

Levi studies prosecution

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edward H. Levi expects to decide soon whether to prosecute anyone for legal violations outlined in the Rockefeller Commission report on the Central Intelligence Agency.

Quoting Levi as saying: "I am shocked by some of the material," Justice Department public information officer Robert J. Havel said the attorney general is giving high priority to studying the report.

"My own view is that the department's function is to see if there were violations of law and if there are, to prosecute," Levi said.

President Ford withheld part of the commission's findings on possible illegal activities by the CIA from the public and instead turned it over to the Justice Department for possible prosecutions.

Havel said Levi personally has read parts of the secret report, and has asked the Justice Department's criminal division to submit two levels on legal points involved in making the decisions, Havel said.

One is an analysis of federal, state or District of Columbia laws that might apply, and the other is on various statutes of limitations that might prevent prosecutions, he said.

Levi intends to be sure no statutory deadline for prosecution passes unnoticed while he is making decisions, Havel said.

Havel briefed reporters on a discussion of the CIA report held in a private luncheon meeting Wednesday between Levi and a newspaper group.

In reply to questions about whether the decisions will require "two or three months" to make, Levi said he expects it will take much less time than that but he could not set a timetable.

Asked if he would confer with the White House about his decisions, Levi said, "I would feel obligated to communicate views of the department to the President but I would not expect the President to tell the department what to do."

Levi said there could be reasons to refrain from prosecution where a violation is found.

He said one might be a mitigating circumstance such as a CIA employee's belief at the time that his action was legal and that he had authority to do it, and another might be that a target of possible prosecution might have a strong defense that would make conviction unlikely.

However, Levi said, if he decides for these or other reasons to forego a prosecution he will make a full public explanation.

TF plant use studied

JEROME — Sewage from Jerome would be piped to Twin Falls for treatment under a proposal by a Boise engineering firm.

The proposal, one of two alternatives recently presented to the city of Jerome by CH2M Engineers, would cut in half the effective lifespan of the Twin Falls facility currently being expanded. It also would mean Jerome sharing part of the Twin Falls treatment costs.

ANDREW CH2M Engineers proposal calls for construction of a treatment plant at a new site west of Jerome. Both proposals were presented in a long-waited wastewater facilities plan for the city. Both would mean eventual discharge of the treated waste into the Snake River.

Two other proposals were discussed in the plan but were determined to be "unfeasible." One called for the treated sewage to be pumped into the Northside Canal Co. canal system.

The plan also suggested spraying irrigation of the treated sewage over city land. But this was determined unfeasible since it would require 360 acres of land plus huge storage tanks for winter when spraying would be impossible.

The plan will now be reviewed by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Idaho Health Department which will decide which proposal will be used.

If the proposal to ship sewage to the Twin Falls plant is approved, a pump station would be located west of Jerome near the Interstate. Gravity flow would take the waste to this station.

However, the addition of Jerome to the Twin Falls plant would reduce the reserve capacity and effectively reduce the design life from the present 20 years to an estimated 10 years.

Ed Evans, Jerome City works director, said if the wastewater was pumped to the Twin Falls plant it would mean that Jerome would have to share the debt repayment on Twin Falls existing facilities. Due to the decreased design life which would result from adding Jerome to the system, it was estimated that a $4 million plant expansion (1976 dollars) would be required in 10 years at the Twin Falls plant.

PRESIDENT GERALD FORD ... N-arms policy unclear

Nuclear 1st blow possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has declined to rule out first use of nuclear weapons by the United States in a future conflict.

He told reporters that at a news conference in 91-degree heat on the White House lawn Wednesday was not the place to say whether the United States might be first to use either long-range strategic nuclear weapons or so-called tactical nuclear weapons, which are stored in Europe and South Korea.

The President was more willing to discuss domestic problems.

—He said Americans may have to suffer high unemployment "for a short period of time" to avoid another round of inflation.

—He declared that a threatened $2 to $4 a barrel oil price increase by producing nations next fall would be "very disruptive and totally unacceptable."

—He said he would consider recommending an extension to 1978 of the tax cut for Americans if the economy isn't moving. If the current tax cut appears to be working and if the deficit can be kept in bounds.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy had declared: "Our arms will never be used to strike the first blow in any attack."

The "military posture" statements in which the Pentagon each year asks Congress for its budget have for years described the U.S. arsenal of strategic nuclear weapons — missiles based on land and in submarines, and long-range bombers — as weapons of retaliation, and therefore of deterrence.

However, past administrations and the current defense secretary, James R. Schlesinger, have made clear that tactical nuclear weapons might be used in response to massive nonnuclear attacks in either Europe or Korea.

BUHL — A 7-year-old boy was injured in serious condition this morning following an accident reportedly involving sprinkler irrigation equipment.

Magic Valley Memorial Hospital officials said Pedro Rojas Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Rojas Sr., Piler, was admitted to the hospital this morning with electrical shock and two fractured arms.

Members of the family speak Spanish only. Officials said, and details of the accident were sketchy. Magic Valley Ambulance personnel in Buhl brought the child to the hospital.

TF land use plan drafted

By GEORGE WILEY Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City-County Joint Planning Council members Wednesday were presented with a rough draft of the proposed city-county comprehensive land-use plan.

The planning council agreed to at least one special meeting next month, and perhaps others, to go over the rough draft with a view to arriving at a finished proposal this fall.

In presenting the rough draft to members, planner David Richey outlined that the final comprehensive plan may differ radically as more information is received from other city and county sources.

Included in the rough proposal, termed a "discussion draft," were sections on population and economics, historical-sites, housing, open space, land use, transportation, and public services and facilities.

—Noting that the most important question facing the city and county involves the establishment of a growth or a no-growth policy, Richey's draft predicted a countywide population of at least 54,000 and possibly close to 70,000 by the year 2000. The present population is about 45,000.

"Industrial expansion which is directly related to agriculture appears to be welcome because it would serve to enhance our primary economy," Richey wrote.

"Non-agriculturally-based industry that might consider establishing a plant here could very easily find itself socially isolated and an unwelcome guest."

The draft also noted a "strong feeling" that new businesses locate either in traditional downtown shopping areas or in shopping malls and that strip commercial development along major traffic arterials be avoided.

On the general question of growth, Richey argued against the practicability of attempting to limit population growth and proposed instead that planning attempt to avoid urban sprawl through the enforcement of well-designed zoning codes.

On the question of historical sites, several buildings in the downtown area were pointed out for preservation. Most significant was the area Richey termed "History Square" — the present county courthouse area and the area surrounding city park.

Buildings in this area recommended for preservation, in addition to the Fire Station which the Twin Falls Jaycees are considering as a renovation project and which council members Wednesday voted in favor of conditional approval (see code) and the old Masonic Lodge and Times-News buildings.

Anguish grows in kidnap wait

ROCK FOREST, Que. (UPI) — The anguish of relatives grew today as 24 hours passed without further word from kidnapers who have demanded $1 million ransom for the safe return of the ailing patriarch of a wealthy Quebec family.

Quebec provincial police said the abductors of Mrs. Lene Blanchet, 63, wife of a millionaire margarine producer, had failed to contact the family since their last telephone call before noon Wednesday.

"It is very agonizing," Mrs. Blanchet's son, Paulin, said. "Since yesterday, we have heard nothing."

A family physician said Mrs. Blanchet was suffering from a heart condition and required daily medication. No medicine was taken by the kidnapers when Mrs. Blanchet was seized Tuesday morning near the swimming pool of her estate in this suburb of Sherbrooke, Que., 30 miles north of the Vermont border.

Upturn nearing for US

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A composite barometer of U.S. economic trends rose for the third consecutive month in May, supporting the conclusion that recovery from the recession is on the way, the Commerce Department said today.

The department said its index of "leading indicators" rose 2.1 per cent last month, following increases of 3 per cent in April and 1.1 per cent in March.

The three-month rise in the index suggests that the economy's long, steep slide has ended, or soon will end. Most analysts have drawn the same conclusion — that the recession has hit bottom — on the basis of other indicators.

Until the index of leading indicators began rising in March, it has declined for 11 straight months, and had been on a general downward trend, with a few brief interruptions, since June, 1973.

Even with the recent rise, the index last month was 24.2 per cent below its peak in June, 1973. Last month's index was at the highest level since November, 1974.

The index had not risen for three months in a row since the end of 1972.

The department reported the index for April had risen 4.2 per cent. On the basis of additional data the department Thursday revised the April figure to a 3 per cent rise.

Figures on 10 of the 12 components of the index were available Thursday.

Senate won't halt election debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate failed again today to cut off debate on New Hampshire's disputed election, forcing at least a one-day delay in the start of its Independence Day recess.

It was the third try by majority Democrats to halt 12 days of debate on the dispute over the closest election in Senate history. Another attempt is due Friday.

Tailored housing bill passes Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Buckling to President Ford's demands, the Senate today approved a stripped-down housing bill virtually tailored to his dictates.

The new housing bill was sent promptly to the House where action is considered unlikely before the end of the July 4th recess.

Carey Act gains fresh support after 40 years

By DIANE ALTERS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After 40 years of being almost ignored, the federal act that brought settlers to Twin Falls is popular again.

Some 120 farmers, ranchers and other citizens crowded into a meeting room at the Holiday Inn Wednesday to hear state and federal spokesmen explain the rules and regulations of the Carey Act, allowing them to stake claims to desert land in Idaho.

The gathering was a discussion and question session, with a formal public hearing to consider the proposed rules set for 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Statehouse in Boise.

Some 70 project filings have been made with the Idaho Department of Water Resources since last year, most proposing to reclaim desert land for farming along the Snake River in southwest and southern Idaho, according to department director Keith Higginson, Boise.

The projects on file account for a total of 32,226 acres of desert land. They range from a single claim, for 160 acres to associations of several people or families, the largest group asking for 90,800 acres in Clark County northwest of Idaho Falls.

Interest in the Carey Act was suddenly rekindled by legislation passed in the state last year, changing the 1994 federal act.

A lottery system set up under the original act was modified; people who propose Carey Act projects can now be settlers without undergoing the uncertainties of a lottery.

Before the recent legislation, Higginson said, all settlers were selected at random after a sponsor's project was approved.

"There was no real incentive" for settlers to work on a project if they faced losing out in a lottery," Higginson said.

A lottery will still be held for projects having too many claimants for the land requested.

Another controversial change in the old law allows a husband and wife to join entries to claim a total of 330 acres of land rather than the 150 allowed under the original act.

The fee for the land was also "modernized" from 50 cents to $10 an acre, Higginson said.

"Honest disagreements" between the state and the Bureau of Land Management about the changes "may slow down" the process of developing the land," Higginson said.

All the projects except one are in the first stage of the process of reclaiming desert land under the act. Roughly, the process involves filing for land, getting the Bureau of Land Management to relinquish its control over the land, and showing that the lands are desert and that water is available.

Next, sponsors of the projects must show how the project will be built by filing financial statements and other information. If approved, the project can begin construction of irrigation works, to be completed within five years.

As soon as water is available on the land, the settler must apply to enter the land, showing that he intended to settle when the project first started. The settler has to cultivate at least one-eighth of the land in two years.

Initial US N-strike possible

Ford felt U.S. policy on both strategic and tactical weapons unclear.

"I don't think it is appropriate for me to discuss in a press conference what our utilization will be of our tactical or strategic weapons," he said. "I don't believe under these circumstances that I should discuss how when or what kind of weapons should be used."

Asked specifically whether he would order use of tactical nuclear weapons if North Korea attacked South Korea, Ford said: "I am not either confirming it or denying it. Military forces will be used, as are national interest warrants."

Fred Harris, former Oklahoma senator, said Ford's refusal to rule out use of nuclear weapons was "the most dangerous military decision that has been made by our government in at least 20 years."

Ford confirmed that one change in U.S. nuclear policy was made a year and a half ago. Previously the policy called either for all-out nuclear war with the Soviet Union or no such war. Now it includes the possibility that Russia and the United States might "fight" a limited nuclear war with each other — each targeting only a few strategic weapons at selected targets.

Ford's comment on unemployment was a rebuff to union leaders and representatives of poor people who lobbied in Washington earlier this week for a policy of "full employment."

"As you bring down inflation, we may have to suffer for a short period of time higher unemployment than we like," the President said. The jobless rate is now 9.2 percent of the labor force, or about 8 million unemployed.

On the threatened oil price increase by Arab and other foreign producers, Ford said: "Any increase in foreign oil would be, in my judgment, very disruptive and totally unacceptable." He did not spell out what the United States would do in response.

Ford slates word 'soon'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford, obviously pleased with his recent jumps in popularity polls, says he will formally announce his candidacy for a full term shortly.

At a news conference Wednesday Ford pledged his campaign "will be run exactly according to the law."

"I have announced my intention to run," Ford said. "In a relatively short time I will make a formal announcement."

Last week Ford filed the necessary forms to authorize the raising of funds for his campaign. "We expect to raise sufficient funds to put on a good campaign," he said.

"I don't know if I will have any (Republican) opposition or not," the President said. "I never really predicated my campaign on what others will do. I run on my record."

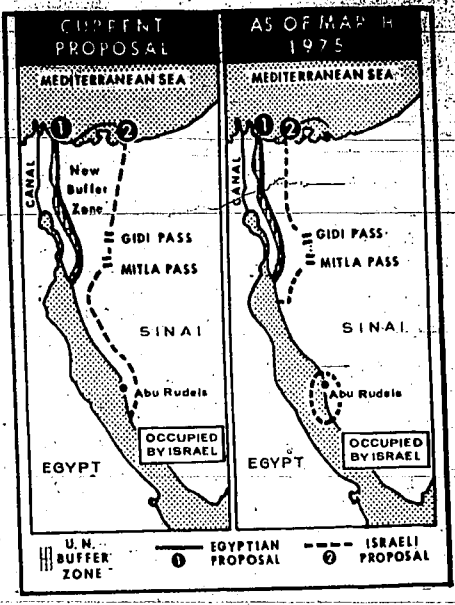

Recent polls have shown Ford's popularity higher than any time since he took office almost a year ago. Ford attributed this to a "whole series of things that have been good for the country." He cited efforts his administration has made to fight inflation while seeking "compassionate remedies" to recession, the Mayaguez incident and his recent trip to Europe.

On another political topic, Ford said he did not know if former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally would seek elected office. Connally, recently acquitted in a Watergate-related bribery case, met with Ford this week at the White House.

"I don't know if he's going to run for an office or not," Ford said. "He didn't indicate that to me."

Ford said he met with Connally because he was an "old friend" and "the kind of person who can be helpful in giving advice." He said he hopes to have more meetings with the former treasury secretary.

Ford said the two discussed "a wide range of matters including domestic programs and foreign policy."

New Sinai proposal

ISRAEL'S reported new Sinai disengagement proposal is illustrated by these maps which compare it to the previous offer in March. The Israeli embassy in Washington issued the map showing the March position. (UPI)

State Department irked at reports

WASHINGTON — The State Department is making no bones about its annoyance with leaks to the press by the Israeli government of alleged new proposals for a further disengagement agreement in the Sinai.

The U.S. reaction to a New York Times article and maps describing the reported new proposal did not actually name Israel as the source but the inference was strong that it was the Israelis who are blamed by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The story quoted unnamed Israeli government sources and gave seemingly authentic details of the new Israeli offer.

State Department press spokesman Robert Anderson not only denounced what he called "competitive leaks," he also denied the accuracy of the maps published in the New York Times and cautioned against drawing any conclusions from the press accounts. Anderson, who never utters a word that has not been cleared by Kissinger, issued this statement Wednesday at the purported instigation of Ford himself.

Pressed by newsmen to say whom he was accusing of competitive leaks, Anderson said he would go no further than that but he did concede he was not retreating to competition among journalists.

The impression was that leaks to the press by either Israel or the Egyptians on the delicate negotiations were deplored by Washington and that in this particular case it was Israel that was the offender. Anderson also declined to say which portions of the story and maps were inaccurate or misleading.

He did not deny Israel has indeed composed a new diplomatic offer for the United States to relay to the government of President Anwar El-Sadat in order to achieve a new disengagement on the Sinai front.

"According to Wednesday's story, the Israelis have now offered to withdraw from the western ends of the strategic Gidi and Mitla passes, to give Egypt a land corridor to the Abu Rudeis oil fields in the southern Sinai and to accept an accord that would last between three and four years."

Probe focuses on Chile

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency data on United States activity in Chile and on the United States prepares its most secret intelligence estimates are the focal point of a new controversy between the White House and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, according to informed sources.

The material from the National Security Council files relating to assassinations is not a factor in this new controversy, the sources said. However, they said, there is a document in the WHITE HOUSE relating to U.S. activities in Chile that could be pertinent to either the question of assassination plots or U.S. attempts to prevent Communists from coming to power in Chile.

The document, which was reviewed by the Rockefeller Commission on the C.I.A. contained material that Ford administration officials felt should be reviewed by Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi before it was released. One source said that there were several instances where release of data to the Congressional investigations might create a "serious problem on the question of perjury and possible criminal prosecutions." The problems were not described.

This new controversy between Capitol Hill and the Ford administration seemed to be the most serious confrontation in the five months of the investigation.

It began on the issues of minutes of N.S.C. meetings and notes from meetings of the Special Group, which reviewed covert activities in the late 1950s and early 1960s. Four Senators from the committee were permitted to review portions of the material on Friday and Saturday. It was then agreed, sources in both camps said, that data pertinent to plots to assassinate leaders of foreign governments will be taken to Capitol Hill under guard for the committee's use and returned to the White House at night.

This broke down Monday. Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the committee, said that, as a result of reviewing the material, the committee had to delay testimony from several top members of the administration of President Kennedy. This dispute was worked out late Tuesday, and the material has been delivered to Capitol Hill.

But a high committee source said that this delay cost the committee two weeks' time in its schedule to complete an inquiry into the question of assassinations.

Oil cost hike 'unacceptable'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford says a threatened major oil price increase by producing nations would cause serious economic problems for much of the world and would be "totally unacceptable."

The President's warning came in a news conference Wednesday following objections by some officials of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that oil prices might be raised by $2 to $4 above the current level of about $12 per barrel when an OPEC price freeze expires at the end of September.

"Any increase in foreign oil would be, in my judgment, very disruptive and totally unacceptable," Ford said.

But he gave no direct answer when asked whether he was trying to persuade the oil producers not to increase their prices and, if so, whether he was having any success.

He said only that the United States is trying to get the world's oil consuming nations to adopt a unified policy "so that we act in concert when we have to meet with the producing nations" and that he wants Congress to act on an energy policy "so that we don't have to worry about OPEC price increases."

Asked what effect a $2 to $4 increase in foreign oil prices would have on his predictions that the recession is bottoming out, Ford replied:

"If such an oil price were put into effect, it would have an impact on our economy. It would undoubtedly have a much more significant impact on the economies of western Europe and Japan, and probably an even more adverse impact on the economies on the developing nations."

"It would have an adverse impact worldwide. I think it would be very unwise for OPEC to raise their prices under these circumstances, because an unhealthy economy in the United States and worldwide is not in their best interests."

Ford also was asked whether he had any specific action in mind when he said any OPEC price increase would be unacceptable and, if not, what he meant by the term.

"It would be unacceptable in the sense that we as a nation, individually, and we in conjunction with our allies are going to find some answers other than OPEC oil," he replied.

Ford said his proposed energy policy, which Congress has largely refused to accept, would reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil. He repeated his charge that "Congress has done nothing" to provide an alternative policy, but said "we're going to keep pushing Congress to act."

Cops hunt pair

CENTRALIA, Ill. (UPI) — Police and FBI agents today searched for two hitchhikers whose birthdates matched those of Symbionese Liberation Army companions of fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

Police said an all-points bulletin was issued after the couple was stopped in this southern Illinois town Wednesday night and gave fictitious names and birthdates that matched those of SLA members William and Emily Harris.

Centralia police said Officer Robert White, making a routine check of the city reservoir at 7:30 p.m., stopped two hitchhikers who gave their names as Mike Anderson and Mary Hensley of Oklahoma.

The two told him they were hitchhiking east and, with no reason to hold them, he let them go.

He called into the station and gave the names to the radio dispatcher, who telephoned them into the National Crime Information Center.

TF man files damage suit

TWIN FALLS—Damages of $100,000 plus medical expenses are asked in a suit filed in Fifth Judicial District Court here as a result of a Dec. 27, 1974, traffic accident.

Gary Freeman, Twin Falls, filed the suit against Robert and Evelyn Cliff, and Randy Cliff, their minor son.

The plaintiff charges Randy Cliff, operating a 1970 sedan in a reckless manner, caused an accident in which the plaintiff was injured. The accident occurred at 11:20 p.m. Dec. 27 at the intersection of Filer Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Freeman charges he suffered permanent and painful back and chest injuries. He also asks $823.27 in medical bills and costs.

In another case, a $25,000 suit has been filed by Lynda Miller, mother of Lesli Miller, 5, as the result of a dog bite suffered by the child.

Mrs. Miller says Lesli was injured March 30 of this year when she was attacked and bitten by a German shepherd dog owned by Fred Keane. She charges Keane, defendant in the suit, failed to heed warnings that the dog was vicious and dangerous. Her daughter, she says, was bitten about the face and lips, resulting in pain and disfigurement.

Idaho Branch Inc., AGC Engineers Trust Fund and trustees, in a suit against Crane Pumping Inc., Twin Falls, is asking $11,887.66 in delinquent contributions under a contract for employe fringe benefits.

The suit charges Crane Pumping Inc. engaged in construction work in the area and signed a contract in 1971 for employe benefits and has failed to pay the $11,886.66 as its share of contributions.

The plaintiff also asks $1,177.98 in damages and $325 actual costs in fees in connection with the legal action.

Air Idaho Inc., formerly Trans-Magic Airlines, has filed action in district court here against Twin Falls City, the Twin Falls Industrial Development Corp. and Sierra Life Insurance Co.

The plaintiff firm seeks to maintain a leasehold on certain property in connection with operations at the city-county airport. The lease was instituted in 1969 and later signed for a 30-year period beginning November, 1972 under the operating name of Trans-Magic. The complaint states.

Wendell man files plea of innocence

JEROME — Rufus Tom Riley, Wendell, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in Fifth District Court here Tuesday.

Riley was arrested and charged April 5 after he allegedly fired a .357 revolver at Michael Thompson, Jerome.

Thompson reported to police that he had been returning from Twin Falls and came up behind a slow-moving truck on the Perrine Bridge. Thompson said he followed the truck over the bridge and up to the Lincoln Road. He said he honked his horn at the other vehicle and then passed.

Thompson said the truck, allegedly driven by Riley, came up behind him and a shot was fired at him through the rear window of his vehicle. He said he was then forced off the road by the driver of the other vehicle who proceeded to "chew him out."

Riley appeared with his attorney, Greg Fuller. Twin Falls, and entered a plea of not guilty before Judge Theron Ward. No date for a trial has been set. Riley was released on a "continuance" of his $1000 bond.

Recovery and Inflation

In addresses on the same day to the National Federation of Independent Business in Washington somewhat contrasting views of the nation's present and future economic status were taken by President Ford and former California Governor Ronald Reagan.

Reagan took a more pessimistic view of the future placing his emphasis on the likelihood of further inflation and advocating a tighter money policy and less economic stimulants...

The President is pointing to acknowledged signs that business is picking up. Our national balance of trade is showing record improvement with a very large shift in our favor.

Inflation, too, has been reduced from about 12 per cent last year to somewhere near 6 per cent this year, and this compares very favorably with the rate of inflation being suffered by some foreign nations.

Many leading economists gravely predict this cyclical pattern ahead. They see a rapid economic rise, then following inflation, and then a sharper recession than the last one.

This would include increases in transfer payments, job programs such as those arising from the present revenue sharing plans, and others, which seem now to be superfluous.

Parents' rights, state powers shown by case

DAYTON, Ohio — What rights do parents have in the education of their children? What power does the state have to impose its collective will upon them?

It is incredible that any such criminal case could have been prosecuted in a nation that guarantees to every person the free exercise of religion. Yet the convictions of these parents are now on record.

The small congregation established its school to promote these religious convictions. Its teachers are "born again" Christians.

What, then, is the problem? The state, in its majesty, asserts that the Tabernacle Christian School has not conformed to all of the minimum standards of the Ohio regulations.

DUBLIN — Every American being by definition of hyphenated origin — Anglo, Afro, German, Japanese, and so forth — U.S. politics is peculiarly subject to nostalgic political influences, often distorted by literary concepts.

Italy seems now to be wavering toward a government based on coalition with the Communists, yet this has not appeared to weaken the enthusiasm of its strongly anti-Communist American blood relatives.

"How can any American contribute to the I.R.A. in the face of that? Yet without American aid the I.R.A. provisionals could not have sustained themselves.

Senate moves to curb arms kickbacks

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Northrop, the California-based arms manufacturer, has revealed four instances when it handed out large bribes to foreign officials to get contracts for its fighter planes.

and a tax assessor in Iran. In arms dealing, particularly with the third world, these payments are an accepted, if unfortunate, practice and few of Northrop's competitors now line up to investigate.

close friend of the Shah of Iran, up to $75,000 a year for his help in the Middle East. The connection began 10 years ago when, through Roosevelt's contacts, Northrop succeeded in ousting its competitor, Lockheed, from a lucrative contract which it subsequently won itself.

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — Some of the men making their rounds in the city, have now been armed with an electronic guard that beeps a high frequency sound to ward off unfriendly dogs.

Northrop, for example, paid $450,000 to two Saudi Arabian generals, through a contact close to the Saudi royal family, to encourage the purchase of the company's F-5 light-weight fighters.

Northrop also set up a fund of at least $1 million in Switzerland to reward successful agents on a no-questions-asked basis.

It is a move that, particularly in the arms industry, would be welcomed by the State Department which has often felt overshadowed and outmaneuvered on its own territory by the big American multinationals.

Franchise CIA, make a killing in the markets

WASHINGTON — You know the fellow in the TV commercials who sold his friend stock in a company making electric forks?

I couldn't disagree with him. "Let's say a general who is in charge of a junta wants to knock off three of his colonels for one reason or another. He arrests them for plotting with the CIA to overthrow him. Our franchise provides the evidence, and after the trial it's off with their heads."

up a McDonald's or a Kentucky Fried Chicken in a foreign country without obtaining a franchise. The same thing will go for the CIA. Once we register it with the patent office, no one will be able to accuse the CIA of anything unless they go through a legitimately franchised CIA shop."

"No, he doesn't want to work for the company, but he has asked to purchase the first franchise. The CIA has done him a lot of good in Cuba."

"Why would they need a CIA?" "From now on any training for office will have to claim his opponent is financed by the CIA. If someone dies of old age, his political party say the CIA killed him. If a crop fails, the head of state can say the CIA poisoned the water."

"I understand how important it is for everyone to have a CIA to kick around," I said. "What I don't understand is why these countries would want to deal with a franchise. Why can't they accuse the CIA of all the dastardly deeds without paying for the privilege?"

"We've been playing around with a few logos. Someone suggested we fix a red wig and false nose on our building. Of course, if Helms took the job we could put his picture up in lights. But it really isn't that important. The beauty of the CIA is that it's a household word in every country in the world."

"I'll be honest with you," I said. "When you first suggested investing in your plan, I was going to stick my money in the CIA. But I don't want to represent them. Do you have any charismatic figure whose picture you can put on each franchise wall?" I asked.

US defense planners again considering large scale civilian protection

Chicago Sun-Times
WASHINGTON — In spite of détente and recent arms agreements, U.S. defense planners are again thinking about the possibility of limited nuclear war with the Soviet U.S. — and are looking into large scale civil defense programs to protect the American population.

Civil defense planners have been researching the possibility of mass evacuations of the civilian population to the countryside — or even to mines and caves — and in March, the Chicago Sun-Times learned, top federal officials participated in a nuclear drill known as Exercise Rex-75.

According to an official of the General Services Administration's Office of Preparedness, some 190 officials of more than 20 civilian agencies — including cabinet and sub-cabinet officers — performed in Rex 75 essentially the activities they would engage in during a nuclear crisis.

The GSA official, Thomas Simmons, said that the exercise was staged over a weeklong period on a staggered basis in such departments as Transportation, State, Housing and Health Education and Welfare.

Simmons said activities did not extend to evacuations as called for in the classified emergency plans for a number of key departments.

As described by Simmons, the Rex-75 exercise was run as part of the GSA's standing responsibility to insure the preparedness of federal departments, and was not necessarily an outgrowth of the Pentagon's shift in nuclear strategy.

However, a step-up activity by the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency (DCPA) is directly related, and it is reminiscent of the bomb shelter buildup of the late 1950s and early 1960s, although so far it is not nearly as expensive.

DCPA officials estimate that setting up evacuation plans and equipping receiving areas away from major industrial and military targets would cost some $80 million over five years. Estimates for converting mines and caves as shelters vary between $1 and $50 per person.

The moving force behind current shifts in nuclear strategy and renewed attention to civil defense is Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Critics accuse Schlesinger of abandoning the previous U.S. doctrine of "mutual assured destruction" — wherein neither the Soviets nor the United States launches a nuclear strike because it knows its population will be devastated in return — for a doctrine of "limited war fighting."

Hostile senators and congressmen have charged that by contemplating "limited" thermonuclear exchanges and by designing targeting plans and weapons systems accordingly, the possibilities of actually having a war are increased.

Members of the Senate foreign relations committee last September closely questioned Schlesinger about his assertion that in a limited Soviet strike on U.S. defense installations "only" some 800,000 Americans might die, relieving a President of the necessity to launch a fullscale strike in return.

Among the premises for Schlesinger's estimate were that the Soviets did not use "dirty" bombs, that they air burst the ones they fired — as opposed to ground-bursting them — and that the United States had adequate civil defense protection.

The DCPA's research on civilian evacuation and location of shelters casualties can be contained in a limited war.

The basic theory behind DCPA planning is that evacuations could be effected amidst the "tension period" prior to a war, perhaps lasting weeks.

Under its "Crisis Relocation Planning" program, the civil defense agency has run evacuation-feasibility studies in nine small metropolitan areas. Officials acknowledge that evacuating major metropolitan areas is a more serious problem.

If evacuation and resettlement proves to be a feasible possibility, DCPA officials say, plans will be worked out and equipment stockpiled for areas on a priority basis — with "high risk" locations near military targets given the highest priority.

In arguing against his critics, Schlesinger has said — as former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara once did in the early 1960s — that it makes no sense for the President, in the event of a limited nuclear attack, to have only the two options — devastating the Soviet Union or doing nothing.

House Democrats' performance at 20 year ebb

Washington Star
WASHINGTON — The over-all performance of House Democrats in attempting to override President Ford's vetoes of important economic legislation has been... poorest in the last 20 years, a voting survey by the liberal Democratic Study Group suggests.

The group, an unofficial House organization of more than 200 members, found that 120 of the 189 Democrats in the chamber have split with their party's leadership on at least one of the three unsuccessful veto-override attempts this year.

The study did not attempt to pinpoint the reasons for the widespread defections. The study, made public Tuesday, reported a "significant" pattern of increased Democratic defection in the first three override efforts this year, compared to such attempts in the last two decades.

Democratic performance on a bill to increase support payments to farmers, according to the report, was the worst in 20 years, with 71 Democrats, nearly 25 per cent of the party membership in the House, voting to sustain Ford's veto.

Party performance on a bill to federally regulate strip mining of coal was the second worst in 20 years, with 57 Democrats, about 20 per cent, voting with the President, according to the report.

The study supported assertions by Democratic leaders that party unity was above average on the third override (try, on a $5 billion emergency jobs bill). Ninety-two per cent of the Democrats who voted on the override attempt supported their leadership on the jobs bill, compared with an 82 per cent average on 30 other veto-override votes since 1956.

The report noted pointedly that the party's best performance — on the jobs bill — came after the Democratic Caucus took a formal position in favor of overriding the President.

The study also observed that all three override efforts could have been successful if Democrats who voted to support the President had not voted at all. The two-thirds majority required to override a presidential veto is based on the number of members present and voting, not on the House's full membership of 435.

Among the most significant findings of the study were these:

— There were more Democratic than Republican defections on each of the three override attempts this year. By comparison, there were more Republicans on 21 of the 18 of override votes prior to 1975.

— Prior to this year, an average of 20 Democrats, or about 8 per cent of the party makeup in the House, defected on override votes. On the three vetoes this year, an average of 50 Democrats, or about 18 per cent, defected. By comparison, Republican defections dropped from an average of 82, about 22 per cent per vote, to 36, 24 per cent so far this year.

— The emergency jobs and strip-mine vetoes could not have been sustained if the 48

Republicans who had supported one or both of the measures when they passed the House originally had not switched their votes after Ford rejected the legislation.

Although it showed that Southern conservatives, as has been the case in previous years, have more consistently split with the Democratic leadership this year, the report found that all elements of the party contributed to the failure on the "free override efforts."

Albert ponders 'Canon rules'

Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — Speaker Carl B. Albert says he could do a better job of overriding President Ford's vetoes if the House operated under the old "Canon rules" which concentrated enormous power in the hands of the speaker.

But Albert said he did not think the Democratic House Caucus would give him that much power if he asked for it.

Albert made the comments in response to questions from newsmen during a meeting in his office.

Under the Canon rules the speaker alone decided what committee every new member would be assigned to, and the speaker alone appointed the chairman of every committee. All of this made it risky for any member of the House to vote against the wishes of the speaker.

The Canon rule is named after Republican Speaker Joseph (Little Joe) Cannon of Illinois who carried his power to almost dictatorial extremes from 1903 until 1911, when the House revolted against his arbitrary rule.

Today, committee chairmen are elected by the Democratic caucus, and democratic assignments to committees are made by the party's steering and policy committee.

Albert has been accused of weak leadership. He heads a two-thirds Democratic majority in the House — exactly the number required to override a presidential veto — but never has been able to produce 100 per cent of his party's strength in any confrontation with the White House. In recent weeks Albert has watched two important Democratic bills, an employment measure and a strip mining act, die for lack of a handful of votes to override Ford vetoes.

An analysis of those two attempts, plus an earlier failure on Ford's veto of the Democratic farm bill, shows that 42 per cent of the Democrats in the House defected on one or another of the three bills and voted to sustain Ford's vetoes. The defectors included eight committee chairmen and 55 subcommittee chairmen.

Albert Tuesday said that he believes all Democrats have a duty to support the party position on override attempts, even in cases where they may have voted against the bill itself when it was first passed.

When an issue reaches the level of an override attempt, Albert asserted, other principles apply and Democrats should support the attempt to insure that the majority's will prevails in setting public policy.

In a recent interview, Albert discussed the Canon rules. Albert said former Speaker Sam Rayburn had told him after the 1948 elections that Rayburn felt the House would have given him the Canon rules, "but Rayburn didn't want them."

Little hope for hungry

ROME (UPI) — The head of the U.N. Food and Agricultural Organization says 500 million persons "live in the constant grip of hunger and malnutrition" around the world.

Addeke Boerma, the Dutchborn director general of FAO, said there's little hope of the world's hungry feeding themselves despite international efforts.

"To speak frankly, it is clear that such a transformation cannot be brought about within the next decade," he said Wednesday at the first meeting of the newly formed World Food

Council.

He said the world's major grain-growing countries will have to provide "a considerable increase in food aid" over the next 10 years to avert widespread famine.

"Five hundred million people or so live in the constant grip of hunger and malnutrition," Boerma said.

He said emergency measures adopted at the World Food Conference in Rome last November helped ease an immediate crisis but "there is once again a tendency for people to think they can relax."

"Nothing could be more short-sighted," Boerma said. "Do we never learn from history and experience?"

He said last November's decision to provide 10 million tons of grain a year to nations threatened with mass starvation is "still much too low for reasonable standards of nutrition."

F. Bradford Morse, U.N. undersecretary general for political affairs and a former congressman from Massachusetts, said, "The key to the future lies in the greatly increased production of food in the developing countries."

Morse called for more housing, education, technology, research, capital, marketing, storage and transportation facilities as well as "a much fairer return to the food producer for his toil."

FAO officials reported a drop in starvation deaths in drought-stricken southeastern Ethiopia during the late spring after the figure rose "alarmingly" last April.

The officials said one reason for the high death rate in Ethiopia was the failure of the widely dispersed nomads in the region to find out about U.N. — supplied relief camps.

US aides quit Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — American officials said today all U.S. Agency for International Development employees would leave the country by June 30 despite lack of progress on turning over the AID mission to Laotians.

Latest figures showed 57 official Americans still in the country, only four of them working for AID. Before an American demonstration erupted last month, the U.S. community numbered about 850, including 185 AID employees.

Officials reported no further progress on the AID turnover, apparently because of the absence of Deputy Prime Minister Phoumi Vongvichit, Vientiane's senior Communist Pathet Lao official.

Phoumi left the capital nearly three weeks ago, reportedly to attend a Pathet Lao central committee meeting near the Vietnamese border.

Oil firms sued

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The State of California wants oil companies in the oil business and gasoline companies selling gasoline.

The state attorney general's office Wednesday filed a multimillion-dollar antitrust damage suit against 11 major oil companies that produce about half the nation's gasoline.

In addition to unspecified treble damages for the state and all its political subdivisions, the suit asks that the companies be ordered to divest themselves of their interest in crude oil production.

"We want to see free market forces operate," said Michael I. Spiegel, one of the deputy attorneys general who filed the suit in federal district court. "Let the people who drill the wells sell to whomever they want and let those who do the refining sell the final product."

"The present system doesn't permit free market forces to operate," he added.

Named in the suit were: Standard Oil Company of California, Texas Inc., Union Oil Company of California, Atlantic Richfield, Continental Douglas Oil, Exxon, Getty Oil, Gulf Oil, Mobil Oil Company of California Ltd., Phillips Oil, and Shell Oil.

Attorney General Evelle Younger said the suit was the result of a two-year investigation by his office into pricing and marketing practices of the oil industry in California.

Athletic bias claim ridiculed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — HEW Secretary Caspar Weinberger today ridiculed a claim by college coaches and athletic directors that eliminating sex discrimination on campus will kill off all intercollegiate sports.

Testifying on rules proposed by his Department of Health, Education and Welfare to end sex discrimination at all levels in education from kindergarten to graduate schools, Weinberger urged that the rules be given prompt congressional approval.

The rules were designed to implement a three-year-old law banning sex discrimination in education. They go into effect July 21, unless, disapproved by Congress.

"Educational institutions should not be left in the dark any longer..." Weinberger said. "It is, of course, im-

Compromise eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, in a humble recognition of President Ford's influence in Congress, failed to pass a housing bill tailored to his specifications.

Sending up the flag of compromise, Sen. William Proxmire, principal sponsor of the $1.35 billion housing bill Ford vetoed Tuesday, offered the measure on Wednesday.

It would have passed on the spot, but Republicans wanted a roll call so they could be recorded as voting for the bill. Leaders scheduled the vote for today.

Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, which handles housing legislation, drafted the compromise a few hours after the House failed to override the veto.

The vote was 268 to 157, or 16

Bankruptcy filed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Clifford Irving, author of the bogus Howard Hughes "autobiography," has filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in federal court.

Irving listed liabilities of $5,884,248.91 and said he's worth only $410.

He said the bulk of his liabilities stemmed from a $55-million libel suit filed by Bernard Legros in Manhattan Federal Court. The author said

Daughters block probe of files

CHICAGO (UPI) — In a swirl of legal action, Wednesday, three daughters of slain gang chief Sam "Mama" Giancana won temporary restraining orders from two judges blocking full examination of tape recordings and papers taken from Giancana's home.

Cook County State's Attorney Kenneth L. Gillis said he would go to court today in hopes of lifting the restraining orders.

Investigators armed with search warrants seized a desk, filing cabinet, tape recorder and cassettes at Giancana's suburban Oak Park home Tuesday night in hopes of obtaining clues that would lead them to Giancana's killer.

However, three of Giancana's daughters — Antonette Manno, Bonita Lou Taci and Francine de Palma — charged the investigators seized the mobster's property illegally. Two judges agreed to issue restraining orders until full hearings on the matter can be held.

Deputy State's Attorney Kenneth L. Gillis said a brief search of the desk turned up documents of a "possibly sensitive" nature, sets of keys, and other miscellaneous items.

State and Cook County investigators hoped the seized materials might yield a voice-from-the-grave letter from Giancana that would tell them who wanted him "rubbed out."

Syndicate chief flees Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Crime syndicate chief Anthony (Big Tuna) Accardo apparently has fled from Chicago in the wake of the playing of mob leader Sam Giancana, investigators said today.

Accardo, who is at the top of the mob hierarchy, may be seeking to avoid possible service with a subpoena directed to him in the case of the county grand jury.

A Chicago Daily News reporter who went to Accardo's luxurious ranch-style home Wednesday was told by his wife, Clarice, that he was out of the city.

She said she didn't expect him to return to the Chicago area for about two weeks. Investigators said that Mrs. Accardo may have been trying to conceal Accardo's whereabouts if he is still in the Chicago area.

Accardo, 73, the mob's elder statesman, and other mob chiefs are suspected of ordering Giancana's slain because they feared he might blurt out mob secrets in a final scheduled appearance before a federal grand jury here.

Levi to disregard 'curious' request

CHICAGO (UPI) — U.S. Attorney General Edward H. Levi says he was shocked by some of the information referred to the Justice Department by the Rockefeller Commission.

Levi Wednesday vowed to disregard what he described as a "curious" recommendation by the Rockefeller panel, namely that the adverse impact on the future of the CIA be given due consideration.

The attorney general said he would be guided solely by whether there were "good legal defenses" to prosecutable offenses that might have occurred in the past.

When the Rockefeller report was made public June 10, President Ford did not reveal the "incomplete and extremely sensitive" material on foreign assassinations. These were referred along with evidence of apparently illegal activities by the CIA to the Justice Department and the Senate investigating committee for further inquiry.

At a meeting with reporters on Wednesday, Levi said he had a special responsibility to approach the investigation on a professional basis.

He said he was not impressed by the suggestion occasionally heard that one generation of political leaders should not be sitting in judgment on the sagittal security judgments made by others long before.

Plot charge eyed

CHICAGO (UPI) — Communist Party USA leaders have charged that the FBI plotted to have underworld "hit men" assassinate party leaders.

Gus Hall, executive secretary of the party, said "The FBI just like the CIA has been in the business of assassination" and the plot is under investigation by the U.S. Justice Department.

Contending that U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi has details on the FBI project, known as Operation Hoodwink, Hall added: "This is an admitted thing..."

Part of Operation Hoodwink Hall said, was a campaign of forged letters designed to create a battle between the

DEAR ABBY: I have fallen in love with a man who has had a past history of mental illness. Years ago, his mother placed him in a state hospital. Now he lives in a half-way house. He sees a therapist weekly and is on medication. I know he still has some problems, but they're not as severe as they were. I want to have a relationship with him because he has so many of the qualities I am looking for in a man. He said he has never had a relationship with a woman. He is 27 and unsure of himself. I am 21 and on my own. I know I will have to make the first move because he is not aggressive. My mind is somewhat made up already, but I need assurance that I am doing the right thing. What is your opinion?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: You are a wise girl to stop, look and listen before you leap. Since I know nothing about the young man's emotional maturity and the seriousness of his mental condition, it's impossible for me to advise you. Please don't initiate a relationship without first talking to his therapist. He is qualified to guide you. I am not.

The bride wore a gown of unbleached muslin in an old fashioned style. The dress featured coral lace inserts in the skirt, a V neckline trimmed with lace and long semi-fitted sleeves.

She carried a colonial style bouquet of white daisies and baby yellow rosebuds. She wore a headpiece of flowers and ribbons.

Mrs. James Sloan, Ogden, Utah, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Eldon Coleman, Jerome, and Yvonne Ihl, Caldwell.

MR. AND MRS. STEVEN HENNA

Check before you leap

DEAR ABBY: Hoorah for the young man who doesn't shake hands with anyone—and don't bet too heavily on the germ theory.

A few months ago I had a right hand painfully aching when I shook hands with a professional football player. A few weeks ago, I shook hands with a retired plumber who apparently wanted to prove that he was the strongest man-on-earth. Result: one fractured bone.

A few days ago, a slightly built law student finished the wrecking job on my hand. This note is written in pain. If those strong men want to prove their masculinity, let them find another victim. I'm for the Oriental custom of bowing.

SUFFERING IN SCOTSDALE

DEAR SUFFERING! Let's shake on that!

DEAR ABBY: I have long hair and make no apologies for it. Long hair is one of the most stupid things for anyone to argue over because long hair is just that—long hair. It doesn't hurt anybody, and if a man wants to wear it that way, he should have the right to do so without getting hassled.

In fact, have you ever noticed that people with short hair are always telling people with long hair to get their hair cut? But it is very rare to find a person with long hair who tells people with short hair to let their's grow.

People with long hair seem to be more mature than people with short hair because they let people look the way they want to instead of feeling that everyone's looks are their business.

Please print this letter so that all the critics with short hair will lay off those of us who like long hair. Thanks. BOB IN PASADENA

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 What is the cause and cure of "geographic tongue?"
 Also, I have another question. What produces the feeling of a little shock when someone touches the TV knob or even, sometimes, when touching another person? — L. G.

The surface of the tongue consists of tiny structures called papillae. Normally, these structures form a rather uniformly smooth surface. When there is an enlargement of a group of the papillae, an irregular design can appear, and the tongue will have the appearance of a map in relief.

Any irritation cause this — from alcohol, tobacco, hot or spicy foods, toothpaste, mouth gargles, or local inflammations. Deficiency of vitamin B can also be a factor. Removal of the causative factors, and sometimes use of vitamin B supplements, is the usual treatment.

As to your other question, the one about shock from your TV. This could be due to a short in the electrical system of your set, and this must always be considered first. The phenomenon can also be caused by the static electricity you generate, as from your carpeting. This seems most prevalent in cold, dry weather. This might also explain the shock you get from other persons.

LORI MICHALK sets date August wedding planned

Irritants can cause problem

FAIRFIELD — Mr. and Mrs. Nick Plato, Bonners Ferry, announce the engagement of their daughter Lori Michalk to Lynden Osborne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Osborne, Fairfield.

An August wedding is planned in Bonners Ferry.

Miss Michalk is a graduate of the Bonners Ferry High School in 1974 and Osborne graduated from Fairfield High School in 1973. Both are now Juniors at the University of Idaho and both are agriculture majors.

Osborne is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Thomason and Mrs. Jessie Osborne, all Jerome.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 I am 58 years old and never had any allergies until this past year. Now my eye doctor says I have an allergy that is affecting my eyes. Is this possible?
 I also had a bladder infection this past year. How can you tell if it is really cleared up? What is the best way of treating allergies that affect the eyes? Please, also, send me your booklet, "Kidneys: Facts You Need to Know About Them," for which I am sending 25 cents to you, in care of this newspaper, and the required long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing — Mrs. M. J. D.

An eye irritation can be due to an allergy, a form of contact dermatitis, which is an inflammatory reaction to some material to which your skin is particularly sensitive.

A person may use the same soap or cosmetic material, including nail polish, for years without any obvious problem, then suddenly develop a sensitivity to it. In this, elimination of the causative agent is the only available treatment.

Incidentally, your bladder problem can also be allergy-based. But in such cases the agent is often a food. Usually, the bladder infection will be detectable in urine samples. When the urine tests show the infecting organism gone, you can assume it to be cleared up at the point of origin, which can be anywhere along the urinary tract. My booklet on kidneys, which you requested, will provide a more detailed discussion of urinary tract infections.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 What is the reason for flatulence? What causes it and what is the treatment? I am on a low fat, low milk and low residue diet, but that doesn't seem to control it. Do they ever recommend surgery to remove the diseased bowel? — M. M.

This is an inflammation of unknown cause which affects the large or small intestine, also called Crohn's disease, sometimes also regional enteritis, depending upon what portion of the intestine is involved. In severe cases there may be a thickening, even an ulceration, of the lining of the bowel area affected. Fistula, an abnormal passage in the tissue, may also develop.

A common symptom is pain in the lower abdomen on the right side. Sometimes there is pain around the umbilical area. Your diet is a conservative form of treatment. If it isn't successful, and if medication is not effective in removing the problem, then surgery may be recommended.

This is usually done when the thickening results in bowel obstruction.

Mini-Reviews

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Public Library officials have released mini-reviews for some of the new books recently received by the library.

"Gypsy on Eighteen Wheels; A Trucker's Tale" by Robert Krueger. Here is a pictorial essay about truckers that evokes the rich, complex culture of the road.

"The Test," based on interviews with drivers across the country, reveals that the guy with the big gut, spindly legs and bad kidneys has become the last of the American culture heroes, replacing the cowboy and rail humping hobo as a symbol of the free-wheeling American frontier life.

In spite of the glamour and romance of gear jamming, fostered by country music and barroom tales, he suffers disillusionment, discomforts and frustrations, many of which seem to be on the increase.

This is a fascinating study of a way of life that is lonely and often violent, uncertain and inevitably monotonous. The most, secretly, mischievous followers of the American ideal still condemn as morally unacceptable.

This is the tragic story of one who spent a lifetime redeeming himself from his sin — the story of amane whose soul-searing motivation turned him into possibly America's best selling author of all time.

Whoever his motivation was, his tremendous power and influence on the American ideal, for which so many paid him homage for so long, cannot be denied.

"The Lion of Justice" by Margaret Butler. Here is the epic clash of two towering and tormented — figures — Henry II and Thomas A'Becket.

Henry was urgent in his demands that Thomas serve in the office of the Archbishop of Canterbury. He reasoned that the interests of both church and state would be well served.

Thomas sensed the danger of his position, knowing that true men of God could not also serve Caesar. When Henry claimed secular jurisdiction over criminal clerks, violating Thomas' ecclesiastical privilege, a dangerous duel of wills developed that led to the murder in the cathedral.

"Two Minute Warning" by George La Fountaine. With only minutes to go in the final quarter of the Dolphins-Redskins play, the cameraman in the Goodyear blimp — high above the packed, cheering throng — relays a disturbing shot to his colleagues monitoring the TV spectacular below.

Behind the scoreboard — in a most inaccessible post in the bleachers — a man leans casually against the wall, a high powered rifle at his side.

The "two-minute warning" will signal the coliseum security men to hustle the VIPs out of the stadium, and for Norbert Ball, a lonely, twisted 17-year-old perched up there behind the scoreboard, it will signal his bid for international celebrity and a high security cell in San Quentin — or his death.

This is a riveting novel, a psychological suspense that introduces a formidably gifted new writer.

Contest winners

LACEY Thornton, fourth grade student at the Hollister Grade School, and ALICE Hamilton, Robert Stuart Junior High School, Twin Falls, are the winners in the American Heritage poster contest of the Farm Bureau women's committee. They received cash prizes and their posters will be sent to the state competition in Pocatello.

Kiwanians shun women members

ATLANTA (UPI) — Kiwanis International's annual convention voted Tuesday for the third straight year to ban women from membership in the worldwide organization and ousted two U.S. chapters which already have admitted women in violation of the group's charter.

Delegates gathered at the Omni convention center rejected an amendment that would have allowed women to hold membership in a 4,941-to-563 vote. The amendment, sponsored by a Chicago chapter, would have modified the national charter to allow membership to "men and/or women of good character and community standing."

The Kiwanians then voted against readmitting two chapters whose charters were revoked because they have accepted women members. Results of the secret ballot were released today.

The Great Neck, N.Y., chapter sent a woman, Mrs. Carol E. Casher, to the convention to plead its case for readmittance. But her plea was rejected in a 3,800 to 482 vote.

The Cheyenne Mountain Chapter of Colorado Springs, Colo., had its appeal read by a Kiwanis International lieutenant governor who made it clear he was just reading the appeal, not approving it.

After hearing the appeal, the delegates voted 3,860-489 to sustain the Cheyenne Mountain's charter revocation.

Mrs. Casher, a Port Washington, N. Y., attorney, said in a statement that she had applied and been accepted as a member of the Great Neck chapter last year.

She said four other women were admitted to the chapter, "all of whom were successful in their respective businesses and professions and highly esteemed by the community."

Hollister students win honors

By MARJORIE LIERMAN, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Winners in the American Heritage poster contest have been announced by the Farm Bureau, with Hollister School walking off with a lion's share of honors.

Lacey Thornton, fourth grade student in the Hollister-Grade School, was first place winner in the junior division of fourth through sixth grades. Cheri Kay Skinner, fifth grade, Hollister, was second place winner, and Cheryl Ann Fiscus, sixth grade, also Hollister, placed third.

The senior division of seventh through ninth grades saw Alice Hamilton, Robert Stuart Junior High, Twin Falls, receiving first place, followed by Robert Donald Ransom, Filer Elementary School, second, and Gloria Rose-Heimgartner, Buhl-Junior High, third.

The contest is sponsored each year by the Twin Falls County Farm Bureau women's committee, and cash awards are given in three places in each division with the two first prize winners eligible to enter their posters in the state fairs at Pocatello in November.

All entries were judged on eye appeal, message impact, slogan, originality and neatness. Mrs. Monroe Hays and Mrs. Meri Leonard, Filer, and Mrs. John Pastoor, Twin Falls, were judges.

With Bi-centennial observances now beginning, the contest this year featured a patriotic theme. Lacey Thornton's poster depicted an American Eagle in red, white and blue, marked by the numbers "1776-1976" and the theme "Happy Birthday America."

The essay which accompanied her poster said she was saluting the United States by saying Happy Birthday, America, and using the bald eagle, the country's symbol, and putting 13 stars on his chest to represent the 13 original colonies.

Miss Hamilton titled her poster "Sounds of Freedom" and used three media, colored pencils, tempera paint and a felt pen to draw a liberty bell. Her essay is named "Our Heritage, Our Pride."

"... all men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Royal houses make peace with Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is trying to lay the ghost of Czar Nicholas II and gain some political capital at the same time.

Currently visiting Moscow are King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of Belgium, the third Western royal visitors to the capital of Communism in a month.

They are guests of the Supreme Soviet (Parliament), were met by President Nikolai V. Podgorny at the airport and dined by him on their first day. They are receiving front-page treatment in the press of the kind lavished on visitors of top political rank.

The Belgian couple was preceded by Queen Margrethe of Denmark — the first reigning Western European monarch to make a state visit to the Soviet Union since the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 — and the Grand Duke of Luxembourg, and their spouses.

There have been unconfirmed reports that approaches have been made to the Norwegian and Swedish royal courts and that finally Queen Elizabeth II of England might visit.

Most of the continents royal families became interrelated over the years, several with the Romanovs. So June 16, 1918, when the Bolsheviks led Czar Nicholas, the Empress Alexandra and their children to execution in a basement in Ekaterinburg in Siberia, became a black day on court calendars throughout Europe.

One of Queen Margrethes 19th century relatives was the slain Czar's mother. Baudouin is more distantly connected. The British royal family is connected both through the queen — her grandfather King George V was the Czar's cousin and the empress Alexandra was the great-aunt of Prince Philip's uncle, Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Now the Soviet descendants of the Bolsheviks and the progeny of the few remaining European royal houses are making their peace.

The Soviets have shown every sign of wanting to forget the whole story of the Czar's death and the Western monarchies see it as largely irrelevant in an egalitarian society 50-odd years later.

There are signs too that the Soviets welcome the European royals as a way of broadening détente in a way ordinary people will recognize and thus solidify political ties.

Prisoner walks out of facility

SALMON — Edmond Stone, Blackfoot, being held in Salmon City Jail in lieu of posting $5,000 bond on a charge of driving while intoxicated, walked out of the Eastern Idaho Mental Health Center on Main Street and hasn't been seen since.

Salmon City police had been taking Stone to the center for consultation.

Stone appeared before District Judge H. Reynolds George and upon motion of his defense counsel, Sherman Furey, was ordered to Idaho State Hospital South at Blackfoot for evaluation.

Stone had been charged in a complaint signed June 2 by State Policeman K. D. Woodbridge. He had waived preliminary hearing and was bound over from magistrate court to district court.

Chief of Police Jed Wilson said Stone is believed to have left the area.

Guilty racist employers owe victims back pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 8 to 0 Wednesday that employers found guilty of race or sex discrimination must normally give victims back pay even if the firm did its best to eliminate such practices.

Justice Potter Stewart said lower courts have some discretion in making the back pay awards, but must do so in most circumstances to meet goals of the 1965 Civil Rights Act barring discrimination by race or sex.

"It is the reasonably certain prospect of a back pay award that 'provides the spur or catalyst which causes employers and unions to self-examine and to self-evaluate their employment practices and to endeavor to eliminate, so far as possible, the last vestiges of an unfortunate and ignominious page in the country's history,'" Stewart said.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Harry A. Blackmun agreed that judges have discretion to make the monetary awards, but said a "good faith" effort by the employer to end discrimination should be an important factor in the decision.

Stewart countered that "if back pay were awardable only upon a showing of bad faith, the remedy would become a punishment for moral turpitude, rather than a compensation for workers' injuries," and thus defeat the aim of the Civil Rights Act of making victims of discrimination "whole" again.

The Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP, which sought the back pay in a suit against the Albemarle Paper Co. plant in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., called the ruling "tremendously significant" because it will encourage employers to rapidly eliminate discrimination and cut down their liability.

In another case decided Wednesday, minorities and the poor suffered a blow in efforts to challenge housing discrimination. Over the bitter dissent of four justices, the Court threw out a major test of suburban zoning laws.

Several Rochester, N.Y., groups, including blacks and whites, sued the adjacent town of Penfield on grounds highly restrictive zoning ordinances effectively barred lower income minorities from buying homes in the suburb and raised property taxes in the central city.

Justice Lewis F. Powell determined that none of the groups had "standing" to bring suit, mostly because they had not suffered direct injuries.

By handing down five rulings Wednesday, the Supreme Court had only about a dozen cases left pending for decision. Several were scheduled for release Tuesday and the Court is expected to resolve the rest Monday to conclude its current term.

In other opinions, the Court ruled 5 to 4 that neither the Constitution nor the National Labor Relations Act gives unions or employers the right to a jury trial when found in contempt of court injunctions unless defendants face over six months in jail.

Mafia, CIA tried to kill Castro

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mafia figure John Roselli told Congress that he worked with the CIA in the early 1960s on six separate attempts to either poison or shoot Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, columnist Jack Anderson reported today.

Anderson said in a televised commentary on ABC's AM America that he interviewed Roselli Tuesday after the 69-year-old underworld operative testified for more than two hours in a closed session of the Senate Intelligence committee, which is probing the Central Intelligence Agency.

Anderson said that Roselli promised him the interview 4½ years ago when Anderson revealed in his newspaper column that the CIA had recruited Roselli and Chicago crime boss Sam Giancana to mastermind Castro's assassination.

According to Anderson, Roselli said Tuesday that Giancana, who was shot to death at his home Thursday night, was not directly involved in the assassination plot.

"He knew about it. He even suggested a Cuban contact, nothing more," Anderson said.

Roselli told Anderson that he was first contacted about participating in a Castro murder plot in 1960 in Los Angeles by Robert Maheu, a former top aide to billionaire Howard Hughes.

Roselli met again with Maheu in New York City on Sept. 14, 1960 and the serious planning began, Anderson said.

Roselli named two CIA officials, James O'Donnell and William Harvey, as the super-fools of the project. Harvey was scheduled to be interviewed today by the Senate committee.

Anderson said Roselli told him he flew to Miami to recruit an "assassination squad."

He said the first attempt involved an effort to poison Castro with pellets supplied by the CIA. Roselli said the pellets were delivered to the plotters hotel room by Maheu.

Maheu dramatically opened his brief case, revealing $10,000 in cash and the fatal pellets. The money was distributed to the Cuban plotters.

Anderson said Roselli swore he never took any money from the CIA, except for incidental expenses. He paid the big expenses out of his own pocket.

Roselli said the poison pills were supposed to take three days to work. Using that type of pill, he said, the poison would have time to work its way out of Castro's system before he died and his death would be attributed to natural causes.

Roselli told Anderson that he never found out what happened to the plotters or the pellets.

"But they tried again later with a stronger dose of poison," Anderson said. "Not long afterward, reports reached them that Castro was desperately ill. Roselli said he didn't know whether the illness was caused by the poison or a virus. But Castro survived and the plotters apparently did not."

After the second poisoning attempt, Maheu was cut out of the planning as Roselli carried on alone, with CIA help.

He said four more attempts were made. "The last assassination squad made it to an Havana rooftop before we were caught," Anderson quoted Roselli as saying. "On March 1, 1963 the project was abandoned."

Bill to reduce 'pot' penalties

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Next year, California residents may face only a traffic-ticket style fine for possession of small amounts of marijuana.

Legislation to make possession of enough pot to roll 20 cigarettes punishable by a small fine returned to the Senate today for final legislative approval.

Supporters had forecast a last-ditch floor fight but expressed optimism the embattled bill to reduce marijuana penalties would reach the desk of Democratic Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who favors its principle.

It would take effect Jan. 1, when policemen no longer would make arrests for possessing an ounce or less of marijuana. Instead, they would issue citations carrying a maximum $100 fine.

Currently, possession of any amount is punishable by a $500 fine, six months in jail or a possible 10 years in prison, a set of alternatives supporters of the bill argued are too severe for the crime.

Assembly approval of the measure occurred Tuesday when five Democrats who last month had not voted or voted against it changed their minds and voted "aye" in the face of Republican warnings that their action would be made a reelection issue next year.

On a 42-34 vote, one more than the majority required, the bill by Sen. George Moscone, a Democratic candidate for mayor of San Francisco, was passed and sent back to the Senate for concurrence in minor amendments.

Eleven Democrats joined 23 Republicans in voting "no" after a marathon eight-hour session of bickering and procedural moves by Republicans and some dissident Democrats to delay action.

Priest resigns to wed

MIAMI (UPI) — Former Biscayne College President John McDonnell has been relieved of his priestly vows by the Vatican and will marry the woman he has been dating since he was 17.

McDonnell, 57, a priest for almost 40 years, resigned as president of Biscayne College in January after six years in office. He and his fiancée went to Rome in early June to personally present the petition for dispensation.

"John is still a member in good standing in his church and we are absolutely delighted by the outcome," said Mrs. Whiteside, who is Protestant.

The couple will be married in Rome, Mrs. Whiteside said, and spend "a couple of weeks" in Switzerland before coming home to Miami.

New Salmon sewer project called imperative

SALMON — The city of Salmon has been informed by the District 7 Health Department that "it is absolutely imperative" that the proposed sewer system on the west side of the Salmon River in Salmon be under construction before the end of 1975.

Tom Walker, who heads the Salmon-Health-Department office, said in a letter to Mayor Don Vial and members of the City Council that the system is needed for the following reasons:

1. The health department has issued only temporary permits for individual subsurface sewage disposal systems since 1971. Temporary permits were issued on the condition that the municipal sewage system on the bar would be completed within two years.

"It is now 1975 and the sewer system construction has not begun. The issuance of temporary individual sewage disposal permits cannot continue. If the construction is not started in 1975," Walker said.

2. The District 7 Board of Health passed standards in 1974 requiring that the minimum lot size for individual sewage disposal be no less than one-half acre. There are very few, if any, lots in the subdivisions on the Salmon bar that will meet these requirements.

"Therefore, sewage disposal permits for these small lots cannot continue to be issued unless it is demonstrated that the Salmon sewer system will be under construction in 1975. This could potentially eliminate 90 per cent plus building on the bars.

3. The existing sewage disposal systems on the bar in Salmon have had a history of malfunction and production of surfacing sewage which is definitely a health hazard. Malfunctioning sewage disposal systems and those causing public health hazards must be corrected.

"The only feasible means of correction of this situation is a municipal sewage collection system," he letter said.

4. Irrigation practices in high areas of the Salmon bar are resulting in subwater flowing through sewage disposal systems and surfacing in basements and lower areas of the bar.

"Therefore, the storm drain system in conjunction with the sewer system would correct this serious health hazard," Walker said.

5. The high saturation of the substrata on the bar area increases the possibility that the municipal water supply distribution system could be contaminated if any leakage developed.

6. Areas below the bar are experiencing standing water that is apparently nothing more than sewage runoff from the bar. In addition, we are having serious problems with individual wells below the bar.

Some of these wells are showing extreme contamination.

Walker said that for these reasons it is "an absolute necessity that the entire city limits of Salmon, including the bar area, have a municipal sewage collection and disposal system. Construction must begin in 1975 if dwelling construction is to continue."

First aid theme set

TWIN FALLS — "First aid" is the theme this week of the Twin Falls City Parks and Recreation Department.

Besides the normal summer activities, a "victim contest" will be held Friday in each of the seven parks.

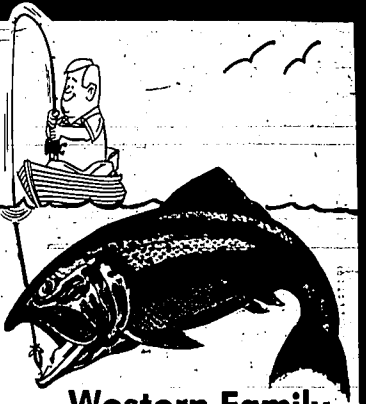

Prizes will be given to the most authentic-looking victims.

BIGGEST FISH STORY OF 1975

Swensen, the famous Norwegian fisherman, has just returned from the Pacific Coast with the biggest tuna fish ever captured, weighing at least 4 1/4 tons. Some observers thought it was a whale but it was really a tuna. Swensen fought it for 33 hours and 10 minutes non-stop with a bamboo pole. The fish was definitely too big to mount as a trophy, but you can buy it this week at Swensen's Markets in little cans for the lowest price on tuna in a year and a half. If this story seems pretty smelly, it's because it's all pretty fishy — except the price of the tuna fish which is the absolute truth and the lowest price on tuna anywhere.

Swensen's invite you to compare the quality of this tuna with any other brand, nationally advertised or private label.

Idaho Power sets projects

SALMON — Idaho Power Co. is undertaking several projects in the Salmon area. About 5.7 miles of underground line is being installed from Williams Lake to the top of Lake Mountain to service the Federal Aviation Agency's aircraft navigational facility to be constructed there this summer.

Rex Lanham Construction, Emmett, has a 12-man crew here to start work on installing eight miles of power line from North Fork to the Nep Lynch sawmill site and three miles of line up Carmen Creek.

Tom Spofford, Pocatello, Idaho Power division manager, said here that the work in the Salmon area this year will exceed 6,000 man hours.

Jerome eyes sewage plan

Treatment at the Twin Falls plant would eliminate the need for Jerome to have its own wastewater treatment facility, which has created a great deal of controversy by area farmers west of town who have strongly objected at several different public hearings to having the plant located in their area.

wastewater would be pumped from the plant site through a 12-inch buried pressure pipeline to the Snake River. The proposed pipeline route would run from the new site approximately one-half mile south, then westward, then south along the two-mile westward road to the Snake River.

Blaine okays housing plan

By BARTQUERRELL-Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission gave preliminary approval Wednesday to a major housing development near Clarendon Hot Springs.

The commission listened to vocal opposition by Idaho Fish and Game Department officials that final approval of the plan can severely hamper and kill a migratory deer route.

He said there were deer wintering to the north of the Deer Creek road during 1974-75. Commission member Fred Jenkins told Will, "Deer aren't afraid of people. The people themselves won't hurt them."

TF land use plan drawn

Housing objectives outlined in the rough draft included development of low-middle income multi-family projects; use of vacant in-city properties, required attachment of all non-agricultural dwellings to a sewer system, and development of minimum standards for the installation of trailer houses on agricultural tracts.

Open space recommendations in the rough draft included land purchase by governmental bodies of areas of special beauty for public enjoyment; establishment of a Rock Creek Canyon greenway and trail system for public use, acquisition of Snake River Canyon rim land for public use and construction of a rim trail for foot, bicycle and equestrian traffic.

Development of public trails were recommended for several locations, including the Snake River-Rock Creek junction, Twin Falls Park, Shoshone Falls Park and South Park. Under land use, the rough draft established a series of policies with the general objectives of safety, beautification and preservation of agricultural lands.

Meet held on zone requests

TWIN FALLS — Public hearings were held on three zoning requests at the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Tuesday night, Tom Schafer, chairman, said today.

Commission members approved a request from W. F. Warburton to re-zone about 30 acres of land directly across Falls Avenue from the College of Southern Idaho from residential low density to residential medium density.

The builder plans to build apartments, with duplex and single family dwellings on the site. The commission recommended that a 200-foot strip of land adjacent to Falls Avenue be reserved across the entire front of the property for residential low density until the builder had definite plans for that section.

Also approved was a request from the city to re-zone property behind the city hall and new fire station to permit construction of a new city police station on Third Avenue East. The change would be from residential-professional to commercial general.

Action was tabled on a request, also made by the City Council, to change the setback requirements on all zones along Addison Avenue from the center line of the street instead of from the property line as it is now.

The commissioners also questioned the possibility of duplication of efforts to other plans now in effect in each of the counties. Leonard said he wondered if the financing for MVAG was going to stop at 10 cents per capita or just keep growing each year.

licular area of planned heavy development. He's got a development the size of a diamond in a million acres."

Planning and zoning chairman Nick Purdy told the group, "It seems anytime we want to do something like that, some department is automatically against it. What we want from the fish and game recommendations rather than a flat 'no, we don't want anything.'"

Purdy said there is little doubt the development will have an effect on the wildlife. "However, this is the real world and I guess we have agreed to accommodate the people," he said.

Tom Farr, Kelchum ranger with the Sawtooth National Forest, told the commission it will create increased fire hazards and cause an impact on surrounding forest lands, residents and visitors.

He said the developer is proposing a small town and he doubts if all considerations have been taken into account.

Meyer told the commission the sewer and water systems will be organized under local improvement districts. There is scheduled a park and road district, Meyer said, which is a taxable entity taking much of the responsibility of services from the county.

Commission members will view the final plan next month. The proposed Clarendon development is located about three miles north and about five miles west of Hailey.

The second major development presented for preliminary approval was offered by John Koppes, Hailey, for Indian Creek Ranch two miles north of Hailey and east of U. S. Highway 93.

Koppes proposes 130 units on five-acre plots up a 3.5-mile-long canyon. In addition, he is proposing 20 townhouses at the mouth of the canyon.

A meandering trout stream will be rechanneled under his plan, and a seven-mile gravel road will encircle the development.

The commission recommended he work with the county planners to redesign his proposed concept. The commission objected mainly to rechanneling of the stream and the dust problem which would result from the two-road loop system.

Koppes and the commission county commissioner Ivan Gustafson told him the five-acre standard subdivision is the route he should follow.

Carey Act gains favor

In three years, he has to have been living on the land for the last nine months in a substantial way. The law allows for the land after paying $5 per acre for it.

If the director of the department of water resources approves his proof, he gets a patent and the land is his.

In the Magic Valley, 28 applications have been filed in Mindoka, Cassia, Twin Falls, Lincoln and Jerome counties, according to Robert Haynes at the Twin Falls branch of the Idaho Water Resources Board.

The applications ask for 51,000 acres, with 40,000 covered by five applicants, the biggest requesting 27,400 acres on the south side of the river east of Burley.

Another claims 8,000 acres between Wendell and Gooding, with 12 applications covering small chunks of 320 acres each throughout the valley.

None of the applications requests land in Twin Falls County, Haynes said, because "the problem is getting water to the land left in desert here. The Salmon Tract in the southern part of the county was settled under the Carey Act, but only a fraction of the land planned for irrigation is now under cultivation, Haynes said.

An association of Carey Act projects headed by Vernon Ravenscroft, Tuttle, met after the meeting to discuss their testimony at the formal hearings Wednesday in Boise.

MVAG funding aired by commissioners

By CHARLOTTE BELL Times-News writer

JEROME — The survival of the Magic Valley Association of Governments is once again in question as Magic Valley county commissioners ponder whether or not to continue funding the association.

being taken over by state and federal controls and regulations.

Merle Leonard, Twin Falls County commissioner, said he had mixed emotions over funding MVAG for another year because he couldn't see where the money spent by the counties last year had produced any benefits from the association.

County commissioners from throughout Magic Valley met in Jerome Wednesday for a fourth district county commissioners meeting and agreed to provide funding for MVAG until Jan. 1 so the association could continue to operate while the commissioners obtain answers to questions they have over the worth of the association and problems associated with dissolving the MVAG.

"Can anyone show me anything we have derived from MVAG this past year?" Leonard asked. Chairman, L. W. Baldwin, Camas County commissioner, agreed with Leonard as did the other commissioners that they could not think of any good the association has done any of the counties in the past year. "If they can't show us what they can do, I think we should forget about it," Baldwin said.

The two major concerns expressed by the commissioners were whether or not the public is getting any good from MVAG for the money spent and the possibility that the counties are beginning to lose their local control and are

Speaking in defense of MVAG was Everett Ward, Lincoln County commissioner, who said he didn't think a year was enough time for MVAG to show its worth.

"I have attended the meetings and at three of them, there was no quorum present to conduct any business and two meetings were spent on redoing the specifications for a quorum," Ward said.

Claude Bernard, Jerome County commissioner, said in view of Ward's statement, "I think it goes back to county representatives if they are not interested enough to come to the meetings, I think we should forget it whether its good or bad."

The commissioners also questioned the possibility of duplication of efforts to other plans now in effect in each of the counties. Leonard said he wondered if the financing for MVAG was going to stop at 10 cents per capita or just keep growing each year.

doing or where they are going. We were handed a mandate by the state government last year to either get out of SRPA and Wood Resource Conservation District or else there would be no funding," Leonard said.

"What is the recourse we have if we turn them (MVAG) down. Are we going to be cut off from state and federal funds," Leonard asked.

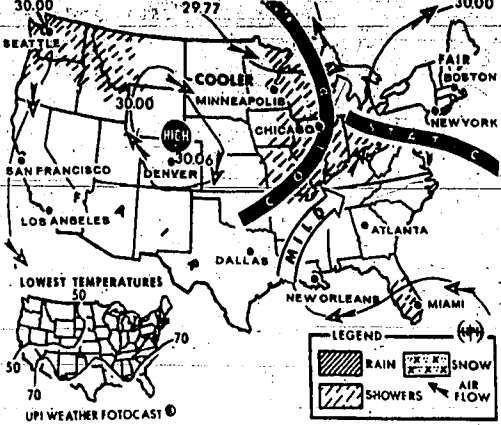

Bernard said all of the counties have been threatened by the state and a joint meeting of the county governments, they wouldn't get funding on either the state or federal level.

A list of questions will be drawn up regarding the concern of the commissioners and the discussion held at Wednesday's meeting.

No bail asked in gun crimes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Wednesday proposed that judges jail and deny bail to persons using guns while committing a crime.

He said those offenders should be "singled out for special punishment" and "deserve little leeway."

Mansfield introduced legislation which would permit judges to rule such offenders a "threat to society" and keep them jailed pending trial and appeal.

In a Senate speech, Mansfield praised President Ford for advocating stronger penalties for gun-related crimes and compensation for crime victims.

"Speaking for the countless thousands of victims of crime," he said "we in the Senate welcome his support for this proposal.

"To that issue and to the question of gun-crime, I am confident that the Senate will devote the very highest priority."

But Mansfield said proposals by Ford and others — dealing with the death penalty, riot control, entrapment, wiretaps, document classification, obscenity and other matters — need "a great deal of investigation, review, and analysis" to balance the rights of the accused and the protection of society.

Mansfield has long advocated harsh penalties for persons using guns while carrying out a criminal act, and compensation for victims of a crime. He noted that the Senate has passed compensation legislation five times but it has never become law.

He said his personal attention in the anti-crime field was directed "to the victim because he has been too often forgotten, though the most affected party involved; to the gun criminal because I think his burden must be made intolerable if we are ever to control the violence he espouses."

"This measure would apply to the gun user before trial," he said "it would address the problem of pre-trial recidivism — to the repeater who uses his weapon for crime before he is tried for his initial wanton act of violence or while he appeals his conviction."

"Specifically, in cases where offender is charged with carrying or using a firearm in the commission of a crime, the judge, under this proposal, may find that the defendant poses a threat to the community and order him detained."

"In my judgment, one who is found with a weapon during an alleged offense is violent and represents a threat to the community."

"That is the message which I seek to convey with this proposal. It is the message that guns are tools of violence and that those who resort to guns for criminal actions deserve little leeway."

Soviets eavesdrop on government officials

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Soviet electronic intelligence experts can listen to telephone calls placed from offices of the highest officials in the U.S. government, including the President, the Los Angeles Times said today.

The FBI has confirmed that experts in the Russian embassy in Washington, using rooftop antennas, can eavesdrop on high level phone conversations of American officials and has been able to do so for several years, the newspaper said in a report from its Washington bureau.

The capability is "a very scary thing from an intelligence point of view," an FBI source was quoted as saying. Tape recordings of U.S. government telephone traffic are sent to Soviet intelligence analysts in Moscow, the Times said.

"When the bureau first learned of the Soviet practice of intercepting Washington calls, it put the FBI lab to work to try to learn what kind of calls the Russians might be monitoring. It just so happened that one of the first calls the FBI intercepted was a White House conversation involving a high government official," the FBI source was quoted as saying.

He said the National Security Agency — the U.S. organization that carries out electronic intelligence gathering around the world — set out two years ago to find out what the Soviets could learn by monitoring microwave frequencies that now carry about 70 per cent of long distance calls, and some cross town calls in the U.S. telephone network.

The NSA traced one "that is intelligible only to someone listening on another telephone equipped with a scrambler with a corresponding coding."

"There aren't that many scrambler phones because that's an expensive and complicated system," the former CIA agent was quoted as saying.

The FBI source was quoted as saying the bureau has only three scrambler phones — for the director, the assistant director in charge of intelligence and the chief of the New York office.

"We wanted to put one on the West Coast," he said. "But it was just too expensive. It would have cost $250,000."

"Life here is very good, but I am not happy," Lua said. He was one of 101 refugees wanting to go back to Vietnam who arrived Tuesday, bringing the number of those awaiting repatriation here to almost 400.

"I thank the U.S. government for its moral and physical support. I am very grateful, but I want to return as soon as possible," he said.

Judge reserves decision

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — A State Supreme Court Justice reserved decision Wednesday on a motion to dismiss two sections of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves' $500,000 suit against Eddie Donovan, their former general manager.

Justice John J. Callahan reserved decision after attorneys for the Braves and Donovan argued during a sometimes stormy, two-hour court session. The legal battle saw Braves attorney Arnold Gardner and Victor Fuzak, Donovan's lawyer, stand and shout at each other at times.

The Braves' suit contends that Donovan, who joined the New York Knicks as general manager in April, violated a three-year oral contract with Braves owner Paul Snyder when he left to join the Knicks.

Wildlife benefit in new state compact

By ROYCE WILLIAMS
Idaho Dept. of Fish and Game

When future Idahoans drive down the state's highways, they might see more wildlife than they notice now.

Using land along the state's highways for wildlife habitat took a step forward this week as people from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game met with their counterparts in the Idaho Transportation Department's Division of Highways.

The Boise meeting was the third meeting so far this year between the two departments. Lewiston and Pocatello hosted the first two meetings. Contacts between the departments on mutual problems extend back to 1962.

When the three-hour meeting ended, both departments had agreed to include the other in early wildlife and highway planning, early planning that might turn a gravel pit into a good bass pond or include tunnels under highways for deer migration.

Also apparent by the time the meeting was over was the complexity of some of the problems, a complexity sometimes made more knotty by different needs of various wildlife species.

The velocity of flowing water is extremely important in determining whether fish will live in a stream. Stacy Gebhardt, fisheries management supervisor, said. In a good trout stream with shelter, he said, water velocity is generally less than one foot per second.

However, often the best place to build a road is along a stream channel. Crowded by the road, stream velocity is increased and if cover is lacking or water velocity exceeds one foot per second, trout, young steelhead and salmon numbers will be reduced in the stream," Gebhardt said.

Move the road up the hillside and it may cut through a thick, critical strip of winter range used by a deer herd.

With snow on the upper hillsides and crops or cities on the flat lands below, big game often is left only with the thin strip between to get them through the winter, Errol Nielson, staff biologist, said.

Studies are underway now, Nielson said, to find out just how much roads and the traffic they carry affect big game animals. Early indications are that the roads and the noise they bring push game out of some areas, he said.

While cover left uncultivated a road may be food and shelter for game birds, too much of it lets other animals wander suddenly onto a highway and into the path of a vehicle.

But, there still are areas where cooperation between the two departments could be very beneficial to both, Dick Norell, game bird supervisor, said.

One such area, Norell said, is using highway right-of-way land for pheasant habitat.

"Our hunter report card data this year shows the last pheasant season harvest was at an all-time low, and we are not expecting much improvement next year," he said, "unless we begin right away to give the pheasants places to live."

At this point, Norell said, all the department is hoping for is to halt the decline and hold the pheasant populations about where they are.

"With the advent of clean farming, urban sprawl and developments throughout our agricultural lands, we can no longer depend exclusively upon farmers to provide pheasant habitat," Norell said.

The department, he said, will be looking into using railroad and utility rights-of-way as well as roadsides.

The highway department expressed interest in discussions on ways roadsides could be used for pheasants and in choosing during critical times of the year for pheasants.

Both departments expressed a desire to look into ways: — To develop sportsman's access sites at rest stops and bridges.

— To look for ways to alter construction of roads to make fish migration easier, such as culvert installation in a manner that water velocity is cut down.

— To let wildlife habitat serve the dual purpose of stopping wind and water erosion on some highways and as homes for pheasants.

— To work together on fence design to cut down on the number of big game animals snared by the wires now strung along roads.

— To team up on acquiring road rights-of-way. In some cases, another 30 feet of right-of-way equals excellent sportsman's access to streams.

— To cooperate in repairing washed out roadways for the benefit of both fish and the traveling public.

— To explore legal aspects of joint funding of highway and wildlife projects.

Wake Forest grabs lead in NCAA golf

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Defending champion Wake Forest held a six-shot lead in the rain-delayed and suspended first round of the 78th annual NCAA Golf Championships Wednesday at Ohio State University's Scarlet course.

The Deacons, getting a two-under-par 70 from Bob Byman and a pair of 71s from Walker Cup stars Jay Haas and Curtis Strange, the defending medalist in the event, had a total of 288 when play was halted because of darkness with 28 golfers still on the course.

Play was suspended for one hour and 45 minutes midway through the round when a thunderstorm struck the 7,000-yard, par-72 layout.

Officials called an end to play with seven groups still on the course. Those who did not finish will complete their rounds starting 7 a.m. Thursday and then go directly to their regular second-round tee times.

NFL puts pro bowl in two new cities

NEW YORK (UPI) — National Football League owners gave a plug to two of their newest members Wednesday by awarding them the 1977 and 1978 Pro Bowls.

Seattle's 65,000-seat domed stadium, scheduled for completion next fall, will be the site of the January, 1977, Pro Bowl. Tampa will host the Pro Bowl the following year in its 71,000-seat stadium. Both the Seattle and Tampa franchises will include tickets for the Pro Bowl in their season-ticket package, making them compulsory for season-ticket holders.

The owners also adopted a new procedure for determining sites of postseason games in an effort to give more of a reward for regular season performances. The new procedure goes into effect this year.

In the Divisional Playoffs, the two division winners with the highest win-loss percentage will be the home teams. Division winner (No. 1) with the best record will play the wild card team and division winner (No. 2) will play the third division winner (No. 3), unless the wild card team is from the same division as the team with the best win-loss record. In that event, No. 1 would be home to No. 3 and No. 2 would be home to the wild card. In no event will the wild card team be the home team.

In the Conference Championships, the surviving division winner with the highest win-loss percentage will be the home team. In no event would the wild card team be the home team, regardless of win-loss record. Tie-breaking procedures now on the books remain unchanged.

In other action, the owners withdrew a proposal to eliminate the coin flip 30 minutes before the game in favor of giving the visiting team the option. Proposed use of a kicking tee on extra points and field goal attempts was also withdrawn.

Idaho, Utah working toward Bear Lake cutthroat fishery

Idaho and Utah are working together on a project to establish a larger fishable cutthroat trout population in Bear Lake on the Utah-Idaho border.

The cutthroat which occur naturally in the lake seem to be dwindling in numbers. Biologists are not sure of the reason for their apparent decline, but it may be a result of changing stream conditions. The mature cutthroat spawn in the stream which drain into Bear Lake and reproduction is dependent upon stream quality. It is also felt many of the small, naturally reproduced fish suffer mortality when they leave the streams and go into the lake.

In an attempt to solve the problem, the two states are trapping the first and taking the eggs. Idaho has built a trap on St. Charles Creek on the west side of Bear Lake and has trapped more than 500 fish. Of these, the ratio of cutthroat to rainbow-cutthroat hybrids was three to one.

The hybrid fish are allowed to pass upstream from the trap and spawn naturally while the true, pure cutthroat trout are taken to the Utah trapping site at Swan Creek.

The hybrid fish are not kept, since the aim of the project is to establish more pure cutthroats rather than more hybrids.

At Swan Creek, the eggs are taken from the fish. Eggs are moved to Egan Hatchery in southern Utah where they will be hatched and the fish raised for about a year. The fish will be released back in the lake as fingerlings rather than fry. Hopefully, the fingerling fish will have lower mortality and result in more fishing for the cutthroat fisherman.

Chacon to fight suspension, fine by athletic commission

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former featherweight champion Bobby Chacon Wednesday accused the California Athletic Commission of depriving him of his constitutional rights for slapping him with a fine and suspension because he was out of condition for his title fight.

The commission levied a $2,500 fine and indefinite suspension against Chacon because he did not appear to be in good physical shape when he met Mexico City's Ruben Turley for the featherweight title last Friday night, and lost by a second round knockout.

Chacon and Don Fraser, executive vice-president of Forum Boxing Inc., charged that Robert Turley, executive officer of the State Boxing Commission, "wrongfully and arbitrarily" fined and suspended Chacon.

"A suit will be filed seeking the lifting of the suspension plus substantial damages to Chacon," Fraser said.

"This is a clear violation of due process of law under the constitution. It is particularly outrageous because the commission's own doctor examined Chacon twice before — once at the Friday morning June 20 weigh-in and one hour before the bout, and certified him physically fit."

The 23-year-old former champ, said Turley not only failed to conduct a hearing, but that no member of the commission took part in the decision.

Turley said the commission, which could lift Chacon's suspension at its meeting next month, did not accuse Chacon of failing to give his best performance against Olivares. "I thought he put forth the best effort he could, but you could tell in the first round that he didn't have all the strength he could have had.

"A champion owes the public the best and the 35,000 people watching didn't get their full money's worth.

He said Chacon, who got $150,000 from Friday night's gate, failed to get in shape because he tried to get under 126 pounds "by taking off weight in the steam room instead of hitting the bag and sparring."

Earlier Wednesday, Chacon said he would switch to the lightweight division because of his problems making the 126-pound lightweight limit.

Fraser said he is ready to line up former lightweight champ Ken Buchanan of Scotland in late August as Chacon's first foe in the higher weight division.

FOOT STOMPING The Nastase loses his temper following a controversial line call during Wimbledon action Wednesday. He had to play out the last game with a new racket in losing to Texan Sherwood Stewart 8-6, 6-8, 6-3. (UPI telephoto)

Four college forces support women's athletic legislation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four major forces in higher education today threw their weight behind new rules banning sex discrimination on campus, scolding at claims by college coaches that the plan will spell disaster for athletics.

All four groups representing hundreds of colleges and universities across the nation — sent women to present their case before a House subcommittee that is examining the rules — a three-year old law forbidding educational sex bias.

The rules go into effect July 21 unless disapproved by Congress.

"After hundreds of years of discrimination and inequality in our institutions of higher education, the time has come to provide women with equal opportunity in all educational programs," said Nellie M. Varner of the University of Michigan.

"To discriminate unjustly is to be inhumane, and the loss experienced by one social group directly impacts on all others in society."

Dr. Varner spoke on behalf of three prestigious educational groups — the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, the American Council on Education and the Association of American Universities.

Support also came from the Association of American Colleges, representing some 700 liberal arts colleges, most of them private and many of them church-related.

"Women's groups and educational institutions have waited three long years for this regulation," said Dr. Bernice Sandles of AACU.

"Educational institutions need guidance from the federal government in order to comply with the congressional mandate for equal educational opportunity," she said.

"Sending it back for further drafting will only delay the implementation of Title IX and will deny to women and girls the educational opportunities that are the birthright of their brothers."

This old boy says his wife forgets things on purpose. He's grateful. She forgot within three days the time he blew $450 at the track, he says. Took her only about as long as was needed to turn the cushion to forget the cigarette burn in the couch. And he says when somebody asked her if she recalled the New Year's Eve that he fell off the front porch with a glass in his hand, she replied, "Certainly not, I clearly remember forgetting that. Our Love and War man is considering a trophy for that fine girl."

NOT EVERYBODY realizes a bird of paradise is a cousin to the common crow. So reports a gentleman who devoted 28 years to a study of the matter. He cares more than I do.

GREATEST

Q. "Name the greatest music composer of all time, please?"

A. By all means, Richard Wagner. And the greatest dramatist, William Shakespeare, naturally. And the greatest novelist, Fyodor Dostoevsky. And the greatest U. S. president, Abe Lincoln. And the greatest rifle shot, my late dad. The foregoing is offered to set straight those opinionated people who may have made the unfortunate mistake of thinking otherwise, poor souls.

Q. "WHAT'S the millionaire's salad?"

A. That's a gourmet delicacy made from the heart of the coconut palm. The heart is at the palm's top, a big bud of tender leaves about the size of a rolled newspaper. Cut it out and you kill the tree.

THE HARD FACTS

Remarkable that half the people who work everyday in West Germany go home for lunch. . . REMEMBER, that Douglas fir tree grows three feet a year straight up, if average. . . WHAT, YOU can't name the only state in which there are no large-mouthed bass? Tut tut. It's Alaska. . . CLAIM IS made that the Russians invented the first filter-tipped cigarette in 1910. . . WHEN IT comes to paying the household bills, only 34 out of every 100 husbands handle that chore.

NO HIGH SCHOOL GIRL should forget the odds run 140,000 to one against the possibility that she'll marry one of her teachers.

Eviction notice sparks campaign

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Gray-haired Rose Gann has 22 dimes and a lot of faith she will get 2,999,975 more in time to pay the hotel which is evicting her.

Mrs. Gann, who sells artificial flowers on downtown streets, complained to the city council about conditions at the Black Hotel, her home for the past seven months. The hotel gave her a 30-day eviction notice.

"Her complaints centered on the lack of hot water, days without air conditioning and allegedly unsanitary conditions in the hotel coffee shop, now closed.

"They call it pandhandling," she said. "I put time and effort into everything I make."

Nudism thrives in Michigan hills

SARANAC, Mich. (UPI) — Nudism, a way of life usually associated with sunnier climes, is thriving on 150-acre hills and trees just 20 miles east of President Ford's hometown.

For the visitor or newcomer, taking part in nudist activities for the first time is not as traumatic as it might seem.

"I have faith in God," she said. "God put this idea in me in the first place. God will work out and whatever comes will be better."
