British pound, stock mart drop

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's ailing pound plummeted to its lowest value in history today in a selling wave sparked by surging inflation and no sign of immediate government action to halt it.

The collapse of the pound hit the stock market too. Stock prices tumbled throughout the day.

Called home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dimitz has been recalled from Washington for consultations in Tel Aviv.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry said Dimitz was called home to discuss — a reported U.S. ultimatum to accept Egyptian conditions for an interim agreement in the Middle East, or lose American backing at a reconvened Geneva peace conference.

West rejects Soviet summit call

GENEVA (UPI) — Western nations dug in their heels at the European Security Conference today and rejected Soviet demands to fix July 28 as the date for a Helsinki summit conference to sign a security agreement.

The West insisted that Moscow first make concessions on outstanding issues, especially concerning the prior notification of military maneuvers.

Late gold bids pour in at auction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flooded with hundreds of last-minute bids, the government today began the tedious job of selling 500 ounces of gold from the U.S. stockpile.

About 750 bids in sealed envelopes were on hand at 11 a.m. when auctioneer George Jamison of the General Services Administration opened the sale.

Visits off

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the Nobel prize-winning author exiled from the Soviet Union, has cancelled two appearances on North Carolina campuses this week.

Wake Forest University President James Ralph Scales said the author told him in a telephone conversation, "This is a very bewildering country and I am very, very tired."

Argentine workers call strike

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Organized labor in Argentina's western Mendoza province called a 24-hour strike today in a growing challenge to President Maria Estela Peron's decision to cut wage increases negotiated with the major industries.

The call came two days after workers paralyzed Buenos Aires with a general strike and a seven-hour demonstration calling for the resignation of Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo.

Student wants closer US-Lao ties

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — A student protest leader today called for close U.S.-Laotian ties — including economic aid from Washington — but the American presence in Laos shrank to near the vanishing point.

"There should be a new type of relationship between the Laotian and American people," said Khamsay Sourinthone, a leader of the National Federation of Students.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a sharp retreat from the past emphasis on the atom, federal energy officials today formally abandoned the nuclear breeder reactor as a major power source for this century and raised solar power research to unprecedented prominence.

Delivering a 25-year research blueprint to Congress and President Ford, officials hastened to note that the basic energy costs in the United States are likely to double by the year 2000 no matter what technology is developed for the future.

And Ford also cautioned that energy sufficiency is still a long way off.

The research plan prepared by the Energy Research and Development Administration asked for a $71.4 million reduction in funding next year for the controversial breeder.

Dr. Robert C. Seamans Jr., head of ERDA, said the funding reduction was requested because the breeder program is being slowed down to allow a management reorganization and a new assessment of environmental impact.

In part, he said, more information is needed about potential medical effect of plutonium — the daily fuel the breeder uses and produces.

The new blueprint said the breeder, once targeted for commercial use no later than 1987, now probably will not become a major commercial energy producer until the early 21st century — if ever.

The blueprint called for five major changes in U.S. energy research policy:

- New emphasis on technical solutions to reliability and environmental problems that now inhibit greater use of presently available energy sources, primarily coal and water-cooled nuclear reactors.
- An immediate focus on conservation of - Increased attention to precisely understood technologies that can be developed rapidly, such as solar heating and cooling of buildings and the use of geothermal power.

FIST FIGHT between American guards (light uniforms) and North Korean soldiers erupts at Panmunjom during a meeting of the Korean Armistice Commission today. Reports said the clash involved two Americans and more than a dozen North Korean soldiers and newsmen.

(UPI)

War zone again

SEOUL (UPI) — More than a dozen North Korean guards and newsmen attacked two American military men at the truce village of Panmunjom today while the military Armistice Commission was meeting, eyewitnesses reported.

The fist fight came a few hours after the South Korean defense ministry announced the killing of a North Korean armed infiltrator and a search for another reportedly were on a mission to assassinate South Korean leaders.

The incident at Panmunjom stemmed from an argument between a U.S. Army major and a North Korean newsmen which developed into a fist fight, witnesses said.

More North Korean newsmen and guards joined in the brief fight and an American military policeman on guard duty rushed to the aid of the officer.

The major and the military policeman were knocked unconscious and had to be carried away on stretchers, the witnesses said.

When they came out of the room, however, they were on their feet and the major rode on the front seat of an ambulance called in by the Americans.

since the beginning of the department's child abuse campaign while the staff "hasn't nearly tripled," Klein said.

"I have confidence in the staff. They've been conscientious about their jobs," Klein said. He said a number of private physicians work with the department on child abuse cases; though he would not name these doctors.

HAW recently has come under fire for its child abuse program. Dr. James Hirschfeld, director of the Central Health District, has charged the department with "fatal incompetence" for its administration of the program.

Hirschfeld said today four physicians, including himself, a child psychologist, attorneys and a sheriff's deputy had set up a special "trauma team" to review Boise area child abuse cases.

He said the team found 10 "grossly handled cases" and "no incentive in HAW to repair its program."

"At least in Region IV (Boise area) somebody has been looking into the child abuse program," Hirschfeld said, adding that no such team of specialists not connected with HAW are looking into the program's operation in other parts of the state.

An internal HAW report has complained of "poor records, poor training, poor services and slow investigations" associated with HAW to review the program locally, he said, adding that the recently appointed "blue ribbon" commission should be able to do an adequate job.

No plans are being made to set up a team of specialists not set up by HAW to review the program locally, he said, adding that the recently appointed "blue ribbon" commission should be able to do an adequate job.

This commission was appointed by HAW director Dr. James Bay last week to investigate the state program, with emphasis on the Boise area.

Food stamp loophole stays open

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Current food stamp regulations contain a loophole which allows some middle income families to apply for government help in paying their grocery bills, the Agriculture Department told Congress today.

The department added, however, that it is not proposing any immediate action to plug the loophole, "since such provisions should be included in a more comprehensive review of welfare programs."

The Senate, in a resolution last February, had called for the report as a step toward overhaul of the stamp program which has expanded rapidly in recent years. The resolution asked, among other things, for proposals to keep people with "adequate incomes" out of the stamp program.

The report was submitted to the Senate Agriculture Committee today.

Since 1971, enrollment in the program has risen from about 9.4 million to an estimated 20 million people and costs are expected to reach about $6.5 billion in the year beginning July 1.

A committee source, criticizing the report as "weak," said chairman Herman E. Taftman, D-Cal., was expected to move quickly to schedule hearings on new food stamp legislation.

The "loophole" cited in the report is a system of deductions which stamp applicants can use to reduce their gross incomes to a net income figure low enough to qualify for stamps. Agriculture officials said the problem could be attacked by limiting or standardizing deductions, but declined to offer any specific proposals.

The report recommended 14 other reforms in stamp program rules to screen out "adequate income" applicants, crack down on program abuses and simplify operations. Among other steps, the report proposed cutting the fine for stamp violations from the present $5,000 to a new $1,000 level in order to encourage more cost consciousness.

Other proposals include provision for civil money penalties for misuse of stamps by unauthorized retailers, consumers and state agencies. Officials said Congress also should make permanent a temporary law banning stamps for students who are tax dependents of families too well-off to qualify for stamps, and should eliminate eligibility for drug addicts and alcoholics who get meals in rehabilitation centers.

More inflation due?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office predicted today that recent declines in the rate of inflation will soon end, with prices resuming their upward swing.

In a projection of the economy's course over the next 18 months, the CBO said it expects "moderately less optimistic" than the White House, which has been halting the end of the recession and a 30 per cent cut in the inflation rate.

It also predicted an unemployment rate of 7.8 to 8.2 per cent by the end of the year — down from the present rate but above the White House predictions.

The rate of inflation had fallen to an annual level of 6 per cent in May — down from an average of 12 per cent in 1974.

Abuse complaints filed

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare received complaints about possible child abuse — just before the death of two infants in Idaho Falls and Burley, the Idaho Statesman said in Sunday's edition.

In a story by Health-Education writer Sandra Watkinson, The Statesman says the children died after being abused by adults.

In Idaho Falls, the department denied knowledge of the case until after the death of the child, while officials refused to comment on the Burley case, citing "confidentiality" records.

There were criminal convictions from both deaths, the Burley incident involving former Cassia County Prosecutor Gordon Nielsen, who is now chief of criminal division of the Idaho attorney general's office and current Cassia County Prosecutor Alfred Barrus.

Barrus told The Statesman the baby was six weeks old in the spring of 1974 when Health and Welfare received a complaint that someone had broken the baby's leg. The baby was examined and found to have a broken leg, but the injury was attributed to other causes.

"Apparently at that time they couldn't get proof of abuse," Barrus said.

Eight months later, the boy was dead and his parents have been guilty to involuntary manslaughter. They will be sentenced Tuesday.

Nielsen confirmed contact by the department but "they apparently decided it wasn't sufficient to take the child out of the home at that point."

Region Five Director David Humphreys said he couldn't give any information on the case because it was confidential.

The second death occurred in Idaho Falls where the mother has pleaded guilty to being an accessory after the crime and her boyfriend was given a 10-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to "voluntary" manslaughter. The charges stem from the death of a 23-month old girl in August of 1974.

Arrested Numbers needed for future aid

BOURLEY — Dominigo G. Aguilaga, 33, Burley, was arrested Saturday evening and charged with stabbing a Burley man.

Aguilaga was charged by Burley police with assault with intent to commit murder for the stabbing of Paulino Sanchez. Sanchez is in satisfactory condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

According to police reports, the incident occurred about 6 p.m. Saturday in the Yacht Club in downtown Burley. The report said Sanchez was stabbed in the chest.

Aguilaga is being held on $5,000 bond pending his arraignment.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Adults and children on welfare and most recipients of Medicaid must provide their Social Security numbers — or apply for numbers — to continue receiving aid, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said today.

HEW said it was ordered to require Social Security numbers for welfare and most Medicaid recipients under two new Social Security Amendments of 1974 and welfare legislation signed Jan. 4 by President Ford.

The final regulations making it mandatory for recipients to provide Social Security numbers go into effect Tuesday.

These sweeping measures were designed by Congress to separate 1974 privacy law which specified that no federal benefits for welfare or Medicaid recipients.

Beirut pullout starts

BEIRUT (UPI) — Meeche rocket, mortar and machine gun fire terrorized Beirut for the eighth consecutive day today as a number of Americans and other foreigners began moving their families out of the city.

Shells began crashing into apartment houses and stores and Beirut Radio warned citizens that the entire city had become a fighting zone. It said snipers have begun firing on ambulances and fire engines.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said there were no planes at the moment for a mass evacuation despite the bloodshed that has closed banks, schools and stores but said: "We have permanent plans which we have dusted off and looked at."

Police estimates put the casualty toll at more than 125 dead and 450 wounded as street battles between rival political factions entered their second week. The total count since the fighting first broke out stood at 1,500 dead and injured.

Casualties were expected to run much higher by the time the day is out. A frightened resident of Ashrafieh, a suburb south of the city center where fighting has been heaviest, said mortars and rockets were crashing into apartment buildings and storefronts at the rate of one per minute.

The sound of rockets, mortars and machine guns ripped across the city during the night and again this morning and Beirut radio said all roads in the capital and its environs were "unsafe" and warned citizens to stay off them.

At least a dozen bomb blasts rocked the city during the early morning, damaging a school building, a church, scores of shops and cars and setting off dozens of fires.

Beirut radio said snipers were firing on ambulances and fire engines and that responding to emergency calls was becoming difficult.

Premier-designate Rashid Karami said Sunday he had reached an agreement with Lebanon's warring parties on a new government but there was no letup in the fighting.

LDS leader denounces legal porn

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Mormon leader N. Eldon Tanner Sunday denounced the legalization of pornography, abortion and deviant sex practices between consenting adults as the church concluded its last June conference.

Tanner, first counselor to Mormon Prophet Spencer W. Kimball, told members they must use every means at their disposal to fight against "corruption and immorality, much of which is now being legalized through our courts of law."

"Consider the insidious and devious 'sex practices' which have become so commonplace, with even the performance of marriage ceremonies between lesbians and homosexuals," said the 77-year-old religious leader.

"Satan has pledged himself to destroy mankind and the work of the Lord," he said. "He is using governments, courts, radio and television, newspapers, movies, immodest fashions, appetites, passions, etc."

Tanner said when citizens object to pornographic movies being shown in their communities, "the show goes on while the courts procrastinate their decision, which too often is in favor of those who claim they have a constitutional right to see dirty movies if they want to."

He also criticized newspapers that do not have the courage to reject advertisements for X and R rated films. "The Mormon-owned Desert News, excludes such ads from its pages."

"One simply cannot—either adult or youth—see or listen to or communicate in pornography without becoming contaminated and endangering the moral climate of the community," Tanner said.

"The sex pervert, the raider, the murderer, the thief, have become what they are because of what has been fed into their minds, which in turn has prompted the deeds they perform."

Tanner noted that some members were starting to refer to members of the California State Senate as the "piped pipe" of permissiveness" for their recent enactment of legislation legalizing all private sex acts including consenting adults — between sodomites.

He also repeated the church's opposition to abortion as "one of the most revolting and sinful practices in this day."

Kimball concluded the three-day meeting "feeling it would be the last time the church conducts a June conference in Salt Lake City. In the coming years, church leaders plan to hold regional conferences in all over the world. "We shall miss June Conference, but feel that the expanded program requires an expanded program," said the 80-year-old prophet.

Question . . .

My sister was killed in a tragic automobile accident as the result of the negligence of an uninsured driver. Are we responsible for her funeral bills?

Answer . . .

Your sister's estate and those in your family who were financially responsible for her care must pay these costs. Your family attorney should be consulted concerning the possibility of recovering these expenditures.

If your sister was either fully or currently insured under Social Security a funeral benefit approximating to $255 may be payable.

Under certain circumstances you may also be entitled to a reimbursement from either or both of two types of insurance coverage that may be owned either by your sister or her family. These are, "Medical Payments Coverage" or "Uninsured Automobile Coverage."

2 kidnapers captured, victim safe

SHERBROOKE, Que. (UPI) — Two men faced charges in Sessions Court today in the abduction of the 63-year-old wife of a Quebec margarine manufacturer for $1 million in ransom.

Constable Pierre Lemarbre of the Quebec Police Force said charges against the men, identified only as being in their early thirties, were determined during the interrogation that followed their capture early Sunday in a farm house.

He declined comment on the charges.

Lemarbre said the two men were captured in an assault on the aluminum clapboard country home by heavily armed troopers, who kicked in the front and back doors of the house. Mrs. Lena Blanchet, the victim, was neither bound nor blindfolded.

"We have a happy ending," said Lemarbre. "She is now at her home resting. She has been examined by doctors and she is weakened a bit, but all right."

Mrs. Blanchet was taken from her luxurious estate in nearby Rock Forest Tuesday morning by two men who demanded $1 million in ransom for her safe return. Lemarbre said the ransom was not delivered.

He said the house where she was taken, located on the outskirts of Drummondville, Que., which is about 45 miles northwest of Rock Forest and 80 miles east of Montreal, had been under surveillance before police decided to storm it.

He said tipoffs on the kidnapers' hideout came to police through their secret "Operation Filet", the code name for the five-day police investigation and telephone monitoring.

Mrs. Blanchet, wife of margarine industry pioneer Conrad Blanchet, was taken from the back yard of the family manor.

Suspect sought in Adams County cow mutilations

COUNCIL, Idaho (UPI) — The Adams County Sheriff has begun a search for the person or persons who killed and mutilated five cows by severing their sexual organs, udders and tongues during the past two weeks.

Sheriff Jim Hileman said the killer was "some kind of weirdo or nut," and added he thinks the killings are related to suspected "satan worshiping" in four other states.

Deputies from Adams and Valley counties closed an eight mile area 40 miles north of Council Saturday in "order to check everyone coming and going."

Hileman said there is no clue to how the cows were killed or who killed them.

"All I got is five dead cows," Hileman said.

Three heifers were found two weeks ago, one was discovered about a week ago while the other was found Friday. All five were killed near the towns of Bear and Cuprum, on the rim above Hells Canyon.

"I really wouldn't want to speculate. Whatever it is, it's different and weird and we won't have an answer to that until it's solved."

The killings are similar to those reported in Colorado, Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas, last December. 44 cattle were killed and mutilated in Flat County, Neb., and eight were killed in 11 days near Greenwood Springs, Colo. There were reports of cattle being killed and mutilated since April near Kiowa, Colo.

Like the animals near Council, none of the cattle had been shot, which leads Hileman to believe they were tranquilized before they were killed.

Radio unit holds field day

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Magic Valley Chapters of the Idaho Society of Radio Amateurs are taking the world's largest non-commercial emergency preparedness test this weekend.

According to David Munn of the chapter, the test began at 2 p.m. Saturday, lasting for 24 hours. Known as field day, the event is sponsored by the American Radio Relay League and is at the Wood River Campground north of Ketchum.

Activities tested the communication and technical skills of licensed amateurs under emergency conditions. The operators used non-commercial power and portable antenna and equipment, with communications on five shortwave and two very high frequency (VHF) bands.

Emphasis is on long-distance communication, although contact will be maintained locally through one of two area VHF-FM repeaters.

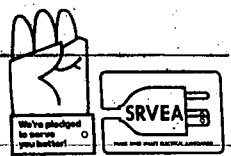

Munn said that the local chapter and the Idaho society operates a two-meter VHF-FM repeater on Hansen Butte and helped construct and operate a two meter repeater on Mt. Harrison. The remote-controlled facilities provide day and night clear-channel communication for low power mobile stations.

At the field day, club members will show visitors the equipment and explain operations. The public is invited.

Soviets want 'cruise' missiles banned

By HENRY S. BRADSHAW
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has proposed banning a major new weapons system being developed by the United States—a long-range missile launched from under water to fly like an airplane to its target.

This effort to block nuclear cruise missiles is one of the issues now pending in the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks, according to a senior administration official. The talks are scheduled to resume in Geneva Wednesday after a two-month recess.

The recess was extended an extra nine days at Soviet request. U.S. officials believe the Kremlin is having a hard time deciding on some of the complicated issues — both technical and political — involved in current negotiations.

The U.S. viewpoint is that the Soviet Union now has to decide whether to yield on several disputed points in order to maintain momentum toward the signing of a new arms control treaty this year.

The Soviet Leadership is believed to want to get last November's general agreement at Vladivostok between President Ford and Secretary-General Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Communist party turned into a treaty by this autumn. A visit by Brezhnev to the United States, already postponed from this summer, hinges on having a treaty ready for signing.

The United States is eager for a treaty, too. It has already yielded on one major point, although officials talk around it without directly conceding that they have given up a basic principle in the negotiations.

The Vladivostok agreement put a limit of 2,400 strategic nuclear weapons systems for each of the two superpowers, with no more than 1,200 of them to be intercontinental ballistic missiles with multiple warheads. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the Soviets tested a type of missile with multiple warheads, all missiles of that type deployed in launching silos must be counted against the 1,200 limit.

Under a concept of having some silo clusters designated as containing multi-warhead missiles but some only single-warhead ones, the United States now is prepared to take the Soviet word that some missiles are not within the 1,200 count.

Other areas still in dispute include definitions of missile sizes to place them within agreed limits on medium and heavy missiles, the possible deployment of mobile missiles which cannot be counted by reconnaissance satellites that photograph fixed silos, and whether the Soviet Backfire supersonic jet bomber should be within the 2,400 limit.

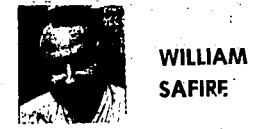

The argument over cruise missiles has been one of the sticking points in trying to turn the vague Vladivostok agreement into a specific treaty. Cruise missiles fly low and slow, compared with ballistic missiles which arch up high above the earth to go a quarter of the way around the globe in only half an hour.

Hoover on national security grounds by a written memorandum, which stated in the strongest terms that Dr. King was closely associated with a person known by the Bureau to be a high official of the Communist party in close contact with the U.S.S.R.

"The purpose of the tap was stated to be to assist the F.B.I. in determining whether Dr. King and his movement were being manipulated by this person in the interests of the Soviet Union."

Telephone tap on a phone used by Dr. King was authorized by Attorney General Kennedy in 1961 or 1962 (sic). That tap was requested by Mr. Hoover on national security grounds by a written memorandum, which stated in the strongest terms that Dr. King was closely associated with a person known by the Bureau to be a high official of the Communist party in close contact with the U.S.S.R.

"The purpose of the tap was stated to be to assist the F.B.I. in determining whether Dr. King and his movement were being manipulated by this person in the interests of the Soviet Union."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

I am informed by Katzenbach that in December, 1964, (while the F.B.I. wiretap on King was still in operation) he was told by reporters that the F.B.I. possessed recordings of "buggings" of King which they were playing to newsmen. "I immediately inquired of the Bureau if this improper activity was in fact taking place and it was flatly denied. ... I believe the activity did, however, cease immediately."

Katzenbach carefully differentiates between the warrantless wiretap approved by Kennedy and the "buggings" that he then thought were made by state law-enforcement officials. He believes there is a difference; I believe one reinforced the other.

He is correct, however, in denouncing as "utterly false" my assertion that the Justice Department had recently admitted that the purpose of the King wiretap was "investigating the love life of a group leader for disseminating to the press." The department did use those words to describe the F.B.I.'s counterintelligence program and the leader referred to was King, but Katzenbach had left the Justice Department by that time and I regret the error.

The Soviets have been arguing that any airborne cruise missile has to be counted within the 2,400 limit if it has a range of more than 375 miles. But now, the senior official said, the Soviets have made a broader effort to block cruise missiles.

They have proposed that air-launched cruise missiles with ranges greater than 600 miles be banned. And they want to ban the second kind, cruise missiles launched from the sea.

The Pentagon budget for fiscal 1976 provides $102 million for development of sea-launched cruise missiles. Both aerial and sea cruise missile systems are expected to cost some $8 billion apiece if the full armaments currently proposed by the Defense Department are authorized.

The sea missiles are considered by advocates of arms controls to be a particularly difficult problem. New developments in jet engines and in controls systems make them small enough to put missiles in submarines' torpedo tubes. Sophisticated controls would enable the missiles to "read" the terrain over which they fly, comparing it with electronic memories in order to find targets with high precision.

Reconnaissance satellites can establish with some precision the number of submarines which the Soviets have and the number of ballistic missile launching tubes on each, thus giving a count on how many of the Soviet ballistic missile force within the 2,400 limit is at sea.

But some other officials working with arms controls fear the same thing would happen in an uncontrolled cruise missile "race" as happened with multiple warheads.

I cannot accept, however, the mythmakers' line that Robert Kennedy was the innocent dupe of J. Edgar Hoover in this tawdry episode. He knew Hoover was out to "get" King's reputation; he knew how the director used raw material gathered in dossiers to illiterate confidants, even presidents. I believe Kennedy's purpose in authorizing the wiretaps was primarily to appease the powerful F.B.I. director, even if it meant letting him destroy the reputation of Martin Luther King.

Katzenbach insists that his own motive was purely national security, and I am satisfied that he believes that this is true. Yet, as he points out, he learned of the F.B.I.'s smear campaign in December, 1964; with good reason to know the real purpose of the F.B.I. tap, and with the power to terminate it with a single command, Katzenbach permitted the King wiretaps to continue for an additional five months. He had reason to suspect the commission of crimes by lawmen and — aside from asking the newsmen who alerted him to reveal their sources — the nation's chief law officer did nothing.

Privately, Kennedy mythmakers have been saying that the appointment of Hoover on the King wiretap made it possible to pass the 1964 Civil Rights Act. How's that for irony? Shades of Daniel Ellsberg and Gordon Liddy, men who thought it was right to break a few rules because they saw a higher cause. The Kennedys were willing to subvert the personal civil rights of the nation's leading fighter for civil rights — and do it on the name of civil rights.

Washington — A favorite word of the "heavy thinkers" is "consensus."

It's like a drought or no cash under the pillow; without it, nothing grows and the larger dwindle.

The fact that not enough Americans agree on burning issues of the day, according to the heavy thinkers, who worry about such things, leads to a form of paralysis, needless bickering, indirection, and damaging delays.

There is no consensus for or against the bills reaching his desk, President Ford is therefore free to veto everything in sight. Lacking a consensus, Congress is rendered impotent to override. Congress can't deal with the energy problem because there is no consensus available to sustain it with that most comforting rationale: "It's what the folks back home want." Nobody seems to know what the folks back home want.

Unemployment continues to hover at levels considered intolerable, and there is no passionate advocacy of relief measures, except by AFL-CIO President George Meany, who gets put down as an impatient crank. The President embraced a policy of inaction, as definable and distinct as a policy of action; and has it as an assault against "big government," and little is made of it. Is there a consensus at work here?

Alarm grips Democrats

WASHINGTON — The alarm now pervading the Democratic party establishment over the Wallace problem was sharply focused in Sen. Gary Hart's unannounced mid-June visit to George Wallace in Montgomery for an intimate three-hour talk on how to preserve party civility between now and the nominating convention next summer.

Hart's journey was based on this dubious hope: that despite rabid anti-Wallace sentiment among mainstream Democrats and Wallace's contempt for the party's liberal wing, Democrats can start the presidential campaign next summer reasonably united.

Hart was the first mainstream Democrat to drop in to the governor's mansion. But as Sen. George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign manager, the visit of liberal Gary Hart to the 1976 Democratic presidential hopeful must have been — and feared — by party liberals was unusual to say the least.

After their three-hour luncheon talk, neither Wallace nor Hart saw the slightest narrowing of their ideological gap. But Hart's purpose was more modest: to assure Wallace that Hart and some other anti-Wallace Democrats — both elected and non-elected officials of the party, would resist exclusionary efforts aimed at denying Wallace equal treatment in the pre-convention delegate-selection period.

This bold but probably futile effort was the brainchild of Alabama-born Marvin Warner, now an Ohio Democrat at the University of Alabama. Though no Wallace-man, Warner has kept close contact with the governor. He was the middle man for Hart's excursion.

Another likely visitor to the governor's mansion in Montgomery was Bernard Rapoport, the rich, liberal Democrat from Waco, Texas, who was one of McGovern's 1972 campaign lieutenants. Wallace and Rapoport spent two and a half hours together on April 17. There have been other visits, and there will be more, with Warner acting as go-between.

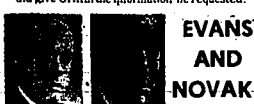

But the problems inherent in Warner's ambitious effort to assure fair treatment for George Wallace — in hopes Wallace will reciprocate and not go third party if he fails to get on the Democratic ticket — are immense, and growing.

Consider for example, the calculated insults from party officials handling routine requests from Wallace operative Mickey Griffin, an Alabama national committeeman, on changes in state delegate-selection procedures.

Having ignored Griffin's first two appeals for the information, Richard Koster, Democratic national committeeman for the Panama Canal Zone, wrote a letter to Griffin on June 3, four months after Griffin's first request, answering Griffin's questions. But the letter ended: "Let me say further that I resent your aiming your paranoia in my direction," an allusion to Griffin's implied threat to complain publicly if his routine questions weren't answered.

A similar late reply came from Nevada state chairman Paul Lamboly, who wrote Griffin: "Your thinly-veiled ... threat will not be dignified by further response." Lamboly never did give Griffin the information he requested.

PETER LISAGOR

It is precisely such refusals from some party leaders to cooperate with the presidential campaign of Wallace that worries other party leaders — such as Hart and Warner — Purely political attacks on Wallace, on the other hand, are in the accepted tradition of pre-convention combat.

There is no resentment in Wallace land of Sen. Tom McIntyre's pronouncement on June 1 that he finds it "incredible and appalling" that Wallace is under "serious consideration" as a possible President.

In the same vein, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, an announced presidential candidate, made no enemies in Montgomery when he told San Diego Democrats on June 12 that Wallace "is not qualified to lead our country."

To Wallace, such political rhetoric will be washed out in the presidential primaries he now plans to enter and win next year. He thinks he gains from political attack launched from the Democratic left.

With Hart, Rapoport, Warner and other mainstream Democrats want a Wallace dialogue that will guarantee procedural fairness and dissuade Wallace and his militant partisans from making a "stab in the back" charge if and when Wallace falls to get on the presidential ticket.

It's a commendable goal, predicated on the assumption that Wallace is a politician the party can do business with. That may turn out to be a highly dubious assumption, even if the whole Democratic party agreed with it.

Juggernaut

Glorious loyalty for Kennedy diehards

NEW YORK TIMES SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The diehard loyalty of the old Kennedy mythmakers is glorious to behold. Those who have been assuring us for years that the Kennedys secretly battled J. Edgar Hoover gulped silently when Ben Bradlee recently broke ranks to reveal how President Kennedy invited the F.B.I. director to the White House to pore over dossiers and chortle over the peccadilloes of public men.

Those same Kennedy mythmakers helped fashion an article of impeachment when it was revealed that President Nixon ordered the F.B.I. wiretapping of newsmen. They now stand mute as the Rockefeller Commission report states that a newsmen had been wiretapped by the C.I.A. in 1962 — with no authority in law — "apparently with the knowledge and consent of Attorney General Kennedy." (We'll soon see if Frank Church follows that up.)

However, several old Kennedy hands have taken vociferous umbrage, in public and private, to a point made in this space about the double standard used in judging past presidents: "Nixon never ordered the extended wiretapping of a civil rights leader for the purpose of leaking derogatory information about him to the press."

This referred to the wiretap that Attorney General Kennedy directed the F.B.I. to place on Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on Oct. 10, 1963, and which remained in place for more than 18 months until removed on April 30, 1965, by Robert Kennedy's successor, Nicholas Katzenbach.

During this time, in an attempt to besmear and discredit King, F.B.I. agents — in violation of the law — played recordings of bugged conversations and sounds from King's hotel rooms to newsmen, and even mailed one such salacious recording to King's wife. The Department of Justice has never sunk lower, before or since.

Nobody disputes those facts. The question is: Did the Kennedys have good reason to suspect that the purpose of the tap was not national security, and that the F.B.I. would leak whatever it found to smear its most outspoken critic? Katzenbach tells me no. His written: "A

Consensus lack leads US to indirection

Chicago Daily News

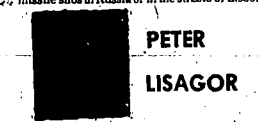

WASHINGTON — A favorite word of the "heavy thinkers" is "consensus."

It's like a drought or no cash under the pillow; without it, nothing grows and the larger dwindle.

The fact that not enough Americans agree on burning issues of the day, according to the heavy thinkers, who worry about such things, leads to a form of paralysis, needless bickering, indirection, and damaging delays.

There is no consensus for or against the bills reaching his desk, President Ford is therefore free to veto everything in sight. Lacking a consensus, Congress is rendered impotent to override. Congress can't deal with the energy problem because there is no consensus available to sustain it with that most comforting rationale: "It's what the folks back home want." Nobody seems to know what the folks back home want.

In foreign policy, the country rocks along. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, for all his brilliance as a master of antagonisms and sympathies, can't reconcile his sense of neatness with the untidy and unruly forces around him. He lectures allies for their tendencies to waver and Jack up the price of cooperation, and lauds adversaries in the spirit of détente. Not even the stern voice of former defense secretary William Laird, warning that détente is a dangerous game, can crack the wall of indifference about what might be happening in the missile silos in Russia or in the streets of Lisbon.

Neither Henry nor Mel can drum up a consensus, for the Public is supposedly all confused and turned off. It can't get a clear bead on whether the Russians are out to destroy us or to cooperate with us. It's confused over whether the Central Intelligence Agency is good or bad for the country. Nobody has yet hit the bricks over the disclosures that the CIA spied on U.S. citizens in this country, in violation of its mandate. And most of the moral outrage over allegations that the agency had a hand in assassination plots against Cuba's Fidel Castro and others seems confined to this village. If there is no consensus for or against these dubious enterprises by the CIA, does it mean that the public generally accepts the proposition that standards of morality shift from season to season, or from the days of the cold war to this period of détente?

In this time of no consensus, it is refreshing to find the New Yorker magazine sympathizing with the President's apparent decision not to plant a vegetable garden on the White House lawn this year. Perhaps there's a consensus of sorts among gardeners that would support the magazine's city-fied view of nature's conspiracy against those who think they have a green thumb.

So, the New Yorker thinks, there's no reason the President shouldn't stick to his hobbies of swimming and golf. "A more appropriate symbol of the nation's progress, or lack of it, might be an uncovered strip mine on the White House lawn, next to the swimming pool," it concludes. Pending a real, bonafide consensus about something, why not?

Lawyers, architects, insurance men join doctors in malpractice worries

By DONALD ZOCHERT
Chicago Daily News

For months, physicians, surgeons and other medical personnel have held center stage in the hotly contested debate over rising rates for medical malpractice insurance.

Now comes the legal profession. And insurance agents. And architects.

And real estate brokers. Caught in a rising tide for great expectation and a new spirit of professional accountability, men and women in these professions are looking at their own legal vulnerability in a new light.

James D. Fellers, president of the American Bar Association and a practicing attorney in Oklahoma City, warned recently that "malpractice" suits against lawyers are increasing so fast that they "are on the way to creating the same crisis in the availability of legal services as there is in the delivery of medical services."

Rates for commercial professional liability insurance for attorneys have increased as much as 300 per cent since 1970, he said. Insurance industry spokesmen say the number of malpractice claims against attorneys has nearly doubled in the same period, and the amount of individual claims also has risen dramatically.

The ABA, under Fellers' direction, has set up a task force to explore the implications of this situation, according to John Donahue of the ABA headquarters in Chicago.

Compared to malpractice rates paid by many doctors — and average of $1,500 to $2,000 — lawyers are not yet feeling the sting. Their nationwide rate for professional liability insurance ranges between $150 and $250 a year.

And professional liability insurance for some other professions, notably architects and insurance agents, runs even higher.

"The professional today stands in a far more sensitive position with respect to the likelihood of being sued than he would have 10 years ago," said Henry Nussbaum, senior program manager for Continental National American Insurance and an authority of professional liability insurance.

In an interview, Nussbaum outlined some of the areas of "liability" in which professional people are increasingly being challenged. More than 50 per cent of the claims made against lawyers are made on the basis of a lawyer's failure to act within required time limits on a case — missing an appeal deadline, for instance, or letting the statute of limitations expire on a personal injury case.

Within this area, Nussbaum says, the largest portion of claims involves personal injury cases. Claims are made against architects on the basis of errors in design and failing to adequately supervise work done by others under the architect's responsibility.

Insurance agents are the objects of claims for improper advice, and "more often than not for failing to act on the clients' requests properly on time," said Nussbaum.

Claims often are made against real estate brokers for improperly conducting title searches or making errors in real estate transactions.

Of all the professions, doctors are hit hardest by malpractice suits — both in the number of suits and the amount of damages demanded. Many claims against lawyers, for instance, are handled by insurance adjusters and do not get to court.

All of these professions have long had "malpractice" insurance in the form of coverage for what are called "omissions and errors."

But why — seemingly all of a sudden — have the practitioners of certain professions come under increasing claims of liability?

One judge has said this off-the-record explanation of why more malpractice suits are being filed against doctors: In states where no-fault auto insurance has been adopted, lawyers have been denied the lucrative practice of personal injury cases and have turned to malpractice suits.

Legal groups, of course, roundly denounce any suggestion that lawyers are suddenly more "aggressive" in the sense of ambulance-chasing malpractice claims.

But no one denies that there is a new spirit of advocacy in the law today that was not apparent 20 years ago, and this spirit — defending the rights of the "little man" — may well play a part in the increasing demands of professional competence.

There are, however, many more forces at work than this simple explanation.

"In medicine in particular, the last two decades have seen a dramatic rise in great expectations. 'People read and hear about the marvels of science, especially medicine, and have tremendous expectations of going to the doctor and being cured,'" Nussbaum points out.

Some observers call this the "Marcus Welby Syndrome." People have seen the gentle and omniscient Welby lay on hands. They have seen the crippled walk, before the last commercial. And they think the same can happen to them.

Even in real life, of course, what is possible in a few excellent and individual medical research centers is not immediately transferable to every doctor in the nation.

People assume glibly that insurance companies have an infinite capacity to pay claims, not drawing any connection between claims paid, rates of insurance and costs and availability of service. Even the cost to an insurance company of defending against a claim which is not allowed can be a considerable expense.

Traditional malpractice or errors and omissions policies were written with an "unlimited tail," or discovery period. Error could be claimed sometime in the future, often years after the "error" may have occurred.

Many companies are turning to a different form of policy for this kind of insurance, called a "claims-made" policy.

Under this policy, a claim must be brought to the insurance company within the period for which the policy is written. The insurance company thus has more control over setting suitable rates.

Architects and engineers have used such policies for many years, although the concept is fairly new for lawyers and totally new for doctors, Nussbaum said.

There is a "tail" available on this sort of coverage, but the policy holder pays an extra premium for it.

Insurance executives have contended that the entire concept of malpractice insurance has fallen out of date.

Originally, malpractice insurance was designed to protect the assets of the "injured" — the party who took out the insurance — and not to "make the injured whole."

In other words, if you made a mistake the insurance protected your assets — you wouldn't have to sell everything you owned. It was not designed to make complete restoration to the injured party.

But especially in medical malpractice suits, where settlements have often been substantial, the actual function of the insurance seems to have flip-flopped.

Thus, premiums have soared. Some question also has been raised as to whether the professions today are less professional than they used to be.

No doubt the increased caseload of doctors has had to do with this — the same can be said of lawyers — but Nussbaum does not find a decline in professionalism.

The cause of the current pressures for professional accountability, and the tendency to sue, must be sought elsewhere — in Nussbaum's words, in "the psyche of the consumer."

Sensationalism deplored

Editor, Times-News:

I found the sensationalism displayed in the Times News (Tuesday, June 24) both unethical (if ethics are still in existence) and disgusting.

My disgust is with the usage of a UPI photo and article of a California drowning. The display on the front page of Tuesday's paper was not only unnewsworthy, but also blatantly unprofessional.

Editor, Times-News:

So, Ray Howell of Shoshone wants to re-establish trade relations with Cuba and would be well pleased to trade with them again so he will not be "obliged to pay upwards of two or three dollars for five pounds of sugar."

Perhaps Mr. Howell does not realize that the American sugar grower was not responsible for the sharp increase in sugar prices last year. Neither will he be reimbursed by anyone if the slump of sugar prices in 1975 cuts up his margin of profit.

If Mr. Howell was aware of the sugar beet industry here in Magic Valley as he seems to be about the political agriculture situation in Cuba, he would realize that the price of sugar was not unfair. If he wants to buy his sugar from Havana, I say "nuts to him."

As for me, I will cheerfully buy American grown sugar any day.

A drowning, any drowning, is tragic. Its tragedy is not lessened by the ostensible necessity of a newspaper's publicity. Nevertheless, it may be considered newsworthy in the area of the drowning, if only as an auspice for precaution to others.

But even this excuse cannot be granted the Times-News; Auburn, the site of the accident, is in California, not Idaho.

If front-page publicity of a California drowning were not enough, the Times-News more than compensated in the novelty-like picture included. The caption contained the following tactlessly worded sentence: "His head is visible in the foggy water center."

This is not only sensationalism; it is sadism. If this were an isolated instance, perhaps a mild rebuke would suffice, but such is not the case. This newspaper has previously published equally disgusting pictures and articles under journalism pretension. (I doubt exists and prevarication occurs, I will gladly research and accommodate a request for examples.)

I believe an apology is in order. It is an affront to one's common sense of decency, as well as to those involved in such articles and pictures. This is not my conception of a discriminating newspaper (and each newspaper must be discriminating in taste to be of value, in my opinion).

I ask you to publish this for, despite its character, it has a message of value to you and to your readers.

analysis

There is another element adding to malpractice suits against doctors, and it might be said to also apply to the other professions.

"The mobile society we have in this country," Nussbaum said, "has very definitely influenced the doctor-patient relationship. We no longer know the doctor personally, as a friend, as well as a doctor."

Many times, the first doctor a patient consults will send him to a specialist — even further removed from the personal environment of the patient.

"If you're going to someone who holds himself up as the specialist, and who is going to charge you for his qualifications," Nussbaum said, "then you're going to attack him if he doesn't live up to your expectations."

There are other elements at work.

One is the extension of the concept of accountability. If auto dealers can suddenly assume responsibility for errors in the production of their products, and assume the expense of correcting them, should not the work of a doctor or architect or insurance agent or any professional come under equally demanding scrutiny? So runs the argument.

Nussbaum finds still another "state of mind" at work.

There is a tendency, he feels "to rip-off those who have 'too much' money or 'too much' power."

Colby defends absolute secrecy policy for CIA funds, activity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — CIA Director William Colby is against even partial disclosure of the agency's finances. Colby said that to make public just "a single figure" — the total amount spent by the CIA each year — would lead to demands for more information about the agency's secret activities.

"I think it is inevitable that if you expose a single figure, you will immediately get a debate as to what it includes, what it does not include, why did it go up, why did it go down," he said, "and shortly get into a description of the details of our activities."

He said "There are certain things...in our clandestine activity that we must keep from public exposure and even the risk of public exposure."

Colby's appearing Sunday on a televised interview (NBC-TV: Meet the Press), was asked why it was necessary to maintain absolute secrecy over funds spent by the CIA. CIA spending in recent years has been "hidden" in Defense Department appropriations.

WILLIAM COLBY prefers secrecy

The Rockefeller Commission recommended Congress consider making at least part of the agency's budget public. Colby also said allegations of CIA involvement in plots to assassinate foreign leaders "had best be settled by adopting a firm policy at this point not to use any activity and letting the past stay quiet."

He added: "Some of the facts are not well known or not well recorded, and some of the degree to which various people within and outside of the agency were a part of any such activities is not very clear."

Colby also said: —He faltered through a "misunderstanding" to inform the White House and Justice Department in 1973 when the CIA uncovered some of its own misdeeds. Colby said none of the evidence justified prosecution and he wanted "to let the misdeeds of the past quietly."

—Asked if the Rockefeller Commission substantiated a charge the CIA conducted a massive, illegal, domestic operation during the Nixon administration: "I don't think so." The commission "found three agents whose work was illegal. I don't think that's massive illegal."

—CIA "activities abroad of a political and paramilitary character" have "dwindled to almost nothing."

—"There are an awful lot of antennae on top of the Soviet Embassy, and I think they are there for a purpose." He declined to say whether the National Security Agency regularly monitors telephone calls between American citizens and citizens in foreign countries.

—"I categorically deny" any CIA involvement in attempts to remove Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Still long way to go, GOP head tells meeting

BOSTON (UPI) — Although there has been a sharp increase in the number of women running for and winning political office, one of the successful ones says there's still a long way to go.

Mary Louise Smith, head of the Republican National Committee, told delegates to the National Women's Political Caucus convention Sunday they "must never lose sight of the distance left to travel." She said there were no female senators, one woman governor and 19 congresswomen.

The NWPC Sunday ended up its three-day convention, which urged passage of the Equal Rights Amendment. About 2,000 delegates attended.

Among the speakers were Rep. Elizabeth Fritzsche, D-N.Y., and four Democratic presidential candidates: former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, former Sen. Fred Harris, D-Okla., Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Mrs. Smith told delegates women should increase their participation in party politics as a means of improving their influence.

"An upsurge in political party activity by women would, I believe, quickly lead to a dramatic increase in the number of women running for office at all levels."

"Women have come to a time when we must broaden our emphasis," she said.

The NWPC elected Audrey Rowe Colom of Washington, D.C., its new chairperson.

Among the five candidates elected vice chair were Betsy Griffin of Washington, D.C., Vivian Hall of California, Rhea Mojica Hammer of Illinois, Anita Nelam of Kentucky and Leo Novick of Connecticut. Jane Haun Macon of Texas was chosen recorder.

The NWPC, founded in 1971, is supported by the dues paid by about 10,000 members nationwide. The group has about 35,000 people associated with it, an official said.

News reports said that two walls of the new prison had not yet been wired for alarming and that the internal television security system had been disconnected for the past week.

Construction of the prison was begun in 1959 and the Portuguese considered it one of the most secure in Europe.

The military communique said, "We ask that all revolutionary vigilance of the Portuguese people be serene and organized within the military and militarized forces."

Fire kills 9

TAIPEI (UPI) — Nine girl workers were burnt to death while they slept in the attic of their factory in a Taipei suburb, police said today.

The fire, which broke out early Sunday, destroyed the two-story building of an unregistered factory in the residential area, police said.

The nine victims, aged 15 to 21, slept in the attic of the factory and failed to escape when the fire broke out.

Ex-cops flee Lisbon prison

LISBON (UPI) — The military today threw helicopters, troops and "civilian vigilance groups" into a massive manhunt for 75 ex-convicts policemen still at large after a break from Portugal's new maximum security prison.

The Military Security Command said roadblocks were put up all over the country — especially near the border with Spain.

The escapees were officers of PIDE — International Police of the Defense of the State — the feared secret political police of the former right-wing dictatorship.

A military communique said, "The breakout was made just after the prisoners' supper (Sunday). They cut the bars of several cells and then escaped on makeshift ladders made from iron bars from the beds and sheets."

The communique said that by early this morning 13 of the 88 escaped prisoners had been recaptured.

They were among 843 ex-PIDE agents who were held in Alentejo prison, 40 miles north of the capital. PIDE officers were among the first persons arrested when the Armed Forces Movement seized power in April last year.

Solons well armed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a higher percentage of handguns among members of the House of Representatives than in American households, according to a survey printed in today's Washington Post.

The survey, part of a series exploring political attitudes in the House, showed 27 percent of the representatives own handguns, compared to 18 percent of American households.

The Post got responses to its survey from 60 per cent of the membership, and said approximately 115 members of the House own pistols.

The survey also showed that while 67 per cent of the general public favors registration of handguns, only 57 per cent of the House agrees. The Post said, however, the opposition is "related only slightly to whether a member of Congress owns a gun."

It said Southern members are the best armed, with Northerners members the least. Conservatives are much more likely to own pistols than liberals, according to the survey.

Report raps arbitrary dialysis use decisions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For two years, the government has provided subsidies to make sure persons who need it can get expensive kidney machine treatment regardless of their ability to pay.

But a General Accounting Office report Sunday on how the law has worked shows some doctors are deciding arbitrarily who shall get the free treatment and who shall die for the lack of it.

The standards for who shall get the treatment varies from place to place and from doctor to doctor in the 12 states and two counties surveyed.

Doctors and hospital officials said there are different reasons for denying kidney patients the subsidized care they needed, in some cases, to stay alive, the report said. The reasons included:

- Age. Some doctors rule out patients they considered too old, or too young.
- General health. Some doctors exclude kidney patients who also suffer other diseases such as diabetes, cancer and heart conditions.
- Living circumstances. The report said one 70-year old widow in Washington state was denied treatment on an artificial kidney machine because she lived alone and was considered incapable of caring for herself at home. She died in a nursing home.
- The GAO report said there is no consistency in the application of selection standards, some applying in one place but not in another.

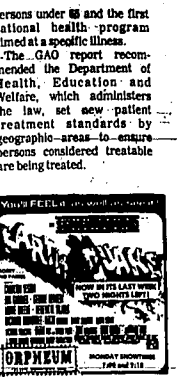

The report was based on a survey of 47 treatment centers in Arizona, Arkansas, Georgia, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, Oregon, South Carolina, Vermont, Washington State, Los Angeles County, Calif., and Cook County, Ill.

Federal funding of kidney disease treatment on dialysis machines, which purify the blood of patients whose kidneys cannot do so properly, and transplant operations became almost universally available July 1, 1973.

The law meant to rectify a situation in which medical treatment was so costly that life and death was often determined strictly by the patient's ability to pay.

It placed kidney disease prevention under Medicare, the first extension of Medicare to persons under 65 and the first national health program aimed at a specific illness.

The GAO report recommended the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which administers the law, set new patient treatment standards by geographic areas to ensure persons considered treatable are being treated.

Optimist

HOUSING industry will begin recovering from the recession later this year and nearly 1.8 million new homes will be built in 1976, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Carla A. Hills said in a television interview Sunday. (UPI)

McGovern pondering 1976 race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has asked some people who backed his 1972 bid for president if he should run again in 1976. The Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper said McGovern, in a letter sent last week to some key supporters, sought their advice "as to the best role I can play" in the coming election.

"As things stand now, I do not intend to become a candidate," he said in the letter. But he included a possible candidacy of his own as one of three options, the newspaper said.

The Post also said he asked supporters their opinion on the possibility of his endorsing a liberal candidate now in the field or identifying candidates who are "unacceptable" to him.

"I am seeking your candid advice on a personal, confidential basis as to the best role I can play," McGovern was quoted as saying in the letter. "Some have suggested that I endorse one of the presidential candidates in order to help a strong liberal emerge."

"Others have urged I make clear now who is unacceptable as the Democratic presidential nominee — in short that I identify certain candidates with whom we fundamentally disagree."

Entries high for Jerome races

JEROME — Over 100 horses will participate in Jerome County's annual pari-mutuel horse races the weekend of July 10-13 at the fairgrounds. The races sponsored each year by the Jerome Recreation Association are expected to draw about normal entries with about 100 horses already entered in the futurity and derby races. This is down from last year's entries, according to Tim Rupert, secretary of the association.

Some entries might end up tying their horses to their pickups and a few may drop out early," Rupert said. Post-time for the futurity trials will be around 10 a.m. July 10, with post times for pari-mutuel races at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Sunday's post time will be 1:30 p.m.

Classes of racing will include Quarter Horses, Appaloosas, Thoroughbreds, allowances and claims, according to Rupert. It is also anticipated that this year's betting will exceed the $70,000 received last year. Bert Blockhurst will handle the pari-mutuel activities with assistance from the Jerome Tiger Boosters. The Elks Club will provide a beer concession, the Jerome Lions will provide the food both and the Sheriff's Posse will take care of security and ticket sales, according to Rupert. The Magic Valley Futurity Race purse will be about $7,000 this year with the Stallion Service Futurity bringing $2,500 and the Intermountain Quarter Horse Derby offering $4,000. Purse money for other races will average around $125 to $200 a race.

Fiddlers expected

SHOSHONE — The 12th annual Old Time Fiddler's Jamboree will be held at the Shoshone City Park on July 13. The first jamboree was held in 1963 and has proven to be about the most popular public event held in Shoshone over the years since.

Sponsored by the Shoshone Chamber of Commerce, the city park lends a natural "perfect" setting for the event, with areas for family and group picnics as well as provision of refreshment stands to the many visitors who attend.

Musicians come and go through the day, taking turns at playing from about 10 a.m. to late afternoon, and feature both young and old fiddlers from throughout the state and visiting neighbors.

Crowds over the years have ranged from 400 to over 1,000 and this year's jamboree is expected to meet the past record of success. Chamber of Commerce members state.

Special committee members from the Chamber will be completing their plans at the July 8 Chamber Meeting, to be held at noon that day at the Manhattan Cafe.

Funds for delegate raised

JEROME — The newly formed Jerome Association for Retarded Persons is in the process of raising funds to send a delegate to the International Special Olympics.

The competition is to be held in Michigan this August. The representative from Jerome will be selected soon. However the association is now trying to raise $400 for the trip which will include travel expenses for a chaperon.

Pat Woodrow has been elected president of the group; Marlene Suttler, vice president; Mary Arbaugh, secretary-treasurer, and Mary Jane Kiser and Becky Diebert, board members.

Mrs. Woodrow said the association is in the process of getting organized, with the state association in Boise.

"People with a retarded child, or even with a child with a slight problem who isn't in the Gooding school, are welcome to attend our meetings and be involved," Mrs. Woodrow said.

The group's main activity so far has been sending a team from Jerome to the Special Olympics in Gooding, according to Mrs. Woodrow.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

A Census Bureau study revealed that together, the West and South experienced a net migration gain of 1,250,000 persons from the Northeast and North Central regions. During 1970, more blacks (106,000) moved to the South than the Northeast and North Central States than the 117,000 who moved from the South to the Northeast and North Central States, a reversal of an historic pattern. The World Almanac notes.

The second session will run from Tuesday through July 12. Classes will include beginning, advanced beginning, intermediate, junior lifesaving, adult beginning and advanced adult beginning. # INDEPENDENCE DAY IS NOT FOR MUSKRATS

Muskrats usually live free along the streams and ditches, where they hustle their own food. But a couple of months ago a wandering muskrat entered the storage shed behind Swansens Market. (The one next to Rock Creek in Twin Falls), where all the bags of dog food are stored. This little rat started eating the biggest free lunch ever assembled. About 4 weeks and 15 bags of chewed up dog food later, Swensen finally captured the varmint alive, but missing half his tail which was lost in the struggle. The muskrat was much cuter than an ordinary rat so the tailless trophy was caged and put on display behind the store for a few days. He was forgotten in the cage, and for several days went without water. The rat was about to die of thirst, when a Swensen employee who was rather foolishly compassionate or just plain foolish, freed the lucky muskrat down by the stream where he came from. IMAGINE—It was the 4th of July for the Rat! He was alive and free! 24 hours later the rat was back in the storage shed, eager to trade his freedom for security and free food. The rat is dead now. The security was an illusion, and the price of the free food was very high. Swensens Market salutes the founders of our country who were willing to risk & sacrifice the safety, security & protection of their future crown for the freedom to determine THEIR OWN FUTURE. # Ordeal brings marriage plans

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Anthony John Pike met Australian fashion model Jennifer Robyn Fairfax-Ross three years ago. But it took three days adrift in the ocean on a six-foot life raft to convince him he should marry her.

"The qualities she showed on the raft convinced me," said Pike, 41, and Miss Fairfax-Ross, 27, arrived from Nassau Saturday and told reporters of their three-day ordeal in a life raft off the coast of Haiti, and of living on raw fish of a sea gull.

"They were rescued June 23 by the S.S. Fairwind, a cruise-ship.

"Robyn has wanted to get married for some time," said Pike, a British citizen who met his future bride three years ago in Hong Kong. "I have been through two unsuccessful marriages and I didn't really think it was necessary."

Then came the ordeal with his attractive girlfriend-shipmate.

"I proposed on the raft," he said.

Pike and Miss Fairfax-Ross also went through an informal ceremony on the raft where "we said anything we could think of," Pike said.

The couple plan to marry legally as soon as they get a license. Pike's 40-foot schooner, Gypsy, capsized June 21 en route from South Caicos Island to Haiti.

"When we first got in the raft it was a bit like a picnic—you know, opening up packets of food and all," Miss Fairfax-Ross said. "Then you look around and there's all this ocean, and we realized nobody knew we were missing and we could be out there for months. That was a terrible shock."

The couple's hopes dwindled considerably as ships that passed close by failed to notice the flares Pike shot. He said he was down to the last flare when the Fair Wind spotted them.

The couple said they took turns paddling during their three days at sea and had blisters to prove it.

Pair rescued

JOHN Pike and Jennifer Ross are all smiles as they describe to newsmen how they were rescued after three days at sea in a small rubber raft. Pike's yacht went down off the coast of Haiti and the pair were adrift for three days until rescued by the cruise ship "Fair Wind." (UPI)

US lead in talks urged

By ROBERT M. SMITH
© New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The then United States ambassador to Venezuela recommended recently that the United States government take the leading role in direct negotiations with Venezuela concerning oil, rather than leaving them to several private American citizens.

According to reliable government sources, Ambassador Robert McClintock, who retired in March, suggested to the State Department that unless the United States took a more active role, Venezuela could play one American oil company off against another.

McClintock reportedly wanted the U.S. government to take on a major and direct role in negotiations concerning prices, levels of production and the share that would be channelled through American companies to the U.S. market. Under his proposal some role in the negotiations would remain for the private companies.

Legislation is now pending in the Venezuelan Congress to nationalize the oil industry, and the American officials expect the legislation to pass within the next few months. The ambassador's concern was directed to the post-nationalization situation.

In 1974 Venezuela was the largest supplier of oil to the United States. It shipped an average of 1.5 million barrels a day to this country — 24 per cent of all American imports.

The ambassador's proposal came at a time when, in the words of one government official, "oil is no longer commodity but a strategic material, and there is great uncertainty — some of it ideological — about what the government should do in our system."

According to one source, the ambassador's proposal, made in an annual country assessment and strategy paper for Venezuela, was considered at an interagency group, part of the National Security Council apparatus, on May 28 and was rejected.

Three State Department officials familiar with the ambassador's recommendation refused to confirm or deny that it was rejected at the interagency meeting.

Joint space flight rehearsed

HOUSTON (UPI) — American astronauts and Russian cosmonauts, separated by thousands of miles, are working in teams to practice for their joint space flight next month.

Two American crews and four Russian crews are taking part in the 72-hour simulation which began Sunday. The Americans used a mockup space capsule at the Johnson Space Center near Houston and the Russians conducted their exercises in Star City, near Moscow.

Sunday's simulation was a rehearsal of what the two crews will do July 17 when they join their two capsules in space.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Stafford, Donald K. Slayton and Vance Brand, the prime Apollo crewmembers, began their simulation at 6:30 a.m. Sunday's Soviet simulation team consisted of the backup crew of Maj. Yuri Romanenko and flight engineer Alexander Ivanchikov.

The crews remain inside their respective spacecrafts during the day and spend the nights in their quarters. The Americans are using two three-man crews for the simulations and the Russians are alternating four two-man crews.

The astronauts are scheduled to fly to Cape Canaveral later this week to simulate a liftoff in the real Apollo capsule Thursday.

Glynn Lunney, the American technical director for the joint mission, announced Sunday he has been assured by Russian space officials the current flight of a Soviet space station will not interfere with the July 15 joint Apollo-Soyuz mission.

your health

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 I suffer from Sjogren's syndrome, and I mean suffer: in the 25 years since it was diagnosed, no one has been able to suggest any real measures, let alone a cure.
 Do you know of any treatment? Would an endocrinologist have any answers? — C.R.E.
 This is a condition in which the tear and salivary glands do not produce sufficient fluid, with resulting dry eyes and dry mouth. I can sympathize with your ten-year boy over it.
 The syndrome was first described by Dr. Henrik Sjogren, a Swedish ophthalmologist, who, incidentally, remains active in this field at 75.
 It is seen most frequently in menopausal women, and it can be associated with rheumatoid arthritis and dental decay.
 However, the precise cause of the condition has not been definitely established, and for that reason a cure is rather elusive.
 In a recent paper, Dr. Sjogren has speculated that it may be a circulatory disturbance associated with what is called an autoimmune response, meaning it may stem from the body's reaction to its own tissues.

Dry mouth no fun

Dr. George Thosteson

It has also been speculated that it may result from a reaction to certain drugs, including atropine, belladonna, opium or morphine, or from a kidney disease, dehydration, or from nutritional deficiencies (of the vitamin B-complex group).
 It may also develop as secondary to mumps, typhoid fever or diabetes. In elderly persons it can develop as a mild condition unrelated to any of the illnesses or other causes.
 A variety of treatments have been tried with uneven results. Vitamin supplements have been used, as well as cortisone and hydrocortisone. There are also bland creams that can be applied to the lips for temporary relief.
 Since the disease occurs almost exclusively among women, it has also been suggested that some disturbance in the female sex hormone balance may be a cause. So in that sense an endocrinologist (gland specialist) could be helpful in advising you.
Dear Dr. Thosteson:
 Please advise as to the cause and treatment of urine that is very odorous. Mine smells terribly. I am 70 years old and in fairly good health. My blood pressure is good, and I am not a diabetic. I don't drink alcoholic beverages. I try to maintain an adequate diet.
 I don't take any medication. — A.C.
 If your strong urine odor is a recent and dramatically obvious symptom, a careful urinalysis is in order. Normal urine should have only a mild odor and be a clear amber color. If there is a strong ammonia smell, this can indicate bladder infection. If there is a new-mown hay odor about it, this can be a symptom of diabetes.
 If you are not getting sufficient liquid, the urine could become more concentrated on excretion, and this, too, would present a strong odor. The point is that any dramatic change in urine, in appearance or odor, should be investigated, especially if it persists and if, as in your case, no obvious cause can be assumed.

The dip becomes a scoop. When you dip into savings, you cut back on the ability to earn. That's obvious. And with our plan in which interest is compounded, you dock yourself even more.

But there are alternatives. Put the special purchase on Master Charge and if you pay it in 30 days, you use the money free. When you take a bit longer, it's only 1 1/4% per month on each month's balance until paid.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old, self-supporting career woman. My parents are divorced, and I share a two-bedroom apartment with my father. We get along very well. At least we did until this problem came up. My dad has a girl friend. She and Dad sometimes go off together for weekends. I am a big girl, and I know they sleep together, which is none of my business. However, my dad tells me that his girl friend refuses to spend the night at his apartment as long as I am there, so I am sent away to spend the night elsewhere whenever he wants her over. I didn't mind it occasionally, but now it seems that every weekend I'm getting kicked out of my own apartment. My dad says he wouldn't mind if I stayed, but his girl friend does. What do you suggest I do? Should I have a woman-to-woman talk with her? She is 33; Dad is 46. NAMELESS, PLEASE

Girl friend embarrassed

DEAR NAMELESS: Forget the woman-to-woman talk. She's embarrassed, and I don't blame her. I think it's time you moved out and got your own apartment.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am a girl who is very much in love with a gay guy. We live together and get along beautifully. We like the same things, go everywhere together and have straight as well as gay friends. He says that one day he will probably go straight because he wants to raise a family. He often talks about getting married (to me), but the talk never leads to anything definite. I understand his past, and it doesn't bother me. Do you think I am foolish for waiting for him to go straight? And once he goes straight (if he ever does), will he stay that way? Or would I have to worry about his going gay again?

TROUBLED IN TRENTON

DEAR TROUBLED: If he is sufficiently motivated, with therapy and determination, he could possibly go straight—and stay straight. But the advice from here is: Don't marry him until he is straight and you're convinced that he's straight for keeps, which could be a long wait.

DEAR ABBY: My girl friend and I are both 20. We plan to get married in three months, but we have a problem. My girl friend has a child by a previous marriage, and she wants to wait until after we are married to tell my parents about it. She says she's afraid if my folks know about it now, they won't like her. I say she should tell them now—before we get married. What do you think?

CHILD PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: I agree with you. There is no reason for her to try to hush up a previous marriage and child. If she does, your parents will feel betrayed and will not like her for certain.

Wedding vows for Springdale miss

SPRINGDALE — The Idaho Falls LDS Temple was the scene for the June 13 wedding of Penny Burgess, Springdale, and Tony L. Freeman, Ririe. The bride's parents are Mrs. Wanda Hurd, Springdale, and Larid Burgess, Perry, Okla. The bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Raehle Miller, Leawood, Kan., and Cleo Freeman, Ririe. Elder Winters officiated at the double-ring ceremony. A luncheon prepared by parents was served at the park after the wedding.

The young couple were honored that evening at the Cultural Hall, Ririe, and the following evening a reception was held in the Springdale LDS Cultural Hall.

The couple greeted guests in front of an austrian backdrop with baskets of white gladiolus and pink carnations and a large replica of Idaho Falls Temple. The bride made and designed her wedding gown of floor-length white polyester crepe with satin trimmed skirt of lace and chiffon, a high neck with sheer bodice and long sleeves trimmed in satin. The bouquet she carried was a nosegay of pink rosebuds, white carnations and baby's breath all tied with a lavender ribbon. Her floor-length veil was trimmed with pearl sequins.

Bridesmaids were Barbara Stott, Darlene Reese and Sue Ann Nervets. Heidi Burgess, sister of the bride, was flower girl. Jerry Elliot served as best man and Ann Godfrey, Clarkstone, Ut., registered the guests.

In charge of gifts were Wendy Warner, Pamela Hurd and Alene West. Gift bearers were Monte Burgess, Shane Burgess and Michael Hurd.

Eloise Osterhout made and decorated the four-tier wedding cake in blue and white, topped with an archway and a dove. Ruth West cut and served the cake.

Noel Bowcutt was master of ceremonies and announced the program.

Refreshments were served on quartett tables covered with white cloth centered with pink hats filled with pink and white flowers. The tables were surrounded by trees decorated with pom poms and leaves of green, lavender, pink, yellow and blue. In charge of serving were Jean Warner and Una Hobson. Ushers were Kirk Burgess and Thales Zollinger.

Special guests were Mrs. Orenia Burgess, grandmother of the bride; Olive Warner, great-grandmother of the bride; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark, Logan, Utah. Prayer was given by Don Miller, Leawood, Kan.

Safety work set

SHOSHONE — Work will begin soon on the safety improvement project for the US highway 93 railroad crossing in Shoshone.

According to Dennis Everett, Union Pacific Railroad agent, the equipment for the crossings for both the South Apple Street and Highway 93 crossings has been received. The Grape street crossing has been completed for sometime.

Considerable work will be done on the Highway 93 crossing, to eliminate some of the tracks, upgrade the roadway and install the drop arms. On the Apple Street crossing the work will include pedestrian and bike walks as well as the drop arm installation.

The safety installations at the three crossings within the city area is being done through joint efforts and cost to the Railroad Company, the State Highway department and the City of Shoshone, all aimed at eliminating the traffic hazard that has been evident over the years through accidents and deaths at the three sites.

Everett urges the general public to use caution yet on the US 93 and Apple Street crossings as there are some 33 freight trains go through the city daily and carelessness on the part of drivers of vehicles can still result in a tragedy.

Wheat producers' voice optimism

BOISE — Despite the U.S. Department of Agriculture's June 1 predictions of a record winter wheat crop in the U.S., producers are optimistic about marketing possibilities during the 1975-76 season.

Harold West, Boise, administrator for the Idaho Wheat Commission and executive secretary of the Idaho State Wheat Growers Association (ISWGA), said the 1975 harvest is now well under way in the important wheat producing states of the Midwest.

"However, the predicted 'record crop' is still a long way from being a reality," he cautioned, recalling how the USDA made sudden downward revisions of last year's early predictions.

West said harvesting operations in the southern Great Plains states are running behind normal, due primarily to adverse weather conditions which have slowed maturity.

"Growth stage of Idaho's winter wheat crop — forecast at slightly over 36 million bushels, which is down ten per cent from last year — is also behind schedule, as is the spring-seeded wheat," he reported.

Prospects for a good export market continue to be favorable, according to West, who last week accompanied a six-man team of milling and baking executives from India on a tour of northern Idaho wheat fields and facilities. West noted that India last year was the biggest cash customer for U.S. wheat.

"Last year, India purchased a total of five million metric tons — the equivalent of 185 million bushels. They have already committed themselves to purchase two million metric tons, or 74 million bushels, of our 1975 wheat crop," West said.

Nepce wheat grower Bud Durham, who is Idaho representative to Western Wheat Associates (WWA), anticipates a lively foreign demand for U.S. wheat this coming marketing year.

"Adverse weather conditions in Russia, Australia and Argentina have been noted recently," Dunham said. He said word is trickling out of China indicating serious flooding in central and southern China, plus drought conditions in scattered areas of the northern provinces — posing a serious threat to wheat and rice production in that country.

Keith Amende, Albion, a member of the Idaho Wheat Commission, was similarly optimistic about the present favorable marketing conditions during the 1975-76 season. He said, however, the coming year will likely be similar to the one ending, with "sudden, sharp, daily changes and sudden trend reversals due to the vagaries of weather conditions, government policy, demand and world economic conditions."

"The key to higher average wheat prices and income will be 'orderly marketing,'" Amende said.

Idaho beef price reflects squeeze

CALDWELL — Higher beef prices on the retail market reflect in part, the bind in which producers have been squeezed during the past year. David Miller, Caldwell, chairman of the Idaho Beef Council, said today.

"Beef producers and feed lot operators alike, have been predicting this situation for some time," Miller said. "Higher production and operating costs have forced producers to unload stock at disaster prices during the past year. The law of supply and demand is now forcing retail prices up with little benefit to the industry since the supply prices are depleted." He said the situation in Idaho generally matches that nationally in which the American National Cattlemen's Association reported a 26 per cent reduction in cattle in feed lots from a year ago and May marketings down 24 per cent.

Rolland Patrick, Rogerson, president of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association, said ranchers are being wrongly blamed for holding cattle off the market in order to profit from the higher market.

"We are still in a crisis situation," he said.

He said movement of cattle from ranches to feed lots increased 20 per cent in May, the third consecutive month of increase.

Fruit crop excellent

WALLA WALLA, WASH (UPI) — The Washington Crop and Livestock and Reporting Service predicted Friday the state's 1975 apricot, peach, spearmint and apple crops will surpass last year's.

But the service added that other crops will not fare so well.

Expected to be down from last year are cherries, peppermint, alfalfa seed and Merion Kentucky Bluegrass. The service projects cherries will be 20,000 tons, up 7,000 tons; apricots at 2,500 tons, up 500 tons; Bartlett pears 135,000 tons, up 7,500 tons; and spearmint 12,800 acres, up 1,000 acres.

Lives their goal

TWIN FALLS — About 25 Magic Valley men are completing the 81 hour Emergency Medical Training program, designed to help them save lives in all types of accidents and emergencies.

The course has covered everything from childbirth in which they have been trained to deliver a baby, to the final phases in removing an injured person from a wrecked automobile or rappelling down a rock canyon wall to rescue someone. It is offered through the Department of Health and Welfare.

Ron Sieber, Department of Health and Welfare, said the men are doing the training, largely on their own time. They include county and city law enforcement officers, firemen and ambulance personnel from Twin Falls, Buhl, Jerome and Ketchum.

Sieber, is Region 5 Emergency Medical Service coordinator, says it is now important for persons who arrive on an accident scene at the site of an emergency to know "something more than just first aid."

He said the men spent most of Saturday learning to cut through the metal body of a vehicle to reach a trapped victim.

"We like to feel we are taking the vehicle away from the injured person rather than just taking him from the vehicle," Sieber said.

"Another several hours practice and training in use of ropes to rappel over a rock face or from a ledge to a canyon area, and using ropes to carry injured persons from a canyon or mountain side.

In this area, where Rock Creek Canyon and Snake River Canyon provide an attractive enticement to children—and adults, it is important rescue teams have this skill, Sieber said.

The Twin Falls fire department has a number of specially trained rescue squad members as does the Twin Falls sheriff's office and the police department. The agencies work in conjunction with Magic Valley Ambulance personnel who also have completed necessary training to qualify as emergency medical team members. Training Saturday was at Barger-Matson's wrecking lot and the Shoshone Street Bridge over Rock Creek Canyon.

TF blood drawing today

TWIN FALLS — A Red Cross blood drawing will be held today from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Catholic Parish Hall.

Quota for the drawing is 200 pints.

Tuesday a blood drawing will be held in Jerome and on Wednesday the bloodmobile will move to Filer.

The Jerome drawing will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Masonic Hall next to the old Sawley store.

The Jerome quota is 125 pints.

The Filer drawing will be held Wednesday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the American Legion Hall and will be sponsored by the Filer Kiwanis Club.

Quota for the Filer drawing is 75 pints.

Debts eyed at SV confab

SUN VALLEY — Americans owe about $190 billion in personal debt, according to Art Hearn, Portland, Ore., attending the American Collectors Association annual meeting here.

Hearn said that of the total, about $155 billion is in installment payments. "It is in the public's interest if the bills are paid," Hearn said, since bad debts in any business are passed on to other customers in the form of higher prices for goods and services.

Delegates to the annual convention, which runs through July 1, said in many states members of the national association have established a Consumer Credit Counseling Service, a non-profit organization working with debtors to establish a program of payment of debts on a pro-rated basis over an extended period of time.

"People who find their bills 'getting ahead of their income,' should maintain contact with their creditors or collection agency for help in planning a repayment program which is realistic for the individual involved, the collection agent said.

According to convention delegates, 90 per cent of Americans pay their bills within 60 days of the date due and of the remaining 10 per cent, only about two per cent can be called "deadbeats" or credit criminals.

The collection agents say most people want to pay their bills on time, but problems such as unemployment, illness, divorce, failure to pay child support or a change in family finances without communication between husband and wife are usual reasons why people are referred to a collection agency.

One suggestion given by delegates was that people shop around for credit. They said that consumer unions and banks are better sources of credit than credit departments of business selling merchandise, they said.

Jerome youth escapes jail

JEROME — A 17 year old Jerome youth escaped from the Jerome city — county jail Saturday night and managed to elude roadblocks set up throughout the Magic Valley.

The youth had been scheduled to be transported to St. Anthony either today or tomorrow for re-evaluation. He was in the Jerome county jail on charges of stealing an automobile and burglarizing a Jerome home. After the alleged crimes, he had gone to Alaska, where he was apprehended by officers. He was transported from Alaska to Jerome, for trial on the charges.

According to Edna Hall, sheriff, this is the sixth escape the youth has made, with previous escapes being made from the Gooding jail, St. Anthony, one jail in Canada and two in Alaska. Hall said he has no idea how he managed to get out of the Jerome jail, but said he thought one of the electric doors had been left open, allowing him to run out.

Investigation is continuing.

Trail Creek work slated

By BART QUESNELL
Times-News Writer

KETCHUM Rough, winding Trail Creek Road north of Sun Valley will be improved temporarily this year, and someday may even be paved.

The road has been a problem for federal as well as local agencies. Each year, huge holes and rock slides appear in the narrow, winding highway. Heavy snow generally makes the road impassable until early July.

In November, 1973, the state department of highways abandoned the state highway department from the rough and dangerous State Highway 75. Protests have sprung up from Blaine as well as Custer County citizens who want reliable access over the steep road.

Last Friday, the U.S. Forest Service, State Department of Transportation and Blaine County commissioners worked out a temporary agreement to open Trail Creek Road.

The Blaine County Commissioners will share the work with the U.S. Forest Service and pay up to $1,000 to clean away the rock slides and smooth the grade from the top of the summit to three miles south, where the starts.

The State Department of Highways agreed to maintain the old portion of Old State Highway 75 from the Junction at Ketchum to the end of the old pavement some nine miles away. The department did not maintain much of the road last year.

The $1,000 agreement is a one shot deal, Tom Pestotnik, U.S. Forest Service engineer, Twin Falls, said the forest service men and equipment would begin work on the three mile gravel stretch July 7.

The only long term agreement is that the U.S. Forest/Service will recommend the road be placed on the federal highway secondary aid program so federal funds can be obtained to improve the road.

Howard Johnson, state highway engineer, Shoshone, said the state abandoned the road because it "doesn't have the characteristics of a state highway."

He said very few cars use the road. Pestotnik backed Johnson's statement, saying about 20 to 30 cars per day use the road.

However, state representative E. V. McEllan, R-Ketchum, heatedly opposes the rationale of closure.

"Of course only 20 cars use the road now," McEllan, "but if that was opened up, 250 to 400 cars would use it."

McEllan said the Department of Transportation is not willing to hold a public hearing to determine the attitude of the people here. Forest Service representative Pestotnik said his agency was pushing for a public hearing the last week in July.

Pestotnik and McEllan agreed the state department of highways does not want to see the road put on the federal secondary aid program. Pestotnik said there was no chance of securing federal funds this year. He said he thought if funds did become available, a stretch of road on the north side of the summit in Custer county might be improved first.

However, he did say there was a chance that the three mile remaining gravel stretch south of the summit may someday be paved.

Pestotnik said there was a high traffic count over Trail Creek summit before Galeana was paved. McEllan said he used to bring his oil transports over the road before it deteriorated.

Jerome man charged

JEROME — David Earl Gordon, 24, Jerome, was arrested Friday and charged with manufacturing a controlled substance.

Jerome County sheriff's deputy, Larry Webb, said he had gone north of town to serve a paper on another person and had stopped at the Jerome residence to ask directions, when he saw marijuana plants growing at the home of Gordon.

Webb dug up 21 of the plants and obtained a search warrant and went back and found another 16 plants.

Pending identification of the other unidentified substances collected, other charges may be filed against Gordon.

Gordon was arraigned before magistrate Russell Shaud and is free on $1,000 bond.

TF burglary probed
TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police today were investigating a burglary in which about $300 in goods was taken from an apartment in the Rex Arms.

Richard Mansfield told police late Saturday that his apartment had been broken into Saturday evening and a stereo and related equipment valued at about $300 removed.

MH fatally wounded
MOUNTAIN HOME, Idaho (UPI) — Mearl "Eddie" Smith, 14, son of T. Sgt. and Mrs. James A. Smith, was fatally wounded with a .22 caliber revolver Saturday night.

Officials at Mountain Home Air Force Base said the shooting appeared to be accidental. They said it occurred at the home of a friend of the boy.

Smith, wounded under the right eye about 10 p.m., was taken to a Boise hospital by helicopter. He died early Sunday.

Condition listed 'critical'
TWIN FALLS — Michael Wingard, 22, Bloomington, Ind., is listed in critical condition at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital today.

Wingard was injured in a one car accident Friday night on the access road to Red Fish Lake. The accident occurred when the car left the road and slammed into a tree at a high rate of speed, according to Carl Ellis, Custer County deputy sheriff.

Symms eyes gold coinage bill
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, has introduced legislation providing for a new United States gold coinage.

Symms' bill would prohibit the sale of U.S. gold reserve, except in the form of one-ounce and one half-ounce gold coins available to U.S. citizens.

The one-ounce gold coin would bear the portrait of Ludwig Von Mises, a famous free-market economist; Symms said, while the half-ounce piece would bear the portrait of Thomas Jefferson.

"In my opinion the minting of these coins would be a fitting tribute to the greatest economist and political thinker who has ever lived. At the same time, it would prohibit the U.S. Treasury from continuing to sell off our gold reserves in 250-ounce bars."

Motorcyclists stage protest
BOISE (UPI) — About 80 motorcyclists staged a protest ride down Capitol Boulevard Sunday as part of a nationwide protest against mandatory helmet laws.

They began at an Morrison Park and concluded at the Federal Building on West Fort Street where they collected more than 400 signatures on petitions and post cards seeking changes in the helmet laws.

The protesters are asking the law be repealed and that safety standards for helmets be reviewed.

Wayne Pierce, Twin Falls, director of the Idaho chapter of the Sierra-Road-Riders-Association, said "many helmets are hazardous because they cut down on a cyclist's hearing and vision and sometimes cause heat prostration."

Idaho party to affiliate with national
McCALL, Idaho (UPI) — Idaho's American Party has voted to affiliate with the national American Party based in Tennessee.

Central committee members met in McCall over the weekend to review, strengthen and reinforce portions of their platform. They re-emphasized the right to keep and bear arms, advocated the monetary policy as an end to inflation by backing the dollar with gold and urged education be returned to basics.

Tighter controls sought
BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Fish and Game Department is asking for tighter controls on the numbers of boats and people allowed to use float and power boats on certain Idaho streams.

In a statement submitted to the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Board on proposed changes in that board's rules and regulations, the department expressed concern with proposed regulations establishing a limit to the number of outfitter licenses issued for power or float boating.

"We recommend the board give serious thought to limiting the number of boats that each licensed outfitter may operate and the number of trips an outfitter might be able to take in one season," the report says.

KEN BODGE and Brandon Boyle were among the nine players directed by Ed Burt who presented Street Theatre Friday and Saturday for patrons in Twin Falls. The group presented a comedy based on the 1930s country work, "A Servant of Two Masters" by Carlo Goldoni.

Abuse complaints preceded child deaths

Robert Fanning, an Idaho Falls attorney who was prosecutor at the time, said an autopsy showed the child's intestines had been punctured, causing infection and death. There was also a burn on the right foot, Fanning said.

Friday the child was out here at the funeral home with a burn on its right foot made by an iron," Fanning said.

He said the original complaint came from a neighbor, but no effort was made to remove the girl from the home.

"They came and looked and could see the child had been beaten. This has been awfully embarrassing for Health and Welfare," Fanning said.

Robert Parrish, head of Region Seven for Health and Welfare, said the office was not contacted before the child died.

"This office has no file on the case. We did not get a complaint," he said.

"What they do is try to use these women on welfare to train them or some damn thing, but they're not really trained," Fanning said. "All these cases should be reported to us (prosecuting attorney). Health and Welfare didn't even do that. It was the mortuary that finally called us hours after they had the kid."

In another Statesman story on the department, the newspaper said an internal report complained of slow investigations, poor records, poor services and poor training in Idaho's child abuse program.

"The general success of the total child abuse emphasis could be considered as very questionable," Health and Welfare Special Projects Coordinator Ray Wooten said in a special report.

"There is a great lack by program implementors of ability to effectively carry out investigations, evaluations, make dispositions and develop follow-up plans for child abuse complaints," the report says.

Valley Weather Report

Summery weather returns to MV

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert Area: Mostly fair skies with mild nights and warm days through Tuesday. Lows tonight near 50. Highs Tuesday near 85. Light winds. Probability of precipitation near zero.

Hailey, Camas, Lower Snake River Valley: Mostly fair skies with mild nights and warm days through Tuesday. Lows tonight near 40. Highs Tuesday 75 to 80. Light winds. Probability of precipitation near zero.

Synopsis: Typical early summer weather (favorable for all outside activities) will prevail over all of Idaho this week. Skies will be sunny, days will be warm and the nights will be pleasantly cool. Precipitation, if any, should be confined to a few scattered showers over the mountains.

An upper air low pressure system which has dominated the weather over the northwestern states for the past week will continue to be the dominant factor. However that trough has become much weaker and much drier. It is also warming. This leads to an extended outlook calling for generally fair and warm weather for the remainder of the week. Temperatures will average near the seasonal normals which are high in the middle 80's and low around 50.

This drying and warming will tend to increase irrigation requirements as crops approach their maximum growth period.

NEW YORK (UPI)

Another economic recovery sign helped stock prices higher Monday in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange as institutions prepared for the third quarter.

Investors were encouraged by machine tool orders up 6.5 per cent in May from April. The National Machine Tool Builders' Association said, however, most of the gain was due to a decline in order cancellations.

The news followed the Commerce Department's report last week its index of leading indicators rose for the third consecutive month in May - 2.1 per cent - a decline to 5 per cent in the rate of inflation. However, the Congressional Budget Office, in its first report, said the downward trend would soon end.

With this in the background, the Dow Jones industrial average, a 17-point gain last week, was ahead 1.85 to 378.52 shortly before noon EDT. Advances led declines, 692 to 426, among the 1,461 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover during the first two hours amounted to about 7,900,000 shares, compared with 6,400,000 during the same period Friday.

With the second quarter coming to a close, some portfolio managers made adjustments, causing erratic movements in the market. Wall Street still wobbles about short-term interest rates, which have risen recently.

PGI extends spud bargaining deadline

BOISE (UPI) - Idaho potato growers have decided they would rather take their chances on the open market than bargain on their own.

Dwaine Skogsgberg, president of the Potato Growers of Idaho, said Friday the organization had been given a unanimous "vote of confidence" in dealing with the processors.

In the past, growers have been led until July 1 to allow the growers association to make deals with the processors. This year, however, they have extended that cutoff date, Skogsgberg said.

Skogsgberg said that the growers have voted unanimously to extend the July date indefinitely to allow the organization to do their bidding with the processors.

Four contracts already have been settled in eastern Idaho - those with R. T. French, Rogers Brothers, Idaho Potato Packers Cooperation and Lambert Weston. They signed contracts offering the growers $3.50 per hundredweight.

Among the bigger processors who have not signed contracts are J. R. Simplot, Ore-Ida, Carnation and Lamb-Weston. These have yet to come to terms with the potato growers.

Skogsgberg said the problem this year was that those who have failed to come to terms want to offer much less than the previous year. He said they were offering contracts that were 50 to 80 cents below agreements signed in 1974.

"Most of those processors are offering $2.90 to $3.10 per hundredweight," he said.

Skogsgberg said that the growers were not going to take a "guaranteed loss."

"They are willing to gamble on the open market that the price will be higher than the processor contract price," he said.

Skogsgberg said apparently these processors not signing contracts thought that when the contract with the Potato Growers association expired they "could go out and pick them the growers off."

Instead, Skogsgberg said, the growers decided they would extend the bargaining because they still wanted the association to make their deals.

"Now, the processors cannot go out and pick them off one at a time at low production costs," he said.

He said this has never happened before in Idaho.

"It amounts to a vote of confidence of the growers in the Idaho Potato Growers of Idaho."

Homebuilders not overjoyed by Ford veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) - When President Ford announced he would veto the proposed emergency housing act of 1975, he said his decision was in the best interest of the industry.

Even as the House was falling in line to override the veto, it was difficult to find much gratitude in the industry for the White House decision to veto the act, and in effect, hold the line by committing $2 billion remaining from last year's appropriation to subsidize mortgages.

The home-building industry, which preferred the housing program approved by Congress, disapproves of the suggestions have languished in Congress for several years.

The new requirements were included in net capital rules that will apply to all broker-dealers, regardless of exchange affiliation.

The new SEC rule allows broker-dealer debts to be no more than 15 times greater than capital. Previously the ratio was 20 to one.

Under the mortgage subsidy program, the government makes a commitment to buy mortgages from private lenders. The private lenders make money available at the market rate - now about 9 per cent - then sell the mortgages to the government at a price that gives the purchaser a lower and presumably affordable rate.

The President's commitment of $2 billion will provide for mortgages of 7 1/2 per cent. Even though the government proposes to purchase $2 billion in mortgages, the real cost is expected to be only about $60 million, the difference between the market rate and the lower, subsidized rate.

Realtors say that, as a practical matter, an initial 7 1/2 per cent usually winds up costing slightly more than 8 per cent because of added fees.

The bill passed by Congress, which the President said was too costly, would have given more help to home buyers. The President said it would have cost $1 billion in real terms in the next 12 months.

The legislation would have provided up to 400,000 middle-income home buyers the choice of a subsidized mortgage at 6 per cent for three years, a permanent subsidized mortgage somewhat higher or a $1,000 cash incentive payment to help the purchaser make a down payment.

The Congressional bill also would have helped home owners in trouble because of the recession. It would have provided up to $250 million for 24 months as a federal loan, repayable later, to help the owner escape foreclosure.

The President said he preferred his program because it could be administered more quickly than the new one which would require new regulations and a period of reorganization.

For the time being, Congress will ponder Ford's proposal to authorize another $7.75 billion in the new fiscal year along lines of the expiring plan. Both houses will also study cut-down versions of the legislation just defeated, with an eye to getting it to the floor by late August.

LEE BAGLEY, Boise, teamed with Radcliffe in the Governor's Cup tournament for a third place berth. The pair rounded out a good day of golf shooting 60.

Jones, Ralston win on Elkhorn course

ELKHORN — It wasn't enough that the designer got into the play, a football coach showed up, too.

That was the situation in the Governor's Cup two-man best ball at Elkhorn's new 18-hole course Sunday. The man who designed the course, Robert Trent Jones Jr., and Denver Bronco Coach John Ralston turned the new layout in 13-under par 59.

That gave them, a share of the title with a Twin Falls duo of Steve Carter and Joe McCollum, who also runs a golf course — Canyon Springs.

Lee Bagley and Cy Radcliffe of Boise were third at 60 while Cristman and Donahue of Deffen were fourth with the same total.

In the individual race, homegrown Nils Badenduck of Sun Valley, who owns the first hole-in-one on the course, and Dave Woolley shared first place at one-under 71. Dean Oliver, Boise, and Grant Erickson were tied for third and fourth at 73.

Governor Cecil Andrus of Idaho won the Governor's cup, no major surprise since he was the only governor who showed up after three others begged off due to illness or official duties. Gov. Andrus, a 36 handicap, fired a 104.

USC catcher signs with California

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Danny Goodwin, a catcher from Southern University and the nation's No. 1 pick in the June free agent draft, signed a contract with the California Angels Sunday for a bonus reportedly in excess of $100,000.

The Angels weren't saying, but a club source said the bonus given the 21-year-old Peoria, Ill., college standout was in excess of the $104,000 paid Rick Monday when he signed with the A's in 1967. That deal was the largest involving a draft choice since the draft began in 1965.

Goodwin, who batted .294, hit 20 home runs and had an rti total of 166 in his four years at Southern University, will report Monday to Angels double A El Paso minor league team.

"I hope to move along as fast as I can," said Goodwin. "I understand the Angels are an organization where I can move up quickly."

Johnson defies weather conditions to lead at mid-point of Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — George Johnson, a 36-year-old black in his seventh year on the pro golf tour, defied the soaked fairways and sopping greens Sunday for a five-under-par 66 to grab the mid-point lead in the $200,000 Western Open with a 35-hole total of 138, four under for the distance.

It was the best position Johnson ever has held midway through a tournament, although he won three second-tour events. He has won only $4,637 this year. The round gave him a one-stroke lead over last year's U.S. Open champion, Hale Irwin, the third-leading money winner who had a 68 for a 128 total.

Johnson, starting the day one over par, shaved off another stroke on the front nine of Butler National Golf Club, then collected five pars and four birdies on the back nine. His edge actually came when he dropped a 35-foot putt on the 18th green.

"I put my tee shot on the 18th into the left rough," he said. "And I tried a flyer. I started to chip out, but it was about 170 yards to the front of the green, so I took a six iron and let it fly.

"The ball sailed like I expected and rolled up about 35 feet from the pin. I hit it and when it was about 10 feet from the hole, I knew it was going in.

"I'm not really excited about leading now, but I'll get excited Monday afternoon if I'm in the same position. The greens were a little bumpy and I was fortunate to shoot a round like that."

Johnson revealed that he took a lesson from his teaching pro, Paul Shepard, Sunday and said it helped him.

"I was hitting it straight," Johnson said. "I had it all together."

Irwin was satisfied with his round.

"I got a tremendous break. I shot a 74 on the rainout day with 36 putts and then a 68 Sunday with 26 putts. The three I have on the board now, red, signifying a score under par, is a different color than it was Friday and I feel very, very thankful about that."

Irwin, who has earned $135,627 this year and with a victory in the Atlanta Classic four weeks ago, said, "I had seven birdies, two bogies and one double bogie. It was a very up and down round. For all intents and purposes, I had only one bad hole—the 18th.

"That particular hole does not need that particular tree in the middle of that particular fairway. It puts a premium on two reasonably long shots being very accurate," he said.

Irwin's drive was blocked by the tree, and he hit a four iron. "I had to hit it low," he said.

"I was trying to hit a low fade, so it wouldn't jump up and hit those trees. I did hit it a little thin. It was not a good shot. It was destined for the water when I hit it. If I'd hit it solidly, it would have been all right. It was just a poor shot. Still, it was the kind of shot I feel I should have pulled off."

Playing the back nine first, Irwin birdied five of six holes, twice on putts of 25 feet, once from 15, once from 12, once from 6 and once from 4. He bogeyed the odd hole when he missed a 12-foot putt and then came "disaster," with the penalty for hitting water on the 18th setting up his double bogey-six.

On the front nine, he went over par when he put his approach in a trap on the third hole but dropped birdie putts of seven and four feet, the latter for his third deuce of the round.

"The greens are a little better. They're set up a lot easier than they have been. But my putting made the difference. I feel I should have had a 68 or 67."

Trailing at even par 142 were Wally Armstrong, Gibby Gilbert, Tom Kite and John Schloe. Miller Barber, Julius Boros, Jerry Heard and Florentino Molina were tied at 143.

Trevino, Nichols, and Heard released and in good shape

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Lee Trevino, Bobby Nichols and Jerry Heard were released from Hinsdale Hospital Sunday and Trevino, the volatile Mexican, was subdued in his usual jocularity in discussing the lightning bolts which struck the three pro golfers Friday.

"I found out that a two-foot side killer is not the most important thing in the world," Trevino said. "I may hit those things now without cleaning the ball. I thought by all rights they should be putting me in the ground at 10:30 Monday morning."

The three golfers appeared at a news conference in nearby Hinsdale. Trevino later withdrew from the Western Open and departed for his home in El Paso, Tex., where he plans to rest a few days.

"It wasn't quite raining and I sent the caddy up to get some soft drinks, and the next thing I remember, it knocked me completely out of there," Trevino said. "It was a sensation I'd never felt before. My whole life was passing before me in about two seconds. I really thought it had me."

"I completely lifted me off the ground. It straightened me out and my hands were up in the air shaking. I couldn't move for a couple of seconds, and the lightning left and put me back down."

"At the hospital I had little wells on my back. I couldn't see them, but they said they looked like little spiders. And my legs, it was like I was having convulsions when the electricity had me straightened out. I told my wife on the phone. For the first time in my life, I was six feet two. I was finally tall once."

"I'm still scared," Trevino said. "I don't think I was as scared at first as I was when I got to the hospital and they put a thermometer in my mouth to take my temperature and I couldn't hold it there. It kept shaking out."

"The doctor said they don't have too many lightning victims to go by, so they have to treat it like an electric shock. Usually people don't live to talk about it. I was in the wrong place. That's all I can tell you. I'm lucky to be here."

Heard, who apparently was least seriously affected by the bolts, said he "might try to play in the tournament Sunday."

"I might go give it a chance," he said. "If I don't feel well out there, I'll just walk in."

"I feel good, a little weak because of being on my back for two days. But if there's a cloud in the skies, I'm not going to be playing much golf."

Nichols, who said probably he would stay out of competition for three weeks, said "there was no buildup, no pre-warning. Just a flash and a big boom sound."

"I was laying on the ground and I got up and started running because I was scared more than anything else," he said. "I fell down and got up and started running again, through the trees and things."

Nichols said he suffered no immediate ill effects, but after he was in the clubhouse, "I was beginning to get a headache and felt a burning sensation in my mouth. So somebody said, 'We're going to take you to a hospital'—and I'm glad they did."

"Everybody is just a little sore. The doctor said to take a few days rest and it should go away. We were fortunate nobody got a direct hit. We got a wave or a burn or something to that effect."

Trevino and Heard were near the 13th green when they were struck, but Nichols was on the fourth fairway during the second round of the $200,000 Western Open. The round later was cancelled for the day and was postponed again Saturday due to unplayable conditions.

Trevino said he would have a daily check on his heart and probably on his blood pressure. If the doctor agrees, he said, he will leave Saturday to play in the British Open.

All three agreed it was an unusual storm and that as much as possible had been done to clear the course.

"People have no control over the weather," Trevino said. "They're getting better going with the weather people and getting people off the course. They're fast enough. Usually you can see lightning up in the sky. This was all of a sudden, hitting low and every bolt hitting the ground. These were hitting all over the course. It was unfortunate it was that type of lightning."

"I think they'll be a little more cautious in the future," Heard said. "They've done their best but this was a weird storm. Usually it gets real dark, but this was light in color. You could hear the thunder coming a long way off, but all of a sudden it was on top of us. There was no warning at all, there was lightning in the area."

"I've always been afraid of lightning. Now I really respect it. I was really scared. All I wanted to do was get out of it. I knew I wasn't going to die."

Heard said if he played Sunday, "I'll be walking pretty slow, I'm sure. I'll see how I feel and if I can't play, I'll go home and relax."

Heard had greater incentive to play. He was tied for third place, two under par, heading into the second round, while Trevino was eight strokes behind and Nichols five.

CV RADCLIFF puts out on eleventh green in the Elkhorn Governor's Cup two-man best ball golf tournament at the new 18-hole course Sunday. Radcliffe resides in Boise.

A.J. Foyt wins Pocono 425 as rain shortens the race

MR. POCONO, Pa. (UPI) — A.J. Foyt is like a kid singing in the rain today. He's $24,650 richer and discovered showers could be a man's best friend.

Foyt won the rain-shortened Pocono 425 Sunday, an event that marked the second time USAC's triple crown of racing program was terminated by inclement weather. Bobby Unser won a 435-mile at Indianapolis last month.

The entire day was a mass of frustrations for drivers, traffic control directors, pit crews and spectators. The race was delayed two hours, forcing a 3 p.m. start. Three days of rain produced mud that clogged the inside of the Pocono International Raceway.

But for Foyt, it was pennies from heaven. A.J. averaged only 140.712 mph as a winning average speed in a race slowed nine times by yellow caution flags.

"But it was work, man, it was work," Foyt explained. "Firstly, I kept changing lines after every pit-stop and finally got the combination right. Then, when we saw the rains coming in the distance, I decided to push up the boost and get all the daylight I could when the yellow came out."

Foyt and Wallyallenbach were the only drivers on the same lap at the finish. Bill Vukovich was third and Roger McCluskey, who was leading on the last lap two years ago when he ran out of fuel and lost to Foyt, finished fourth.

Winning Pocono Sunday, of course, was a great honor to Foyt, "but it pleases me to win any race, even a little midget race."

"Did he have any close calls during the race?"

"I like to do what Gordy (Johncock) did. Hit the wall."

Johncock was running second to Foyt on the 140th lap when he spun on turn 2 and struck the retaining wall. He was shaken up, but walked back to the recreational van where his family was waiting after his medical checkup.

Dallenbach was extremely pleased with his second place finish. He was leading Indy when mechanical failure forced him out late in that race.

Wally elected to run with an old Offy engine here, rather than the new motor that his teammate, Johncock, was using.

Despite drawing 100 horsepower less than Gordie, Dallenbach had the proper motor to finish the race.

Could he have passed Foyt at any time during the race?

"No. You saw everything I had," said the Colorado cowboy. "I was handling superbly, but my engine was running like a pussycat, while A.J.'s was going like a tiger."

Foyt led for 115 laps during the race. Johncock was in front on 29 laps. The only other driver with any consistency was Duane "Pancho" Carter, who held command for 12 laps.

Other lap leaders were Jim Caruthers, 5; Vukovich, 4; Mario Andretti, 2; Jerry Grant, 2; and Steve Krisloff, 1.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't make important decisions in early a.m. Later, you tune in on what's best for your future and see how to put new ideas and activities in action.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid early arguments at home. Then you can handle important outside matters efficiently later. Some early mistake can be quickly righted.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Restrictions are annoying in a.m., but you can plan the future more intelligently with a good adviser later. A happy p.m.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Steer clear of an acquaintance who is acting strangely early, then you can enjoy the social in p.m. with good friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be careful of the law early and then you can carry on with career duties intelligently and profitably.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Making radical changes in a.m. is not good, since thoughtful ones later get much better results. Check facts for accuracy.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You feel bogged down with obligations in the a.m., but later can breeze through them efficiently. Show more devotion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't have any serious talk in a.m., or your afternoon activities will suffer. Use the soft pedal with one who opposes you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Persevere at work today and you accomplish much with good benefits following. Brighten old wardrobe with new accessories.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle work problems, then you can seek out others for recreation. Show more devotion for the one you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your home to see where improvements are needed and do them yourself if possible. Find new, more efficient work methods.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Help others with problems. A letter in a.m. could prove disconcerting, but later it can be turned to your gain.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Afternoon is fine for monetary matters, but don't invest in a.m. If you have any doubts how to proceed get expert advice.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be most active and will want to jump into anything and everything without giving much thought to what is being done, so teach early to control self, and then to think matters-out carefully before attempting to handle them. Give as fine an education as you can since you have a pioneer heir—and the judgment will be excellent, the ambition great. Religious training a must early.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

A marketing research firm took it upon itself to make an extensive study of those citizens whose job it is to predict the future. Sports writers appear to be the most accurate, according to that company. Along with weather men. Least accurate, it was learned, are the horoscope writers. Stockbrokers and economists got low marks, too.

REMEMBER, an inch of rain means 113 tons of water to the acre.

IN OLD TIME RECIPES, molasses used to be measured not in spoonfuls or cupfuls, but in gurgles. Two gurgles of molasses, for instance, meant put in only as much as gurgles twice when poured from the jug.

WHALES
Q. "How much do the biggest whales' hearts weigh?"
A. Up to 1,300 pounds, it's estimated. An 85-foot-long blue whale, weighing 150 tons, was sectioned in 1947; its heart weighed 950 pounds. Some whales get up to 120 feet long, however. So the researchers figure the weights of their hearts go into four figures.

LOUIE, my boy, what's your favorite breakfast?
A. This week? A glass of V-8 juice at the sink and a bag of popcorn in the car to work. I tried fried chicken last week but it made the steering wheel too slippery.

"HOW TALL IS actor Paul Newman?"
A. Exactly 5-foot-11.

MOVIES
It's not widely understood that movie theater managers don't always make the most money by booking the very best motion pictures. A film that's slightly boring in spots tends to send the customers to the refreshment counter. The profit from 40-cent soft drinks and 65-cent popcorn can make up some for a few empty seats.

ARGUMENT continues over the whereabouts of the first professional hockey league. Credit the United States with that. Hockey originated in Canada, true enough. About 1867, in Ontario. But the first pro team was put together in the winter of 1904-05 at Houghton, Mich.

DID THE U.S. ARMY invent the aerosol can? Was it first to develop freeze-dried foods? Such are the claims of that military body.
