TWIN FALLS, IDAHO

Quake shakes Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A violent earthquake shook Chile early Saturday but no major damage or fatalities were reported.

In Santiago, thousands of persons were shaken awake and many ran nervously into the streets. Electricity was cut momentarily in some neighborhoods but later restored.

Police in San Felipe, a small town about 60 miles north of the capital, reported four persons had been injured as a result of the quake.

Warren named editor

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — Gerald L. Warren was named editor of the San Diego Union Friday after his resignation as deputy White House press secretary, a post he held since the inauguration of former President Richard Nixon in 1969.

Helen K. Copley, publisher of the San Diego Union and Evening Tribune, in her announcement said Warren's appointment would become effective Sept. 1.

Iran, Iraq sign pact

TEHRAN (UPI) — Iran and Iraq have signed a treaty defining their borders and ending Kurdish support for Kurdish rebels in northeastern Iraq, disputes that troubled the two nations for nearly half a century, the Iranian government said Saturday.

The treaty and three protocols — 4,500 pages weighing 220 pounds — drew land and water borders between the nations, established security arrangements to prevent future border incidents and subversive infiltration, and officially ends Iran's support for the anti-Iraq Kurds.

Soviet honeymoon planned

LANTANA, Fla. (UPI) — Russian filmstar Victoria Fyodorova and her new American husband are making plans for a second honeymoon in Russia next August, it was reported Saturday.

The couple's plans were disclosed in a copyrighted article that will appear in the National Enquirer Tuesday.

Ky places blame

WEIMAR, Calif. (UPI) — Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky says he does not blame the United States for the fall of South Vietnam to the Communists.

"We have only ourselves to blame for what happened to us," the former air marshal told newsmen Friday.

Aussie ship limps to LA

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — An Australian container ship crippled by a nine-hour blaze in the freighter's engine room moved slowly toward Los Angeles Harbor under her own power Saturday with a seagoing tugboat keeping her company.

The 632-foot Allunga had been drifting off Point Conception, north of Santa Barbara, for several hours after the disabling fire was extinguished in the pre-dawn hours Saturday and before the S.S. San Pedro tied up to the stricken ship at 1:30 p.m. PDT.

The ship, traveling under her own power at 12 knots, was expected to arrive at the harbor early Sunday morning, the Coast Guard said.

Larry Ek, Sherry Hamilton to marry

Larry, Sherry tell love

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Normally a love story is not a news story.

This one is.

The only difference between you and me and Larry Ek and Sherry Hamilton is that Larry and Sherry are crippled by cerebral palsy.

Cerebral palsy results from damage to brain cells during or after a difficult birth. It leaves its victims with tightened muscles, and drawn limbs. Normal actions like walking and talking and dressing become difficult.

For several months now a local fund drive has been going on to raise money for an operation for Larry. The fund drive has been a success and in September Larry will go to New York to have an electronic stimulator implanted beside his brain.

He won't be alone. Sherry Hamilton, Larry's fiancée, will be there too.

As Larry is going into St. Barnabas Hospital for his implant, Sherry will be in the same hospital — recuperating from her own implant which is scheduled for August.

For both Larry and Sherry the surgery is designed to stimulate brain cells adjoining dead tissue into performing the muscle control functions normally performed by the destroyed tissue. Hopefully, it will free them in part from their handicaps, allowing them to lead more normal lives. But the surgery is not always successful.

For both of them there is risk.

Larry met Sherry last March when he went to New York for a physical evaluation to clear the way for the implant. He remembers the day exactly — March 19.

"I'm the kind of guy who is bashful," Larry said. "I don't go around and talk . . . I was down in the cafeteria and I walked right by her and sat down a couple of tables away . . . She got up and started walking out the door, and that was the first time I saw her — do I have to tell you what I thought?"

The next day, Larry and Sherry met in the hall outside her room.

"I didn't see Larry in the cafeteria," Sherry said. "The first I really caught sight of him was on the floor. He was walking to the recreation room and I was talking to my doctor, and I thought, 'Ah . . . I'm going to get him.'"

But it was two weeks after he returned to Twin Falls before Larry knew that Sherry had fallen in love with him.

"I asked her (at the hospital) if she had a boyfriend," Larry said. "She said she did. I thought that was it. A couple of weeks after I got home I got her letter. She wrote the first letter."

French plot tied to CIA

CHICAGO (UPI) — Congressional leaders involved in the Central Intelligence Agency investigation have been told of CIA involvement in a plot with French dissidents to assassinate the late Gen. Charles DeGaulle with a poisoning, the Chicago Tribune said in a copyrighted dispatch Saturday.

The dispatch, by Tribune reporter and columnist Bob Wiedrich, said that within the past two weeks, a CIA representative "disclosed sketchy details of the scheme during a briefing of the Capitol Hill leaders" on what they might expect to find as various Congressional committees begin inquiries.

The discussion involved the use of a poisoned ring by an assassin who would use a veterans gathering to administer a lethal dose in a handshake with the general, the Tribune dispatch said. There was no indication the plot got beyond the talking stage.

In another dispatch, the Tribune said a CIA liaison man had given Congressional leaders preliminary information that the FBI had advised two aides of slain President John F. Kennedy to withhold certain data about the assassination of the President. The data dealt with the location of gunfire directed at Kennedy, and was not presented to the Warren Commission which investigated the Dallas shooting, the Tribune said.

In the DeGaulle matter, the Tribune said that while it was vague on specifics, "the briefing definitely established that such a plan had at least been discussed and perhaps entertained a decade ago by persons in the CIA."

"But there was no indication given as to how deeply or at what level the proposal penetrated the agency," the story cautioned.

Ford supports Cuba embargo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford says the United States will not be bound by any Organization of American States vote and will drop its trade embargo against Cuba only when the Fidel Castro regime changes its policy toward America, according to a White House interview.

Pierre Selinger, the late President John F. Kennedy's press secretary and now correspondent for the French Magazine L'Express, asked Ford if the "United States would go along with a possible OAS decision later this year to end a boycott of goods to and from Cuba."

Ford said no.

"If that decision were made by the OAS, it has no impact on our own decision to continue the boycott by the United States, and our attitude is that we will continue the boycott by the United States until there is some change in policy by Cuba toward the United States," Ford said.

At the interview Ford expressed optimism on Middle East peace negotiations, said the left wing military regime in Portugal is not moving fast enough toward democracy to justify American aid, defended U.S.-Soviet detente, and said he hopes to visit China in October.

A CIA statement on the Cuban boycott issue contrasted with earlier Washington reports that the United States probably would go along with any OAS decision to dump the boycott.

US grain trade probe muzzled

© 1975 N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Three years ago officials of the Agriculture Department blocked efforts by one of the agency's own investigators to press the kind of broad inquiry into alleged corruption in the grain trade now being pursued by the United States Attorney's office in New Orleans and other ports.

It is not clear which officials made the decision, but the agent, William W. Griffin, was ordered to turn his attention to other matters and when he attempted to take his alleged evidence to the U.S. Attorney in New Orleans, he was rebuffed as a scandal monger. The agent worked for what is now the Office of Investigations in the Agriculture Department, which is presently aiding the Justice Department's investigation.

The U.S. Attorney's office in New Orleans is coordinating an inquiry by several agencies into the handling, grading and weighing of grain. It has "returned 15 indictments" thus far. Five others have been returned in a similar Houston area investigation.

Other reports of irregularities in the grain trade have led to more than 100 official investigations by the Agriculture Department's own internal agents since 1964 with few results are apparently without exciting suspicions at high official levels of a broad problems.

Meanwhile, numerous reports of irregularities have been handled administratively.

"That record is an indictment of the grain division — an indictment of management," Ervin L. Peterson, who is retiring as administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said in an interview.

Peterson's jurisdiction includes the division he was criticizing.

"But we're in a position now to begin to move," Peterson said following a recent reshuffling of grain officials and the addition of some new aides.

Stacks of files at the grain division are filled with reports of irregularities ranging from petty thefts to suspected corruption of grain-elevator executives and suspected corporate involvement. But until last year, when the current New Orleans investigation began, they produced little besides reports of inadequate evidence for legal action and warning letters to those investigated.

The Agriculture Department agent who sought such an investigation in 1972, Willard W. Griffin, is now retired. When reached by telephone he declined to comment, citing a legal barrier against his discussing cases he worked on as an agent of the Agriculture Department's Office of the Inspector General, the predecessor to the present Office of Investigations and its companion Office of Audits.

FBI nabs skyjacker

NEW YORK (UPI) — A man accused of hijacking a jetliner to Cuba in 1972 to protest U.S. bombing of North Vietnam arrived in New York Saturday night and was immediately arrested by FBI agents and charged with air piracy.

Michael Lynn Hansen, 24, a native of Fargo, N.D., was taken into custody as he passed through customs at Kennedy Airport after a flight from Bridgetown, Barbados, aboard a Pan American flight.

Hansen was released by Fidel Castro's government Wednesday. He had been detained for more than three years in Cuba.

The FBI said Hansen will be charged with conspiring as a gunpoint a Western Airlines plane on a flight from Salt Lake City to San Francisco May 5, 1972, and ordering the pilot to fly to North Vietnam.

The hijacker said at the time he was seizing the aircraft to protest U.S. bombing of North Vietnam. He also threatened to kill former President Richard M. Nixon if the bombing was not halted.

Italy votes today

ROME (UPI) — Nearly 40 million voters will elect Italian regional councils Sunday and Monday, with the big Communist party expected to mandate a demand for reform in the national government for the first time since 1947.
 New councils for 15 of Italy's 20 semi-autonomous regions will be chosen in the two-day election beginning at 7 a.m. Sunday and ending at 2 p.m. Monday (8 a.m. EDT).
 Plazas which provided the soapboxes for stumping politicians were empty rallies Saturday, the sound trucks stayed in garages and the last of the leaflets were blown off the streets under a law banning campaigning the last 24 hours before an election.

The Communists, the second largest party in Italy and the largest Communist party in the West, have demanded a "historic compromise" with the dominant Christian Democrats to bring them into the national government.
 The Socialists, the coalition allies of the Christian Democrats in government, support the Communists.
 If the two parties make substantial gains in the regional elections, the Socialists could use their new power to put greater pressure on the national government to accept the "historic compromise."
 The Socialists could, also create a crisis in the national government by withdrawing their support.
 The first and only regional elections since the establishment of the regional system in 1970, the Communists and Socialists gained control of three regional councils, and the elections Sunday and Monday could bring them two more.

Soviets launch sputnik

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union launched an unmanned spacecraft Saturday to follow a sister ship blasted into space six days ago and carry out the first twin probe of cloud-shrouded Venus, earth's nearest planetary neighbor.
 The spacecraft taking part in the unique experiment are scheduled to complete their 30 million-mile interplanetary journey next October.
 "The flight will make it possible to obtain more complete data about Venus as well as about physical processes occurring in space," said Tass, the official Soviet news agency.
 The ships are Venus 9, launched last Sunday, and Venus 10, which started on its flight to earth's sister planet from an intermediate earth orbit at 7:30 a.m. Saturday (11:30 p.m. EDT Friday).
 Tass said equipment on both probes is functioning normally and Venus 10's flight path is close to predetermined calculations.
 The launch comes at a time of heightened Soviet space activity. Two Russian cosmonauts Saturday completed three weeks aboard the earth-orbiting Salyut 4 and scientists have recently launched a barrage of weather and communications satellites.
 A Soviet Soyuz craft is scheduled to link up in space with an American Apollo in July and Tass said Saturday cosmonauts are beginning comprehensive training sessions on a grounded trainer version of the Soyuz.
 The Soviets have long shown keen interest in Venus, despite its hostility to man with temperatures up to 880 degrees Fahrenheit — hot enough to melt lead — and crushing atmospheric pressure.

Juveniles charged in Burley

BURLEY — Police in Burley have apprehended two juveniles in connection with the pellet-gun shooting of another youth Sunday.
 Police Capt. Pete Rodriguez said today the two juveniles will be charged in magistrate court with shooting a pellet gun in the city limits and assault with a deadly weapon.
 Rodriguez said the unidentified victim was shot in the arm with a 177 caliber high-powered pellet gun. The victim was in West Park at the time of the shooting.
 The youth reported the shooting to police Sunday and then went to Cassia Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released. Rodriguez said the pellet gun used in the shooting is "very dangerous."
 No motive for the incident was given by police.

Murder trial to begin

HAMILTON, Ohio (UPI) — Eleven weeks ago — at an Easter Sunday family reunion — 11 relatives were shot to death from close range in a small house in this southwestern Ohio community.
 Monday, a 12th member of the family, a small, meek man named James Ruppert — goes on trial for the murder of all 11.
 The victims were Ruppert's 65-year-old widowed mother, his only brother, his sister-in-law and eight nieces and nephews, aged from 3 to 18.
 It was the largest known mass murder of members of the same family, and if convicted, Ruppert could be sentenced to die in the electric chair.
 Ruppert, 41, an unemployed draftsman, has pleaded innocent-by-reason-of-insanity, but at a hearing last month was found able to stand trial.
 Last week Ruppert waived his right to a trial by jury and a three Judge Butler County Common Pleas Court panel was appointed to decide his fate.
 In his five-foot-6-inch suspect has a blue-eyed, 11 m.d. and blue-haired, speaking in almost inaudible tones.
 Ruppert, who has spent the past 11 weeks locked in the Butler County Jail, has been the only suspect in the case from the beginning.
 Circumstantial evidence against Ruppert was strong.
 He was the only person in the house with the bodies when police arrived, his recently fired guns were there and his shoes were blood-spattered.
 Still, shocked friends and neighbors couldn't answer the most puzzling question about the mass murder.
 Why?
 One neighbor said Ruppert's mother had indicated that James was not her favorite son.

Kiddie sleepwear meets fire rules

TWIN FALLS — A Times-News check shows five major Twin Falls department stores complying with the new federal flammability standards for children's sleepwear.

The stores surveyed have full displays of non-flammable garments. "We were in compliance a year ago," said John Altman, manager of the Bon Marche.

The various large tags read, "this garment meets flammability requirements of federal children's sleepwear standards. DOC FF 3-71 for sizes 0-6X," and "Flame-retardant garment, self-extinguishing when removed from flames."

To avoid possible consumer confusion, the commission requires retailers to separate flammable from non-flammable sleepwear by at least 36 inches. In addition, retailers must post signs. In letters at least one inch high, identifying both kinds of sleepwear.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission stated it will require that the numbers be "clear and legible" to enable consumers to read them. The commission plans to check compliance with the new flammability standards by inspecting a number of sleepwear manufacturers, importers and retailers.

The numbers and labels that tells the consumer the garment meets federal requirements are DOC FF 3-71 and "Flame-retardant — U.S. Standard FF5-74."

Interest conflict policy set by state

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Office on Aging "clearly" has the right to require that persons paid with IOA funds not serve on regional policy councils, according to an official for the U.S. Commission on Aging.

Decker Angstrom, assistant to the U.S. commissioner on aging, said Friday that state offices on aging "have the authority to set broad state policy," and could make "conflict-of-interest" provisions prohibiting persons who are paid with IOA grant money from participating on policy boards which decide how the grant money is spent.

To enforce this policy, state offices on aging have the "ultimate sanction" of cutting off funds until a solution is reached, Angstrom said.

According to Ken Wilkes, state IOA planner, starting Jan. 1, 1976, the IOA will not allow persons holding paying jobs with grant-supported senior citizens centers and programs to serve on the Area IV (Magic Valley) Planning and Service Council on Aging.

Council members Ruth Mitchell and Mildred Howard, both Kimberley and both paid senior citizen center workers, have questioned IOA's right to make such a policy and have said they will continue to serve on the council if re-elected by the seniors.

Street improvement on council agenda

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will meet Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The council will also consider the request of First Security Branch Bank for a no-parking zone and modification of street width criteria at Elm Street at Addison Avenue.

Councilmen plan to review bids for paving and airport pickup truck and consider the Sahara Subdivision Plat as well as consider appointments to the Youth Advisory Committee.

Also on the agenda is consideration of an agreement for out-of-city water services to Twin Falls Rentals, Inc., consideration of Hamilton Co. street vacation request, and consideration of a resolution authorizing the signing of a windtunnel location lease with the FAA.

MV safety promoted

TWIN FALLS — Pool guards, swimming instructors and other persons interested in water safety have formed a new organization here, the Waters' Safety Instructor's Council.

The new group boasts about 20 members from the Buhl Jerome, Gooding, Twin Falls and Filer areas. The major objectives of the group are to upgrade the quality of swimming and safety instruction and to make sure that all pools have qualified instructors and lifeguards.

The group plans to meet once monthly with the next meeting set for June 23 at the Tupperware pool in Jerome. Swimming and lifesaving techniques will be demonstrated at the meetings.

Fund-raising projects are being considered to purchase equipment needed in teaching life saving and water safety instructor courses. The group needs a canoe, mask and fins and other items.

The members also plan to make wooden kick boards to present to pools with fully qualified guards and instructors.

Shirley Nelson, Hollister, recently was certified as the area instructor trainer and special water safety review courses were held at local pools, including Blake's Big T, the Tupperware pool, Nat-Soo-Pak pool and Siga's pool in Buhl.

Y plans camp sessions

TWIN FALLS — The YMCA and YWCA are planning two camp sessions this summer at the Luther Heights Bible Camp near Alturas Lake in the Stanley Basin.

A boys and girls camp will be held July 27 through Aug. 2, and family camp will be Aug. 3-9.

The daily camp program includes archery, hiking, swimming, crafts, boating, canoeing, fishing and campfires. A number of special events planned include a water carnival, craft show, camp carnival and camp olympics.

The youth camp is for 8 to 12-year-old boys and girls. Family camp is for the whole clan, the YW-YMCA newsletter states.

The young campers are housed ten to a cabin with a cabin leader for supervision. Family campers live two families to a cabin with a plywood partition separating the living quarters.

Meals are served in a dining hall and prepared by an experienced staff. The staff of instructors, directors, and cabin leaders are carefully selected and trained to do the best job possible, the newsletter states.

US economic problem simple next to British

N.Y. Times Service
LONDON — If you want to understand the British economic problem, all you have to do is come here and look at the prices and read the papers.

They make our economic and political dilemmas in the United States look like a temporary inconvenience. For example, — The Sunday Telegraph reports that General Motors has decided to build a new Vauxhall automobile in Belgium instead of in Britain because of the economic uncertainty in the country.

G. M. has lost about $80 million here in the last six years, and its output per worker in the Germany is about 50 per cent higher than Britain.

—British railways have agreed to a 27.5 per cent increase recommended by the industry's arbitration tribunal, but has insisted that it be 10,000 railwaymen be laid off to make up for the additional cost.

The National Union of Railwaymen says it will call a nationwide strike of its 174,000 employees on June 23 unless it gets a better deal.

—Prime Minister Harold Wilson blames much of the inflation on excessive wage demands, but some of the major unions and left-wing members of his own Labor government reject the analysis and call for more nationalization of British industry, though the nationalized industries, on the whole, have been added to the deficit.

—On a more mundane level, with inflation running here at 22 per cent or more, even the workers with their higher pay can't keep up with the prices. A two-ounce tin of Enamormore pure pipe tobacco costs about $2.75, and if you want to fancy, or are on an expense account, a double room at the Savoy Hotel costs over $90 a night. Accordingly, the mood here, even after the non-partisan success of the moderates in the European referendum, is not only grim but melancholy, as if this historic decision meant nothing.

"Once upon a time," The Sunday Times observed, "the British had stiff upper lips. They met triumphs with indifference and setbacks with disdain. Over the years, this famous quality was corrupted, and became instead a uniquely British capacity for regarding ever-achievement, but especially their own, with invincible cynicism. The deadliest sound in England is the steady drip of British boredom." This says it in a little bit, but it's true that the British have swallowed so much bad news in recent years that they scarcely recognize news when they see it.

So the question being thrown at Wilson, even before a weekend rest at Chequers is what is he going to do with his victory, not next week but right now?

President Ford has his difficulties in the United States with inflation and cabinet squabbles over fixing prices on commodities.

His unemployment problem is even more serious than Wilson's but his margin for error is smaller, and his political opposition easier to handle than Wilson's.

The moderates in both parties here are praising Wilson for his clever piloting of the referendum, and urging him to lead this moderate middle out of the economic wilderness, but at the same time they are being subjected to much more savage criticism than anything Ford has faced in the last six months.

The argument being hurled at him is that the extremists of the right and left have lost, that the rank and file union members are much more sensible than their leaders and that there is now a historic chance to break out of the ideological moods of both parties.

"Why cannot the people have what they want?" Bernard Levin asked this week in The Times of London. "That is the question we have to ask, insistently and clamorously... why, in particular, cannot Labor voters and trades union members have what they want?"

—There is no lack of honest and moderate men and women among the chief members of the Labor party, and with the inevitable lack of leadership from Wilson, who will concentrate as usual on his political wheeling-dealing, it is up to them to provide the voice and the inspiration that is needed.

Equally necessary voices from the left are urging him to keep all the cabinet members who opposed him and stick to the policies that have contributed to the crisis, but the puffs on his pipe and informs the British people, who can now hear him live on radio from the House of Commons, that he will make up his mind in time.

Nobody listening to all this can doubt the vitality of British democracy, or the boldness of its political and press debate, and it may be a little early to decide that Wilson will go on as before.

He has read the election returns like everybody else, and the inflation and production figures too, so nothing is "inevitable" here after the referendum.

Wilson has a chance not only to go into Europe but to help lead it, and he might just take it.

Better playground

They suggested that a "natural playground" similar to one built last year at Harrison School by volunteers be installed at the new Sawtooth Elementary School.

According to Harrison officials, the students enjoy their new playground which includes underground tunnels and rolling terrain.

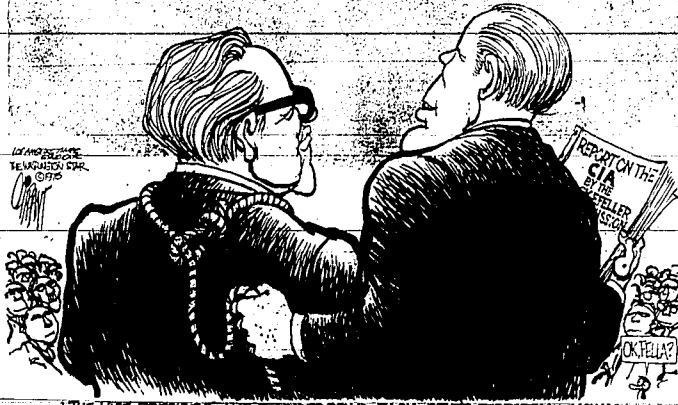

The prototype Harrison playground was built last year at the request of a group of parents and supported by the Harrison PTA. Community volunteers supplied material and labor for the job. Work was finally completed this spring.

The idea behind the new playground is to replace some of the traditional playground equipment much of which is dangerous — with a safer, unstructured play area. Such a playground would be designed to challenge the children's imagination to make up things to do and games to play. Judging from their comments, the Harrison School kids like it.

But for some reason the new playground at Sawtooth School will ignore the Harrison experience and be the standard rather dull and dangerous playground. Moreover, the equipment already has been ordered.

Even so, it probably is not too late to shift to an improved playground with a likely savings of considerable money. Presumably the unused equipment could be used elsewhere or returned, and the Harrison-type playground be installed.

Everyone can learn from experience, and the experience at the New Harrison playground has been favorable.

'THE VICE-PRESIDENT AND I UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER PERFECTLY... NOW!'

Equal justice?

One of the things that undercuts the American system of justice is the widespread belief that wealthy and powerful people are treated differently than the ordinary guy.

So it would be interesting to know how people serving prison sentences across the nation for bad check writing or small-scale embezzlement would react to a recent case involving what may be one of the largest frauds in U.S. history.

Financier C. Arnold Smith, former chairman of the U.S. National Bank has been "punished" for four counts of conspiracy, misappropriation of the bank's funds, making false entries in banking records and making false statement to government officials.

He had been indicted in 1974 for misappropriating about $170 million in loans from the bank to benefit his own companies. The fraud was blamed for the collapse of U.S. National, which is in the midst of bankruptcy proceedings.

His punishment? The wealthy man was fined $30,000. He was given a two-year suspended sentence and placed on five years probation.

Thousands of depositors in Smith's bank probably will lose part of their savings while Smith — only $30,000 worse for wear — can enjoy himself at his leisure without financial worry.

One wonders if the sentence by U.S. Judge Robert Schnacke isn't in some sense as much a crime against justice as was the bank fraud in the first place.

"From a distance the "sentence" sounds more like a pat on the back than even a slap on the wrist.

SEOUL — President Chung Hee Park, vowing to fight for the last inch of land even if U.S. forces leave Korea, told US South Korea could and would develop its own nuclear weapons if the U.S. nuclear umbrella is withdrawn.

In one of his rare interviews, the Korean strong man also declared he would not relax tough internal security measures while the military threat from North Korea lasts. Recognizing that relaxation of full civil liberties would help him in the U.S. Congress, he insisted such relaxation could make Korea another Vietnam and, therefore, gave no hope for major change.

"Thus, Gen. Park is set apart from other East Asian leaders traumatized by the Indochina debacle and looking for accommodation with the rising Communist tide. Facing the gun barrels of the North Korean Garrison state, Park applies heavily on his U.S. allies. But he will not appease American critics by actions he says would weaken security and is prepared to go it alone if necessary. Park gave responsive, often blunt answers for nearly two hours in his office at the Blue House — his first meeting with a foreign reporter in eight months. Small to the point of frailty, the 57-year-old professional soldier in his 15th year of rule seemed in excellent health and supremely confident the course he follows is correct.

While declaring his own faith in official U.S. reaffirmations of support for South Korea, Park told us: "there were and still are a number of Koreans doubting the commitment of the United States" since the fall of Vietnam. What if those doubts are well founded? "Even without assistance, air people are determined to fight to the last man and not to concede an inch of our territory."

He next confirmed for the first time that South Korea, if abandoned by the U.S., would go nuclear. "We have the capability," the president said, but are not developing it and are honoring the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. "Then he bluntly added: "If the U.S. nuclear umbrella were to be removed, we have to start developing our nuclear capability to save ourselves."

The nuclear umbrella and atpower comprise the major U.S. deterrent to a Kim Il-sung North Korea, but Park also argued the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division here plays "an essential role in deterring attack." If American ground troops were removed, "the enemy will be inclined to make a miscalculation" and "American word would carry far less credibility." Checkmate: Park said the U.S. soldiers play the role of fallback in soccer football as a last line of defense. In other words, the 2nd Division would not be in the heart of ground combat.

As for his May 13 decree banning internal dissent, the President said otherwise "we might become another Vietnam." Is there hope for relaxation? "It depends on the actions of the North Koreans. If the threat from the North Koreans is reduced, we should be able to relax security measures. If it is heightened, we would have to take tighter restrictions. There is no other way."

EVANS AND NOVAK

Park seemed to fully appreciate the difficulty his crackdown causes him in Washington, calling it "one of my biggest headaches." Many Americans would say "very nice," if students were permitted to demonstrate. But, he added, that would undermine security and make the nation vulnerable to Communist attack.

Park cited three examples of democracies curtailing civil liberties under extraordinary conditions: Canada's crackdown on Quebec separatists, Gen. de Gaulle's authoritarian measures during the Algerian crisis and U.S. internment in "concentration camps," said Park of Nisei Japanese during World War II. Granting that human rights are abridged in South Korea, said the president, Americans should note there is "no trace of human rights" in North Korea.

Other Park pronouncements: Provocation: If instead of a frontal attack North Korea makes a provocation by attacking South Korea's five small western coastal islands, retaliation against North Korean rear areas "would play into the hands of the Communist." Instead, the islands, nestled along the North Korean coast, should be made "invulnerable" to attack.

Arkansas Gazette
The elephantine labors of the Rockefeller Commission has produced the predictable mouse — still-born — which has been sent to President Ford in an old shoebox for safekeeping, "security" being the watchword all the way.

Before the transfer was effected, Chairman Nelson Rockefeller had already informed us that the written report would not contain any mention of the CIA's role in assassination attempts against foreign rulers, though that had been one of the two most salient lines of inquiry supposedly under investigation and though we had been assured earlier by another commission source that the subject of assassination plans or attempts, primarily against Cuba's Fidel Castro, would be in the main report handed over to President Ford, to be made public when and in what manner that he chose.

Instead, it was decided almost at the last minute to send the assassination material to Ford separately, and Ford now has indicated that he will in good season turn over these findings to Senate investigators — again, in a form and manner of his own choosing, letting the back rest with them rather than with him.

Atlanta Journal

But while charges of assassination plots remain in the area of conjecture, two vital issues are clear.

The first is that the CIA is essential to national security. The second is that there must be changes in order to insure proper safeguards to prevent the CIA from being misused."

With both the House and Senate delving into the problem it would be the height of political folly for Ford to try to camouflage anything. The House and Senate will come forth with their own findings and recommendations in due time. But, meanwhile we should get on with the business of improving the character of the CIA while not impairing its effectiveness.

Random thoughts about dads for Father's Day

WASHINGTON — Random thoughts of a father on Father's Day.

"Where does my daughter find the guys who show up at the house? I'm not against long hair except if they're clogging the swimming pool filter. My problem is that if I say anything she'll think it's a personal criticism of her friends — which it is."

"I've spent $60,000 to educate three children. The only thing is whenever someone asks me what they're studying, I don't know what to reply. Yesterday it was medieval glass; today it's modern dance; tomorrow it will be photography. How do you get a kid who wants to be a lawyer, a doctor or an accountant?"

"I just got the telephone bill. Most of the calls on it are collect. But I'm afraid if I say anything I won't hear from them all."

"I don't mind my son using the car. But why can't he fill it up with gasoline?"

The only thing I ever find in it is empty wine bottles. I wish they would require a deposit for wine bottles. It would solve the American youth's biggest waste disposal problem."

ART BUCHWALD

"Why is it when a daughter says, 'Don't wait up for me,' you wait up for her, but when a son says 'Don't wait up for me, you sleep like a baby'?"

"I have a wheels problem. If I don't get my daughter a car, she'll hitchhike. If I do get her a car, she'll drive it. Which is the lesser of two evils? Why won't kids take the bus and support the economy?"

"The Rolling Stones are coming to town next month. If my kids don't see them, they'll die." Do I shell out $15 a ticket or watch them expire in front of my eyes?

"I've been invited by my children to go to a beach where all the kids swim nude. Do I go and be a good sport, or do I go and be a dirty old man?"

"My wife says I'm too easy on the kids and I should be tougher and more assertive like Grimstead, who doesn't let his children get away with a thing, asked her if she'd rather be married to Grimstead and she replied, 'I should say no. He thinks he's Mussolini.'"

"I hate to take sides in family fights. When one of my daughters 'borrows' the other's T-shirt, and the latter retaliates by losing the first daughter's slippers, I'm at a loss as to who is at fault. If I make a judgment, I'm immediately accused of only favoring one of them. Why do they have to mix up love with T-shirts and sandals?"

"I've just been informed that my daughter has decided to go to Martha's Vineyard, Aspen or Alaska for the summer. When I asked her to be more specific, she says she's not sure because the rock band she's going with hasn't got any bookings yet. I ask her if she'll settle for a $25 seat at the Rolling Stones concert instead."

"My son now can beat me at tennis. Does this mean I've lost all authority over him? How can I be the master of my house when all I have such a lousy backyard?"

"How does someone know if he's been a good father or a bad father? You do should take an examination as to maybe do for college boards. Then you can know where you stand on a scale of 1 to 100. I think I might score 50. If I stayed up all night and studied."

"Someone asked me the other day if I would trade my kids for a few I knew and I didn't even have to take them to bed."

Bunker Hill: Colonials match British forces

By SAM FOGG

By United Press International
The battle of Bunker Hill, fought on June 17, 1775, was a tactical victory for the British but a psychological victory for farm-bred American colonials who demonstrated they could stand up in combat against trained British soldiers and their bayonets.

Gen. William Howe, later to become commander of the British forces in America, said of the battle where 1,054 died and wounded British lay heaped about him: "There was a moment I never felt before."

Rhode Island's Gen. Nathaniel Greene, surveying the contrastingly small American losses—361 dead and wounded—remarked: "I wish we could sell them another hill at the same price."

Dr. Samuel Webb, who had marched the dirt roads from Wethersfield, Conn., to fight on the heights over Charlestown, Mass., wrote of the fierce encounter: "My God, how the balls flew."

Gen. Thomas Gage, commandant of British forces in North America, said in his official report on how green American forces were driven from their fortifications at Bunker and Breed's Hills: "The loss we have sustained is greater than we can bear."

The battle of Bunker Hill was the first pitched battle involving American fighting men against trained British forces. It was fought within sight of Boston, mainly on a lower rise, known as Breed's Hill and hayfield slopes running to the Mystic and Charles Rivers.

The fight took place on a sweltering June Saturday. In less than two hours of battle, 226 Redcoats were killed and 828 were wounded. Ninety-two of the estimated 250 officers were casualties. The Americans sustained 140 dead, 271 wounded and 20 captured.

"The success is too dearly bought," Howe said.

The historic clash came about as both sides sought to end the military impasse which had prevailed since the events of April 19 at Lexington and Concord. Howe and Gage, with their forces bottled up in Boston, decided to seize the heights overlooking the city and strike at rebel headquarters in Cambridge.

The American forces had conducted successful skirmishes at several islands in the bay and decided to plant a fortification on Bunker Hill. On the night of Friday, June 16, a vanguard of 50 men stole through the streets of Charlestown and ascended the heights to begin their entrenching work.

They were led by Col. William Prescott, a Massachusetts farmer who had fought with the British against the French and had been offered a commission in his majesty's army, and Connecticut's Brjg. Gen. Israel Putnam, famed for his exploits against the French and Indians.

position with a quick thrust up the narrow beach of the Mystic.

But his supporting artillery bogged down in marshy ground and the gunners found they had been supplied with 12-pound cannon balls, 6-pound guns. His advancing infantry in the center was impeded by stone and rail fences, ponds and knee-deep hay.

On the river beach, the light infantry strike force moved forward with bayonets to sweep over a waist high stone fence behind which lay Stark's New Hampshire men. They were under instruction from Putnam: "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes."

"When the Redcoats on the crowded beach reached a stake planted by Stark 40 yards in front of the fence an American volley exploded point blank into their ranks. The first blast felled nearly two-thirds of the Welsh fusiliers; a second round left only six or so standing.

Behind them, undeterred, came the King's Own Regiment and a third hall of musketry shattered them. The men of the 52nd Regiment tried to come on but were struck by a free fire volley that sent them in retreat.

Ninety-six of King George's crack troops lay dead in front of the American position with virtually no loss on the other side. "I never saw sheep lie as thick in the field," Stark said of the scene.

Howe ordered his officers to rally the men and "attack all along the line" in British heroic tradition. The Redcoats advanced into more carnage.

Howe's target this time was a rail fence which sheltered at least 1,500 Americans. The British sent 30 companies of 50 grenadiers against them without cover. In 10 minutes, it was all over as American bullets mowed like a scythe through their ranks.

Most of the attacking units lost three-fourths to nine-tenths of their men. Some companies had only eight or nine men left; others but three or four. Ralph Parson, Bunker Hill's last survivor, age 105, recalled 80 years later that the screams of the British wounded and dying was louder than the sound of musketry.

Howe, his white leggings flecked with blood, ordered still another assault. This time he directed his men to shed their 100-pound packs, and allowed them to doff their heavy greatcoats. His artillery was now equipped with the proper ammunition and wheeled into position. Gen. Henry Clinton arrived from Boston with 500 Marine reinforcements to support Pigot who had been beaten back from the redoubt.

On the American side, powder and ball were running low. The men had only rum to quench their thirst. Some of the less heroic escaped the battle under guise of helping wounded countrymen to the safety of the mainland, sometimes torn off by accompanying one casualty.

Howe feinted an attack to the right, then struck left. His artillery drove a key segment of the American defenders behind the breastwork to flight. Stark's sharpshooters were plinked down on the Mystic River flank.

In the Breed's Hill redoubt, 100 of Putnam's men faced attack on these sides by 1,500 Redcoats. The advancing British braved another storm of fire to gain a foothold on the perimeter of the fort. The Americans fought with clubbed muskets, fists and rocks.

There was still no surrender. A volley from a band led by Warren ripped the British from one side of the fort. Prescott fought, sword in hand, before giving the order to "retreat."

"Run quick but don't run too thick," he called; then, "withdrew" at a walk. Warren died of a musket ball after fighting a rear-guard action with his men.

Prescott and Putnam impromptu their men to make a last stand at the foot of Bunker Hill. It was a desperate battle, more bloodied but couldn't stop the British.

Putnam, a cursing figure on horseback, called out to his men: "For God's sake, stand and give them one shot more." But it was too much for untrained militia men.

They gave up the battle and pulled back across the peninsula to the British lines. American fighting men were positioned. A shaken Howe called a halt to the conflict at 5 p.m. and the battle of Bunker Hill was over.

The British bore their wounded and dead back to Boston along with 30 prisoners. They were still bottled up. The Americans still a disorganized rabble army.

Contemporary drawing depicts British advance on Bunker Hill

Doctor Revolution's first slain hero

BOSTON (UPI) — At the age of 34, dressed in his best civilian clothes, Dr. Joseph Warren of Boston was killed at the Battle of Bunker Hill to be remembered as America's first Revolutionary War hero to be slain on the battlefield.

Young as he was, Warren had shown incisive leadership, tremendous organizational abilities, and steadfastness as a patriot. Without his talents, his fellow countrymen might never have been able to have fought the battle at which he died.

He was the most popular physician in Boston, liked by the British and their Tory adherents despite his forthright liberal views. He was felled by a British musket ball at Bunker Hill June 17, 1775.

Warren was born at Roxbury, Mass., in 1741, of seafaring stock. He was the great grandson of a Boston town erier and the son of a farmer who was a selectman of Roxbury. In his boyhood, Joseph Warren walked barefoot to Boston to peddle milk but he also attended the well-esteemed Roxbury Latin School.

When Warren was 14, his father died of a broken neck after a fall. But his boy still was able to enter Harvard, which from a medical school standpoint was equipped with two skeletons—one of each sex.

At 21, he had taken his master's degree from Harvard and been tutored in medicine by European-trained Dr. James Lloyd of Boston. He began practice in 1763, and immediately was dealing with a smallpox epidemic which hit the city.

The young physician involved himself in a dispute in favor of inoculation and worked at a smallpox ward for eight months.

Warren's work brought him favor among Bostonians of every rank. One of his early patients was Thomas Hutchinson, lieutenant governor of the colony. He also practiced on behalf of the arm's house poor.

Married to the widow of a well-to-do merchant, Warren might have settled into a sedate life as Boston's most popular doctor but he committed himself early on to the political ferment of the city.

By 1765 he was immersed in tavern politics and pamphleteering, joining the second Thursday of each month at the Green Dragon Inn with such activists as Josiah Quincy, Sam Adams, Paul Revere and James Otis.

Warren played a subordinate role to Adams and John Hancock but figured high as a strategist in the American response to the Boston Massacre, the Stamp Act, the Tea Party.

He delivered an anniversary oration on the massacre at the Old South Meeting Place with hostile British officers arrayed around him. When one of the latter thrust forth his hand with bullets in the palm, Warren calmly dropped a handkerchief over them and proceeded with his exhortation of British rule.

He pushed for the adoption of the Suffolk Resolves which encouraged local militia training, the creation of the Minute Men and the setting up of a courier system to communicate threatening developments among villages, counties and later colonies.

When British troops debarked in boats for their march on Lexington and Concord, Warren was the only member of the nine-man Massachusetts Committee of Safety in the city. Without waiting for consultation, he promptly instructed Revere and Joseph Davies to take horse to alert the countryside and Adams and Hancock at Lexington that the British were coming.

The next day he went to the scene of battle, joining Gen. William Heath, a veteran American military figure, to bring some semblance of order into the placement of militia units driving the British back to Boston.

In the two months left of his life, Warren became a one-man Department of War, organizing American fighting forces that the British derided as "a rustic rout with calico frocks and fowling pieces."

As president of the Provincial Congress, Warren urged the creation of a government that would "give every man the greatest liberty to do what he pleases consistent with restraining him from doing any injury to another."

He worked to set up a naval force; he began creating a corps of army surgeons and chaplains; he conferred with nearby Indian leaders hoping to gain their neutrality.

There were other problems he wrestled with: a shortage of medical supplies; lack of arms, ammunition and equipment; unsanitary camp conditions; lack of discipline in the ranks; friction between rival commanders.

On June 14, 1775 Warren, a man with no military background, was made a major general.

On the night of June 16 he attended the council of war at which it was decided to fortify Breed and Bunker Hills.

He left the strategy meeting with a migraine headache and a fever; tried to rest, then set off on foot for where the fighting loomed on June 17. He crossed Charlestown Neck while it was under bombardment by British men-of-war and entered the newly built redoubt of Breed's Hill in early afternoon.

Warren quietly refused Col. William Prescott's suggestion he take command but set about in his blue silk coat and white satin breeches treating those wounded in the bombardment. When the British regulars attacked, he took up arms and fought in the musket-swinging, hand-to-hand melees that resulted when the Redcoats overran the American position.

He was one of the last to leave the redoubt and as he withdrew toward Bunker Hill, a British musket ball struck him in the back of the skull and Joseph Warren was dead. The British buried him in a trench, but his body was exhumed in 1778 and identified by Revere, who had, hope his dental work.

There were some desertions after Pollard's ghastly death, but Prescott prodded the Americans on to complete the breastwork. Putnam astride a white horse rounded up reinforcements from the mainland. Col. John Stark led his New Hampshire regiment across the causeway under shell fire at a deliberate walk to prevent fatiguing the men.

Dr. Joseph Warren, a newly commissioned major general, arrived in his best civilian clothes to share the danger. So did Brjg. Gen. Seth Pomeroy, a veteran Indian fighter. There were few below 1,500 and 1,600 American fighting men on the heights.

When the naval bombardment failed to dislodge them, Gage and Howe had little choice but to attack.

At 11:30 a.m., crack regiments of redcoats mustered at the docks in battle regalia and with a three-day supply of boiled beef and bread. At 1 p.m. a transport flotilla of small boats embarked for the fortified Charlestown peninsula.

Howe was the first to land on the sandy beach followed by a band of Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Light infantry came ashore to widen the beachhead. Grenadiers and regulars and then artillery completed the landing.

The first British dead were two men who tried unsuccessfully to desert to the American lines. Howe hanged them.

An estimated 2,600 British now faced from 1,500 to 1,600 entrenched Americans 500 yards away. The battle was joined when three of Howe's regiments and Royal Marines under command of Gen. Robert Pigot sought to approach on the left. An entourage of sniper fire from the houses of Charlestown forced the British to engage in house-to-house fighting to clear the town.

To the right, Howe sent a quick-moving force of 150 light infantry that turned into bloody disaster. He had hoped to outflank the American

Yank force racially mixed

BOSTON (UPI) — The Americans who fought at the Battle of Bunker Hill June 17, 1775 were already racially integrated in their military ranks.

History records the names of at least seven blacks who served in their village militia and opposed the British. One of them, Peter Salem, is credited with firing the shot that killed British Marine Maj. John Pitcairn, commander of the Redcoat units which had opened fire at Lexington two months before.

Salem, Caesar Bason and Caffee Whittemore were members of Col. William Prescott's company which had mustered at Groton and Pepperell, Mass. From Andover, there were three other blacks—Phebe Colburn, Alex. Under Ames and Basil Lew. Caleb Howe stood with the Plymouth men.

There were undoubtedly others who were unrecorded. Probably most were freed men who had either escaped from slavery or had been voluntarily released by owners in the nearby states.

But the seven who are known fought and faced British bayonets to the last. As the British began to overrun the American redoubt at Breed's Hill, it was Salem who pulled his fore fresh American fighting men and triggered the shot that struck and mortally wounded Pitcairn.

Caffee Whittemore apparently was a compulsive souvenir hunter. As he and his fellow Americans were driven from the redoubt with Redcoats in deadly pursuit, he spared the body of a dead officer on his line of retreat. Whittemore stopped the long enough to detach the officer's belt before continuing his flight.

Bason was one of the American casualties, one of a small band who fought a rear-guard action under Dr. Joseph Warren to protect the American withdrawal from the redoubt.

Prayer for today

It's lucky that you made fathers so strong. God. They really have a hard job to support their families and meet all the demands made upon them.

Their families expect a lot—Each child wants his share of the things money can buy. He, also, wants his share of attention.

It takes as the years expect a lot of fathers, too, because you said, "Fathers, bring up your children in the fear and admonition of the Lord."

Evidently you would like to have fathers take the lead in teaching children about you. Please give them the wisdom and strength to do it. United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Gandhi assails ouster movement

Indira Gandhi speaks at rally

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi turned her three-day-old fight for political survival into an international issue Saturday, warning that demands for her removal were being hailed by Pakistan, India's longtime foe.

"Pakistan is the only country that seems to be happy at the political developments in the country," Mrs. Gandhi told an estimated 5,000 supporters from Punjab, a western Indian state that borders Pakistan. "And the (Indian) opposition parties are helping with their attitude."

Mrs. Gandhi addressed the Punjab, who made the 200-million New Delhi to express their support for her, on a day when two of the country's biggest papers reported she might resign next week.

India has fought three wars with Pakistan over the past 45 years and although there are now some attempts at détente between the two countries, they occasionally attack each other verbally on the official level.

Political opponents have been demanding that Mrs. Gandhi "step down since Thursday, when a court convicted her of election law violations in the 1971 parliamentary campaign. During her address to the Punjab outside her home, Mrs. Gandhi appeared tired, drawn and haggard — a contrast to the spirit and verve she displayed publicly over the previous two days.

However, she assured her listeners that she is facing up to her current troubles.

"Let it not be forgotten that I am accustomed to facing challenges coolly," she said. "This is not the first time that we in India are facing a challenge. I have no doubt that from this crisis also we will come out with growing strength."

The prime minister still has not said unequivocally that she will remain in office, and the Indian Express and Economic Times printed their resignation reports under banner front-page headlines that — dramatized — Mrs. Gandhi's crisis, the worst in her nine years in office.

The court in her home district of Allahabad ordered that she resign her post and not hold office for six years — but gave her a 20-day reprieve to appeal to India's Supreme Court.

The Express, the country's largest circulation newspaper, reported that the 57-year-old prime minister is "considering the propriety of continuing in office until the Supreme Court decides her ease."

Bombs rock Chicago Loop

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two dynamite bombs rocked Chicago's Loop Saturday, slightly injuring three persons and shattering the windows of several business offices.

Several hours before a Puerto Rican Day parade, Puerto Rican nationalists claimed responsibility.

An organization identifying itself as the FALN, the Armed Forces of the Puerto Rican National Liberation, said it had attacked two "Yankee imperialist institutions" and added the U.S. Federal Building would be its third target. The Federal Building was evacuated and a search ordered.

Union Station, Free Puerto Rico now. Free all political prisoners."

Two couples on a midnight outing told police they were looking at a large mosaic by Spanish artist Pablo Gargallo in front of the First National Bank of Chicago when they saw a man leave a zippered bag near the bank's west entrance.

One of the women picked up the bag and took it to their car. They drove away and, with some difficulty, opened the zipper and found the bag contained four or five sticks of

NYC protest decision due

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police and firemen may learn Monday whether they can mount in full force their campaign to flood New York with "Fear City" pamphlets warning tourists their safety will be in jeopardy if the jobs of 9,000 police and firemen are lost in budget cutting.

The Council for Public Safety, a group representing public safety workers, postponed plans to distribute the pamphlets, emblazoned with a hooded skull, until the legality of the campaign can be argued then before Chief Supreme Court Judge Jacob Mishler.

Another hearing on the matter is scheduled in federal court here.

Gov. Hugh Carey decried the pamphleteering to reporters Saturday.

"It properly is 'Fair City,' not 'Fear City,'" he said. "The campaign will not hurt the city."

The campaign was on again, off again after a series of court maneuvers by the council and the city. The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association announced Thursday it would distribute pamphlets, characterizing New York as a haven for nuggers, rapists and murders.

The city and the Transit Authority, whose officers also are involved, obtained two temporary restraining orders in State Supreme Court the same day.

The court order was served Friday morning on PBA president Ken McFeeley, John Maye, president of the Transit Police Benevolent Association, and Richard Vizzini, president of the Uniformed Firefighter's Association, as they handed out the pamphlets at Kennedy Airport. The pamphleteering was stopped before it really began.

Later Friday, Federal Court Judge Orrin Judd, ruling on a petition filed by McFeeley and the PBA, earlier, said the state court restraint was not binding on any off-duty employee not personally served with the state order.

An FBI spokesman said a note was found in Union Station which "included information that the FALN had undertaken to bomb Yankee imperialist institutions identified as the United America Bank, the First National Bank and the U.S. Federal Building."

The second of the two Loop explosions occurred at State Street and Wacker Drive, kiosk off point of Saturday's Puerto Rico Day parade. Police increased security to guard against more trouble.

"Last evening, this is the FALN speaking," a woman telephoned the Chicago bureau of Associated Press after the second explosion. "We have planted three bombs at capitalist institutions in downtown Chicago. You will find a note explaining our actions in a telephone booth at

Soviets visit polls today

MOSCOW (UPI) — About 150 million voters will cast ballots Sunday for 22 million nominees to regional parliaments throughout the Soviet Union, but the results have already been decided.

"More than half the candidates are non-Communist party members, according to the Soviet news agency Tass. However, they are selected in party-organized meetings and since there is only one candidate to each seat, the nominee always wins.

Communist General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev is the candidate for the Russian Federation Supreme Soviet from the Bauman region of Moscow.

Brezhnev closed the election campaign Friday by calling on the United States to help ban weapons "even more frightful than nuclear ones."

In his first speech in more than a month, Brezhnev told a meeting in his Moscow consultancy: "States, above all the big powers, should conclude an agreement banning the development of new weapons of mass destruction, new systems of such weapons."

He called for an insurmountable barrier to such a development. "In this matter, the Soviet Union and the United States, acting in one direction, could make no small contribution," he said.

Fire fighter school planned in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Fire School for fire fighters from throughout Idaho will be held June 25 and 26 in Twin Falls.

Fire Chief Bobby K. Bopp said the school will be conducted on the College of Southern Idaho Campus and is sponsored by the Idaho Department of Vocational Education and the Twin Falls Fire Department.

This is the 28th fire school held annually. The first, in 1948, during which the program was officially organized, was also held in Twin Falls. Bopp said the school is being donated to the charter members, including Jay Curtis who is a charter member and has attended all 27 schools since that time.

R. E. (Bob) Scott, Poestello, is president of the Idaho Fire Fighters. Other officers include Ray Capaul, Coeur d'Alene, vice president, and Ray Petersen, Idaho Falls, secretary-treasurer.

During fire school work sessions firemen will be given training and practice in fire prevention master planning, report writing, officer training, fire simulator, large hose and pumping operations and other fire fighting measures.

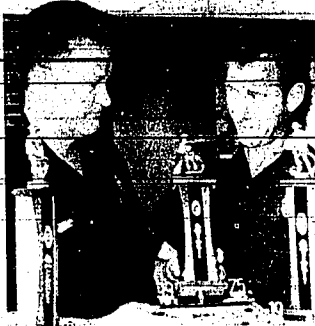

Fred Higgins, Twin Falls fire marshal, John Barnes, assistant fire marshal, Boise; Robert Russ, assistant fire chief, Boise; Jerold J. Hammer, training officer, Idaho Falls and F. E. (Bud) Herejs, assistant fire chief, Twin Falls, will conduct training sessions.

Registration will open Wednesday June 25 at 8 a.m. Opening exercises will be held in the new Twin Falls fire station with those attending given an opportunity to tour the modern new facility. After that, the sessions move to CSI where they will be held through Friday.

Speakers during various programs will include Jean Miller, city manager of Twin Falls; Steve Millward, fire inspector; Poestello, and Bart Brown, director, Department of Labor and Industrial Services.

An awards banquet will be held Friday night at 6:30 p.m. at which awards including the "fire fighter of the year" plaque will be presented.

A hose competition will be held during the training program. Trophies will be given for the most efficient and accurate two and four-man teams.

Contest hopefuls

Court decisions issued

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld one Fifth District Court judgment and reversed another in decisions on recent appeals.

The high court affirmed a summary judgment by Judge Sherman Bellwood favoring the plaintiffs in a case involving earnest money. Riley Matheson and Muriel Matheson were plaintiffs respondents in the suit against Gary S. Harris and Frank D. Maughan, defendants and appellants.

The court, speaking per Curiam, agreed with the district court findings that an earnest money agreement in question was too ambiguous in its description of land, outstanding mortgage and method of acceptance to support an award of specific performance or damage.

The other case was a complaint filed by Nielsen and Co., a co-partnership with Craig Nielsen, Gwen Nielsen and the Ray Nielsen Trust, Craig Nielsen trustee versus the Cassia and Twin Falls County Joint Class A School District 161 and the board of trustees of that district along with Leslie Mitchell, of Mitchell, Construction Co.

The case involved bids submitted for the construction of a junior high school building in Burley. Plaintiffs argued that use of a certain subcontractor by the defendants respondents rendered their bid unresponsive and void, and the low bid therefore was that of their firm.

The plaintiffs contended the subcontractor was not properly licensed in the state of Idaho.

Charles R. Donaldson, supreme court justice, said the court agreed the classificatory license scheme governing public works contractors "should be followed since, in the case at bar, its provisions were not satisfied, the bid was held to be unacceptable."

In reversing the district court's judgment of dismissal of the case, the supreme court remanded the matter to the lower court, but only in so far as the issue of damages is to be considered.

Contracts

TWIN FALLS — Teacher contracts for the coming school year are available in district Supl. George Staudahe's office and should be picked up as soon as possible, Staudahe said.

Energy bill battles due

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a week of emotional debate, the House has eliminated some tough provisions from its energy bill. But measures remain that supporters consider the basis for an effective energy policy.

"The House obviously did not want to bite the bullet," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn.

"It's pretty damn weak," said Rep. Rick C. Ollinger, D-N.Y. "But we got the important points in it, which are critical to an energy policy that is not entirely dependent on the price element."

House members will try to finish the bill in the next few days. Fights lie ahead over the energy trust fund, taxes on business use of fuels and tax depreciations in certain energy-related areas.

At least one congressman, Rep. Joe D. Waggoner Jr., D-La., wants the bill sent back to committee.

As written by the House Ways and Means Committee, the bill took a two-prong approach to energy conservation: higher federal gasoline taxes to cut consumption, and import quotas to make sure the cuts came from foreign rather than domestic oil.

But the full House killed the tax increase, on which supporters had staked most of their effort. The bill's backers blamed a coalition of freshmen Democrats, oil-state Congressmen, and Republicans.

The increase would have boosted gas taxes three cents a gallon Jan. 1 and up to 20 cents.

Major provisions left in the bill include:

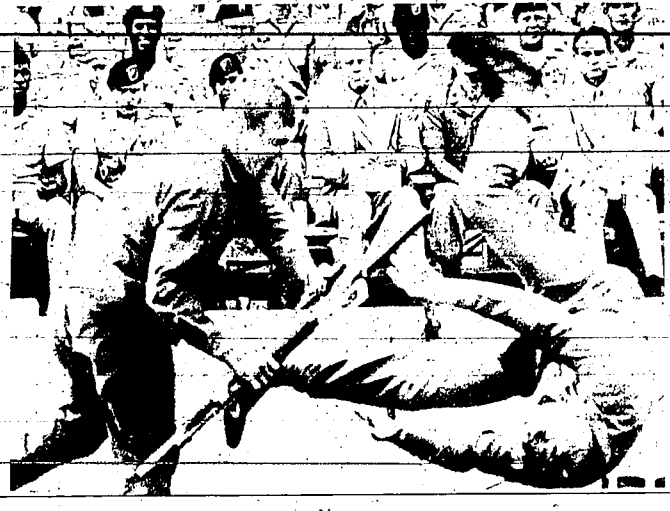

Quotas — The House approved quotas on imported oil that raised the limit for the last part of this decade to about what a congressional committee estimated would be needed for the U.S. economy to recover and grow.

In short, the quotas are not expected to pinch. They would be 6 million barrels a day in 1975 and 1976, 6.5 million in 1977, 6 million in 1978 and 1979, and 6.5 million in 1980. But the President could vary the amount by 1 million barrels a day through 1977, 1.5 million in 1978 and 1979, and 2 million thereafter.

Duties — The bill would replace the President's import tariff system with duties on foreign oil. The duties generally would start somewhat lower than the present tariff system, but could go higher if the world oil prices rise.

Automobiles — The bill would impose 1975-76 auto makers who fail to meet a basic average standard of 18 miles per gallon for 1978 models and 19 for 1979 models and 20 for 1980 models — goals the industry has said it can meet.

Command show

Ford joins Army's birthday fete

SERIOUS President Ford watches Ranger hand-to-hand combat demonstration Saturday while eating a box lunch from his lap. Ford joined Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway, far right, and other dignitaries for the Army's birthday. (UPI)

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — President Ford, getting a taste of the heat and humidity that have plagued generations of GIs at this infantry training center, saluted the Army on its 200th birthday Saturday and said today's realities require a strong American fighting force.

Ford flew to Ft. Benning, "home of the infantry," from Washington for the day-long bi-centennial celebration, featuring several hours of military maneuvers and demonstrations by crack ranger and airborne units.

He also worked into his schedule a meeting with Georgia Republican leaders, who could help his candidacy in 1976.

The political discussion, which lasted about 50 minutes, was Ford's last stop before returning to Washington. A White House spokesman described the session as cordial and said the talk ranged from energy to foreign policy.

A well-wisher asked the President when he emerged from the meeting whether he would give people a chance to vote for him in 1976.

"I sure will," Ford said with a smile.

Ford picked a searcher of a day for his visit. Five civilians and one soldier were treated for heat exposure.

The sun blazed down out of a cloudless sky, accentuating the humidity and sending temperatures into the 80's.

Many of the 30,000 persons who gathered at York Field named in honor of World War I hero Alvin York — for the President's talk tried to shield themselves from the sun by holding programs over their heads. Others tried to fan away the heat.

Ford told the crowd "today's realities have increased, rather than reduced our need for a solid conventional fighting force and for a strong and ready infantry soldier."

In today's world, as in the world of George Washington, weakness is a provocation to aggression.

Just as the President began speaking, two long-haired youths sitting in a back row of bleachers stood up and unfurled a large U.S. flag with the words "No More Gentiles in Our Name" inscribed across it.

A man nearby wrestled the flag out of their hands to the applause of others nearby. Ford paused in his talk when he heard the applause but it was not clear whether he had seen the incident.

The President recalled that the Second Continental Congress created the Army on June 14, 1775, and that it was "a ragged band of citizen

Israeli leader doubts pact due

By Doubt Press International

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Saturday he believes Egypt has changed some of its Middle East peace proposals but he does not expect his current talks with American leaders to produce a settlement with Cairo.

"Our intention is to clarify the chances of an agreement," Rabin told the Israeli national radio in an interview in New York broadcast in Israel.

"Israel will agree to no agreement with Egypt until all previous commitments are honored — especially the promise to allow Israeli cargoes through the Suez Canal," he said.

Egypt resumed the canal June 5 to most cargo. It had been closed since the 1967 Middle East War.

The Israeli radio said Rabin reported that his talks with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger led him to believe there had been some changes in the Egyptian position, but he did not specify them.

Rabin met with New York Gov. Hugh Carey and New York City Mayor Abraham Beame during the day and said he was returning home "with the feeling there is an understanding here for Israel's position."

Rabin and Kissinger held an extended meeting Friday in Washington and agreed to meet again in New York Sunday before the prime minister returns home to Israel.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said the extension of talks reflected progress toward a framework for Israeli resumption of negotiations with Egypt for a new interim agreement.

The sources said Rabin was considering an Israeli withdrawal from the strategic mountain passes and oil fields in the Sinai in return for a long-term Egyptian agreement to a U.N. presence in the desert.

In Cairo, the weekly newspaper Al-Nahar El Yom reported that the United States would propose another summit meeting between President Ford and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

volunteers, a deep in love of liberty and a true sense of duty." He noted today's Army is also an all-volunteer Army, and called it "an Army of winners."

Ford said very few people thought the Revolutionary Army had "much of a future" when it took its stand against the British in 1775, and that many in Congress 200 years later thought the decision to end the draft was "impractical at best, and impossible at worst."

The President pledged to do all he could to "keep our armed forces supplied with the best and most modern training, weapons and equipments in the world," again indicating his drive for economy would not extend to national defense.

The Pentagon budget for the current fiscal year is $96 billion, and Ford has asked for $106 billion next fiscal year.

He reminded the crowd that "it took strength to win our freedom; it will take strength to keep it and to preserve peace. If we are to avoid war, we must maintain a credible and ready fighting force."

After his speech, Ford reviewed demonstrations by the five types of modern infantry: walking, parachute, ranger, mechanized and air mobile — and then made his way along the barricades holding back the crowd, shaking hands and laughing with well-wishers.

Well blaze burns out

INTHACASTAL CITY, La. (UPI) — Fire from a wild well on an offshore drill rig died out Saturday. The well owners announced a method of plugging the still-escaping natural gas.

Amoco Production Co., owner of the drilling rig atop the 15,000 foot well, said a relief well will be drilled nearby to kill the wild well beneath the gulf floor. The operation could take longer, than a month depending on the depth of the relief well.

"The drilling program would call for a 45-day magnitude if you have to go the deepest depth," said Joel Power, Amoco spokesman in New Orleans.

The fire erupted Friday some 36 hours after the gas well blew out, letting streams of water and oil, mixed with invisible natural gas, gush into the air. The cause of the blowout was attributed to an equalizer that malfunctioned although the piece of machinery involved was not pinpointed.

Power said engineers did not know what made the fire go out. They had determined only one of the four wells on the platform was leaking and were spraying 12,000 gallons of water a minute on the structure from four barges in an effort to keep the fire from reigniting.

Profumo given royal pardon

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth gave what amounted to a royal pardon Saturday to John Profumo, the former defense minister whose affair with a call-girl brought him public disgrace and toppled a government.

The Queen, on her official birthday, named Profumo a Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire for "important services to the empire," specifically his unpaid welfare work among the poor in London's slums.

For Profumo, the award announced in the Queen's honors list capped 12 years of quiet work away from public attention after years in the limelight and a brief period in the glare of notoriety.

Now 60, Profumo was forced from office in 1963 when it was disclosed that the dashing war hero and official of the Conservative government had shared the affections of Christine Keeler with a Soviet naval attaché, Capt. Eugene Ivanov.

The implications for national security worried the British government more than the sexual tangle.

Miss Keeler, frequently in the headlines for alleged involvement with criminals and the aristocracy, had described Ivanov as a "tired, big huggy bear," and there were charges she could have delayed to Ivanov Western defense secrets, revealed to her by Profumo.

A formal inquiry cleared Profumo of any security disclosures, but he was forced to resign because he falsely denied to Parliament having had sexual relations with Miss Keeler. He later retracted the statement.

Profumo said he lied to protect the feelings of his wife, popular film actress Valerie Hobson. She stood by him and has since worked at his side in the slums of the East End.

The "Profumo Affair" directly forced the resignation in October, 1963, of Prime Minister Harold MacMillan.

In 1971, the Queen, Prime Minister Edward Heath and Lady Spencer-Churchill attended the opening of a welfare home built with funds raised by Profumo.

When they met, the Queen smiled and held out her hand, extending royal recognition to the social tumbler for the first time in eight years.

Document shows US arms bribes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Pentagon document frankly admits that U.S. businessmen pay large agent fees — and sometimes outright bribes — as part of the usual arms procurement process in Asia, the Middle East and Latin America.

The eight-page paper "Agents Fees in the Middle East," approved last year by the Defense Department, says that procuring the services of local foreign agents in obtaining sales contracts for foreign nations is a 2,000-year-old practice that "will not evaporate easily."

The document was circulated to American aerospace, electronic and other industries by the Defense Security Assistance Agency. It said Iran is seeking to diminish the role of these middle men and a trend may be developing to cut them out of the foreign arms procurement process.

Until that happens, however, the paper suggests that the payment of agent and commission fees is one of the costs of doing business and may be countenanced so long as the fees are "reasonable."

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., released copies of the paper over the weekend with an indignant blast: "It ought to be illegal for American companies, especially when doing government contractual work, to engage in such highly unethical conduct."

The problem of exorbitant agent fees, and other more questionable business practices, is one of the ticklish issues which the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations has been investigating.

Last week, the Senate panel released more than 500 pages of documents and held two days of hearings which showed that the Northrop aerospace corporation paid $450,000 to bribe two Saudi Arabian generals. Made other payments to settle an Iranian tax matter and possibly to influence an Indonesian politician.

— Past revelations include the disclosure that Gulf Oil contributed about $1 million to the election campaign of South Korean President Park Chung Hee, and ITT offered money to the U.S. government to help block the election of Chilean President Salvador Allende.

— The Senate subcommittee is planning next to look into the operations of Ashland Oil, and is contemplating an investigation of the Lockheed Corp., where Northrop apparently borrowed a few tricks.

— Sources report that the subcommittee is undecided what to recommend at this point, but that a law requiring public disclosure of hired foreign agents is the more favored proposal.

Colby due before Senate probers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate Committee, meeting in a high-security chamber under the Capitol dome, will question William E. Colby this week about possible Central Intelligence Agency involvement in assassinations of Viet Cong double agents and Saigon leaders.

A committee spokesman said the agenda would include the alleged assassination of South Vietnamese, President Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother, and Operation Phoenix, a program of eliminating — sometimes killing — suspected Viet Cong agents during the war.

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence is digging into events going back 16 years through the Johnson and Kennedy presidencies to the alleged assassination of the Eisenhower administration in its effort to trace assassination plots and actual killings.

Colby, who gained wide personal experience as a CIA operative in Vietnam under all three of those administrations before he became director of the spy agency in 1973, will be making his fifth trip before the panel to explain CIA activities.

under investigation." But he wants to find out what the chain of command really was.

On Monday the committee expects to receive the secret report on assassination plots which the Rockefeller Commission sent to President Ford last week.

On Wednesday, the panel gathers in the security-tight conference room of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee to hear Colby testify under oath.

Colby first went to Saigon in 1959, ostensibly serving as 1st Secretary at the Embassy but actually running CIA affairs. He returned to Washington in 1962, spending five years as chief of the CIA's Far East Division; then went back to Saigon in 1966 and spent three years as head of the Civil Operations and Rural Development Support Mission. Diem was ousted in November 1963 in a coup d'état, ostensibly engineered by the South Vietnamese Armed Forces.

Coup leaders said Diem committed suicide. But other reports said Diem and his brother, Secret Police Chief Ngo Dinh Nhu, were executed in an armored personnel carrier while being taken to military headquarters — from the Roman Catholic church where they sought refuge.

The Senate committee wants to pin down what part — if any — the CIA had in the coup and killings.

It also wants to learn more about Operation Phoenix, the CIA-engineered campaign to "neutralize" Viet Cong agents who had infiltrated into the South Vietnamese army and police and evasion positions.

Search continues for missing youth

BROCKTON, Mass. (UPI) — It has been a year now and little David Louison is still missing this Father's Day Eve.

Police and the FBI have followed a twisting, unrewarding trail all over the nation. They admit as of right now there are no more clues available than when he was 5 when the 5-year-old boy was first reported missing.

"They all look alike at that age," said Detective Frank Gentile. "That haircut and their size and all."

Gentile is the only officer still assigned to the case full time. A year ago, more than 5,000 persons were involved, combing the woodlands and neighborhood around his West Elm Street home. They found nothing.

The biggest question mark is whether the boy is alive or dead. No one knows.

Some bizarre ransom demands were made, but police said they were only ploys by persons trying to bilk money from David's parents.

The family doesn't answer the telephone any more. The caller hears only a tape recorded message.

Gentile said pictures and descriptions have been sent throughout the nation and calls frequently come to him that the boy has been seen. But although each lead is carefully checked, none have been fruitful.

The boy's father is Melvin S. Louison, a well-known criminal lawyer. He recently has been in the news trying to keep Mrs. Roberta Shaffer, convicted of killing her boyfriend, out of jail so she can take care of her terminally ill daughter.

Authorities said Louison's record of cases — spanning 23 years — was examined and no clues were found of anyone who might have resorted to kidnapping as a means to get even with him.

Evidence showed David was an adventurous kid, unafraid of strangers and ready to romp in strange places. He was once found in a shopping center parking lot, 2 1/2 miles from his home after walking there

Congress ignores right to oversee US arms sales

North Vietnam ready to talk

BANGKOK (UPI)—North Vietnam said Saturday it is ready to talk with the United States on economic aid, search for American missing in action and return of bodies of dead GIs.

"The Democratic Republic of Vietnam is ready to discuss with the U.S. government American contributions to heal the wounds of war in Vietnam, the search for the missing Americans in Vietnam and the repatriation of the remains of the dead," Radio Hanoi said in a broadcast monitored here.

The broadcast criticized White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen for remarks describing the 1973 Paris Peace Treaty on Vietnam as having no value.

1975 N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — Although Congress enacted a law six months ago giving itself "foreign power" over all prospective United States arms sales to foreign countries, it has never exercised it.

The law is aimed particularly at controlling sales worth billions of dollars to the Arab countries and Iran. Since its passage, the Defense Department has notified Congress of about 26 proposed sales, mostly to the Middle East, but none of them has been challenged. All of the sales are yet to be fulfilled.

Many of the Pentagon letters of notification are classified either in whole or in part. According to sources in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, there is no indication that any Senator availed himself of his right to look at them.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., the author of the arms sales law and "now the proponent of another bill that would give Congress even more authority," was asked in an interview why he never exercised it.

"It's like the Smithsonian Museum," he said. "I've been in Washington for 20 years and still haven't got there. It's a matter of priorities."

"There are lots of things around here we should be doing that we don't have the time to do," he said. "It takes staff time, too, and several days' work."

The procedure on controlling arms sales was tacked on the foreign aid bill last December along with other amendments as part of a general assertion of Congressional power in foreign affairs.

The failure of Congress to exercise its authority is regarded by some legislators and their aides as an instance of the lack of Congressional interest and follow-through on new international legislation.

U.S. arms sales last year were $2.2 billion. This year, Pentagon projections are for over $7 billion, not counting the $2 billion in sales of the F-16 fighter plane.

High government officials acknowledge that these sales had been made without a comprehensive study of their potential effects and without a general policy governing them.

Officials disclosed, however, that three weeks ago President Ford ordered an interagency study of American arms aid and sales programs. The order took the form of a National Security Council study memorandum.

Many of these working on this study expressed the view that, given the money flowing into the United States from arms sales and the balance-of-payments problems caused by the high price of oil, the study will be a fruitless exercise.

The foreign assistance and economic policy subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will hold two days of hearings on arms sales policy beginning Tuesday.

The Nelson arms sales amendment, enacted with little opposition, requires the President to give notice of all letters of offer to sell any defense articles or services "in excess of $25 million." The Congress then has 30 calendar days for both houses to disapprove of the proposed sale.

The notices came ranging from a $25 million computer deal with Spain to a $31 million in trucks for Morocco, to $51 million in F-16s, to Tunisia. In $46 million in Lance missiles for Israel. The largest sales were to Iran and Saudi Arabia.

Girl smuggles leaflets to Russia

MOSCOW (UPI)—Taking a leaf from a James Bond novel, a 25-year-old Paris girl smuggled pamphlets into the Soviet Union calling for the overthrow of the Communist regime, the Western weekly newspaper said Saturday.

Describing her as a "modern-day Mata Hari," the newspaper said Christine Harbort, a law student at the University of Paris, got the leaflets past customs by taping them to her stomach.

"It said she was arrested by the KGB secret police but was allowed to leave the country when she showed 'sincere repentance,'" the newspaper said.

The newspaper said she was given the "literature" by an anti-Soviet émigré organization.

"This new job could not realize it," her mission would fail even before she entered the Paris-Leningrad plane," it said. Super spy James Bond's code number in the novel by Ian Fleming was 007.

According to Nefedya, police arrested the young woman as she was heading for to a Moscow citizens' anti-Soviet booklets, leaflets, and other the overthrow of the existing regime and instructions on how to operate a photo copier to print more leaflets, "as well as gifts of clothing."

The unnamed recipient was "naïve" and "had listened to anti-Soviet broadcasts but when he realized what he was involved in, he recognized his mistake," the newspaper said.

Miss Harbort said she had been given the literature by a fellow student, Laurent Dubois, a member of a human rights committee. Because she could not read Russian, she did not realize the nature of the contents.

Nefedya said she had also been given some books by a Michel Stavinsky, whom it described as a leader of the émigré organization the "National Union of Russian Solidarity."

Julie to quit job

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Julie Nixon Eisenhower plans to resign as Washington editor of the Saturday Evening Post on July 15, informed sources said Saturday.

Julie, who celebrates her 40th birthday July 2, wants to do something else now, sources said. "She does not find the job challenging enough," they said. "She is a pretty challenging girl."

Richard M. Nixon's daughter took on the $130,000-a-year job about three years ago while her father was president and later became a member of the editorial board of the

Communists arrested

CORDOBA, Argentina (UPI) — Police used tear gas Saturday to disperse a crowd outside the bombed-out headquarters of the local Communist party and arrested more than 120 persons.

Police sources said at least 120 persons were arrested, most of them Communist party members. No injuries were reported.

Witnesses said some shots were fired but it was not clear if the police or the demonstrators opened fire.

Police sources said the trouble began early Saturday when three powerful bombs rocked the downtown area of this industrial city, 430 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

One of the bombs ripped the front off the Communist party building. A second caused heavy damage to another structure housing the Radical Civic Union, the major government opposition party. A third hit a downtown bar. No injuries were reported in the blasts and the identity of the bombers was unknown.

Nuke plan cited

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some areas of the country have received more attention than others, since the mines are centered in states that have the richest coal deposits.

The entire population of Pittsburgh could be lodged in the honeycomb of abandoned mines within 70 miles of the city, the CIA study said. Missouri could sustain 20 percent of its population in underground shafts.

Sitting out a nuclear war underground is not an American innovation. Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger warned the Russians have already mapped out an evacuation plan for their major cities and said the U.S. must possess equal capability.

The Department's Civil Preparedness Agency has already located space for 6 million persons in abandoned shafts, the study said, and CIA Director John E. Davis has suggested $1.3 million from Congress to continue the year-old evacuation research.

Pentagon officials recently tested ventilation equipment and found fans in one cavern beneath Kansas City "moved sufficient air through the mine to support 20,000 people for an indefinite length of time."

Grain trade probe halted

But former associates have told of orders he received to drop his own grain inquiry and turn to other matters. After those orders he sought to turn evidence he said he had gathered over to the U.S. Attorney's office in New Orleans.

It has to be some satisfaction to him now that that same U.S. attorney is gathered over to the U.S. Attorney's office in New Orleans.

Griffin began his own investigation in 1971, according to Agriculture Department records, after finding what he thought to be suspicious circumstances in the records of a grain company.

What he reported finding was that inspectors certify purchases of grain loaded on a ship showed higher grades of grain than were indicated by records for the bins from which the same grain was taken. He is also reported to have told of the grain company purchasing "sample" grade grain, the lowest and cheapest grade, allegedly to blend with higher grades to increase bulk and weight.

A memorandum by a superior official, part of which was made available to The New York Times, expressed opposition to having Griffin talk to a U.S. Attorney in a later case.

"The last time he visited the U.S. Attorney's office, he tried to cause a scandal about grain blending and inspection in the New Orleans area," the memo said.

An associate said that the frustration of Griffin's efforts to pursue the grain case had led to his early retirement.

Asked for comment, a spokesman for the Agriculture Department said he had found an official, whom he declined to name, who recalled the Griffin incident. The official asserted that Griffin "didn't have evidence that you could present to a court," the spokesman said.

Nathaniel E. Kosacek, who was the department's inspector general at the time, said in a telephone interview that he could not recall having heard of Griffin, but he asserted that Griffin could have appeared in a rebuff directly to the inspector general.

Another former special agent thought differently. "You go through channels," he said.

Several federal officials have reported a sense of frustration among field office employees of the grain division when they report irregularities and fail to hear of investigative results.

In another person making such a complaint seemed unaware of records showing that in many instances cases referred to the Justice Department had been rejected for prosecution.

A list sought from the grain division of cases referred for investigation shows 35 proposals since mid-1964 but does not include a number of recent reports.

About one-third of those are cases centered on the Gulf area, where the current investigation is focused. It is being conducted by the U.S. attorney's offices, the Federal

TF love story: Larry and Sherry

"You've got to let them know," said Sherry.

Three weeks ago Larry flew down to Fort Worth, Tex., and brought Sherry back to Twin Falls.

She now wears a diamond engagement ring on her finger. They plan to get married next June, after recuperating from the implant surgery.

In the meantime, Sherry is returning to Fort Worth to be with her parents, Ray and Beulah Hamilton. "Her father is a pharmacist and her mother operates a rest home."

Like Larry, Sherry is scheduled to receive two electronic stimulators. Unlike Larry, she will not undergo a procedure which freezes brain tissue.

Larry is scheduled for the freezing to loosen his tightened hands.

Sherry's hands are not as constricted as Larry's, although she has the same difficulty walking and talking, and like Larry rides a three-wheeled bicycle.

Sherry and Larry both say the results of their surgeries will not affect their marriage plans.

"My feeling is we want to wait until after the surgery, so we can recuperate, and she wants to finish college," Larry said. "I can save money and get going on my job."

For several months Larry has operated a small Twin Falls printing business, using a special machine which allows him to type. Sherry has one semester to go at Tarratt County Junior College, where she is studying journalism.

"If the surgery is successful for one of them and not the other, Larry said, "that wouldn't change nothing."

"They will come up with something different for me, if it doesn't work for me," Sherry said. "It's no big deal."

The couple have picked June 20, 1975, as a wedding date.

"We just picked it. I don't know," Larry said of the date.

"They think their afflictions give them a closeness most couples don't have."

"I feel like I know her for... a long, long time ago Larry said.

"I feel like he's my brother," said Sherry. "That's how it hits me sometimes."

Larry and Sherry plan to get married in Fort Worth, but after the marriage they will live in Twin Falls.

Thursday Sherry got a pair of new cowboy boots, her first despite a Texas girlhood. She also saw her first ladybug "in three or four years."

Today Sherry leaves for Texas.

But last week Larry and Sherry bought themselves a present — a refrigerator.

"I said June 20," said Larry. "That's just tentative — I doubt we can wait that long."

"How about tonight?" Sherry said.

"Two things everybody wants: A nice home. And a bargain. But the only way I know to get both is to make your move now."

Because if you wait around for homes to get cheaper, you'll wait a long time. Forever, probably. The way labor and materials are going up, the price of houses has got to keep on going up too. And land prices are going in the same direction. Have been for years.

What about interest rates? Well, the experts say they're already about as low as they're going to get. And likely to start climbing again. Even if they drop a little — next year, say — the amount you'd save would be a tight house. Build it to last. With first-rate materials, like kiln-dried lumber and copper plumbing. A Boise Cascade Home is economical too. Not just to buy, but to live in. It's all wrapped with insulation. So it's easy to keep warm. Or cool. And every room has its own thermostat to give you just the heat you need. No waste.

There's lots more to a Boise Cascade Home, of course: (Lots of 'em too. Over 30 dandy models to choose from.) You really ought to find out more about what they offer. Liberty bites the dust

Teacher leaves final note

The old portion of Lincoln School, completed in 1909, will soon be demolished

Final hour nears

TWIN FALLS — A schoolroom home for thousands of Twin Falls pupils — the old portion of Lincoln School — will soon be a dusty pile of debris.

Completed in 1909, the school was the second to be built in the developing town of Twin Falls.

When finished, the building stood apart from the rest of the town and was surrounded by sagebrush. Children came to classes in horse-drawn wagons and enjoyed the modern convenience of restrooms in the basement.

Graduates of Lincoln School may remember the old portion of the building for its high-ceilinged, airy classrooms with windowed walls looking out to playground space, trees and nearby homes.

Huge windows running up to the ceiling lighted the staircases linking the two floors of the building and in some rooms the old hardwood flooring survived without tile until the end.

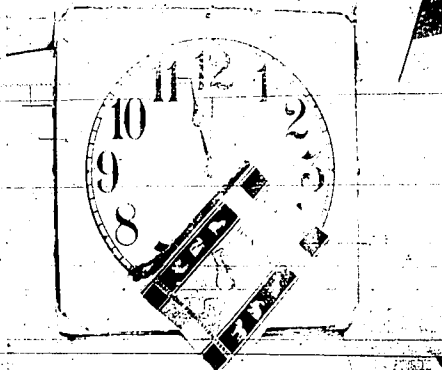

By next fall the playground area at Lincoln should be re-landscaped and the new portion of the school open for the next generation of students.

Until the wrecking ball begins the end for the pioneer building, the school may attract a few sentimental glances by former pupils passing by.

Group sets annual horse competition

GOODING — The Toponis Quarter Horse Association will hold its annual show June 21 and 22 at the Gooding County Fairgrounds.

The group's show last year was the second largest Quarter Horse show in the state in 1974, according to Lorena Maag, Hagerman, secretary.

She said the association of officers are hoping for another "A" show, which means at least 225 entries.

The halter classes will start at 8 a.m. June 21, followed in the afternoon by jumping, English-pleasure, western pleasure, horsemanship and trial classes.

There will be classes for all ages, she said, including a youth division.

Ban study ordered

CHEYENNE (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday ruled the Environmental Protection Agency must prepare an environmental impact statement on its 1972 ban of interstate shipments of some "predator control poisons."

Judge Ewing T. Kerr handed down his order after a hearing in which a state agricultural official claimed Wyoming's sheep industry was on the brink of extinction unless something was done to halt increasing losses to coyotes and other predators.

"This court cannot sit idly by and see one of our principal industries possibly extinguished through action or failure of action by a federal agency when it is within the power of the court to grant relief," he said.

Beef price rise causes analyzed

© N. Y. Times Service

CHICAGO — After declining this spring, the price of beef is rising again and the reason is simple — fewer cattle are coming to market from the ranches and feed lots.

At the Omaha stockyards this week, choice grade steers were bringing more than $55 a hundred pounds, nearly 50 percent higher than four months ago.

In the 19 cities where the American National Cattlemen's Association surveys retail beef prices, the average cost on five cuts of beef had risen from $1.27 in March to $1.52 by mid-May.

The steep decline in cattle marketing was caused by two factors. The drastic reductions in hard-pressed cattle feeders made last fall and the number of steers they were fattening are now being felt at the gates of the meat packers, who are having to pay more to get the fewer animals that are coming to the stockyards.

At the same time, a wet spring has produced abundant grass on the western ranges, where the largest cattle herds in history are grazing.

With ample forage to carry their yearlings and calves into the summer, ranchers are holding as many as they can while their market prices improve.

Last fall and winter, after a painfully dry summer, many ranchers were forced to sell cattle directly to the meat packers, wholesale prices fell and during most of the winter beef cuts were the best comparative buys in the market.

But housewives can gain some comfort in the knowledge that, most market forecasters are certain that the increases in retail beef prices will not last much longer.

With a record 132 million animals still on farms and ranches, cattlemen will eventually have to start moving many of them off the poor summer grass. When that happens, supplies of grass-fed beef will rise sharply and prices will decline again, helping bring down fattened cattle prices also.

In its latest forecast, the Agriculture Department expected the price of choice fattened steers to drop to $15 a hundred pounds later this summer. The department said this decline could be even sharper if the grass dried up and the unfattened range cattle flooded the market.

Hagerman heist probed

COOKE — The Gooding sheriff's office has been investigating many leads into the June 3 Hagerman bank robbery, but so far they have "come to nothing."

Sheriff Carl E. Brown said officers are putting together a composite picture of the suspect, but so far all reports from employees at the Idaho State Bank at Hagerman.

Norman Hansen, bank vice president and manager, said a little less than $2,000 was stolen from the bank the morning of June 3 when a young man wearing a gun pushed a note to the teller, demanding money.

During the past week law enforcement officers have been showing pictures of known bank robbers from FBI files to the bank employees and other persons who reported seeing the incident, but so far all the suspects have been ruled out, Sheriff Brown said.

"We still have people call in and say they saw this or that," Brown said Thursday. But so far, he said, investigation of all such "leads" have proved unsuccessful.

It never has been determined if the suspect ever left town after leaving the bank on foot shortly after 10 a.m. June 3. He was described as a caucasian male, 25 to 30 years old, slender build, between 5 feet 8 to 10 inches tall and weighing between 155 and 185 pounds.

Bank officials said the bank's automatic alarm system tripped a camera which supposedly took film of the action, but George Lee, FBI agent in Twin Falls, declined comment.

Hansen library busy

HANSEN — The new Hansen Public Library has been finding ready customers since its opening.

The facility, located in a building donated by Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Harris Sr., is open from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Saturdays and from 3 until 7 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays.

The building at the corner of Maple Street and Main Avenue on a lot adjacent to the city hall has a large front area to house the library and includes a small apartment at the rear.

Sidewalks and curbing have been installed by the city and the main irrigation ditch has been covered from Main Street to the alleyway. Mr. and Mrs. Harris plan to have the landscaping around the building done soon.

Twin Falls City librarian, Arlan Call, has contributed a number of books and there has been good response from area residents and schools, with both non-fiction and fiction and several sets of encyclopedias donated.

Metal shelving and other equipment—for the library, which has approximately 1,500 volumes, has been installed.

Mrs. Vernon Hoopes, acting librarian, said Hansen City residents may obtain books without paying a library fee, but there will be a $5.00 fee per family for rural residents.

Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Anna Hansen Hayes, Twin Falls, were honored at the opening day observance. Mrs. Hayes presented a copy of her book "Buckskin and Smoke" to the library. It is a collection of short stories on frontier life in this area. The city of Hansen as well as the Hansen Bridge over the Snake River were named for her family.

Another book by a local author, Ronald Olson, Hansen, entitled "A Family on the Move" also is available to library users.

Gooding fair set

GOODING — The 1975 Gooding County Fair will be held Aug. 4-6 with a Quarter Horse show planned Aug. 8 and 9.

The theme for this year's fair will be "Our Western Heritage," according to Ed Koester, county agent.

He said Reed Vestal has been named to the fair board, replacing Mary Ann Hagen who recently was honored for her four years of service in the group.

The fair board will meet June 23 at 8 p.m. at the Gooding County Courtroom and the public is invited to attend.

The county fair will feature a parade on opening day, Aug. 4, which will be under the direction of the Elks Lodge. The Lions Club will handle tickets for the rodeo which will be presented all three nights of the fair.

Swanney Kirby will be the rodeo producer again this year, Koester said. The sheriff's posse will be in charge of parking and also of the drill team competition scheduled for Aug. 3, Sunday, evening preceding the fair.

Horse jumping events are scheduled for opening day also with the 4-H FFA fair stock sale slated for the final day, Aug. 6, at the Gooding Livestock Commission Co.

The antiques division has been expanded to include some furniture items and the youth art division also has been expanded, the agent said.

Fairbrooks should be available by July 5 from the county agent's office and entry blanks for livestock must be received by Koester's office by July 27.

The 4-H horse fair starts at 6 p.m. July 29 and will continue through July 30 and the Quarter Horse show is slated Aug. 8 and 9.

Widow files suit in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — A $220,000 suit has been filed in Fourth District Court at Boise by the widow of a man killed near Horseshoe Bend a year ago in an automobile accident.

Laurel Dickins filed suit on behalf of herself and her son against Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Wunsch, Millpond Lounge and Restaurant and William Cayford.

Her suit said her husband, Michael F. Breshears, died of injuries suffered last July 21 when his car collided with a pickup truck driven by Cayford's minor son west of Horseshoe Bend.

Reactor opened to public

ARCO, Idaho (UPI) — Experimental Breeder Reactor No. 1 at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory was opened to the public for four Saturdays.

The reactor, located on the Energy Research and Development Administration's site near Arco, will be open seven days a week, from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. until Sept. 15. No admission will be charged.

The ERDA has installed explanatory exhibits and the National Park Service will manage the facility during the season and provide guides.

The ERDA said visitors should turn south along a paved road intersecting U.S. Highway 20-26 at a point six miles west of the junction on the road between Arco and Idaho Falls. The facility is a large brick building and a "Welcome Visitors" sign has been placed at the entrance.

Andrus breaks ground

BOISE (UPI) — Using some of the skill he had in the old days as a logger and lumbering man in Idaho's North country, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus wheeled around a front-end loader Friday as he broke ground for the new $1.6 million Capitol Mall heating plant.

Andrus, who before he became governor was a logger in the Orofino area, used the loader to scoop several shovelfuls of earth and dump it into an awaiting truck.

River hearing set

BOISE (UPI) — A public hearing will be held in Boise next Wednesday by the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Board to discuss proposed regulations for boating on Gem State rivers.

The board wants to bar commercial recreational boating operations from most of Idaho's medium and smaller rivers and freeze the number of licenses issued to commercial operators on most major rivers in the state at about 1974 levels.

Authorities rescue floaters

BOISE (UPI) — Boise firemen and policemen rescued four persons from the icy waters of the Boise River Friday, after they fell off their raft near Municipal Park.

"I saw my whole life flash before my eyes," Mickey Strode, 17, of Salem, Ore., said.

Also rescued from the river were Tim Glancy, 16, Matt Adolphsen, 18, and Patty Case, 16, all of Boise.

Glancy said they stopped at the park to let a friend off after he didn't want to float further. When they tried to continue their journey, the current forced them into a low hanging tree and tipped over the raft.

Malpractice law challenged

BOISE (UPI) — A suit challenging Idaho's new malpractice law was filed Friday afternoon in Fourth District Court.

Several Idaho physicians and two hospitals are challenging the law which limits the amount of damages that can be recovered in certain cases of medical malpractice.

The plaintiffs, in the suit, say the Idaho Board of Medicine and the Department of Health and Welfare, "will refuse to renew or continue their licenses to practice medicine unless a certificate of insurance has been filed."

Speaker would ban dams

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Vickie Yazwabski of Boise called for a ban on further construction of dams on the Snake River during her keynote address to a joint session of the Girls State legislature Friday.

Miss Yazwabski, a senior at Bishop Kelly High School, told the delegates "in our activities this week we've taken a stand against the squander and misuse of our natural resources."

"Again we should ask to preserve what is ours... let us take steps to protect our elderly on the road. I support the bill to require persons over 65 to be tested every year for their driving abilities," she said.

She also called for equal funding in education.

"We must have equal funding of education," she said. "I support the proposal for a local tax of the school district levied by the state in order to bring about equality."

Accident in Jerome sends five to hospital

JEROME — Five persons were hospitalized Friday night in Jerome following a head-on collision near the Jerome Country Club golf course.

Bill, hospitalized Saturday, were Thoral Peterson, 22, Gooding listed in fair condition, and Terrance Johnson, 20, Jerome, and Steven Keith Gerard, 24, Shoshone, both in good condition.

Pam McCaslin, 16, Wendell, and Dallas Ann Walker, 14, Jerome, were released Saturday morning from St. Bonedict's Hospital, Jerome.

Idaho State Police officer, Gene Bolton, said the vehicles driven by Gerard and Miss McCaslin met head-on about 8:25 p.m. on the old Jerome highway south of Jerome near the golf course.

He said the McCaslin vehicle was traveling southeast of the Jerome and the vehicle driven by Gerard was headed west. The latter continued west on a county road rather than completing the curve. The two met in the center of the highway, but neither overtook.

Officer Bolton said neither vehicle was traveling fast which probably prevented more serious injuries. He said Peterson was thrown out. He was a passenger in the 1964 convertible driven by Gerard.

Other persons in the Shoshone vehicle were Miss Johnson, Miss McCaslin was accompanied by Miss Walker.

Jerome County officers assisted in the investigation, Bolton said.

Rat and friend

SATRIS, the remarkable rat, has found a good way to get around. She rides on the back of a 10-year-old black lab named Sam. They're the pets of Janee Anderson, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Anderson of 2130 Sherry Drive.

Black lab shoulders friend rat

TWIN FALLS — Janee Anderson, 12, Twin Falls, has been training rats for about five years and enjoys it.

Janee's latest attempt is with 3-month-old Satris, a small white rat, who rides the back of her black lab Sam.

She walks Sam and Satris everyday — one day about 20 miles. Satris can hang on at any speed, up to a very quick jog, says the 12-year-old animal admirer.

"I've had a lot of rodents as pets but I like rats the best," said Janee. "They are a very clean animal."

So if you see a rat on the shoulders of a large black lab, don't be alarmed. It's only Satris out on her daily ride with Sam.

Janee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Anderson of 2130 Sherry Drive.

Creek runoff contained at Oakley

OAKLEY — People farming Old Goose Creek channel below the Oakley Dam can breathe easier now: the reservoir is expected to hold the runoff.

But it's been nip and tuck this past week as water behind the 195-foot dam on Goose Creek climbed to within 2.4 feet of spilling over.

Early last week the water was rising at the rate of half a foot a day. Now, however, water from the main creeks feeding the reservoir has fallen off.

The past two days water in the reservoir has risen only about three-fourths of an inch. The last two days were considered critical because warm temperatures at the end of the week were expected to melt whatever snow remained above the reservoir.

If there was to be runoff, it should have reached the man-made lake this weekend, according to earlier statements by Jerry Stanger, reservoir watermaster.

But Saturday, Stanger said, the creeks were declining except for a few snowbanks, the snow has melted on the watershed above the reservoir.

The reservoir will peak within two or three days, Stanger cautiously predicted. He noted, however, the inflow from Trapper and Goose creeks is now about 370-second-feet per day and the outflow to the canals below is 340-second feet.

Thus, water is still coming in faster than it can be let out, but earlier, water was coming in at more than 500-second feet.

Water has not spilled over the Oakley Dam since 1921, but then the Goose Creek channel from the dam to Burley was open and carried off most of the overflow. Since 1921 the channel has been filled in and in 1973 the Idaho Supreme Court ruled Goose Creek below the dam was no longer a natural drainage.

However, had the reservoir overflowed, it was feared canals below the dam would have ruptured and the water would have flooded the old creek bed irrespective of the court's order.

Much of the abandoned channel has been filled in for farming and apparently some homes have been built in the drainage.

Migrant workers find jobs short

BOISE — In May, Idaho farmers hired about 40 per cent fewer migrant workers than last May, and they may have a labor shortage in June.

"Few migrant workers have been able to find work and some have left in order to find work in other states," Jerry Fackrell, agriculture analyst for the Idaho Department of Employment, said in a department publication. He said if "too many migrants leave Idaho a seasonal farm labor shortage could develop in June."

The late spring delayed sugar beet thinning and hocking, usually started by the first of May, according to Fackrell.

The agriculture labor force has increased 13.7 per cent since April to total 39,650 in the second week of May. The forest and migrant farm workers totaled 24.4 per cent less this May than last May.

The shrinking farm labor force coincided with a small potato planting, 30 per cent by mid-May of the total expected according to Fackrell. About 60 per cent of the total potato acreage was planted by mid-May last year.

About 55 per cent of the spring wheat crop was seeded by mid-May although 65 per cent was in by the same time last year. All of the state's sugar beets were planted by mid-May last year, but only 80 per cent were in by that time this year.

Job developer Simon Rodriguez at the Twin Falls Idaho Migrant Council said that "several people" had gone to Utah to find work in the beet fields and orchards. Others went to Blackfoot when they found little work here.

He said people "try to get by" although work is scarce. "Not many are leaving," he said, because they don't have the money to travel.

"Most are likely to stick with it here," he said. He estimated that only one-third of about 900 seasonal and migrant farmworkers in the area are employed now. "Things are starting up," however, he said.

"They're anxious to go to work," Rodriguez said. He said wages are "staying up like they're supposed to," at $2.10 an hour even with the labor surplus. He said that one family was offered $18 an acre to work in sugar beet fields in Piler. They took it, he said, although the normal rate is $22 to $24 an acre.

Pres. Ford 'dawdles' over hot well funding

MALTA — U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, has accused the Ford administration of "dawdling" by failing to provide adequate funds for the proposed geothermal electric generation pilot plant near Malta.

In an announcement last week, Church said a senate interior subcommittee which he chairs has approved tacking a $10 billion amendment for geothermal development to another energy bill. Half of the amendment funds would go for planning of a pilot electric plant at the Raft River geothermal site and the other half would be for a similar project in Nevada.

The Church amendment would also give the Raft River Electric Co-Op in Malta first option to buy the pilot plant after it is built. The Co-Op along with the state of Idaho and the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) is co-sponsoring the research project.

In a related development, drilling at testwell No. 2 near Malta resumed Friday. Drilling was halted two weeks ago for flow tests and cementing of a production well casing. Researchers have been disappointed at finding water at only 280 degrees so far at the second site.

They plan to go another 1,000 feet below the current 4,800-foot depth in search of hotter water. The first well a half mile away found 204-degree water at 4,200 feet. If water at about 300 degrees can be found at three or four test sites it may be feasible to build a pilot plant to generate electricity from the moderately hot water.

Elsewhere in the United States electricity is already generated from super-hot natural steam.

However, ERDA plans to partially dismantle the huge geothermal drilling rig now at the Malta site after completion of the second test well this month.

A spokesman for ERDA, Richard Blackledge, Idaho Falls, said President Ford's 1976 fiscal year budget beginning July 1 does not include money for drilling wells No. 2 and No. 3.

According to Blackledge, Ford's budget which has not yet cleared Congress provides for $1.8 million for further research for the desert site. Included in the administration budget is money for connecting wells 1 and 2 and water can be pumped out of one and reinjected into the other and setting up and operating a field laboratory at the site.

Friday a spokesman for Sen. Church, George Kline, Boise, said the low budget set by Ford is an example of the dawdling Church is talking about.

"What is needed is a firm commitment by the government to move into the construction stage of a pilot plant should further drilling indicate a worthwhile resource is available," Church said last week.

TWIN FALLS — It wasn't the fastest derby on record — in fact some of the contestants refused to leave the starting gate — but it brought a lot of spectator response.

The event was the first annual baby derby and was held Saturday afternoon at the Bon Marche with 25 well groomed and specially trained contestants.

Relatives coaxed, bribed and called to the crawlers from the finish line but some of the youngsters didn't get the point of the whole thing.

There were three winners in the championship race which matched winners of four heats. Little Randie Bunderson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brent Bunderson, Twin Falls, won a $15 gift certificate. Second place, a $10 gift certificate, went to Marri Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hill, Bloomington, Ind., and third a $5 gift certificate, to Jonathan Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Dixon, Twin Falls.

The event was restricted to crawlers of any age but all winners were required to finish on all fours.

'Who's last?'

Winning smiles

PROUD mothers said their spunky offspring line up for awards in the first annual baby derby Saturday in Twin Falls. From left: Mrs. Brent Bunderson and Mrs. Brent Bunderson, Twin Falls; Marri Hill and son, Fred Hill, Bloomington, Ind.; and Jonathan Dixon and Mrs. Gary Dixon, Twin Falls. Even first by third in that order.

Cattle futures up sharply, close at new season highs

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed sharply higher Friday behind firm cash conditions, anticipation of continued tight deliveries and a short-bought situation in live channels.

Despite a light clean-up trade in marketing centers, futures opened with a solid gains and never faltered while marching to life of contract highs in June and Oct. June closed $1.20 higher after registering an earlier near-limit gain. Aug. and Oct. were 76 cents higher in heavy trading. Short covering added fuel to early strength which resulted from aggressive bidding on all fronts.

733-6013; Toll Free 1-800-632-0807

With Fridays gains, futures completed a 20 per cent advance over prices a year earlier. During this time, live and dressed markets have not progressed as impressively. However cash prices have remained firm at higher levels and movement has continued at a pace far above earlier projections.

The nearby price of over $55.00 per cwt is the highest level since Jan. surpassed $3.90 in early 1974.

Prices finished just off the highs in a volume estimated at nearly 13,000 contracts. Feeder prices were higher in moderate trading.

Wheat futures fell to a new low as 20 cents over KC Sept. for September bookings.

Also at the Gulf soft red, wheat is quoted at 5 cents over July for delivery by June 20 and 2 cents over July for June-July shipment.

In the soybean complex, traders observed that everything seemed bearish except the market Friday.

After brief easiness in the morning spreading took hold mainly between commercials going in different directions between July-Sept., July-Nov., and various other spreads. There were soybeans moving in the country but not in volume.

There was a 6-cent increase in the July month, 4-cent gain in August, and mainly from 2-3¢ in the remainder of the list. The July-Nov. spread, which has been a very important commercial spread, was at its widest point in the recent move at 23 cents at one point.

Cash oil is still quoted at 1 1/2 cent premium — the July-Sept. cash meal ratio is up, soybeans were at 15 over July at Chicago for a 5 cent basis increase.

Sugar futures ended sharply lower Friday as relentless selling pressure again forced prices down.

Before the opening, traders suggested that opening gains could be the spark to generate another wave of selling and following initial advances of up to 10 points, the market was supplied several deliveries and the limit and at the close sagged lost 8 1/4 to 43 points. Trading was quite active as 6439 lots changed hands.

Massive amounts of surplus sugar continue to dominate the fundamental situation and this was highlighted by the cheap prices Egypt paid to acquire 33,000 tons of whites earlier in the week.

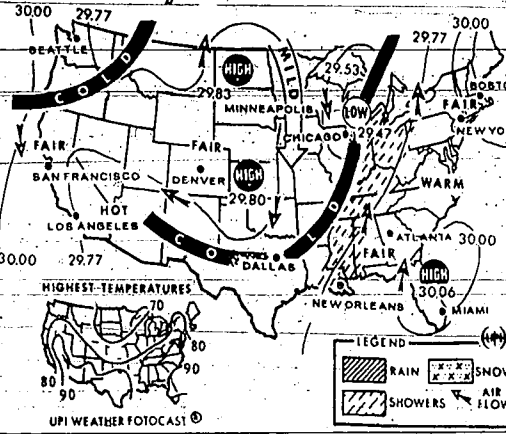

The world sugar spot was 13 1/2 cent points on June, while the domestic 10 and 12 spots were also 30 points lower at 15.25. On 23 scales sugar No. 10 was 65 points down while the No. 12 contract also finished 65 points lower.

Cooler with chance of showers

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and northside areas: Variable Clouds, windy and turning cooler with a chance of showers today. Cool with clouds and chance of showers decreasing Monday. Highs both days in the mid 70's. Lows tonight in the 40's. Precipitation probability at 20 per cent day and 30 per cent tonight.

Hailey, Camas Prairie and upper Wood River Valley: Variable clouds, windy and cooler with a chance of showers today. Cool with clouds and chance of showers decreasing Monday. Highs mid 60's to low 70's both days. Lows tonight in lower to mid 30's.

Synopsis: A frontal system which was moving into the extreme northwest late Saturday is expected to push southeastward across Idaho today. This front will begin a cooler regime over the northern Intermountain area for the next several days. Some scattered showers will accompany and follow the front. In addition strong gusty winds, especially during afternoon hours, are likely for the next few days at least. The cooler air behind this front will lower temperatures some 10 to 15 degrees by Monday from the warm levels registered at the end of this week.

The extended outlook for the Idaho area for the period Tuesday through Thursday calls for a slight chance of showers on Tuesday.

Earnings reported

DES MOINES, Iowa — Massey-Ferguson Ltd., farm machinery manufacturer and producer of diesel engines and construction equipment, has announced record sales and earnings for the first six months of its fiscal year of April 30.

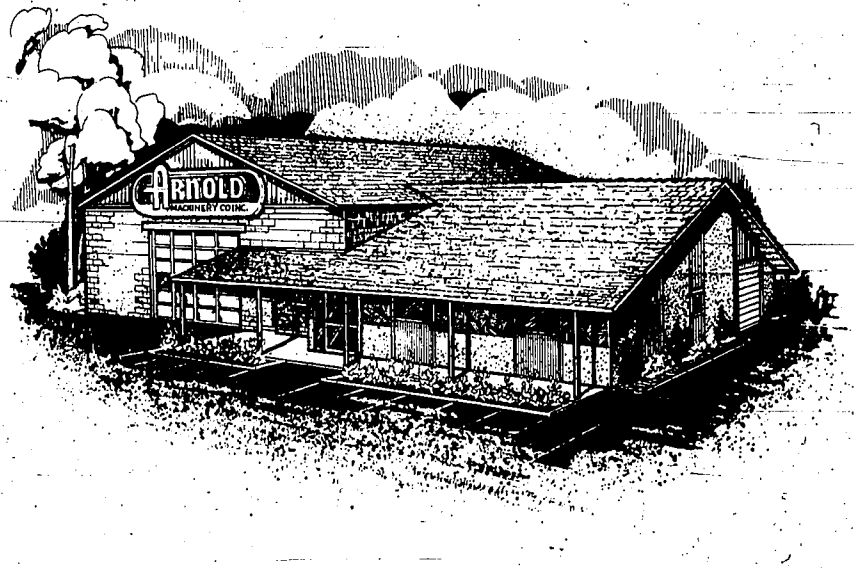

Company officials predict year-end sales worldwide will exceed $2 billion for the first time in company history.

Sales for the first half of the year amount to $1,041 million, an increase of 35 per cent over the same period last year. Net income for the multinational company was $1.82 per share, up 28 per cent from the same period in 1974.

Farm machinery sales, about 35 per cent of which are in North America, were up 36 per cent worldwide for a company record, amounting to $471 million. Sales in North America for the second quarter were 15 per cent above the same period last year, and for the first half were 10 per cent higher than in 1974.

Record world-wide sales gains were also posted in the company's other lines of business, with industrial and construction machinery up 31 per cent, Perkins diesel engines up 43 per cent, and sales of parts increasing 33 per cent.

World sales in all product lines were up 39 per cent during the company's second quarter, and net income during that period was $2.9 million or $1.33 per share, an increase of 37 per cent over the second quarter of 1974.

TF firm improves office

TWIN FALLS — The remodeling and expansion of Arnold Machinery Company Inc. facilities at 464 Washington St. is under way, according to Ed Wandling, Twin Falls branch manager.

He said the work is scheduled to be completed by the end of July. He said the design work was done by Irvn Stone, Twin Falls architect. Ullman Construction, Twin Falls, is contractor for the project.

Wandling said the expansion will almost double the existing facility and present offices and the parts department will be moved to the new addition. The shop area will be expanded in the older section of the building, he said.

Wandling said Arnold Machinery began its operation in the Magic Valley area in 1971 with a resident field service man and is now an eight-man operation.

The company is a representative for International Harvester Construction Equipment, Northwest Engineering Co., Gallon Manufacturing, Rexnord, Hyster Co., Wisconsin Motors, Partec Inc., Drott Manufacturing, Garbro Manufacturing, Echo Chainsaws and material handling equipment manufacturers.

RR merger considered

© 1975 Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The Rock Island Lines has informed the Interstate Commerce Commission that it may want to merge with the Missouri Pacific R.R., a Rock Island official said Thursday.

"This is to say to us we are definitely going to seek a merger," emphasized Martin Cassell, vice president for law, "but we do want to keep open all our options."

The Insolvent Rock Island also has asked the court to defer the pending merger of the Missouri Pacific with the Chicago & Eastern Illinois R.R. and the Texas and Pacific R.R., Cassell said.

Such a merger would make the Missouri Pacific a "Chicago railroad," give it a competitive edge with shippers and "badly hurt" the Rock Island, he said.

The Rock Island, which filed for reorganization in March in federal court under the Bankruptcy Act, wants the pending merger put off until it can determine how much freight traffic would be lost to the merged, Missouri Pacific system.

Can drive planned at Y

TWIN FALLS — The YM-YWCA has begun an aluminum can drive to raise more money for its recently opened swimming pool.

TF Grange observes 50th year

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Grange is 50 years old. To commemorate the anniversary, the organization is holding an open house for all members, former members and friends today from 2:10 to 5 p.m. at the Grange Hall south of Twin Falls.

In preparing for the observance, members have reviewed Grange records and find the organization has made a considerable change in the area by donating thousands of hours of volunteer service and thousands of dollars to many community projects and causes.

Mrs. Clark Kleinkopf, who has spent the past several months reading old minutes and reports, says the Twin Falls Grange started many important improvements in the community ranging from landscaping at public buildings to reconstruction of a main road.

Special displays of photos of many of the projects have been prepared for the open house and a history written by Mrs. Kleinkopf. Other displays will include many state and county awards the Grange has won.

Volunteers have been working the past several weeks to repaint the Grange Hall and clean and beautify the building.

The Twin Falls Grange held its first meeting June 12, 1925, when the state Grangemaster W. W. Deal, Boise, met with a dozen area farmers, all of whom became charter members. On June 28, 1925, the charter was presented to the group by the state grangemaster.

For the first 20 years, the Grange met in churches, homes, the Moose Hall, 1007 N. Main, and other available places, including a building donated for the meetings by Mrs. May Janks Mitchell.

In 1920 the old Park Lane schoolhouse, a two-room county school southwest of Twin Falls, was vacated by the consolidation of smaller districts and the Grange purchased the building for $2,000.

A site just south of East Five Points was purchased from I. T. Creed for another $2,000, and work began to prepare the first permanent home for the Grange. The building has been enlarged and improved and is used by the Grange and other community organizations.

A mortgage was obtained in 1921 for remodeling and in 1928 the mortgage was burned in a special ceremony.

Maude Kleinkopf said the reading of 50 years of minutes was "delicious" but most educational. She was assisted by Flossie Creed and Bertha Blik.

She said some of the major projects included establishing the community canteen kitchen in the 1920s, assisting the Idaho Youth Ranch near Rupert by $3,500, helping Harbor House of Magic Valley with landscaping and building programs, developing the Porcupine Picnic and Campgrounds in the South Hills and erecting large concrete signs in the shape of the state of Idaho to direct tourists and area residents to Shoshone Falls, Twin Falls and other scenic areas.

The Grange also established a rural signing system showing farms of various farmers from each major intersection. Landscaping at the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital, including transplanting of a number of large trees, a continuing annual program to test pressure cookers for safety, sponsoring foreign exchange programs and continuous work with the county fair were other Grange programs.

During the fund drives aimed at research to eliminate polio and to provide care for polio victims, the Grange raised thousands of dollars for the March of Dimes. "Polio Pete," a large red rooster, was used by I. T. (Pete) Creed to help. He was auctioned many times and donated back to the campaign.

The women who combed through the minutes of 50 years said they also found many humorous incidents. They said early Grangers may have had more fun than the present day members. Mrs. Kleinkopf said it appeared secretaries had good senses of humor and apparently attempted to keep the minutes entertaining.

For example, on a cold day in August, 1927, members met for an ice cream social. The 50 persons present consumed 10 gallons of ice cream in spite of the frigid temperatures. On a hot day, Mrs. Kleinkopf said, they might have needed 20 gallons.

Later in the same year, the secretary resigned because of ill health but as no other nominees were willing to serve, she continued to serve. Minutes indicated she had moved to another state where she died.

In 1933 the secretary recorded another social event, ending the report by saying refreshments were served by a horde of smiling and apparently happy cooks.

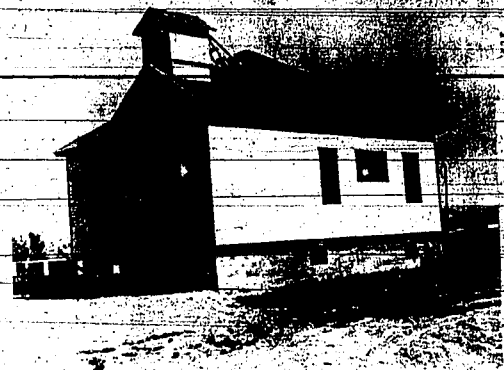

At about the same time, a report on care of patients at the indigent ward in the county hospital revealed it cost 21.5 cents per day per patient for such care.

A Grange member, who also served as indigent ward matron, reported she had canned 600 quarts of fruit and jelly to help cut expenses in feeding indigent patients.

A man identified as "Mr. Mack" invited the Grange to meet at his home in 1926 "providing we are not invited somewhere else," the minutes stated.

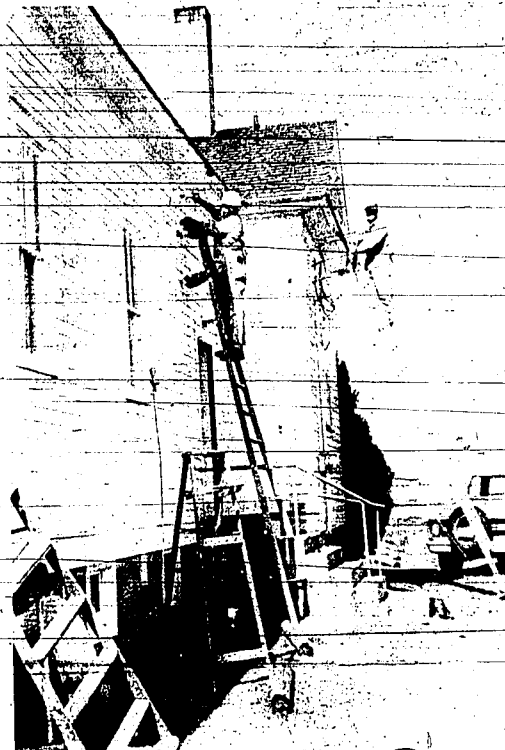

In another notation in 1922, the secretary had reported the Grange was asked to "give Mr. Waltham a hand even if we don't agree with him."

A sign of the Times was shown in the 1932 minutes when the secretary was asked to write to the state secretary to advise the $18.30 state assessment for the chapter would be forthcoming. "If Twin Falls Bank responds as all of the Grange's money is in the bank, and it is closed"

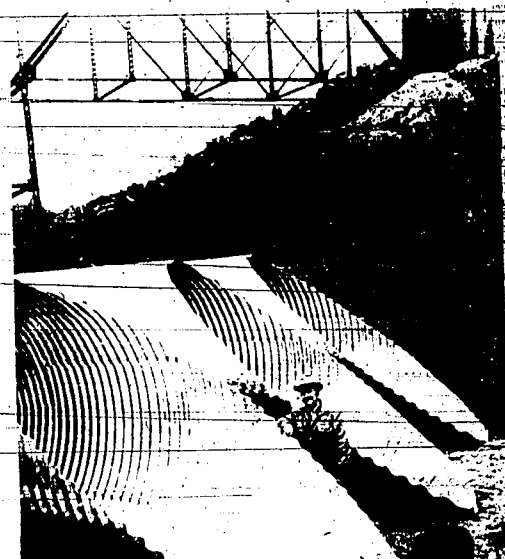

Original structure

OLD Park Lane schoolhouse is shown as it looked when it reached the site of the Twin Falls Grange Hall just south of Twin Falls. Since this photo was taken in 1950 when the building was purchased for $2,000, some changes have been made. It still serves as the Grange Hall, although expanded and remodeled.

Spruce up building

VOLUNTEER members of the Twin Falls Grange spent the past two weeks sprucing up the Grange Hall for the open house today. A new coat of paint was given the outside of the building. Area residents are invited to the Grange Hall this afternoon in honor of the 50th anniversary of the organization.

Grange project

MAJOR projects undertaken by the Twin Falls Grange in the past 50 years have benefited area residents. One of the biggest was to fill and replace a narrow bridge at what is known as Creed's Crossing south of Twin Falls. Here I. T. Creed, originator of the project, stands beside giant culverts which replaced the bridge.

Idaho 'sailors' schedule weekend regattas

By CRICKETT BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — To a sailor weaned on the salt breezes of the Atlantic or Pacific coasts, the idea of sailing in Idaho may seem absurd.

But in reservoirs and small lakes across southern Idaho, sailing is becoming an increasingly popular form of recreation.

Boats ranging from one-man dinghies to full-blown cruisers jostle each other for anchorage space at weekend regattas as skippers and crew check out the competition.

Regattas in southern Idaho are organized by the Southern Idaho Sailing Association, formed nearly five years ago with only a few boats.

Now, the summer regattas can and do attract up to 95 boats at a time.

Put together by local sailors like Joe Deming, Sun Valley, Robert Hoffmaster, Twin Falls; Ray Keunaman, Caldwell; and others, the association will sponsor seven more regattas this summer.

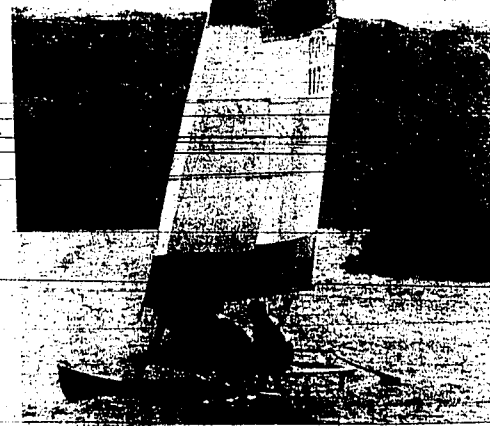

The races will be held at Cascade Lake, Payette Lake, Redfish Lake and C.J. Strike Reservoir, with sailors from Idaho Falls, Burley, Rupert 17, Redfish Lake, Sept. 6-7, Sept. 28 and Oct. 11-12, all C.J. Strike Reservoir.

Summing up the growing popularity of sailing here was one man who retired to the Boise area from Malibu.

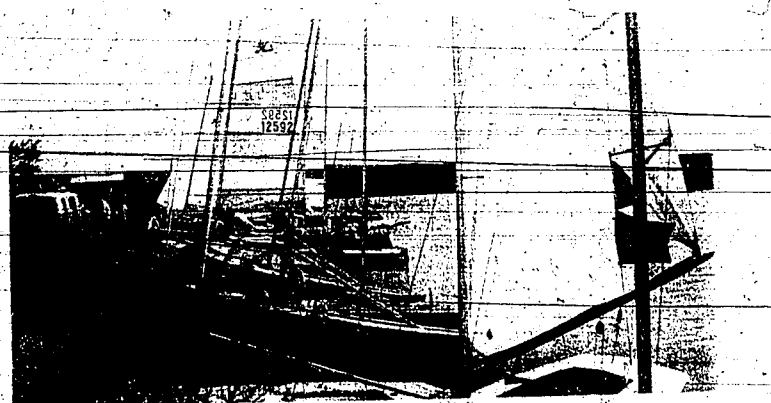

A long-time salt water sailor, he said, "I retired to Idaho to ski." Finding that there were places for boats and people to sail with was a special bonus for him.

Perhaps with the growing popularity of sailing, more landlocked Idahoans will be lured onto their local waters for a try at the wind.

Weekend regatta

CATAMARAN takes off at C.J. Strike Reservoir near Brunson. About 60 boats participated last Sunday in a weekend regatta sponsored by the Southern Idaho Sailing Association, although high winds forced cancellation of races Sunday.

Sailing popularity

CLUTTER of masts attest to the growing popularity of sailing in Southern Idaho. Started several years ago with few members, the Southern Idaho Sailing Association now boasts more than 80 boats, ranging from small racing crafts to heavy cruising boats.

would have come off here, if West had not been ready with a fine deceptive play. When South led the first spade, West hopped up with his queen. South looked hard at West. He looked hopefully at the ceiling and the floor. He looked some more and finally let the queen hold. Later on he led to the jack and finessed on the theory that West had played the queen from king-queen. Should South have fallen for that fine play? Not in reality, top circles against some top defenders, but all in all we sympathize with South and feel that any one who might have fallen as South did.

This time the mirror distribution led South with a rather poor play for 12. Specifically, he needed two spade tricks. The book play in this situation is to lead to the nine. If that finesse loses to the 10 you concede defeat. If it leads toward the jack, finesse and rump home if West holds the missing high honor. St. Benedict's Hospital Auxiliary has invited all hospitals in Idaho to encourage their junior volunteers to participate in the state conference.

Mrs. Pomm-Main, chairman, said a full program is scheduled, including speakers, a fashion show and a rap session where junior volunteers will discuss various hospital programs and exchange ideas for ways to better assist their hospitals.

Casting completed for tour

TWIN FALLS — Casting has been completed for the Antique Festival Theatre's summer tour of "Pickles 'N Pipes," according to Gerald M. McDonough, assistant producer.

The touring theater will perform in Twin Falls Aug. 13, under sponsorship of the Twin Falls County Mental Health Association.

The production has been especially staged for the Antique Festival Theatre's dialogue by George Bernard Shaw and music by William S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan.

William Grange, an actor who has worked with Shakespeare festivals in the South, summer stock theaters in New England and touring companies throughout the U.S. is summer guest director.

He said the production is in effect a world premiere, combining "Little Women" Shaw selections with such well-known Gilbert and Sullivan musical favorites as "The Willow" and "He Is an Englishman."

Grange is using his experience with light opera in Manhattan, New York City, as a guide to staging this production, especially in the musical numbers.

"The some combine such a rich mixture of both the sublime and ridiculous that I'm sure audiences will go cray, for just as they have for all of Gilbert and Sullivan's works for the last 100 years," Grange said.

Born and raised in Ohio, he attended universities in the Midwest, Europe and the East. He is a graduate of Columbia University, New York City.

The cast includes Mike Wital, Kathy Brackett, Cyr. Byrne, Rory Scanlon, John Edgerton, Peter Andrews, Jen Wolfe, Curt Olson, Barbara Bierman and David Farnsworth.

"The some combine such a rich mixture of both the sublime and ridiculous that I'm sure audiences will go

DEAR READERS:—Some months ago, I published a letter signed "NOT GUILTY." It was written by a father who was driving home from a father-son fishing trip in a blinding rainstorm when the car skidded into a ditch. The boy was killed and the father walked away with only a small cut on his nose.

The father wrote, "I wasn't going fast, and I wasn't careless. It was just a freak accident. He was only 16 and our only child. My wife blames me for our son's death. We once had a good marriage, but now we are practically strangers. Can you help me?"

I tried the man to get his wife into therapy, and although I never heard from him again, his letter prompted this one from another father, which I think is appropriate for publication on Father's Day:

DEAR ABBY: I read that touching letter from a father, "NOT GUILTY," who had lost his only son in a car accident while the two of them were returning from a fishing trip. His wife made it clear that she blamed him for the boy's death. Consequently, each is bearing the loss alone.

Reader responds

Five years ago, our 23-year-old son, less than a year out of Harvard, came home to die of cancer. He lived exactly one month from the day he came home. During that last month of his life, I spent practically all my time with him. We parted confident of each other's love.

Abby, when he was growing up, I didn't spend much time with him. (I was too busy.) How I wish I had taken him on a fishing trip now and then, as this Dad had done. It seems to me that this Dad must have been a good father before the Almighty intervened for reasons of His own. There are worse ways for a father and son to part: in fact it is difficult to think of a better way than in an atmosphere of love and sharing.

A generation or two ago, when child mortality was higher, married couples seemed much more aware of a fundamental fact: Although we love our children dearly, we lose some through death, some leave us, some displease us and occasionally one will crown our old age.

But in the end, all parents have to "catch" their children are just "leavers." We start out a couple, and we'll most likely end as a couple, finding comfort and fulfillment together in a union ordained by God.

My wife and I felt that ours was a good marriage, but the loss of our son drew us even closer together. I hope "NOT GUILTY'S" wife will realize that the intimacy of shared tears can add a precious new dimension to their marriage.

your health

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M. D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I have a question that may seem frivolous but is serious to me. I had naturally curly hair all my life. Several months after my first child was born, my hair became limp and straight. As the years went by, some of the curl came back, but then I had my second child. A few weeks after she was born my hair went limp and straight again. The same thing happened after my third child was born.

Now, all of a sudden my hair is just as curly as it was for the first 22 years of my life. I have asked doctors and hairdressers, and no one seems to know the reason for this. Does pregnancy cause curly hair to go straight? Why the delayed reaction? Do you have answers to this "hairy" question? — Mrs. C.D.

Frivolous it may be, but it is a question that bothers many: If my mail is any indicator.

To begin with, it is not at all uncommon for strange things to happen to hair during and after pregnancy.

Curly hair comes, goes

We know that hair grows in cycles, and its health and abundance is dictated by the nurturing of the follicles which produce each strand. The cycles consist of a growing phase and a resting phase. A study several years ago showed that this growing phase was increased during pregnancy but fell off slightly after delivery. This could explain some of the changes noticed in hair during and after childbearing.

With the resting phase increased after pregnancy, there is longer than usual delay in hair growth, long enough to give some new mothers considerable concern. Also, anesthesia can be a factor in some changes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
My infant daughter has inverted nipples. Can this be corrected? Also, is sterilization of bottles necessary for the first six months? — Mrs. B.M.

The infant breast can have many variants at first. As it grows older and the breast fills out, they will correct themselves. However, in adults, any dramatic change in breasts was in nipples should be investigated.

Sterilization is important for the first four to six months. If you have an automatic dishwasher, this can serve as an efficient bottle sterilizer. Don't neglect the nipples.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
You wrote about a lady who was bothered with a rash. You reported that she became aware of an allergy to sheets made from synthetic fibers, and that her problem disappeared as soon as she changed to cotton.

Well I had a similar problem with my breasts. I took the cue it worked. It is certainly worth a try. — Y.G.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I have been taking iron and vitamin B tablets (one each day). My stool has been black. Can this be the reason? — Mrs. D.C.H.

The iron content of the tablets can cause dark stool, yes, but it can also be a symptom of internal bleeding. It would be worth your while to find out for sure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I have what are called "pulp stones" in my teeth. I cannot find out anything about these. What are they? — Mrs. D.S.
They are also called "denticles" (little teeth) and they can be caused, I am told, by a build-up of calcium within the pulp portion of the tooth.
The outer portions are made of the familiar hard enamel, and under this lies a softer, bone-like substance called dentin. This surrounds the pulp chamber, which consists of softer tissue blood vessels and nerve fibers that nourish the rest of the tooth.
The calcium buildup is thought to be a reaction to the decay process, and it can be the cause of certain kinds of toothaches, and sometimes eventual loss of nourishment for the tooth. I assume your dentist had advised you about this.

Plans unfold for Malad park

Visitor center

RICK Cummins, ranger at Malad Gorge State Park southeast of Bliss, points out planned visitor center to be built at the 260-foot gorge. View of the canyon, at right, will be seen from the center which hopefully may be under construction by next summer.

TUTTLE — One of the most enduring of the nation's bicentennial projects in Magic Valley is the development of Malad Gorge State Park.

The 622-acre park, now either in rangeland or former farming area, stretches on either side of the spectacular gorge for which it is named. Most of the land lies between Highway 25 and the Snake River, but several hundred acres extend on the other side of the highway.

Emphasis during the Phase I development, according to Rick Cummins, park ranger, is to reseed much of the acreage to native grass. Land was obtained from three individuals plus the Bureau of Land Management.

Cummins said studies have been made to determine what type of plant life flourished at the site before heavy grazing, especially by sheep, killed the native grass, and the cheat grass took over much of the terrain.

Only about 7 to 10 acres of the entire park will be landscaped and used in traditional park development, such as visitor center, picnic areas and restroom facilities.

All electric, water and sewage facilities are complete to the site for the visitor center which is planned to overlook the 260-foot-deep gorge. Part of the money for the park development is coming from bicentennial funds, Cummins said. The Malad Gorge State Park is one of three bicentennial projects by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

Construction of several of the planned overlooks is expected to be completed and in use during the summer of 1976, Cummins said, and park officials hope that funding will be approved so work on the visitor center can begin after July 1, 1976.

The park is classified as "natural," Cummins said, meaning the visitor programs and activities will be related to the "unique and significant natural systems located primarily within the park boundaries — reference to the two- and one-half-mile long river which is perhaps unofficially, but widely known as one of the shortest rivers for its volume in existence.

Tradition has it that the site obtained its name after some early-day trappers or explorers "incame" while camping there and referred to it as a "bad place" in French.

The short river is formed by the union of the Big and Little Wood Rivers which often go dry, above the 60-foot drop into the alcove known as the Devil's Washbowl immediately below the highway crossing of the gorge. After the drop into the "bowl" the river is spring fed for the remaining distance until it empties into the Snake River.

So far, a restroom is the only structure on the site, but land has been excavated to form a pond which will be used for nesting fowl and student study of water plant life. Water will come from the U.S. canal which empties into the gorge.

The major emphasis of the Malad park will be the geology of the gorge, and interpretative centers as well as wildlife observation blinds, self-guided and non-guided hiking trails will be included in the educational program. In addition to conventional recreation such as picnicking, photography and artist points, exhibits and displays. Special wayside exhibits adjacent to trails and historical areas depicting park themes also are planned.

Cummins said a footbridge is planned over the gorge, just downstream from the new highway bridges already built and awaiting completion of that section of Interstate 80 through Gooding County south of Bliss.

The footbridge will give the only access to the parking area where motorists now pull off from Highway 25. After completion of the interstate, access to the park will be at the old Tuttle store corner. But completion of the footbridge is not expected for several years because of limited funding, Cummins said.

Footbridge planned

DEVIL'S Washbowl at the foot of the 60-foot drop in the short Malad River is gradually being enlarged as the water wears away the canyon walls. A footbridge is planned for this site in future development of Malad Gorge State Park, southeast of Bliss. New Interstate 80 highway bridge is in background.

Pond site

EXCAVATED area will become a natural pond at Malad Gorge State Park with water to come from the North Side canal which empties waste irrigation water into the canyon nearby.

Natural trail

IDAHO PARK ranger Rick Cummins stands beside a natural trail which descends into the 260-foot Malad River Gorge. The trail, which has been used by generations of Magic Valley fishermen, will not be "emphasized," Cummins said, in the park's interpretative program.

South Hills fawn mortality studied

Fawn mortality study on the Cassia division of the south hills mule deer herd will be conducted this year by the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

It already is underway with the time and effort consuming chore of locating, catching and affixing radio transmitters to the fawns.

The department is trying to determine what the biggest threat to the herd is.

Bob Autenreith, one of the participating biologists, sees some troubles in the area which is known for its healthy, productive herd. There doesn't seem to be much threat.

"Nevada and Oregon conducted similar projects," he reports. "Oregon found coyotes were its biggest problem while Nevada found most of its die-off was caused by malnutrition."

He said he didn't know whether the nutrition problem was found in forage for the fawns or poor range conditions that prevented the does from providing sufficient milk.

"We've had green-up here in the south hills since February and the does are in excellent condition. The late spring snows weren't enough to effect them," Autenreith added.

So it figures that unless some disease picks off a few or a ment should still be hearing from most of its transmitters when hunters take the field in October.

So far the department crew has seen only a couple of meandering coyotes. The method of catching the fawns is a dull beginning of an arduous middle and a satisfying end.

It starts as daybreak with the wind whipping across the rocky promontory selected for the day's viewing. The crew of eight fans out over a long ridge. In this case directly south at Kimberly in the Indian Springs area. With binoculars and spotting scopes, they seek the lone does.

There are a couple of unusual things. First, the crew has spotted does with fawns only on the west-facing slopes. This would defy the logic of an eastern slope of the earllest available light and warmth.

The doe spends very little time with the fawns. The one spotted with twins Wednesday morning actually was bedded down about 600 yards from her youngsters.

She was first spotted about 6:30 a.m. and was very casually meandering the side of the mountain. However, she was so casual that Autenreith curiously surmised she was being overly cautious on the off chance that some predator was watching.

He predicted it would be about 8 a.m. before she got the fawns up from their hiding places for breakfast. He missed it about seven minutes. The doe nursed the two for only a short while, then secreted them in some mountain mahogany and left again.

That galvanized the crew into action. One who'd seen where both fawns had been bedded down for the day was left with the spotting scope and a walkie-talkie. The rest started down the mountain, up the small creek bottom and then up the facing slope.

The first was found almost immediately. The second, secreted on a lava ledge, took a little more searching.

Both fawns, females, were measured for conformation, weighed, ear tagged and outfitted with their transmitters. Then both were carefully put back in the same spot they were found.

The twins were Nos. 9 and 10, with the crew needing just four more to fill the number of transmitters available. Two other sets of twins had been spotted farther up the canyon that morning but had been moved out of view by the does before being put down.

The transmitters are movement sensitive, the tone changing on the receiver at the slightest nod of the head. The ones being used on the fawns weigh about 12 ounces, compared to two and one-half pounds normally used on a full-grown animal.

It is attached around the fawn's neck with an elastic band which has two one-eighth tucks in it. Those should break easily as the animal grows and cause no stress.

The weight of the transmitter is a tipoff that it has a small battery, indicating short range and operating life. Autenreith says the signal can be picked up at about a mile to a mile and one-half. That should be sufficient since animals on the southern fringe of the area aren't considered migratory and there is sufficient road network to allow close but low cost surveillance. However, an airplane or helicopter would be employed if the deer did move out of the area and contact became lost.

The listeners have to be a little wary early in the game since the fawns are flattened out and hiding about 23 out of 24 hours each day. It is anticipated that from about 10 days to 14 days of life, the fawns become mobile enough that they will stay with their mothers most of the time.

So the listener must decide whether the fawn is sleeping or has, for some reason, died. The department doesn't want to break up the doe-fawn association more than the one time necessary for wiring the fawn.

Timing is important in the project since the fawns become very mobile in a short while and grow rapidly. They are born at about seven pounds but up to nine and 10 pounds. Twins generally are a bit smaller.

It is believed does stay a considerable distance away from the fawns to prevent a scent build up. The young have very little scent, although it has been proved through use of bird dogs that they do give off enough that a highly developed nose can find them.

Since they are a little shaky, the fawns' survival is pegged solely to hiding. At this time they are easily captured after being spotted. But within a very few days, the instinct to flatten out gives way to the urge to run and once that happens, man really isn't in the ball game.

Not unexpectedly, the fawn crop is dropped first at the lower elevations and then progresses to the top of the drainages. There seems to be no real pattern in preference. Some does select aspen groves, others relatively open areas. Density, similarly, has no pattern. Some hillsides may be barren of families while the next may have two, three, four or more.

But of the 10 wired by the department, none were close to conifer cover. Of course, spotting animals in a forest condition may be impossible, too.

Graham takes early lead in rain-delayed classic

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Lou Graham, a veteran pro who has won a tournament in three years, shot a six-under-par 62 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead in the Philadelphia Irv Golf Classic, which finally got underway after two days of postponements.

The 27-year-old Graham, who said he had been "playing miserably" lately, took advantage of an early start at the Whitmarsh Valley Country Club to carve out seven birdies in a round which included only one bogey.

Graham had the two-stroke margin over Jerry Heard, another early starter in the field of some 150 pros, and George Johnson, a little-known pro from Georgia. The tournament had been postponed Thursday because of heavy rain and Friday due to flooding.

Heard shot a two-par-71, 68, 69 yard course.

At 68 was Allen Tappe, a tour freshman, while those at 69 included J.C. Snead, John Schlee, Jim Simons, Tom Jenkins, Jerry McVee.

Those lunched at 70 included defending champion Hubert Green, while Johnny Miller was at even-par 71 and Gary Player was the steps of the pace with a 74.

"I started out well this year," said Graham, who finished third in last year's U.S. Open. "But the last six weeks I've played miserably."

"I kept feeling I would come out of it, but last week in the Kemper Open (made) was the first decent round I've had for a long while."

Graham, from Tennessee, was making excellent approach shots to the greens to put himself in birdie position. His toughest birdie was when he two-putted from 25 feet on the par-five 5th hole, the same hole that Hoard coaled after getting one-two with a four-wood drive and a wedge.

But Graham, who has only a few holes to play left in this year, said it was his par putting that saved him.

"I made some good par putts and it really keeps you going," he said. "It was a nice tie."

Heard said, "I'm playing good now because I'm broke," although the 28-year-old has made $50,000 on this tour this year, $5,000 more than Graham.

Johnson, who has earned only $4,900 so far this year, said he could have had at least four more birdies if he had not left his putts just short of the hole. He also added that players in the field "may have been rusty because of the layoff due to the inclement weather."

Because of the postponements, the second round will be played Sunday with 30 holes on Monday.

The PGA said that if bad weather is threatened for Monday, the field will be cut to the low 50's and ties instead of the usual 75.

Nuggets will take Webster in ABA draft

DENVER (UPI) — With the Denver Basketball Association draft on Monday, the Denver Nuggets appear headed toward opening negotiations with Marvin Webster of Morgan State, but General Manager Carl Scheer said Denver may also attempt to get North Carolina State's David Thompson.

The Nuggets, who had pro basketball's best regular season record at 65-19 the past season, were awarded the first pick in the ABA draft as compensation for allowing Marvin Barnes to sign with the Spirits of St. Louis last year.

Atlanta's Tom Thompson is the first pick of the NBA draft and then came back, drafting third in the first round as well, to select Webster. Scheer had said he would sign with Denver.

"I promise you the player we draft number one is a player we will sign," said Scheer, who just this week joined with several other Denver businessmen to announce their intentions to buy the Nuggets from San Diego businessman Frank Goldberg. Goldberg has bought the San Diego franchise of the ABA.

"We don't want to lose the significance of having a first pick sign with us," said Scheer, who came to Denver just a year ago. "We want to make our first round picks count."

He said negotiations with Thompson and Webster had both been moving along smoothly, but it appeared Webster was more sympathetic with the Nuggets' desires to have a commitment prior to the draft.

"He seems more sympathetic to the timetable we are facing," said Scheer. "He seems more willing to give us a firm commitment."

Scheer said the possibility that Denver might trade an established player for high draft rights to select both Webster and Thompson precluded any other trades until after the draft.

American woman has British golf title

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (UPI) — It was going to be a sentimental journey to St. Andrews for former U.S. Curtis Cup golfer Nancy Szymas.

But the wedding anniversary trip exceeded all expectations Saturday when Mrs. Szymas defeated Scottish teenager Suzanne Cadden 5-and-2 to win the 72nd British Women's Amateur Championship.

The 36-year-old American last visited St. Andrews' famous Old Course 10 years ago during her honeymoon, when she reached the closing stages of the 1965 tournament with her husband acting as caddy.

Mrs. Szymas said after her win she had come from Colorado "just only to qualify. I am really delighted to have won," she said. "I will be back again next year to defend the title."

In the history west wind, the American, for the second time in the day, found herself having to come from behind to

In the morning semifinals Mrs. Szymas was three down after five holes against Canadian Dale Shaw but recovered to win by one hole against Miss Cadden she was twice behind in the early stages.

She three-putted the first, squared with a birdie at the second but went one down again at the 3rd yard mark where the 17-year-old Scot ran in a 21 footer for a birdie four.

Then two bad drives by Miss Cadden allowed the experienced American to take control. She won both the sixth and seventh in par figures and increased her lead to tap with a brilliant birdie three at the ninth, recovering from a bunker and holding from four feet.

Match race settled

NEW YORK (UPI) — Horse racing's battle of the sexes is on.

Underwritten by Ruffin and Knudsen, leading colt Foolish Pleasure are scheduled to meet Miss Belmont Park in a 1 1/2 mile match race for a purse of $250,000.

The New York Racing Association will put up the entire purse for the 1-year-old "dream race"; the winner to earn $225,000 and the loser $25,000.

A NYRA spokesman immediately predicted that Belmont would break its attendance record of 82,031, set in 1951 when Commemo II was gunning for the Triple Crown.

The NYRA brought off a coup in beating out New Jersey's Monmouth Park for the honor of pitting the top male against the top female underwriting by $120,000 and still remaining away with the prize.

"We were prepared to offer a half million dollars for the match race of the year," said Monmouth President Phil Iselin. "But you win some, you lose some. I congratulate the New York Racing Association and feel this competition will be beneficial to all."

Foolish Pleasure will carry 125 pounds while Belmont will carry 120. The race originally was planned to include Prekness, winner Master Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Avatar but Avatar's owner decided his colt would not be ready to come back for a big race so soon. Lefty Jolley, trainer of Foolish Pleasure, explained the absence of Master Derby.

Pan-Am basketball squad selected

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee Saturday named the 18-man squad which will report to the Pan American Games training camp in Alamosa, Colo., Sept. 11.

Twelve of the players named Saturday will represent the United States in the Pan-Am Games at Mexico City in October. The 18 players were chosen from a list of 64 after a week-long tryout camp at the University of Utah according to committee chairman Stan Watts.

The roster in alphabetical order: Otis Birdsong, Houston; Phil Bond, Louisville; Norm Cook, Kansas; John Davis, Dayton; Leon Douglas, Alabama; Alex English, South Carolina; Ernie Grunfeld, Tennessee; Joe Hassell, Providence; Armond Hill, Princeton; Mitch Kupchak, North Carolina; Tom LaGarde, North Carolina; Mike Mitchell, Auburn; Mark Olberding, Minnesota; Bruce Parkinson, Purdue; Robert Parrish, Centenary; Rick Robey, Kentucky; Wayne Rollins, Clemson and Rudy White, Arizona State.

Mary Harshman, head coach at the University of Washington, will head the Pan-Am team and was on hand at the tryouts along with Jerry Pimm, Utah; Dean Smith, N.C., and Dave Gavett of Providence.

Watts, who is athletic director at Brigham Young University, said, "This was one of the most successful Pan Am tryout camps in years."

Washam grabs lead in LPGA tournament

MEDINA, Ohio (UPI) — Jo Ann Washam, a third-year pro from Fort Worth, Tex., birdied two of the last three holes Saturday for a two-under-par 70 and the second round lead in the $50,000-Lawson's LPGA Open.

Miss Washam, a 5-3, 115-pounder, had a 36-hole total of 142, two under par.

Toli Carol Mann shot an even-par 72 over the 6,142-yard Weymouth Golf Club course and was in second place with a 36-hole total of 143.

Kathy Postelwait, with a 70, and Laura Baugh, with a 71, were at even-par 144 and tied for third place.

Judy Rankin, the first round leader, had a 75 and was tied with Amy Alcott, who had a 73, at 145.

Miss Washam, who won $14,192 last year, said, "It feels great" to lead a tournament for the first time "but I just don't want to get over-confident about it."

"I just want to hit the ball well, as good as I can, when I go out there tomorrow (Sunday)," she said.

She birdied the 16th and 18th holes to move into the lead.

Miss Mann, the tallest player on the tour at 6-2, birdied the 7th and 18th holes to notch her 72.

"She had a shaky start, and took a bogey five on the fourth hole after surviving a snake scare."

"...that my ball into someone's rough and when I went over there, someone yelled, 'there's a snake in there' and I went screaming to the side."

Instead of attempting to play the ball, she dropped another one and took a one-putt penalty.

Bartkowski signs with NFL Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Falcons began a climb toward National Football League respectability Saturday by making quarterback Steve Bartkowski a deal he couldn't refuse.

The Falcons signed the former University of California All-American to a "multi-year" contract for an estimated $625,000—believed to be the most money paid to an NFL rookie.

But Falcons General Manager Pat Pepler wanted it understood that Bartkowski wasn't going to get everything he signed for if he failed to live up to expectations—that the contract contained a performance clause.

Neither Bartkowski nor Pepler would reveal the details of the contract they hammered out in the early morning hours Saturday. But both seemed pleased with the result.

French hurdler, Kenyan miler win meet of champion features

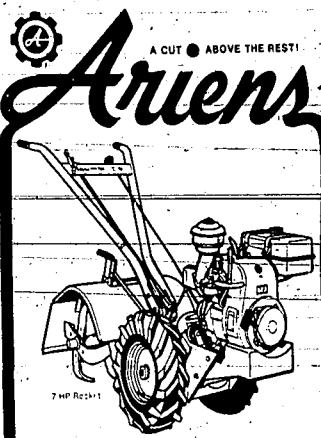

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Guy Drot of France finally gained his revenge on American Charles Foster in the 120-yard high hurdles Saturday and Wilson Waigwa of Kenya won the mile with Marty Liquori fourth in featured events at the Meet of Champions.

Drot said he was happy to beat Foster but he was not entirely satisfied with his performance.

"It was a good race," Drot said. "But technically it wasn't all that good. Next week I'll be running against Foster again in the American championships and, if the wind is right, I think I can run a world record."

The meet, which replaced the Kennedy Games, was a major tuneup for next week's AAU championships at Eugene, Ore. and, as a result, most winning times and distances were only one to two seconds slower than those in the other stadium record-setting events.

Rangers trade for Perry

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — The poor pitching Texas Rangers gave up three arms and some money Friday for Gaylord Perry, the former Cy Young award winner and four-time 20-game winner they hope will give them the strength to win their first American League pennant.

In return for the aging Perry, the Rangers sent the youth highland pitcher, promising righthander Jim Bibby, highland pitcher, triple Brown and triple-left handed Rick Wingo. The money, apparently in the neighborhood of $100,000, came from the cash they received earlier in the day from the sale of infielder Eddie Brinkman to the Yankees.

Yarborough tops qualifiers

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (UPI) — Gale Yarborough caught his Chevrolet around Michigan International Speedway's two-mile oval at an average speed of 158.51 miles per hour Saturday; the fastest qualifying speed for Sunday's Motor State 400-mile NASCAR race.

Thorpe, 12 other trackmen enshrined

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — The late Jim Thorpe, generally acclaimed as the greatest athlete in the world, was inducted into the National Track and Field Hall of Fame Saturday with 12 other stars from the past.

Thorpe's son, Richard, received a plaque for his father in an outdoor ceremony at the West Virginia Capitol and said, "I accept it on behalf of all the young Indians in America today."

Along with Thorpe, the Oklahoma Indian, who achieved the uncopied feat of winning both the pentathlon and decathlon in the 1912 Olympics at Stockholm, Hall of Fame honorees were:

- Bill Toomey, winner of the decathlon in 1908.
- Bob Richards, twice Olympic pole vault champion.
- Stella Walsh, a native of Poland, who won the 100-meter dash in the pre-war 1936 Olympics.
- John B. Flanagan, an Irish hammer-thrower who won three gold medals in the early 1900s.
- Ralph Metcalf, a top sprinter who ran in the shadow of Jesse Owens and Eddie Tolson but won a gold medal on a relay team in 1936.
- Horace Ashenfelter III, who in 1952 at Helsinki became the only American to win the steeplechase in the Olympics.
- Alice Coachman Davis, high-jump medal winner of the late 1940s.
- Edward P. Hurt, honored for his coaching at Morgan State.
- Edward "Ted" Hayden, creator of the Chicago Track Club.
- Helen Stephens, who in 1918 set a world record in the 100-meter run.
- Millard "Bill" Easton, enshrined as a coach for his winning teams at Drake and Kansas universities.
- Ten of the inductees attended the ceremonies. Thorpe and Flanagan are dead. Ashenfelter was unable to be here because of another commitment.

The Hall of Fame now has 39 members. Thorpe's daughter, Grace, an aide in the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington, D. C., also attended the ceremonies and appealed for restoration of the gold medals Olympic officials took from Thorpe in a dispute over his amateur status.

Noting that Thorpe also was a great baseball and football player, his daughter said, "His favorite sport was track because he told me he could do it alone. He was humiliated."

Winds sign two NFL vets

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Winds of the World Football League Saturday announced the signing of National Football League veteran receivers Marjane Adkins and Jerry Broadnax.

The 28-year-old Adkins, 5-foot-10 and 183 pounds, came to the NFL from Canadian football in 1970, becoming the second round draft choice of the Dallas Cowboys. He also played with New Orleans and the New York Jets but missed the 1974 season with injury.

Broadnax, a 6-foot-4, 232-pound tight end from Southern University, started six games for the Houston Oilers last year before an injury sidelined him for the season. Considered a good blocker, Broadnax played for the New England Patriots in 1974.

Twins, Brewers make swap

BEOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — The Minnesota Twins Saturday traded outfielder Bobby Darwin to the Milwaukee Brewers for outfielder first baseman John Briggs.

The trade was even up and both players were to report to their new clubs Sunday. Briggs, 31, was batting .306 with three home runs and four RBI in 27 games through Friday.

Ellenbogen goes with 'Skins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bill Ellenbogen, an offensive tackle who played last season for the Philadelphia Bell of the World Football League, has signed with the Washington Redskins, club officials announced Saturday.

Dineen had a .227 batting average in 52 games for Syracuse.

Penguins handed to receiver

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Jack Button has the job of trying to find a way to bail out the penniless Pittsburgh Penguins.

The National Hockey League club owes creditors about $5 million, and Button, the club's general manager, has until Sept. 30 to draw up a reorganization plan to pay them.

That deadline was given him Friday by U.S. District Court Judge Hubert I. Teltelbaum, who appointed Button receiver.

Being put in receivership gives the club a chance to get its financial affairs in order. Teltelbaum gave the club the decision of the court until July 31, at which time Button must submit a list of the Penguins' assets and liabilities.

Thunder sees ticket record

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Season ticket sales for the Portland Thunder of the World Football League are approaching the 3,000 mark, General Manager Bob Broadhead said Saturday.

He said that of last year's 4,200 season tickets sold for Portland Storm games about 2,500 have been renewed. Adding new purchases, the total to date is nearing 3,000.

Broadhead said the team has all but decided to go through with his plan to realign the playing field, but planned to meet with stadium officials before a final decision is made.

Minico embroiled with track

RUPERT — Minico High School track coach, Gerald Harding, under fire for a losing season, will keep his job at least until Monday.

In executive session during a previous Minico County school board meeting, Supt. Darrell Hatfield was given the go ahead to seek Harding's resignation or dismissal him.

Thursday night Harding and about 25 supporters met with the board in an open session to protest his dismissal.

Following the open meeting the board took no action but Hatfield said today the board will resolve the issue one way or another at a regular school board meeting Monday.

Thursday night Harding told the board he had been a coach for nine years, and had previously heard no complaints about his abilities.

Harding blamed a losing junior high track program and problems recruiting seniors into the track program.

Harding said the track team could have won three more meets this year, but several track team members stayed at home to play in the school band. He said he didn't pressure the band members to go to track meets because few track athletes go on from Minico to participate in college.

But a number of students have received band scholarships, he said.

Harding said he has been accused of a lack of "enthusiasm" but he said when pressed those who want to fire him are unable to define "enthusiasm."

Harding said "I have a different style than most coaches. I don't promote the rah rah rah."

However, he said, of the 18 Minico school track records, 17 have been set by youngsters he coached.

Harding objected to the discussion of his imminent firing that took place in executive session without him. A board member said Harding had an opportunity to come before the board in private, but had elected to open the meeting to the public.

Board chairman Leonard Martin said Harding had never before come to the board to complain about a lack of training facilities. "Take other coaches Harding should have come in and got all over the board; if the board didn't provide the means for a successful program."

Texas drops S.C. in NCAA finals

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Mickey Reichenbach slammed a two-run homer Saturday night to power Texas to the NCAA World Series championship with a 5-1 victory over South Carolina and previously undefeated Gamecock hurler Earl Bass.

Reichenbach, who was voted the outstanding player in the 20th annual event, slammed his third-inning, 380-foot homer over the right centerfield wall. It was his fifth home run of the year and drove in Keith Moreland, who had reached first on a throwing error by third baseman Jim Parkovits.

Bass, a first-round draft choice by the St. Louis Cardinals, was obviously tired and—Bass walked—Mike Anderson on four straight balls. Blair Stouffer then struck out.

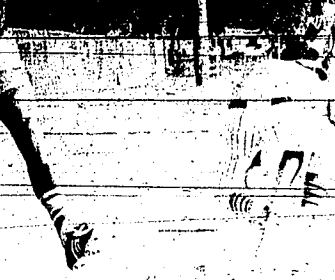

After Reichenbach's homer gave Texas a 3-0 lead, South Carolina first baseman Hank Snelchuk slammed a solo homer to the fourth, his fifth of the year and his first in the series.

Texas pushed its fourth run across the plate in the fourth inning when Moreland doubled in Anderson, who had singled to leftfield. The Longhorns scored their final run on Gary Puka's squeeze bunt from third base.

Handle With Care wins International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Canada's Handle With Care, the world's fastest pacing filly, won the 13th running of the $100,000 Yonkers International Pace Saturday night in 2:30 1/5.

The 4-year-old daughter of Meadow Skipper out of Lady Emily, came from off the pace to win by two lengths over United States Smashing Don. Canada's Otaro Hanover was third.

Handle With Care won easily with Bill Haughton in the sulky. It was the veteran driver's second International Pace victory.

Afterwards, he said, "I never laid a whip on her. I intended to follow Otaro Hanover, but when he didn't go to the top I switched plans."

1975 football season begins with all-star game Saturday

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The 1975 football season premieres Saturday night with the 15th annual Coaches All-America game, a classic that turns into a wide open contest each year with the best college players in the nation.

The combination of the best in the East and the West is expected to draw a near-capacity crowd of 45,000 into Texas Tech's Jones Stadium for the nationally televised (ABC) game scheduled at 9 p.m. EDT kickoff.

Baylor coach Grant Teaff, who took his Bears to a surprise Southwest Conference title for the first time in half a century, will coach the West and Texas Tech's Steve Sloan, who moved into the SWC this year after reviving the Vanderbilt football program, will coach the East.

Teaff will have his own quarterback, Neal Jeffrey, and Nebraska quarterback David Humm. Jeffrey is headed for San Diego and Humm for Oakland.

Sloan will counter with the quarterbacking of Tampa's Fred Solomon and Central Michigan's Mike Franckowiak. Solomon was drafted by Miami and Franckowiak by Denver.

The West backfield will also include fullbacks Don Hardeman of Texas A&M and Stan Winfrey of Arkansas State, and tailbacks Willard Harrell of the University of the Pacific, Phillip Kent of Baylor and Emmett Edwards of Kansas.

The East, trying to overcome an 8-6 series disadvantage, boasts a backfield that includes fullbacks Stan Fritts of North Carolina State and Harold Henson of Ohio

Backpackers will need permit to hike in national parks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Park Service said Saturday it will require backpackers to obtain permits in 34 of the system's parks to prevent environmental damage. The permits will be free.

About 2 million camper-days were counted in the parks last year.

"The program definitely has reduced the damage and pollution that overuse can cause," said National Park Service Director, Gary Everhardt. The permits were required in 23 parks last year.

In some parks, backpackers can get advance reservation but otherwise permits are issued on a first come, first served basis.

Permits are limited to campsites accessible only by trail. If a backpacker arrives after an area is filled up, usually he will have a chance of using another area in the same park.

Permits will be required at Acadia National Park, Apostle Islands National Lakeshore, Arches National Park, Big Bend National Park, Bryce Canyon National Park, Miss Evert, 20, from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., was able to beat Miss Navratilova and garner the $100,000 first prize only after settling down to her usual steady, accurate baseline game in one of the world's premier clay court tournaments. The Czech girl received $5,000.

The American girl dropped the first set to Miss Navratilova's strong serve-and-volley game in the heat at Paris's Roland Garros Stadium before a capacity crowd of 13,000.

But in the next two sets, Miss Evert, who has not lost a

What you may have suspected now has been confirmed: That people who wear eyeglasses generally are regarded as more intelligent than people who don't wear said specs. British scholars found that out in a little game with a sizable sampling of people whose IQs ranged from 100 to 150. Examined briefly by a panel of judges, the eyeglass wearers were scored much higher than the non-wearers. But when tested more thoroughly, they came out even.

IT'S A MATTER of record, too, that numerous U.S. citizens have languished in Mexico's jails for as long as three years before their cases came to trial after they were charged with bouncing bad checks.

IF THE KORAN is your holy book, you believe murder to be a lesser sin than suicide, I'm told.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS
Q. "Any truth to the old claim that mosquitoes won't bite you if you take 100 milligrams of vitamin B-1 an hour before you go outdoors?"
A. Nothing to it. Researchers at the University of California's School of Medicine in San Francisco sometime back disproved that tall tale.

Q. "WHERE 'IN this country are the most onion sets grown?"
A. Along the southern shore of Lake Michigan. About 90 per cent of them sprout there.

Q. "WHAT'S cataplexy?"
A. A rare ailment that paralyzes its victims when they try to laugh.

TRAVELERS' CHECKS
The cunning thief who makes off with travelers' checks does not necessarily steal the whole book. Or so the detectives report. The experienced rascal often "leaves" the book, instead, that is, he removes only several of the checks, stub and all, at random. Relatively few travelers thus ripped off ever realize it for some mysterious reason.

DO YOU KNOW any man who wears false eyelashes? Neither do I. But the marketers of such lashes say 50-million pairs a year are sold. And they swear numerous men wear same.

USED TO BE a larger proportion of young women than men dropped out of medical school in the first year. Not anymore. It's vice versa now.

ONE MEDICAL specialist insists the best way to lose weight is to curb the appetite by eating an apple-half an hour before every meal.

"Why I'm Proud of my Dad..."

I'm proud of my dad because he cares about me in anyway he can. Also because I know he loves me. My dad does lots of things for me that I don't appreciate as much as I should. I know my dad is happy in caring for me. He works hard each day to pay for the things our family needs. At home after work he always plays with me and my dog. It is always so much fun. We start giggling, laughing and the whole works. When ever I need my dad to help me with something he stops what he is doing and helps me. Whenever something needs fixing Dad always says,
 "Go on and play and I'll have this fixed good as new." In the summer Dad plays with me and the neighbor kids. One time we were swinging on the swings and Dad was watering the flowers. He took the hose and spray us.
 We got all wet. Many times he would play ball, take us fishing or do many other fun things with us. In playing soccer Dad would interrupt the game and take the ball. Would all chase him and that's why I'm proud of my dad.

Why I'm proud of my Dad

HE CARES FOR US and helps me and gives me money when I need it. And he goes to church and I'm proud of that.

Why I'm Proud of My Dad

Because he lets us do things that we can't do by ourself.

He is always there for us.

ECONOMY AMERICAN STYLE

MADE IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

1975 AMERICAN COMET

As American As Apple Pie

1975 MERCURY BOBCAT

Bobcat's Is The American Way

President Harry Truman, known for his great fortitude, would probably have bought and loved this American made Comet. He even said "BUY AMERICAN." These fully American made beauties are equipped with a powerful yet economical 6 cylinder engine, 3 speed transmission that's fully synchronized, steel radial tires, locking steering column, deluxe sound package, luxurious cut-pile carpeting and blend-air heater. This beauty, turns on a dime and leaves nine cents showing. Choose from such beautiful colors as soft sultana white, saffron yellow, cerulian blue, ebony, sea-foam green, harvest gold and many more.

Ben Franklin is known for his great penny saving habits and probably would have chosen the dollar-saving Bobcat—for it's great gas mileage, low upkeep costs and all around economy. We believe Ben would have selected the American that offers a 2300 cc overhead cam engine, 4 speed floor mounted transmission, front disc brakes, rack and pinion steering, styled steel wheels, solid state ignition, air-blended heater, impact-resistant bumper system, woodtone instrument panel, cut-pile carpeting and deluxe steering wheel. Choose from every color in the rainbow. It makes cents to buy American. The American Bobcat.

"THIS NEW VW... WILL SURELY SET STANDARDS FOR OTHERS TO MEET OVER THE NEXT FEW YEARS!"

Scirocco. A hot wind from the Sahara. Scirocco. A hot new car from Volkswagen. Here's what Road & Track has to say about it: "The Scirocco is a modern, sophisticated car... a car that appears to be perfectly suited for our time. It's a car that exudes a sense of style and economy... crisp handling... The steering is light... cornering power is well into the sports-car range, too... A very good ride... There is no waste, not an ounce of fat on it; it's just what it's exciting to look at... and technically... fascinating!"

Well, Which Is It? Celebration or Sellebration Days?

DON'T READ THIS.....

if you aren't interested in finding out, okay. For those who are interested and will take time to read this document, we have made every effort to make it a few moments of interest. Why Celebration? We have been in business over 29 years — 30 in February, 1976 (this has nothing to do with this event). It was 13 years ago now that we merged 4 stores into the Big Store on the corner and became Magic Valley's First Volume Full-Service Home Furnishings Store, buying in car shipments directly from our manufacturers, eliminating the middle men and excessive freight costs. It was a success from the start, with each succeeding year bigger than the last, so you're right — it is a Celebration. You are also correct if you call it a Sellebration. What better way to celebrate than, through the cooperation of our manufacturers, to offer genuine values to our thousands of customers throughout Magic Valley! If you are still reading and are interested in an item or items for your home, then don't stop now. Read on: Can you imagine a big $419.95, 96" 3 cushion sofa in cut velvet, quilted for $299.00? Or step downstairs into Magic Valley's largest Maple shop and see a beautiful $489.95 Early American sofa with maple trim for $369.00 and luxurious cuddle-rockers in 3 colors for just $239.00. And talk about wood pieces — we have just received dozens of them: sofas, love seats & chairs, all at big, big savings. Like the love seat from Futurian for just $268.00 and transitional cuddle rockers in crushed velvet by Guild for only $239.00. A savings of $50.00. And speaking of chairs — Have we got them! A big shipment from Stratolounger on top of an already heavy inventory. Look at these Sellebration Prices! A big wing back chair in dark wood rim in Herculon covers — 3 colors — Reg. $289.95 for $138.00. Our biggest selling high style swivel rockers at $219.95 for $189.00. We wish we had space to list at least a dozen more chair values. Please come see them on display in Idaho's largest chair department, 2nd level. If you are still reading, don't stop now. How about some new tables for your living room? We got 'em — like large, heavy square or hex in modern, country or Mediterranean a real buy at $89.95 — now for just $59.95. While they last. Also Early American for just $69.00 or pedestal accent tables with marble or slate tops for only $28.00. For those who want the finest, we have them too. Are you still with us? If so, do you need a desk? Ask to see the 4 drawer solid maple ones for just $84.00 or the roll top captain's desk for $148.00, also the big double Mediterranean style with file drawers in oak for $197.00. Similar values in bookcases etc. Have you seen the latest in dinettes? You'll see them all at our Big Store — lower level. Over 40 suites. Here are 3: $109.95 5 pc. with extension table for $89.95, the $229.95 big deluxe 7 pc. models for $188.00, pedestal sets both table and chairs, top quality with ball bearings, etc. Save $30.00 at $199.95. Also swivel bar stools for $22.00 and extra dinette chairs at $10.88. How about dining room? You will like a 7 pc. elegant French Provincial with 3 leaf table in antique white with cherry top for $399.95 or the distressed pecan, Mediterranean model for $469.00. Also antique white china for $269.95. Many more on lower level. And for those who are still with us, let's go up to the 2nd level, after you get your 2nd wind (quite a hike). How's this 5 pc. contemporary bedroom suite complete with nite stand — all dust proof — center guides, dove tailed construction triple dresser, and 5 drawer chest at a Celebration price of $429.95. And a 4 pc. Ranch Oak set for just $299.00. And for those who want the utmost in elegance, ask to see our cherry french provincial suite at $629.00. Incidentally, what good is a new bed without a mattress. Take 2 steps up and you'll find yourself in Idaho's Largest Sleep Shop displaying Sealy's complete line of mattresses and over 70 sleeper sofas. Famous Sealy quality Rest Guard mattress for just $79.95 and the $249.95 queen set at a Sellebration price of $209.95. And a $300 bedding pkg. complete with quality headboard, frame, bedspread, pillows, blanket and all linen for just $148.00 with purchase of any queen or king set. Look at Sealy's $159.95 4 pc. twin size ensemble — mattress, box, headboard, and frame for $99.95. How's that for a buy? Bunk-Beds? How about an extra heavy pine bunk for $188.00? We have 'em. Did you know that 30% of upholstered sofas are sleepers? We have the biggest display in the Intermountain area — over 70 with 7 manufacturers represented. Single, double, queen and king in all covers and colors at Sellebration Prices like $289.95 models for $239.00 and $319.95 queens for $258.00 and $499.95 super queens for $399.00 in herculon and nylon covers. Isn't this ridiculous? Probably everyone has quit reading at this point. In case you haven't — while you're on the 2nd floor stop by our huge Color TV & Stereo Rooms. For Sellebration Days we have marked down every set for positive clearance to make room for the 76's. For example — A new color combination with 4 year warranty for $698.00 or a big 4 pc. component stereo set for $168.00. Hang in there — we are winding this thing up, but before we do we must ask you to look at some of our Frigidaire appliance values before you leave our big store. We purchased a great number of discontinued models especially for Sellebration Days. You'll love the prices. Note: We also have several School Appliances left. If you're hot, you're hot. Right? Well, you can cool off fast with a new Frigidaire Air Conditioner or Wright Air Cooler. We have a huge stock at low, low prices plus a factory Cash Refund from Frigidaire. And finally, Pictures and wall decorations, lamps and tables 20% off. And from $3 to $6 a square yard off Most Mohawk Carpets. Thanks for your patience in reading this entire ad. If you found something you would like, come in and see it. You'll be glad you did. You won't have to pay anything until September.

Valley comment

QUESTION: What do you remember best about your father?

Nancy Shewchuk, Twin Falls:

I used to help him in the post office and a little store that he owned. He was a good father. We had a lot of good times together.

Amanda Glavin, Twin Falls:

He taught me to love and appreciate the land. He was a very fair and generous man.

Dick Byrd, Focatello:

There's all kinds of good things about fathers, mine was a very warm and wonderful father. He's a real human. The things you remember best about your father is a disciplinarian figure. But the things I remember most was the way I could go to him with a problem.

A.E. Pounder, Richfield:

I remember when I was young this neighborhood boy was giving me a bad time and dad said stop it or he'd take it to him.

Tim Wilson, Twin Falls:

He always understood. He helps out in my problems and he's a great friend.

Rick McClain, Twin Falls:

I remember a lot of things about my father. He's the greatest, he's helped me out a thousand times. He's always there when I need him. He's ... he's super.

Donna Purcell, Sun Valley:

Strictness, and I respect him because of it.

Sandre Kienzie, Twin Falls:

The strict way he raised me. I think it was good for me. He made me ride horses we had. I realize it was good training, and it taught me responsibility.

Getting a pineapple to fruit is no easy trick

By GEORGE ARBAHAM

HOME GROWN PINEAPPLES: Home gardeners grow pineapples in their homes for the same reason people like to climb mountains. They like the challenge. Getting a pineapple to fruit is no easy trick, but it can be done. We've fruited two of them indoors, from tops cut off a store pineapple. If you've got a good job and want to raise pineapples, our advice is to hang on to the job because it takes 24 to 28 months to produce a ripe fruit, even in Hawaii.

Because so many gardeners have trouble getting a pineapple to start and to set fruit, we went to the Dale pineapple company for their information on growing the plant indoors. We're passing their tips along to you.

(1) Start with a fresh pineapple. The leafy top (crown) should be nice and green, not dried up. (2) They say remove the top by twisting it off, then trim any adhering flesh. (3) Strip off three or four bottom leaves, and place the top upside down in a dry, shady place for about a week before planting. This lets the cut end and the leaf scars harden, and this in turn prevents rot. (4) After a week is up, start the pineapple in an 8-inch pot of clay, using a good light mixture such as 1 part each of sand, peat and loam. Be sure the drainage is good because pineapples cannot tolerate wet feet. Gravel in the bottom of the pot helps drainage. Add soil then set the top on it and tamp firmly around the base. Do not get any soil into the leaves of the crown.

Water the top once a week. During the summer set the plant on a sunny porch or bury put in the garden. When the plant is about 16 months old, buds will form in the center of the leaves but you won't be able to see this until about two months later when a bright red cone appears.

NOTE: If after 20 months, your plant has not flowered, put the pineapple, pot and all in a solid plastic laundry bag. Put a nice ripe apple in the bag with the pineapple, then tie the bag tightly and leave it enclosed for three days. Remove the bag and apple and put the pineapple in a sunny window. After two months the bright red cone will appear. Then come the blue flowers over a two week period when the petals have dried, the fruit begins to form. A PICKLING GUIDE: Don't pack a single pickle until you've read our 32-page guide to Successful Pickling. We are happy to offer this booklet again to all beginning picklers. It tells how to pickle vegetables, make all kinds of sweet and sour pickles and relish dishes. We'd like you to have it before a busy pickling season is on hand. Just send us a self-addressed, stamped envelope and ask for GUIDE TO SUCCESSFUL PICKLING. Every home owner should have a copy because it tells how to use up your cucumbers and other crops to better advantage.

If you're short on space, you can grow cucumbers in pots or on a wire trellis. Datto Pick is an early, multi-purpose hybrid pickling cucumber which can be grown in small areas such as patios, because of the very compact habit. It can be used for pickling, as a whole gherkin when small and, as it grows larger, for chips and spears. This variety is extremely vigorous and tolerant of powdery and downy mildew. It likes some support such as string or wire fencing. If you happen to have a touchy stomach and can't eat cucumbers, try the Burpees No. 24, having dark green, smooth skin with white spines. Fruit is about 10 inches long and the variety is highly tolerant of mildew. For best result, it should be staked or allowed to climb up a trellis.

OUTDOOR MUMS: Still plenty of time to set out garden mums. If your mums have a lot of dead wood, or old woody stems, in them, your best bet is to take cuttings from the young shoots and root them in sand or perlite. They root fast, and after an inch or so of white roots, set them outdoors. Keep the cuttings well watered, and preferably shaded for the first few days. Space garden mums at least 18" in all directions. When it comes to pinching, many gardeners are baffled. Except for the larger varieties, plants should be pinched up to about the first of July or so. This means to pinch off the very tip, including the first set of leaves of each shoot, or branch that the plant develops. This pinching should be done when these shoots have three or four sets of leaves. Do not pinch after the 5th of July or so as it may delay flowering.

NOTE: Many of our early blooming varieties want to set buds in summer, not fall. This is not especially harmful, nor will it affect the size of the plant or its regular fall bloom. When buds appear early, take a pair of hedge shears and cut the plant back to within two inches of the ground. Feed with liquid plant food to encourage new growth, and remove all buds that appear on these plants up to about the 15th of July.

FLEA BEETLES: If your tomatoes, peppers, eggplants, etc. have tiny holes in the leaves, blame it on flea beetles. Spray or dust the leaves with Sevin. Organic gardeners like to dust wood ashes and lime on the leaves to keep the beetles off. There are two generations of beetles, which means they aren't around too long, but when they are around they can do a lot of damage.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: D. F. of Twin Falls: "We want to try our hand at drying flowers and heard that Silica gel is the best material to use. Will you please tell us what this is and how to use it?"

green thumb

Silica gel is a chemical compound which has been around for a long time because of its ability to take up moisture. Florists sell a special mixture which contains a blue crystal indicator which loses its color when exposed to the air. When Silica gel is saturated with moisture after you've used it several times, you can re-activate it again by placing the crystals in a shallow dish and placing it in an oven at 225 degs. F. for a couple hours. This drives the moisture out and after thoroughly dry you can use it again to treat flowers with it. It's best to keep the mixture in tightly sealed containers. Silica gel can be used over and over again for many years.

To treat flowers, keep in mind you get best results if you use freshly picked blossoms. Use flowers that are at their peak, not when wide opened or when several days old. Do NOT pick after a heavy dew or a heavy rain. Pick the flowers in afternoon when they've had a chance to dry off. Never put wet blossoms into the silica gel. Most flowers are dried face up, and usually with the stem cut off. Most gardeners cut the natural stem off and apply a wired stem, since natural stems are too brittle when dry.

B.H. of Ida: "Why is it that everybody likes to talk about eating dandelion blossoms, but they never mention dandelion soup? Here's a good recipe for those who want to get rid of the dandelion weed in the lawn: 1 cup dandelion pulp, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon of flour, 1 cup of milk, salt and pepper, 1 yolk of hard boil egg. Make white sauce and add it to the dandelion pulp. Just prior to serving, add egg yolk which has been pressed through a sieve. It's great! Try it!"

Sunday, June 15, 1975 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho

Real Mr. T-N

The real Mr. T-N came into the Times-News office the other day to say that the paper's front-page cartoon figure is using his registered brand. John Nhill, left, who runs cattle near Cashton, said his registered brand is "T" (bar) N," written "T-N." Nhill said he wouldn't sue if the paper didn't put it on any livestock. Nhill has used the brand since 1964. The Times-News has published "Mr. T-N" since the two papers, The Times and the News, consolidated in the 1930s.

Angora and Persian hard to distinguish

By Linda Merry, D.V.M. — Question: Will you please tell me if there is really an Angora cat, or is this just a Persian, in truth? I hear people say their cat is Angora but I can't see any difference.

an Angora from a Persian these days. They've been interbred for decades and the characteristics have dissolved into one another. The distinction between the two was fused over a great deal in England in the 19th Century. The principal differences were

In hair coat and bone structure, especially of the head. Somewhere around the turn of the centuries even the British quill roaring about it and now the two types of cats are within a whisker each other.

Mail gets her writing back

Some of the mail addressed to this column is absolutely vicious. I got one that said, "I had Newsman short." He has. Of course, it was misguided.

"What kind of an animal would get so upset?" I asked Mother. "A wise one," she counseled. "Don't you know that writing letters is the greatest way in the world to get rid of your hostilities? People who bottle things up inside them eventually wind up hanging the laundry out in a driving rain, wearing bedspum slippers that don't match, get rid of your anger. Write it down. Besides, every time I've complained about anything, the manufacturer has sent me a free case of his product."

I'm not much with words when I talk. When I'm angry, my tongue locks like it was just shot full of novocaine and I usually mumble something like, "Well, we'll see what we shall see." (Which when translated still doesn't make any sense.)

But when I sat down at the typewriter, my fingers danced along the keys like Van Cliburn's. I mean I was positively brilliant. I wrote to a major airline telling them I considered the Wright Brothers the foremost humorists in this country and that if God had meant for people to fly their airline (Trans Fright) he would never have invented old age.

I wrote to the president of a grocery store chain pointing out that there is a fume in a woman's life somewhere between Hamperdack and Sontique when she can't cope with a cash register that runs out of tape in the middle of a $70 order on her hawking night.

I wrote to the manufacturer of a $12.95 pair of no-shrink jeans and enclosed payment for them that had been left in the pocket during laundry. The check had shrunk in proportion to the jeans and amounted to $13.20.

I wrote to King Farnas and said, "I know you when you were Alice Guinness and I hope your camel loses its antlers."

But my finest hour was probably a letter to the man who told me my car. On a cleverness scale from 1 to 14, I sold me my special license plates that spelled LEMON, how the car had worn out in the trunk, how the parts had to be ordered from behind the Iron Curtain, and how their explanation for everything was that it was a car built on Monday when every car was built on Sunday.

The only response I've gotten from any of them has been a newsletter from the car manufacturer. But as I told Mother, "Well, we'll see what we shall see."

Bizarre thriller takes trip through history

By LIZ CARDINALE
Times-News writer

William Hallahan's new novel—"The Search for Joseph Tully" explores the world of the neo-nazi detective.

At first it seems no more than the story of Matthew Willow, a London genealogist. He has come to Brooklyn to track down the descendants of Joseph Tully, an 18th Century wine merchant. But soon, we discover the plot is not all that simple. There is a trail occult and above all, evermounting suspense.

Willow and the man he is searching for are destined to carry the story to its horrifying conclusion. For this is a tale of revenge, of vindication pursued endlessly through time from reincarnation to reincarnation.

The story begins in an armorer's forge in 18th Century Rome in the chamber of a master swordmaker busy creating a blade of legendary temper and sharpness. It is traditional that superior swords have their final cooling in blood and for this reason two captives lie stripped and bound at the far end of the room. Their purpose is, of course, to serve as the final tribute to the swordmaker's art. Thus a horrifying crime is committed and its logical conclusion programmed for infinity.

Now the scene shifts to modern-day Brooklyn. In a corner of the borough an urban renewal project is underway; the iron wrecking ball creating smoke and empytiness. Standing alone and forgotten amid the rubble is Brevort House, once a fine mansion, now condemned to oblivion.

The only remaining occupant of Brevort House is Peter Richardson, a middle-aged, disillusioned copywriter who now feels abandoned and helpless. The house hangs over him, like a human presence emanating an evilness — an undefined terror. The mansion, or something in it, is speaking to him — warning him of his approaching death.

"The Search for Joseph Tully" is a fascinating story, well-written and powerful with vivid descriptive passages.

Although the book tends to move rather slowly, the plot action and characters are realistic and the suspense flows from page to page. Gradually as the pieces of the puzzle fall into place the picture becomes clear and the reader is present for the final, shattering scenes.

Washington challenges supremacy of Idaho spud

SEATTLE (UPI) — If you were in the nation's second top producing potato producing state when the word got out...

Try Washington. Idaho still leads the spud sweeps stakes but Washington has leaped from fifth to second within the next decade and is closing.

Processors have been building their plants in Washington at an unprecedented pace, and during the past 10 years production has risen 250 per cent.

In 1962, just three potato plants were in operation in the Evergreen State. There are now 12 and production is booming.

With growing season 60 to 90 days longer than Idaho, Washington potato growers consistently produce nearly double the yield per acre of Idaho.

Which is why the Washington State Potato Commission advertises the state as "Potato Country, U.S.A." and why Washington may be in line to take over as the top potato producer in the nation.

Washington also has, advertised widely the message: "Why 'Idaho' potatoes grow better in Washington." In the ad Idaho is topped with an asterisk and that is most important, the commission feels.

It refers to a footnote reading: "The most popular processed potatoes grown in the U.S. are Washington and French fries from Idaho Russet Burbank seed potatoes."

That ad and others in similar vein has the Idaho Potato Commission sizzling like a French fry popped into deep-fat.

Idaho has registered the name Idaho with the U.S. Patent Office and its Potato Commission has filed a suit against its Washington counterpart for using the name "Idaho" in ads.

It asks that Washington and Idaho be declared the world's Idaho in its ads and also seeks damages adding up to $500,000.

Col. Sanders a flop at finding great ribs

By MIKE ROYKO
© 1975 Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Col. Sanders has now gone into the barbecued ribs business.

Actually, the colonel hasn't since he is just a public relations symbol.

But the KFC Corp. has, and it owns or operates more than 4,000 outlets for Kentucky Fried Chicken.

And the KFC Corp. is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Heublein Corp., which makes all sorts of products.

In any case, this is big news. For one thing, it means that KFC Corp. automatically becomes the nation's biggest seller of barbecued ribs. Who can compete with 4,000 outlets? Hickory Harry, or Saucy Mary, or any other neighborhood rib joint?

And that means that America's taste buds are about to be conditioned to another mass flavor.

Millions of people will now begin eating the KFC Corp. ribs and before long they will believe that this is the way a rib should taste. It will become the national rib standard, just as McDonald's is for the hamburger and Schlitz or Bud are for beer.

So this development in America's eating habits — and taste tastes — is an important question: How good are the KFC ribs?

Well, there is only one way to judge a barbecued rib. You pick it up with your fingers and start chomping on the damn thing. Then, if it is good, you fling the bone into the corner and chomp on some more.

So, I went days ago, gathered together six people to serve as my rib-chomping panel.

I chose them on the basis of conversations that went something like this: "You like barbecued ribs?" "Yeah." "I want to try some?" "Yeah."

Each panelist was asked to rate the ribs on a scale of 1 point (not only if starving) to 5 points (I'm a rib-eating snobber, man).

Then I served them two kinds of ribs.

One batch came from a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet. It doesn't matter which outlet, since they are standardized. The ribs are pressure cooked, dipped in a breading, a sauce, then baked.

The other batch came from Collins Barbecue, a neighborhood place with the product of a great corporation like Heublein, or even its subsidiary.

Collins d'ne has a research kitchen to develop his sauce, or a marketing division to sample tastes, a public relations division, group vice presidents, and that corporate know-how.

Collins just messed around until he came up with a sauce he liked, and hoped a customer would like, too. He'd never make much of a group vice president with that attitude.

And so my rib-eating panel began eating and jotting down their comments. Here are the results.

First, the ribs from Collins:

Merle Harpe: "Terrific. Meaty, juicy, tender. Honest smoke flavor, lean, and spicy. I'd like to know what's in that sauce, 5 points."

Tom Selbel: "The ribs are..."

Wade Nelson: "Nice zest to flavor. Tender, but not overcooked. Did not cause my beard to mat, 4 points."

Ellen Warren: "Deliciously meaty; rich but not too gummy sauce. Particularly impressive was the amount of lean meat on each rib. Small quantities of fat also contributed to the over-all appeal, 4 points."

Tom Selbel: "The greatest ribs I have ever tasted were in a place called John's in Peoria, Ill. I would have given John's 5 points. This place is so close that I do not hesitate in giving it 4 points."

Now, the same panel's reaction to a batch of ribs from Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Harpe: "Are you sure these are ribs? They taste like Chicken. Dry. No barbecue taste at all. Tough. Very little meat, considering how big the ribs are. Meats to be fat and breaded. Awful. Greasy. Do I have to eat the whole thing? 1 point."

Sodoma: "Tastes like candied cardboard, except the cardboard would be better. This rib was so awful I bit into the bone and it tasted better than the meat. The bone actually was so soft that pieces of it came off when I bit into the meat. If this stuff was actually barbecued, the charcoal must have been made of distilled jawbreakers."

Harpe: "Meat is overcooked, sauce has cheap catsup on top of a franchise-restaurant-type breading. This sort of thing might appeal to younger types who like Frisch's fried ice cream bars. 1 point."

Nelson: "Too fat. Reeking-of-tomato sauce flavor. No spiciness to the sauce at all. Hardly a real barbecue rib. Tasted like it had been dipped in a can of Contadina. 2 points."

Warren: "This tastes like (bleep): There's plenty of meat, only it doesn't taste like meat. The sauce is sickeningly sweet, vile, repulsive. Zero points."

Selbel: "There is enough sauce, and it obscured the meat, but the sauce tasted like leftover baked bean sauce. Therefore the ribs taste like... That's ribs have no heart and no soul. To be kind, I give it 1 point."

To complete the sampling, I conducted a scientific test of my own.

I shaved the meat from the bones of an order of Collins ribs ($5.49) and an order of KFC Corp. ribs ($5.99).

The Collins ribs produced 14.5 ounces of mostly meat. That came to 38 cents an ounce. I liked my fingers.

The KFC Corp. ribs produced 12 ounces of mostly fat, breading, and some meat. That came to 33 cents an ounce. I washed my fingers.

The KFC Corp., public relations department says: "It took two years for Kentucky Fried Chicken to develop a barbecued rib good enough to serve America. But now they're doing it."

What a depressing thought.

Dennis Sodoma: "Exquisite. Full-bodied sauce; yet not over-powering. The meat was lean. 4.5 points."

John Han: "Meat firm, not overcooked, minimum of fat, particularly enjoyed the generously exposed crispy marrow at rib ends. 4 points."

Wade Nelson: "Nice zest to flavor. Tender, but not overcooked. Did not cause my beard to mat, 4 points."

Find your own home town in Skylab photo catalog

By AL ROSSITER JR. — WASHINGTON (UPI) —

The space agency has published a catalog listing 35,000 Earth pictures taken from the Skylab space station. It tells you how to buy them and what you can do with them.

The chances are excellent that your home town is included in one of the shots taken from an altitude of 260 miles during the 171 days the orbiting laboratory was manned in 1973 and early 1974.

contiguous states and many other parts of the world.

The pictures provide a broad look at tens of square miles of land and sea at a time. They give a repetitive overview of an area that can't be matched from the ground or even from airplanes.

The Skylab Earth resources photographs were produced from a set of six cameras which record the view below as seen in different wave lengths of light and by a powerful telescopic camera—Skylab-Earth resources instruments also brought back 45 miles of magnetic tape recording data gathered by the station's electronic ground scanners, but all this data have not been processed.

Besides providing an index of all the Skylab ground pictures, the 350-page book devotes six chapters to suggestions of how the images can best be used in land resource management, water resources, marine resources, landform surveys, geologic mapping and mineral resources, agriculture, forest and range resources and environmental applications.

'We love Idaho'

This typical barracks room is one of two rented by the family of Fernando and San Juana Cuellar for $7 per room per week. The poster on the wall was painted by the Cuellar children. In the upper left corner of the poster in front of the Indian on horseback is written "We Love Idaho." The Cuellars have been coming to the Twin Falls labor camp each summer for 15 years.

TF labor camp: remnant of a dying order

By GEORGE WILEY
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — The nasty-looking little dogs come out of the shade to bark.

The children yell at the dogs in Spanish, but the dogs don't stop. They go on barking. They look like the sort of dogs to go in an Indian soup pot.

On the road which cuts between the rows of barracks and the patches of lawn the cars raise a dust which slowly settles back from where it came.

analysis

Beside the road, at the edge of the grass, more cars are parked. All dusty and tired looking, they bear license plates from far away — Arizona, California, Texas. The afternoon sun sun glares off the chrome on the cars, beats on the roofs of the barracks and rises in waves from the white dust of the road.

An old man, a wide-brimmed hat shading his dark, wrinkled face, sits on the steps of the restroom staring into the distance. No, he shakes his head, he does not want his picture taken.

The children want their pictures taken. They volunteer, yelling, pushing over each other to get in camera range. "Take my picture alone," one boy demands.

On the lawn between the rows of barracks other children are playing soccer with a red plastic ball. Beside the dusty cars at the edge of the road a cluster of men stand together sipping beer. Farther away, women carrying baskets of clothing and trailing children behind them make their way across the lawn toward the laundry shed.

Between the rows of barracks also, a family from Texas has parked its car and is busy carrying its belongings from the car to a darkened barracks room.

In another barracks, Mr. and Mrs. Arturo Padilla (see cover) are looking over what little food they have left — some flour, a few eggs, a bag of potatoes, beans, lard, odds and ends. Not much for a family of eight.

The Padillas say they have been denied food stamps. Not exactly denied them but asked to buy them at a price they can't afford. Just arrived from Texas, they do not know what they will do. They are working as thinners in the beet fields, but it may be a week or more before they have finished their acreage and get paid.

In a way the Padillas are lucky. They, at least, are working, while many of their fellow migrants, drawn to Twin Falls by the grapevine which predicts a heavy beet crop, are not. The late spring has slowed the planting. Farmers are having to dig up and reseed. Meanwhile, the Twin Falls Labor Center is filling up fast — it is already fuller than it has been for several years.

No matter. The sun is shining. The children are playing. The notes of a Spanish guitar drift slowly across the lawn. There is a communal feeling, in spite of the heat, in spite of the litter, the dingy surroundings.

The migrants have come in, and for a moment there is something very nice about it, something peaceful and close, like wandering around a carnival lot at set-up time. There is the same sensation of things being readied, of preparing for the effort ahead.

But the times are changing and the migrants are changing. Perhaps, they are no longer so content as they were to live under the conditions in which they are asked to live. Or perhaps it is with the mechanization in farming and the gradual phase out of the migrant worker that the conditions themselves have deteriorated and, no longer are what they were. At any rate, this year there is conflict at the Twin Falls labor camp.

A month or so ago a group of residents of the camp held a protest march. They asked the camp board, which administers the barracks and the houses behind them, to discharge camp manager William Taylor.

Taylor, the chicano resident claimed, was discriminatory in his rental policies. He preferred, they said, to rent to angios while stalling the chicanos off.

The protestors also faulted Taylor for wearing a badge and a handgun while performing his camp managerial duties. They demanded that he make a fuller effort to clean up and restore the camp. Particularly, they asked that he take down a fence which had been erected to turn the front lawn of the camp into a pasture for horses.

They also decried the lack of chicano help at the camp, pointing out that many of the migrants spoke no English.

There were rumors at least that Taylor had applied certain gouging tactics to get money from naive chicano residents, such as through the attempted rental of mail boxes. Taylor denounced and denied the rumors.

Arturo Padilla (cover photo) arrived from Texas about a week ago with a family of eight.

Lured to Twin Falls for the first time in several years by the migrant grapevine which is rumoring a heavy sugar beet crop, the Padillas, unlike other migrants gathering in Twin Falls, were able to find work. However, they arrived destitute and were unable to get the food stamps they had expected.

Built in 1939, the Twin Falls labor camp is now in run-down condition. Camp board members say the facility will be deeded away after the current season.

Poor
self-image

One problem faced by migrants is the low self-image which comes from living on the bottom rung of the economic ladder. Such self-contempt can be seen in typical graffiti above.

At play

Viva Chicana?

The rallying cry rang out several weeks ago as labor camp residents marched to protest conditions at the camp and to ask the board to fire the camp manager. Above,

Jesus Rojas, arm raised, exhorts marchers to press for improvements in the camp, including the removal of a fence around the front lawn, the hiring of Spanish-speaking camp assistants and the forcing of the camp manager to take off his gun. Several of the migrant demands have been met, but others have not. The dispute is scheduled for federal mediation.

Dying order

For its part, the labor center board backed Taylor up. Taylor would not go, said board chairman Charles Colner. Colner also said the labor camp would be phased out after the current year, either given to Twin Falls City or the Twin Falls School District, both of which, he said, had expressed interest in the property.

Yet, since the protest march, many of the residents' grievances have been redressed.

The fence around the front lawn was removed in part — at the direction of chairman Colner.

Taylor a couple of weeks ago took off his pistol saying he had never liked to wear it anyway.

About the same time Taylor hired two chicanos to help him — a man to help with the maintenance and a woman to work in the office as a secretary.

Despite these actions, however, the chicano protesters have continued to seek Taylor's ouster, and at the camp an uneasy peace.

In a couple of weeks federal mediators from the U.S. Department of Justice will arrive to try to find a solution to the grievances voiced by the chicanos at the camp.

Both the protest group and the labor center board have agreed to the mediation, although the outcome, whatever it is, will not be legally binding on either party.

In the meantime, the residents of the camp are looking for work or getting ready to go to work. Many of them are not even aware or concerned that a conflict between long-time residents and the camp board exists.

Yes, they say, the camp is in bad condition — worse than most, worse than in other states.

"But," said one chicano man, "it is the people too."

Burning light bulb illumines single electrical source uniform to all barracks rooms in the camp. This particular room is shared by a group of male field hands.

Closeness between generations is typical of communal life style of the migrants in which all family members contribute to the family unit. Use of children as thinners in the field makes large families advantageous. Above, an elderly woman prepares a meal for her granddaughter.

Grandmother and child

Simple shrine

Shrine against barracks wall reflects Catholic heritage of many migrant families. Years ago Sunday masses were held at the camp, but the practice is no longer followed.

Dying order

If the toilets are dirty is it because the camp staff does not keep them clean, or because the residents dirty them so fast to be kept clean? If conditions in the barracks are filthy, what part of this is because the camp is old and crumbling, and what part is because the residents, some of them, don't care?

The communal feeling passes. One begins to notice the self-denegrating graffiti, the children playing in the dust, the broken bits of things strewn everywhere.

The people too.

Walking along the road between the barracks, this reporter and Times-News photographer Lou Freeman are detained by a man in his mid-50s who smells strongly of wine.

The man fumbles in his pocket and brings out a farm workers' union button. He mumbles something about being an organizer, but it is clear he is disorganized.

"Right now I am poor," he says. He asks for cigarettes and money. In return, he poses for photographs.

"There," says Freeman, as we are walking back to the car, "is a man who has given up."

The times are changing. The young migrants are not giving up. Faced with decreasing need for farm labor they are seeking other avenues of employment, trying to learn new skills. The chicano is in the middle of an uphill fight.

The Twin Falls Labor Center is in turmoil. The conflict is a real one, but at times it seems almost passe.

If Colner is right, there will be no labor camp next year. The camp will be gone and the migrants now living in it will be left to find themselves as best they can into the general population.

This, then is probably our last chance to look at the camp and its people.

To assess whether the exchange between the Spanish-American migrant and the anglo-farmer has been a fair one.

A lofty question.

The children are too full of themselves to care. They want to have their pictures taken.

Wave of future

The migrant child serves as both field hand and interpreter. These boys, eager to have their pictures taken, represent the next generation of Chicanos, and they will find themselves faced with acquiring skills to survive as field work yields to mechanization. Unboarded, they flash the victory sign.

Small streams have fish

Many of the small streams in Twin Falls County have fish.

Most are rainbow. One of the favorites is cedar draw.

The best fishing is found by going to Filer and following the old highway 30 to the road to Gourley orchard of the Snake River canyon. Two miles from the old highway 30 turnoff you will cross Cedar Draw.
Park at this point and fish down stream.

Use night crawlers or salmon eggs. Fishing this stream early in the season is a must. Later in the year the stream becomes dirty with runoff water and loses its appeal.

Other deep streams can be found around Bull and Filer. Most have fish.

Kewpie collector

GAVIN MACLEOD has an eye for a beautiful doll - the Kewpie doll, which he collects in many shapes and forms. He has researched their history, as well as filed shelves, books and crannies with the smiling little creatures. MacLeod is seen weekly on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," broadcast Saturdays on CBS.

DONALD SUTHERLAND
... next Casanova

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: I thought Donald Sutherland was marvelous in "The Day of the Locust" but now I hear he's going to play the great lover in "Casanova." Why him? — P.Y., St. Paul, Minn.

A: Casanova had his way with so many women, more because of his personality than his appearance. In fact, Fellini, who will direct the film, will have Sutherland play the part with a large, hooked nose. Casanova was also noted for his sexual endurance, an area in which Sutherland boasts he can compete with the master. So there.

Q: I've always been fascinated by that Washington gadfly Barbara Hower, the one who held hands with the late Lyndon Johnson. Has she remarried? — W.E., Portland, Ore.

PRESIDENT FORD
... remember the jinx

A: No, Barbara has been busy gadflying around Manhattan and what she'd really love to have is a show like her namesake, Barbara Walters. Her current beau is a writer around town named Herb Sargent who tends to date famous ladies and not be too adorable to them.

Q: If President Ford runs in 1976 and wins will he be eligible to try again in 1980? — S.C., Ventura, Calif.

A: Yes, since the Constitution, as amended, allows for two elected terms. But Nixon should be mindful of the 20-year jinx. Since 1840 every President elected at 29-year intervals has died in office — four by assassination. Only one other President has died in office and none was assassinated.

Q: We don't read much about Oscar winner James Caan's love life. Doesn't he know how to be a sex symbol? — F.G., Sebring, Fla.

A: Caan claims not to be interested in the super-stard role. Though once divorced, he prefers lasting relationships like his five-year affair with ex-playmate of the year, Connie Kreski. The actor, who is heavily into sports and physical fitness, points out that the current co-rulers of moviedom, Newman and Redford, do not have Playboy images either.

TROUBLE IN PARADISE: Up until recently, Mick Jagger has been willing to share the celebrity spotlight with his ex-wife Bianca. However, Jagger has told his publicity people that when he goes out on tour starting this month he does not want Bianca hogging the publicity. He wants this tour to be strictly Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones. What can that mean, do you think?

Q: I hear that there is a play running in England that treats the Kennedy family none too flatteringly. Will it come to the U.S.? — S.I., Abilene, Tex.

A: That would be "Kennedy's Children," which can now be seen in some 20 foreign countries. The play is not kind to the late President Kennedy nor to Jackie, Jean Smith, J.F.K.'s youngest sister, ceased the show in London and now we understand the U.S. opening has been cancelled.

Q: Will Lauren Bacall ever marry again? — O.L., Newark, Del.

A: At 50, Ms. Bacall still likes party-going and no doubt during some enchanted evening love will bloom again. When she did the play "Applause" in London her friendship with co-star Basil Hossins was the talk of the town. She has just lately returned to England and actor Hoekins. This may be the start of something big.

Q: What's an organization called "The Responsible Society" all about? — C.Y., Trenton, N.J.

A: They're a group of influential English doctors, scientists and writers, headed by author C.P. Snow's wife Pamela. They contend that if the sexual revolution isn't balanced by self-control and understanding of the emotional and mental destruction of the "Permissive Society," Western civilization is doomed. That's what they think, anyhow.

Q: Why didn't we hear much about actor Robert DeNiro who was so great in "Godfather III"? — R.D., Athens, Ohio.

A: DeNiro is publicly-shy and isn't good at interviews but that doesn't mean he isn't working hard. Traveling with his beautiful black girl friend he did a picture for Bertolucci in Italy and then returned to New York for "Taxi." This month he, his girl friend and her daughter move to Los Angeles where DeNiro will star in a Mike Nichols-Neil Simon film, "Bogart Slept Here."

Q: What happened to Maria? ("Last Tango in Paris") — that scandalous affair with her girl-friend in Rome? — H.H., Tuscaloosa, Ala.

A: Maria was at the Cannes Film Festival recently, promoting her film "The Passenger" which was shot before that Roman episode where she broke into a mental hospital to be with her friend, Britisher Joan Townsend. Both are now living happily together in Hollywood where agent Paul Kohner will help Maria resume her acting career and hopefully, quiet her down a bit.

Q: I saw Groucho Marx on TV recently and wondered if he was still going wild that young girl? Maybe he even married her? — OC, N.Y., N.Y.

A: The 85-year-old comedian still has 34-year-old Erin Fleming as his constant companion. No, they haven't married, but there is a current rumor that Groucho has adopted the lady.

Q: I was shocked to read that Patricia Neal's 18-year-old daughter, Tessa, had moved in with her boyfriend. Isn't there anything a parent can do? — J.D., Norman, Okla.

A: Apparently Patricia and her husband, writer Roubt Dahl, have come up with a solution. We hear they purchased a fine, new place for Tessa and she quickly vacated her boyfriend's flat and moved into her own digs.

Q: My friend says that Grace Kelly is not the first American to be "Princess of Monaco. Is that right? — E.G., Omaha, Neb.

A: We are told that in the late 1800s Prince Albert I of Monaco married Alice Hine of New Orleans thereby making her the first American Princess of that tiny principality.

Q: Mel Brooks gets all the publicity but I think Madeline Kahn is marvelous. Why isn't she appreciated? — H.O., Hudson, N.Y.

A: Don't worry, she is. Brooks himself says she is the funniest lady in movies today. He used her in "Blazing Saddles" and as the monster's girlfriend in "Young Frankenstein." She is now making a picture with Gene Wilder called "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother."

Q: What has Erich Segal, author of "Love Story," done for us lately? — L.L., Louisville, Ky.

A: Segal, who is also a Greek scholar, has written the book and lyrics for a new musical called "Odyssey." The show, starring Yul Brynner, is touring the country and will open in New York in the fall.

Q: What is Henry Wynberg, Elizabeth Taylor's current boyfriend, really like? — D.J., St. Louis, Mo.

C. P. SNOW
... wife heads group

A: Everybody seems to expect Wynberg to be either a slick opportunist or a libby egotist. He is a neither. Photographs show him to be tall, handsome and sexy-looking but those who know him are most impressed by his seriousness, consideration and sense of responsibility. He takes care of his family, handles Miss Taylor's business arrangements and deals with the press on her behalf. He is also desperately in love with the star and makes many personal sacrifices to be with her during her travels.

Q: You reported that maybe Sophia Loren and husband Carlo Ponti are not breaking up after all. What about that actress who said she was in love with FORMIT? — G.W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

A: Dallah Di Luzzaro was a sexy starlet with a five-year contract to work for Ponti's company. She was sent to New York to practice up on her English and there she announced that she and her boss were in love. Now Dallah is a sexy, 21-year-old Italian living at home with her parents without a contract. The moral to this story may be that if you want to get ahead in the Italian film business, don't cross Sophia.

Q: While in New York I saw Ellen Burstyn and Charles Grodin in the play, "Same Time Next Year." It was hilarious. Why can't it be this funny? — A.R., Akron, Ohio.

A: You've probably been laughing at author Bernard Slade's material on the tube for years without knowing it. He's written for many of the top comedy shows. Next season Slade will have a new series on ABC called "Everything Money Can Buy." It will have Carl Reiner as producer, director and star. Before Slade's Broadway hit the network, of course, had decided against the series. That's pretty funny, too.
