

Support applauded by new Miss Idaho

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls area is the mainstay support for the Miss Idaho Pageant, according to Teri Harding, the new Miss Idaho 1975.

The Heyburn girl, who was crowned Miss Idaho Saturday night in Boise, said today that to people from Twin Falls the pageant is "still very important."

She said persons involved with the pageant in Boise have stated the state's strongest support for the contest comes from Twin Falls and that if this city were to drop its support the contest probably would lose its importance.

Teri was crowned Miss Twin Falls before entering the statewide contest. She said she originally entered the pageant because of the "scholarship opportunities and the self-improvement which I felt was very important."

"It was so exciting that night. The feeling is something that can't be expressed with words — it's such an honor," Miss Harding said to describe her initial reaction Saturday to being crowned. But the full impact of being Miss Idaho "really hasn't hit me yet," she said.

As Miss Idaho Teri will represent the state at the Miss America pageant in Atlantic City, N.J. late this summer.

Dissension produces move to drop probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House Rules Committee member said today he will propose abolishing a special House CIA investigating committee because it has been torn by dissension.

Rep. B. F. Sisk, D-Calif., said he would introduce the resolution to disband the House select committee on Intelligence because of a move by five of the committee's seven Democrats forcing the resignation of the chairman, Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich.

Both the House and Senate established similar committees earlier this year to investigate allegations the Central Intelligence Agency illegally conducted domestic surveillance and plotted assassinations of foreign leaders. President Ford set up his own commission to probe the charges.

The allegations developed new political overtones Sunday when Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, who headed Ford's CIA investigation, hinted there was evidence that former President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Robert, may have known of the assassination plots.

Although the Rockefeller commission issued its report last week and the Senate committee investigation is well underway, the House probe has been stalled by a dispute which peaked last Friday when Nedzi announced his resignation.

That resignation was to come before the full House today with a vote expected on whether to accept or reject it. A vote to reject would leave Nedzi as chairman and the Democrats who sought his ouster still members of the panel.

But Sisk, a member of the Rules Committee that established the House investigating panel, said his proposal would provide a better solution.

"This will put the issue back before us (the Rules Committee) and there are a couple of possibilities I have in mind," Sisk said. "One of Sisk's alternatives would be to transfer the select panel's authority to the House Judiciary Committee. The other would be to create a new select committee "limiting its jurisdiction to the CIA and its life to three to six months," Sisk said.

The present committee was given wide authority to investigate all intelligence agencies of the government, including the CIA. Democrats on the panel criticized Nedzi because he failed to take action after being briefed more than a year ago by the CIA about its involvement in the overthrow of foreign governments.

Sisk said he was acting on his own in proposing abolishing the committee. "But," he added, "there are a number of members who feel I do and that includes a number of the members of the rules committee."

Both Rockefeller and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., agreed in separate broadcast interviews Sunday that none of the CIA activities were "undertaken" without White House approval.

Italian Reds lead in early returns
ROME (UPI) — The Communist party jumped to an early lead today in the showdown test of strength against the dominant Christian Democrats in Italy's regional elections, early returns showed.

Two days of voting to elect 15 of Italy's 20 regional councils pitted the Christian Democrats against the largest Communist party in the West on the issue of whether Italy should turn sharply to the left.

Harrington denied filed on CIA
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A deeply divided House Armed Services Committee voted 16 to 13 today to deny Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., access to secret information about the Central Intelligence Agency because he once leaked some documents to the news media.

Harrington, a member of a special House CIA investigating committee and a long time opponent of CIA secrecy, said the outcome of the vote was "predictable" and "not surprising."

Parley up or off?
MOSCOW (UPI) — Communist Party Leader Leonid Brezhnev, 68, told newsmen Sunday he is in good health but wants to delay his meeting with President Ford until after a European security conference.

Brezhnev made one of his rare public appearances to vote. At the same time in Washington, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said a Brezhnev-Ford meeting may have to be delayed until there is progress on a new arms limitation agreement.

Lisbon armed forces tighten security
LISBON (UPI) — The military mounted extra security precautions today to prevent the possibility of antigovernment attacks in response to talks about junking the coalition cabinet and curtailing the political parties.

Supreme Court says US lawyers must obey antitrust statutes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court in a decision that may affect bar associations in 34 states, ruled 8 to 0 today that the legal profession must abide by federal antitrust regulations.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the Court said members of the "learned professions" — such as lawyers and doctors — are subject to federal laws against price fixing the same as businessmen in trade or commerce occupations.

The case involved a Fairfax County, Va. couple who filed suit against the county bar association after being told that a minimum fee must be paid to search the title of the house they wanted to buy. The practice was dropped in Virginia after the suit was filed.

The opinion said the minimum fee schedule for examining a property title "is a service; the exchange of such a service for money is 'commerce' in the most common usage of that word."

Furthermore, the opinion said, the fee schedule in question resulted in "a fixed, rigid price floor" from which it was impossible for a potential home buyer to escape.

It pointed out that a title examination is indispensable to the financing of a real estate purchase, and that in this case an attorney licensed to practice in Virginia is the only one who may legally examine a title.

The ruling was the first time the Court has addressed itself to whether federal laws against price fixing apply to the "learned professions."

The only justice who did not participate in the decision was Lewis F. Powell Jr.

Idaho attorneys operated under similar conditions "several years ago," according to attorney Robert C. Paine, Twin Falls, immediate past president of the Fifth Judicial District Bar Association.

Paine said that an "advisory" fee schedule had been set up for uncertain legal services in Idaho, although the schedule was not mandatory and no lawyer had been brought before the Idaho Bar Association's ethics committee for charging less than the schedule suggested.

While the Goldfarb case was in the courts, a U.S. Department of Justice official talked to state bar officials, advising them that such a schedule could violate anti-trust laws, Paine said.

Lawyers in Idaho, however, were "given a clean bill of health" by the Justice Department, Paine said, but the state bar association decided to abolish the list of suggested fees anyway.

The case now returns to U.S. District Judge Albert V. Bryan Jr. in Alexandria, Va., who will determine damages not only for the Goldfarbs but for 2,400 others who bought homes in Reston — a new town near Washington, D.C.

The opinion said the fee schedule in question was not merely advisory but resulted in "a fixed, rigid price floor," from which persons buying homes "could not realistically escape."

It pointed out that a title examination is indispensable to the financing of a real estate purchase, and only an attorney licensed to practice in Virginia may legally examine a title.

The opinion also noted that interstate commerce is sufficiently affected for Sherman Act purposes because a significant amount of the funds furnished for financing home purchases in Fairfax County comes from outside the state.

Ads for legal abortion services gain OK from US Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today struck down state laws forbidding newspapers to publish advertisements for legal abortion services.

The decision overturns the Idaho law which makes it a felony for anyone besides licensed physicians and their medical assistants to advertise or publish notices on abortions.

In the 7-2 decision, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said the First Amendment is violated by a Virginia law "since changed — barring publications, lectures and advertisements that might prompt or encourage abortions."

The ruling reversed the conviction of Jeffrey C. Bigelow, former editor of an "underground" newspaper published in Charlottesville, Va.

Bigelow's paper, which no longer exists, published an advertisement for a New York City abortion clinic in 1971 and Bigelow was prosecuted under the state law.

The state supreme court affirmed his conviction, holding that advertising is not entitled to First Amendment protection.

Government sources said this may mean an early closing of the 25 U.S. military bases in Turkey. They said the government may soon announce a timetable for the closure.

The Security Council, a semi-military consultative body, met for seven hours under President Fahri Koruturk to discuss the embargo imposed by the U.S. Congress.

The Court said the abortion services advertisement was not only commercial, but was informative.

"Viewed in its entirety, the advertisement conveyed information of potential interest and value to a diverse audience," Blackmun said, "not only to readers possibly in need of the services offered, but also to those with a general curiosity about, or genuine interest in, the subject matter or the law of another state and its development, and to readers seeking reform in Virginia."

Therefore, Bigelow's interest in printing the ad "coincided with the constitutional interests of the general public" to be informed, Blackmun said.

He said since the abortions advertised were legal in New York, although not in Virginia when Bigelow was prosecuted, the state could not limit the advertising.

Times-News advertising manager Willey Dodds said today the paper would not publish advertisements for abortions, but might consider publishing advertisements for abortion counseling.

But Dodds said all ads would be strictly scrutinized and added, "We would be very, very, very careful."

Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented, joined by Byron White. Rehnquist said the advertisement was a "classic commercial proposition directed towards the exchange of services rather than the exchange of ideas."

Rehnquist agreed with the state supreme court that the state had an interest in regulating abortion ads "to ensure that pregnant women in Virginia who decide to have abortions come to their decisions without the commercial advertising pressure usually incident to the sale of a box of soap powder."

Cuba returning hijack ransom

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Cuban government has agreed to return a $2 million ransom obtained by skyjackers in 1972 from Southern Airways, Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., announced today.

In a letter to McGovern, Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro said his government has decided to give "a positive answer" to requests that the money be returned.

McGovern said he received the letter from Castro Friday. Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and McGovern, who met with Castro in March, have in the past argued for return of the money.

Castro's letter said he found those arguments "to be reasonable."

McGovern, who met with Castro on March 6 and 7, urged the money be returned and presented a letter from Sparkman similarly urging that action.

"Finding Sen. Sparkman's arguments to be reasonable and having in mind even more the actions of the senator (McGovern) against the unjust blockade imposed on our country and the interest that you demonstrated in this case in your recent trip to Cuba, we have communicated to Sen. Sparkman the decision that the Revolutionary Government of Cuba is giving a positive answer to that request," Castro's letter said.

A Southern Airways DC9 plane was skyjacked in November, 1972, and flown to Cuba with $2 million demanded and given to the hijackers.

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkey's National Security Council said today the U.S. arms embargo violated American agreements with Turkey and that Turkey must revise her military commitments to the United States.

Arab guerrillas hit Yuval

YUVAL, Israel (UPI) — It was early morning when watchman Bezalel Mordechal spotted a group of Arab guerrillas crawling through the fence around the Israeli frontier settlement of Yuval. The guerrillas opened fire with rifles and bazookas, wounded Mordechal and rushed to the shelter of the nearest house — occupied by the family of his brother, Ya'acov.

In the ensuing drama at the farm settlement Sunday, two Israelis were killed and six wounded. All four Palestinian guerrillas died.

Israeli retaliated with air and artillery strikes against the Lebanese town of Kfir Chouba, described by Israel as a staging area for guerrilla raids.

A Lebanese military spokesman in Beirut said one woman was killed and three persons wounded at the nearby deserted town a mile north of the border.

A guerrilla spokesman in Beirut said an Israeli Phantom fighter-bomber was shot down and the two crewmen failed to bail out of the flaming warplane.

The guerrillas also fired rockets at the Israeli coastal town of Nehariyah Sunday night, wounding two persons and damaging a house, the Tel Aviv command said.

The commandos shelled Metullah, Israel's northernmost town, at midnight Sunday, but there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage.

An Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said the raid against Yuval was aimed at "undermining the diplomatic efforts" of President Ford.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said the guerrillas barricaded the door of Ya'acov's home and opened fire on his family huddled in the building.

Nehemia Yosef-Chai, Ya'acov's 19-year-old brother-in-law, was killed when he tried to close the door of the room where his sister, Simcha, two of her sons and her father were hiding.

Ya'acov, who had been driving a bus in nearby Kiryat Shemona, rushed back to the village and joined Israeli troops encircling the besieged building.

The Arabs demanded the release of Greek Catholic

Archbishop Hilarion Capucel, imprisoned for smuggling weapons to guerrillas in Israeli-occupied territory.

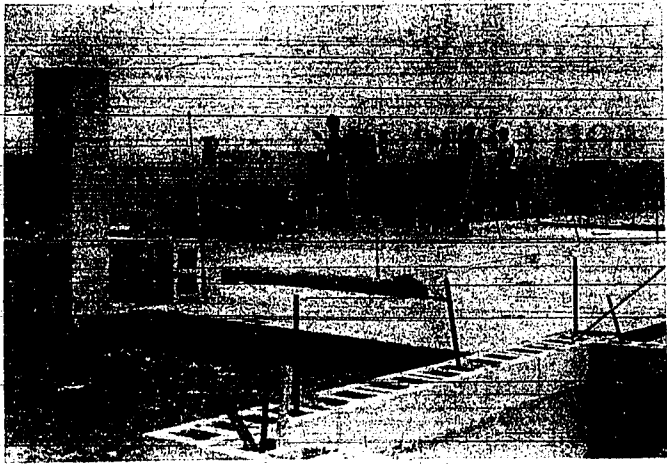

The army ignored the demands and stormed the house. Ya'acov, a reserve officer, joined the attack and was killed by a grenade.

Those wounded were Mrs. Mordechal, 22; her 7-month-old son, Assaf; her father, Yosef Chai Vilzhak; her brother, Yosef Chai Avraham, and an Israeli army officer. None was reported in critical condition.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres, who visited the village, defended Israel's policy of refusing to negotiate with guerrillas holding captives.

Acupuncture shown effective

Washington Daily News Service
WASHINGTON — Acupuncture, offered at least a 50 per cent reduction in pain a month after treatment for one-third of a group of patients suffering from headaches, backaches and other chronic disorders, according to a study released today.

The study was conducted by a research group at the University of Florida and the Veterans Hospital at Gainesville, Fla.

The Chinese art of healing with needles was used on 261 patients who suffered from chronic pain that had not been relieved by either drugs or surgery. The patients, who suffered from arthritis, neuralgia (shooting pains in the face), headaches and low back pain, were given a series of four treatments and asked for weeks later to report the degree of relief they had experienced.

According to the study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, 17 per cent reported a 50 per cent reduction in pain, and 18 per cent reported a 75 per cent reduction.

House panel to be junked?

By WILLIAM J. EATON

WASHINGTON — A move to abolish the House Select Committee on Intelligence as a gesture of support for resigned Chairman Lucien N. Neitzel (D-Mich.) is gaining powerful support in the House.

Up to today over Neitzel's departure may turn into a showdown on the House's desire to investigate misconduct by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Rep. Sam Stratton (D-N.Y.) has said he will force a roll vote on whether the House should accept Neitzel's resignation as chairman of the 10-member panel.

The purpose is to show confidence in the Michigan Democrat and repudiate the "communistism" that Stratton says forced Neitzel to resign.

If the House rejects the resignation, Stratton said, other senior members are planning to introduce a resolution to abolish the select committee and end its investigation of the CIA, FBI, Internal Revenue Service and other intelligence agencies.

Neitzel said in an interview that he would adopt a "hands off" position toward the vote on his resignation but would not resume the chairmanship under any conditions.

"The public interest would best be served now by another committee with a new chairman and a new membership," he declared.

The uproar over Neitzel's departure has split the House. Those who support him say that other Democrats on the panel would conduct an irresponsible inquiry into the CIA's secrets.

Rebelling Democrats on the committee, however, contend that pro-CIA forces in the House are taking advantage of Neitzel's popularity to squelch the investigation.

"If they want to engage in a cover up and they don't want to tamper with a little murder, a little wiretapping, a little mail-opening, that's real cool," said Rep. Ronald V. Dellums (D-Calif.), with sarcasm.

"The establishment is rising — and that's lots of powerful people," said Rep. Robert Glavin (D-Conn.).

Stratton countered that there was no need for a House inquiry since a Senate investigation led by Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho) was already under way and the House probe might "damage the CIA and Congress."

Rep. Andrew Young (D-Ga.), a black liberal, also gave support to Neitzel on grounds he would have a fair presiding officer.

A former top aide to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., in the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Young said:

"I figure they (the CIA) have been persecuting me for 10 years but they don't deserve to be railroaded."

Greeting Neitzel in the speaker's lobby just off the House floor, Young said: "Hang in there, Lu."

Giulmo, Dellums and others, however, pictured the resigned chairman as a bitter opponent of Rep. Michael Harrington (D-Mass.), arch-critic of the CIA and a member of the intelligence committee.

"It was Neitzel's efforts to keep Harrington off the CIA subcommittee," they contended, that torpedoed an agreement on how the CIA phase of the inquiry would be conducted.

Giulmo said Neitzel was aware of the CIA misdeeds for years as chairman of the House Select Service subcommittee but never told other members of the committee about the illegal activities.

Since oversight of the CIA is one of the issues before the investigation, Giulmo said, Neitzel clearly was not qualified to judge his own conduct in this regard.

Neitzel and others suspect Harrington because, they charge, he broke house rules by disclosing classified information about CIA efforts to undermine the regime of Chilean President Salvador Allende. Harrington denies he leaked the material to newspapers.

Albert challenged by unhappy Demos

Washington Daily News Service
WASHINGTON — A debate over House Speaker Carl Albert's ability to lead Congressional Democrats is set to erupt in a series of closed-door meetings this week.

"The mood is foul," Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Cal.), chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said in an interview.

Burton has called a caucus of all 289 House Democrats on Wednesday morning, at which the leadership issue to be raised by a number of members angry and frustrated over a successive string of legislative defeats the party has suffered in the past month at the hands of President Ford and the Republican minority.

The 15-member freshman class of Democrats in the House, the center of most of the anti-Albert discontent, plans to meet Tuesday night to discuss "matters of unity and leadership," said a House spokesman.

Other House Democrats have been invited

'Scenario' set for drug agency probe

By DAVID MURRAY

Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — The scenario (to use a word favored by inhabitants of this intrigue-happy souk) now unfolding in the Senate about scandal and high-lights-in-high-places in the sensitive Drug Enforcement Administration is already sufficient to inspire yet another "Washington novel."

Here are some of the ingredients that have come to light, and more are promised as the hearings go on before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations:

— Item: The administrator of the central agency in the government's "war on drugs" is charged with hiding information from his own subordinates and with limiting the scope of an investigation into alleged cover-up of improper activities by highly placed assistants.

— Item: A close friend of the administrator, the agency's public relations director and former Washington Redskins star, is charged with being on overly friendly terms with racketeers and ex-convicts, some of whom may be involved with the narcotics racket themselves.

— Item: A shadowy figure described as a "consultant" to DEA officials, who operates out of a law office in Newark, N.J., appears to be a go-between for top DEA officials and at least one of those under investigation.

— Item: Underlings of Billionaire Howard Hughes, headquartered in Las Vegas hotels, are charged with giving money to federal agents so that they could disport themselves at the gambling tables and perhaps get close to top figures in the narcotics racket.

The existence of these characters, together with names and numbers, emerged in the first three days of testimony before the Senate panel, with more to come.

— Item: Promised before the hearings end this summer.

So far, the allegations have been scathed by Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), the subcommittee chairman, "a classical coverup," Andrew C. Tartaglino, a top DEA official and the man who blew the whistle on corruption in the agency's New York office, said it appeared to be "another Watergate."

"What has been charged so far is this: DEA set up in 1973 by President Nixon as the exclusive agency to run the 'war on drugs,' has been itself been guilty of mismanagement at the top echelons. This mismanagement has resulted in DEA's top officials being increasingly concerned with the agency's public image, to the extent that charges of scandal have been covered up.

In addition, the recently fired administrator, John R. Bartels, was said to have been principally interested in sidetracking the committee's investigation and concentrating on low-level 'street pusher' arrests to enhance DEA's appearance of effectiveness.

Sen. Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) says the concentration on low-level arrests, without a corresponding crackdown on importation of illicit drugs, principally heroin, has become "a street-level operation" with little value aside from "looking good on someone's personnel record."

In addition, a subcommittee staff study charged, millions of dollars — 95 per cent of the money allocated to buy drugs to be used as evidence has never been recovered. Where has it gone? Staff members ask. Has it disappeared back into the underworld or has some of it made its way into the pockets of a few corrupt agents?

Most of the testimony so far has centered on the actions of Bartels, Vincent Promuto, the former public-affairs director, Thomas E. Durkin Jr., the Newark "consultant," and one Miss De Vito, who has been seen in the company of both Bartels and Promuto, predominantly under the Fifth Amendment when she testified in executive session recently. She gave her name, but that was about all. Indeed, one committee staff member said she had a number of aliases, including Dian Scruggs, Dian Lyons and Dian Berger.

According to her lawyer, she declined to answer the committee's questions because of a drug investigation in which she is currently figuring in California.

When it became known that she, along with underworld figures, were associating with Promuto, DEA's Deputy Chief paid or unpaid consultant.

When the subcommittee investigation began to get close to Promuto, staff members said, he was transferred to the DEA New York office. Brogan was "temporarily" moved out of his job as chief investigator, after a series of stormy sessions with Bartels, to a job at the Justice Department, which was supposed to be the parent agency of DEA.

amount of heroin recovered in these raids and arrests is minuscule compared with what comes into the country from Europe, the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

The suggestion is that the formation of a DEA — as a "supersubagency" — froze out the Bureau of Customs, which has access to foreign intelligence and knowledge of techniques about stopping drugs as they came into the country.

The result — and this is what the subcommittee is chiefly interested in pinpointing — is that heroin addiction is again on the rise and that little appears to be getting done to stop it.

Andrew C. Tartaglino, a top DEA official and the man who blew the whistle on corruption in the agency's New York office, said it appeared to be 'another Watergate.'

Inspector George B. Brogan ordered an investigation.

Brogan testified that he was instructed by Bartels, through intermediaries, to restrict himself to charges already made against Promuto and to open up no new lines of inquiry. In addition, in a departure from standard investigative practice, he was not to interrogate Promuto but was instead to give him only a written questionnaire.

Durkin, according to Brogan, handed most of the liaison between the investigation and Brogan. On one occasion, as well, Brogan and other chief DEA officials were ordered to go to Newark to confer with Brogan about the subcommittee investigation.

Durkin suggested at that meeting that what Brogan called a "sham" briefing be set up for members of Congress, at which time Bartels could draw Jackson aside and assure him that everything was fine at DEA.

Durkin, according to Brogan and the subcommittee staff, does not appear on the DEA table of organization as either

As for Bartels, he was fired by President Ford after a number of published reports about the alleged scandals in

New battle looms over land use bill

By PETER BERNSTEIN

Washington Daily News Service
WASHINGTON — Congress is preparing for a new battle over land use legislation that the Ford administration opposes. Prospects for its passage, considered slight a month ago, are even less now in the aftermath of the strip-mining bill's defeat.

Opponents of the land use measure, spearheaded by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, feel that land use decisions should continue to be made at the local level without any state or federal involvement.

Rep. Sam Steiger (R-Ariz.), a key Congressional opponent of the bill, warns that passage of the measure would be the "first step on the road toward more public control over the use of private property."

The House Interior Committee is scheduled to meet next week to take final action on the bill. Steiger and other opponents of the measure barely failed in their first attempt to kill the bill when the committee voted 22 to 20, last month. They are currently applying strong pressure on several "swing" committee members to prevent the bill from reaching the House floor.

Proponents of the bill voice concern that it might encounter the same fate as last year's land use measure, which was reported out by the committee but was narrowly rejected by the House.

This year Rep. Morris K. Udall (D-Ariz.), chief sponsor of the bill, has offered a modified version known as the Land Use Planning and Resource Conservation Act.

Funding would total $500 million over six years, with grants made on a 75 per cent federal, 25 per cent state matching basis. Funding for the 1976 fiscal year, starting July 1, would be $50 million.

To qualify for initial funding, a state would establish an agency to develop and administer a land use program.

After three years, a state would have to designate areas of "critical state concern" and establish a process for reviewing land use decisions that affect these critical areas as well as other areas involving "key facilities," "large-scale subdivisions," and "developments of regional impact." States also would have to inventory agricultural lands and establish policies to encourage their protection and long-term productivity.

Udall said the bill emphasizes local government, involvement and opportunities for public participation. The measure, he said, would involve the federal government only in a review of procedural mechanisms and would specifically bar federal review of actual state or local decisions.

"Land use is perhaps the key to solving our problems of air and water pollution, solid waste disposal and urban sprawl, which have proven to be so terribly wasteful in terms of energy," Udall said.

Little talk of Watergate on 3rd anniversary

Copper mine

POURING PENNIES from bag is George Podd, president of Chicago's Old Orchard Bank, who received $50,000 of the coins from a woman who bought them last year as a speculative venture in copper prices. She sold them back to the bank after reading of its effort to alleviate the penny shortage. (UPI)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the eve of the third anniversary of the Watergate break-in, about the only place in Washington you can hear anyone talk about it regularly is on the set of a movie being shot on location.

At the Federal courthouse, just off Pennsylvania Avenue, the third and final Watergate grand jury still hears witnesses. But there is little likelihood of dramatic new indictments before the grand jury term expires July 3.

Five men were arrested inside the Democratic National Committee quarters at the Watergate complex early Saturday, June 17, 1972. The subsequent chain of events resulted in the first resignation of a President in the nation's history.

But there are important links to that chain still hidden from public view. Among the unanswered questions:

—Who was responsible for the 18½ minute gap in the tape of the key conversation former President Nixon had with his chief of staff, H.R. "Bob" Feltman, on June 20, 1972 — three days after the break-in?

—What were the circumstances surrounding the secret fund allegedly controlled by Nixon's good friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo?

—Was there a relationship between Nixon and billionaire Howard Hughes, who gave Rebozo $100,000 for the President's re-election?

—Who was responsible for the faulty transcripts of the White House tapes given to the House Judiciary Committee during its impeachment inquiry?

There are even more fundamental questions, which likely will never be answered.

As Sen. Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., asked so often during the 1973 Senate hearings: What did the President know and when did he know it? The tapes which led to Nixon's resignation Aug. 8 pushed the date of his knowledge to five days after the break-in. Did Nixon know of the bugging in advance?

—What was the purpose of the burglary? Watergate led to the worst political crisis in American history. Given that risk, which the plotters must have assessed in advance, what was so valuable at Democratic headquarters?

A spokesman for Special Prosecutor Henry Ruth says indictments could be forthcoming from other grand juries—even after the final Watergate grand jury expires. But he said there is a big difference between the possibility and likelihood of indictments.

The great bulk of the prosecution is over, and the toll comes to more than 50, including three of Nixon's Cabinet members and 20 of his White House and re-election aides.

There are a couple of other Watergate spinoff trials to come and more appeals to the like Haldeman's assistant Gordon Strachan who had joined the White House re-election committee only to get caught up in its zeal to insure another election victory.

But others' lives go on. Like Frank Willis, the young security guard who found the suspicious taped doors at the Watergate complex on the morning of June 17. Out of work for a time after the break-in, Willis is now selling the only person to play himself in the movie.

Mars colonies eyed

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — If man ever decides to leave earth en masse, where to?

The planet Mars — with proper irrigation — is one possibility, scientists say. Another is a man-made planetoid.

These were among ideas before 25 university and government experts gathered today at the high-security Ames Research Center for a study of "the visionary concept of cities in space" — a comparison of ideas on where human beings could best emigrate outside earth's environment.

"The group will concentrate on reducing theory to engineering, social and economic considerations to see what really would be needed to send human colonies to new homes in space," said a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility.

It is at Ames that radio telescopes constantly scan the universe for signs of Intelligent life.

One consideration is an orbiting community in a space habitat proposed by Princeton University's Dr. Gerard O'Neill. Such an artificial planetoid could be made by using raw materials from the moon or asteroids.

One built, said O'Neill, the planetoid could be the base for construction of a collector of solar energy, which would be converted to electricity and beamed by microwave to Earth.

Patty, pals vow long 'sane' fight

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fugitives Patty Hearst and Bill and Emily Harris, in a secret letter Harris sent to a close friend, say they are not "mad revolutionaries," but intend to fight "sane, calculatedly" for the rest of their lives.

The four-page, typewritten letter, published in part in the Los Angeles Times Sunday, was sent to an undisclosed friend last year. The friend said the letter, which broke the year-long silence of the last remnants of the Symbionese Liberation Army, was mailed in Boston last October.

The friend said the letter had not been shown to law enforcement officials for fear it might contain clues that could lead to the capture of the HARRIS and Miss Hearst.

Harris said the three are adjusting to life in the underground and do not expect to be free until "all exploited and oppressed people are free."

"There are many things that I used to enjoy doing that I can no longer afford to do; many people I love dearly whom I can no longer be with," Harris wrote.

"These changes do not make me sad; but only angry that you and I can no longer argue over ideology together and we cannot embrace."

Harris said he, his wife and Miss Hearst were involved in rigorous guerrilla training to help them continue their war against "Imperialist America."

"Don't let your concern for my life and safety make you weak. Pull for us, support us, because in the end we are going to win! I want people to place less emphasis on worry that we'll be killed," he added. "Of course we face death ... (but) everyone should understand that to single us out for concern because we are white and middle class, from 'good families,' is essentially an example of racism and classism."

"We aren't special!"

There was no indication if there had been any other communication between Harris and his friend.

Ford's crime message due in Congress

Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — President Ford's long-awaited crime message is scheduled to go to Congress this week, and sources indicated it would include proposals for mandatory minimum sentences, handgun control and a $50-million fund to help high-crime areas.

Other proposals include compensation for victims of crime, fines for corporate executives whose firms are convicted of price-fixing and new emphasis in federal-aid programs on improvement of state criminal courts.

Ford is again expected to focus attention on the repeat offender, whom he has described as the "core of the problem" of crime.

White House officials said that consideration was being given to inviting Prof. James Q. Wilson of Harvard to participate in explaining the crime message's "philosophy" to reporters when the message is unveiled.

That philosophy, which Wilson first described to Ford in January, is that attacking the sociological causes of crime and trying to rehabilitate offenders has not worked to reduce the crime rate and that so-called career criminals should be removed from society for a period.

Wilson's theory is that crime rates can be cut sharply because such repeat offenders are not on the streets to commit new crimes. Making punishment sure and swift, according to Wilson, has a bonus in deterrence.

One device apparently rejected by the Ford administration for addition to the federal criminal code — but recommended for testing by the states — is so-called flat-time sentences, whereby convicted offenders are put in jail for a specific period without hope of parole or early release.

Instead, Ford is expected to call for certain serious federal crimes to carry mandatory minimum sentences, so that convicted offenders will be kept off the streets for at least a limited time.

Ford has complained in the past that, in New York half the persons convicted of felonies receive no detention whatsoever. Mandatory sentencing is designed as an answer to the problem of the federal level.

Many of Ford's proposals are expected to be recommended for inclusion in legislation designated S-1, currently in a Senate subcommittee, which is a reauthorization of federal criminal law. Ford is expected to endorse reauthorizing the criminal code.

One particularly controversial section of the bill — dealing with protection of classified information — is also expected to be dealt with by Ford.

Senate sources said they understood that Ford would not go so far as to endorse the much-disputed section of the present bill that would make it a crime for government workers to disclose broadly defined "national defense information" to persons unauthorized to receive it, including newspaper reporters.

The Senate sources said Ford was expected to be "flexible" in his recommendations, so that a recently devised tightening of the definition of "national defense information" might achieve administration support.

Ford's handgun proposal is expected to be limited to outlawing of so-called "Saturday-night specials."

Senate sources said Ford had been urged to establish lighter standards for dispensing of funds under the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration program to aid states, but that the recommendations apparently were rejected, except for limited cases.

White House sources said that Wilson, who is disturbed that LEAA money has been spent with too little attention paid to actual results, but that Ford's belief in the concept of no-strings-attached revenue sharing for states interfered with alteration of the basic LEAA design.

But the crime message is expected to contain two proposals to focus LEAA programs.

Paris shuffle eyed

PARIS (UPI) — Premier Jacques Chirac's unexpected resignation from the post of general secretary of the main Gaullist party touched off reports today of a possible cabinet reshuffle or even an early parliamentary election.

Chirac sprang a surprise on French majority and opposition groups alike Sunday when he told the Congress of the Union for the Defense of the Republic that he was stepping down as their general secretary.

His announcement stunned the 6,000 delegates to the UDR convention in the Mediterranean resort of Nice. He made it at the close of a rousing speech extolling traditional nationalist virtues of the Gaullist program that brought the delegates cheering to their feet.

Chirac's resignation was as surprising as was his election to the post, engineered in secrecy last Dec. 14 in the ruling executive committee on the grounds the UDR needed a firm hand to reestablish discipline among its bickering factions. The premier said Sunday his unifying task has been largely accomplished.

ROME (UPI) — Italians are voting in crucial regional elections expected to test the strength of the Communist campaign for a majority in the coalition government.

The two-day voting, which began Sunday, provided a showdown between the Christian Democratic-led coalition and the largest Communist party in the West.

But election officials said many Italians took advantage of the warm, sunny weather Sunday to pass up the first day of voting and visit the beach.

A total of 74.1 per cent of the electoral vote Sunday, a drop of two per cent from the last regional elections in 1970.

Based limit under fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Heavy opposition was expected from fiscal conservatives in the House today on proposals to lift the temporary limit on the debt ceiling to $81.6 billion.

The House, where appropriations measures originate, is considering a provision to raise the temporary limit by $5.1 billion.

The permanent debt ceiling is $400 billion, but it has been steadily upped on a "temporary" basis each year to its present level of $531 billion. Unless extended, the government would be unable to borrow to meet its obligations.

Viet refugees attempt to make new life in US

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The first time I walked the streets of the city, I felt uneasy. When I realized nobody paid any attention to me—a Vietnamese refugee—I regained my composure. But I fell lost. That feeling soon faded. I tried to be casual and, difficult as it was, act like an American from an American city, and at the same time take delight in all the marvels of daily life. My wife, our two sons and I found...with much relief the warmth of an American family; the good food found when we looked for it, the captivating color television. We also faced with fright the California freeways. When we came to the United States at night, we, like thousands of other Vietnamese refugees, saw only lights, dark silhouettes of houses and more houses and the unending and continuously vibrant freeways. It was when we got out of Camp Pendleton more than a month ago that our real American life first began. Since then, we have not ceased to learn, to be surprised and sometimes to be frustrated. The hasty evacuation, the long flights from camp to camp across the Pacific Ocean ended on the California coast where the early spring cold hit us like a cold shower. The American soil was a destination many of us never had thought of. We only hoped we could be settled in some country in Asia. We never had time to think of what was happening, nor did we have time to rest. We all had upset stomachs because of the different food and beverages given to us and because each time we had to eat fast after standing in line under the sun or in the cold for an hour or so.

At Wake Island, it was wared beans, scrambled eggs, bacon and rice at breakfast, lunch and dinner. At Camp Pendleton, we ate strict GI rations and for background, the bare hills all around. That was all we knew of America.

In one day we moved from the quonset huts in the camp to a luxurious hotel with swimming pool, air conditioning and standard food. The change was staggering.

We rented an apartment in suburban Montebello. By that time our two sons already had toured Disneyland, driven by homes of Hollywood stars and down famous Sunset Strip, and saw the Pacific Ocean and the Los Angeles zoo.

"I am so tired to try to follow the conversation in English and to try to speak it," said my wife one day after a down town bus tour. As for the boys, they just fell asleep before dinner came.

My wife has scoured the supermarkets, the clothing departments and screened the classified ads in newspaper.

"There were not many things I can do here," she said after returning from a supermarket. "Everything we bought for meals was ready for cooking. The markets are clean and the food is plenty and rich."

But she did not dare fix American food yet.

"It's too complex of too tricky to make and the taste is so different from our Vietnamese meals," she said.

The elimination of the normal three-hour sita ruined most of our first days in the United States. In Vietnam, all work stopped for three hours and even a no-government rioters halted their demonstrations for lunch and a nap.

Resettlement progress drags

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fewer than 30 percent of the 131,000 refugees from South Vietnam are now living with their American sponsors, and about the same number are still at U.S. bases in the Pacific waiting transfer to the United States.

State Department officials in charge of the resettlement program say that at the rate they are leaving the refugee camps may be cleared by October.

Saturday there were 35,000 refugees out of the system, one official said.

That means they are out of the camps and living with their American sponsors, except for 17,000 who chose to go to 22 different countries.

Refugees are leaving the camps at a rate of about 800 a day. Anything over 800 would empty the camps completely by October, the official said.

The department said 89 of Saturday there were 58,992 refugees being processed at four centers in the continental United States—and 36,332 waiting at staging centers in Guam, Wake Island, the Philippines and Thailand.

The refugees included 22,680 at Fort Chaffee, Ark.; 17,280 at Camp Pendleton, Calif.; 4,203 at the Air Force Base, Fla.; and 14,829 at Indian Town Gap reservation, Pa.

Officials said there were 98,767 in Guam, 7,043 at Wake Island and 7,822 at the U.S. naval station at Subic Bay. In the Philippines "and a handful at U Tiniao, Thailand, and Clark Air Force base in the Philippines.

State Department officials were irritated by charges last week by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., that the resettlement program had turned into a "shambles" because of "a lack of leadership."

"That report concerned only the gripes," one State Department official said. "We have had in effect to throw up six entirely new cities caused by the collapse of Cambodia and South Vietnam, the official said.

"Now we are being scolded for not having them working perfectly."

"Everyone has been sheltered and fed, and there have been no major health problems."

Reports from Fort Chaffee and Camp Pendleton indicate some refugees are reluctant to leave the security of their bases.

Job program funds expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department says it will release almost half a billion dollars for 840,400 summer jobs for young people when President Ford signs bill providing the money.

The legislation was passed by Congress last week and the White House said Friday President Ford will sign it. The White House rarely indicates ahead of time what action the President will take on a bill and the announcement was considered a sign of how important the bill is to the President.

The job program earlier was included in another and broader bill Ford vetoed because he feared an inflationary impact.

The summer job program will provide 9 to 12 weeks of employment at wages of at least $2.10 hourly for you the aged 14 through 21. The jobs are intended for young people from economically disadvantaged families.

The $456,350,000 will be distributed to 433 state and local government agencies.

2 walk for MIAs

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A young couple trekked 450 miles through the scorching heat of central Nevada in an effort to bring attention to the American servicemen who are still unaccounted for in Vietnam.

The pair ended their 18-day journey Sunday tired and blistered but optimistic that the feat helped accomplish their goal.

Rick Kuhlmeier, 33 and Lora Warner, 28, arrived at the state capitol in mid-afternoon. "People were great along the way," said Kuhlmeier, a student at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. "They went out of their way to be nice."

He said the biggest problems were temperatures that sometimes reached 100 degrees and mosquitoes.

Miss Warner, who works part time and goes part time to school said the biggest expense was $70 to buy ice.

Small columns aid decisions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pogo and his punningly satirical cohorts are retiring, leaving us human beans to find our own way out of the Oketee-Swamp.

The late Walt Kelly's comic strip featuring "the Albus" so alligned agreeable" opinion will end July 20, Kelly's widow Selby, who with her son Stephen has continued the popular series in 200 newspapers since the cartoonist's death in 1973, said the practice of compressing the size of comics to save newspaper has forced her decision.

"It just looks like there's no solution to this space problem," Mrs. Kelly said Saturday. "No more Pogo. That's really a sad thing to me."

Alfred Andriola, creator of "Kerry Drake" and chairman of the Newspaper Comics Council, said shrinking columns have troubled cartoonists for a decade.

"They've gradually been cutting us down to cope with the rapid rise in the cost of newspaper," Andriola said. "They've even been cutting off the bottoms of some strips to squeeze them in and, it just doesn't make for good display."

"When you start cutting down to three columns, it's not worthy of Kelly's quality," said Mrs. Kelly, who referred to her husband by his surname since "it helped me keep him straight from Disney" — Kelly and his wife once worked for Walt Disney.

"Putting a Kelly with as many words and details as he had in a three-column strip makes it look like a postage stamp."

Pogo and his pals, including Albert the Alligator, Churchy and Howland Owl, first appeared in the now defunct New York Star in 1949.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is divorcing his wife (who is very dear to us) to marry the woman with whom he has been having an open affair for the last six months. This situation has caused irreparable damage to our relationship with him. I'm sure we'll never be on completely good terms again. What concerns me now is how to treat this new woman. At the moment, I feel extremely bitter toward her, but I know that if I don't eventually give her at least token acceptance, we will alienate our son completely. I don't want that, I feel that by welcoming this new daughter-in-law into our family, I will in effect be condoning the illicit affair and completely ignoring all the pain and anguish it has caused our present daughter-in-law, her parents and us. To me, this would be hypocritical. I've talked to our minister, a counselor and family. No one has an answer. Do you?

WITHOUT MY NAME

Son's divorce bothers mom

DEAR WITH: Your choice is clear. If you reject your son's new wife, you lose your son. The obvious alternative is to accept her. What your friends and relatives will think is not as important as maintaining at least a cordial relationship with your son and his new wife, since that is what you want. Understandably, it will be less than loving, but give it time. As the French say, "To understand everything is to forgive everything."

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about nudist colonies? CURIOUS IN COVINGTON

DEAR CURIOUS: If the good Lord had intended for man to walk around naked, he would have been born that way.

DEAR ABBY: Today in the supermarket, I was trying to be friendly to a child, and I said, "My, but you're a nice little girl." The child became angry and said, "I'm not a GIRL—I'm a BOY!" Abby, how was I to know? He had long blond hair practically to his shoulders. Now that little girls are wearing trousers, it is terribly confusing. Only last week I mistook a little girl for a boy, and you should have heard her mother tell me off!

PERPLEXED
Abby, when mothers dress both boys and girls in boys' clothing, and let the boys' hair grow long like a girl's, how is one to tell the difference?

DEAR PERPLEXED: It's not easy. But for now, you'd better skip complementing strange kids until unless clothing and hairstyles fade from fashion.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box NO. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please. For Abby's new booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20¢) envelope.

your health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please write something about fatigue and energy. I'm sure that for thousands of people "energy crisis" does not refer to shortages of oil or electricity, but to the awful dragged-out, weary, headachy feeling that takes all the enjoyment out of life. How does a human being produce energy anyway? How can one increase a feeling of well-being and energy? Why should a person feel tired all the time when the doctor says there is no apparent cause? What can a person do beyond an annual medical check-up, a balanced diet, rest, and exercise? WHERE DOES THE ENERGY COME FROM? — Mrs. L.P. Yours is an ambiguous request. As to your individual problem, many points are missing from your letter — your age, build, marital status (widowed?), family, work etc. Physiologically, energy results from the metabolism of the foods we eat, so let's discuss this briefly. You mention a well-balanced diet, rest, exercise and so on. These are fine, but they do not necessarily take into account the many disorders that can account for fatigue.

Energy crisis plagues woman

By George Thosteson
Do your medical checkups include tests for anemia or for thyroid and adrenal function? These can be factors. Infection, too, can be a common and chronic cause of fatigue. Deficiencies in these areas can be treated, and usually successfully. But let us assume that all of these are normal and that you are a fit physiological specimen. You still have the "dragged-out" feeling. This brings us to another important aspect of the problem. It can be very important, for example, how your energy is expended. So we quickly get into the elusive area of the mind, which I would normally prefer to leave in the capable hands of psychologists and psychiatrists. Is your husband a problem, perhaps a heavy drinker, a philanderer, gambler? Are there any sexual frustrations? Are you a loner? Worry and anxiety can cause mental fatigue, often difficult to separate from physical weariness. Do you mix with friends, take vacations? The phrase, "all work and no play makes each a dull boy" applies to women, too, and has real meaning in such situations as you describe. Boredom is a common and potent cause of depression and fatigue. A person doing effortless but rather unchallenging work can appear as exhausted at the end of a day as someone doing heavy but interesting work. Do you have plans for your life? You may be on a day-to-day treadmill: The very drabness of a goalless existence can cause actual physical fatigue. If you find yourself in such a state, and can see yourself in some of the suggestions I've made, then it may be time to find out why you seem so out of step. Life, with all of its problems should, after all, be a pleasant experience, lived out in health and optimism.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send me some information on Burger's exercise for varicose veins. You mentioned this once, but you did not explain how it is done. — J.G. Burger's exercise consists of raising and lowering the leg. The best way to do it is to place a leg rest (about 8 to 10 inches high) at the foot of the bed or couch. A folded-up blanket will do fine. Lying flat on the bed, raise and rest the leg on the object for from 10 to 15 seconds. Next lower the leg below the level of the couch for three minutes. Then rest the leg horizontally (at bed level) for from two to three minutes before repeating the cycle. It is recommended that this be done for about a half hour at a time, repeating the cycle and alternating the legs. Although you mention varicose veins, this exercise is also helpful for those with arterial disease of the lower extremities. The object is to alternately fill and empty blood vessels of the lower leg. Troubled with varicose veins? To make sure you are doing all you can, write Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 3999, Elgin, Ill. 60120, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Deal with Varicose Veins." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

The Educational Arts Association is sponsoring the conference June 25-26 in Seattle, Wash., for some 3,000 educators, parents, therapists, recreation directors and others involved in the creative potential of children and young people.

Mrs. Fraiber, librarian at the O'Leary Junior High School, is one of several Idaho educators who will attend the special session. ## Campers use area

NEW recreation area at Salmon Dam is receiving heavy usage so far this summer. Fishermen and campers are using the new facility, where each campsite unit is complete with a canopy, fireplace, water faucet and garbage can.

New recreation area receives wide usage

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

ROGERSON — The newly completed Salmon Dam Recreation Area is getting wide usage now from fishermen and overnight campers.

More than 75 camping units were counted last week at the site.

Campers may be parked on tents set up under the canopied spots which are complete with table and benches, running water, fireplaces and garbage cans. There are three restroom units in the area.

Further to the south is adequate space for trailer houses with wooden picnic tables and benches nearby, and beyond are the boat landings. The whole area is attractively landscaped with trees and the wild flowers are now in bloom.

The new recreation area was built and has been maintained by the Bureau of Land Management and will be turned over to the Parks and Recreation Board for operation.

Troop history ends

SHOSHONE — After 47 years as an active Boy Scout Charter, Troop 57, Shoshone, sponsored by Weeks-Yaden Post, No. 11, American Legion, will not be re-chartered.

According to Robert Lewin, Legionnaire, the troop is not being re-chartered because only one boy expressed interest in the program.

The original charter for the troop was dated June 11, 1928, and was granted on July 19, 1926. There were 14 boys in the original troop—and over the years there have been many others who have participated in Scouting through this charter.

BLM officials say the Salmon District will conduct the inventory in their own district as well as those in Idaho Falls, Burley and Shoshone. Work is scheduled to be completed by Oct. 1. Purpose of the inventory is to provide the BLM with data on current timber stands to facilitate future timber resource planning, development and management.

Gus Vitellius, Salmon district forester, will be in charge of the project with Ed Jonsson providing day-to-day supervision of a seven-man inventory team.

Similar inventories were conducted in the Boise and Coeur d'Alene districts in the past two years.

Water peaks at Salmon Dam

WATER at the Salmon Dam reservoir is the highest now since 1921. When this picture was taken it measured 73 feet and high reading in 1921 was 73.07. The water is expected to reach its peak soon and then start receding due to heavy usage for irrigation, according to Morris Huffman, manager of the Salmon River Canal Company.

Project on schedule

SHOSHONE — Work on the $427,000 building project for the Bureau of Land Management in Shoshone is on schedule, according to officials.

Construction will be in several phases with this year's expenditures to include installation of utilities, roadways and the office building.

Shops and warehouses will be constructed at a later date.

The contractor, Willis of Twin Falls, has 300 days to complete the first phase with occupancy of the building expected in November.

Work on the project has been slow because rock beds that had to be dynamited to install utilities and lay the footings and foundation for the building. From now on the work is expected to accelerate.

Dam water nears record level

ROGERSON — The Salmon Dam water is now at its highest since 1921, according to Morris Huffman, manager of the Salmon River Canal Co.

The dam measured 73 ft. or 158,500 acre feet on Friday and in 1921 the gauge showed 73.07. The water has been rising about half a foot per day for the last several weeks, according to Huffman.

In June of 1971 and 1972, which also saw high readings at the dam, the gauge registered 72.52, the water master said. There is little danger of the water overflowing the banks, Huffman said, as the water should soon level off due to irrigation uses by farmers, and it would take something entirely unforeseen such as an extremely heavy and sudden rainfall to raise the water over the banks.

Manholes dangerous

SHOSHONE — Citizens of Shoshone are cautioned by city Police Chief John Shaffer to use caution in driving the streets until permanent covers can be placed on sewer lift station manholes.

Vandals took the covers earlier this week in a "rash" of incidents within the city, Shaffer said, and though the stations are temporarily covered and barricades placed over them, a car tire can drop into them if driven over the open area.

The vandals, in addition to taking the lift station covers, uprooted a no U-turn sign and did minor damage in the park.

Bill Trapp, city sewer inspector, said replacement of the lift station covers will run $120.

One cover was taken from the South Apple near the courthouse and the other from the entrance of the alley near the Jack Pagaoga residence in the same section of town.

Fall claims Clayton man

CLAYTON, Idaho (UPI) — Lloyd K. Sobert, 18, Clayton, died over the weekend in a 400 foot fall into the Hoodoo silver mine near Clayton.

Sheriff Sid Teuscher said Sobert was working on the surface when he fell into the shaft Saturday evening. Sobert's body was recovered Sunday.

Lounge burglarized twice

TWIN FALLS — The South Park Lounge was burglarized twice within a few hours Sunday.

Lounge employee Donald Bopp reported the first burglary to police about 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

Investigating officers found the bar had been forcibly entered through a broken window and that a small amount of cash and an undetermined amount of beer had been taken.

Sometime after the officers left and prior to 8:30 a.m. the lounge was entered a second time, through the hole in the window made during the first burglary, and cash was removed from vending machines.

Bopp estimated the total loss from both burglaries at about $40, with damage to the building amounting to about $65.

Chief of Detectives Tim Qualls said today the method of entry and other signs indicated that both burglaries were committed by the same subject or subjects.

Low prices could bring suit

BOISE (UPI) — Service station operators in Boise are threatening to sue Richard Abbott, the proprietor of a Shell service station, because they say he's selling his gas for too low a price.

"Their lawyer told me if my price is not up by Monday, they're going to bring an injunction," Abbott said.

What is angering the cut-rate dealers is not that Abbott draws away customers, but that the other stations are forced to drop their prices. He's held the price or regular gas at 49.9 cents per gallon for six weeks, but he was planning to raise his prices a penny or two this week anyway, before the retailers contacted him.

Discipline eyed in Melba

MELBA, Idaho (UPI) — Melba schools return to basic educational instruction this year by enforcing discipline with that old fashioned "board" of education.

Superintendent Norman D. Winters, who resigned earlier this year because he became disillusioned with permissiveness in education, has agreed to stay on to institute the return to fundamentals.

In an outline for the community on concepts of a fundamental classroom, Winters said "rooms sparkle with creativity and enrichment but the academics are rigorous."

"Students are grouped by ability in math, spelling and reading."

Body identified

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County sheriff's officers tentatively have identified the body of a man found in the Boise River Sunday as that of Richard Nichols, 35, of Ogden, Utah and Rock Springs, Wyo.

Identification was made from documents found on the body. A relative of Nichols was en route to Boise today to make more positive identification.

An autopsy indicated the man drowned 24 to 48 hours before his body was discovered near the Farmers Union Canal diversion dam Sunday morning by Mark Alverson, 18, and Kevin Hunt, 15, both Boise, who were fishing near the dam.

Deputy Coroner Kent Byers said there were no indications of foul play.

Accident claims mother, daughter

The Idaho State Police identified the victims as Karen L. Lengel, 30, and Michelle Lingel, 6, both of Payette.

TF city fire unit won't take over rural duties

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Fire Department won't take over fighting rural fires for the defunct Twin Falls Rural Fire Department.

City trucks will fight a blaze outside the city "only as a last resort . . . when all other sources and means of fire suppression have been exhausted," City Manager Jean Millar said today.

When everything has been tried "and the fire is still out of control and further loss of life and property is in jeopardy, then we feel somewhat of a moral obligation to assist," Millar added.

However, that situation does not exist in the area which was served by the defunct Twin Falls rural Fire Department because "they still have trucks in Kimberly and Filer," he said.

William Taylor, chief of the rural fire station at the Twin Falls Labor Center, announced last week that the rural department has stopped responding to fires because "it can't find volunteers to man a fire truck."

If the city fought fires outside its boundaries, fire insurance rates would go up for all property owners in the city, according to Millar.

TF plans no July 4 fireworks

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls will not sponsor a Fourth of July fireworks display this year.

"We have no money in the budget for fireworks and have not for the past few years," City Manager Jean Millar said today.

However, the city will "work with a licensed organization" that wishes to do so, Millar said.

He said no such organization has announced plans for fireworks display.

Drum marathon

MCCALL, Idaho (UPI) — Sean "Uncle Jim" Moore is still at it — pounding away on his drums in this small lakefront town in Central Idaho, as he tries to break the world duration drumming record.

Moore will reach his 100th straight hour at 4 p.m. MDT today and he plans to keep going until a week from today, when he hopes to break the old record of 218 hours and 46 minutes, held by a New York man.

By then he hopes to reach the 240-hour mark and he figures the record will be out of reach.

"I'm doing just fine," Moore told United Press International Sunday from the Cellular Club in McCall.

"I have a little bit of a sore throat, I kind of sang my lungs out last night."

Cassia school officials won't comment on ruling

By DAVID BOCKMAN Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County school officials had no comment today on a Friday Supreme Court ruling declaring a contract for the construction of the new Burley Junior High invalid.

The new junior high is nearing completion with Mitchell Construction Company, Pocatello, as contractor. However, Mitchell's low bid for the project was contested by Nielsen and Company, Twin Falls, who said Mitchell used an improperly licensed sub-contractor.

In April, 1974, Fifth District Judge Sherman Bellwood said the bid had been properly awarded to Mitchell and denied Nielsen's claim. Bellwood said he could see nothing in the state law regarding public works contractors bidding the school district to reject a bid where a sub-contractor was improperly licensed. If the sub-contractor failed to perform, the district could look to the general contractor for relief, Bellwood said.

The judge said "in my opinion, the board of trustees of the district still may let the contract, to the lowest responsible bidder or reject any bid or reject all bids and re-advertise." Bellwood said the section of the law binding the school district to know the sub-contractor is not properly licensed is a protection in the district. But the board may waive that protection.

But the Supreme Court ruled the law requires the use of licensed sub-contractors. The Supreme Court sent the case back to Fifth District Court for consideration of damages today.

Today, Norm Hurt, a spokesman for the school district, said neither school officials, nor their attorney Herman Bedke, Hurst, had received the Supreme Court ruling. Hurst said no comment will be made on the case until Bedke reviews the ruling.

Bedke was unavailable for comment this morning.

Tractor injures Jerome woman

JEROME — A 60-year-old Jerome woman was injured Saturday afternoon when a tractor on which she was working ran over her.

Mrs. Dora Madsen, taken by ambulance to St. Benedict's hospital after receiving chest injuries in the accident, was reported in fair condition today.

According to Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall, Mrs. Madsen was helping her two sons work on machinery at the family farm when she apparently got a tractor in gear while attempting to hook up a cultivator.

Sheriff Hall said the tractor knocked Mrs. Madsen to the ground and rolled over her, with the rear wheel of the tractor coming to rest on her chest.

New real estate 'wrinkles' studied

At one or two points, the buyer and seller may find the new law a bit uncomfortable to live with, too, though its intent was to protect them. The first change they are likely to see is a longer and more complicated form for the standard sales contract. The pub of the new law is a requirement—that the lender disclose to the buyer and seller at least 12 days before the settlement—but preferably 60 days or more before that date, what their closing or settlement costs will be.

Mann wins $50,000

MEDIA, Ohio (UPI) — Carol Mann, who feels that experience will prevail in pressure situations, proved that Sunday when she survived a fourth hole on the 18th hole to card a 2-over-par 74 and win the $50,000 Lawson's LPGA tournament with a 54-hole total of one-over-par 217. Veteran professional Judy Rankin, who has been on the tour since 1952, also had a 2-over-par 74 for a 54-hole total of 219, good for second place, two strokes behind Miss Mann.

Gulf-Ford teammates win Le Mans 24-hour race

LE MANS, France (UPI) — Derek Bell of Great Britain and teammate Jackie Jekx of Belgium drove a Gulf-Ford to victory Sunday in the longest-ever Le Mans 24-hour race.

No speed records were set and no serious accidents occurred in this 43rd running of what used to be the world's premier sports car race.

Under new rules limiting refueling to once every 20 stops there was a premium on fuel conservation and a consequent cutting back of both speed and engine size.

Race promoters said the more modest dimensions of the race would bring it closer to ordinary drivers and attract more fans. But the crowd this year numbered only 200,000 by official estimate, or 150,000, according to the experienced crew of an advertising balloon—about half the crowds of the old days.

BIGAN'S BELL was at the wheel of the four-engine Gulf-Ford when it crossed the finish line after 336 laps—2,850 miles—at an average speed of 119 miles per hour.

Of the 54 cars that made the rolling start at 4 p.m. Saturday, 51 crossed the finish line 24 hours later.

Second came Jean-Louis Laffosse and Guy Chasseuil of France in a blue-and-white Ligier-Cosworth, which in the end stages provided the only real drama of the marathon, constantly gaining on the leaders.

At the finish they were only one lap back, for an average speed of 118 mph, and closing on the leaders, who were having transmission trouble.

About six laps behind the winners were teammates Vern Schuppman of Australia and Jean-Pierre Jaussaud of France.

Borg wins second straight French Open championship

PARIS (UPI) — Bjorn Borg of Sweden calmly repelled a come-from-behind bid Sunday by Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and won his second straight men's singles title in the $218,000 French Open Tennis championship, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4.

The 19-year-old Borg won $30,000 in victory and Vilas picked up $15,000 dollars in defeat at Roland Garros stadium just outside Paris.

The previous day, Chris Evert had successfully defended her women's title, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1, against Martina Navratilova of Czechoslovakia. Miss Evert won $10,000 and Miss Navratilova half that much.

Maria's Raul Ramirez and America's Brian Gottfried captured the men's doubles title and $7,500 between them by beating Australians John Alexander and Phil Dent, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, Friday.

Miss Evert and Miss Navratilova trounced the Russian-American team of Olga Morozova and Julie Anthony, 6-3, 6-2, in the women's doubles championship match preceding the men's singles final.

In the mixed doubles final, following the Borg-Vilas match, Brazil's Thomas Koch teamed with Fiorella Bonicelli of Uruguay for a 6-4, 7-6 victory over Argentine pilot on Chile and Pam Teeguarden of Los Angeles.

"I'm a little bit surprised," Borg said after his victory. "I played really well. I think Guillermo was a little bit surprised, too, that I played so well today."

He added, "For sure I have seen Guillermo much better. Maybe he was a bit nervous. He missed so many easy balls."

also in a blue Gulf-Ford, with a speed of 116 mph. A Franco-Italian women's team which had finished sixth in the qualifying runs-dropped out of the main race after only 20 laps with fuel tank trouble.

FUEL TANK TROUBLE. Each car had a team of two drivers and in some cases a reserve driver. Each driver relayed his teammate about every four hours.

The No. 10 Ford of Schuppman and Jaussaud took the lead within the first hour of the race but was soon overtaken by the No. 11 of Jekx and Bell, which throughout maintained the lead for most of the race.

The Laffosse-Chasseuil Ligier moved up gradually from its 24th position of the first hour to seventh in the second hour and eventually to third place in the sixth hour.

From then on, Laffosse-Chasseuil engaged in a long struggle with the two Gulf-Fords, eventually distancing one of them and closing steadily on the other.

Winner Bell said, "The car had been having some transmission trouble and it was a matter of holding out to the end. I knew the Ligier was closing in rapidly."

Several drivers complained that because of the cutbacks in engine power caused by the fuel-conservation rule the long and exhausting race had too many inexperienced drivers.

"As the car is working beautifully," British driver Alain de Cadenet said before the race, referring to his Cadet-Lola, "my main preoccupation will be to drive carefully and stay out of the way of those other drivers."

The blond Swedish star took just 95 minutes to dispose of the hard-hitting lefthander from Argentina, getting his only real challenge in the third set.

Down 1-5, Vilas staged off a match point and held serve for 2-5, broke Borg for 3-5 and brought the near-capacity crowd in the 13,000-seat stadium to its feet by serving a love game for 4-5.

Borg jumped out to 4-0 lead on his service in the next game and Vilas pulled back to make it deuce, saving three match points. But the imperturbable Borg stroked a forehand winner and forced Vilas to hit a backhand wide for the match.

"I had 5-1 and match point and then I started to get a little tight," Borg said afterward. "I went to 5-3, then 5-4, because he started to come back. If he had broken my serve at that stage—if he had taken the third set—the match would have been open at two sets to one."

Borg said it was "difficult to play against such a close friend. I have to try to hate him on the court. That's the only thing I can do if I want to beat him. If I am kind and play like best friends, then I know he will beat me for sure."

Borg dashed through the first set in 25 minutes, with both players whacking hard topspin drives from backcourt, and Vilas making the key errors—a backhand into the net for a Borg break to 3-1, a double fault for another Borg break to 4-2, a forehand into the net to go behind 2-5 and a forehand long to give Borg the set.

The Swede got behind in the next set 1-3 before ripping through five straight games. Vilas seemed to be missing his first serve, often and making unforced errors on his backhand.

Jenkins leads second round of Philadelphia Classic

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tom Jenkins, who has never led a round in three years on the pro tour, shot a six-under par 65 Sunday on a course he feels "at home on" to take a five-stroke advantage after the second round of the Philadelphia IVB Golf Classic.

Jenkins, a 27-year-old pro who supports himself on the tour, had a round of six birdies, and no bogies on the Whittemarsh Valley Country Club course for a 36-hole total of 134, eight under par and five better than power hitter Jim Dent, Dent had a 67 for a 139 total.

One stroke back from Dent was Johnny Miller, No. 2 on the money-winning list, who had a 69 for a 140 total to tie with defending champion Hubert Green and Jim Simons. At 141 were Buddy Allin, Tom Shaw, Jerry McGee, Nate Slatkies and J.C. Sneed. Those at even-par 142 included Lou Graham, who led the opening round with a 65 but soared to a six-over 77.

Gary Player was at 144, two over par, while Tom Weiskopf, another big name here, withdrew after shooting an opening round 87.

The 36 holes which began at 7 a.m. today were necessitated because rain and course flooding postponed Thursday's and Friday's rounds. And because of the threat of thunderstorms today, the PGA made the 36-hole cut at the 50 low scores and ties to try and get in all of the play.

The original field of some 350 golfers was cut at the 145 mark, three over par. Those who just made it included former Open champion Billy Casper, while Ray Floyd, last week's Kemper Open champion was among those eliminated with a 170. Jenkins, a University of Houston graduate, whose best finish since joining the tour was a tie for third here last year, said, "I feel at home here. If they held all the tournaments here at Whittemarsh I'd be in good shape."

Jenkins has won only $11,108 so far this year and $20,826 last year. "I'm keeping a little ahead of expenses. If I can't make it out here (on tour) alone, I'll quit," he said.

Jenkins' longest birdie putt was a 15-footer on the par-four second hole but it was his chip shot that enabled him to scramble to save three par on the par-three fourth and 12th holes and par-four 14th.

Jenkins, who missed qualifying by one stroke for next week's U.S. Open, had other birdies on the fifth, 11th, 13th, 16th and 18th,

NHL faced with money problems

MONTREAL (UPI) — The 18 governors of the National Hockey League began arriving here Sunday for the league's 58th annual meeting, faced primarily with the dire financial problems of two floundering franchises.

The meeting, which begins Monday and is scheduled to last through at least Wednesday, will take up a number of controversial and pressing items.

But the league's greatest concern appears to be bringing economic stability to the Oakland-based California Golden Seals and the Pittsburgh Penguins.

The California team is owned by the league, purchased in 1973 from Charles O. Finley, owner of the champion Oakland A's.

Since acquiring the franchise, the league has tried to get it back in private hands. Most recently, financier Mel Swig has agreed to buy the team if the city of San Francisco goes ahead with Mayor Joseph Alioto's pledge to build a $20 million, 17,500 to 19,000-seat capacity arena.

NHL President Clarence Campbell says the governors will "review—the total Oakland situation again" at this week's meeting.

He does not rule out the possible relocation of the franchise, but points out that the league is encouraged since "Mayor Alioto is using all his political clout to support development of a new project."

On the Pittsburgh situation, Campbell was less optimistic. "Pittsburgh has not up to this time resolved any of its major problems," he said in an interview late last week.

"As Campbell was speaking, the U.S. Internal Revenue Service was placing a $527,346 tax lien against Penguins' general partner Tad Potter.

The IRS padlocked the club's offices, pending resolution of the allegation that it failed to withhold employees' taxes owed the government between December, 1974, and March, 1975.

The governors are faced with either helping the Penguins resolve their difficulties or possibly moving the franchise to another city, leaving the present owners to settle their accounts with the government.

St. Louis expected to draft USC guard

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Spirits of St. Louis are expected to "choose" a guard, possibly Gus Williams of the University of Southern California, in the first round of Monday's American Basketball Association college player draft.

Veteran Freddie Lewis quarterbacked the Spirits' attack last season and he will be joined in the fall by Don Chaney, who is jumping to the ABA from the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association. But club president general manager Harry Weltman says a young guard is needed.

One problem in signing a first-round choice will be salary. Lewis, Chaney and the Spirits' rookie front line of last season—Marvin Barnes, Maurice Lucas and Gus Gerard—all reportedly command six-figure salaries and the team lost as much as $1 million in its first season in St. Louis.

Williams, who averaged 20 points and 5.4 assists a game last year for USC, was a second-round choice by the NBA champion Golden State Warriors in that league's recent draft.

Other possible choices by the Spirits, who draft fourth, are Lionel Hollins of Arizona State or Junior Bridgeman of Louisville. The Spirits also need a center to back up Lucas.

Tony Conigliaro cut by Red Sox

BOSTON (UPI) — Tony Conigliaro, cut by the Boston Red Sox this weekend, said Sunday he isn't quitting baseball—even if he has to take a demotion to the minor leagues.

"I'm not going to quit. I won't do that. But I hope to work it so I can remain in the major leagues," he told UPI in a telephone interview.

He said he has asked Boston Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell to contact Milwaukee, Minnesota and Texas to see if they are interested.

"My second choice is to go to the minor leagues with the Red Sox. Before I go to Pawtucket (of the International League), though, I hope to get a chance to latch on with some major league team," he said.

Conigliaro, who made a comeback this spring after a 3½ year absence, Saturday was offered his release by the Red Sox or reassignment to Boston's AAA farm club.

"I will sit down with Dick O'Connell Wednesday and make a decision then. I'm not sure if any major league team wants me, but Dick O'Connell, the general manager, has contacted some clubs I have some interest in."

"Kill the umpire!" That's the venerable cry of the baseball fans. Question arises as to whether any umpire actually has been killed by irate fans. Pitrener, Umpire Billy Evans almost died after he was beated by a bottle thrown from the stands in St. Louis. He was a borderline bed case for three weeks.

FUTURE MATE
Q. "On which day of the week are you most likely to meet your future mate?"
A. Saturday, says our Love and War man. Monday is next. After that, Sunday.

Q. "WHAT would be the value of an opal as big as a loaf of bread?"
A. Can only report that one such found about six years ago in Australia is known to be worth $1.6 million. Weighs 6.5 pounds. They say it's the biggest opal ever.

WILL YOU BUY the notion that the seafood from the Atlantic tastes better than the seafood from the Pacific because the Atlantic's waters are colder? That's a fairly popular contention on the East Coast.

HEADACHES
There's no word in the Albanian language that means "headache." Albanians don't get headaches. Seriously, that's the claim of a pharmacology researcher. Remarkable, if true. Can't really argue the matter, however. I don't get headaches, either. Unless you want to count that dive years ago in the shallow end of the "Y" pool.
