Court orders new allotment plan for welfare food

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal appeals court, saying the present formula for food stamp payments shortchanges more needy persons, has told the Agriculture Department to come up with a new allotment plan that provides a nutritionally adequate diet.

"For a family that needs a loaf of bread, the offer of a slice is poor comfort," the three-judge panel said Thursday.

Ronald Pollack, attorney for the Food Research and Action Center of New York which handled the case, called the verdict "literally the most important legal victory to date in the anti-hunger area."

The ruling could have far-reaching effects on benefits of the food stamp program, which serves 19.8 million Americans at an expected annual cost of $5 billion in the fiscal year ending June 30.

The court gave the Agriculture Department 120 days to come up with an allotment plan providing all stamp recipients enough aid to buy the nutritionally adequate diet required by the federal food stamp law.

Department officials had no immediate comment on the case. But Pollack said the government could be expected to appeal the decision "because of its potential cost impact." The lawyer predicted the ruling, if left standing, would "substantially" hike allotments for many — perhaps all — of the needy people getting stamps.

The court said the current system of calculating payments for individual families resulted in grants below the amount needed to buy the Agriculture Department's "economy" diet for many families.

But it did not decide whether the department correctly had based payments on the cost of the economy diet, which stresses foods such as beans and cereals instead of high-priced meats.

The court also said the department failed to hold public hearings as required when it adopted allotment system rules in 1971.

In setting allotments, the Agriculture Department figures the "economy diet" cost for a hypothetical family of four and uses that to set payments for other families which may have different age mixes and different food costs.

The monthly allotment for a family of four now is stamps worth $154 at the grocery store, and will rise to $162 a month July 1.

Karl Wilson dies

TWIN FALLS — Karl J. Wilson, 58, manager of Hix of Magle Valley and a well-known musician, died Thursday following surgery.

A resident of Twin Falls since 1960, he was the leader of the Maglechor, a men's singing group and barbershop quartet. A former music director in the Boise school system, Mr. Wilson was a veteran of World War II, member of Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce and former member of the Elks Lodge and Kiwanis Club in Twin Falls.

A full obituary and funeral arrangements are on page 2 of today's Times-News.

Mine explosion kills 5

BARNESLEY, England (UPI) — A coal mine explosion at the Houghton Main colliery killed five miners late Thursday.

One other miner was injured and three were treated for shock after the blast 400 feet below the surface and about three quarters of a mile from the mine entrance.

About 200 miners in the pit at the time were unharmed.

It was the first fatal mine accident in Britain since 14 miners were killed in an elevator plunge down a 1,400-foot shaft at Markham colliery in July 1973.

Barry Jr. may run

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A committee was formed Thursday to determine if Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. could be successful in a campaign for a seat in the Senate, which would create a father-son team there.

Goldwater, a Republican, holds a congressional seat representing a Los Angeles area district, while his father, the 1964 GOP presidential candidate, represents Arizona in the Senate.

Alabama death penalty voted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The Alabama House, overcoming stalling tactics by black members, voted Thursday night to restore the death penalty for certain types of murder.

The bill would make "intentional murder" punishable by death if committed during commission of another felony. Other types of murder to be punishable by death would be the killing of two or more people, the killing of a police officer or prison guard, the murder of a public official, and murder by an airplane hijacker.

It would also impose the death penalty for any murder committed by a person convicted of murder within the previous 20 years.

HEW choice reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — David Mathews, a Democrat and president of the University of Alabama, has been picked to be the next secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, political sources said today.

The sources said President Ford picked Mathews to succeed Caspar W. Weinberger, who has indicated in the past he would like to return to private life.

Mathews at 39 would be the youngest member of Ford's Cabinet if confirmed by the Senate. He would also be the first southerner on the Cabinet.

Connally in court again

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former Treasury Secretary John Connally was back in court Thursday for the first time since he was acquitted in April on bribery charges. Connally was named one of six jurors for a trial involving a speeding ticket.

Connally, who refused to discuss politics while waiting in the jury room, said it felt a lot better to be in court as a juror than as a defendant.

Salgon embassy burned $5 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. embassy in Saigon burned $5 million in U.S. currency immediately before the collapse of South Vietnam so it would not fall into Communist hands, a General Accounting report revealed today.

The $5 million was part of an emergency shipment of $125 million which Ambassador Graham Martin requested two days before the government collapsed for severance pay to Vietnamese nationals.

As of the date of the report May 30, 1975, $2.7 million of this emergency shipment was still unaccounted for.

Finn government resigns

WELCOME TO FEAR CITY

A Survival Guide for Visitors to the City of New York

Leaflet distributed by NYC workers

NYC cops, firemen protest

NEW YORK (UPI) — Off-duty police and firemen were served today with a federal court order prohibiting them from distributing pamphlets describing New York as "Fear City."

Almost immediately, the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association filed a petition in Brooklyn Federal Court to have the order vacated on the basis that their members' freedom of speech was being violated.

PBA president Ken McFeeley, John May, president of the Transit Police Benevolent Association and Richard Vizzini, president of the Uniformed Firefighters' Association, were served with the injunction shortly before 10:30 a.m. at the International arrivals building at Kennedy Airport.

"We are police officers," Maye told newsmen. "We expect others to obey the law and we will obey them."

The pamphlets, distributed in protest of impending police and fireman layoffs, warn tourists to watch out for their safety, particularly on public transit buses and subways.

McFeeley, May and Vizzini showed up at the airport with some 30 off-duty police officers who planned to hand them out to incoming tourists.

However, Port Authority police told them a permit which would have allowed them to hand the pamphlets out had been revoked.

Minutes later, they were served with the court order.

The temporary restraining order said the scheme "endangers the safety and security of New Yorkers" and "threatens the economic well-being of the city."

The workers, led by police and fire unions, were angry about proposed cuts in municipal services. Their proposed pamphlet portrays New York as a haven for murderers, muggers, rapists and other criminals because of the budget-induced layoffs.

They wanted to hand them out today at airports, bus and rail terminals and midtown hotels to warn tourists of potential dangers in the city as a result of the cutbacks in protective personnel.

The "Fear City" campaign was being waged to protest proposed layoffs of more than 6,000 workers.

Project stalled

TWIN FALLS — Demolition of the old part of Lincoln School, originally set for early this month, has been pushed back because the contractor has withdrawn his bid.

Supl. George Staudacher said today the demolition project will have to be re-bid. The district received a letter from low-bidder Mike Stafford, Stafford Excavation, Boise, withdrawing his bid "due to injury." His bid was $2,888.

The second low-bidder at $14,295, All Cities Wrecking, Meridian, is presently bonded to capacity because of a full work load, Staudacher said, and cannot offer a performance bond.

"I want a performance bond," Staudacher said. "The procedure of re-bidding the project will take at least two and one-half weeks, he said, meaning the demolition project will probably still be underway when school begins in the fall.

The re-bidding also affects the landscaping project at Lincoln. Trustees recently accepted a Flier, for the project, but Staudacher said the need to re-bid may alter plans for landscaping."

Stafford also had the low bid to demolish the bleachers at Lincoln School last year, but withdrew his bid on that project.

He subsequently sub-contracted to do the job for All Cities Wrecking, the second low bidder on the bleacher project.

Trujillo slaying backed by CIA

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency contributed "material support" to a group of Dominicans who assassinated the Dominican Republic's dictator, Gen. Rafael Trujillo-Molina on May 30, 1961, authoritative government sources have said.

According to the sources, this is one of the "successful assassination attempts" mentioned Thursday by Rep. James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, who is the chairman of a House subcommittee investigating the CIA.

The details of the assassination have also been supplied to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. Several government sources said that the Trujillo case was the successful attempt mentioned recently by the committee's chairman, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Information about the Dominican assassination was given to President Ford by William E. Colby, director of Central Intelligence, in January, authoritative sources said. A CIA spokesman had no comment on the report.

It is unclear what foreign policy objective of the United States would have been served in 1961 by the killing of Trujillo. Several sources, however, said it was part of a "series of events" connected with the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba the month before.

It is also unclear from either public or private reports at how high a level Trujillo's death was authorized. NORIS clear written authorization occurred during the administration of President Kennedy, who took office in January, 1961, or that of President Eisenhower, Kennedy's predecessor.

Trujillo was killed in a hall of gunfire as he drove from his home in San Cristobal to Ciudad Trujillo, capital of the Dominican Republic. His death ended 31 years of what had been called an oppressive dictatorship.

The general was killed by seven Dominicans allegedly led by Gen. Juan Tomas Diaz, who was later killed in a gunfight with Dominican policemen.

According to authoritative sources, CIA files indicate that the agency supplied "material support" to what one source called an "indigenous" group of Dominicans who plotted and killed Trujillo.

TF teacher pact ratified

By CRICKET BIRD Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Twin Falls Education Association Wednesday night ratified the negotiations agreement recently drawn up with the school board.

Teacher negotiating team chairman Robert Klus said about 100 TFEA members attended the meeting, held at O'Leary Junior High School. He said about 210 of the district's 270 teachers belong to the association. At the meeting the vote was "heavily in favor" of ratifying the agreement, he added.

The agreement recognizes the TFEA as the exclusive bargaining agent for teachers and lasts through Oct. 1, 1976, provided the association retains the backing of a majority of teachers.

Salaries, fringe benefits, working conditions and "other mutually agreed to items," are fair game for negotiation. A major compromise was the decision to waive mediation and fact-finding procedures, employed when negotiations breakdown.

Other provisions set up the site of the negotiating table, ratification procedures and other routine procedures.

At the ratification meeting, a district's new salary scale didn't get much discussion, Klus said.

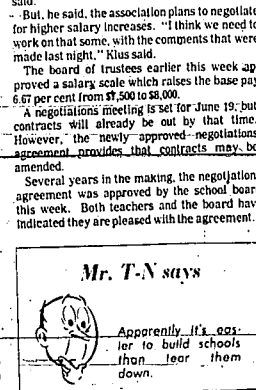

"But, he said, the association plans to negotiate for higher salary increases. "I think we need to work on that some, with the comments that were made last night," Klus said.

The board of trustees earlier this week approved a salary scale which raises the base pay 6.67 per cent from $7,500 to $8,000.

A negotiations meeting is set for June 19; but contracts will already be out by that time. However, the newly approved negotiations agreement provides that contracts may be amended.

Several years in the making, the negotiations agreement was approved by the school board this week. Both teachers and the board have indicated they are pleased with the agreement.

MV taxable sales hike betters Gem, US rates

By DIANE ALTERS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Taxable sales in Magic Valley during the first quarter of 1975 were 12 per cent higher than a year earlier. Increases in taxable sales in the eight-county area were above state and national levels.

According to figures published by the Idaho State Tax Commission, taxable sales rose to $74.4 million in the first three months of this year, compared to $66.4 million during the same period last year.

Valley sales rose at a faster rate than the 40.3 per cent inflation rate during the period.

The figures are for taxable sales only, which amount to about 41 per cent of total sales. Accrual figures are not available for total sales.

Many of the outlying counties saw the largest increases in sales, while Twin Falls County sales rose at a slower rate. Only Gooding County saw a sales decline.

Camas, the county with the smallest revenue, increased its taxable sales the most at 19.7 per cent by bringing in $285,912 this year compared to $236,228 in last year's first quarter.

Blaine County also had a big increase. The $14.1 million collected during this year's first quarter was a 17.5 per cent increase over the $12 million brought in during the same time last year.

Minidoka's County taxable sales were $7.5 million, up 15.2 per cent from last year's $6.5 million in the first quarter of the year.

Jerome County brought in about $4.7 million, a 13.9 per cent increase over the $4.1 million in the first quarter of 1974.

Cassia county's increase was only slightly less at 13.7 per cent with $4 million this year compared to $3.4 million brought in from January to March last year.

Twin Falls County's $28.79 million in taxable sales in this year's first quarter was a 9.9 per cent increase over last year's first quarter taxable sales of $27.11 million; Blaine county's taxable sales of $681,485 rose only 8.7 per cent this year compared to the first quarter of last year.

The only county to lower its taxable sales from 1974 to 1975 was Gooding County, which brought in about $3.3 million in the first quarter of 1975 a 3 per cent decrease from the $3.4 million raised in the same period in 1974.

Assassins aided by CIA

The assassination touched off a massive wave of opponents of the Trujillo regime following the attack. At one point some 60 persons had been taken into custody, news accounts said.

"When this is all said and done," one source said, "I think it will be clear that no member of the C.I.A. or Americans were hired to assassinate Trujillo or Castro. What was being talked about in these cases is aid and comfort to indigenous elements."

"The degree to which the Dominican group got aid," this source said, "may have been more than we now wish."

Under the U.S. Criminal Code it is an illegal act for anyone within the United States if he "knowingly begins or sets foot or provides or prepares a means for or furnishes the money for, or takes part in, any military or naval expedition or enterprise to be carried on from thence against the territory or dominion of any foreign prince or state, or of any colony, district or people with whom the United States is at peace."

Suspect arrested

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Charles Stickle, a suspect in the rape and burning deaths of two 16-year-old girls, was apprehended two weeks ago under another name, police said today.

Stickle, 20, of West Conshocken, Pa., was wanted by police in the rape and burning deaths of Tina Statuti and Beverly Roddenbough.

The charge is a felony punishable by a $5,000 fine or imprisonment for not more than three years or both. Though the statute of limitations may have run out on this charge, a conspiracy to commit the act may have continued well after Trujillo's actual death.

'Big brothers' needed

TWIN FALLS — The boys are anywhere between 8 and 15 years old, they may have been in trouble before or have good records, they might be smart or slow, but they have one thing in common — none of them have fathers.

The Big Brothers committee in the Twin Falls area is trying to match up some of these boys, little brothers, with adult male volunteers, big brothers. The only problem is that there are plenty of little brothers, but not enough big brothers.

Affiliated with the national Big Brother organization, the local group started organizing in November. The organizing committee consists of members of the community including a judge, social worker, educators, counselor, psychologist, YMCA official, and a representative of the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

"One big problem is getting big brothers," said Rick Snider, a biology instructor at the College of Southern Idaho. "We estimate that there are at least 250 boys that would be eligible for the program."

The idea behind the program is to get some of these boys together without their fathers. The program "gives a chance for the big brother and the little brother to get out and have a big drink and discuss things that need to be talked about," Snider said.

"We encourage the big brother to meet with his little brother twice a month," Snider said, maybe to play ball, camp out, or just visit.

Before a big brother is matched up for the job, "of course," the mother's permission is asked, Snider said. And often, it's the mother who asks for the big brother. Many of the families are on welfare, or in others the mother works, Snider said, and the "mother feels there is a definite need for a male influence."

Any male over 20 years old can be a big brother. For more information, men should contact Snider at 733-9554 or 734-4125, or Tim Koehnauer at 733-6260.

Congress ponders use of tall smokestacks

© Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Congress is weighing legislation that would allow electric utilities and other major polluters to use tall smokestacks to comply with air quality standards instead of removing the pollutants at their source. Presently, coal-fired power plants are required to burn a high energy, low-sulfur coal or install costly pollution control systems called scrubbers to clean the emissions before they are released into the atmosphere.

Rather than use the high quality coal or the install expensive scrubbers, the energy industry wants to use tall smokestacks. It has asked Congress to amend the Clean Air Act of 1970 in two key ways:

— Eliminate requirements that restrict the amount of pollutants that can be emitted into the atmosphere and, as an alternative, require that emissions meet only ground-level, or ambient, air standards — an objective that tall stacks could meet.

— Prohibit states from having air quality standards for coal-fired units that are more stringent than federal standards. However, federal health officials at the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) say that while tall stacks reduce ground-level concentrations of sulphur dioxide and other harmful pollutants, the emissions are converted, at some distance from the stack, into sulfates and sulphuric acid and "fall-out" as "acid rain."

According to Leon S. Doehring, an air pollution expert at the U.S. Forest Service, who has studied the impact of chimney emissions on forests, there is growing evidence that acid rain poses a "serious threat to the environment in the United States." For decades chimneys between 400 and 700 feet tall have been built in the United States.

Oakley couple files damage suit

TWIN FALLS — A half-million dollar damage suit has been filed in Fifth Judicial District Court here as the result of a New Year's Day traffic accident.

Jack A. and Cheryl Strauss, Oakley, are seeking damages in a suit against Craig Nelson, Robert Guff and the Vern Schutte and Sons Inc., all Twin Falls.

The plaintiffs charge negligence on the part of the Schutte in permitting Nelson and Guff to operate a company-owned pickup truck.

The truck, they say, was involved in an accident Jan. 1, 1975, colliding with a vehicle driven by Strauss in which his wife was a passenger.

As a result, the complaint states, Cheryl Strauss suffered a permanent back injury and has been bedridden the past five months and may continue to be bedridden in the future. The accident occurred on Addison Avenue East in Twin Falls at 12:45 a.m.

The plaintiffs ask the court to award them $500,000 for injury and suffering of Mrs. Strauss, $30,000 to Mr. Strauss for the loss of her companionship and $6,000 for loss of her ability to perform household services. They also ask $1,767.28 medical expenses.

AFL-CIO receives grant

TWIN FALLS — The State AFL-CIO members learned Monday that the organization received a $31,000 grant to hire someone to oversee the use of federal job money.

Idaho Department of Employment Director John Nichols announced Monday at the state AFL-CIO convention here that the organization's application for the grant was approved. The money would come from the Federal Comprehensive Employment Training ACT (CETA) for a "coordinator's" salary and traveling expenses for a year of training and education in connection with jobs created by the CETA money, according to James MacFarland, Boise, the former director of the Human Resources Development office which distributed CETA funds until the agency became part of the department of employment earlier this year.

Both Nichols and MacFarland had not heard of another such grant made to an organized labor body, but MacFarland said that he thought it was a "way to enhance the whole training mechanism" of CETA.

A spokesman for the U.S. Department of Labor's Manpower Administration in Seattle said he knew of no similar grant made in other states in his western region, although job training grants have gone to unions on a national level.

About $448,000 not connected with the state labor organization has been made available for job training under the CETA program, MacFarland said. He said $130,000 had also gone to the Association of Idaho Cities for seven state job developers and a state coordinator under the act.

CIA taken to woodshed in sorrow, not anger

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency was lured from its lawfully assigned mission by two presidents and their staffs to engage in illegal domestic surveillance and other questionable practices. Except for intercepting and opening mail from abroad and a bizarre experiment in behavior-influencing drugs — two projects it conceived on its own — the CIA was led into dubious ventures by White House requests and pressures. These were the central findings of the Rockefeller Commission, which inquired into alleged domestic transgressions of the spy agency over a five-month period, taking 2,900 pages of testimony from 51 witnesses. Its final report to President Ford was moderately critical of the CIA, but in language and tone the commission took the agency to the woodshed — more in sorrow than in anger and staunchly defended the nation's need for an intelligence apparatus. Ford plans to send all information developed by the commission to the Justice Department, including unpublished materials dealing with alleged assassination plots against foreign leaders. The eight-member commission, headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, said it found "no credible evidence" of any CIA involvement in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, including no links between the agency and Lee Harvey Oswald, identified by the Warren Commission as Kennedy's sole assassin. Administration officials said the commission's incomplete inquiry into the assassination plots dated back to the administration of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, although public speculation has centered on the role of Kennedy administration officials in schemes to eliminate Cuba's Fidel Castro, the Dominican Republic's Rafael Trujillo and the Congo's Patrice Lumumba. The latter two leaders were assassinated by unknown killers. For the abuses which it described in detail, affording a partial glimpse into the techniques of a secret operation world-wide in scope, the commission recommended tighter scrutiny and supervision by both Congress and the executive branch. It called on the President to recommend to Congress the establishment of a joint committee on intelligence to take over the oversight role which has been played, loosely and indifferently, by the armed services committees of the House and Senate. It also recommended that the President's former intelligence advisory board, of which Rockefeller and others on the panel were once members, be expanded to include oversight of the CIA. The new oversight board, composed of distinguished citizens should have a full-time chairman and staff, the commission said. It further recommended that no CIA director should serve for more than 10 years. The commission was explicitly critical of former Director Richard Helms for his failure to resist President Nixon's demand for CIA files on the Bay or Pigs and the Cuban missile crisis, apparently to be used for political purposes in the 1972 campaign, for destroying Watergate-related files after being asked by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield to preserve them, and for delayed reactions in the Watergate scandal.

CIA coverup?

New York Times

The one area in which the Ford Administration has won almost universal respect in the first ten months of Mr. Ford's Presidency has been in its fidelity to principles of openness and candor, a particularly welcome change from the conspiratorial air of the Nixon White House.

That reputation, with its important contribution to restoring respect for governmental integrity, will be imperiled if the Administration fails to release immediately all parts of the report of the Rockefeller Commission on its investigation into the Central Intelligence Agency.

Damage already has been done by indications of White House manipulation and even large-scale deletion in the report's contents. When the President appointed the commission five months ago, the whole supposed point was to insure an exhaustive and thoroughly detached inquiry. The main charges were that the CIA had been guilty of massive violations of law, especially in its domestic espionage activities.

Later, when alleged assassination plots were reported, Mr. Ford extended the life of the commission from three to five months. The pretense now that the commission has not had time — or cannot be given time — to complete its studies of the assassination charges and, therefore, is submitting a separate, presumably secret report on these charges deserves no credence.

Only last week Mr. Rockefeller stressed the comprehensiveness of the findings the commission was submitting to the President. "No stones are left unturned, no punches pulled," he said.

The doubts the White House is now creating about when, if ever, the full report will be made public, are a disservice to itself and the C.I.A. — and even more a disservice to the country. The United States needs a strong intelligence agency; it also needs assurance that that agency is operating under effective control and within the limits established by law.

There can be no confidence in that score under present circumstances. It is no excuse to say that the C.I.A., and the assassination charges are also being explored — as they should be — by a Senate committee. nor should the buck be passed to the Senate on what to release.

Americans are entitled to full illumination now on any possible complicity by their government in domestic espionage or attempts at subversion abroad by nnyder.

Psychological effect of British vote important

LONDON — The British haven't gone on the wagon, but they've taken the pledge. Thirty-five years after they offered common citizenship to France, and precisely 41 years after they invaded Europe, they finally decided to marry it. It has been a long and stormy courtship. Nobody can say they didn't think it ever.

Before the count began, it was obvious that something unusual was happening here. When the polls closed, the sky cleared and you could see the Thames, strung with beads and lights in the night, from Blackfriars to Big Ben and the houses of Parliament; and on counting day the most beautiful day of the year, the sun came out and by tea time, the officially appointed hour of announcement, it was obvious that the British had said "oui" to Europe and the future.

The psychological effect of this decision is probably more important than anything else. So long as doubts and ambiguities remained about British policies and British public opinion, it was "a little awkward," as the British say, for anybody to know what to do.

Not only in this island, but in Europe and North America — not to mention the Communist and Third Worlds — it was hard to figure out whether united Europe was for real or for grabs.

There was another problem that was becoming not only awkward but alarming for Britain. If nobody knew whether she was in or out of Europe, who in the United States or in elsewhere was going to invest in a divided Britain, running at over 20 per cent a year in inflation?

Before the vote, there were endless arguments here about what a "yes" vote would do to the price of meat, and even the palace was beginning to complain about the narrow political exercise in "statistificuffs," but the British people answered in larger historical terms — beyond statistics, personalities, regions, or even parties. The press here is suspending judgment, which is not common in Fleet Street. British governments have taken so many pledges to go on the wagon and reform in the past that writers in Fleet Street, are a little skeptical about new chapters of "Isolationists anonymous."

The Guardian's big front-page headline the day after the count was: "Twin Crises ('Inads the Europhoria' — meaning Wilson's economic and political thunderbolts. The Times said, There is no point in trying not to be happy on one of the few genuinely fortunate days that Britain has had in recent years." But, thereafter, ignoring its own advice, The Times didn't sound particularly merry.

Samuel Brittan, writing in the Financial Times, said that the British were always being promised something lovely "after something else." Ice cream and bananas "after the war." Essential economic decisions "after the election" of 1974; and then common sense 25 years. The economic crisis and the referendum have finally arrested all this fiddling. Britain's own "silent majority" has finally been liberated from party allegiance on one issue and has backed the moderates who want to get to larger questions and new issues.

In fact, one gets the impression here that the leaders of all the parties, plus the leader of management, labor and the press are vaguely bored by their own propaganda and welcome a vote that will at least raise new questions.

The tone of public discussion here since the referendum has already changed — for how long, nobody knows. But here is James Callaghan sitting in the Foreign Office, where the old stones are peeling from the roof, talking again about new chapters and even about "a new age."

The chancellor of the exchequer is talking about measures to cut the inflation in half within a year, and even the British labor union leaders are agreeing to cooperate with the European Community's institutions, and talk to the German labor leaders about their cooperative labor-management councils.

The Tory press is giving Prime Minister Wilson credit for liberating his country, his party, and even himself from past assumptions and traps, and the liberal press is praising Edward Heath for his long struggle to bring Britain into the Common Market.

Wilson will not rush toward political union in Europe. He has to unify his own party and country before he can help unify Europe, and he is nothing if he is not a master of political timing. But the mood is different here now. The general theme is that nothing is changed yet, but everything will be different and that Britain, as Roy Jenkins said, is going into Europe "actively, constructively, and enthusiastically."

The British have not changed their problems, but they have changed the question, for themselves, for Europe and for America, and they are probably right in agreeing, from right to left, that this was an historic decision.

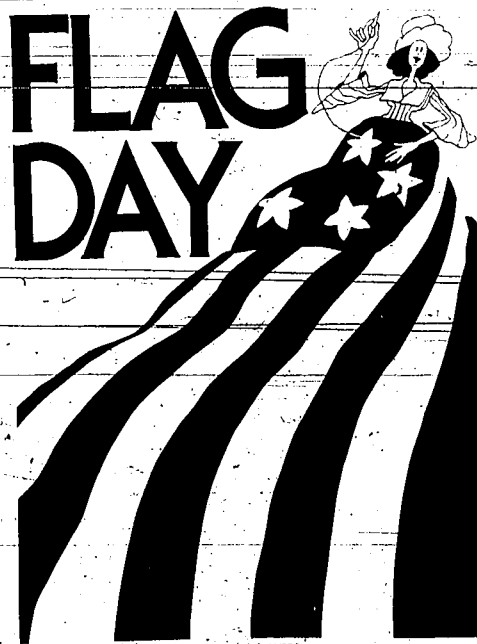

JAMES RESTON

"after the next election," Britain took "after referendum." Thereafter, Britain took cautious refuge in more "Statistificuffs."

All this shows a certain hard-headed realism, but the imponderables in this country have always been more important than the mathematics. After all, if the British had ever had the check to try in run the world for a hundred years — not of a little island off the coast of Europe, or those warty the American Continent or reflect the European continent for Leopard changes spots?

WASHINGTON — Yes, Junior, that was indeed Tom Hayden on television the other night, announcing that he would run against Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., in the 1976 Democratic primary. He said he liked the president of your local Rotary Club.

The radical student leader of the 1960s, a founder of the Students for a Democratic Society, was neatly dressed and conventionally coiffed, and spoke in well-modulated tones. He did not call President Ford any dirty names, nor did he tell bathroom jokes, nor lapse into any four-letter words.

Hayden, who was one of the leaders of protest demonstrations at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1968 and later was acquitted of conspiracy charges in the notorious Chicago Seven trial, could have passed for a populist of the George McGovern persuasion. He dismissed Tunney as "a packaged politician, more image than substance," who was "more responsive to the corporate interests than to the public."

Hayden later told reporters he had not abandoned his earlier radicalism, but defined that radicalism as "working for social change." He said, "The radicalism of the Sixties is fast becoming the common sense of the Seventies." In short, Tom Hayden is now an authentic office-seeker, a disappointment to critics who expected him to show up in bib overalls, spouting a vocabulary that would be censored by family newspapers.

And yet, Hayden has not changed that much since his Chicago days. He was unique in the SDS in that he could adapt to his surroundings. He held authority in contempt, but he was capable of conducting civilized discourse with authority.

ANDREW TULLY

Even in the wild year of 1968, Hayden displayed this capacity when he was hauled up before the now defunct House Un-American Activities Committee, a few months after the Chicago riots. For four hours he answered questions in pear-shaped tones, with an air of deference which would have done credit to a Boy Scout. Worse, from the traditional SDS viewpoint, he sounded as if he had nothing to hide.

No, he said, the demonstrators had not intended to provoke violence at the convention, but only to illuminate the "immorality" of a scene. He seemed saddened at the memory of the obscenity of the protesters' had buried at the Chicago police, but argued quietly that they were a justifiable reaction to the cops' indiscriminate use of billy clubs.

Rockefeller commission report at least gets rid of 'massive' hangup

By CLIFTON DANIEL
N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — For nearly six months this town has been hung up on one word relating to the domestic activities of the Central Intelligence Agency. The word is "massive."
If the Rockefeller commission, which investigated the C.I.A.'s domestic operations, did nothing else in its report, which was released Tuesday, it should have disposed of that hangup.
Nowhere in its report did the commission use the term "massive," either in confirmation or denial, although that word was the one used in the original newspaper report of illegal domestic activities, which led directly to the establishment of the commission.
That first report, written by Seymour M. Hersh, appeared in the New York Times and other newspapers. William E. Colby, director of Central Intelligence, responded directly to it in his appearance before the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on intelligence the following Jan. 15. "I flatly deny," he said, "the charge in the New York Times of Dec. 22, 1974, that the Central Intelligence Agency, directly violating its charter, conducted massive illegal domestic operations."

Vice President Rockefeller, chairman of the presidential commission, and his vice chairman, Douglas C. Dillon, each followed the Colby line in subsequent comments on their investigation of the C.I.A. They said they could not accept the word "massive."
"Sure enough, their commission's report avoided the word, but in place of the word 'massive' it used terms such as 'considerable,' 'large-scale' and 'substantial.'"
In a passage on page 148 it referred to "a veritable mountain of material" — 12,500 files, cables, memoranda and tapes — accumulated by Operation CHAOS, an operation against American antiwar dissidents between 1969 and 1974. And on top of this, the report said,

"was a computer system containing an index of over 300,000 names and organizations," mostly American and apparently unconnected with espionage.
In addition, the Rockefeller commission report disclosed that for more than 20 years the C.I.A. had been a law unto itself inside America's democratic society.
During that time, the report said, there was an agreement between the Justice Department and the C.I.A. "providing that the agency was to investigate crimes by C.I.A. employees or agents which involved government money or property or might involve operational security." It was left to the C.I.A. to decide whether any of its employees should be prosecuted for such offenses.
One man who has known the C.I.A. for most of its 39 years could not recall Tuesday a single prosecution against a C.I.A. agent — a remarkable record for an organization with 15,000 or more employees.
Yet, the Rockefeller commission report contained many examples of clearly illegal actions by the agency. In one case, a foreign defector was "held in solitary confinement under spartan living conditions" for three years. That would be a clear violation of the rights of habeas corpus and due process, which apply to aliens as well as citizens in the United States.

As for murder — that is, assassination plots against foreign leaders, with which the C.I.A. has been charged — the Rockefeller commission said nothing. It undertook an inquiry because of the public furor. "But time did not permit a full investigation," its report said, and its evidence was simply turned over to President Ford, who intends in turn to give it to the Department of Justice and to Congressional committees.
The President himself had really started the issue initially. On Thursday, Jan. 16, he gave a lunch at the White House to a group that had entertained him previously, as vice president, at lunch in New York. The group included the publisher of the New York Times, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, and the newspaper's principal editors.
On that occasion in January, so far as one can recall, the President for the first time used the word "assassinations" in a discussion with newsmen of the activities of the C.I.A.
The President's manner was grave. Exactly what he said, although it was of the gravest import, was never reported.
That part of the conversation was of the record, and after an unsuccessful effort to have it put on the record, the New York Times respected the President's confidence.
But the substance of his remarks began to leak out, and in six weeks they were being heard on the CBS television evening news and elsewhere.
Various sources reported that the president had made these points:
1. The C.I.A. as an institution was needed to protect the security interests of the United States and should not be destroyed.
2. For that reason, he had picked a commission to investigate charges against the C.I.A. that could be relied upon to understand and respect its national defense role.
3. The charges against the C.I.A. were that it had illegally engaged in activities against Americans inside the United States, in violation of its charter from Congress. The Rockefeller commission was therefore limited to investigating the domestic activities of the agency.
4. If the commission should wander into the foreign field, it would stumble upon all kinds of activities, including assassinations — and it was then and only then that the trigger word was used. There was no discussion, no elaboration.

5. There was nothing to be gained by opening the Pandora's box of assassinations. It would only lead to futile recriminations. Well-meaning people in the past had ordered activities that seemed right and proper at the time, but might seem wrong and improper in the light of new circumstances. The new generation should not pass judgment on the old.
Those were the themes of Ford's concern in January, after he read the charges against the C.I.A. and had a briefing on them from William E. Colby, director of Central Intelligence, a briefing that included some information on assassinations.
Those were the same themes, sounded Monday night at the President's news conference in the White House Rose Garden. There he announced his intention — to release the Rockefeller commission's report on the C.I.A.'s domestic activities and to send the commission's information on assassinations to the Justice Department and to the Congressional committees investigating the intelligence community.
Ford said: "It remains my personal conviction that the C.I.A. and other units of the intelligence community are vital to the survival of this country."
Expressing his confidence in the Rockefeller commission members, he responded to a question about whether Vice President Rockefeller had embarrassed him in conducting the C.I.A. investigation by saying, "the vice president and I understood each other perfectly."

Again and again he emphasized by using the word "domestic," that the commission was supposed to investigate only the activities of the C.I.A. inside the United States.
Ford even absolved the commission of the charge that it had not probed deeply enough into the assassination charges against the agency by saying that he had "suggested that the commission undertake an investigation of any domestic involvement in political assassinations."
"Ford did not explain," nor was he asked to explain, involvement. Presumably, he was thinking of the recruitment of Mafia gunmen or other hangers on in this country, to commit assassinations abroad.

The President was particularly emphatic in his disinclination to pass judgment on the acts of his predecessors in the presidency.
"I think historians will make those judgments, better than anybody — in 1975 — including myself," Ford said, and for that reason he cautioned the House and Senate committees that would receive the assassination evidence "to use the utmost prudence in how they handle the material."

In particular, Ford was at pains to disavow any intention of discrediting the possible candidacy of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the presidency by casting reflections on his brother, the late President Kennedy, whose role in alleged plots against Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba has lately been publicly discussed.

Students deserve recognition

Editor, Times-News:
Bravo for Cheryl Glesler from Twin Falls! Her sentiments concerning the Fifth District High School rodeo and the rest of the paper echoed mine and many others exactly. These students work year around getting their equipment and horses prepared, plus many work at jobs to pay all the costs involved, which is extensive.
However, it seems the Times-News doesn't think it's news if high school students are involved in constructive activities, only if it's something illegal.
I'd like to mention another case of incomplete reporting. The High School State Track Meet was held in Idaho Falls and for those who weren't there, I'd like to mention two races this paper completely ignored.
A Hagerman girl took fourth in the 440 yd. dash and the Hagerman girls' mile relay team took first with a 4:19.9 breaking the existing state record of 4:25.0 set by Camas County in 1974. These statistics came from the Bolse Statesman.

Come on, let's give all these students the recognition that they've earned by much hard work. All you read in the paper is how teen-age crime is on the rise, but no praise for the many students involved in worthwhile activities. Let's hope your coverage of these events improves 100 per cent in the future.

Editor's note: Both writers should know that the Times-News carried at least three stories in advance of the rodeo and a listing of winners afterward. Additional stories and photos covered the rodeo gone contestants.
We agree that worthwhile accomplishments of Magic Valley teen-agers should be recognized.
In fact, at least 20 times as much Times-News space is used for commendable activities by youths than for stories about their troubles — as it should be. Our readers deserve to know where our emphasis is placed.

Costs requested

Editor, Times-News:
I noticed Mr. Lazarus's article on rural fire districts and Mr. Nelson's quote on insurance going from $97.60 to $81.10, but he didn't tell anyone what it would cost all of us as taxpayers to pay the salaries — because there would have to be salaries, trucks and buildings, and several districts would be very expensive wouldn't they. Very, very misleading Mr. Lazarus.
What does it now cost to maintain and staff the two fire departments we have in Twin Falls City alone? Let's have some figures Mr. Lazarus. Let's have the true picture with all costs.

Success told

Editor, Times-News:
I have succeeded where Diogenes failed. And without a lantern yet.
Two weeks ago I lost my wallet while fishing in Snake River Canyon. After searching for some time, my daughter, Carol, and I returned home empty handed.
June 7 a small package arrived in the mail. Inside was my wallet, complete with credit cards, driver's license, a blank check, hunting license, etc., and $11 in cash. There was no return address on the package, nor was there a note inside. I have found the honest man, but I still don't know who he is.
Many, many thanks.

Testimony review set by senator

Washington Star
The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says he will review the testimony of Richard Helms to determine if the former Central Intelligence Agency director lied to the committee during hearings that preceded his confirmation as ambassador to Iran.
Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., said he wants to compare the transcript of Helms' assurances that the CIA did not violate its charter with the Rockefeller Commission's report of illegal domestic operations by the agency.
The State Department announced that Helms has returned to Washington from Tehran to be available for testimony before congressional committees. The Senate Select Intelligence Committee, headed by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, announced that it planned to question Helms today.
In a telephone interview late Wednesday, Sparkman said the committee had been satisfied with Helms' earlier testimony. He said he would be angry if he found the committee had been misled but he would not prejudge the issue of possible perjury prior to a careful review of the testimony.

Federal election law challenged in court test

Illegal alien labor backed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A senator from Oregon says farmers should be permitted to use illegal aliens to harvest their crops for five more years.

Republican Bob Packwood proposed the amendment in legislation prohibiting persons from knowingly hiring illegal aliens for other categories of work.

The bill was aimed at protecting jobs that could be filled by unemployed Americans, Packwood said, adding: "We can no longer open our arms to the huddled masses without regard for the more than eight million unemployed persons who are legal citizens."

He justified the proposed exemption for farm labor on grounds that Americans would not take such jobs.

"It would simply be unrealistic to expect that these unemployed persons who have engaged in industrial or service-oriented positions would take the fields and fill the field left by the departed alien harvesters," he told the Senate.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Election Commission, which Congress created to enforce the new law, was on the attack today.

The challengers, ranging from liberal ex-Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., and the Common Cause citizens group to conservative Sen. James Buckley of New York, say the law violates the right of free political expression.

The 1974 Federal Election Campaign Act limits personal political contributions as well as campaign spending and provides for payment of matching federal funds as subsidies to qualifying political parties. It also tightens earlier finance disclosure laws.

The Justice Department argued in pre-hearing briefs that the suit was premature because it claimed injuries are hypothetical or speculative. No one has been injured yet, since there has been no election.

But the Justice Department refused to defend the constitutionality of an enforcement commission dominated by congressional appointees. The department said this violates the Constitution's provision that the executive branch enforces laws.

Abandoned by the Justice Department on this point, the commission brought in Prof. Paul Bender and Ralph Sprague from the University of Pennsylvania Law School to help in its defense.

Not all the plaintiffs and others who intervened to challenge the act were in agreement on what sections they considered unconstitutional.

Some challenged finance disclosure requirements that have been the law since 1971.

Some plaintiffs challenged the use of public tax funds to subsidize qualifying parties as a constitutional violation analogous to violating the constitutional principle of separation of church and state.

Egypt buys British arms

By United Press International

Britain and Egypt were reported today to have concluded a billion dollar arms deal in England and an Egyptian spokesman said talks were underway in Paris for another billion dollars in arms and industrial aid from France.

He said the deal involved purchase of from $99 million to $1.08 billion worth of British arms with funds provided by oil-rich Arab nations. The British Foreign Office refused to confirm the report.

Ahmed Anis, minister at the Egyptian embassy in London, said the deal had been worked out in talks in the British capital between Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and British government officials.

Fahmy arrived in London Tuesday and was scheduled to leave today for Madrid.

Anis also said Egypt has told Britain and France it was prepared to spend up to $2.4 billion in the two countries on construction and equipment of plants to build weapons in Egypt.

He said the money would be provided largely by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

In Washington, Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin said no new interim agreement for Israel — withdrawals in the Sinai could be negotiated until Egypt honors a secret commitment to allow Israeli cargo to transit the Suez Canal.

Rabin, winding up two days of talks with President Ford,

News Agency reported the governments of Iraq and Iran have agreed the final draft of a treaty delineating the border between the two countries and will sign it later today.

The Beirut newspaper An-Nahar reported today former U.S. Senator William Fulbright has called for the participation of the Palestinians in the Geneva Arab-Israeli peace conference.

It said Fulbright told Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat during a 90-minute meeting Thursday the Palestinians were "principal party to the conflict and their representatives should be invited to the Geneva conference once it was resumed."

New car sales decline in June

DETROIT (UPI) — Auto industry analysts say early June new car sales dropped from the strong May levels that signaled the beginning of the hoped-for spring uptick but still were within 12 percent of last year.

Sales reports scheduled from the four U.S. automakers today will show deliveries of about 18,000 cars in the June 1-10 period, compared with 168,261 in the period last year, analysts said.

The 12 percent drop is still the closest automakers have come since early March to matching a year-ago performance.

The sales pace was up about 3 percent from early May, but off 20 percent from the entire month when sales jumped higher than most analysts had expected.

Analysts say June sales are traditionally lower than May and said the downturn will have to be below the traditional average.

"This year, if we hope to keep our uptick going, we have to sell the same as in May," one auto company analyst said. "That would be some kind of miral victory in Detroit."

Sales reports from the foreign automakers, who grabbed a record one of every five sales in the first five months of 1975, are released only at the end of the month.

The higher sales pace of the production figures with output this week the highest since mid-November.

Chrysler Corp. said Thursday it has reduced long-term layoffs by another 1,600 workers to the lowest point since last Thanksgiving. General Motors said its first plant to undergo changeover to 1976 model production — the Wilmington, Del., plant — closes after today's shift.

The trade publication Automotive News said output this week would be an estimated 152,577 cars, compared with 148,623 last week and 21,000 units below the same week last year. With production this year 21 percent behind 1974's pace, Automotive News said the outlook for the coming weeks is good, until changeovers and vacations begin in July.

Worker protests sweep Columbia

BOGOTA, Colombia — The government has declared a state of siege in three troubled provinces in a move to put down street protests by striking workers and students.

Government Minister Cornelio Reyes announced the measure Thursday night and said authorities might soon extend the state of siege to the rest of the country.

Reyes said the left-center government would make a series of "drastic decisions today to insure the 'social peace' in the South American nation of 24 million.

The government ordered the state of siege, which abrogates civil liberties, in Antioquia, Atlantico and Valle del Cauca provinces after three days of protests by striking workers and students.

The workers were taking part in a month-long walkout against Colombia's cement industry and the students were protesting the ouster of Marxist Luis Perez as rector of the National University.

The state of siege came at the end of a day of street clashes that injured 30 persons — six of them, police — in the city of Cali, 300 miles southwest of Bogota.

The government said it would take "the most forceful police measures to maintain order" in Columbia but said the situation in Cali had returned to "complete tranquility" by Thursday night.

Authorities said the students stoned scores of shops in Cali during the day, threw up roadblocks on thoroughfares, tossed Molotov cocktails at police and set fire to a government car.

The governors reached their peak during the afternoon when hundreds of students tried to stage a rally in support of the cement workers.

A hospital spokesman in Cali, capital of Valle del Cauca, said a police captain was seriously wounded in the head during the clashes.

Authorities also reported disturbances in the north of the country at Medellin, capital of Antioquia, and Barranquilla, capital of Atlantico.

The Council of State, which advises the nine-month-old government of President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen, said five days ago it would support the imposition of a state of siege.

Evers due new trial

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Civil rights leader James Evers, whose income tax evasion trial ended in a mistrial Thursday, apparently will be tried a second time.

Justice Department attorney Michael Ahlen announced shortly after U.S. District Judge Dan Russell Jr. declared the mistrial that the government "is fully prepared and awaiting a new trial whenever a new trial date is set by the court."

The four-day trial was aborted after an Internal Revenue Service agent suggested from the witness stand that the black Fayette, Miss., mayor's 1968 congressional campaign might have been the source of undisclosed income.

Defense attorney Michael Fawer, of New Orleans, branded the statement "an outrage" and moved for a mistrial on grounds the judge had ruled on allegations or contributions in his allegations or in bribes filed with the court.

The civil rights leader and his former wife were indicted last August on charges of evading income taxes during 1969, 1970 and 1971. Fawer, by an IRS agent accused the couple of failure to report income totaling $161,409 and evading $48,172 in taxes during the three-year period.

Fawer moved for a mistrial after tax agent William Jack Sykes, pressed on cross-examination for the source of income allegedly undisclosed in 1969, replied, "Well, he did run for Congress."

"The problem with us is that we've been accused of what we have the case listed that way," Fawer said.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was recently the master of ceremonies at a banquet that about 300 people attended. Many of the town's leading citizens were there.

Well, my husband stood up there and told one dirty joke after another. (He never told me those jokes at home.) Some in the audience laughed, but I noticed the looks on the faces of some of the others, and they seemed shocked and somewhat disgusted. I was embarrassed, to say the least, and could hardly hold up my head.

Afterward, when I went to the powder room, none of the women there even spoke to me.

Abby, why would an educated man like my husband get up before a group of men and women, and tell filthy jokes? I can't have you sending your reply to the house since my husband gets the mail first and I don't want him to know I wrote to you.

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: Your husband probably thought he was being entertaining. It was simply a case of bad judgment. Let him know that you were disappointed in him. He may learn from it.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my mother. She is usually a very sweet and considerate person, but when we take her your health

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

My son and his wife live upstairs. They have a five-year-old son. The little fellow is allowed to stay up late every night until 10:30 p.m., later on weekends.

I tell my son the child doesn't get enough sleep, because I can hear him arise early. By the end of the day he is very irritable and cries easily. My son tells me I'm old-fashioned, that his son doesn't require a lot of sleep. Please advise. — Mrs. R.R.

I don't know what you consider "early," or whether the boy gets a nap during the day, so I can't settle anything. However, generally, a child of five should be getting approximately 10 to 12 hours of sleep each day.

"True, some children can adapt to adult sleep routines, but I do not think it is wise to encourage this. In your grandchild's case, the restlessness can be attributable to fatigue if he isn't getting the rest I mentioned above.

This might be fine now, but it could lead to some real problems if continued on into his early school years.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

I used to be able to spend all day in the sun without any adverse effects other than a little sunburn. Now, two or three hours is enough to give me a severe headache and make me very weak.

Could something serious be involved? — Mrs. G.B.D.

You don't mention ever having had a severe sunstroke, which would have been an event sufficiently memorable for you to mention, and a possible explanation of your photo-sensitivity.

Changes in your tolerance can also be attributed to medicines, including certain antibiotics or the Pill. Where you do your solar-bathing can be another factor — if, for example, you have changed residence from an area of high-smog conditions to where pollutants are relatively low.

It can mean that the sun's rays are more potent, being less filtered. This can account for the severe reactions among some city-dwellers vacationing in the clear-aired sunworshiping centers.

Also, people tend to become more sun-sensitive as they grow older. One study noted a decided change after 40. And women seem to be more affected than men by a three-to-one ratio.

Knowing your present intolerance, you should alter your sunning methods. Three hours at a time is far too much. Try 15-minute exposures, front and back and, if necessary, increase the times gradually. If you try this and your reactions continue then you will have to look elsewhere for the cause. You may have to change your method of contraception if you are now on the Pill.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

A while back you answered a lady with a bladder problem (incontinence) and you suggested some exercise. I believe you should explain the exercise, telling women how it should be done. My doctor, now retired, suggested them for me. He recommended I do them whenever I think of it, sitting, lying down or standing tiptoe. I think if every woman did this simple exercise, there would be less incontinence in old age. — N.K.

The exercise you refer to is the Kegel exercise which consists of contraction of the muscles of the perineum. In females, this is the area between the vaginal orifice and the anus, and in the male between the scrotum and the anus.

The exercise, quite simply, is the alternate contraction and relaxing of the muscles repeatedly as if to stop urination. If you urinate, then stop purposely, that will give you an idea of what the exercise can do.

But in cases of urinary tract infection or structural disorder of the pelvis, the exercises will not help. Persons with problems of incontinence should be checked for such things as allergies and urinary tract infection, and they should ask their doctors about the advisability of doing such exercises in their specific cases.

to the movies, she hoots and howls and talks out loud. This is only annoying to the other people in the theater. It is also very embarrassing for my husband and children.

We really love Mums and wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world, but taking her to a movie isha hassle.

Please give us any suggestions you might have since Mums is coming again soon and she loves to go to the movies.

HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Hooting and howling during the funny parts would normally distract no one, but if Mums is the only one who thinks a sequence is funny, her problem may be bigger than yours.

Talking out loud is unfair to others, so gently shush her when she gets carried away.

Or take her to drive-in movies. Only those in your car will be annoyed, which would eliminate the embarrassment.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been dead for several years, but a friend of hers (now quite elderly) asked me if she could use my home to entertain 16 ladies at a birthday luncheon. She explained that her small apartment wasn't adequate.

I agreed gladly, but I did absolutely nothing for the party. The woman who gave the party provided the food and flowers, and even hired the help.

I later learned that one woman declined the invitation because she felt that since the party was being given at my home, the invitation should have come from ME!

This has bothered me. Should I have sent out the invitations?

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: No. You were not the hostess. You only agreed to have the party in your home.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

He led back a club to his partner's ace. Another spade was led. South ruffed with the ace, drew trumps and claimed the balance.

West had nothing to gain by overruffing that spade. Suppose he just discarded. Later on that king of trumps would score over South's jack or 10. West would put East in with a club. A third spade would be led and there would be no way to keep West's eight or trumps from winning the setting trick.

Incidentally, this type of play is not too unusual. You will be surprised at the number of extra trump tricks you will gather in if you refuse to overruff automatically.

East won the first trick with the jack of spades over dummy's 10 and led back the king. South ruffed with the queen of trumps and West thought of the remarking.

Wyoming cattlemen oppose coal line

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — The Wyoming Stockgrowers Association has refused to support the proposed 1,036-mile slurry pipeline to carry Wyoming coal to White Bluff, Ark.

Underground water from wells in Nubara County, Wyo., would be used to move the pulverized coal through the line. An average of 15,000 acrefeet of water would be used each year by the pipeline.

Twenty years ago, just about one out of every 10 attorneys carried malpractice insurance. Today, as many as eight out of every 10 do so, according to the insurance boys. Far more people are suing their lawyers these days. And far more are winning those suits. Also, size of the claims has almost doubled in the last 10 years.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS
Q. "Why did writer Selma Diamond title her funny book 'Nose Jobs For Peace?'"
A. "Because," she said, "I found that once a person has had his nose fixed, he doesn't get any more fights."

Q. "WHEN DOES a cat purr, while exhaling or inhaling?"
A. Both. One vocal cord purrs on the intake, the other on the outlet.

Q. "WHY is Mexico so called?"
A. Comes from "Mexitli," the name of an Aztec god.

AVERAGE MAN hereabouts puts away fewer calories these days than did the average man 50 years ago. Considerably fewer. Client asks how we can explain, therefore, why today's average man weighs seven pounds more than his predecessor. Nothing to it: Our up-to-the-minute fellow has cut down far more on his exercise than on his grub.

CONVERSATION
Would you pay $5 to carry on 30 minutes of conversation with a sympathetic stranger? Some people would, evidently. A pair of entrepreneurs in Berkeley, Calif., recently hired 22 people to do nothing but listen and talk with clients who said they needed some conversation. Fee runs $5 for the first half-hour and $1 for every extra 10 minutes.

Medicare curbs planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government will place new limits on Medicare doctors' fees, effective July 1.

The new curbs will save taxpayers $26 million the first year, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger told Congress Thursday.

He made the disclosure after a House Ways and Means subcommittee heard angry opposition from officials of seven major hospital organizations to similar curbs on Medicare hospital bills.

"HEW has not been candid with the American public," protested Everett Johnson, chairman of the Council of Community Hospitals. "It has informed them that what they save as taxpayers, they sooner or later will have to pay as patients."

"HEW is nibbling hospitals to death."

Weinberger said recent HEP hospital and doctor regulations were needed to cut taxpayer spending on Medicare for the aged and Medicaid for the needy. He bristled at suggestions from Rep. Philip Crane, Ariz., that some of the requirements put HEW in the position of interfering with medical practice. In violation of congressional mandates.

The review of claims for payment submitted by doctors and others who treat subsidized patients "is a far cry from telling a doctor what he can or can't do," Weinberger replied.

Weinberger said Congress required HEW to put new controls on Medicare and Medicaid under the Social Security Amendments of 1972 which were designed to put somewhat of a brake on these uncontrollable increases in federal spending for medical care.

"The hospital spokesmen said HEW's rules will result in cost limits which will affect patients. Several rules have been challenged in federal courts."

The new limits on doctor bill hikes will be published Monday, Weinberger said, and HEW will issue a national economic index for Medicare physician fee increases, as ordered by the 1972 amendments.

It will be the third year economic restraints have been placed on doctor bills, since physician charge increases for 1974 and 1975 were limited by the wage-price freeze.

US, Dutch embassies get 'prompt action' appeal

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Two American students and a Dutch woman held by Marxist guerrillas have appealed to their countries to act as quickly as possible to save their lives, an American and a Dutch spokeswoman said today.

It was the first direct communication from the captives, held in a mud hut village in neighboring Zaire.

The spokeswoman said the two embassies here have received letters written by the students May 31 and mailed several days later in the western Tanzanian town of Kigoma, near where they were kidnaped almost a month ago.

The letters "appealed to the embassies to do everything within their power to act as quickly as possible to save the lives of the three captives," the spokeswoman said.

He gave no further details of the letters but added, "The ambassadors in turn want to acknowledge that intensive activity is continuing to obtain the safe release of the three."

In Nairobi, Peter Steiner, a professor negotiating on behalf of the captives' parents, said HEW hospital and doctor progress in efforts to secure their release after weeks of deadlock. He reported they were "alive and well."

"Things have started to move and they are currently in a delicate stage," Steiner said Thursday. "The next few days could be crucial in efforts to release the students."

Steiner, an economics professor at the University of Michigan, declined to disclose any details of the negotiations, saying, "I don't want to say any more for fear of jeopardizing the lives of the hostages."

Steiner returned to Nairobi Thursday after trying for nearly two weeks to contact the kidnapers. His statement was the first sign of progress in attempts to free the prisoners.

Guerrillas of the Marxist Peoples Revolutionary party kidnaped the hostages last month during a raid against a U.S.-run wildlife research center in Tanzania.

The kidnapers then traveled to a guerrilla stronghold in neighboring Zaire with the hostages — Carrie Jane Hunter, 21, of Atherton, Calif.; Kenneth Smith, 22, Garden Grove, Calif.; and Emilie Bergman of Holland.

A fourth hostage, Barbara Smuts, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was released to relay the kidnapers' demands to authorities.

The guerrillas called for a half-million dollars in ransom, hundreds of weapons and the release of political prisoners, but the Tanzanian government refused the demands.

CORRUPT PRIME MINISTER MUST RESIGN

Resignation wanted

Vote costly for prime minister

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's political fortunes and prestige suffered another major blow today when her ruling Congress party was crushed at the polls in election of a legislature in violence-torn Gujarat State.

Her leadership of India was seriously jeopardized Thursday when a high court convicted her of corrupt election practices in the 1971 national elections and ordered to resign from parliament and the premiership. The court stayed the order for 20 days to permit her to appeal to the Supreme Court.

She called on her supporters today to stand behind her during her gravest political crisis and said she would continue to overcome her difficulties as she has in the past. Political opponents called on her to resign immediately, but she was keeping the nation guessing whether she would remain in office.

As this nation of 680 million was still reeling over Thursday's corruption conviction, returns were made public from the local elections in Gujarat State, showing her Congress party won only 74 seats on the state's 382-member legislative assembly — far short of the majority she deemed crucial to her national infamy.

Patrol boat, warship clash

BANGKOK (UPI) — A Thai patrol boat and a Cambodian warship exchanged fire in the rainswept Gulf of Thailand, it was reported today.

Officials said six Thai officers were wounded in the clash but were in good condition at a Bangkok hospital. There was no report on casualties aboard the Cambodian gunboat.

The "Communists" shot down a Thai patrol boat in the Gulf of Thailand. The island is about 179 miles southeast of Bangkok and 20 miles from the mainland point where the Thai and Cambodian borders meet.

reported being attacked by the Cambodian gunboat and a Thai marine police boat responded to a radio call for help.

Condition queried

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Other Supreme Court justices are worried that Justice William O. Douglas, who suffered a stroke more than five months ago, can no longer perform his duties properly, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

There are questions about Douglas' mental condition and he "may eventually be forced to resign" by the other justices, the Times said.

that some members of the court were growing uneasy about Douglas voting in cases he had never heard argued, the newspaper said in a report from Washington.

"They suspect that he may not have either the time or the stamina to read all the petitions, briefs and opinions presented to him and is instead delegating many of his responsibilities" to clerks and aides, violating a Supreme Court principle, the Times said.
