White House holds CIA report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House today reversed plans of the Rockefeller Commission and decided not to release immediately a controversial report on illegal domestic spying by the Central Intelligence Agency. Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen told newsmen President Ford will not decide until after he reads the report whether or not to make it public. The commission had originally planned to release the report on Sunday. Nessen denied there was any White House strategy to "cover up" the findings of the commission. Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller personally turned the 350-page, lock-tight report over to Ford today along with evidence on allegations that the CIA helped plot the assassinations of foreign leaders. But the blue-bound report itself dealt with a six-months investigation of alleged illegal domestic spying by the CIA, FBI and other police agencies on Americans. "It was never the White House plan to release the report until the President read it," Nessen said half an hour after Ford was given the report by Rockefeller. Rockefeller said the commission planned to report fully later on the assassination allegations because it had not had time to draw any conclusions from incomplete evidence at hand. But Nessen said he knew of no move to extend the commission's life to complete the assassination investigation. "I've been told the commission has been disbanded," Nessen said. Ford said he hoped the report's recommendations, when implemented, will assure "that there is no question in the future that the CIA will live within the law." After receiving the report, Ford said the investigation "will give us the basis for firm recommendations to make sure we end up with a CIA that will do an excellent job and at the same time assure the privacy of individuals." The report on a six-months probe of the CIA, FBI and other police and intelligence groups dealt only with their domestic activities, including alleged illegal spying on Americans. Members of the special House panel investigating the CIA asked the Democratic leadership Thursday to consider removing Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., as chairman because of conflict with his past congressional work on the spy agency. At issue are allegations that Nedzi, as head of a House Armed Services subcommittee on intelligence, was briefed about reportedly illegal CIA operations more than a year ago and did not seek a legislative investigation. It was earlier indicated that the Rockefeller Commission would report on the CIA and foreign assassinations. (Continued on p. 3)

Open plot files goal

By BILL LAZARUS Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Frank Church will ask his committee investigating the CIA to make public information on plots to assassinate foreign leaders. A press aide for Sen. Church told the Times-News today the Idaho Democrat "will recommend that this information be shared with the American public." But Church also said this should be done in a discreet way without some sort of extravaganzas such as televised hearings, spokesman Bill Hall said. Hall said, however, that it will be a month or so before Church's Select Committee on Intelligence decides how much of the material gathered in its highly secret proceedings will be made public. The decision on making public information on the alleged assassination plots will be up to the committee as a whole, Hall said. But Church "comes down hard on the side of letting the people know what's going on with the government," he added.

In an interview on the CBS Morning News today reported by UPI, Church alleged CIA assassination plots "were more than simply plans" and that a Rockefeller commission report to President Ford ducked the controversial issue, according to United Press International. "We'll have to deal with it," Church said. "The trick is going to stop the committee." "Evidently the commission has chosen to duck it," he said of agency reports to the White House by a commission chaired by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller. The report omitted the assassination issue because Rockefeller said his panel did not have time to thoroughly investigate it.

TF camp dispute mediation asked

By GEORGE WILEY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A dispute between residents at the Twin Falls Labor Center and the labor center governing board has opened to federal mediation. According to Robert Lamb Jr., regional director of the northeast region of the Community Relations Service (CRS) division of the U.S. Justice Department, both leaders of the Committee for Better Housing, the group of residents seeking better conditions at the migrant camp, and the labor center board members have agreed to federal mediation to try to solve conflicts involving the administration of the labor camp. Lamb declined to discuss the mediation effort in detail, but he said the federal mediation would probably begin around the end of the month. CRS has no power to enforce an agreement, he said, but will attempt to arrive at a written document detailing the manner in which the disputes are to be resolved. Migrant and permanent residents at the camp previously sought the ouster of camp manager William Taylor, charging that Taylor discriminated against chicanos in rental policies and in housing the camp.

They also objected to barbed wire which had been strung around the front lawn of the camp to create a horse pasture and to Taylor's wearing of a handgun while performing his duties as manager. (Continued on p. 3)

Taylor sheds gun

TWIN FALLS — The manager of the Twin Falls Labor Center has taken off his gun. He has also hired two Spanish-speaking chicanos to help run the migrant camp. Camp manager William Taylor said Thursday he had taken both actions on his own and not at the direction of the labor center board. Migrant residents of the camp seeking the ouster of Taylor had previously objected both to Taylor's wearing a pistol while performing his duties as camp manager and to the lack of Spanish-speaking personnel to aid residents with problems at the camp. Taylor said he had hired a chicano to aid with the maintenance of the camp. "I don't know these people and I don't know how to speak Spanish," Taylor said. "Every time I have to talk to them, I have to have someone to translate for me. I don't want to have any more than you can handle with Spanish." He said the two employees will be retained "as long as I need them." "I need that kind of help," Taylor said. "I need someone to help me." (Continued on p. 3)

Pen escape by chopper

JACKSON Mich. (UPI) — A stolen helicopter swooped over the walls of the Southern Michigan Prison today and took off with a prisoner. First reports said a man armed with a knife hijacked the helicopter from State Police, but officials later said this was not true. "You are not going to believe this," state Corrections Department director Perry Johnson said, "but a black and white helicopter with its numbers painted out just scooted over the walls of the prison, picked up someone and then took off." Authorities at the prison, the largest walled penal facility in the area, said they were conducting an emergency head count of the 3,642 prisoners to identify the missing man.

Idaho jobless rate dips; US unemployment over 9%

TWIN FALLS — The national unemployment rate in May rose to 9.2 per cent, the first time it has exceeded 9 per cent since 1941. Meanwhile, Idaho's preliminary unemployment rate fell slightly, to 7.3 per cent in May with 24,400 people out of work in the state, according to the Idaho Department of Employment. Twin Falls County's preliminary unemployment rate was much lower at 4.8 per cent. About 1,000 residents in the county were out of work in a labor force of 20,765 people, according to analyst James Voegelé at the local branch of the Idaho Department of Employment. The U.S. Department of Labor's bureau of labor statistics said today that about 8.33 million people were jobless this month, about 392,000 more than in April. The rate has steadily increased since last year, hitting 8.9 per cent in April and above 8 per cent for five consecutive months. Despite the gloomy picture, the number of people with jobs has increased, with about 84.4 million people working, 316,000 more than in April. Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop says that Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, says they are optimistic that recovery from the recession is underway and that the job picture will improve soon. Most of the jobs added during May were temporary. The unemployment rate among farm workers dipped to 8.7 per cent from an April level of 4 per cent. The unemployment rate for household heads — those who are providers for families — rose 0.3 per cent to 8.3 per cent in May. Unemployment in construction hit an all-time high: 21.8 per cent, up from the 19.5 per cent in April. The BLS said that in May unemployment among blacks remained about the same as in April, 14.7 per cent, but unemployment of black teenagers dipped from 40.2 per cent to 39.9 per cent. ## Britons give booming Common Market big nod

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson won overwhelming endorsement from the nation's voters today for his bid to keep Britain in the booming European Common Market. With voice counting nearing the half way mark, supporters of a "Yes" vote piled in as the market and market opponents were quick to concede defeat. Results pouring in from all parts of the country gave huge "Yes" majorities nearly everywhere. "The British people appear to have voted in support of a 'Yes' vote in the European Community," said Conservative opposition deputy leader William Whitely. Robert Erroll, a marketish former Conservative government minister and one of the chief anti-market campaigners, said: "We have a conditional result. Now we shall have to negotiate the struggle." Independent Television News said a complete forecast of the final result was 66 per cent "Yes" and 31.4 per cent "No." Norman Aldin, an anti-market Labour party member of Parliament, said: "It's all over. It's a very sad day." Jack Jones, leader of the market supporters, said: "The 38 million voters of the General Election have spoken for a 'No' vote, said: "Now we've got to face up to it. We've always been free to join the European Community, and now we've had a referendum on it. It's a very sad day." Jones said the market supporters would continue to support the market.

Goldwater, a leading hawk during the Vietnam era and a retired Air Force major general, said the rules had "as much to do with our casualties" as actual enemy action.

MV Farm Bureau Women hold appreciation fete

TWIN FALLS — Farm Bureau Women of District III of Idaho entertained women county leaders in an annual farm-city appreciation luncheon Thursday.

Edith Conrad, Carey, chairman of the event, told the guests the Farm Bureau Women appreciate the community leaders as "consumers." She said the appreciation day is aimed at telling city residents and food product consumers some of the "other side of the story."

Mrs. Conrad explained the farmer's problem of producing food as a consumer himself and at a high cost for materials, labor and supplies.

She said many of the consumers fail to realize the small percentage of the price they pay which actually goes to the producer.

Women attending the luncheon were asked to guess the farmer's return from a $9 display of groceries. Marjorie Stoten, guessing $3.28, came closest to the actual $3.10 figure.

Displays were featured at the luncheon, including two 4 1/2-foot loaves of bread baked for the farm bureau women by Albertson's at a cost of $9. The bread required $1 worth of flour, Mrs. Conrad said.

A slide show on farm production, efforts of the farmer to outguess the economy and a play accordingly was shown following the luncheon.

Mrs. Conrad said the slide program is available for interested organizations by contacting the county Farm Bureau officers or the county extension agents in the area.

Fed mediation sought in labor center dispute

Since a protest march held several weeks ago to emphasize the complaints of chicano residents, Taylor has hired two chicano assistants and given up the wearing of his handgun.

Shortly before the protest march some of the barbed wire around the front lawn of the camp was removed at the direction of labor center board chairman Charles Colner.

Lamb said Thursday CRS had been contacted earlier by "some concerned citizens" about the progress at the migrant camp.

"Our agency has spent several days and hours assessing the situation and making personal contact with the principles involved in the dispute," said Lamb, who spent two days last week in Twin Falls in addition to Thursday. "It is our opinion that the matter could best be resolved ... through mediation of the dispute.

"An agreement has been received from the principle parties to utilize mediation by representatives of the Community Relations Service. Arrangements are underway to begin the mediation proceedings commencing around the end of June."

Lamb said CRS, which was created by Congress in 1964 to attempt to resolve racial disputes, would attempt to arrive at a workable solution to what he called the "critical and important matter" of the administration of the Twin Falls labor camp.

"We are hoping for a signed, written, self-enforcement agreement to resolve the grievances and to improve minority relation in the Twin Falls area," Lamb said.

He said he did not know whether the mediation proceedings would be open to the public. He said the decision would be made by the parties in the dispute and the mediator.

"That both sides had agreed to federal mediation, said Lamb, was a "positive step."

Twin Falls Bona Fide Trust president Curtis Eaton, a member of the labor center board which administers the farmer-owned camp, confirmed that the board had agreed to the mediation but said he otherwise had "no comment."

"I will not respond to any question, subject to the outcome of this mediation," he said.

Camp manager Taylor also said he had no comment on the mediation effort.

Taylor said he had decided to quit wearing the handgun on his own and that had not been directed to do by members of the labor center board. He also said he had quit wearing a deputy sheriff's badge except when necessary because of trouble.

"I don't wear it unless I have to," he said of the gun. "I don't like to wear it. I don't even like to put the badge on, and unless I have to I won't wear it."

Spokesmen for the Committee for Better Housing, the labor center group which had sought Taylor's ouster, could not be reached for comment.

Both sides in the dispute, committee members and the labor center board, have agreed to begin mediation talks on the complaints with U.S. Justice Department mediators from Seattle beginning in late June.

Taylor said he had "no comment" on the mediation.

He said there had been no recent problems at the center.

"There's no trouble," Taylor said. "If everybody would just shut up about it, everybody would just forget it. In the first place, everybody's too busy to be fussing and fighting with each other ... There is just too much to do."

Taylor said the influx of migrant laborers is heavier than in past years because of expectations of a large sugar beet crop. The barracks at the camp, he said, "are filling up fast and will be filled in another week."

"We've done everything we could do, and we're still doing it," Taylor said. "We're fixing these barracks and getting furniture and still doing it."

He said many of the migrant families were coming in without money and had not been able to find work because of late plantings necessitated by poor spring weather.

"So many people came because they put out the word that there were going to be lots of beds. It was not true. It was not them (the migrants) ... I don't know what they're going to do. I do know that some of them have it awful rough ... There sure are a lot of them here that could use a job if anybody needs help of any kind. They strictly want to work."

Taylor said he had been letting families go without paying rent and also furnishing coal for barracks rooms until the families are able to find work.

He said he did not expect trouble from the migrants.

"These migrants don't want trouble," he said. "They don't want trouble makers around them. They stop it themselves."

He suggested that anyone needing assistance or labor of any kind performed contact the labor center. The number for the labor center is 733-7404.

Statements disclaimed

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls teacher and school board representatives apparently are disclaiming statements concerning a proposed negotiations agreement made Wednesday by Assistant Supt. Camden Meyer.

In a joint press release Thursday by board negotiating team member Ruth Day and teacher team chairman Robert Klus, Meyer's statements were termed "personal observations."

The release, however, did not challenge the accuracy of Meyer's statements.

Meyer had made one major disclosure not included in the trustee's statement. He had said the proposal did not provide mediation and fact-finding procedures.

He said the proposed agreement, whose provisions have not been made public by the negotiating teams, "does some of the things I think the teachers would like, and I think it should be satisfactory to the board."

The new joint statement continued, saying "At the insistence of the board, the association negotiators have been working together with the board's team to develop a mutually agreeable negotiations agreement as a prerequisite to negotiating any substantive items."

Neither Klus nor board attorney T. M. Robertson would elaborate on the new statement, or give reasons for its issuance.

The statement said that before the agreement is accepted there will be "further examination as to the legality of some of its provisions."

Agent introduced

The camperships will be distributed to first time campers first, then to campers who have never had assistance in going to camp and the remainder divided between teen leader campers, all at the discretion of the extension staff.

Host families for Japanese exchange students who will be in Twin Falls County July 21 through Aug. 15 are being sought. Anyone interested is asked to contact the extension office.

One-dose rule curbs nurses

Rising costs of medical care and limited access to doctors are two good reasons for greater utilization of medical professionals who aren't physicians, especially nurses.
Yet the State Health and Welfare Department announced this week that it will begin strictly enforcing an Idaho law which will place even greater limits on what nurses can do to help.
HAW says it will prevent nurses from distributing prescription drugs and contraceptives except for "a single dose on a physician's order."
One unfortunate impact of this ruling will fall heavily on public health nurses, especially those working in clinics.
It will force a doctor to be on duty while such clinics are in operation. That would take doctors away from more pressing business or force closure or slowdown of the clinics involved.
If the "one dose" rule is strictly enforced, apparently it would mean a patient staying overnight in a hospital could get only one of a prescribed medication or painkiller. Presumably that would mean a patient either would suffer through the night or else the doctor would endure many calls each night to give new prescriptions for additional doses.
As it is, the medical system is hard pressed to supply needed services at reasonable costs. The HAW one-dose rule enforcing a bad law makes the system just that much more unwieldy.

Attacking sex bias

Christian Science Monitor
The new rules approved by Mr. Ford for ending educational discrimination against schoolgirls and college women are welcome.
Not so welcome is a companion HEW proposal to stop responding to individual civil-rights complaints. Such a step, which would permit HEW's Office of Civil Rights to pick and choose among complaints before investigating, could mean lessened enforcement of racial as well as sex discrimination laws.
The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare was forced under Title IX of the 1972 equal rights law to formulate rules to end discrimination against women in education. The administration's proposals, if approved by Congress after hearings, would open traditionally sex-stereotyped courses like shop to boys and girls, eliminate sex-based favoritism in admissions and scholarships, and require equality in noneducational facilities such as housing on campuses. These nonacademic programs will likely have greater significance for the equality in noneducational facilities on campuses. These nonacademic regulations will likely have greater significance of the equality of opportunity for women than the new physical education rules, which are attracting the most controversy.
The athletics proposals do not require institutions or school systems to raise spending on female athletics to current men's levels. But they do require that girls be allowed to compete, if qualified, on boys' teams in noncontact sports, or have the chance to play on a girls' team. In the lower-school grades, schools receiving Title IX funds must merge gym and field classes for boys and girls, while maintaining separate locker-room facilities.
It would be well for the public not to be diverted by argument over the new sports rules, such as whether they limit that girls are the equal of boys athletically. Considered as individuals, many girls may be superior athletically to many boys. To note that in many physically demanding endeavors, like dance, the female performer receives less vigor, endurance, and style at least equal to that of men is not to dismiss the distinction between male and female expression, where that is relevant. Such arguments are best left to statistics and philosophy. It is not necessary to read sex-role significance into running, throwing a ball, or other elementary sports action.
Particularly for women, the general level of physical education in the U.S. is low, in from instr. in basic posture and movement to athletic and recreational skills. The automobile and TV set have turned the country's youths, like their parents, into nonwalkers and nonparticipants. The female in society is, during her school and college years, directed into even more of a spectator role by school spending policies that imply sports are for "men."
For instance, physical education rules may have practical flaws. For the new college women's athletic groups are apprehensive that the male-dominated organizations are poised to take over their programs, threatening reduced rather than expanded female sports opportunities. But on balance the rules affirm women's rights to equal educational opportunity in admissions, scholarships, instruction, and facilities — athletic as well as academic.

Restless, partisan mood in Washington growing

WASHINGTON — The prevailing mood here at the beginning of the summer is increasingly restless and partisan.
The cattails are beginning to stir in the barn. The politicians are organizing for next year's elections, when many of them believe new leaders will be chosen, not only for the White House, but for the House and Senate as well.
The most significant change in the last few months has probably been the rise in the popularity of President Ford. He has come through the formative stage of his administration in better form than generally expected. He is visibly more confident. He has put together a competent cabinet, and, by a combination of candor and friendliness, he has swept away the atmosphere of conspiracy and mistrust that polluted this town in the last months of the Nixon administration.
He is being helped for the moment by the feeling, not supported by reliable facts, that the worst of the recession is over. But even among many people who like and support him. There remain serious doubts that he has the imagination or resiliency to handle the challenges of the last years of the '70s.

The successes of the '60s have been followed, may even have produced, a torrent of new and more complicated problems in all free societies. A rising middle class is demanding more from their governments in the industrial countries, and from their governments in the industrial countries, and provoking, since the organization of the oil cartel, new crises from the hungry countries for a more equal distribution of the world's wealth.
At home, a new generation of industrial and service employees, as well as the young professionals, is thinking and living and acting politically in different ways.
Internationally, the fears of the Cold War era have been replaced by a popular but dicey belief in "detente," and there is a vague suspicion here, underlying all traditional political assumptions, that America is approaching the new problems of the '80s with a lot of old men and old notions.

In short, there is a pervasive feeling here that there is something out of date and may be even deeply wrong with the organization and spirit of our politics, and that the last quarter of the decade will require the part of economic and political innovations that marked the first half of the '60s. Those who feel this way, and at the same time regard Ford as an ideal interim President, do not quite see him as a leader of these coming turbulent years.
Sen. Edward Kennedy is back on the front page of the news magazines and continues to lead the popularity polls, but this is so only because the Democrats are in such a mess. The guess here is that his promise not to run in 1976 or accept a draft is genuine and that the Democrats would do better to take him at his word and find themselves another candidate.
Kennedy cooperates with the writers or profiles and Sunday magazine features, probably not because he is secretly maneuvering for a draft, but because he must run next year for re-election in Massachusetts, which is deeply divided on the issues of busing and abortion. It does him no harm to concentrate on the large issues of health insurance, unemployment and foreign policy, and dominate the popularity polls and the magazine covers.

So the polls are trying to anticipate the coming changes, sensing that new problems and new leaders may be forthcoming after the Bicentennial suggests the need for new beginnings.
Even the 75 Democratic representatives, who made such a splash early this year, are planning to go away to a "retreat" for a weekend after the return from the Memorial Day recess in order to discuss their future plans, including whether they want to go along with the Humphreys, Jacksons, Muskie's, and the other Democratic leaders now in their 60's.
If one of these elders of the party gets the nomination but fails to win the presidency, there is a real chance that he will get the Democratic leadership of the Senate when Mike Mansfield retires, as he has been talking about doing. Humphrey, for example, who has always been Mansfield's favorite as majority leader, at least keeps himself in the running for this post by talking in presidential terms.
Ford's return to the White House has muffled some of the talk about a challenge from former Governor Reagan of California on the right. Rangan says he's not interested in heading a Conservative party movement, and unless the President runs into even more serious economic trouble or abdicates, like Johnson, his nomination is almost certain.
The President is quietly putting together his own political team, and trying to demonstrate by his trips abroad that he is not only a Man of the Congress, but a leader in the world. The danger in this is that the distracted and divided free-world leaders will not respond to his exhortations, and that the world at large will get worse in the coming year rather than better.
Accordingly, events in the next 12 months may dominate the men, rather than the other way around, but the campaign has obviously already started. It is dominating most conversations in this city, and it is likely to dominate the legislation from now on until November, 1976.

Demos open drive to trim Wallace down to size

WASHINGTON — Permission from frightened Sweden for Nazi troops to cross its territory in World War II has become intertwined with a ferocious but flawed campaign by mainstream Democrats to cut Gov. George C. Wallace down to size.
The goal is to convince American voters that Wallace is not equipped to be president of the United States, and Exhibit A is Wallace's sensational March 3 interview with foreign journalists in Montgomery, Ala. Although Wallace's uninhibited criticism of Sweden in that interview accurately stated the historical facts he has been accused of thinking neutral Sweden was a belligerent — of being a spineless ignoramus.
Nor is that the only distortion. A reading of the transcript shows no Wallace departure on foreign policy from his rambling conversations with reporters over the years: blunt to the point of offensiveness, nationalistic to the point of jingoism, anti-Communist to the point of hysteria. But the analyses have printed a more sinister picture.
The reason for this is the Democratic party's escalating Wallace dilemma. Party leaders have no all right arguments to blunt Wallace's obvious appeal to the discontented. That led to the first contrivance: the aborted drive to appear presidential — primaries Wallace would likely win.

Wallace's interview with the foreign journalists, reported by the Washington Post of May 8, was, therefore, desperately needed ammunition.
In fact, however, he had not erred. Unreported from the March 3 meeting was Wallace's accurate and unemotional statement to a Swedish journalist: "You wasn't occupied, but they (Nazi troops) marched through Sweden to get to Norway."
The distortions of Wallace's views on Germany and Japan were less flagrant. "I think we were fighting the wrong people, maybe, in World War II," he said, but the transcript makes clear he was criticizing U.S. policy before the war that permitted the rise of Hitlerism and Japanese imperialism, not the American choice of sides after it started. It is also clear from the transcript that his remark to a Japanese journalist that "I wish we'd been on the same side in World War II" was banter.
Distorted or not, the surfacing of the interview gave heart to mainstream Democrats. Wallace, they hoped, had committed one of those senseless political gaffes that ruin presidential candidacies.
Indeed, the Wallace camp is explaining more than usual. Press secretary Billie Joe Camp quotes William Shirer's "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich" that Sweden provided "immense help to Germany" by permitting transit of Hitler's legions, first to Norway, later to France.

But Wallace himself is a slinging counterpuncher. Addressing the Louisiana legislature May 21, Wallace played to the discontented by accusing "the liberals in this country" of bringing on "the blunder that has afflicted the inflationary spiral of every penny and every low income person."
However, Wallace is mailing a letter denouncing the press for starting all the trouble: "The liberal press establishment is getting to the point where they would distort anything that I have to say."
That is only the beginning. No longer perceiving Wallace as a vulgar if fascinating curiosity, as they did in 1972, his enemies in both the Democratic party and the press can be expected to assault his intelligence, character and competence with ever greater vehemence. But they should be correct on the facts or Wallace's response in kind will strike home in the long bitter struggle for the allegiance of the disoriented American.

These matters its position is being weakened by special groups in Washington. It feels that the splendidly organized "Greek lobby" has taken over the anti-Jobby-of-Alexandria. At the same time, exploration in talks at Salzburg with Egyptian President Sadat will wind up back in Washington with Israeli Premier Rabin.
Time presses. The Suez Canal reopened Thursday, providing a liaison to Russia's network of Red Sea-Indian Ocean bases. Furthermore, as Kissinger says, if there isn't a settlement within two years, another war is inevitable. The secretary believes that if Israel has any sense on world realities it will agree to further step-by-step negotiations.
Otherwise, Washington subtly hints it might contemplate the thought of a definitive solution imposed by pressure. Such a plan might be founded on the 1967 borders with perhaps a "Vaeclant City" administrative arrangement for the Moslem religious shrines of East Jerusalem.
The Ford administration realizes that in all

Middle East next focal point for US efforts

LONDON — President Ford and Secretary Kissinger are now trying to take U.S. foreign policy out of a somewhat vague and abstract realm of détente without in any sense being sign of that fundamental goal and into concrete negotiations related to specific American objectives.
That was the main purpose of the highly successful NATO summit, from Washington's viewpoint. Even France — the only ally except the United States that has a real foreign policy — went along on most aspects of the alliance's consensus. As for expanding consultation beyond the Atlantic Treaty area. Orally enough, that was once a French idea which De Gaulle sought to institutionalize.
It is likewise the obvious purpose of Ford's post-NATO journeys on his first European tour as President.
He is trying to shore up defense positions in the disintegrating Mediterranean region, all the way from the Iberian peninsula to Greece, Turkey and the Middle East.
Portugal, which sent its premier to Brussels, is regarded as a lost cause, despite efforts by its Armed Forces Movement to restore some impression of democracy. Washington sees hope there as gone.
Portuguese Premier Goncalves sought to persuade Ford the movement is his country's only "democratic" organization except for the Communist Party — which supports "the revolution." There is no U.S. optimism that America "will be allowed to keep an Azores base long."
Moreover, it is hard to imagine a Communist-dominated Portugal remaining privy to NATO secrets, but no, machinery appears to exist for expelling an ally; only for voluntary resignation. The problem is under study. And what happens with Lisbon could have direct repercussions in Spain and Italy.
Washington hopes to strengthen ties with Spain that will appeal to moderates, pro-

Church issue won't go away

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The slip on the wrist given Washington Episcopal priest William Wendt by an ecclesiastical court for allowing an irregularly ordained woman priest to celebrate Communion won't make the issue go away.
Wendt's bishop, the Rt. Rev. William Creighton, is so firmly in favor of ordination of women to the priesthood that he has publicly announced he will not ordain anyone until women are allowed into the priesthood. He also has said that if the Church's General Convention does not act positively on the question next fall in Mississippi he likely will ordain women unilaterally.
But the trial of Wendt, and the split decision verdict of the five-member court handed down Thursday, dramatically demonstrate how divided the church continues to be over the issue of the ordination of 11 women deacons to the priesthood last July 29 at Philadelphia's Church of the Advocate.
The Washington court split two to two along lay-clerical lines to finding Wendt guilty of disobeying Creighton's "godly admonition" to prohibit the Rev. Alston Cheney's priestly role in a communion service at Wendt's St. Stephen and the Incarnation parish.
The clerical majority sought to avoid the issue of women's ordination in Wendt's act of admitted ecclesiastical disobedience and "peripheral."

Procedures reduce bureau efficiency

By OPEN CHARNOK BOISE (UPI) — In the never-ending war with government bureaucracy, it's the little things that count. As a case in point, consider the General Services Administration (GSA) — an agency set up to serve other agencies of government, providing them with transportation, janitor service, communications, paper clips and the like.

It's a big agency and, as do many big agencies, it has many procedures designed to establish internal controls and supposedly — help it to function more efficiently. But, as any student of government knows, red tape has a way of feeding on itself. And so it does in the GSA.

Wisdom in ties questioned

Editor, Times-News: An open letter to Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho: You will be interested in this article from the publication "The Christian Crusade," regarding the effort that is being made by the Communist Party in the United States to exploit the present economic crisis.

This doesn't make sense to me. Is there something I fail to understand about this kind of relationship with Russia? How do you feel about it? You do not know something of the strengths and weaknesses of the Communist Party in the United States. In your opinion are they a threat or is it a small but vocal group that we need have no worry about?

Minutes later the phone rang again. This time it was a fellow from GSA in Auburn, Wash. He asked if someone in the Boise office had been rude. I said, no, I just was tired of playing bureaucratic games — tired of Uncle Sam sticking his nose constantly into my life, requiring me to do things by the numbers. He said he understood how I felt. During the conversation I pointed out the feds wanted a favor from me and asked why they couldn't just send the release over to us the way other agencies do. He said GSA is not authorized to make in-city delivery.

We have no Capitalistic front in Russia to compare with the Communist front which they maintain in the United States. We make no effort to exploit crises in that country, while on the other hand they have, I believe, a strong and militant front in the United States which is actively engaged in all the subversive activities which they dare to promote without breaking the laws of the country.

Unfair move

Editor, Times-News: The fourth truck for the city airport discussed Monday night was a budgeted item, approved in accordance with a seven-year old city policy. It was unfair and inappropriate of Steve Lincoln to force Merrick to defend this truck after he and the City Council had publicly approved it in the 1975 budget.

What's all about, I asked. "About a Gooding man accused of violating the Packers and Stockyards Act," she replied. Not convicted, mind you — just charged. The Agriculture Department, as does the Internal Revenue Service, likes to nut out sludges about charges before they get to that scare other persons into compliance with laws and regulations. I told her I'd send somebody over to pick up the report and asked the address. Then, she asked for my initials. "UPI," I said. "No, I mean your initials," she said.

No recognition was paid to these people for their great help during the rodeo.

No-fault bill passage has chance despite Levi

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Advocates of national no-fault automobile insurance believe the proposal has a good chance of clearing Congress this year, despite Attorney General Edward Levi's testimony that the bill as presently written is "probably unconstitutional."

Levi told the Senate Commerce Committee Thursday the controversial measure raised "serious constitutional questions." He suggested the states be given a chance to enact their own no-fault plans.

At the same time, he agreed to submit clarifying language aimed at clearing up the constitutional issues involved.

A spokesman for the National Committee for an Effective No-fault said the group was "optimistic" about overall prospects for the bill, which passed the Senate last year but never has been acted on by the House. Sixteen states have passed no-fault laws of their own.

Under the no-fault concept, persons injured in auto accidents would receive compensation without regard to who was at fault in the accident.

"The issue," Levi said, "is whether it is permissible or appropriate for the Congress to intrude upon such state sovereignty as is left by requiring state agencies and employees to perform as though they were federal instruments or employees, or as though the federal Congress were the state legislature and possessor of the state's sovereignty."

"We should be concerned whether federal intrusion is going on when the states are now doing what I think they should do," he said.

Levi said the present bill "is probably unconstitutional. We must find a way to strengthen state sovereignty in this country. If we don't, we'll no longer have the states."

A spokesman for the no-fault committee said Levi apparently was expressing "a strong personal bias that the government shouldn't be involved in areas that the states are now exercising their authority in."

The American Trial Lawyers' Association, a prime opponent of the concept, said it agreed with Levi and has "consistently argued that any plan that would be a federal imposition on the states would be unconstitutional."

Committee chairman Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., said no-fault advocates "haven't been able to move in the legislature" because of stiff opposition from trial lawyers in the states.

"He called the existing auto insurance system 'a social sore' that is costing consumers billions of dollars."

ATTY. GEN. LEVI ... reap measure

Railroad rate hike approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 5 percent freight rate increase has been approved for the country's railroads, now suffering through a period of recession and unusually high inflation.

The Interstate Commerce Commission approved the increase Thursday, saying it would partially offset a 10 percent wage increase which went into effect in January and a 20 percent increase in health and welfare benefits effective this month.

The increase, to begin no earlier than June 20, will be across-the-board on all freight shipments.

Unlike the past two freight rate increases — 7 per cent earlier this year and 10 per cent last fall — no conditions or exceptions were imposed.

The increase is certain to ripple through the economy, resulting in some price increases, because the railroads carry most of the basic materials of industry such as coal, iron ore, steel and scrap metal.

The commission said "inflation has affected the railroads as well as other industries, and an increase of 5 per cent is necessary to enable the railroads to provide adequate and efficient railroad transportation service."

It said the overall financial position of the railroads has deteriorated during the recession, including a "substantial loss" from operations during the first quarter "for the nation's largest railroads."

That operating loss was the first in railroad history. The railroads have asked for another 2.5 percent increase to go into effect Oct. 1. The commission said that request would be considered later.

GOV. MARVIN MANDEL ... probers' target

Car stock trimmed

DETROIT (UPI) — The auto industry may have been able to reduce open-ended layoffs by another 1,650 workers, leaving 35,700 workers on indefinite layoffs. It was the 10th straight week Chrysler has cut into long-term layoffs.

Industry analysts estimated the supply of unsold cars entering June stood at 1.5 million, enough to last 68 days. But in recent months, the Post said, "investigators have developed evidence that Mandel received favors from Hess and Rodgers — including participation in business deals — at the same time they profited by state actions. It was not clear whether evidence of a pattern of favors would constitute grounds for indictments, the newspaper said."

Quoting "informed sources," the Post said the investigation had previously centered on W. Dale Hess and Harry W. Rodgers III, two of Mandel's friends and fund raisers, not on the governor himself. Production this week was at the highest point of the year with automakers planning output of 150,980 cars, according to the trade publication Automotive News. May sales, while down 21 per cent, were up 17 per cent over April — twice the normal increase.

The industry is holding to its estimated production of 623,000 cars this month, compared with 616,000 in May. General Motors, Chrysler and American Motors said Thursday they will operate all their assembly plants next week for a sixth straight week. Chrysler also said it had

Grand jury scrutinizes Mandel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal grand jury investigation of Maryland political corruption that led to the 1973 resignation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is focusing on Gov. Marvin Mandel, the Washington Post reported today.

Quoting "informed sources," the Post said the investigation had previously centered on W. Dale Hess and Harry W. Rodgers III, two of Mandel's friends and fund raisers, not on the governor himself.

But in recent months, the Post said, "investigators have developed evidence that Mandel received favors from Hess and Rodgers — including participation in business deals — at the same time they profited by state actions. It was not clear whether evidence of a pattern of favors would constitute grounds for indictments, the newspaper said."

Frank A. DeFilippo, Mandel's press aide, said Thursday the governor "has received notice that he is under investigation."

The alleged pattern of transactions drew attention to Mandel, making him a subject of the probe for the first time. Questions about the governor have been asked by prosecutors during recent grand jury sessions in Baltimore, the Post said.

A business deal reportedly central to the investigation was Hess and Rodgers' secret 1971 investment in Marlboro Associates.

Race-track, which subsequently profited from a number of state actions. The deal has been documented, publicly, and Mandel has insisted that he did not know of his friends' financial interest in the track.

Also involved is the acquisition by Hess and Rodgers company, Tidewater Insurance Associates Inc., in the early 1970s of Zolman Associates.

Northrop lists 4 payment cases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Northrop Corp. says it has found four cases in which its employees made payments which may have been used to bribe foreign officials.

The company announced the development Thursday. Earlier in the day, the State Department told Congress it opposes legislation to monitor U.S. companies which operate overseas to find out if they are bribing foreign officials. But it said it "condemns" bribery.

Northrop, a major airplane manufacturer, said it conducted a six-month investigation which "disclosed four instances in which Northrop employees made payments which may have gone to officials in foreign countries."

It said an employee "may have made an unlawful payment of $4,400 demanded by a tax assessor in Iran to settle a tax liability." In two cases, Northrop said, the company made payments totaling $450,000 "to its agent in Saudi Arabia in response to his representation that these funds were demanded by two Saudi Generals."

It said the fourth case, involving an alleged $15,000 payment to "a local politician" overseas, "remains unconfirmed."

Northrop said it views the cases with "great seriousness" and that the company "does not authorize or condone unlawful payments to government officials."

Gulf Oil chairman Bob Dorsey told Congress in May his firm had paid $5 million in bribes to foreign officials. United Brands, a fruit company, has acknowledged making $2 million in bribes in Honduras and an unnamed European country.

The State Department, the Securities and Exchange Commission and committees of Congress are investigating corporate bribery by U.S. firms doing business abroad, and legislation is being considered to prevent it.

One bill has been introduced by Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y. Solarz said it would direct the State Department to monitor overseas business activities of American citizens and firms "with a view toward detecting any activities which may violate any federal law."

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am no big women's libber, but I would like to know why no woman has ever had her name on an American dollar bill, a $5, $20, or any other denomination of paper money.

If that is the way a country honors its outstanding historical characters, I think it's time we gave that honor to a woman. How about making a survey to find out how other women feel about it?

ONE WOMAN

DEAR ONE: I polled 12 women. Nine agreed that it's time a woman got her face on paper money. Two said they didn't care one way or the other, and one said, "I don't want to get my face on any folding money, but I would like to get my HANDS on some!"

DEAR ABBY: This is a response to "His Wife" who's clinging to her husband for prestige, social position, money and retirement benefits. Let me tell you my story:

hearts. The next step would have been to see if he could do anything about it. The answer would be that he certainly could.

If Joe had ruffed his last diamond and then run all his trumps, he would have come down to a three-card end. North would be holding king small heart and the queen of clubs and Joe, the three hearts he had been dealt.

West would have had to hang on to the ace of clubs and hence could only have two hearts left. The queen would have dropped and Joe would have had nothing to complain about.

West had opened the king of clubs and the queen of diamonds, and East had taken his king and led back a club which Joe ruffed. Eventually, Joe had ruffed another club to see if the ace would drop. When that didn't come off, Joe had lost the heart finesse, game and rubber.

Hands—not face

My husband found an old flame, and they took up where he left off 30 years before. After a couple of miserable years of hanging on to him, I asked him for a nice "no fault" California divorce, which was the best move I ever made. I am now financially secure and emotionally at peace. No more scenes or churning stomach as I had when I knew he was with her. I don't have to put up with his lies, unexplained absences and sulking. And no more tennis socks to wash!

He is so grateful to me for giving him his freedom that he balances my checkbook, makes out my income taxes and even remembers my birthday. I live in a beautiful condominium and am back in college getting my master's degree—at 60! I can also stay up all night to read whenever I feel like it. Life is beautiful. I wish I'd done it years ago.

DEAR FREE: You all lucked out. Dissolving your marriage had all the sentiment of dissolving a business partnership. Not all parties to a divorce are that lucky.

American describes Mexican jail ordeal

Canyon plan scored

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Provisions in the proposed Canyon County comprehensive plan to keep farms a minimum size and direct community growth drew criticism from the first public hearing on the plan.

The majority of those testifying said they were in favor of a land use plan but had reservations about the present proposal.

Some 40 persons of the 150 persons attended the hearing testified on the plan. The hearing Wednesday, under the direction of the County Planning and Zoning Commission, was the first of two which must be held under state land use legislation.

The county commissioners also will hold a hearing at a future date, but the commission chairman, Ira Craven, assured the audience "there will be a plan adopted because it is mandated by the state."

Provisions that came under fire included a requirement that farms be a minimum of 40 acres in size, the confinement of residential growth to within one mile of the city limits, and contradictory statements on the location of rural residential areas.

Criticism also was directed to the method of holding the public hearing. The room where the afternoon hearing was held was overcrowded, resulting in some persons leaving before they could testify. The hearing continued in the evening.

Other persons asked for a delay on the adoption of the plan until there had been more public input. They asked the county commissioners to schedule more hearings at various locations in the county.

Cleared of charges

DONALD R. POSTLES, 48, a Colorado Springs, Colo., moving company executive, was jailed in Nogales, Mexico, last February after being charged with trying to smuggle guns and ammunition across the border. He was cleared of the charges Wednesday and released. Here he is pictured being reunited with his wife, Carol, at the Denver airport Thursday. (UPI)

DENVER (UPI) — An American businessman who spent more than three months in a Mexican jail said Thursday he was forced to sleep on a narrow cement bunk and said the only food served was watery soup, cereal, beans and tortillas.

"It was a nightmare, just a nightmare," said Donald Postles, a Colorado Springs moving company executive. "It's been a terrible ordeal."

Postles, 48, arrested while on a hunting trip last Feb. 16 at Nogales, Mexico, said the worst part of his jail term was the loneliness. He said he never knew whether efforts made by his wife, Carol, to secure his release were working.

"They break you mentally," said Postles. "It's part of their Dark Ages system. Once you get into the Mexican legal system, you're dead." He said his concrete bunk "was 32 inches wide. The cell was for three people but it was always crowded."

Postles, his brother, Norman, and two other men were stopped at Nogales as they crossed the border on a hunting trip. Border guards found two guns and 32 boxes of ammunition in their van, in violation of Mexican law. Donald Postles, who owned the van was jailed.

On Tuesday, a federal judge in Hermosillo, Mexico, ordered Postles released. He was escorted to the border Wednesday where he was met by friends from Tucson, Ariz.

The first thing I had was a cold beer," Postles said.

Postles stepped from an airplane, embraced and kissed his wife, Carol, and his son, Jeff, 12. He said he had one poignant visit with his wife, during his imprisonment.

Postles said his wife spent more than $15,000 in family and borrowed money to secure his release. He said the cash went to a Mexican attorney because American consular officials were unable to get him freed.

"If I had any advice, don't go to Mexico," he said. "I was living in a dream world, an citizen of America. I don't think like this. I don't think Americans knew about it. They'd never step across the border."

Church urges Amtrak action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, urged Amtrak officials Thursday to avoid further delay in implementing legislation that would provide a passenger train route across southern Idaho.

The 1975 Amtrak Improvement legislation places the decision of when to implement service and the responsibility for designating experimental routes in the hands of the Amtrak board of directors rather than the Department of Transportation.

The Secretary of Transportation for months had delayed implementing an Idaho route mandated by legislation sponsored by Church last year.

Dispatch system queried

SALMON, Idaho (UPI) — The Salmon City Council, because of a philosophical difference on law enforcement, has voted to keep the city out of the Lemhi County central dispatch system on the new courthouse.

The county had planned for a combination dispatcher to serve both city police and the sheriff's office.

Mayor Don Vial in a letter to the council suggested they advise the Lemhi County Commission that "under the present conditions of the sheriff's department," the city council does not wish to make a move at this time.

"We may reconsider this in the future if there is a change in the sheriff's department."

"I feel that we have not had any cooperation from the sheriff's department in the past one and one-half years. The police department is running quite well and the feeling of others who deal with the sheriff's department is that a move at the present time would not be in the best interests of the city, and I agree."

The mayor said he feels the entire system of direct law enforcement wanted by the people of Salmon would be affected by the move. He said he could show how the dispatch office in the police department is worth the extra money.

Proposal opposed

NAMPÁ, Idaho (UPI) — The Nampa City Council president William Johnson and two other councilmembers are opposed to recommendations for enlarging and moving the city hall complex.

Johnson and two other councilmembers said they opposed moving city hall from its present location. They also are opposed to increasing the size of the structure proposed by the mayor.

Another point of conflict is on the use of revenue sharing funds for the complex. Mayor Ernest Starr has suggested that all the funds be used for a new city hall to avoid the need for a bond issue. Two previous bond issues have failed.

The councilmen feel there are other uses for the funds such as a senior citizens center or a city golf course.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

No living animal uses the Australian crawl as a natural swimming technique. Maybe it works. But it's unnatural. Among people, the only natural swimming stroke is the dog paddle. So says a specialist who deals in such physical matters.

THAT BEAST known as the banded anteater devours from 10,000 to 20,000 termites a day, and nothing else.

Q. "BOTH watermelons and peanuts are native to Africa, no?"

A. Watermelon, yes. Peanuts, no. The Bantu tribe of Africa imported the first peanuts from South America. Slave traders then introduced them into the Jamestown colony here. The Bantus called them "nguba," incidentally, which is where we got the name "goober."

CITIZEN BAND

Truckers and sundry other drivers talk to one another on the road over citizen band radios. They share reports on the whereabouts of the smokies, which is what they call all lawmen in patrol cars. Ohio police are outlawing them. However, with a smoky report, he is also getting likely to hear an officer of the law announce the all-clear signal without identifying himself. Shortly thereafter, that driver can expect the singing of the siren, and oh, those flashing lights.

$2 BILLS

Now costs the Bureau of Engraving and Printing $11 to turn out 1,000 bills of any denomination. Too bad the $2 bill was done in. If it were reintroduced, we only need half as many $1 bills. That would save the government about $4 million a year. Or so says Bureau Director James A. Conlon.

THE MERCHANTISERS say you and I each pay about $500 a year just for cans and packages, not counting the price of what's inside them.

IT'S ESTIMATED that one out of every four Christian hymns was composed by a German.

THAT MAJOR metropolis wherein live the largest number of dogs is said to be Mexico City with more than a million.

CLIENT ASKS what colleges include rodeo riding in their sports curricula. Lot of them. Cal Poly, the University of Arizona, the University of Nebraska, Montana State, Colorado State and Utah State, to name a few. Understand more than 3,000 students annually go out for rodeo.
