the old and solid Woodlawn district of southern Chicago. He is busy having it gutted and redecorated with gold carpets, red flock wallpaper and plenty of chandeliers while he speculates about buying apartment buildings for investment. Ali and his wife, Belinda, have three daughters and one son. Their marriage is said to be strained of late. The Champ does have an eye for pretty "fores" and Belinda is a strict Muslim wife.

Q: According to my estimate Greta Garbo ought to be about 70. Right? — A.G., Rome, N.Y.

A: Greta will be 70 in December, which puts her in the same age bracket as Cary Grant and Henry Fonda, a pair of lads whose appearance seems to mock the calendar. The fabulous Garbo is reported to be looking a bit wizened these days but thoroughly enjoying a renewed friendship with Van Johnson, 59, who can be frequently seen walking and shopping with her in Manhattan.

Q: Is Christina Onassis really the richest girl in the world? — I.R., Hays, Kan.

A: With all the figures flying around it is hard to tell who is going to get what from the Art legacy. But a recent incident reported at the London airport may give a hint. Christina checked in at the British Airways counter for a trip to the Bahamas with her dog. Both were shown on their way, comfortably seated in the first-class section of the plane. A bit later Elizabeth Taylor showed up at the same counter headed for Moscow with good friend Henry Wyngby plus dog. Officials decreed that the animal had to travel in the baggage compartment. No compromise was possible and Liz stormed off to seek a friendlier airline. Does that answer your question?

Q: Is Sammy Davis still on the wagon? — E.R., Huntington, W.V.

A: Nope, he's back on the gin and Coke row. Sammy says, "I have slowed down. The doctor says I ought to lay off. 'Your liver's going to bust,' he says. I say, 'What the hell? Nobody lives forever. But I feel good. I went through a bad patch some years ago. Drugs, the whole thing. I was with this chick who was into all that and I wanted to be part of it. Finally I realized I didn't stop. I'd blow my mind. Now it's strictly El Boozo."

GUESSING GAMES: They say you can't get hooked on cocaine but a big name actor doesn't seem to be able to give the stuff up. He's so flipped out these days that another star had to replace him in the lead of a major movie. Besides that, the normally mid-mannered actor practically despised the office of a big Hollywood star.

Q: How is Dolly Schiff, who owns the New York Post, reacting to the hatchet piece Nora Ephron did on her in Esquire? — O.L., Beaconhurst, N.J.

A: We don't think Mrs. Schiff will be inviting Nora to any more pink teas, but so far all the publishing lady will say is that she would never use the word "commodes" as Nora attributes its use to her.

Q: Do you remember when Frank Sinatra was going to marry Lauren Bacall after Bogie died and then it all blew up? Are they still enemies? — E.T., Hollywood, Calif.

A: Guess not. Frankie brought in a party of ten people to NYC the great jazz pianist Marian McPartland when she was at the Cafe Carlyle in NYC. Betty Bacall was in the group.

Q: What happened to Richard Roundtree? As "Shaft" he was my all-time favorite.

but he seems to have dropped out of sight. — J.W., Brentville, N.Y.

A: Richard has just been busy trying to get away from the old "Shaft" image. He is playing the title role to Peter O'Toole's Robinson Crusoe in "Man Friday" for Avco Embassy. He is also doing "Ace of Diamonds" in which he'll play a darning jewel thief.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Is there something about the daughter of an army colonel that leads to stardom? Well, maybe there is and maybe there isn't but three of the hottest girls in films today — Valerie Perrine of "Lenny," Susan Blakely of "The Towering Inferno," and Charlotte Rampling of "The Night Porter" all have fathers who were colonels.

Q: Tell me the truth. Does George Wallace expect to walk again? — P.O., Potts Camp, Miss.

A: The Governor says, "I ain't gonna get any better. I'm as good as I'm gonna get. I'm paralyzed. It's one hell of a shape to be in, but it's not an impossible shape. It's true I take one hour to do what I used to do in 15 minutes — but I can do it." He does sometimes walk — during his physical therapy, with the help of braces and supports.

Q: With gossip now calling the All MacGraw-Steve McQueen marriage a bit rocky, does Robert Evans have new hopes of getting All back? — J.W., San Antonio, Tex.

A: In a recent interview, Robert Evans, Paramount Studios production head, said that "work is my mistress now" and he is getting used to sleeping alone and even enjoying it. Nevertheless, whenever Evans talks to the press, ex-wife All's name comes up repeatedly in his conversation. With help, son Joshua as a common bond, Evans would have to be counted as in the running if All should ever be free again.

ROUNDTREE

... getting away from "Shaft"

Mulligan marriage is kaput? — J.W., Newark, N.J.

A: Looks that way. While Sandy does her thing onstage in Broadway's "Absurd Person Singular," the famed jazz player-composer is being seen around in the company of a ravishing black-haired beauty. Could Sandy's 53 cats have something to do with all this?

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Who has the hottest pair of legs since Dietrich? Little old Stephane Audran, voted Miss "most exciting legs" in France and soon to be seen in Ray Stark's film, "The Black Bird," also in Avco Embassy's Agatha Christie mystery "Ten Little Indians," and in her husband Claude Cabrol's cinema "La Rupture."
