Ford to ask oil price control cut

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Ford said Saturday he will ask a skeptical Democratic Congress next week to wipe out price controls on U.S. crude oil, a move that could boost retail gasoline prices between 4 and 11 cents a gallon.

Calling his plan responsible and well-timed, Ford said it would reduce reliance on foreign oil by letting higher prices stimulate domestic production — without causing a "precipitous rise" in consumer gasoline costs.

In a regionally televised news conference, Ford said he would go along with an extension of the present price control law, which expires Aug. 31, as long as it gave him some flexibility. But he made clear he would view such an extension as a temporary expedient.

About 40 per cent of America's domestic oil production is considered "old oil" produced from wells that were drilled before 1972, and sells for a controlled price of $5.25 a barrel. Removing price controls would let oil from such wells be sold at the world market price, now about $13 a barrel.

Administration plans call for decontrol to take place over two years. That represents a compromise between the original administration goal of immediate decontrol and congressional pressures for a more gradual program.

Latest Federal Energy Administration calculations show gasoline is selling for a national average of 57.4 cents a gallon. Some congressional energy experts predict decontrol would push gas prices up by about 4 cents a gallon, but oil industry officials have said the increase could be from 8 to 11 cents.

Ford held his news conference during a three-day Midwest swing billed by the White House as non-political. The trip, Ford's first since he announced his candidacy, also featured a commencement address at Chicago State University and a conference with Illinois Republican leaders.

In response to questions, the President also said:

— He does not think his administration has suffered any failures. Its successes, he said, include a restoration of "public confidence" in the White House, a slower rate of inflation, strengthened ties with NATO, disengagement in Vietnam and the Mayaguez incident.

He was pleased by news of the safe release of US Army Col. Ernest Morgan, abducted 13 days ago in Beirut. He said "our representative in Lebanon worked very closely" with the Government of Lebanon "to make sure Col. Morgan was returned."

— The GOP convention will determine whether Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller is on the party's ticket in 1976. "Just as they will decide whether I will be the candidate in 1976," he said both he and Rockefeller will be campaigning for convention delegates.

— He is not prepared to discuss broadening Richard M. Nixon's Watergate pardon to cover the former President's recent grand jury testimony. Ford said the pardon "was the right decision at the time and otherwise I don't think I should speculate on something that hasn't taken place and may not take place."

— He does not know personally of any Central Intelligence Agency agents now working under cover at the White House. Asked if any CIA personnel were secretly on the White House staff during the Nixon administration, he replied: "That matter will be analyzed."

Fatal collision

THREE persons died in this two-car accident Saturday night one mile south of Curry. All three, a Montana couple and their infant son, were in the overturned sedan at right. Five other persons were injured, three of them seriously. State police said stop signs on the north-south road had been removed by vandals. The sedan pulled into the path of the other vehicle traveling east on South Park Avenue.

Transplant patient dies

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Martin Cox, the longest surviving liver transplant patient in the country, died Friday night at Lakeside Hospital, only two days before the sixth anniversary of his operation.

Cox, 47, Nova, Ohio, underwent the transplant operation at Colorado's General Hospital in Denver July 13, 1969. His liver was being destroyed by Wilson's Disease, a condition in which the body fails to properly assimilate deposits of copper.

Cox, who spent most of the last six years in Denver, had been here less than one month.

Lake defents young swimmer

TORONTO (UPI) — More than 20 hours of heroic effort ended in heartbreak for a 15-year-old Canadian schoolgirl Saturday night as she failed in her second attempt to become the youngest swimmer ever to complete the 100-mile Lake Ontario.

An exhausted Angela Kordrak was pulled out of the water about four miles from the Toronto-lakeshore after covering more than 22 miles in a night-and-day battle from Youngstown, N.Y.

She was rushed immediately to a hospital for a checkup. (Earlier story, p. 24)

Gate burglars plan appeals

MIAMI (UPI) — The four Watergate burglars said Saturday they are pleased that U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica reduced their sentences to time already served, but they still plan to appeal their convictions.

"That lets us off parole, but we've still got a number," said Frank Sturgis. "We're continuing our appeals to try to erase the convictions and clear our names."

3 killed in rural TF crash

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three persons were killed and five others injured Saturday night in a two-car collision at a rural intersection southwest of Twin Falls.

Vandals had removed stop signs at the intersection, which apparently was a contributing factor in the crash.

State patrolman Gene Bolton said all three of the dead were in a Montana vehicle traveling north one mile south of the Curry crossing. The accident was reported at 7 p.m.

Had the stop signs been in place, the Montana vehicle probably would have stopped, Bolton said. Instead, the driver, unfamiliar with the area, drove across South Park Avenue, and into the path of an east-bound vehicle driven by Arlene Shank, 23, Filer.

Officer Bolton identified the dead as a six-month-old baby, Jeramie Thain, and his parents, Bruce Patrick Thain, 27, driver of the car, and Loretta Jensen Thain, 22, all Townsend, Mont.

The infant and father died at the scene. Mrs. Thain died about two hours later at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Those listed in serious condition included passengers in the Montana car. Linda Gay Jensen, 26, Murlaugh, with hip, leg, arm and possible internal injuries; her husband, Michael Everett Jensen, Murlaugh, age unknown, with back, arm, chest and face injuries; Randy Shank, 22, Filer, husband of the driver of the eastbound vehicle, also was listed as serious. He suffered head and chest injuries. In fair condition was Jolita F. Jensen, 20, Twin Falls, another passenger in the Montana vehicle. Arlene Shank was treated and released from the hospital.

Officer Bolton was assisted by Sheriff's officers and Twin Falls city police. He said a number of passing motorists, also assisted by putting out a fire which broke out in the Montana vehicle after the crash. — Michael Jensen was pinned under the overturned vehicle while all others were thrown out by the impact.

Bolton said the county sheriff's department is investigating the matter of the stop signs being torn down. A resident of the area said he saw them lying on the ground earlier in the day. Another area resident, Doug Hall, said he replaced the signs several days ago, but they were torn down again.

Bliss future 'bypassed'?

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BLISS — Bliss business people are still confident of their town's future, despite being bypassed by the new interstate. But they're worried.

Long known as a truck and coffee stop, this little town perched on the south edge of the Snake River Canyon could fade into oblivion when the newest section of Interstate 80 opens Monday. The new route will bypass the community, running parallel to the town more than half a mile to the north.

Owners and managers of the town's five restaurants — all of which remain open 24 hours — say they have two things going for them: the location and the fact Bliss has a full interchange off the interstate on both ends of town.

An added source of worry came late this week with the announcement that the west interchange into Glens Ferry is scheduled to be closed temporarily July 21 so approach slabs can be installed to the main interchange structure.

Howard Johnson, Shoshone district highway engineer, said the project should close the interchange for a "week to 10 days" and traffic will be signaled into Glens Ferry from the interchange on the east edge of town.

But several restaurant people who businesses are nearer the west end of town feel this "temporary" closure may be the "straw that breaks the camel's back."

Ray Moore, who recently purchased the Y-Inn Cafe, said Thursday he may have to lay off some 15 people, nearly half of his 34 employees.

He said instead of five persons on every shift he is going to cut personnel to one cook and one waitress each shift. He has told his employees he will have a full crew at 5 a.m. July 22, "but if no one's there, they're going home at noon."

"I can't afford that kind of a payroll if we don't have any customers," he said. Moore feels no motorists will drive the entire length of town to reach businesses located at the west end. They will stop at the first cafe or service station they find, he says.

"We may just close up for the duration and all have a vacation," Thelma Pague, manager of the Circle Bar restaurant, said. She said she either will close completely and give employees time without pay or keep a skeleton crew, depending on how business holds up during the interchange closure.

Tony Harbaugh said he may have to lay off one person per shift at his Arco Truck and car stop, but he thinks there'll be enough regular customers to tide the business over until both interchanges are open.

John Griffith, manager at the Fearless Parlor station, echoed the belief that regular customers will prove faithful.

"The majority of our trade is truck trade," he said, "and many of these divers have been coming here for years."

Cyclist, 74, killed

MURTAUGH — A 74-year-old motorcyclist was killed in a freak accident shortly after noon Friday on a county road northeast of here.

Alfred William Heacock, 74, Burley, was pronounced dead at the scene after his motorcycle collided with the rear of another cycle five miles east and one and one-quarter miles north of Murtaugh.

County Coroner Cloyce Edwards, who pronounced the victim dead, said death was caused by head, neck and chest injuries.

Sven Michael Johnson, 24, Murtaugh, was operating the other cycle. He was taken to the Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley and treated by his physician for cuts and bruises.

Sheriff Paul Corder said Johnson was returning to his home for lunch and was only a short distance from his driveway when the accident occurred.

He said the men were not traveling together and there was no other traffic at the site where the two cycles collided. He said he and other officers were at a loss to explain why Heacock drove into the rear of Johnson's machine.

Court must decide ownership of horse

TWIN FALLS - A North Idaho man filed action in Fifth Judicial District Court here to regain possession of a horse.

Don Merkle, 47, of Burley, asked the court to give him back his Quarter Horse and foal, which he brought the action against Dean Parker, Auburn, Calif., and John Lancaster, Filer.

In his complaint, Merkle states he purchased a Quarter Horse mare (foal Dean Parker Oct. 5, 1974). The horse, he said, was Missy Sugar, but it was sold under the name of Miss Silver Bars. Parker was auctioneer of the sale where the horse was sold but later stated he had sold the wrong horse.

Merkley said he later took the horse with him and had the name Lancaster stables for breeding. He said he had to impound the animals and return them to Parker unless he provided necessary papers for the horse's sale.

The plaintiff asks the court to order the mare and foal returned to him and to order Parker to provide registration papers for Missy Sugar.

Camp manager, Chicanos at odds over rentals

TWIN FALLS - Trouble over rental practices may again be brewing between residents and the manager of the Twin Falls Labor Center.

Last May about 100 Chicano residents of the camp staged a protest march seeking the ouster of Camp manager William Taylor.

The residents charged that Taylor had discriminated against Chicanos in renting tents at the camp.

Last month following mediation by the U.S. Justice Department, labor union board members and resident spokesmen signed an accord which among other provisions set up an advisory group of camp residents to work as a liaison between them and the administration of the camp.

The advisory group will meet with the board for the first time Saturday evening, and one of the problems which will be brought to the attention of the board is a case involving a Chicano family who have allegedly been asked by the camp manager to move to a second house after having been given one house and changing it up.

According to Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Muro, they were given the keys to House 16 at the camp about July 1 and proceeded to clean up and move into the house.

The Muros now say that Taylor has asked them to move to a second house, but they have so far refused to do so.

Not only have the Muros asked to move the Muros said they have been asked to move twice, first from House 10 to a second house for a month and then to a third house.

Taylor, they said, has threatened them with eviction if they do not move.

They also charged that someone representing himself to be Mr. Muro last week called the police company and had the electricity to House 16 turned off.

The Muros said they have invested considerable time cleaning up House 16 and do not want to move, particularly not to a second house, but they will have to leave in a month for a third.

Asked about the situation Saturday, Taylor refused comment.

Asked if he had threatened to evict the Muros, Taylor said, "I still have no comment."

Shoneta Arambula, vice chairman of the Committee for Better Housing which staged the protest march and was instrumental in the 7 federally financed agreement said Saturday the case of the Muros will be brought to the attention of the board next week.

She declined to comment further on the situation until the meeting.

Guard maneuvers in Paul desert

KIMAMA - Despite hordes of early morning mosquitoes and the wind-blown dust of the hot afternoons, Magie Valley and Pocatello units of the Idaho National Guard's 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment are completing a running map problem in the Kimama desert, 15 miles north of Paul.

The units, which include Regimental Headquarters and Headquarters Troop from Twin Falls, arrived in the desert Friday evening and began setting up for a map exercise using Kimama as simulated German terrain. The troops will return this afternoon.

The 26-hour tactical training maneuver is being conducted by the U.S. Army's 7th Maneuver Area Command (MAC) from Houston Tex.

The map exercise calls for troop advancement and withdrawal from a battle line on the German front. The objectives of the training are:

- Evaluate tactical standard operating procedures;
- Determine communications capabilities;
- Analyze infra and inter staff procedures;
- Analyze fire support planning;
- Analyze tactical air planning;
- Evaluate subordinate headquarters.

The Kimama training is a continuation of field training exercises conducted at Gowen Field in May with 116th Armored Cavalry's 1st Squadron.

High divorce rate alters economy

By DAVID HORSMAN

TWIN FALLS — Beyond personal injury, the impact of rising local divorce rates also can be felt in the economic community, according to two Twin Falls bankers.

In interviews with the Times-News, they agreed that financial needs change when couples split up. The former husband or wife must find a new home, sometimes a new job and often some extra cash.

The Times-News reported Wednesday that county records show divorce actions exceeded marriage licenses during the past year. "There were 252 divorce actions filed compared to 486 marriage licenses issued."

"I would think that many people that finally wind up in a divorce don't have any reserves and have used up much of their credit. This becomes one of the serious problems in a divorce settlement — who is going to pay the bills and how," Ivan Skinner, senior vice president of Twin Falls Bank and Trust said Thursday.

"We find in the bank that we have applications from women for loans to supplement their living costs," he said.

Divorces also probably create more demand for housing, according to Skinner. "They would have to find separate domiciles."

"And I suppose that in a lot of instances the people involved would have to have other jobs. However, an awful lot of women are already working, so I don't know if the impact would be very noticeable at all," Skinner said.

"Oftentimes, if you could analyze the cause of divorce, it is this business of being unable to cope with the high cost of living and what it takes these days to live and operate off of a household," he added.

Good Samaritan attacked, stabbed

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman told city police early Saturday she was attacked and stabbed by a man she had befriended.

Jean Lewis and Frank Garcia, employees of the Chateau Bar, were closing for the night when they offered a customer a ride home, they told police.

On the way the subject, seated in the back seat of the car, grabbed Mrs. Lewis around the neck and when she tried to pull away she was cut with a knife he had in the other hand.

The two told police the unknown subject ran when they stopped the car to determine the extent of Ms. Lewis' injuries. She was treated for knife wounds of the arm, wrist and chin.

Police are continuing the investigation.

Couple arrested, charged in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — Frank Allen Metzger, 38, and his wife, Diane Lynn Hamill Metzger, 25, of Middletown, Pa., were arraigned before a United States Magistrate in Boise today on charges of Unlawful Flight to Avoid Prosecution — Murder.

They are charged in the strangulation death of Metzger's estranged wife Martha, 29, whose body was found buried in a well concealed, shallow grave, wrapped in blankets and tied with rope behind a farmhouse in Farham, N.Y.

Magistrate Edward A. "Ted" Johnson set bond for the Metzgers at $50,000 and continued proceedings until Monday, when an attorney will be appointed. They are being held in the Ada County Jail in Boise.

A spokesman for the FBI in Boise said the Metzgers were arrested Friday night in a small South Boise apartment. The spokesman said the apartment was rented to a Frank L. Erickson, at 1217 Grant Street.

A small boy, whose age was estimated at three by an agent on the scene, was put in the custody of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. The agent said the Metzger scolded the boy "Jason," but did not say if he was their son.

Martha Metzger disappeared last Aug. 19 and her body was found about a month later. Metzger was originally sought by authorities in connection with the abandoning of four boys in a motel room last September in the Chautauqua County, N.Y., town of Dunkirk.

The boys, aged 4 to 10, told police their father and a woman friend took them to the motel because of a gas leak in their Farham farmhouse. The boys told police their father never returned after he went home to pick up clothes.

Police have theorized Metzger, a chemist, may have killed his wife in Pennsylvania and brought the body to the farmhouse.

During the hearing, Mrs. Metzger said they were married Aug. 29, 1974 but she did not say where. The New York State Police issued the first warrant for the couple Sept. 24, charging both with the murder of Martha Metzger. Three days later, the FBI entered the case and a federal warrant for unlawful flight was issued.

The FBI spokesman in Boise said he was not at liberty to say how long the couple have been living in Boise, but another spokesman said the couple is believed to have traveled across the country from Buffalo, to California, and then to Boise.

Association, said his firm has "made a lot of loans to ... divorced women. We take quite a bit of refinancing in order to get the wife, or the husband their part of the equity out of the house."

"Usually the couple has at least 20 per cent equity and can either sell or refinance and get what they had in it," Sinclair said.

"The effect on the job market is probably minimal," he added. "We find nowadays that both the husband and wife work originally in order to live the way they want to."

"I personally think that most divorces are caused by financial worries in which they have overobligated themselves," he said.

Also, "people today probably don't tolerate what our parents tolerated and I think they are probably right," he added.

Vandals damage TF automobile glass

TWIN FALLS — A number of Twin Falls residents reported damage to vehicle windows and windshields Saturday.

Larryette Bingham reported the windshield broken from a 1972 pickup truck at the Bingham home, 537 Second Ave. W., sometime Friday night.

Debra Winger, 470 Borah Ave., reported a window broken from a 1975 small foreign car at her home during the night. A similar report came from Carl Bradey, 431 Rose St. N., who said his 1970 Scout was damaged. Shirley McBride, 430 Fourth Ave. N., said a rear window in her 1969 pickup was broken out. At the state liquor store, 314 Second Ave. E., a hole was broken in a window. Each of the incidents involved from $50 to $100 damage and all appeared to have been broken by a heavy metal object, such as a jack handle, police said.

Paul Aspey, an employe at Idaho Frozen Foods, said his 1969 sedan was broken into Friday night and a stereo and tapes taken. He estimated loss at $350.

Police also reported a burglary at the Chateau Bar, 914 Fourth Ave. W., in which about six cases of beer were taken. A bottle of beer and a jar of Polish sausage were dropped near the doorway and left, officers said.

TF doctors answer malpractice suit

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls doctors have filed answers to a $50,000 malpractice suit against them and asked the district court to dismiss the charges.

Dr. Miles Humphrey and Dr. Gregory Kadlec, both Twin Falls, are named defendants in a suit filed here by John A. and Kathleen Wilmoth. The plaintiffs charge negligence on the part of both doctors in the delivery of a baby to Mrs. Wilmoth.

They ask the court to award them $5,000 for anticipated corrective surgery which they say Mrs. Wilmoth will require, and $50,000 for general damages for her suffering and anguish. In a response to the complaint, the two physicians have filed statements denying the charges.

HAW reports Valley office rental costs

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare Friday released information on the cost of five buildings it is renting around the Magic Valley.

The release shows that the rental prices range from $1.09 per square foot to $4.29 per square foot per year for the buildings. Averaged together by building, the median rental price would be $2.66 per square foot per year.

In the release, the department said that some of the space rented is domestic housing, some is in a business center and other space would not be considered commercial office space.

In some cases, it said, the low square footage charge "is largely due to community support for providing space to the department at low cost."

Camas Prairie Pioneers set picnic at camp site

FAIRFIELD — The Camas Prairie Pioneers will have the annual picnic Sunday, July 20, at 1 p.m. at the Pioneer Campgrounds on Skokie Creek 12 miles north of Fairfield.

All pioneers, their families and friends are welcome. Please bring something to contribute to the picnic. Coffee and punch, paper plates, cups, napkins and silverware will be furnished by the Pioneer Association.

There will be prizes for some of the pioneers or their families.

HAW leader misquoted

TWIN FALLS — Howard Jamieson, head of administrative services for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said the lease on the Colonial Office building in Rupert was "appropriate," not "approximate" as misprinted in the Times-News. The Times-News regrets the error.

Forest service seeks volunteers

ELKO, Nev. — If you want a summer job but don't happen to need a salary, the Humboldt National Forest has the answer. Under a new program called Forest Service Volunteer Program, anyone who wants to help clean up campgrounds, improve facilities or otherwise help maintain and improve the forests just for the enjoyment of it may contact the forest supervisor's office and volunteer their time and efforts.

There is no rigid schedule for the volunteers. They may work every day, a few hours a week or even just a few hours a summer.

This government "give-away program" in reverse does have some protection for the volunteer. Should he be involved in an accident while engaged in the volunteer services, and be sued, the government will defend him under the provisions of the Tort Claim Act.

If the volunteer is injured while working within the scope of his agreement with the forest service, he is covered by the Federal Employee's Compensation Act.

However, the volunteer is not a federal employe subject to federal worker regulations.

Authority for the unique program was provided through the Volunteers in the National Forests Act of 1972, Public Law 92-339. This law authorizes the forest service to recruit, train and accept without regard to the civil service classification rules, the services of individuals willing to work without compensation.

Peace, money linked in Egypt

By NEA/London Economist News Service
 Arguing for peace in the Middle East, are never good but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat carries on as all good optimists must with a policy grounded in the prospect of peace.
 The reopening of the Suez Canal, together with the rebuilding and developing of the canal cities, are his way of expressing faith in America's power to thrust aside the war clouds.
 Sadat has in effect placed the future of his country in American hands. He talks about Egypt gaining from the competitiveness between the United States and the Soviet Union. But he has not organized things in this manner.

He has not been as offensive to Russia as he is offensive to America. Egypt may have stopped over the limit in its latest, exaggerated, attack on the Soviet-Libyan arms deal. Leonid Brezhnev has now indefinitely postponed any idea of visiting Cairo.
 Only if the United States fails in the peace search, as it well may, are the Egyptians likely to sail eastwards once again, for a different kind of help, to the Soviet Union. There is a further premium in the West, now, on not letting the peacemaking fail.
 It would be folly to make too much of Sadat's undoubted personal preference for Western ways; this would not be a deciding factor if he came to the conclusion that the West had let Egypt down. The Western arms that Egypt is beginning to buy, or manufacture itself, would not be of any great consequence, for instance, if war breaks out in the next year or two.

 Sadat has allowed himself to be rude and indiscreet in his complaints about Russian behavior. But his bridges have not been irreversibly burned.

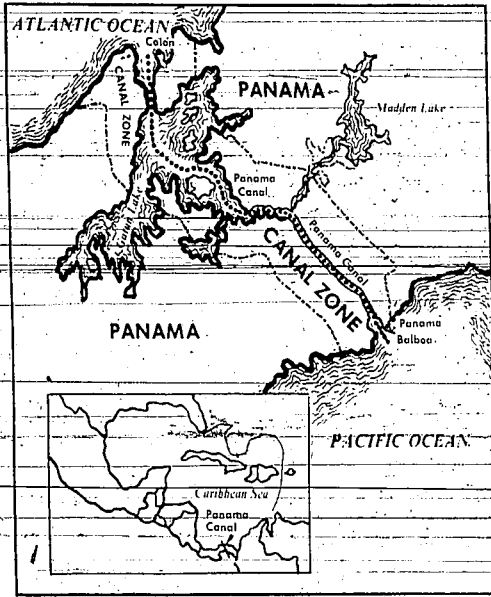

For the American administration, Sadat's faith is gratifying but embarrassing. President Ford and Henry Kissinger are finding it exceedingly difficult to deliver that peace settlement. The Israelis do not see their interests served at all by helping to preserve what they interpret as a dangerous Washington-Cairo-Riyadh axis. Some even look back with nostalgia to the years when they could talk of Israel as a Western bulwark against encroaching communism. They can't say that about Sadat, but some do suggest that the Arab pro-Western surge is a ploy job for the specific purpose of engineering a break between the Americans and themselves.

Any relief Israelis feel about the diminution of Soviet influence in the region is more than canceled out by their fear that one day, although still far off, they might find the Americans and the Arabs ganging up on them. One way to prevent this would be for Israel itself to match the peace initiative; another could be to sail and await Arab disillusionment with Ford's powers. The possibility is that, out of these two, Yitzhak Rabin's government prefers the second.

A continued stalemate with Israel could succeed in checking Sadat's enthusiasm for America. Would this also affect what is happening inside Egypt, the swing away from a largely socialist economy towards a capitalist one? It would only if one accepts the rather implausible explanation that the changes brought about by Sadat are threats to stability to impress the Americans with the wholeheartedness of Egypt's revulsion against its ways Russian. Although this could be a convenient side-effect, it is not the root cause.
 One of Sadat's first domestic moves on succeeding Nasser in September, 1970, was to cut down the number and more repressive aspects of the Nasser regime. Nobody, except the secret police, could quarrel with this sort of liberalization. Egypt is by no means an open society, let alone a democratic one; censorship of the local press, for instance, has been succeeded by the appointment of safely self-censoring right-wing editors. Like his predecessor, Sadat runs a one-man show.

But there is no longer the old fear of a knock on the door in the night and minority groups, including the rich, are infamously more relaxed. Next came economic liberalization or the "impulse" as another newspaper commented with a freer economy is called in Egypt. Private enterprise was encouraged and so too for foreign investment, which, for a variety of good reasons, did not respond much to the invitation. The basic reason behind the opening was a good one, the socialism introduced by Nasser, mainly through a series of nationalization decrees in 1961, had succeeded in doing much to the one million more Egyptians every year.

As unfulfilled five-year plans slipped past, the poor remained just as poor. War, and preparation for war, were blamed, and this is correct but not the full story. The public sector, endlessly pushing bills of paper between underemployed and underpaid civil servants; just could not cope.
 When investment rolls into a developing country it usually means that a few sharp characters manage to line their pockets with something more than lean profits—the trouble in Egypt is present in that investments not rolling in, for fear of future war, but with the general loosening of financial restrictions a lot of middlemen are making a lot of money to no noticeable benefit of anyone.

Panama treaty foes grow stronger in US Congress

By Congressional Quarterly
 WASHINGTON — Opposition to the loss of U.S. sovereignty in the Panama Canal Zone is mounting in Congress as negotiators wind up the drafting of a new treaty governing the canal's future.
 More than a third of the Senate — enough to block ratification of a new treaty — and 126 House members are cosponsoring resolutions opposing the U.S. agreement to give Panama control of the canal and zone some time in the future.

The current talks began early in 1974 after the two countries agreed that any new pact would provide for the eventual end of U.S. control of the canal and the adjoining 10-mile-wide, 40-mile-long zone that cuts Panama in two.

A 1903 treaty gave the United States sovereignty over the Canal Zone "in perpetuity." That provision, as well as the corridor through the heart of the country, have rankled Panamanians for virtually the entire 72 years of the pact and sparked riots in 1964 in which three Americans and 21 Panamanians were killed.
 Should the United States yield its control of the Panama Canal and zone?

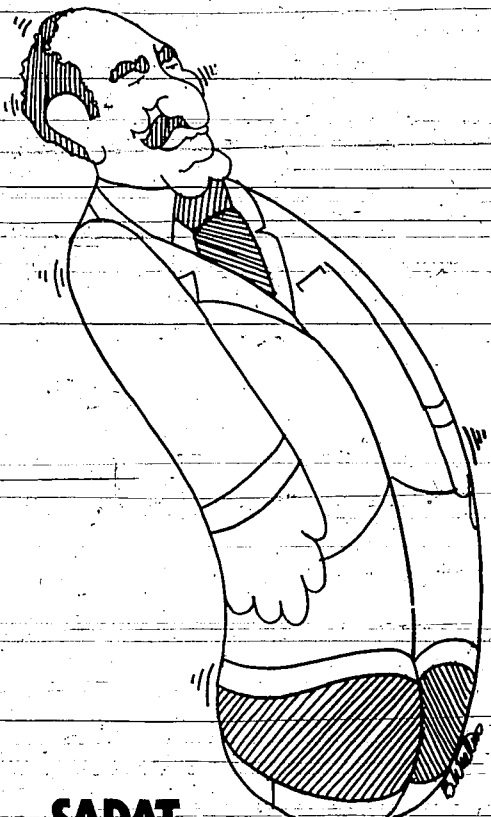

Supporters of a new treaty, which probably would end U.S. sovereignty in 25 to 50 years, argue that the existing pact is outdated and that a new one would better serve U.S. interests in Latin America.
 "The consequences of a failure to resolve this lingering conflict with Panama clearly extend far beyond the matter of our relations with that nation alone," says Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who notes that the Organization of American States (OAS) has called for a new treaty.
 U.S. Ambassador-at-Large, Effsworthunker, chief State Department negotiator, says that the talks are being viewed by the rest of Latin America as a "test" of U.S. intentions in the hemisphere.

Bunker argues that the "continuation of the status quo will lead surely to prolonged problems," including the threat of hostilities with Panama. He sees Panamanian irritation growing over not only the Canal Zone, an American enclave; but also such issues as Panama's share of canal revenues. He believes Washington would find it "difficult if not impossible" to continue to run the canal if the Panamanian government opposed its operation. And he pointedly warns that the canal is "vulnerable to sabotage and terrorist acts."

Opponents of giving up U.S. control argue that the waterway remains essential to the United States for both defense and commerce, and that to turn it over to Panama offers too great a threat of disruption in services.
 Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., says that the Canal Zone provides, along with U.S. bases in Cuba and Puerto Rico, "a triangle upon which the security of the Caribbean rests." To lose that would bring "grave" consequences, he says, because it "would give a potential enemy control of the strategic Caribbean."

Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., calls the canal "the jugular vein of hemispheric defense" because it gives any ships a valuable short cut between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. He calls for expanding the Canal Zone, rather than giving it up or reducing it.
 Flood and others argue that Panama historically has had unstable governments, which presents the potential for disruption in canal service. And with the country now under a leftist military dictator, they worry about his commitment to defend the canal against any Communist advances and about the possibility that Panama could turn into another Cuba.

Shades of Watergate emerge in Indian turmoil

By NEA-London Economist News Service
 First, give two and a half cheers for Indian democracy.
 How many other countries have courts so free as to be able to convict a well-entrenched prime minister of election offenses? For that matter, now many countries interpret their election rules so stringently as to consider the "corrupt practices" Mrs. Gandhi was found guilty of in Allahabad — using local officials to erect election platforms and loudspeakers in her constituency at public expense; using a temporary civil servant from her private office for electioneering — to be offenses at all?
 Even in India these violations turned on fine points of law. Yet the apparently technical nature of the offenses does not alter the fact that Mrs. Gandhi may soon face the ultimate punishment for a politician: if India's supreme court does not reverse the judgment by the high court in Allahabad, she will lose her office just as surely as if she had covered up a rat on the Watergate.
 The irony of the Allahabad exercise is that both Mrs. Gandhi and India's electoral system have never been brought to book there for some truly serious abuses which have been troubling thoughtful Indians for some time. The most flagrant of these has a familiar Watergate ring: it is the illegal collection by political parties of "black," or untaxed, money from companies and individuals which is used to finance hugely expensive elections.

 It is now widely recognized that most of the election returns filed by Indian candidates are false. One member of parliament estimates that a single candidate fighting a seat in India's lower house often spends as much as $55,000 compared with a legal limit of under $4,500. Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party, as the ruling party at the center and in most states for 28 years, naturally attracts — or extracts — the highest contributions.
 In the 1971 general election, which is when Mrs. Gandhi's alleged violations were committed, Congress is believed to have spent three times as much as it did in the previous election, and more than three times the permitted ceiling. Last autumn the supreme court attempted to close one of the loopholes through which black money pours by ruling that expenditure by a party on a candidate's behalf must be included in the candidate's expenses. But Congress simply turned around and eliminated this inconvenience by changing the law. An angry perhaps of how it may deal with the Gandhi awkwardness.

 Popular anger at the use and abuse of money power has been one of the factors behind the recent groundswell of support for Jayaprakash Narayan, the elderly, eccentric but attractive campaigner who has been challenging Mrs. Gandhi's law hollow-sounding slogan: "Abolish Poverty," with his own highly relevant one, "Wipe Out Corruption."
 Along with the leaders of the opposition parties he is pressing the government to institute a major reform of the electoral system before the next general election falls due in March. It is generally agreed that any such reform — which the government is reluctant to concede — will have to begin with tighter limits on campaign spending. But Narayan's frustration with the victory of a united opposition in last week's state election in Gujarat, are determined that reform must extend to the voting system itself.
 The reformers make two irrefutable points: that one-party rule can be as serious a source of corruption as any system of money; and that the Congress party has been able to maintain its grip on power all these years not only because the opposition was divided but also because the winner-take-all, single-member constituency system has given it some 25 per cent more seats than its share of the popular vote in four out of five general elections, and only slightly less in the fifth.
 What is certain is that, after Allahabad, Indian politics can never be the same again. At the very least Judge Sinha's verdict has compelled Indians to think the unthinkable. A week ago India without Indira Gandhi was almost as unimaginable as India with the Congress party. Today, for all their dramatic rallying around the prime minister, Congress leaders are undoubtedly reviewing candidates for the succession.

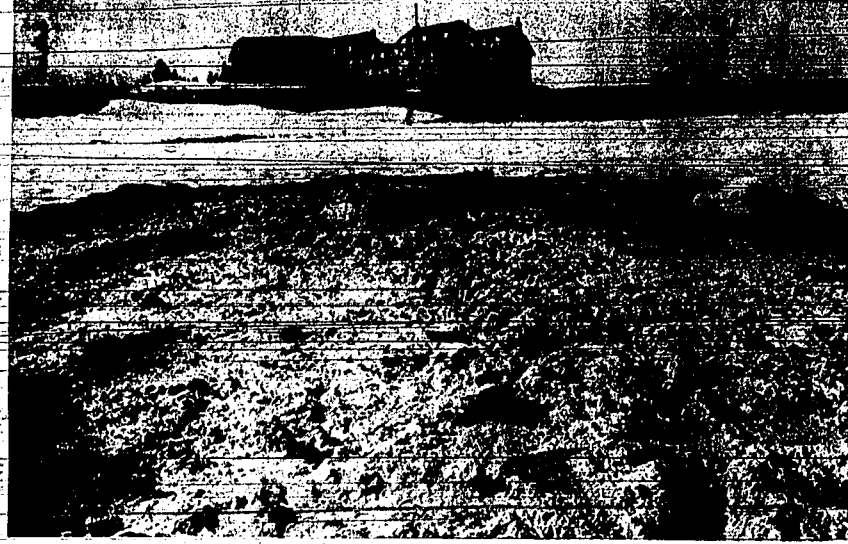

PRIME MINISTER INDIRA GANDHI can Indians learn lessons?

Mrs. Gandhi has decided to continue in office until the appeal is finally heard, which may take anything from six weeks to many months: in the meantime she will keep her hand on the party in order to assure herself the right to choose a successor, if successful there must be. On current reckoning the defense minister, Swarn Singh, is a nose ahead of the agriculture minister, Jagjivan Ram, because of his greater loyalty to the dowager queen.
 If the Gujarat election and the Allahabad judgment prompt Indians to draw some of the right lessons — the opposition to fight, the Congress party to reform, and Mrs. Gandhi or her next-in-line to start training some able successors — then Indian democracy will be healthier as a result. A muddling democracy will be "too easy" to justify in a subcontinent of paupers, particularly at a time when the pauper nations — India first among them — are tottering economically.

 If the only effect of Allahabad is to cast out a long-serving and still popular prime minister for what amounts to a peccadillo, the strains on the democracy may grow stronger than ever.

Prayer for today

Everything seems so temporary, God. We like to hang on to people and things we love. There's hardly anything we can be sure of keeping. Even life itself is temporary.
 Maybe you planned things that way so that we'd hold more lightly to the things which change and look more toward the changeless.
 We do need something we can cling to, though. Help us to find in you the anchor we need in a changing world.
 The words of a hymn express our feelings, "Change and decay in all around I see. Oh Thou changes not, abide with me." — Uletta Martin, Buhl.

EXPOSED manhole and raw sewage cover ground 100 yards below Crater Lake Lodge in Oregon. Crater Lake National Park was closed to public Friday after health officials discovered this sewage line from the lodge had broken and backed up sewage to this point, where it flowed with melting snow downhill to contaminate Munson Springs, the park's only water supply. U.S. Health authorities reported up to 500 residents and employees of the area were stricken with gastroenteritis. (UPI)

Crater Lake 'crud' forces park closure

CRATER LAKE, Ore. (UPI) — State police and forest rangers Saturday blocked all entrances to spectacular Crater Lake National Park, containing the nation's deepest lake, because of an outbreak of epidemic nausea which forced the park's abrupt closure.

"There were a lot of disappointed people here today," said a ranger who turned away 50 cars himself. Inside the park, the situation was summed up by a note in the main lodge guest book, saying, "The Crater Lake crud has struck."

The park was closed Friday to the summer flow of 40,000 weekly visitors because a broken pipe, imbedded in volcanic ash, leaked raw sewage into a spring. Between 500 and 1,000 visitors and employees recently suffered vomiting, stomach cramps and diarrhea.

Public health specialists said those victims and thousands of unknown others—risked hepatitis. Letters went out to all departed visitors who happened to have left their names, advising that they seek a "physician and gamma globulin inoculations."

Karen Wald, a student working in the craft shop, became ill July 1 and has been sick off and on ever since. Before her departure, she said there were "some very gruesome nights" in her dormitory and "very long lines to the bathrooms."

Kissinger, Rabin huddle, mull Mideast peace plan

LONDON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger talked with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin Saturday about a possible Israeli-Egyptian peace plan involving stationing some U.S. troops in the Sinai desert, a senior U.S. official aboard Kissinger's plane said.

Washington Saturday night. Aboard Kissinger's plane, the senior U.S. official said one matter discussed with Rabin was the use of American technology—probably including a small number of men-to-protect an early warning system in the Sinai desert between Egyptian and Israeli forces.

BEIRUT (UPI) — Renewed fighting between Christians and Muslims erupted along a main highway south of the Lebanese capital Saturday night. Beirut Radio said gunfire could also be heard in at least one section of the city.

If the Israelis agree to proceed now that they are armed with "various clarifications" supplied Rabin by Kissinger—the next step would be to sound out the Egyptians.

"I am still hopeful that an interim agreement will be reached. But we have to overcome certain difficulties..."

CIA agents planted in Congress?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Saturday he hopes the Central Intelligence Agency hasn't planted any secret agents in Capitol Hill and intends to have investigators find out for sure.

"I hope that none have been up here," Mansfield said. "There are some that I know of. But it's my intention to ask the Select Committee to look into that as far as the Senate is concerned."

Investigation of CIA activities by September as scheduled. The embattled agency has acknowledged it sends employees to work in other federal agencies including the White House but denies this amounts to spying.

In a rare public statement issued late Friday, the CIA specifically denied it had planted Alexander P. Butterfield, Jr., Richard Nixon's White House, White Butterfield had special intelligence clearances, the CIA said, he never worked for the agency in any capacity.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — More than 100,000 citizens Saturday celebrated the nearly three-century-old victory of Protestants over the Roman Catholics of Northern Ireland in parades unmarred by sectarian violence.

Armored cars and hundreds of extra troops, including British paratroopers, guarded the parades in Belfast.

The marches have sparked violence between Protestants and Northern Ireland's Catholic minority in the past, but there were no reported incidents Saturday.

Labor leaders hit Peron move

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Labor and political leaders said Saturday President Maria Estela Isabel Peron's massive reshuffling of her cabinet has done little to solve the country's problems.

Antonio Troccoli, a leader of the opposition Radical party, said the changes in the government meant "a new start" but that the re-appointments were looking for.

"An official of the powerful General Confederation of Labor called the changes "more a reshuffling of men than of policy."

Mrs. Peron, responding to mounting pressure from millions of workers, opposition leaders and critics in her own Peronist party, Friday reshuffled four places in her eight-member cabinet.

She dumped powerful Social Welfare Minister Jose Lopez Rega, her close confidante and personal secretary, and a major opposition target.

But she retained Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo, whose economic austerity program provoked a storm of protest that led to a two-day general strike last week.

Ford oil cut proposal could hit U.S. taxpayer twice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the Ford administration's proposals to cut U.S. oil consumption could hit the American taxpayer twice.

It would offer utility companies a tax break worth at least $400 million a year for building power plants that do not burn oil — in effect, boosting federal taxes for everyone else — and it might trigger new electric rate hikes so the tax break could take effect.

The tax break would provide, in the words of Treasury Secretary William Simon, "a cash contribution by the federal government for the construction of additional electric power plants."

But Simon told a recent session of the House Ways and Means Committee, the contribution would be effective "only if regulatory authorities and consumers cooperate in doing their part."

Plainly stated, higher electric rates would be needed in part because utilities could use the tax break only to offset tax liability.

Despite recent record rate increases, the utility industry is still in financial trouble. Simon said rate increases would insure power companies earn enough to have a tax liability. Otherwise, they could not use the credit.

In addition, state regulatory commissions would have to allow new plant investments to become part of the base on which current electric rates are set.

That would mean still higher bills for the electric consumers of today — to help pay for the power plants to be built.

Under the administration proposal, utilities would get a 12 percent permanent investment tax credit for all new electric power plants except those fueled by oil.

Until this year, the utility investment credit was 4 percent. The rate temporarily went up to 10 percent this year, for utilities as for other businesses. In the tax reduction bill enacted earlier this year.

Power companies also would get a five-year rapid tax writeoff for investments in pollution control facilities and for conversions from oil to coal.

The tax benefits would total $600 million in the first year and more later. Simon made no effort to predict how much higher the tax break might go, since that would depend on how many plants were built or converted.

Profits earned by future power plants would go to utility stockholders.

And the stockholders, as well as the utilities, would get a tax break in the administration proposal. The plan outlined by Simon called for deferring taxes on power company dividends if they were accepted by the shareholder in the form of additional stock rather than in cash.

Taxes would be paid only when the shares were sold, which could be after retirement when the taxpayer is in a low tax bracket.

Simon acknowledged his proposals are not the kind he would make ordinarily because they are exceptions to our theoretical goals for a perfect tax system. In other words, they create more loopholes and more inequity.

All other taxpayers have to pay so one group could be favored, Simon said, but the urgency of getting more investment money into the utility companies is so great that Congress should consider approving the plan.

Strike, inflation threaten Peron

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — A general strike, triple-digit inflation and political violence are threatening the future of the world's first woman president, despite a name that is magic to Argentines.

Maria Estela (Isabel) Peron last week was forced to back down on her tough economic policy in order to end a nationwide general strike paralyzing Argentina. She reshuffled her cabinet in another effort to stem the criticism of her policies and accepted the resignation of her closest adviser, Jose Lopez Rega, a shadowy astrologer known as "the Sorcerer."

The week was the toughest yet for the 45-year-old widow who leads a country of 21 million citizens — many of them unhappy.

Photos from nearly two decades ago, when she jumped from show business to politics, show her as a young woman with an infectious smile. She had just met Gen. Juan D. Peron, 60-year-old president-in-exile, and had quit dancing in a Panama nightclub to become his secretary and later his wife.

"I'm tiny but strong," she said then.

But Friday night she looked thin and tired when she swore in four new cabinet ministers named to ease widespread opposition to her government's economic and political policies.

Absent from the ceremony was Lopez Rega, who had resigned under fire both as social welfare minister and as Mrs. Peron's private secretary.

Lopez Rega was accused of exerting too much personal power, isolating the president from her supporters and allies.

and being the instigator of a right-wing death squad that murdered scores of leftists.

A stocky, 55-year-old former policeman, Lopez Rega earned the nickname "The Sorcerer" for his acknowledged enmeshment in astrology and reputed links with a Brazilian spirit cult known as umbanda.

He left the government after more than two years of power-gathering based on his long personal friendship with Mrs. Peron and her late husband.

Still, Lopez Rega's influence has survived in Mrs. Peron's new cabinet.

Carlos Villonez, Lopez Rega's chief subordinate at the social welfare ministry, moved up to replace him in that post.

Another Lopez Rega follower, Jose Gonzalez, became presidential secretary.

Lopez Rega's friend Celestino Rodrigo stayed in the cabinet as economy minister despite calls for his impeachment and a crash economic austerity program that culminated in a general strike Monday and Tuesday.

The strike ended when Mrs. Peron agreed to wage increases averaging 100 per cent for all industries.

Juan Domingo Peron returned from exile in 1974 to a tumultuous welcome from millions of Argentines who viewed him as a savior. But when he died on July 1, 1974, less than nine months into a third term as president, he left his widow, who was then his vice president, and a country torn by political strife and mired in economic confusion.

More than 500 people have been killed by left-wing and right-wing terrorists, or in clashes between guerrillas and authorities, since Mrs. Peron inherited the presidency.

Vet programs reported inactive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Accounting Office said Saturday that 65 per cent of approved on-the-job training programs for veterans are inactive, largely because of the lack of government follow-up.

The report was based on a survey of eight selected Veterans Administration regional offices and was released by Sen. Vance Harke, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

Harke said the report indicates "striking neglect and mismanagement by the government in aiding Vietnam veterans obtain employment."

He said the failure systematically to refer young veterans to available job training opportunities is "particularly tragic" when he recalls that young veterans' unemployment rates have been and continue to be substantially higher than those for comparable non-veterans.

Although the VA job training programs have opened a "large number" of job opportunities for Vietnam veterans, the GAO said, "it appears that many more qualified veterans could have been placed in approved programs."

The GAO survey covered VA offices in the District of Columbia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Virginia and Wisconsin.

In October 1974, these offices had a total of 12,018 approved employers with training programs, but only 4,241 or 35 per cent were active. The remaining 7,777 employers were involved in inactive programs, either because of no job openings at the time or the failure of the VA to refer qualified veterans.

The GAO blamed lack of VA followup for the disappointing on-the-job training statistics. To obtain maximum benefit, it said, "all employers with training programs should be contacted periodically to insure their continued commitment to the program and to determine their current or future needs."

Neither the Veterans Administration nor the Labor Department recently has machinery to conduct the follow-up programs it is recommending, GAO said.

A telephone survey of 271 employers covered found only 38 with veterans in training. Eleven or 29 per cent indicated immediate need for an additional trainee, and said they would have accepted one or more qualified veterans if referred by the VA.

Of the 233 inactive employers, 23 per cent cited an immediate need for trainees and said they would accept qualified referred veterans. Fifty-five per cent said they were not hiring at that time but were still interested while 77 per cent said they no longer wished to participate in the program.

Freak hailstorm batters Jerome bean, grain fields

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

Jerome: Nearly a hundred acres of beans and grain were destroyed Friday when a freak hail and rain storm battered a small section of southern Jerome County.

Hardest hit were the Ron Hoskin and Albert Lackley farms about three miles northeast of the Highway 93 - Interstate 80 interchange. Hoskin lost about 22 acres of grain, and nearly 50 acres of Lackley's beans were smashed into the mud.

Several trees were blown over by winds accompanying the storm, and on the Lackley farm a large shed was wounded and a corner post knocked and carried miles off.

"That was a scary storm," said Mrs. Lois Lackley as she surveyed the battered remains of rosebushes and shrubs near her home.

On the Hoskin farm, Mrs. Ron Hoskin looked at her garden and said she felt like crying. "My tomatoes were stripped to the stem, and what had once been her cucumber plants were only ribs sticking up from the ground."

At the edge of Mrs. Hoskin's garden hundreds of tiny green apples were scattered in the grass, and beneath the battered apple tree a sparrow lay dead where it had been knocked to the ground.

In the Hoskin's front yard a plastic bird feeder had been punched full of holes.

"It was just like a hurricane where you see these big sheets of water," Mrs. Hoskin said. "It was raining and hailing so hard it was just like an anger of peas, shudding clear out over our fence."

Mrs. Hoskin said the storm started about 4 p.m. and lasted about a half hour.

"I'm just wiped out as far as cutting goes," she said. "I told my husband when he got back last night, 'We're just lucky everybody's still alive.'"

At the height of the storm, she said, she was watching out her front window and could not see a fence 30 feet away. "The hailstones were the size of marbles, she added, and the rain so heavy that water was running ankle deep down the driveway.

When it was over, Mrs. Hoskin said, the storm had deposited four inches of hail on the ground and "everything was white."

"The lightning was terrible afterward," she added. "Our baby, she'll be three - we missed her and we went to look for her and she'd gone to bed. Her eyes were just as big as dollars."

But while the storm was vicious, it was not widespread.

"Even within a mile of here, they didn't know anything had happened," Mrs. Hoskin said.

She said a nearby farmer came to the house and wanted to call the ditch rider because he had twenty feet of water running down a main ditch.

The storm, Mrs. Hoskin said, came in from the northeast, "but for a few minutes and then changed direction."

"You could see it just turn around," she said. "What it didn't get the first time, it got the second time."

Neither the Hoskins nor the Lackleys had hail insurance.

"It's just one of those things," Albert Lackley said.

Mrs. Hoskin said she thought there might have been a connection between the storm and a brush fire to the northeast on which retardant had been dropped.

Lynn Williams, operations chief for the Shoshone district of the Bureau of Land Management, confirmed that there had been a 500-acre brush fire north of Edon, Idaho, at term on but he said he doubted the fire or the retardant could have caused the hail storm.

An official at the U.S. Weather Bureau in Boise said Saturday he also doubted the fire could have had any effect.

Similar storms had been reported in the Boise area.

"The air is very moist and unstable, so they could be occurring anywhere in the state."

Souvanna Phouma Saturday officially confirmed the appointments of three hardline Pathet Lao Communists to replace more moderate cabinet ministers.

Souvanna, in a Vientiane radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok, appointed as "acting ministers" Phoune Sipraseuth, first deputy prime minister and foreign minister Khay K Khamphithoun, also known as Thao Ma, minister of information and tourism, and Khomphay Boupha, minister of economy and plans.

Vesco yacht leaves port

MIAMI (UPI) - The $1.3 million yacht which left Florida in defiance of a federal court order and which creditors' claim is owned by fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco, has left the Bahamas for an unknown destination, the U.S. Coast Guard reported Saturday.

The 121-foot yacht, registered in Panama and known there as the "JOYA Oceana" but listed in court records here as the "Patricia III," left Freeport on Grand Bahama Island late Thursday night after two days of repairs.

Aboard were navigator Robert Jones, and two Panamanian crewmen Bruce Greer, attorney for New York's International Controls Corp., which had custody of the yacht under a New York federal court order pending legal determination of its ownership. Identified Jones as a "British" subject - International Controls claims it owns the yacht because it was purchased with its money while Vesco controlled that firm.

Jones told the Miami Herald the yacht was subject to Jamaican, and then told Bahamian customs and immigration officials it was bound for Nassau, the Bahamas. Subsequently, he told the Freeport dockmaster it was headed for Panama.

Pablo Luis Manzanares, Panama's consul general in Miami, who helped Jones induce Pinkerton security guards hired by Greer to allow the vessel to leave Dania, Fla., said it is bound for Panama's port of Las Minas, where it will become a "company boat" in interisland traffic for its present owners. # Soviet, US blastoffs set

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - Russia sent its Soyuz to the launch pad Saturday and America's Columbus-Apollo commander Thomas P. Stafford landed at the spaceport a Thursday.

Stafford's 14th mission in the 28th shuttle flight was scheduled to launch at 2:40 p.m. MDT through a thick layer of black storm clouds. Rain pattered on his bald head and soaked his yellow flight suit as he talked briefly to newsmen.

Fellow astronauts Vance D. Brand and Donald K. "Dick" Slayton left the Johnson Space Center at Houston in their T-38 jet trainers after Stafford flew to the launch site.

At the Soviet cosmodrome at Baikonur in the Central Asian desert, cosmonauts Alexei Leonov, a mine's son and cofounder in the Red Air Force, and space companion Valeriya N. Chibrikova, a civilian engineer, were reported in "excellent spirits" as they rehearsed parts of their flight schedule.

Everything was going smoothly in both countries. Even the weather, which has plagued the U.S. launch site here with lightning and gale force wind gusts for a week, showed signs of improving.

The long-range forecast for Apollo's 1:50 p.m. MDT take-off target was for partly cloudy skies and only scattered thunderstorms in the launch area.

At the Soviet cosmodrome at Baikonur in the Central Asian desert, Prof. Konstantin Bushuyev, Russia's technical director, reported that everything was on schedule in preparing the Soyuz spacecraft and its booster rocket. A huge erector raised the 162-foot space machine vertically for flight.

At the launch site here, all systems were being checked by the final Saturn-Apollo countdown on 8:29 a.m. Sunday.

The Russians will start the unprecedented space show with an 8:29 a.m. MDT take-off on Tuesday. Brig Gen Sta-ford, Brand and Slayton are due to lift off this spaceport 8:20 miles away seven and a half hours later.

If all goes well, the two space teams will rendezvous Thursday 136 miles over Germany and fly linked together for the next 48 hours, sharing meals of bifsteak and beef steak, carrying out a series of experiments and exchanging gifts, including pine tree seeds from each nation.

When Stafford and Leonov shake hands floating weightlessly in the docking module linking the Apollo and Soyuz spacecraft, it will culminate an undertaking agreed to in May, 1972, by former President Nixon and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

In Russia, the joint mission has been hailed as a symbol of improved relationships between the two countries. Gen. Vladimir Shatalov, director of Soviet cosmonaut training, recently characterized the mission as being "of great political significance."

Discontent grows in NYC

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's largest city may be the nation's largest unemployed.

For the city's 330,000 employees — more than the population of Wyoming — it has been a summer of discontent and uncertainty.

And for the city, it has been a far cry from the days when policemen were recruited right off the boat.

More than 19,000 workers, including 5,000 police officers, have been fired since July 1 as the city struggled to balance its $12.87 billion budget, the third largest in the Western Hemisphere.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame was able to reinstate 5,500 of the dismissed workers, including 2,000 police officers, after the state legislature granted him $20 million worth of increased taxing powers.

Federal programs may lead to the rehiring of another 2,000.

But, for the bulk of the workers, and the thousands of school teachers who will be fired in September, Summer '75 means long lines at the unemployment and welfare offices.

In all, Beame has said, the Board of Education will have to lose the equivalent of 10,000 jobs including teachers and a host of other positions in the school system. An additional 3,125 positions must be eliminated in the Board of Higher Education.

In the old days, thousands of slum-area teenagers went directly from their high school graduation to Civil Service test centers.

"Those days are over," said Councilman Matthew J. Troy Jr., chairman of the City Council's finance committee. "I feel sorry for them but look, with the city's money problems, it's either them or the whole $300 million."

"It's easy to brush off these people as 'civil servants' or 'municipal employees' in aggregate," one city personnel official said, "but when those pink slips go out, you realize these are people with kids and bills and mortgages."

Among the people embittered by the cutbacks:

— A 27-year-old policeman, with two honor citations for disarming gunmen, flourishes her empty holster at an unruly demonstration of recently fired police officers. "I risked my life for this city," she said.

— The city's garbage collectors, angered at the dismissal of 3,000 of their number, pulled a wildcat strike which lasted two days and allowed about 50 tons of rotting uncollected refuse to remain on the city streets.

— Firemen began reporting sick at a rate 10 times greater than normal to protest the dismissal of more than 2,000 firefighters. This happened as slum residents, angered at the garbage pileup caused by the walkout, burned the trash in the streets.

— Two Highway Department supervisors were beaten up, allegedly by a gang of laid-off employees. Later, one of the assistants boasted at the incident to reporters.

— A distraught discharged member of a uniformed service invaded the home of his former department's commissioner at 2 A.M. and broke down weeping, saying his wife was eight months pregnant.

The incident prompted the posting of a 24-hour guard on the official, his family and his home.

The public, too, was puzzled by the recent events.

"I feel they shouldn't have cut police, firemen, sanitationmen and teachers," they're basic necessities," said Harold Wenning, 38, a blind newspaper dealer.

However, Wenning said, "they should let go a lot of the clerks in the city's offices — it's an pathetic, unrealistic waste."

Bombed home

GUTTED home of Raymond Schmidt near Keshena, Wis., was firebombed Friday with a loss estimated at $50,000. Keshena fire chief Harley Lyons said there were five firebombings during the night after the Alexian Brothers, a Catholic religious order, terminated an agreement with the Menominee Indian tribe to give them the 262-acre Novilatte. (UPI)

'Broken treaty' defended

KESHENA, Wis. (UPI) — A member of the Alexian Brothers Saturday defended the religious order's method of terminating its agreement with the Menominee Indian tribe over use of a vacant novilatte property.

Brother Maurice Wilson said the Roman Catholic order should have alerted officials before announcing the termination, but said "We don't feel we've violated any agreement," because a 400-foot lot has to have a responsive party and the other party (the Indians) has not been responsive at all.

Governmental and tribal officials have criticized the order for the suddenness of the termination announcement that came Wednesday and spawned a night of gunfire and tire bombing.

As a result of increased tension in the area, taverns have been closed, police patrols have been stepped up and a curfew for juveniles was enforced Friday night and Saturday as officials hoped to head off any further violence.

Several structures were damaged by bombs Thursday night and there were two incidents of gunfire. No one was injured and no arrests were made.

The Alexians agreed Feb. 2 to turn over the deed to their 262-acre novilatte to the Menominee tribe. The agreement ended a 24-year occupation of the facility by members of the Menominee Warrior Society.

But Wednesday night they ended that agreement, citing mainly fiscal reasons for the termination. Authorities were not notified before the announcement — and criticism resulted. Lack of notification was blamed for the ensuing violence.

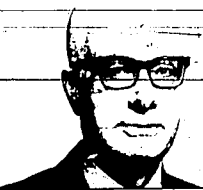

"All of this is totally related to the Alexian Brothers' breaking of the contract," said Col. Hugh Simonson, who commanded the National Guard troops during the takeover. "To me it was a legal document. I think they should have lived with the contract."

There were no official reports of violence Friday night, but officers in Langlade County, which abuts Menominee County, reported hearing a Menominee County squad car radio for assistance during the night.

The novilatte is being patrolled by a commercial security firm which the Alexians have hired at $1,700 a day, but the area has been quiet.

Tourists have been advised to stay away from the area and many whites are staying close to home, fearful that they could be involved in an incident if they take to the roads.

Portugal ousts Socialists

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The military ousted the Socialists from the government and put the army on alert Saturday, plunging Portugal into one of its worst political crises in recent years.

The left-center Popular Democrats, the only non-Communist party left in the coalition cabinet, said they would follow the Socialists into open opposition unless the military firmly guarantees the creation of a Western-style democracy.

"There is no possibility of a compromise now," one liberal politician said. "They either want democracy with wide public support or they want a military government with Communist opposition."

Socialist sources said they viewed the military's decision to place its forces on alert as an attempt to intimidate the civilian population.

"They are mad-men and getting madder," one Socialist said. "They can't govern. They can only threaten and talk. They have no control over their own troops, much less the country."

The angry denunciations of the military came in the third day of a confrontation sparked by the military's Revolutionary Council hand-over to left-wing workers of control of the Socialist-oriented newspaper Republica.

The Socialists publicly withdrew from the government Thursday over the issue, but did not formally resign from the coalition cabinet.

The government's dismissal of the two Socialist ministers left the two Popular Democratic ministers as the only non-Communist party members of the coalition with the military.

The Popular Democrats said they also would pull out of the government unless the government agreed to a list of demands they classified as an ultimatum for democracy.

Politicians said agreement to such an ultimatum would force the resignation of Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves and his replacement by someone more moderate.

The weekend newspaper Expresso predicted the Communist party might provoke an expansion of the crisis Tuesday by withdrawing from the civilian constituent assembly.

If this happens, politicians said the military will probably disband the assembly, which was picked in April elections in which the Socialists and Popular Democrats won 64 per cent of the vote. The Communists won 12.5 per cent.

Although the Council voiced support for "the revolutionary militants of the Socialist party," it accused Socialist leader Mario Soares, who is also a cabinet minister, and other Socialist officials of provoking the crisis, calling their attitude "lamentable" and negative.

A significant reserve of an estimated 300 trillion cubic feet of natural gas is locked within the Rocky Mountains. Most of it is in Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming and Utah, along the route of our pipeline supplier. It can be pumped out with little harm to the countryside.

New well development
Intermountain Gas Company is participating with other Northwest utilities in exploration for gas in Colorado, and has already completed one well capable of producing a marketable quantity of natural gas. Additional wells are planned, and these will complement existing sources from the Southern Rocky Mountain area.

New exploration underway
Continuing exploration is currently underway throughout the 4-state region. Based on studies by the A.E.C., just two of the geological basins in the region could begin production of marketable gas by 1977, reaching a trillion cubic feet annually by 1985 and 3.4 trillion cubic feet by the year 2,000.

Well head price decision to stimulate exploration

While the demand for gas has risen in recent years, exploration and drilling for gas has declined — because prices at the wells have been regulated at artificially low levels. Recent federal actions, however, have shown a promising trend toward reversing these detriments to new drilling activity. But additional action is needed.

Developing our own domestic reserves is the easiest, least costly and quickest way of reducing the gap between supply and rising demand.

Belly dancing 'classy'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Belly dancing is moving out of the carnivals and into the concert halls. The belly dancers want you to know they put on a "class" act — and fraternal groups looking for "bump and grind" entertainment at their next smoker better look elsewhere. From as far away as Indianapolis, an All-Star team of belly dancing pros set up shop in the Statler Hilton Hotel Thursday for the "Second Annual Belly Dancing Experience." Their aim, aside from fees and expenses, is further the state of the art of "classical" Middle Eastern dancing. The 300 students, ranging from teenage girls to middle-aged housewives and invited professionals, were at pre-entertainment. "You can't find this kind of instruction in the Buffalo area," said Ida Neget, a housewife from North Tonawanda, N.Y. She does part-time belly dancing and came to the $30 three-day seminar to improve her technique. "Ibrahim," Bobby Farrah, an Arab instructor, said the belly dancing community wants "to get rid of the bump and grind fakers" whom he says have given Middle Eastern dance a bad name. "Normally, a true professional who has established a fine name and reputation would not perform at a smoker." He said the proliferation of topless, bottomless, and altogetherless acts in recent years has cut down on the market for burlesque type belly dancing. Not that the classical form, which some estimate to be 4,000 years old, is soulless. "Every dance is sensual," Ibrahim said. "Electra," who said she has been belly dancing for four decades and gave her age as 45, agreed. She said Middle Eastern dance makes its practitioners "feel more feminine." Thirty-two-year-old "Fazia" (Bonnie Farson), described in the seminar's promotional literature as one of the most popular teachers of Middle Eastern Dance in the state of Indiana, said belly dancing has made some inroads in Indianapolis despite the lack of an "ethnic" base for entertainers. She said she has been performing recently at The Chuck Wagon, a family restaurant. Aside from the artistry, Fazia said belly dancing has done her a lot of good in other ways. "I lost up to 26 inches off my body in all the right places."

Nixon funds go fast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Nixon's 1972 campaign fund still has a balance of more than $1.5 million — but the funds are rapidly being depleted by payment of legal fees of some Watergate defendants. The Nixon re-election committee filed a campaign spending report with the Federal Election Commission Thursday, showing it had paid some of the lawyers' fees of former Attorney General John Mitchell. The report said it was considering doing the same for former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans and Nixon re-election campaign lawyer Kenneth Parkison. Mitchell's legal fees in the Watergate cover-up case totaled $471,390.86, and the Nixon committee has paid him $200,000, the report showed. Mitchell was convicted in the cover-up conspiracy trial. Parkison was the only one of the defendants acquitted. Stans pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor in connection with an illegal campaign contribution. Parkison has submitted legal bills totaling $73,393, which were being reviewed by the Nixon committee said. Stans has submitted bills totaling $153,893.58. His claim included the $3,000 fine he paid after pleading guilty. Stans not only billed the committee for $18,818.58 in legal fees but $18,000 for the time he spent in interviews with the Special Watergate prosecutors.

Will the trucks continue to stop at Bliss?

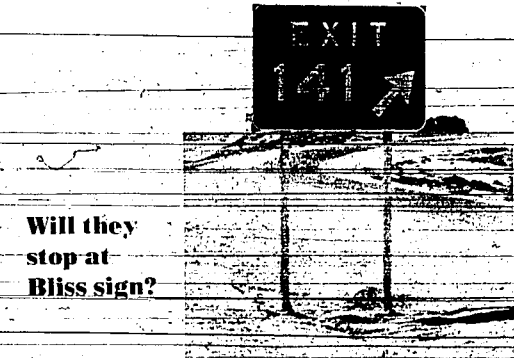

Old Bliss city hall

"On the top of a hill for all to see . . ." but instead of the poem about a tree, this dilapidated "shack" served as the Bliss City Hall until a few years ago. Mayor Ray Armstrong and his wife say they roamed in summer and froze in the winter while using the building for elections.

Crewmen complete work on railroad overpass

Will they stop at Bliss sign?

WILL motorists turn off at this exit to provide the gas, food and lodging customers which are the only means of income for Bliss? The newest section of Interstate 80 opens Monday, bypassing the town. Businessmen hope the location and the interchanges at each end of Bliss may encourage tourists to stop.

Landmark in town

LONG A landmark along Bliss Main Street, the "Ghost Town" now is mainly a gift shop. The frontier town attractions were sold some time ago. Jim Mylan, who still operates the gift shop, says he is considering installing a sign on his land behind the building.

Bliss unsettled over future of town

 Highway 30, the predecessor of Interstate 80, has for years been the town's main — and almost only — street. Tourist trade and truckers are the prime source of income for the town's eateries, motels, bars and at least six garages.
 The sign on the edge of town lists the population at 114, but Mayor Ray Armstrong, a former Twin Falls resident, estimates there are "at least 300" persons.
 "Bliss is located about 90 miles this side of Boise and is the logical stopping place for gas and food for motorists crossing Southern Idaho."
 Both the location and full interchanges were mentioned as the main reasons for continued confidence by everyone interviewed this week. Their comments were made before knowledge of the temporary closure was generally known, however.
 "Things are bound to be a little bad for awhile," Mayor Armstrong said, "adding optimistically, but it will all get ironed out."
 Paul Pickett, manager of the Oxbow Cafe, feels the bypass won't hurt his restaurant too much because "we are closer to the interstate on the east end." He said his place has many regular customers, from Boise to Pocatello, including Twin Falls, who will probably still keep stopping.
 "This will keep us alive," Pickett said. He believes most of the truckers will continue to stop. Pickett proved his confidence about the town's future by renewing his lease recently.
 Mrs. Paige at the Circle Bar restaurant feels assured of continued local business such as class reunions. She leases the restaurant from Art and Dick Thompson, who operate the bar and motel. They were unavailable for comment.
 "There are rumors that somebody may be moving or selling, but none could be verified this week. All of the restaurant people say they definitely will remain."
 The Y Motel is up for sale, but this is because the owner, Ava Flint, lost her husband last fall. She feels confident business will continue briskly, according to a granddaughter, because so many customers come back year after year.
 The motel has not sold yet, and probably the situation with the interstate bypass is not helping any, but Mrs. Flint is "not afraid of the freeway."
 The bypass will have some effect on motorists, but not on people who know about us," is the opinion of Henry and Louisa Smith, owners of the Beaumont.
 They purchased the business about a year and a half ago and own another cafe in Arco. They came to Bliss because they like the climate better. Their place, also on the east end of the elongated main street, is one of the newer of the town's eateries.
 "Bliss has to be a resort and truck stop," Smith said. "There's nothing else here."
 Behind the string of cafes, motels or garages on the north side of the highway is a hill atop which is scattered trailer homes and a section of new modular homes. Then the hill drops abruptly to the "old" district — of which most motorists are unaware. This includes a two-block string of buildings such as Lenker's grocery store and several apartment buildings, one of which was once a hotel, the mayor said.

 This street was the route of old Highway 30 years ago and it parallels the Union Pacific Railroad track. Across the tracks is farmland. To the south of the current "main drag" the Snake River Canyon provides scenic views.
 There is some talk of installing signs to remind tourists of the facilities awaiting them at the Bliss interchanges. Jim Mylan, who owns the gift shop one part of the ghost town which was long a major tourist attraction, is considering a sign.
 His son, Kevin, 13, who was "minding the shop" Wednesday, said his father wants to put up a tall sign on the back of his property which is the highest elevation in town.

But since the interstate is at least a half mile distant, it would seem the motorists would need super eyesight for the sign to do much good.
 State highway officials at Shoshone say it is possible, but not too probable that Bliss boosters could legally install a sign of their own to attract motorists.
 "There will be regular high way signs on each Bliss interchange listing food, gas and lodging. The highway department provides these signs for any community where such services are available, regardless of its size, according to Bob Slater, engineering technician.
 Any extra sign has to meet state and federal regulations and also comply with local zoning regulations. Gooding County does not have a county zoning code but the last Idaho legislature passed a law saying any sign readable from the interstate was no longer legal.

Highway crews are in the process of taking down the Stuckey's signs across the state now, Slater said.
 "There's no simple answer. I'd have to inspect any specific site before giving an answer," Slater said. "It is possible they could find a place which would meet all regulations, but I'd have to inspect it first."
 The Bliss Chamber of Commerce has discussed the advisability of "installing a sign for some time and the subject undoubtedly will come up at a picnic scheduled for Monday, according to Charlene Stroud, secretary.
 The town, named for the Fred Bliss family, was begun as part of the irrigation development on the North Side in the early 1900s. It primarily owes its early existence to the Union Pacific Railroad Co.
 Mayor Armstrong said there was a large depot here in the early days and John Chapman father of the mayor's wife, Virginia was, once railroad agent. The railroad company once owned several houses in Bliss for its employees and shipped cattle from a large stockyard.

 "A little remains of the old railroad days is the town's water storage tank, which once provided water for thirsty engines."
 Bliss is still a gathering place for utility crewmen and stockmen, whose operations can be seen from atop the hill, as well as the truckers. The Idaho Power Co. keeps eight rooms rented in local motels year around for its employees, the mayor said.
 The big question is whether the local business, plus loyal customers from throughout the area, will provide enough money to keep the Bliss jingling so Bliss businessmen can ride out the temporary closure.
 "If they can survive the week or two of added problem, nearly everyone feels there will continue to be a Bliss."

Jerome man 'lives with old' as way of life

JEROME — Living with the old has become a way of life for David Freshour, Jerome, who has collected antiques for the past 15 years.

Freshour started his collection with a miniature kerosene lamp which stands only two inches tall and can hardly be found now among the many and varied items he has in his home.

Freshour said he became interested in collecting antiques when he acquired the tiny brass lamp from a box of junk discarded by a relative.

Since then "treasures" and relatives have assisted him in adding to his collection.

The many antiques are on display in his home which is reputed to be one of the first houses built in Jerome. According to Freshour, the first warranty deed was issued on March 19, 1909, from James B. Kersey to Charles Beecher.

Jerome became a county in 1906, so this apparently is one of the first homes built in Jerome and as far as Leon told him, the ninth owner.

The home has been maintained as much as possible in its original state with the brass chandeliers in the living and dining room still providing light as they have for many years. Freshour is able to obtain three matching chandeliers when the old North Side Inn was torn down. They have been installed in the bedroom, bathroom and kitchen area.

Just recently added to his collection is an old pipe organ. In order for Freshour to get his new addition into his home he had to give up a couch in the living room.

His kerosene lamp collection includes two Aladdin lamps and 37 regular lamps, many of which are heirlooms given him by friends. "One thing is for sure, when we have a power outage I always have plenty of light to read by," Freshour said.

Some of the other antiques he has obtained through friends, relatives, auctions, garage sales or old shops include a printing press, an old

Edison record player with 52 cylinders, a round solid oak dining table with four ornate cane-bottom chairs, sewing rockers, a Bentwood chair and hundreds of small items ranging from thunderbug to button-top shoes.

In the back yard and all around the house other antiques are gathered—which include several potbelly stoves, a 1908 sheep wagon which once belonged to Frenchy Conrad and a large collection of farming implements and wagon wheels.

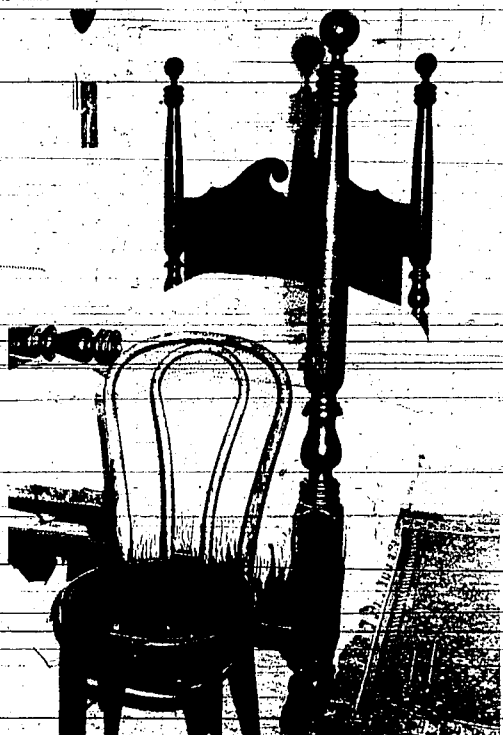

Freshour is employed at Idaho Gem Dairymen but also does chores and odd jobs for his friends, which keeps him in touch with farm life. "He says he has no plans for opening an antique shop or of opening any of his items."

"I just enjoy collecting them and having them as part of my own home. I just hope some day I will be able to find a wife who will also enjoy having all of this stuff in her home," Freshour said.

He also enjoys having people stop by and see his collections.

Girl, 11, good carnival impresario

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — When Niki Summers decided to stage a neighborhood carnival to raise funds to help fight muscular dystrophy, she figured she would clear about $10.

By the end of the day she had collected $106.93 and was acclaimed by her peers as the "impresario" of the best carnival anyone has ever had.

"Niki is 11 years old. She has some friends who suffer from the disease.

So, under a bright, sunny sky, this week, hundreds of kids, flocked to the blue water tower in Seattle's Magnolia district where Niki held her carnival.

Although she did most of the planning herself, organizers of her family and some playmates helped man the booths and games.

There was a fish pond, penny drop and ring toss where youngsters vied for dime-store prizes. Lemonade stands did a landslide business. "One tooth enjoyed a sell-out of its 26 houseplants.

"Niki's sisters, Tanya and Sue, got into the act. Tanya, a musician and Sue, a clown.

"One of the most surprises of the day was the appearance of a blind man with a candy cotton machine, which he operated all afternoon. He wished to remain anonymous.

"Niki's mother who did the bookkeeping and kept things running smoothly, was happy.

"We're really pleased," she said. "Everyone's been so nice. It really has been a great success, but I'm exhausted."

"Niki was exuberant.

"I want to make a million dollars," she said. "I really want to help those kids who can't run and play like I can."

Abby

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that a teenage boy wants to be the image of his mother, but long hair and tried to justify it by saying that Jesus had long hair. His mother then said, "So you want to be like Jesus? O.K. Jesus didn't have a car—he had to walk everywhere. So just hand over the car keys!"

And you, Dear Abby, said: "That Jesus story doesn't hold up very well because nowhere in the Bible does it state that Jesus had long hair. In fact, there are Biblical injunctions against long hair. (New Testament, I Corinthians, Chapter 11, Verse 14.)"

Well, Dear Abby, you are mistaken. Jesus DID have long hair because Jesus was a Nazarene, and the laws for the Nazarenes are given in Numbers, Chapter 6: "All the days of the vow of separation there shall be no razor come upon his head, until the days be fulfilled, in which he separated himself unto the Lord, he shall be holy, and shall the locks of the hair of his head grow."

D.H.J.: RALEIGH, N.C.

Bible still no excuse

DEAR RALEIGH: Before I throw in the towel AND the razor, let's hear from a Bible college student in Los Angeles:

DEAR ABBY: First of all, if Jesus had long hair, what has that to do with today? In His day all men had long hair. It was the custom. We could take that same logic to George Washington and powdered wigs. He wasn't the only man in his day to wear powdered wigs, so why do we use him as an example?

I am tired of hearing people quote Corinthians 11:14 ("Doth not even nature itself teach you that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him") to support their stand against long-haired men.

What the Bible really says is that it is a shame for a man to wear a hair in imitation of women. I have that through your column you can get people to stop using Jesus Christ as an excuse for wearing long hair, beards, sandals, robes or whatever the wearing apparel of the day was, Judas Iscariot and Pontius Pilate also had long hair. Why don't people use THEM as examples? Sign me.

BIBLE STUDENT

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 years old, married for seven years, and have worked every day since I was 17. My husband has wandered from job to job and has had periods of unemployment up to nine months. On one occasion I have even had to work two jobs. Fortunately, I was smart enough not to have any children. My husband is presently unemployed (always, conveniently, in warm weather) and spends most of his "time riding around" on his 54,000 motorcycle.

Nothing ticks me more than to come home from working all day and have to clean, cook, do laundry, etc. In seven years of marriage, I have never come home to a meal on the table. My arm was in a sling for a week, and I had to wash dishes one-handed! On the day I came home from the hospital after surgery, I spent the afternoon cleaning because I couldn't stand the mess. If I ask for help, he says I am "nagging" and that "no other guy helps his wife with the housework—that is strictly a woman's job."

I think marriage should be 50-50. If after men left their "makeup" business, they made marriage a 50-50 deal, the divorce rate in this country wouldn't be so high.

FED-UP BUT STILL PLUGGING

DEAR FED: You don't tell me what your problem is, but you have given ME one. What are you still "plugging" for? I must have missed something.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY, Box No. 68200, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

How to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (25¢) envelope.

Masons plan potluck

BURLEY — The annual Mt. Harrison Communication of the Fifth District, Masons of Idaho, will be held July 19 at the Mt. Harrison Twin Lakes area.

A potluck dinner will be served at 12:30 p.m. at Pomerelle Ski Lodge for Masons and their families.

The lodge will convene at 2 p.m. at the Twin Lakes area with most worshipful grand master Wayne S. Miller conferring the degree work assisted by grand lodge officers.

All Idaho Masons, newcomers and their families are invited to attend. Burley Lodge No. 68 will be host.

TF miss Hammons married

TWIN FALLS — Cindy Sue Turner and Bruce Dean Hammons were married in a June 28 ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

Rev. Brian Munson, Twin Falls' United Methodist Church, performed the double-ring ceremony before the fireplace which was flanked by baskets of pink chrysanthemums and baby's breath.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Turner, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hammons, Klamath Falls, Ore.

The bride wore a gown of white nylon lace and soft pink chiffon she made herself. The dress featured pink ruffles at the scoop neckline and wrist and a long pink ruffle at the hem of the skirt which flowed to a train at the back.

She carried a colonial bouquet of baby rosebuds and pink stephanotis with plant satin streamers tied with stephanotis. Her elbow length veil was trimmed at the front with pink stephanotis.

Mrs. Sandy Louder, Hazelton, was matron of honor. Karen Turner, Provo, Utah, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Ken Price, Twin Falls, was best man. Tracy Turner, brother of the bride, lit the candles.

The couple was honored at a garden reception following the ceremony.

The bride's table was covered with white lace over pink satin, trimmed with pink satin bows. A three tiered wedding cake was decorated with pink rosebuds and white doves. Baby rosebuds and queen's lace surrounded the cake. A chrysanthemum floral arrangement decorated the punch table.

Stephanie Parker, Twin Falls, served the cake. Cindy Baisch, Hazelton, served the punch. Carol Lee Ashcraft, Twin Falls, was in charge of the gift table and DeFalle Turner, Provo, registered gifts.

Following a wedding trip to Emmett, the couple will reside in Missoula, Mont., where the bridegroom is employed as merchandise manager of K-mart.

See what MARY KAY COSMETICS can do for you. Call Velma Johnston 734-2003

By Mary Sue Miller

Spend the summer lying in the shade, and you'll spend the winter wondering why you did it. A long-term haze causes long-term pounds to accumulate. Of course, if you are the frisky type, you don't laze. You find sports fun—and good for you, too.

It's the inactive woman that this column is for. The way to exercise with a minimum of effort, fatigue and boredom is outlined here. Never was there anything so cinchy and cool, too.

Be cool about slimming

1. For arms and back: Stand erect, back to a wall; lean hard against it. With arms down at sides and elbows' straight, turn palms to rest flat on wall. Now press palms to wall—hard. Continue until quiver sets in, and then relax... 10.

- times in all.
- 2. Bosom lift: Raise arms slightly over head; place palms of hands together, fingers pointing straight up. Press palms together—hold for 20 counts. Relax and repeat 10 times.
- 3. Waist away: Sit and reach for the sky. Holding arm position; contract waist muscles and breathe deeply for six seconds. Relax and repeat 10 times.
- 4. Hip trimmer: Sit squarely on "sittin' bones." Contract buttock muscles hard—hold—slowly relax. Continue without pause, six times.
- 5. Leg shaper: Lie back on floor so that feet touch a wall two inches off floor. Taking tiny steps, walk up wall as far as possible. Make every step felt in leg muscles. Repeat 20 times, then go lie in the shade.

LAZY GIRL'S EXERCISES

Here's an effortless way to trim off heavy spots. All you do is lie down or sit down, and flex your muscles. If that's for you, send for LAZY GIRL'S EXERCISES. Based on the isometric principle of exercise, routines trim figure head-to-toe. Write Mary Sue Miller in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 15 cents in coin.

Garden nuptials performed

JEROME — Terri Thurman, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Kern Thurman, Filer, became the bride of Richard H. Van Wagoner, June 28 in Jerome.

Van Wagoner is the son of Helen Van Wagoner, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Dale Van Wagoner, McCall. Rev. Robert C. Cooper performed the evening ceremony in the garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gail C. Gunnung.

The bride chose a floor-length ivory colonial gown featuring long lace sleeves and a lace hemline. Her colonial picture hat was of ivory lace. She carried a long, ivory tulle train which included white roses accented with baby's breath and long streamers. Her tokens of sentiment included a blue garter made by Mrs. W.L. Hoye and a family heirloom pendant. Susan Hudspeth was maid of honor. Shellee Box greeted guests at the gate and gifts were received by Lisa Lawson and Stephanie Thurman, nieces of the bride. Richard Mervin, the bridegroom's step-brother, was best man. Doug Thurman, brother of the bride, was usher.

A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Lawson, sister of the bride. The bride's table was covered with a white nylon flounce and centered with a three-tiered white wedding cake. It was accented with blue tipped roses and topped with blue satin heels. Silver centerpieces with blue tapers topped the table.

August wedding planned

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. William C. Harding, Jerome, announce the engagement and forthcoming wedding of their daughter, Tammy, to Kim E. Ellis.

Ellis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merthan Ellis of Hagerman.

Miss Harding is a 1973 graduate of Minico High School. She continued her education at Rice's College where she studied child development and secretarial training.

Ellis graduated in 1971 from Snake River High School. He attended Rice's College before serving an LDS mission in Chicago, Ill., for two years. The couple will be married Aug. 21 in the Idaho Falls Temple. They will reside in Hagerman where he is engaged in farming.

Miss Morris, Eacker united in June rites

TWIN FALLS — Lanni Sue Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Morris, Twin Falls, and Barry Duane Eacker, Twin Falls, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Eacker, Kimberly, were united in marriage June 28 in a candlelight ceremony at the First Church of the Nazarene.

Rev. Kenneth Rhoades, Bible Baptist Church, performed the double-ring ceremony before brass and delaware accents with violas and white chrysanthemums and blue bows.

The candle arch was entwined with greenery and the pews were marked with blue bows and sprays of baby's breath. The family carried a ceremony closed the marriage vows.

Julie Jones, Boise, served her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Karen Schabinger, Boise, and Mary Stone, Jerome. Jan Planansky, Twin Falls, was in charge of the guest book.

The wedding music was provided by Mrs. Richard Green, Filer. Mrs. Wayne Darrham, Eagle, was soloist.

The bride's gown of ivory seponet, satin, lace and portlyn was fashioned with a high neckline and deep ruffled train. The detachable train had a matching flounce and was fastened at the waist with a large butterfly bow.

Her full length tiered veil of illusion was caught to a crown cap trimmed with satin, lace and pearls to match the gown.

She carried a colonial bouquet of lavender, daisies and white moss tied with purple ribbons. She wore a sterling cross, gift from the bridegroom.

Steven Jones, Boise, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Gale Ferrell, Jerome, and Gil Walters, Twin Falls, served as groomsmen and ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Knudsen, Twin Falls, were best and hostess for the wedding and reception. The reception was held in the church fellowship hall which was decorated in blue, white and lavender with white flowers.

Flowers in urns marked the receiving line in front of an austrian drape. The bride's table was centered with a four-tiered cake decorated in ivory and white with blue flowers. Brass, candle and flower arrangements flanked the cake.

Attending the table were Mrs. Earl Bird, Mrs. Kenneth Rhoades, Jeris Stonemets and Mrs. Bertha Gieck, Donna and Bruce, candle and flower Landsey with the girls.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Walter Robbins, Rose Hill, Iowa, grandparents of the bride, Richard Robbins, Kenmah Village, Iowa, uncle of the bride, and Ron Eacker, Buena Park, Calif., brother of the bridegroom.

Out-of-town guests attended from Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Boise, Eagle, Filer, Kimberly and Jerome.

The bride was honored at a luncheon in honor given by Mrs. Bill Stonemets and Jeris Stonemets. A surprise shower was given by the staff at the Twin Falls Public Library with Julie Cauchey as hostess.

After a short honeymoon trip the newlyweds will make their home in Twin Falls.

Mini-Reviews

"Straight Tip" by Janice Ullman. For John Harlin there was no other way. He was perhaps the greatest American mountaineer of his generation. Climbing was his life, and his death in 1966, but his 32 years was like a brilliant kaleidoscope of places and images and he himself was a man of many faces.

James Ramsey Ullman wisely acclaimed for his books on mountaineering, has combined his own knowledge of the sport with his equally talented for telling a story. Here is a biography that is a penetrating, compassionate description of an extraordinary man. It is also a layman's guide to mountaineering with a glossary of terms and 32 pages of brilliant photographs.

"Zulu heart" by Shirley Graham Dullois. Apartheid-ridden South Africa is the setting for this remarkable novel where the Vermeert of sturdy Dutch stock and a highly established family is his nation's foremost surgeon.

Quite suddenly he is stricken with a heart ailment. A transplant is needed, and a suitable donor must be found. He receives the heart of a black man, and a gradual metamorphosis takes place as his heart begins to beat the rhythm of a black South African. This is a dramatic story of a man's inner conflicts and love for two women, one black one white, leading to an intriguing suspense that leads to a provocative, yet touching conclusion.

"The Man From Greek and Roman" by James Goldman. Romance, adventure, mystery, and lots of things to think about in this fresh funny and moving story.

Dr. Melvyl West, a quiet scholar, the curator of Greek and Roman Art at the Metropolitan Museum, has him thoroughly with Mrs. Caroline Gardener, a girl from the right side of the tracks who has done everything once and most of it twice, combines them with the theft of a mysterious golden chalice worth $16 million and you begin to get the flavor.

Mrs. John Robinson, sister of the bride, assisted by Steve Thurman, sister-in-law of the bride, cut and served the cake. Shellee Box poured the punch.

The bridegroom's table was attended by Gail C. Gunnung and La Mar Box.

The bride was honored with a luncheon shower by her friends with Jenny Runkle and Susan Broughton as hostesses.

The bride graduated from Jerome High School, attended the College of Southern Idaho and is employed as an interior decorator.

The bridegroom graduated from Salt Lake City West High, attended Utah Technology College and is employed by Farm Equipment Exchange in Jerome.

After a honeymoon in Utah, the couple makes a home in Jerome.

"Carpet is our Specialty"

143 Main Ave. East

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
During the past three years I have awakened during the night choking or strangling. At first I seem unable to draw even a breath. Do you have any explanation for this?
I am 62 years old. I have a hiatal hernia. Could this have anything to do with my condition? Also, during the night I have mucus in my throat. What can I do? — Mrs. D.A.R.

Investigators have recently described a new syndrome. It's called sleep apnea, is associated with insomnia, and the symptoms you describe seem to match it. Apnea means the transient cessation of breathing, or more correctly of the breathing impulse. It has been found to occur in about 10 per cent of the population during sleep.

Strangling symptoms described

The Stanford University medical school researchers who studied it report that it is associated with a temporary disturbance in the movement of the diaphragm or with an obstruction in the breathing apparatus, or a combination of both. The exact cause of the diaphragm problem is unclear, although it could be symptomatic of a hidden neurological disorder.

The breathing obstruction is more easily understood, perhaps, caused by defects in the nose or throat or to excessive mucus in the bronchial system. Overweight may be a factor, also. Other factors such as excessive smoking, a dusty atmosphere or an allergy may also come into play.

You mention a hiatal hernia. It is possible that some reflux, a backing-up of digestive juices into the throat, could occur, especially when you are reclining.

What can you do if it continues? Obstructive factors may be corrected, if necessary. You can elevate your upper body while sleeping if the hiatal hernia is a factor. This would alleviate the reflux problem. If you are overweight, reduce, and if you are a heavy smoker, cut down or quit altogether.

You should have a thorough examination of your nose and throat, as well as a chest X-ray.

There always may be brief interruptions in involuntary breathing during sleep, but one as apparently severe as yours, which causes arousals from sleep, calls for further investigation.

Such disturbances have been the subject of growing interest in recent years, and they may be a principal factor in many cases of insomnia which up to now have defied diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
What are the harmful effects, if any, of chewing tobacco? — R.E.A.

Opinion varies on this subject. One report indicates that cancer of the mouth and tongue can occur. Another, from the University of Tennessee College of Medicine, concludes that chewing tobacco is not carcinogenic (cancer-producing).

Chewing tobacco can irritate the membranes of the mouth and gums, however. A white growth, called leukoplakia, can result, and this may be precancerous. Notice that I say "may be."

Nicotine swallowed can quicken the heart rate and increase the flow of stomach acid.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I'm taking iron tablets and vitamin C each day.

I'm curious as to whether these provide any calories? — T.V.V.

They don't.

To learn of the many factors involved in the treatment of hiatal hernia (which concerns the esophagus), write to Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 399, Elgin, Ill. 60120. For a copy of this booklet—"Hiatal-Hernia-and-Eight-Ways-to-Combat-It." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

MR. AND MRS. STAN HAWKINS

Sharon Hughes wed in TF Baptist rites

TWIN FALLS — Sharon Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hughes, Twin Falls, and Stan Hawkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Hawkins, Vale, Ore., were married June 28 in the East-side Southern Baptist Church here.

Rev. Ed Bussert, Ontario, Ore., performed the ceremony before an alter decorated with tall white tapers and chrysanthemums.

The bride was dressed in a floor-length empress-style gown of white chiffon over satin, bordered in embroidered lace. She wore a floor-length veil of illusion edged in lace. She carried a bouquet of roses, small carnations and blue and white pompons.

Mrs. Ott Strain, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and attendances included Mrs. Larry Hughes, Colorado Springs, Colo., and Candy Freeman, Twin Falls.

Ron Hawkins, Vale, attended his brother as best man and other attendants were Jim Britton and Carl Norton, Ontario, and Rick Stillion, Giffedale, Ariz. Tony Hughes was ring bearer, and Kristi Hawkins was flower girl.

Train bearer was Melissa Hawkins. Candlelighters were Larry Strain and Todd Strain, both Twin Falls.

A reception followed the ceremony with the bride's table decorated with a white four tier cake centered the table.

Mrs. Janet Brady won the high score, Mrs. Ira Hall was second high winner and Mrs. Herman Ripley won the traveling prize. The club presented a gift to Mrs. Ellen Plaka, a charter member of the club who is moving to Ohio.

The hostess served refreshments. The next party will be July 21 at the home of Mrs. Atella Whitehead.

TWIN FALLS — Judy Duncan, a newcomer to WCA-Pool Bridge, took first place in play at the building Wednesday.

Marion Phillips was second.

Degree bestowed on woman

GOLDIE SEVERT state officer

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Claude (Goldie) Severt has returned to Twin Falls from the International Moose Convention in New York City where she received her degree as deputy grand regent of Idaho.

She will serve a one-year term in the office, during which she holds the top office for Women of the Moose in the state of Idaho. Mrs. Severt is the third Twin Falls woman in the past 20 years to receive the high office. Others were Eloise Carlson and Hazel Welch.

Mrs. Severt has been a member of the Twin Falls Chapter for 21 years, during which she has held many top offices on the local and state levels. She received her college of regents degree at Mooseheart, Ill., in 1960.

While traveling home from the International convention she stopped in Philadelphia, Pa., for the July 4th observance there and a tour of Independence Hall and the home of Betsy Ross.

Mrs. Severt was honored along with other new officers during a meeting of Friendship Circle in Twin Falls. She reported on her trip to the international convention.

Mrs. Maynard Ek, senior regent, announced new officers and committee chairmen who will serve with her this year.

Gooding miss-weds Petersen

GOODING — Teri Paris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilse, Gooding, was married to Robert E. Petersen in an afternoon ceremony June 28 at the First Christian Church in Gooding.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Petersen of Gooding.

Don Wilson of the Church of Christ performed the double-ring ceremony beside baskets of yellow roses and white carnations and baby's breath.

The bride, given in marriage by her stepfather, wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie and lace made by her mother.

The dress featured long sleeves of daisy motif lace gathered at the wrist and ending in a finger-tip ruffle and a V-neckline trimmed with a lace ruffle. The flared skirt fell from a high fitted bodice with lace overlay forming a train bordered with a lace ruffle.

A high daisy hair held the bride's waistlength veil of bridal illusion, which was also made by the bride's mother. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Vicki Haskins, Twin Falls, was matron of honor. Bridesmaid was Rhonda Shoup of Gooding.

Robert Egan was best man and Paul Park was groom's man. Jesse Paris, brother of the bride, and Randy Littenger, cousin of the bride, served as ushers.

Julie Petersen, sister of the bridegroom, registered the guests at Linda Murphy, cousin of the groom, assisted with the gifts. Mrs. Janet Sears was organist.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlor. The bride's table was covered with a white lace tablecloth over green and white candelabra holding white candles.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT PETERSEN

The four tiered wedding cake was decorated with yellow roses and topped with white satin bells and doves nestled in whiteness.

Mrs. Ada Littenger, Idaho Falls, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Anita Robinson, Indio, Calif., cut and served the cake. Mrs. Ava Shoup, Gooding, made the punch, and Mrs. Sharon Fredrickson, Bluffton, Ind., assisted with the coffee service.

Out-of-town guests attended from Buhl, Jerome, Twin Falls, Bliss, Richfield, Shoshone, Idaho Falls and Arden-Hodds Falls.

The bride was honored at a bridal shower given by Merle Wilson, Ava Shoup and Sharon Fredrickson on May 29.

Special cakes in the form of a bride and two attendants were made by Lee Richardson.

Following the wedding rehearsal on Friday evening, a dinner for members of the wedding party was hosted by the groom's parents at their home.

Following a honeymoon trip to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla. the couple resides in Gooding where the bridegroom is employed.

Portraits planned for TFHS students

TWIN FALLS — Student portraits for Twin Falls High School Annual will be taken this year by Johnson Studio, according to Principal Frank Charlton.

Individual pictures will be taken at the studio, 231 Shoshone St. N., beginning Monday, a $2 fee will be charged at that time.

Pictures were formerly taken at the high school. By having pictures taken at the studio, students will have the opportunity to have pictures taken for their own personal orders as well as having the picture taken for the annual.

Lincoln 4-H'ers must complete fair forms

SHOSHONE — All 4-H members in Lincoln County who wish to apply for special merchant awards scholarships, watch and bond awards are required to complete a special form.

The forms are available at the county agent's office in Shoshone.

Alternates will be chosen for all scholarships this year.

If neither the winner nor alternate use the award the money will be retained for award the following year.

Fair forms are due July 31 and the county fair is August 1 and 2.

All boys and girls enrolled in 4-H livestock clubs are required to enter livestock judging contest. Each contestant must place one class each of hogs, horses, sheep, dairy cattle and beef cattle.

Members will be divided into junior and senior divisions. The county judging teams will be the three top scoring members from each division.

The two teams will represent the county at the district 4-H fair at Jerome. The three high scoring members in first team will get

SHELLEY TURNER tells date

HELEN MALTZ sets date

HAZELTON — Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Goodwin, Hazelton, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Tina Marie, to Dan C. Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Black, Eden.

The bride-elect is a 1975 graduate of Minick High School and is now attending Link's School of Business, Boise.

She was graduated in 1971 from Valley High School, has attended the University of Idaho and CSI and will continue his studies this fall at Boise State University. The couple plans a July 25 wedding at the Ponderosa Inn.

HAGERMAN — Mr. and Mrs. Gene Turner, Hagerman, announce the engagement of their daughter, Shelley, to Robert Bourn.

Bourn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Bourn, Hansen.

Miss Turner will be attending the nursing program at the College of Southern Idaho this fall. Bourn is employed by Mountain Bell Co.

A July 25 wedding is planned at the Methodist Church, Hagerman.

WENDELL — Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Maltz, Wendell, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Helen June, to Spic S. Bruce Nelson, Ft. Lewis, Wash.

Nelson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Nelson, Idaho Falls.

The bride-elect is a 1971 graduate of Wendell High School and recently received her bachelor of science degree in community health from the University of Utah.

Nelson was graduated from Wendell High School and is currently serving in the regular Army Signal Corp. stationed at Ft. Lewis.

The wedding is set for July 25 at the Wendell Presbyterian Church.

Wife files suit on 50th anniversary

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Dessie Daniels filed suit for divorce on the couple's golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Daniels' attorney, O.C. Laster, said she did not specifically request the July 8 divorce action, filed in 1969, had been dropped when the couple reconciled.

Tuesday's petition accused Willie Daniels of "extreme cruelty" leading to a state of irreconcilable incompatibility.

Mrs. Daniels asked the court to award her the family home, furnishings and car, plus temporary and permanent support and maintenance.

The petition said the two were married on July 8, 1925, and raised seven children.

Laster said an earlier divorce action, filed in 1969, had been dropped when the couple reconciled.

Tuesday's petition accused Willie Daniels of "extreme cruelty" leading to a state of irreconcilable incompatibility.

Mrs. Daniels asked the court to award her the family home, furnishings and car, plus temporary and permanent support and maintenance.

trump. After West passed the overcall, East made the brilliant decision to double.

The slaughter was terrific indeed. West shifted to a heart of trick two. East took one high heart and the queen of spades. Then he led a club. West cashed two clubs and his last high spade on which East threw his last club. Then he led a second heart. East won, led the heart jack and South's eight-of-trumps fell to West's nine. The last club was led and ruffed. Back came a fourth heart and when the smoke of battle had cleared away South had made just two tricks.

There was just no way the defense could shut out his ace and king of trumps.

In general, a free bid merely says that you would have made the same bid successfully here, had there been no interference. When the interference shuts out your normal action you should strain to find a bid any time your hand is unbalanced, but tend to pass when your hand is balanced.

South's vulnerable one diamond call is one of those bids based on an out heart and a few high-card points. It is not recommended and when you see what happened to South you will know why.

With no interference West would rebid one spade and the partnership would bid to three

Tour of new library facilities set July 20

TWIN FALLS - The new addition of the Twin Falls Public Library which has nearly doubled the public area of the building goes on display July 20 in an open house event. Arlan Call, librarian, said the public is invited to visit the library and tour facilities of the new addition and other departments from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. A brief ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held at 2 p.m. with Mayor Winston Jones and members of the library board officiating. In the new addition the public will find attractive open spaces, shelves with room to walk between and even some rare empty shelves. Something unique to the Twin Falls library for the past 10 years. Call said the new facility, which has been in use and open to the public the past month has received many favorable comments. He said many of the customers not seen in the library for several years are coming back. Included in the 20,000 square foot of library space - about half of which is in the new building - are heavy new furnishings and stack shelves, as well as a major increase in table space for library customers doing research, reading or studying in the building. A basement area provides space for storage of papers and periodicals and a staff room for coffee or relaxation. The addition also provides storage which allows the old basement area to expand the children's library and make room for more activities and material there. On the main floor are the Idaho room which houses historical collections and books by Idaho writers. This also serves as a meeting room for the board or for special groups. Because the building is required to meet the needs of all persons, including invalids, there is an elevator and a ground level entrance with no steps. The elevator also helps library staff members transfer books to the higher second story of the new addition. Here many of the fiction books are housed along with reading tables. The second story looks onto the main floor area through brick archways and is accessible by a modern stair of wrought iron and wood. Brick arches also provide a partial dividing wall between the new and old sections of the main floor. Call said there is enough space in the library to care for anticipated growth for 15 to 20 years. He said 500,000 volumes can be housed in the building with about 100,000 at the present time, including books and bound periodicals. Call said the community has given the library some outstanding support in the improvement program as all of the new furnishings have been donated. Some families donated a table, some a chair and some an entire study set of chairs and a table. The Junior Club provided several thousand dollars for the improvement while the Soroptimist Club donated enough money to purchase a new desk and items for the Idaho Room. Call estimated the community donations which furnished the addition totaled about $16,000.

Room for expansion

LIBRARY patrons will find space is about double as a result of the new Twin Falls library addition. Comfortable tables for reading and studying are provided on the second floor. Even some empty shelves, at rear, provide for future expansion of the library volumes.

Browsing space

PLENTY of space for browsing is provided in the second story area of the new Twin Falls library addition. Here Librarian Arlan Call looks over the fiction stack shelves in the well-lighted area.

Construction threatens pupils' tree

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was Arbor Day, about 1917, when school children at Lincoln School planted the sapling amidst the sagebrush surrounding the building.

Now, nearly 60 years later, the tree has grown lush and stately, providing a green perch away from the asphalt for another generation of school children.

But with the construction of the new portion of Lincoln School and the planned demolition of the 1908-vintage structure, the tree was marked for destruction.

Helen Coleman, a school teacher at Lincoln for more than 35 years, didn't think the tree should be taken down. So she started a campaign to save the tree, which she considers "a historical landmark."

"I care," she says. Landscaping plans call for the grade to be lowered substantially around the tree which would expose the roots and probably kill it.

But after a barrage of phone calls by other interested persons, school administrators say they hope to save the tree.

"When I first called Mr. Staudacher he turned me down flat," Mrs. Coleman said, but added, she felt both superintendent Staudacher and board-chairman Dr. Howard Rank "should be praised" for listening to her plea.

Mrs. Coleman taught her second and third grade students in a room overlooking the tree. "The children have enjoyed that tree," she said, recalling how her students would climb into the low branches.

She says she has been trying to find students still living in Twin Falls who participated in the original Arbor Day project but has had no success. The children wrote their names on a paper, sealed them in a mason jar and nestled the jar among the sapling's roots, she said.

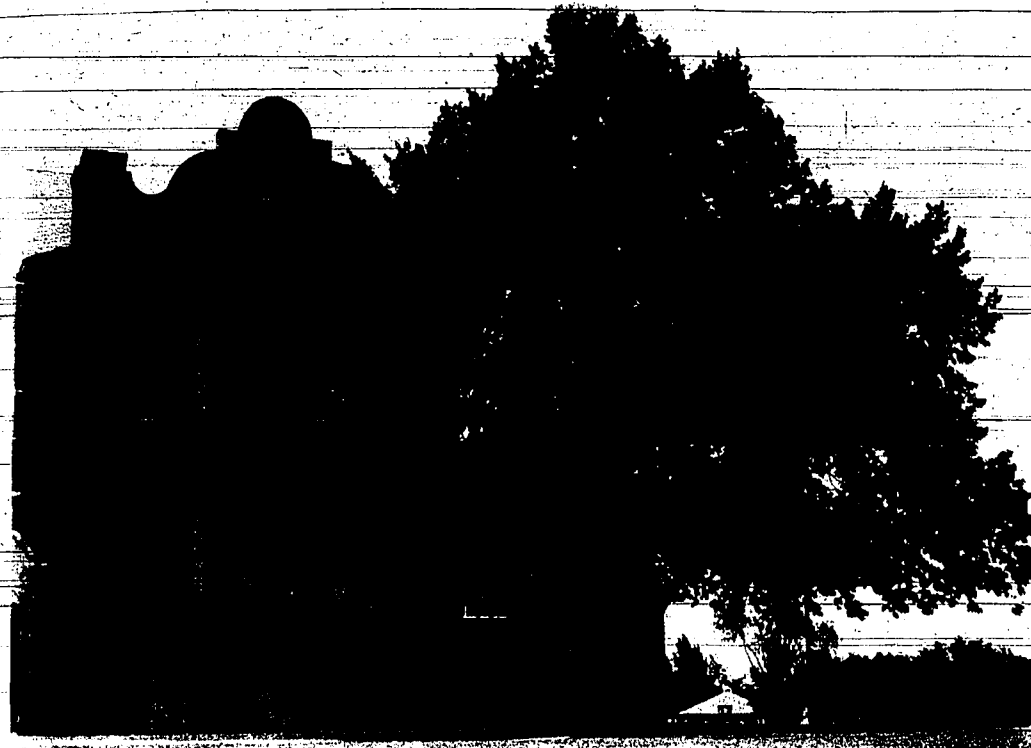

Architect for the building project, Ed Peterson said he is looking into ways to save the tree.

But he added the effort could be costly to the district. "I like trees as well as anybody. If we can save it, I'd be glad to do it," Peterson said.

It may be necessary to build a large, circular retaining wall and fill the area around the tree with dirt, Peterson recently told school board trustees.

For considerably less money, a new, young tree could be purchased and planted, he said.

Until Peterson confers with nurserymen about the possibilities of saving the tree, its future still seems uncertain. This Monday workers will move heavy equipment in to begin the demolition of the school room. Mrs. Coleman may be watching.

Ablon sewer funded

WASHINGTON — The Farmers Home Administration has approved additional financing for a sewer system being constructed in the Marsh Creek area of Ablon, U.S. Rep. George Hansen said today.

The additional financing amounts to $29,500. Previous grants of $225,000 had been approved for the system, Hansen said.

Evel says, 'I will return'

BUTTE, Mont. (UPI) — Evel Knievel is going back, he says. Back to Wembley Stadium in London to attempt again to jump those 13 buses.

The 36-year-old motorcycle stuntman failed in May, crashed his cycle and is still recovering from the injuries.

"If I fall off again, I'm going to hang it up," he said at his Butte home this week. "I said I'd quit after the London jump, but if I quit now, it would be in the face of defeat."

When his high-powered bike didn't make it over the London buses May 26, the world-famous stuntman injured his back and pelvis. He spent several weeks in a London hospital before returning to his native Butte.

IPUC eyes subdivision water

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Friday it plans to take steps to ease some of the problems experienced by the Desert View Estates Corporation although the firm is not under PUC jurisdiction.

A preliminary investigation of records shows Desert View Estates Water Corp. was formed as a non-profit corporation under Idaho law and is therefore not subject to regulation by the IPUC.

The commission said it has directed its staff to contact all local water utilities and municipalities in the valley to determine if a standby pump is available for temporary use by Desert View. The staff also will offer its services in an advisory capacity to help the firm solve its service problems.

Three Idahoans drown

Three young girls drowned Friday in separate accidents in the southern part of Idaho.

The water level of the Bear River in Franklin County was being dropped Saturday morning as the search continued for 11-year-old Rhonda Talbot of Fairview. She was walking across the river Friday with three young companions when she was swept downstream.

Divers in Gem County are continuing the search for Anna Cochran, 7, of Wetser, who was swept away in the Black Canyon Canal near Emmett. Anna and her sister were sent to get water while her mother picked cherries in the area, Gem County Chief Deputy Jerry Brock says.

Fires to burn uncontrolled

DENVER (UPI) — The National Park Service said Friday it had decided to adopt a permanent "hands off" policy in dealing with natural forest fires which break out on some of its forest lands.

Under the policy, natural fires — those caused by lightning usually — are allowed to burn themselves out naturally unless they pose a danger to endangered species or humans, or if conditions are extremely dry.

Rupert boy hospitalized

RUPERT — An eight-year-old Rupert boy has been hospitalized with severely burned hands and electrical shocks following an accident at home.

According to Rupert police, Jesse Gotoechea, son of Mrs. Afon Bronson, was injured when he attempted to plug a radio into a 220-volt outlet.

Police said the child's hands were seriously burned in the accident, which occurred Wednesday.

Gotoechea was taken by ambulance to Minidoka Memorial Hospital emergency center and then transferred to the Cassia Memorial Hospital.

The youngster was reported in good condition this morning.

Ruling promised in bias charges

BOISE — Bart Brown, commissioner of the Idaho Department of Labor and Industrial Services, said his department will make recommendations later on the Betty Hoppe charges against the Idaho Department of Employment.

Mrs. Hoppe, Twin Falls, who received favorable ruling from the Idaho Commission for Human Rights in her charges against the department of employment on a sex-discrimination allegation, has also filed action with the department of labor charging violation of the equal pay for equal work provision.

Mrs. Hoppe terminated her job with department of employment in Twin Falls in December, 1973, charging she had no opportunity for advancement or better salary because of sex discrimination. She charged the state agency with advancing male employees ahead of female employees without regard to qualifications and ability.

The Human Rights Commission ruled in her favor and recommended her reinstatement at a grade in salary with payment of back wages from the time of her termination until the present, plus interest. She had held a grade 7 salary scale at the time of her termination.

The commission also found the department of employment had violated the equal pay for equal work regulation.

Brown said his department entered an agreement by stipulation to join the Human Rights Commission as far as hearing information and testimony. He said his department will now review the transcripts of the hearing in which Mrs. Hoppe and the department of employment argued the question.

"We will then come up with some recommendations of our own as to the equal pay for equal work charge," Brown said.

The Human Rights Commission is expected to file an action in district court in Twin Falls against the Department of Employment which has announced it will not accept the commission's recommendation for reinstatement and back pay for Mrs. Hoppe.

Brown said his department will not join in the suit at this time, pending its review of the transcript and preparation of formal recommendations.

Development firm loses Ketchum suit

KETCHUM — The city of Ketchum will not be compelled to issue Greyhawk Development Co. a building permit under present plans to construct a "lodge" at the base of the Warm Springs chair lift.

Fourth Judicial District Judge Ray Durtschi, in making the ruling, said the most recent plans of Greyhawk do not constitute a "resort lodge" within the meaning and intent of the Ketchum zoning ordinance.

Grehawk Development Co. president Paul Schuler has tried unsuccessfully for nearly two years to obtain a building permit to start construction. He has paid the city over $50,000 in sewer hook-up fees but the city has denied him the so-called under his most recent plans.

Originally Schuler presented the city with a resort lodge plan which included a lounge area, coffee shop, dining room and banquet hall. The city gave tentative approval to his concept and asked him to supply final plans.

Schuler presented a different plan in 1975, adding kitchen facilities in each of the living units and eliminating the lounge, dining room and other amenities associated with the city's concept of a resort lodge.

The city contended during court testimony the new plans constitute multi-family dwellings and not a resort lodge as allowed in the A-F (agricultural forest) designation under the ordinance.

Durtschi wrote although the ordinance does not define resort lodge, the term lodge is associated with motels and hotels throughout the ordinance in which no provision is made for cooking in any individual room or suite.

However, Greyhawk is entitled under the ruling to a writ of mandamus, compelling the issuance of a building permit to construct the 718-unit building without kitchen facilities and with related lounge area, bar, dining room and banquet hall.

PUC adjourns rate hearing

BOISE (UPI) — An aide to Gov. Cecil D. Andrus is afraid the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is going to run the health show in Idaho through a private-profit organization.

"The basic thing we're fighting about is public accountability," Joe Nagel, Andrus' adviser on federal programs, says.

"People think we're just talking about health planning, but it's a lot more than that."

The private, non-profit corporation referred to will be known as Health Systems Agency, a body which by law will have veto power over the use of federal dollars coming into Idaho.

Blaine schools lose broken accord suit

HAILEY — A Ketchum woman was awarded $6,808 in Fifth District court here Thursday, resulting from a breach of contract suit with the Blaine County School District.

Nan Vanter, Ketchum, sued the school district in 1974 after being informed by the district she had not returned a teaching contract under the time allowed.

Mrs. Vance had been notified she was to be re-employed for the 1974-75 school year and was delivered a contract on June 5, 1974, according to court testimony.

The school district had asked her to return the contract within five days. Mrs. Vance said she mailed the contract within the five-day limit.

School district officials testified no contract was received in the central district office. A decision was made not to rehire the high school science/math instructor.

Mrs. Vance, upon receiving notice that her position was to be filled with another instructor, filed suit, contending the district had breached her contract.

Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer ruled in favor of Vance and ordered the district to pay her $6,808.

Hightower to trial

BOISE (UPI) — Two psychiatrists said Michael Hightower is legally sane and should stand trial on rape charges.

Drs. Dale D. Cornell and Michael Epstein told Fourth District Court Hightower was mentally ill to face charges for the 1974 rape of a Boise State University student. He has been twice acquitted of the charges on grounds of mental incompetence and is confined at the Department of Health and Welfare's security treatment unit at the Idaho State Penitentiary.

Air Idaho loses intrastate permit

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has terminated the intrastate permit of Air Idaho Inc. for alleged violation of IPUC regulations.

The action was announced Friday in an order issued following hearings before the IPUC. As a result, the airline no longer has authority to fly between Idaho cities including Twin Falls, Boise and Hailey. Without the intrastate permit, the line can fly one stop in Idaho and on to Salt Lake City.

Air Idaho has 20 days in which to appeal for a new hearing or may take the issue to the supreme court.

The IPUC had previously ordered suspension for Air Idaho operations between Idaho cities and the firm applied for lifting of the suspension, but instead, the IPUC, in a split decision, denied the request.

The IPUC stated the airline is no longer fit, willing or able to perform the authorized service of intrastate carrier.

The commission said the company violated IPUC regulations by abandoning flight service to Pocatello and Idaho Falls without authority and transferred majority ownership of the parent company without authority.

A hearing on the issue was held June 30 at which time company officials testified the charges were correct but new ownership could provide acceptable service.

One commission member, M. Karl Shurtliff, dissented on the order. He argued the company's past actions were unacceptable but not sufficiently bad to eliminate its permit to fly in Idaho. He said the company was unaware of the seriousness of its actions at the time.

Murtaugh voters to decide issue

MURTAUGH — Murtaugh voters will decide Tuesday on a $100,000 water and sewage revenue bond proposal.

A simple majority vote is needed to approve the funds which will be used to help construct a water system for the city and assume the mortgages on the present sewage system.

If the revenue bond proposal receives voter approval the funds will be added to a $43,000 Farm Home Administration grant already approved.

Total cost of the joint water and sewage project is estimated at $233,000, according to Mrs. Elva Peterson, city clerk.

Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Peterson home.

Murtaugh has never had a city water system and most residents have individual wells. The proposed new water system will utilize a project now about 80 per cent complete which includes a new pump and water tank, installed in 1972, for the State Starch plant which opened here about a year ago.

Of the $100,000 proposed in revenue bonds, about $27,000 will be used on the water system and the remaining $73,000 will buy the mortgage on the city sewage system installed in 1969. The sewage system currently is leased by the Murtaugh Water and Sewerage Association.

Estimated monthly charge for combined water sewage will be from $15 to $17, according to Gary Marshall of J-U-B Engineers.

Cattle futures move higher behind limit grain strength

 CHICAGO Live cattle futures finished progressively stronger Friday into the back months behind limit strength in feed grains which spooked more aggressive local buying.

Aug. closed above 45¢ but despite a mild loss to 44¢ both live and dressed markets held steady through demand for short-fed beef which had been pulled off in late week.

The rise was strong—final prices finishing just off the highs established on the opening. Volume was Wheat futures closed 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents higher with mixed, commercial trade adding to the hectic close. Actual export demand furnished the impetus with Peru reported taking 2.5 million bush on Thursday's tender. The cash market for wheat presented a more mixed picture, possibly because of recent gains in futures and perhaps because of increased farm selling at the higher prices.

Chicago cash basis 1 cent easier for hardwheat at 60¢ cents under Sept. and 1 cent lower at the same basis and 1 1/2 cents over July for boxcars and 8 cents over for hoppers. Gulf basis steady at 5 cents over Dec. for fall delivery.

Soybeans again started the day with impressive strength. Friday, most of which seemed related to other grains, particularly wheat, and expectations of large overseas sales.

Oil opened on the firm 16 higher side and some opinions that easier cash oil prices exerted pressure on nearby contracts.

Nevertheless, before the end of the day oil assumed some element of leadership in active exporter and processor buying to offset some merchandise, selling and crush spread at ferries.

A factor in product future gains late in the morning was substantial buying by a major commission house which some observers saw as covering by a professional melt following a more varied price pattern than most of the board of trade grains on good solid trade on both sides by commercial and commission houses.

Soybean meal ended the day 27 cents to 51.50 higher for the more active contracts. Soybeans and oil were dominated by limit gains and the spot oil closed 12 1/4 to 17 1/4 points advances at the close.

Chicago cash soybeans 6 1/2 cents lower on basis (landed) to 5 cents over Aug. Gulf basis unchanged at 24 cents over Aug. Cash soybean meal steady at 122.00 for 41 pct. unrestricted.

Gold ownership bonanza fails

© Newhouse News Service
 WASHINGTON—It has been six months now since Americans were allowed to own gold again (other than coins). But if you passed up the opportunity during this period, you didn't miss much.

Your vendor may have made a profit if you had bought them and sold out today. In fact you might be taking a loss.

Gold was selling at around $170 an ounce or a little more in world markets at the start of this year, having slumped sharply from a recent level that was close to $200 an ounce just before the legal barriers fell. Today the price is in the mid-$150's.

Thus the past half-year has vindicated the warnings of American officials who just before gold-owning became legal again predicted that buying would be a bonanza.

Those who did speculate are coming out behind.

What has made the gold price trend south is a combination of factors that usually determine price, supply and demand.

These days, they are in rough balance.

Let's assume that you had $10,000 to invest in the stock market right now and that you could invest it in the stock of any of these companies. Which stock or stocks would you buy?

The people's choice was International Business Machines Corp., which showed up in 10 investors selected for their fantasy portfolio.

IBM also is the perennial leader among stocks favored by the most savvy of investors, the big institutions like bank trust companies and pension funds are high, all of which have mutual, paid investment counselors to guide their buying decisions.

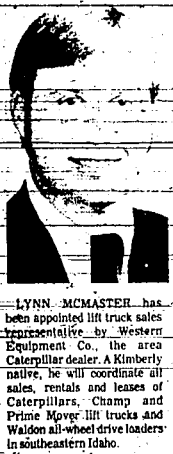

Next on the public's list was U.S. Steel Corp., which like most steel companies is having impressive gains that show booming profits but which is a selling time company with stock to match.

No. 23 is International Telephone & Telegraph Co., favored by nearly one out of four of the investors, and having long empire labors under a sinister reputation from the "Dirt Deal" but the public also is aware that ITT knows how to make money.

The top three choices are IBM, U.S. Steel and ITT, come as somewhat of a surprise since the list of top 20 corporations was composed mostly of auto stocks and oil companies.

'Gate scandals hurt Northrup

Wheels galore

RAILROAD wheels, about 170,000 of them, roll off the production line each year at the Standard Steel plant in Burnham, Pa. The steelmaker has no problems keeping track of inventory because increased freight car production has it running at full capacity. (UPI)

N.Y. Times Service
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Of all the corporations sullied by the Watergate scandals, none has been as wholly dependent on Government contracts as the Northrup Corp., an aerospace company that had about $100 million in revenues from the federal government last year.

Sixteen major corporations, including Northrup, have negotiated guilty pleas with the Watergate Special Prosecutor arising from illegal campaign contributions. But no other firm suffered the ignominy of having the name of its chief executive linked on national television to the collecting of "hush money" payments for Watergate burglars.

Although the company ranks but 226th on the Fortune 500 list, the extent of its involvement with the 1972 election campaign — $15,000 in illegal contributions — was markedly higher than that of much larger firms, such as the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. and the Phillips Petroleum Co.

The Nixon campaign disbursements money was collected by Herbert Kalmbach, the President's lawyer, — were later capped by revelations that showed Northrup to be no newcomer to the political contributions game. The company, it was subsequently discovered, had pumped $1.14 million through an illegal political slush fund since 1961. It was also disclosed that Northrup had failed to keep track of about $30 million in payments to foreign consultants — some of which may have been used for bribes overseas.

It is not yet clear what the long-term effect of the scandal will be on Northrup and its 25,000 employees. The company in recent years has been doing well, and most of the credit for its success has been accorded Thomas V. Jones, Northrup's chairman and chief executive officer — one of the men caught deepest in the mire of illegal campaign contributions.

Northrup, which is a specialist in building small, reliable supersonic aircraft for the armed forces, has survived under Jones a reputation rarely in the aerospace-defense world by coming in "on time, on price" in an area of huge cost overruns. In 1974, Northrup's net income was $18.1 million a 56.2 per cent increase from the 1972 level on sales of $153.3 million in 35 countries. Sales and earnings were also up for the first quarter of 1975.

Even though it lost out last year to the General Dynamics Corp. for the most lucrative Air Force contract in history sales may ultimately reach $13 billion — Northrup early this month beat out the same competitor for a similar $5 billion lightweight Navy plane contract.

Northrup's board of directors has voted to keep Jones on "in the best interest of the company" because of the "significant achievements" the company has made since he became president in 1969.

Nevertheless, Jones's position has been impaired. His control over membership on the board and its committees has been weakened. He must surrender the position of president, although he continues to hold the office of chairman and chief executive, and his relationship with Frank W. Lloyd, senior vice president of operations, has been seriously ruptured.

The company itself has had to plead guilty to federal elections law violations, has settled a shareholder suit on a similar complaint and has entered into a consent decree with the Securities and Exchange Commission arising from its failure to keep adequate records of payments to overseas consultants.

Months after the legal settlements, the reverberations continue. Northrup will be required to pay additional taxes on what were held to be phony business expenses in connection with the slush fund and $80,000 had been spent for a special internal audit.

The company remains under the scrutiny of the S.E.C., the Internal Revenue Service and a Federal judge in Los Angeles. The Washington law firm of Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering is conducting a special internal investigation for the outside directors.

The 1974 annual meeting was canceled three times as a result of the scandal, and a combination of 1974-75 meeting probably won't be held until early fall.

The personal fallout has been heavy. The Northrup's principal outside lawyer, Richard C. Hays, and O'Meara & Mayers, left the board of directors as a result of his possible involvement in the scandal. It is alleged that Bergen participated in falsifying documents, Hays denies this.

Jones and James Allen, a company vice president actively involved in the scandal, both pleaded guilty to violating the Federal Elections Campaign Act; formerly the Federal Corrupt Practices Act, and were fined. Allen, who once worked with William O. Douglas in the crusading S.E.C. of the nineteen thirties, was praised by Justice Douglas in his 1973 autobiography, "Go East, Young Man." But Allen wonders, he has told acquaintances, "what Justice Douglas thinks of me now."

Two other top officers, Lloyd and corporate treasurer James D. Willson, were enlisted in the attempt to cover up campaign contributions. Both men were deceived by Jones, both lost $21,650 of their own money and both came close to being indicted.

Jones himself, his reputation damaged, had to resign directorships in the Wells Fargo Bank, the United States Steel Corp., the Times Mirror Co. and Stanford University.

Bankers cite payment lag

N. Y. Times Service
LOS ANGELES — Mortgage bankers say that monthly payment delinquency rates on home mortgages are climbing in many parts of the country as a byproduct of the nation's worst recession in more than 25 years.

But they say there has not been any significant increase yet in the number of mortgage foreclosures.

An estimated 325,000 American families are now at least two months behind on their monthly house payments, bringing them close to the 90-day delinquency threshold that many lenders in the past regarded as a decision point before starting foreclosure proceedings.

Most specialists in home financing expect the number of home owners seriously in arrears on their payments to continue rising, for perhaps another year because of the national economy's outlook for continued high unemployment.

However, this is a recession, so far, without legions of Simon Legrees pounding on the doors of jobless Americans, foreclosing on overdue mortgages.

Despite the poor economic outlook, the vast majority of Americans who have realized the dream of owning their own home and have now lost their jobs, appear likely to hold on to the dream because of various assistance programs and leniency by lenders, according to the banking specialists.

Although the number of home foreclosures is expected to increase somewhat this year, and some companies will be forced to sell their homes, mortgage banking experts say that most unemployed home owners should fend off foreclosure through the use of savings, or government and unemployment benefits not available to the thousands of families who lost their homes during the Great Depression of the 1930's.

A House-Senate Conference Committee has approved a bill that would provide out-of-work homeowners with Federal loans of up to $250 monthly for two years to help them meet their house payments. However, White House officials have indicated that President Ford will veto the legislation, an omnibus housing bill that includes extensive Federal mortgage subsidies, and other improvements that the administration has called inflationary.

According to lending officers checked at major banks and home loan institutions in 10 cities last week, most lenders are being lenient with out-of-work, late-paying workers, and are working out programs to delay, or stretch out payments in the expectation that they will have a paycheck again within a few months.

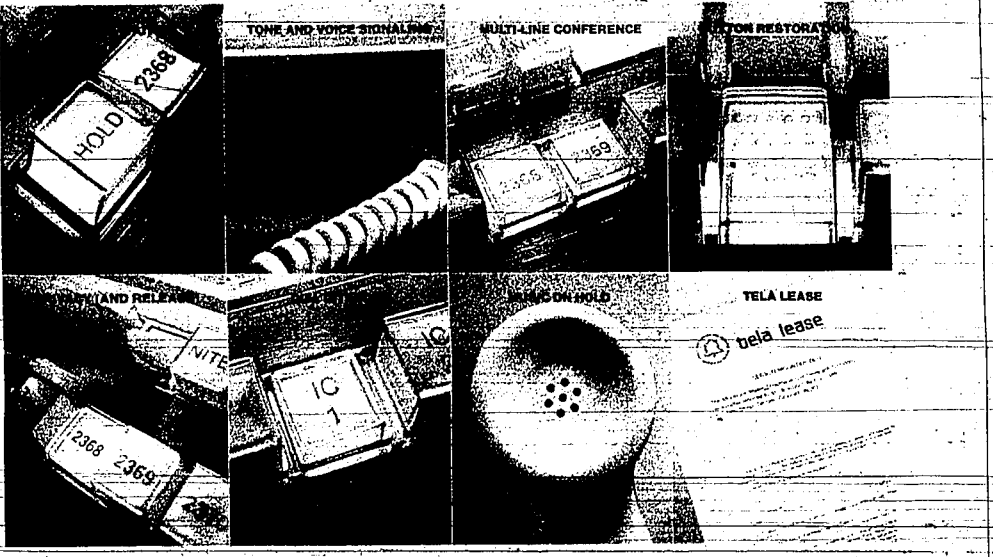

"I think most of the lenders are doing everything they can to avoid foreclosure, by granting them forbearance and counseling them," Robert Miller, an official of the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development in Southern California, said.

"We're trying to help people hold on to what they have," said Henry Mangon, an executive of United States Bancorp in Portland, Ore. "If there's any basis for the delinquency — such as sickness or unemployment — we'll stretch it out and work out ways so they can make payments up to six months of late payments have been tolerated in some cases, he said.

Nationally, the number of homeowners in arrears on their monthly payments began to creep up noticeably during the last three months of 1974, generally mirroring the deepening slump of the national economy. On Dec. 31, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America estimated that 1.33 per cent of home loans were at least 60 days in arrears. Preliminary estimates in this category probably approached 1.4 per cent during the early months of this year.

"We expect the number of long-term delinquencies (those over 90 days) to rise gradually through 1975, but the amount of the rise would be small," John Wetmore, an economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association, said.

How long will the pattern continue? Judging from past economic cycles, Wetmore and other economists said the level of delinquencies in foreclosures is likely to continue rising for three to six months after the current recession ends, as fiscal after-effects of the personal problems suffered by Americans during the downturn are still being felt.

If your phone system isn't working for you, it's working against you.

Nobody will argue the fact that a phone system is one of the most essential tools of a well-run business.

However, there are times when a company will mature to the point where it outgrows its original phone system.

It is for this reason that we introduce a totally new kind of communications system called Com Key.

What Com Key can do is sheer genius. It has a dial intercom that lets you call anyone in your office without going through the receptionist.

It provides a multi-line conference feature which allows you to set up conference calls with as many as five other people.

What's more we gave our new phone system tone and voice signaling. Which means someone trying to get you on the intercom can signal you with a special tone and speak to you directly, even when you're talking on another line.

We gave it button restoration so you won't accidentally interrupt someone else's call.

And it has a privacy device which automatically prevents other people from listening to your conversations.

In addition to all these standard features we also gave Com Key some optional ones. Like a special red button which lights up on your phone to let you know the receptionist has a message waiting for you. A paging system that allows you to speak to the whole office, if you'd like. And there's even music on hold, which is a little more pleasant way of letting people wait to speak to you.

But no matter how well we've made Com Key, it wouldn't be good enough unless we provided you with a practical way to pay for it. So in addition to our conventional month to month plan we've also come up with a payment plan called TELA Lease.

Basically what it means is that if you lease Com Key and agree to keep it for three, five or seven years, you can avoid tying up a lot of capital in installation charges. And after the initial payment period, your monthly cost will be significantly less than that of a business which obtains the same equipment on the month to month basis.

For a demonstration of Com Key call our new toll-free business number—1-800-332-2323.

It may be the last call you'll ever want to make on your present phone system.

Com Key from Mountain Bell.

Exxon contributions in Italy cited

WASHINGTON — The Exxon Corp. made from $6 million to $10 million in political contributions in Italy over a nine-year period, including approximately $60,000 to the Italian Communist party. The corporation's Italian subsidiary, Esso Italiana, authorized its affiliate, Esso Italiana, to contribute $27 million to Italian political parties from 1967 to 1972. It said that the other $10 million to $22 million had been made by an Exxon Italian employee on his own authority.

Relations subcommittee on multinational corporations last Thursday, an Exxon executive, Archie L. Monroe, is reported to have said that the contribution had been intended for the Communists. The open question is whether it was in fact delivered by Esso Italiana employees, or intermediaries. Asked why Exxon had authorized the contributions, Monroe answered, according to a company spokesman, "to further democracy." Asked why the company had not marked the contribution to the Communists, he said, "I don't know."

The Italian Communist party sought to win votes in an election last month by focusing on charges concerning power-sharing agreements with American companies in the Italian parties. The Communist improved their position in the election. A major issue the Senate subcommittee plans to explore in hearings next week is whether payments by both Exxon and Mobil Oil Corp. in Italy were in reality, as well as in form, political contributions, or whether they were payments for specific legislative benefits accorded the companies. Another issue, the subcommittee plans to look into is whether the payments were legal under Italian law. People in Italy familiar with the oil industry there, including Italian officials and American diplomatic personnel, are understood to have told the subcommittee staff that not only Exxon but virtually all foreign companies doing business in Italy make political contributions. Exxon disclosed at a shareholders' meeting in May that it had made contributions to political parties in Canada and Italy but refused to divulge the amounts involved. How much had been spent on Canadian politics, J. K.

Janulson, chairman of Exxon, said, "I don't think we want to give that information." The Securities and Exchange Commission has taken the position that its disclosure rules require that companies making political contributions abroad report them in documents filed with the commission and in proxy solicitations, whether or not the contributions are legal in the recipient country. There appears to be a dispute concerning the Italian law. Richard E. Kersey, an Exxon lawyer, is understood to have argued that the payments in Italy were legal. Mobil has also said that it had made what it characterized as legal contributions in Italy and Canada.

Gold Oil Corp. admitted in May that it had made $5 million in illegal political contributions in foreign countries, mostly in South Korea.

Trial to open on ice pick killing

RALEIGH, N.C. — A white laborer was found dead in the cell of a jail, a woman prosecutor in a small eastern North Carolina town last summer, and in one dispute that she killed him.

But what happened before Miss Little was charged with 11 times with an ice pick in her hand, the cell for a Wake County Superior Court jury to decide. She goes on trial Monday on a charge of first degree murder. Miss Little, who filed the Washington, N.C. jail after the Aug. 27, 1974, attack but was charged with first degree murder after the 49-year-old Alligood and a 52-year-old father of six, died defense because he tried to rape her. Prosecutors say Miss Little stole an ice pick out of her dresser when Alligood asked her to use the telephone in a room after the two had sex. She might and she threw it at her head to kill him so she could escape. Miss Little, free on $115,000 bond, has traveled around the country, seeking support and raising funds for her defense. Because of her sex and prison conditions are involved in Miss Little's case, civil rights groups' rights and prison reform groups all see the case as a symbol around which they can rally. "It will be a long and it will be a hard trial," said defense attorney Jerry Paul of Durham who succeeded in having the trial moved to Raleigh from the rural eastern North Carolina town where the killing occurred. He said he will call to wit- nesses, including Miss Little, during the estimated four to six week trial. Paul added that from five to eight expert witnesses will also take the stand to give a psychological profile of a rapist and his victim.

Miss Little could be sentenced to die in the gas chamber if a jury finds her guilty of first degree murder. But the jury also has the chance of finding her guilty of second degree murder or manslaughter. If the panel agrees she killed Alligood in self defense, she will be found innocent. Private attorney John Wilkinson, retained by the Alligood family to assist District Attorney William C. Griffin in the prosecution, believes the case can get a first degree murder conviction. "If all our evidence is to go as we expect it to, we would have enough evidence to make out a first degree murder

Toronto girl, 15, swims Lake Ontario

TORONTO, (UPI) — A 15-year-old Canadian girl swam more than 14 hours in the water, appeared almost certain Saturday to become the youngest swimmer ever to complete a round-trip Lake Ontario. At about 6 p.m. E.D.T. Monday, Angela Koudlik, was only 6 miles off the Toronto shoreline and pushing steadily closer in the frigid water. A flotilla of small craft sailed out to greet her and court her.

A wave swimmer accompanied the 2-foot 2-inch, 120-pound, schoolgirl, reported by radio. "She's kidding about and she is in great spirits. I just know she's going to make it."

The girl started the 22-mile Lake Ontario swim on Friday night. She had intended to leave on her marathon swim from the U.S. Coast Guard base here, but Coast Guard officials refused her permission to leave from the base itself. A Coast Guard spokesman said the Coast Guard was in no way involved in the attempt by the girl to conquer the lake. "We have nothing to do with it," the spokesman said. "It's a nice night and we will watch with interest but we're not participating in it as such."

Angela, who said she was inspired by the hit recording "I Am Woman" and other pop songs, was accompanied on her voyage by an inflatable dinghy carrying two pacers.

Hathaway shuns own advisers

© 1975 N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — In his first important decision in the conflict between energy development and environmental protection in the West, Interior Secretary Stanley K. Hathaway has quietly overruled a group of advisers and ordered the preparation in final form of a controversial environmental impact statement that seeks to justify the massive leasing of more federally owned coal deposits under the Western prairie.

The so-called "coal leasing programmatic impact statement," which is regarded as "still defective" by a number of Interior Department officials, stirred a storm of criticism when it was first issued in draft form for public comment in May 1974.

Hathaway's choices, now that the statement is reported to have been "revised and improved," were either to re-issue it as revised draft for a second round of comment, a process that would delay again its publication as a final impact review — or to proceed quickly to publication in final form. He is said to have chosen the latter.

A final environmental impact statement is required under NEPA, the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, before the Interior Department may resume the issuance of coal leases to private mining interests in the West.

Some 16 billion tons of federally owned Western coal has already been leased, but energy corporations have been clamoring for more through the lifting of an Interior Department leasing moratorium imposed in 1973 pending completion of the impact study.

The new secretary's of- ficially "tentative" decision to "go final" reportedly was reached on July 7 at the end of his third week in office. Unofficially, the decision was described by several Interior officials who are dismayed by it, as "firm — he's going to do it."

The politically sensitive decision has still not been generally announced.

But Jack O. Horton, assistant secretary for land and water, said in a telephone interview Friday that "the tentative decision is to 'go final' on the disputed environmental impact statement."

He thus confirmed the persistent reports in the department during the week that Hathaway had decided to proceed with publication of the revised coal leasing impact statement even though a number of Interior officials regard it as "irretrievably bad" and subject to an almost certain challenge in the courts.

One or more of the environmental groups whose operations to Hathaway's Interior appointment delayed his Senate confirmation to the cabinet post for 43 days last spring is expected to sue the secretary.

Katherine Fletcher, a spokesman for the Environmental Defense Fund, reached by telephone at the group's Denver office, said, "We have as much as told them of Interior that we would sue if they did this, and we will."

Comments on the original 1974 draft of the local leasing statement were uniformly critical. They came from the government's own Environmental Protection Agency as well as from private environmental and Western ranchers' groups.

critique — a 245-page booklet prepared by a group of consultants for the Institute of Ecology here — the 1974 draft was described as "echoing the sentiments of the coal industry" and otherwise falling almost wholly to justify the leasing of additional federal coal reserves.

Studying for their badges
THE MAIN part of scouting is having fun, but there is also some time spent toward studying the material for merit badges. Steven Child, (l) and Brett Glittin, both of Rupert, grab some study time.

Scouts' annual camp

STANLEY — Since the mid-60s the Snake River Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America has been assembling at Camp Bradley on the Capethorn Scout Reservation.

They gather 18 miles north of Stanley to share the learning, leadership and fun times that go with a boy being at a summer camp.

This year's program has been changed to draw attention toward the bicentennial. All the campsites and dining hall have been named after the 13 original colonies.

The 150 participants at the camp this year are offered most of the merit badges that are the goal of the scouts. The badges are received after the boys complete testing in the areas they are interested in. Badges in hiking, camping, aquatics, riflery and most skill awards can be achieved at camp.

The scouts have fun at camp as well as earn badges. One scout said he had been to summer camp for the last three years and was coming back next year.

"It's basic, but having fun at camp is the main reason the kids are here," said Rex Johnston, district scouting executive from the Twin Falls area. "It's also a learning situation."

"Scouting is rank advancement. It helps the boy grow both mentally and physically," said Johnston.

The scouting program is much like school. "We go about it in a different way than a school does. We teach leadership and how to get along with each other," said Johnston.

"Schools do everything in a classroom, we use the outdoors for our class room. The grades are our advancement," said Johnston.

"Kids today are a different breed of cat. They want to be informed and they aren't afraid to ask questions," said Johnston.

The scouts can earn a merit badge for going on the 50-mile hike that is offered. There are two of these trails, the White Cloud and the Sawtooth. The trails covered in a five-day period are maintained by the scouts in the form of conservation service projects. These projects range from trail maintenance to picking up garbage.

Conservation is not limited to the camp. The scouts are taken to different mining ghost towns like Custer and Bonanza. "We have available different agencies that help in the instruction," said Johnston.

The U.S. Forest Service, soil and water conservationists, Idaho Fish and Game Commission, weather people and Bureau of Land Management personnel are all available to the scouts.

Besides the conservation trips the scouts also rock Stanley Lake with legal-size trout.

Like all other institutions the scouting program is having its problems with inflation. According to Johnston the food cost has jumped 27 per cent from last year while the camp fee has risen about 10 per cent or 14.

Whenever kids get together there is bound to be a barrage of spooky stories and legends, piercing the ears of the young and impressionable kids.

Spooky stories are tops on the list to scare the newest kids at camp.

One legend that crops up at camp Bradley in the wee hours of the morning is the one about the "swamp turtle."

According to this myth any scout that has a boat on the second lake after 9 p.m. will be doomed. A huge turtle will rise from the depths and swamp the boat, dragging its captive to the bottom of the lake. There the creature releases the boy unharmed.

Another legend is about the old trading post. It seems that a man was beheaded there many moons ago and the head rolled down the hill, coming to rest in the lobby where it formed a large pool of blood.

The outcome: the floor requires a repainting every year to cover the red stain that reappears like clockwork.

In spite of that legend the kids still flock to the trading post for the irresistible grabber of youth, Candy.

Farmers fear $$ pinch

By ANTHONY CAMPBELL
Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — With most of the nation's farmland looking as beautiful as pictures in a seed catalog, many farmers are beginning to fear a financial pinch this fall.

It seems certain that with continued good weather the bumper crops now predicted by the government will be more than enough to cap spiralling food prices.

And while that should please consumers, it bothers grain farmers. They're worried that unless a big export demand develops "they will be left holding millions of bushels of surplus grain, which they won't even be able to unload at break-even prices."

Wheat farmers, especially, are keeping their fingers crossed, hoping that the reported talks between the Soviet Union and U. S. grain companies will result in hefty exports.

In its first crop report of the year, the Department of Agriculture — Thursday estimated the nation's total wheat crop at a record 2.19 billion bushels, up 22 per cent over last year. With only about 800 million bushels needed for domestic use, farmers risk severely depressed prices if they can't find foreign buyers for the remainder.

The department's "Crop Reporting Board" estimated 1975 corn production based on July 1 surveys at 6.05 billion bushels; up 30 per cent from last year's harvest that was shriveled — by floods — drought and early frosts.

Although that would be 7 per cent more than the previous record corn harvest, a number of agricultural experts called the prediction too low and said it probably will be increased to 8.2 billion tons or more in later surveys.

As a result, while they see a possible jump in corn futures prices over the short haul, they argue that it will be short-lived and that prices may tumble to as low as $2.20 a bushel at harvest time, compared with $3.50 a bushel last fall when corn was scarce.

An indication of the seriousness of the farmers' plight is reflected in plummeting net farm income, the best group of how-farm-families are doing. Last year fell 10.16 per cent to $22.8 billion after reaching a record $32 billion in 1973. And this year, even with better than expected grain markets — it appears headed down to around $20 billion.

Farmers who have to cope with the same inflationary pressures as the rest of us, this means taking a one-third cut in pay in two years.

As for food prices, the Agriculture Department still is sticking with its earlier prediction of a 6 to 8 per cent increase for all of 1975. This may be a big jump compared with the tiny advances of the late 1960s and early 1970s, but it should be welcome relief for 14 per cent of wages of the last two years.

But Paarlberg warns that huge crops might even mean a temporary rise in meat prices if cattle and hog farmers take advantage of low feed grain prices and hold steers in feedlots longer and keep sows for breeding rather than sending them to market.

And Illinois Farm Bureau president Harold B. Steel suggested that if grain farmers do not plant less next year, a move that could tighten grain supplies and send food prices higher in the future.

Nevertheless, Paarlberg and others hold out hope that there is a demand might "take some of the pressure off farmers."

Grain price advanced sharply on the Chicago Board of Trade, the world's biggest Commodity Exchange, early this week when rumors of Russian buying plans surfaced. And trading was hectic Thursday after Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) confirmed

Sugar groups to urge price bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spokesmen for many American sugar producer groups will urge Congress next week to consider legislation stabilizing sugar supplies and prices, an industry source predicts.

But House Agriculture Committee hearings which open July 14 also will produce opposition to any revival of government intervention in the sugar market.

Agriculture Department officials indicate their basic policy remains against control of the federal sugar control program which Congress allowed to expire at the end of 1974. Rep. Peter A. Peyser, R-N.Y., a leading figure in last year's surprise House vote to

Soviets consume grain reserves

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has been eating into its grain reserves for the last year in hopes that a good crop this summer could replenish stocks, but now drought has unexpectedly ruined prospects for a near-record crop and forced Moscow to eat almost all of its grain reserves.

Until recent both Soviet and foreign experts had been predicting production this year of some 215 million metric tons of food grains. This would have met the Kremlin's target, except only to 1974's record of 222 million tons and up substantially from last year's 156 million.

It would also have finished the current five-year Soviet economic plan at slightly above the planned average annual yield of 175 million tons of grain, and brought in a successful conclusion a decade in which Soviet gross agricultural production has risen about 45 per cent — the fastest growth in the world.

But the weather has not cooperated in the last few months. This year's crop of wheat, rye, barley, corn and other grains is now predicted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be no more than 140 million tons.

The warm, sunny weather that made fields so good for the winter wheat crop planted last autumn and harvested by early summer has turned into hot, dry weather for the spring wheat crop. The ground has been dry during the planting of spring wheat in the last few months and has become drier since.

It rains fall to develop soon in the spring wheat areas from the lower Volga river east-

Ram sale planned

FILER — The Idaho Wool Growers Association and 45 purebred breeders will offer 600 rams for the 54th Annual Ram Sale scheduled at Twin Falls Fairgrounds Aug. 2 at 9:45 a.m.

According to Lew Williams, secretary and manager of the sale, the rams are in most cases the first pick from the breeders' flocks.

Performance tested rams will again be sold this year. Five hundred of the rams are of Suffolk breed and the other 100 are Suffolk Hampshire crosses, Hampshires, Flemish and Panama. A few Columbia and one Dorset will also be in the sale.

The sale is under the management of the Idaho Wool Growers Association Ram Sale Committee. The officers include Fred Laidlaw, Carey T. Burton, Cambridge; Dennis Burks, Rupert; and Carl E. Nicholson, Boise.

Assisting the committee is D. Mankin, state livestock specialist of the University of Idaho Agriculture Extension Service.

The winner's auxiliary will serve lunch at noon. Phil Souther, president of the Idaho Wool Growers, has called for the mid-summer meeting of the officers and directors of the association. This meeting will be held at the fairgrounds following the completion of the ram sale.

Molitor leads state amateur by one shot

sports

BURLEY — Dave Molitor of Boise, last year's runner-up, will carry a one-stroke lead into the finals of the state amateur golf tournament Sunday.

Molitor, who carded a fine five-under par 66 Saturday, leads a tightly packed and talented field, setting up what should be a great finishing day at the Burley municipal golf course.

That carried him past first-day leader, 18-year-old Kevin Packard, of Twin Falls, who had a roller-coaster day. But also moving ahead of Packard were Scott Massingill of Payette, who finished at 139, and Jeff Thomsen, a former champion from Twin Falls, who had a 72 for 140.

While Molitor and Massingill played steadily throughout the day, Packard and Thomsen had their ups and downs. Packard had most of them.

and these overlooked fish can be excellent eating if properly prepared. I took my boy out near Bliss Dam last week and we arrowed 20 carp and suckers ranging from 2 to 17 pounds. The highlight came when I hit a 17-pounder a little far back and he almost pulled me into the reservoir before my son came to the rescue and jumped on the fish's back. This was his first experience bow-fishing and he is now an avid convert.

Some other tips include: watch for turning swirls near the shoreline. If carp are feeding on mats of aquatic vegetation, it is easier to approach them because the vegetation is hampered by the plants. These fish are extremely wary and any shadow or movement above the water spooks them. Do not wear light colored clothing since they spot this easier and tread lightly when approaching the water because of their sensitivity to vibrations. The arrow should be aimed under the fish since it will deflect upward as it enters the water.

Hagerman valley goose population grows with transplanted honkers

From all angles

By Larry Hovey

The late, wet and cold spring didn't have a lot of effect on Magic Valley's upland bird population.

The problems still are there, only a couple-three weeks late.

There was hope that the late spring and corresponding lateness in the first cutting of hay in this area would benefit the pheasant crop, which was at a low ebb last year.

But the pheasants didn't work by the calendar any more than the slow growth of the alfalfa. The result is the same as before—the first cutting shredding attempts at nesting.

In fact, there is a sign, according to local farmers, that the lateness has caused the hens to become more resolute in their nesting efforts. And more of the brood stock is being killed than usual as the hens refuse to leave the nest and/or feedly born chicks.

Pheasants take to the best looking—and usually earliest—cover available to set up housekeeping. In this country it usually means hay. More and more so with the clean farming, ditchback growth reduction hereabouts.

Both the alfalfa and pheasants reach fruition at the same time and the balers get more birds than the large arms of tractors hunters.

One area man working daily in hayfields reports "I must see about a hundred broken pheasant nests a day."

The lateness also apparently has the hens aware that a nesting effort would be hazardous at best due to the earlier approach of fall.

There are they seem to be sitting tighter.

No one well acquainted with the situation holds out much hope for a continued high population of pheasants that this area once enjoyed. Perhaps a pretty good year once in a while, the overall a dwindling that will correspond to the removal of habitat.

On the other hand, Bob Autenroth of the Idaho Fish and Game Department believes it could have been a pretty good year for sage grouse.

He cites the wetness of the spring, which produces good forbes and succulent greens and a good crop of protein providing insects for the grouse chicks to eat and, hopefully, thrive upon.

Still that brood population was down, too, and Autenroth doesn't have sufficient field workmen yet to make any solid estimates along those lines.

He did conduct a predator project this spring in the Richfield canal country. He used pheasant eggs from the Jerome bird farm for the experiment of placing sage grouse-looking nests around the landscape.

Each of these nests was marked by a colored streamer within a few feet or yards of the trial nests. He was appalled to find no per cent destruction the first three days—just about all of it by seven.

He set out several more nests, but didn't mark them with the streamers. Predation dropped to about 20 per cent, indicating the crows knew as well as him what those streamers were for.

A couple of days later—and after a couple of menses—he managed to trap three crows in the area, all at nest sites. When he set out new nests predation fell again. That indicates one crow will eat a lot of omelets.

Some predation was noted by small mammals but his cursory project indicated that crows are the biggest problem. He plans other experiments for next protection along these lines but right now he's pretty busy with deer and antelope mortality studies in the South Hills and Palmspring country.

On another front, the department is moving that pleased with its project of introducing fresh water shrimp into Idaho's cold, deep and largely sterile mountain lakes.

The department imported the small shrimp, which provide a protein base and growth rate similar to those of another species in Richfield canal.

This was brought out this spring when world records for kokanee were broken three times in six days at Priest Lake.

Stu Murrell, regional conservation communicator, noted the shrimp have taken hold best in Priest Lake. The department recently made a sweep along the surface of this pond with a fine mesh seine at night when they come to the surface to feed, and took over a half-million.

These were placed in Pend Orielle and Cour d'Alene lakes. Reason to expect success there is obvious and from that point on the department will be growing the shrimp for other areas.

Murrell cites Redfish, Alturas and similar lakes in this area as prime contenders for future plantings as an excess becomes available.

Trouble with those lakes now is they are cold and don't offer much in the way of a menu for fish—both factors contributing to slow growth rate.

HAGERMAN Efforts to introduce a large, hantable Canada Goose population in the Hagerman Valley are underway.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has placed 50 geese, collected from all points of southern Idaho, into the old "goose pond" in the Hagerman refuge.

The geese range from eggs and orphans taken of western Idaho nesting areas to excess from a city park in Idaho Falls.

Some of the birds have been pinnated—meaning one wing has been severed—at the "wrist" and are permanently grounded. But the large majority only have had their flight feathers clipped and will be airworthy immediately after the first moult.

The project isn't the first for an Hagerman refuge, indicated by the pond already having the "goose" tag hung on it.

Biologists believe that the current effort also could result in a "constant dwindling" of resident birds unless it is dovetailed with another project that should come to pass.

Geese like the wide open spaces where they can see for several hundred feet in all directions. They also are grazers and seemingly prefer to meander around grasslands more than sitting around in water.

They dislike constant contact with humans. In close proximity—and the old "goose pond" offers relief from none of these.

At the same time the department is working on details to meet with HEW water pollution requirements. This basically means a settling pond to separate effluent from the trout raceway water before it runs into the Snake River.

There is a spot on the refuge that scientists meet the requirements for both of these projects. That spot is the hayfield that separates the raceways from the Frank Oster lakes.

The land lies low in the middle and there seemingly is sufficient open space around a proposed pond to satisfy the geese isolation preference or at least their desire to see a long way in all directions.

The original goose planting three years ago had some early success since geese seem to prefer returning to the site from whence they issued.

Continued harassment during all parts of the year by hunters, fishermen and sightseers, caused the population to drop each year until this spring when the department felt there was only one nesting pair on the refuge.

The increase will not be immediately noticeable since this is basically a young flock. Geese generally don't get down to the matter of reproducing until their third year.

They spend the first growing and will choose a mate in the second year. But the juveniles don't go into housekeeping.

If everything would go well, biologists believe the flock could grow into a herd of possibly 1,500 within 10 years. At least that type of success has been registered in similar projects conducted and documented in other states.

There will of course be some level—and error—regulation adjustments. Currently, the department wonders if the early Oster lake fishing opening of March 1 mightn't have to be held off for about a month although it has been quite popular with area anglers.

Another is a certainty. The "firing line" that perimeter in which hunting is allowed on the refuge will be moved back from the "goose pond."

This also is a safety factor in that hunters currently are bouncing pellets off private homes in the area.

At the same time, the department is trying to attract geese into the area through a large nest platform building program.

The J. R. Simplot Company plant at Hagerman provided sufficient funding for 30 platforms, which were built by employees after working hours, this spring. Estimated cost is about $10 per cup.

All these platforms will go on nesting sites on Snake River east of the Rupert-Burley area.

At the same time Dick Cook of Twin Falls headed up a committee which met for materials and Scarrow Building of Jerome has agreed to build the platforms free of charge and probably throw in a similar number.

That should range from 20 to 30 platforms and these will be spread along the track from the Bliss area to C. J. Strike reservoir.

The department emphasizes that all these platforms will be placed in proven, preferred goose nesting areas. These were documented during this spring's nest censusing.

(That censusing, incidentally, turned up a record 68 nests in the proposed platform-placing area from Bliss to C. J. Strike.)

The department plans to budget another $1000 or so for similar platforms on Hagerman refuge, hopefully becoming another reason for the transplanted flock to use the area.

Ward's Glass and Red's Trading Post undefeated

Ward's Glass and Awining of Jerome and Red's Trading Post of Twin Falls gained the semi-finals of the Twin Falls women's slopitch invitational tournament Saturday.

The undefeated clubs will play at 1:17 p.m. Sunday at Harmon Park with the winner advancing to 7:15 p.m. finals and awaiting a challenger from the loser's bracket. That will leave 8:30 for an extra session if necessary.

Red's bombed Turf Club 13-2 in the quarterfinals-Saturday night. After, Ward's had thumped American Waterbed 11-4.

Earlier in the day, Waterbed beat Ditchwitch and the Twin Falls Merchants defeated Magic Carpet Travels. Ward's earlier had defeated the Merchants and Red's outlasted arch rival Walt's Tavern 7-6.

Turf Club beat Sell and Company in the first round. Later in the losers' bracket, the Merchants ousted Ditchwitch and Maggie Carpet while Walt's was handling Swift 14-1.

Walk in the Sun collects Lassie Stakes

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Unheralded Walk in the Sun justified the faith of her owners Saturday by racing to a surprise victory in the 21st running of the $104,775 Lassie Stakes for the 2-year-old filly champion of the Hollywood Park meeting.

Per Label to win by 1 1/2 lengths as Doc Shah's Siren finished third and Windy Welcome fourth in the field of 10. Favored Roman Chimes finished next to last in the disappointment of his backers in the crowd of 35,000.

Walk in the Sun raced the six furlongs in 1:10.25 and returned $22.40, $12.40 and $9.20. Per Label paid $7.40 and

$6.40 and Doc Shah's Siren paid $9.40. The winner was made a supplementary nominee at a cost of $5,000 by her owners, the partnership of Matsumoto and Soriano, despite her six-place finish in the Cinderella Stakes. She previously had won the Cygnets Stakes and finished second in the Junior League Stakes. Roman Chimes was installed the 2-5 favorite and showed brief early speed for jockey Bill Shoemaker, but faded badly on the turn. Jockey Olivares had Walk in the Sun in third position a few strides out of the gate and she moved to the front before the field hit the turn.

UCLA stars to head cage clinics

Former UCLA basketball stars, including NBA rookie of the year Keith Wilkes, will participate in cage clinics in Magic Valley this month. Wilkes and Sven Water, former UCLA players, and Gary Cunningham, UCLA top assistant coach, will instruct during a clinic at Gooding High School July 21 through 23.

Each will spend one day at the camp while the other two days of fundamentals will be provided by Gooding Coach Jay Durfee, Wendell Coach Yogi Behrens and Camas County mentor Al Glanders.

Similar one-week sessions will be provided at Wood River High School, under Coaches Bill Bowman and Capital's Charles Henry, and Minnie High School with Coach Gerald Mayes and Ron Pease.

Persons interested may contact the coaches involved in the various clinics.

Hairston says LA back as contender

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — What a difference a trade makes. Harold Hairston says he can be called Happy Hairston again next season. He feels like a man with a new lease on life.

"We got the best player in basketball on our side now," said the Los Angeles Lakers' talented rebounder forward. "It's a very exciting feeling to know that we're a contender, again. I definitely feel we can go all the way with him."

He was referring, of course, to the Lakers' acquisition of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar from the Milwaukee Bucks last month. At 33, Hairston has spent 11 seasons in the National Basketball Association. His 11th, he admitted, was an excruciatingly painful experience.

When champions in 1972 when they won a record 63 games and 33 straight, the Lakers plummeted to the bottom with 32 losses in 82 starts, the second worst record in the NBA.

"When you're going bad, you're a bum to the fans," the 6-foot-7 veteran acknowledged. "They cheer you when you're going good and they boo you when you're going bad."

"But that's basketball. The fans pay their money and they have a right to express themselves." In Abdul-Jabbar, Hairston thinks Lakers owner Jack Kent Cooke acquired the best player in pro basketball. "I played with three of the best in Wilt Chamberlain, Jerry West and Elgin Baylor so that's some basis for comparison. There's no question. Kareem is the greatest playing right now,

Baseball trivia expert? Just try these

CINCINNATI (UPI) — If you think you're up on baseball trivia, check some of these dandies:

(1) Who was the first player ever picked in baseball's free agent draft?

(2) Name the only three players to play in the 1908, '06, '05 and '08.

(3) Who was the only pitcher to throw a no-hitter and hit two home runs in the same game?

(4) Bob Rathgeber, a Cincinnati Reds publicist, man, is the unofficial "baseball trivia king" around here and as such is in charge of the popular "Scoreboard Stumper" feature at Riverfront Stadium in the middle of each Reds home game, the computerized scoreboard flashes a trivia question connected by Rathgeber.

After a lot of foreheads are wrinkled in the stands, the answer follows a few minutes later.

Rathgeber tries to be tricky. "I like to pick questions that seem to have easy answers," he says. "The fans figure, 'oh, yeah, that's easy, why that's so and so.'"

"But then he gets to thinking about it, realizes his answer might be a little too obvious and starts straining his brain."

You might figure Rathgeber starts his search for questions in the record book. Not so.

That's where he finishes up. "The question usually comes off the top of my head," he explains. "There might be something in the sports news that day that starts me thinking about a record. Some visiting ball player may get me interested in something unique."

Only after formulating his question does Rathgeber check it out in the baseball record book and other publications to be sure of his answer.

Reds players tell Rathgeber they usually can find someone among them who knows the answer, but Rathgeber says the hardest person to stump is veteran Reds public address announcer Paul Sommerkamp.

Reds' radio network announcer Marty Breannan and line Surchal usually ponder the latest question on the air and they regularly accuse each other of trying to sneak a hint from Rathgeber before the game.

Nuxhall, a former Reds pitcher, has sometimes been the answer to the question.

United Press International asked Rathgeber to recall some of his best stumpers and along with the three mentioned above, here they are:

(1) Who was the only pitcher who pitched a no-hitter and hit two home runs in the same game?

(2) Who was the only pitcher to throw a no-hitter and hit two home runs in the same game?

(3) Who was the only pitcher to throw a no-hitter and hit two home runs in the same game?

Gavitt believes it's time NBA paid something on farm system

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Dave Gavitt, coach of this year's intercontinental cup team, says professional basketball has enjoyed a "free" farm system for years and time has come for the two leagues to pay their dues.

Moreover, the Providence college head coach thinks the NBA is State funded in the Association and American Basketball Association will be receptive to the idea of a paid farm system.

"We are always scraping and searching for money, unlike other sports where sports is state funded in the Community, like it's almost a job," he said.

Gavitt began rigorous workouts this week for the 12 member cup team to the Olympic squad with an eight, Europe and the summer in Europe and the U.S. against national teams Greece, Italy, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia in the Athens cup begins July 26 in Athens.

Last month's player selection camp in Salt Lake City brought out some of the advantages of the farm system for basketball's amateur and collegiate play for finding talent.

"Every pro team in both leagues was represented there and we on the Olympic team thought that was a very healthy and positive thing. Obviously it's to the kids' advantage in their future," Gavitt said.

"For the pro there is a tremendous saving if they can come to one place and see all of the best young players in the country and evaluate them all as one contractor."

"I'd like to see them train during some of that saving into contributions for the Olympic movement. In talking to Philadelphia's coach Gene Shue and others who were in Salt Lake City I think they were very receptive to that concept. It is up to the Olympic Basketball Committee to approach them in a proper way. I really believe they will be responsive if approached formally."

The Salt Lake City trials brought one isolated problem. Gavitt hopes will never be repeated as the U.S. mode is program toward the 1976 Olympics.

"One club actually went to the hotel, tried to contact a kid and tried to sign him."

The Utah Star of the ABA reportedly offered Kansas' Stanley, Natko, Calk, a sophomore basketball player returned down to Utah.

"We labor under many disadvantages in this country when we play internationally," he said. "Our best players play professionally."

agents from the tryouts," Gavitt said. "From their standpoint, they are supportive of basketball in this country and I'm sure they also wouldn't want to destroy a beautifully expensive, cheap farm system that is set up."

The intercontinental cup team working out at Providence college includes Wayne "Free" Rutledge, a 7-foot center from Clemson, forward Tom Lagarde of North Carolina, Ollie Birdsong of Houston, Oregon's Ron Lee, Bruce Parkerson of Purdue and PC's Joe Hassell.

Gavitt said the roster of professional and freshmen and sophomores showed a consistency up front but the backcourt needed work, the guards running hot and cold in Utah.

"We labor under many disadvantages in this country when we play internationally," he said. "Our best players play professionally."

Hunter questionnaires set tough course to follow

Who is the Idaho hunter and what are his opinions about hunting in Idaho?

With this question, the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Game Sciences at the University of Idaho began a survey of 1971 hunters. The survey findings have recently been compiled and published.

In 1971, 215,000 people bought licenses to hunt in Idaho, and 7,000 residents, and 2,630 nonresidents, received questionnaires.

The survey shows that most hunters in Idaho are Idahoans (94 per cent), and nearly one-half of the remaining (40 per cent) hunters came from California. Wisconsin and Texas hunters were second to California.

In Idaho, 75 per cent of the hunters lived in the southern part of the state. Idahoans said they hunted mostly for sport (45 per cent). Two per cent said they were trophy hunters.

Nonresidents said they hunted mainly for relaxation, challenge of the hunt, trophy and the opportunity to get outdoors.

In options expressed on game management, 10 per cent of the residents wanted big game herds managed to quantify hunting and 21 per cent wanted quality hunting. Forty-one per cent wanted both the survey and 10 per cent.

A majority of residents ranked their hunting in Idaho as satisfactory or excellent but one-third of them said their big game hunting was unsatisfactory. However, satisfaction with hunting and with the department of Fish and Game's management of game was related to whether a hunter bagged a game animal or bird.

In the residents' list of game, unsatisfactory lack of game, too many hunters and not bagging game as the primary reasons for their dissatisfaction.

Almost half the residents and one-fourth of the nonresidents in 1971 expressed a lack of confidence in the game count and game kill information provided by the department.

A majority of the residents, with an opinion, thought that the department had satisfactorily managed Idaho wildlife but 42 per cent wanted better management of deer, elk, pheasant and ducks.

preferred elk. Pheasants and ducks were the most preferred species of upland birds and waterfowl.

A question on roads showed 75 per cent of the residents and 75 per cent of the nonresidents thought no more roads were needed for big game hunting. Forty-eight per cent of residents thought there were already too many roads, no new ones should be built and some existing roads should be closed.

Law enforcement, habitat improvement and emergency winter feeding were department activities the largest proportion of residents thought were most important. They asked for less emphasis on predator control, game farms and access to hunting areas.

The department's policies on regulating big game numbers under which natural range will support and emergency winter feeding only as a last resort received approval of a majority of the residents.

However, many the residents hunting during the 1971 season thought the department should try to increase big game herds through supplemental winter feeding.

A majority thought the amount and condition of forage on winter range was the proper basis for managing big game populations and that it was necessary to distribute supplemental salt for big game animals.

More than half of the residents who answered the question on hunting animals, thought that the department should try to increase big game herds through supplemental winter feeding.

Broncos strive for established lineup

DENVER (UPI) — Denver Broncos coach John Robinson enters his fourth season as a pro coach with a more established team and plans for a smaller preseason camp.

Robison said Saturday the Broncos would open their camp with rookies reporting to the Cal Poly at Pomona camp workout camp July 19 and the veterans the following day. Instead of the traditional week between reporting times.

Robison said only 47 of 65 players were being invited to camp, 82 of which had already been placed on the Broncos roster. Among the 42 were 35 veterans, including 41 who were with Denver last year.

"We feel we have a much more established club this year," said Robison, "and we just aren't looking at quite so many people this summer. We will concentrate on finding the right combination early and letting that group develop as a unit, something we think is important for our defense."

Robison feels he has two players that will be important for the defense, which cut the Broncos' draft list short. They are Virginia Polytechnic Institute's Paul Smith and No. 1 draft choice Lame Wright of San Jose State.

Smith missed the past season with a ruptured Achilles tendon after being one of the top defensive linemen in the NFL for two years.

The Broncos are looking for another strong year from their three running back Ollie Armstrong, who led the NFL in rushing, and second-year running back Lew Little, who scored 10 touchdowns last year.

Watson forces British open into playoff

CATERNICHIE, Scotland (UPI) — Tom Watson has a recurring nightmare.

It's seeing himself in the lead of a major golf championship and then losing it. He did it in the fourth round of the U.S. Open in 1974 and again this year after holding the halfway lead.

There was talk about choke. Watson would have none of it.

The young Luck Finn look-alike proved he could stand the heat Saturday with a 72-hole birdie putt at the 72nd hole to earn an 18-hole playoff with Australian Jack Newton on Sunday for the British Open title.

"I've blown two Open leads at home," he said. "Maybe the third time's a charm?"

Watson shaved his mottle by sticking with his game plan (despite thinking "I'm dead, I don't have a chance") as he stood on the 18th tee with Newton holding a two stroke advantage.

"Byron Nelson told me before the round that you can't quit at this golf course," Watson said. "With these finishing holes, you have a chance even if you're four or five strokes back."

He had three putts at 19, 11 and 12 and missed a 22-foot at 17. But he stuck to the strategy, he played the course.

His approach from at the 43-yard killer 18th hole rolled down a bump to within 12 feet of the pin and, without looking back, he stepped up and collected it.

"When it hit the back of the hole," he recalled, "I didn't know if it was going in or out."

It dropped; Newton bogeyed 17 and Watson had his chance for redemption.

"I can't say I'm nervous, but I'm restless," he said. "I want to get on with it. Noon tomorrow won't come too soon."

Newton, dejected, said "I'll never have a better chance to win British Open than I had today."

"I ate with me," the 25-year-old Watson said of the shot that earned him an even par 72 and a four-round total of 279, nine under par.

A disappointed Newton, also 22, bogeyed three of the last four holes and finished with a two-over-par 74.

"It wasn't a case of Tom winning a tie with me," Newton said. "It was a case of me giving him a tie."

A strong wind from the east finally roused this tier of a Carnoustie course, put a stop to a par busting rampage over its 7,000-yards-of-hillocks, and allowed only four subpar rounds on the last day of this oldest of golf classics for a final field of 97.

The gusty winds could not deter Watson and Newton from breaking Ben Hogan's 22-year-old Carnoustie tournament record of 282, but it did keep them away from the Open mark of 276 set by Arnold Palmer in 1962 and equalled by Tom Weiskopf two years ago.

The winner of Sunday's playoff stands to gain $16,500, with the loser entitled to $13,200 from a total purse of $163,000.

The bookies immediately made Watson a 4-5 favorite and offered even money on Newton.

Watson was four strokes behind leader Bobby Cole of South Africa and another three behind Newton when he set out in a three-round drive to prove once and for all that he could stand the pressure since his successive blowups as the leader of the last two U.S. Opens.

Cole, playing with Newton, skirted to a 76 with three bogeys in the last four holes and finished one stroke back at 280 in a three-way tie with the two big guns of golf, Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller.

Nicklaus struggled through the middle holes with bogeys at six and nine but reworked with birdies at 32 and 34 to rally back into contention. But iron troubles on the final three holes never gave him a chance with a makeable birdie putt. He finished with an even par 72.

The two-time champion of this event shook his head and said, "I just lost another British Open by one stroke," referring to four previous second place finishes for the leading money winner in golf.

Miller lost a stroke to par at the first hole by carelessly missing a four footer; but then made a run at the leaders and had himself in contention by the 14th hole, where he chipped to within three feet and drained the putt for a birdie that put him one stroke behind the then co-leaders, Newton and Cole.

But the 28-year-old Californian, too, found himself pushing his irons off target and suffered an 18th hole bogey that cost him a place in the playoff.

Miller pushed his drive into a bunker and took a six-iron for a make-or-break attempt at reaching the green and making a birdie he thought he needed for the top spot. But his blast caught the brick-like edge of the trap and rolled back down into the sand at his feet.

"I have to say this is the most disappointing finish of any tournament I've ever won," a dejected Miller said. "I missed the playoffs by an inch or two. I just figure this isn't your tournament big fella."

The only sub par round by any of the top 10 finishers was a 71 shot by Australian Graham Marsh, who finished next at 281.

Defending champion and three time winner Gary Player ended the tournament with a 73 for 292 and his playing partner, Lou Graham, the U.S. Open champion, shot a 76 for 292.

Palmer finished with a 73 for 290, Weiskopf had a 72 for 287, two-time winner Lee Trevino had 73 for 293 and Hale Irwin, third leading money winner on the U.S. professional tour, had 75 for 283.

"The course played a half dozen shots harder than yesterday," Irwin said, "but I guess we saw the golf course the way it is supposed to be."

G.F. ends TF Legion winning streak at 11

Twin Falls Legion lost its 11-game winning streak Friday night in splitting a doubleheader with Great Falls.

Twin Falls rallied with seven runs in the sixth inning to take the opener 7-1 but then fell 7-1 in the nightcap.

Twin Falls will host Buhl in a single game at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Jaycee field and travel to Minico for one game at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Great Falls' Lutzschperger was the chief tormentor for Twin Falls during Friday's action. It was his humor, following two errors in the third inning that sent the Montanans ahead 3-0. He also cracked a two-run shot during a three-run third inning in the nightcap that almost broke Falls out of reach.

Gary Huff and Tim Frost provided a lot of the RBI hitting and Gary Miller took the opening run while Huff was charged with the ninth cap.

Twin Falls' decisive seven-run sixth inning in the opener started on consecutive hits by Scott Williams, Randy Persinger and Bruce Bird. Huff sent the bases loaded, a double off the rightfield wall and first lined a two-run single into right center.

That was enough for the victory although Twin Falls added three more on a sacrifice fly, fielder's choice and bases loaded walk.

In the nightcap, Twin Falls' defense looked badly. Huff opened by walking two men and a hit by Fromm loaded the bases. Two runs scored when a fly ball batted off Twin Falls' rightfielder's head injured only his pride.

Crist singled in Persinger with one Twin Falls run in the first and Gary Miller doubled and scored on two wild pitches in the second for a brief tie.

But in the third, Edwards lived on an error and scored on another miscue just before Lutzschperger unloaded first swing homer.

Twin Falls' most impressive in the third as Williams walked, moved to third on Huff's double and scored on a wild pitch. Crist singled in Huff when the second Twin Falls lead.

Great Falls' attack on an easy one-out in the sixth as Lutzschperger walked, stole second and scored on two wild pitches in the seventh. Sokolowski walked, took third on a sacrifice fly and scored when winning pitcher Al Day singled.

Oldtimer game second big day for Holloman

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Saturday's goodbyes, the second biggest day in the life of Babe "No Hit" Holloman.

Noday could never top May 6, 1954, for Babe, but Saturday nicely complimented that day more than 20 years ago, and for Babe you couldn't get any more than that.

Babe likes to recall what he did on May 6, 1954, pitch one hit game in his first start in the major leagues.

True, there were never any no-hitters for Babe after that, but, oh, how that one hit no-hitter came back to life to him Saturday.

Babe was invited to a party for former players before Sunday's "Old-Timers" game here, hosted by the Cincinnati Reds. His wife brought along with her the very first letters of the book she has written about Babe and his no-hitter.

Babe loved the day.

"This is the first Old-Timers game I've ever been invited to," said Babe, happy to be rubbing shoulders with the likes of Ralph Kiner, Johnny Vander Meer, Yogi Berra and Jimmy Podes.

"I hope I'm invited to his party," he added. "I even went to today and bought a Cadillac."

Some of the oldtimers were

Eichelberger holds quad-cities lead

MOLINE, Ill. (UPI) — Dave Eichelberger, who held a five-stroke lead going into the third round, came up with four birdies in the final round on Saturday to salvage a three-stroke lead in the $75,000 Quad Cities Open.

Eichelberger had to scramble on the back nine to end the day with a one-over-par 72 and a 34-hole total of 282.

He held off three competitors, who were tied with a six under par 67: Fellow Texan, Terry Dill, who was in second place five strokes back on Friday, shot a two under par 69. Another Texan, Frank Beard of Dallas, shot a three under 68. Rookie Howard Totty, who led after the first round, also turned in a 68 to stay within striking distance for Sunday's final 18.

Eichelberger, who relied on his putting to put him into alter two rounds, had to bear down on the back nine after a four-over-29 on the front nine. He turned in birdies on the 10th, 13th, 14th and 15th holes before taking a bogey on the 18th.

Eichelberger missed a hole-in-one on the 14th when his 7-iron shot hit the pin on the par 3, 140-yard hole and dropped in the cup. But it bounced out, leaving the 31-year-old veteran with a putt of only inches for his birdie.

Dill and Beard shot one under pars on both sides of the course in keep pace with Eichelberger's strong finish. Totty also had a bad front nine but recouped with a four under 32 on the back nine.

"I was consistent today," Eichelberger said. "Consistently bad on the front nine, but consistently good on the back."

"The front nine played extremely tough for me," he said. "It was windy and I was a little shaky, plus I didn't play very smart. I was able to play more on the back nine and play much better."

"I was feeling kind of down after I bogeyed No. 7. It was my third bogey on the first seven holes."

She'll play every fairway "probably for the first time in my life," he said. "I was real pleased with the way I played. It probably seemed better to me than the people watching."

Mrs. Haynes, who had a opening round 68, made the turn Saturday in two under 34, but ran into trouble on the back side when she started "hitting everything right."

"She bogeyed 11-13 and 17-17 all when she missed greens, and sank a five-footer on 15 for her only birdie."

"I got to hitting it right and couldn't stop it," said Miss Haynes, who added she was "having some trouble with my hand again. I started using a flat top when I got tired."

Mrs. Brewer struck together her second straight two under par 70 with a 70 on round.

Miss Mann, who had three birdies and a pair of bogeys on the front side and a hole-in-one on the back, said she was still trying to match Friday's spectacular string of birdies.

"I was just trying to play as well as I could and keep a bunch of my lead as I could," she said. "It was a controlled round. Not too fancy, but solid."

The 6-foot-3 Miss Mann, president of the LPGA Executive Board, hit 15 greens during the round and used just 15 putts.

Miss Blalock, who admits "I haven't been playing too well," turned in birdies of 35-35, getting a pair of birdies and a bogey on every side.

She'll play every fairway "probably for the first time in my life," she said. "I was real pleased with the way I played. It probably seemed better to me than the people watching."

Mrs. Haynes, who had a opening round 68, made the turn Saturday in two under 34, but ran into trouble on the back side when she started "hitting everything right."

Mann hikes LPGA meet lead to 3 strokes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Carol Mann's shooting hole-in-one under par 70, took a three-hole lead at the end of two rounds Saturday in the $65,000 Columbus LPGA Classic.

Miss Mann, who set LPGA records in Friday's first round with a 29 on the back side and seven birdies in a raw, shot 35-35 Saturday over the 6,590-yard, par 72 Riviera Country Club course giving her a 68-hole score of eight-under-par 138.

Three shots back at 139 is Jane Blalock, who matched Miss Mann's second round in white, Marla Broer, Judy Rankin, Sandra Haynes and Pam Higgins were another shot behind at 140.

Mrs. Brewer's second round 70, Miss Haynes a 72 and Miss Higgins a 73 as scores for the first part were higher than Friday's sizzling opening round, with 24 players broke par.

Miss Mann, who had three birdies and a pair of bogeys on the front side and a hole-in-one on the back, said she was still trying to match Friday's spectacular string of birdies.

Gooding amateur to open Saturday

GOODING, Idaho, Valley's amateur golf tour moves to Gooding next weekend for the second of four stops this season.

The Gooding amateur will be held Saturday and Sunday with the field playing 18 holes each day.

Course manager, Lee Fleischer said the tournament committee will limit the field to the first 125 entries received on a first come, first served basis.

Those entered are entitled to a free practice round Friday and may play with tourneys at their choosing for the first tournament round. Parings and tee-off times will be assigned for Sunday's finale.

Anyone interested should contact Fleischer for 204 telephone offices.

The tournament will pay all entry fees back on merchandise prizes in both old and gross-in-trade flight chipping and long drive contests are planned for Sunday.

The Gooding amateur is the second stop following May's 18th amateur. It will be followed in two weeks by the Burley tourney. Meanwhile, Hager has moved its tournament back to Aug. 15-16, according to professional Al Jones.

Turmoil can't stop soccer

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — In spite of the current political and economic turmoil in Argentina, the 1976 World Cup soccer championship will be held in that country, Abilio de Almeida, one of the South American representatives to the Intercontinental Football Association, said Saturday.

"Buenos Aires was chosen as the site for the 1976 World Cup and we intend to hold it there in spite of the problems that country is experiencing," de Almeida said.

Rio's daily sports newspaper, the Journal dos Sports, recently published a report citing "well placed sources," saying "it would not be surprising if Brazil were chosen as the site of the 1976 World Cup, as a result of the current situation in Argentina."

DASHER MPG: 23 CITY 35 HIGHWAY

According to the Federal Environmental Protection Agency's latest figures for fuel economy, all our sedans and Dasher Wagon get over 30 miles per gallon on the highway and over 20 miles per gallon in the city. In fact, out of the top 10 cars rated for fuel economy by the EPA, 4 of them were VW's. (That's more than any other automotive maker.) You might say, EPA want APE over us.

Facility progresses

WALLS ARE GOING UP ON THE NEW PHYSICAL EDUCATION FACILITIES FOR WENDELL HIGH SCHOOL. Supt. Lawrence LaRue said completion date has been extended from Oct. 1 to Nov. 15 because of the bad spring weather. The project located east of town, is financed by a $305,000 bond issue approved by school patrons in April, 1974.

TF man placed on probation

TWIN FALLS — Ronnie Lee Hankins, 25, Twin Falls, was placed on probation for a 12-month period after pleading guilty to assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

He appeared for sentencing in a Fifth Judicial District Court before Judge Theron W. Ward.

Hankins was charged with the slaying of Paul Rockstad on Aug. 24, 1974, near a Twin Falls tavern.

The victim and the suspect engaged in an argument in the tavern and left. Rockstad later came back to the tavern with knife wounds in the chest and was taken to the hospital by ambulance.

Judge Ward sentenced Hankins to two years under jurisdiction of the state board of corrections and suspended the sentence in favor of a 12-month probation period.

Judge Ward also placed Bryan Keith Franklin, 18, Twin Falls, on 18 months probation on charges of first degree burglary. He was charged with burglarizing the Dodson Distributing Inc. building on May 1.

Study criticizes energy plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study by Congress' Joint Economic Committee and the Library of Congress says President Ford's energy program and an Arab oil price increase—this fall—could retard recovery from the recession for a year.

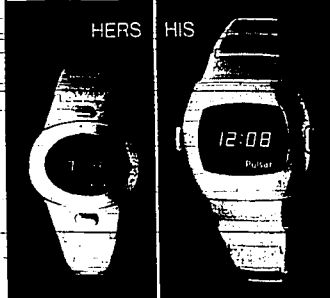

But Alan Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, questions that conclusion. He says the study "probably assigns too much impact to the 'ripple effect' of an oil price increase—the way higher energy costs can ripple through the economy, raising the cost of almost everything Greenspan does not dispute that oil prices are going to rise. He says an increase soon is inevitable.

The choice before Congress, Greenspan argues, is whether the billions extra Americans will pay for oil and energy will stay in the U.S. economy or go abroad.

If the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raises oil prices in October by $2 and if controls come off—the price of domestically produced oil, the congressional study said, consumers will have to spend as much as $40 billion more for oil.

Glauner heads Gooding board

GOODING—Rodney Glauner was selected chairman of the Gooding School Board at the July meeting.

Clark Sears will serve as vice chairman and Frances Guinn was rehired as clerk-treasurer.

Two new members, Robert Reinke and Walter Nelson, were sworn in. Karl Belsner is the fourth board member.

Trustees decided to meet on the second Tuesday of each month instead of the second Monday as in past years.

Sears and Belsner were appointed to serve on the parks and recreation committee to work with the City Council on the joint recreation project which includes tennis courts now under construction on land behind the school.

Supt. James Muscat said the fence is scheduled to be installed Saturday and the tennis courts should be ready for use within a week, according to Nelsen Construction Co. officials, contractors.

Cecil Hobday was reappointed school district attorney. Eugene Gibbons, elementary principal, and Muscat were reappointed director of Title I funds and authorized representative of all federal programs respectively.

The bus schedule for this coming year will remain the same but a shuttle bus will be added to take kindergarten students from the grade school in the morning to Tyler Hall and return to the grade school in the afternoon.

Marguerite Jessell, Twin Falls, was hired as elementary physical education teacher, and Stephen Malan, Provo, Utah, as high school science teacher.

Trustees discussed the conference for school administrators and board members scheduled for Aug. 6-8 at Sun Valley.

EDEN - The Valley High School drill team brought home two trophies from the recent Inermountain Drill Team Workshop at Utah State University at Logan.

The eight-member Vikingette team won a trophy for its superior performance in marching competition before judges and dance instructors. The girls won 36 ribbons, 25 of which were blue and 9 were red, thus entitling them to the superior trophy.

Pauline McClain won a third-place trophy when she competed with 760 girls in a drill-down.

The girls participating in the workshop included Susan Grant, captain; Pauline McClain, co-captain; Keli Ross, Beth McKie, Carolyn Sellers, Janna McClain, Tenna Bruke and Julie Haisch; Mrs. Dawn Schutte, adviser, accompanied the girls to Logan.

The girls were able to attend the workshop with money they received from the Valley Booster Club, the school board and from their 10-mile walk-a-thon. Mrs. Schutte and the girls wish to thank the community for the support they gave them.

Senate told of prisoner abuse

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A government inquiry into drug experiments on prison inmates has found abuses of prisoners ranging from "unprofessional supervision" of drug tests to inadequate medical care and follow-up treatment.

Alexander Schmidt, commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, told a Senate health subcommittee hearing Thursday an FDA review of 49 prisons in America indicated it was clear that abuses of prisoner populations have occurred.

A panel of three former prisoners told the subcommittee drug experiments on them had produced hepatitis, shock and other ailments and that they were first required to "sign away your rights to sue."

Their testimony came after FDA investigators testified a major drug company destroyed, withheld and altered research data on two drugs which tests indicated potentially were cancer-producing.

Subcommittee Chairman, Edward Kennedy called the disclosure "absolutely shocking" and said he would turn over details to the Justice Department to see if criminal violations had occurred.

Schmidt conceded his agency was not adequately monitoring drug experimentation by pharmaceutical companies, which with medical laboratories conduct tests in prisons.

"To carry out our monitoring as well as we would like," Schmidt said, "we would need a fairly large number of truly skilled and well-trained professionals."

James Downey, an inmate in McAlester Prison in Oklahoma, said that for 500 he participated in an 11-day drug experiment with 15 other men, which resulted in his catching hepatitis. Doctors, he said, originally diagnosed it as malaria.

James Watson and James White of Detroit said they also had participated in prison drug experiments, which left White with leg brace and Watson temporarily in shock.

State confab on aging set at CSI

TWIN FALLS - The first statewide conference on aging for Spanish-speaking elderly persons will be held at the College of Southern Idaho Friday, Saturday and July 20.

Sponsored by the Idaho Migrant Council, the conference will feature presentations by state and federal agency representatives aimed at acquainting the senior citizens with the services available to them.

While the program will be geared to the elderly among the state's Chicano population, it is open to the public and material will be presented which could benefit all elderly persons, according to IMC representative Ramon Galindo.

Speakers will include representatives of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Idaho Office on Aging, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. Speakers Galindo said, will come from Seattle, Washington, D.C., Kansas City and Denver among other cities.

Galindo said the conference also the first of its kind in HEW Region 10, is being held because many of the Chicano elderly are unaware of services available to them or unaware of which agency to contact for services.

The representatives from each agency will explain what services that agency can provide, he said.

Accommodations and meals will be provided to participants. Transportation to and from CSI will also be available, Galindo added.

In addition to the business segment of the program the conference will also be a performance by the Ballet Alma de Mexico and a reading by Chicano poet Abelardo Delgado.

For more information those interested should contact Sylvia Salinas at the Idaho Migrant Council Twin Falls office, 734-3336, or Jose Mondragon at the IMC office in Rupert, 438-9601.

The conference will be presented in both Spanish and English with translation available into either language.

participantes, transportation tambien sera provendida.

El proposito de la conferencia es orientar los ancianos de habla Espanol a las variadas agencias que proporcionen servicios a este grupo de personas. En el pasado, no han utilizado los servicios deejidos a ellos.

El Conello Migrant de Idaho siente que una de las razones que este grupo no recibe servicios es que la gente no sabe que las agencias pueden dar-los.

Tambien se presentara un programa cultural, par El Ballet "Almo de Mexico," El respetado poeta y autor, el Profesor Abelardo Delgado de Utah presentara una delamacion.

Por mas informacion favor de comunicarse con Sylvia Salinas en la area de Twin Falls, 734-3336; Jose Mondragon en Rupert, 438-9601.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 13, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to make sure you get as much rest and relaxation as possible. Also, a time to express your reverent desires in the religion of your choice. Planetary aspects are to your advantage.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) See that everything around you is in fine order and gain the respect of those who dwell with you. Think constructively.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Give yourself the treatments that improve your appearance and health. Attend worthwhile civic meetings. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improves the situation at home by applying yourself seriously to conditions there. Take time to improve your surroundings.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good time to meditate about the future so your goals are more clearly defined. Show more devotion to loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Not a good day to talk over a problem with good friends, so wait for a better opportunity. Don't force any issues today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have the opportunity to handle civic affairs and gain personal aims today. Be more objective in your talks with friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to handle personal affairs and to show more affection for loved one. Your intuitive faculties are accurate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to go after your wishes in a more positive manner if you are to attain them now. Show that you are a thoughtful person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can handle public work admirably now. Show others that you're a conscientious person. Use care in motion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study new ideas and obtain information that can be helpful in your line of endeavor. Relax with friends in the afternoon.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to keep those promises you have made to others so that you and they are satisfied. Your intuition is fine now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't ask too many questions of a friend or you could irritate and embarrass this person. Think along more practical lines.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will require more rest than others and should be taught to look on the bright side of life. A smile instead of wanting to challenge other is evident in this chart. Be sure to give ethical and religious training early in life.

Some laboratory researchers now say they think they can increase a newborn baby's life expectancy by 40 per cent. How? By feeding said infant 60 per cent fewer calories shortly after its birth than is normally given to babies. Dandy, if true. Their findings come from experiments on little animals.

WHAT YOU DON'T know the whereabouts of the largest Italian-speaking community outside of Italy? Say Toronto. About 400,000 Italian-Canadians live there!

IF YOU CAN'T name the only West Point graduates who ever became president, both U.S. Grant and Ike Eisenhower would be sad, very sad.

WHY DOES GALILEO continue to get credit for the invention of the telescope? Linear everybody knows that a Dutch optician named Hans Lippershey came up with the first such instrument in 1608.

HORSEMAN
Q. Which were the best horsemen among the American Indians?
A. The Apaches were the first to own horses. The Comanches were the best riders. The Nez Percé were the best breeders.

WHAT ARE THE CHANCES of hitting a jackpot in a slot machine that's not rigged in favor of the player?
A. About one in 2,000.

WHAT LOUISE WAS LAKE LOUISE named after?
A. A daughter of Queen Victoria.

CRAWLERS
The centipede, which is supposed to have 100 legs, only has about 40. The millipede, which is supposed to have 1,000 legs, only has 100 maybe 200. A centipede at top speed can carry itself on as few as four legs at a time. That millipede, though, keeps more legs on the ground than in the air. The centipede can make a lot faster than can a millipede in traveling, say, across the back of your neck.

DID I EVER tell you a crocodile can't swim without rolling over and over unless it swallows enough rocks to counterbalance its tail? And the weight of the rock ballast is always in precise ratio to the tail weight. A few croc experts are so savvy they can just look at one of those big beasts and tell you how many pounds of rocks are in it.

TF musicians receive awards

TWIN FALLS—Three Twin Falls High School students received awards at the Performing Arts Camp at the University of Idaho, it was announced Friday.
 Kathleen Bondurant received the best girl musician in camp award and the best girl musician in band award.
 Debbie Thibert was chosen the most inspirational musician in camp. Steve Moss was named the best boy musician in orchestra.

The awards were presented by Norman Logan, professor of music at the Moscow campus and director of the camp.
 The three students received music camp scholarships, sponsored by the Idaho Federation of Music Club.

They also enrolled in the summer voice workshop this week at the College of Southern Idaho. Logan was the guest vocal instructor. The workshop was conducted by the CSI music faculty.
Mauna Loa watch kept
 VOLCANO, Hawaii (UPI)—Volcano watchers are waiting to see whether Mauna Loa, the world's largest volcano, is going to drop the other shoe.
 The giant mountain erupted spectacularly last Sunday and the island of Hawaii was shaken Wednesday by an earthquake that registered 4.5 on the Richter scale.

QUESTION: How do you feel about residential development on farmland?

Caroline Lutes, Twin Falls:

"I feel we're going to have to expand our area a certain extent there might be restriction."

Roxie Simcoe, Twin Falls:

"I would like to see them use some of the lava rocks, it makes a lovely landscaping for houses — and leave the tillable land."

Dewey Batley, Twin Falls:

"I've got really strong feelings about that. I'm a custom farmer. It makes me really sad to see that happening. There's only so much good farm land. It's going to keep pushing the farmer out in the desert."

C. Roy Henderson, Twin Falls:

"I don't like the idea myself at all. The land should be saved for farming."

Betsy Anderson, Ketchikan:

"I think farmland should be left alone. Maybe it's necessary expansion but there ought to be another way of dealing with it like cluster housing."

Ray Milversted, Great Falls, Mont.:

"I don't think they should take farm land out of production for residential development. There's enough other land you can use for that. I don't know about here, but where I'm from there is."

Mrs. Jess Sustacha, Lamolite, Nev.:

"I don't know. We have a big subdivision in our area and we don't really care for it. It brings in more people, the taxes go up, you have to add policemen, add on to the hospital and build more schools, things like that."

Tom Payne, Eagle:

"I think it better be left alone. I live up north and we're having the same problem there."

Make-believe money replacing the dollar on world markets

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Make-believe money is replacing the American dollar in much of the world's business.

That money is called the Special Drawing Right, or SDR for short. Although it has been around for six years, it is being touted now as the cure for many international financial ills. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries decided last month to stop quoting oil prices in dollars and to use SDRs instead. The International Monetary Fund wants to make the SDR the key currency in world trade, replacing the dollar.

Rich countries pay debts to each other in SDR's and poor countries say they need SDR's to get rich.

Not bad for money that does not actually exist. You cannot put an SDR in your pocket, give it to charity or buy a hamburger with it. You cannot bet your bottom SDR.

In other words, at the level where people live the dollar is here to stay. But in high-finance, the SDR is coming of age.

The SDR is nothing more than an accounting unit, invented by the International Monetary Fund in 1969 as a possible future replacement for gold or the dollar as the basic unit in world trade. By this year, the IMF had created 9,315,000 SDRs and parceled them out among nations for use in international credit deals.

The dollar, still the world's leading currency, makes up 33 per cent of this SDR "basket." The West German mark makes up 12.5 per cent, the British pound nine per cent, and so on, down through francs, yen, lire, guilders, kronas and pesetas to one per cent each for the Austrian schilling and the South African rand.

The big thing about the SDR is its stability.

High living leads to criticism of teenage guru

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

DENVER (UPI) — The guru Maharaj Ji is 17 years old, likes pizza, drives a Masarati, sports a mustache and is Master of the Universe to millions of followers.

Groomed to lead since birth, Pratap Singh Rawat Balgheshwar Salguru Shri Maharaj Ji picked up his taste for sports cars and gold watches since bringing the Divine Light Mission to the United States in 1971.

"A wealthy Boston premise (a term for the guru's followers) gave Maharaj Ji the Masarati for his wedding. Just as you or I would give an apple," said Joe Anelli, a former Boston Tex. public relations man who now is the guru's press secretary. Anelli said he was hired after reporters asked the guru about his sex life.

Anelli said the pudgy guru gives back more than he receives in his followers. What he gives is "knowledge," an understanding of the universe.

"The knowledge gives you a tool to understand the universe if you practice it," Anelli said. "Everyone has it within if it just has to be unlocked. It's like having a lollipop and not eating it."

"It's the greatest high there is," said Ronnie Davis, a former antiwar activist, now the guru's director of program development. "He is here to change the world and bring peace."

"I do not claim to be God," the guru once said. "But I do claim I can establish peace on this earth by our Lord's grace and everyone's joint effort. I think this knowledge which I have to offer this world, free of charge, is the answer."

The Mission claims at least 17,000 followers in America. Anelli said the worldwide following of the teen-aged leader peaks at 1 million.

The guru is a ninth-grade dropout who led an austere life in India and was governed by his family until 1970 when he rode through New Delhi in a golden chariot to kick off an international tour promoting the Mission.

He arrived in the United States one year later and settled in Denver where he set up Divine Light Mission headquarters and received a key to the city.

"He came to a young group of kids who were strung out on this and that and he saved a lot of them," Anelli said. "And, he did learn to live in the west."

The lifestyle he acquired has drawn criticism from former followers—and his mother—Earlier this year the guru flew back to India in an effort to maintain control of the Mission there.

"It does take a lot of money to keep a guru and he does live well, but what he teaches I will believe in for the rest of my life," said Michael Garson, the guru's former financial analyst who left the Mission because of management disputes.

In his first three years in the United States, new converts were common and their contributions led to the Maharaj Ji's homes in three states, a fleet of cars, a wardrobe of flashy clothes and two airplanes.

Followers are encouraged to live in ashrams; communal houses where the virtues of celibacy, poverty and meditation are practiced.

"I I gave poor people my Rolls-Royce, they would need more tomorrow and I don't have any more Rolls-Royces to give them," the guru once said in defense of his worldly goods.

The guru has had money problems. By 1973 the mission was $682,000 in debt, disorganization was thinning the ranks of the faithful and worldwide criticism was beginning to sting.

The guru's mother, Shri Mataji, and his older brother, Sat Pal, had been managing the affairs of the worldwide Divine Light Mission, but on his 16th birthday, Maharaj Ji took control.

Shri Mataji and Sat Pal returned to India, leaving the guru to "remold the world as a humanistic society basing their lives upon service rather than selfishness."

Since then, Maharaj Ji shares the problems many of his American followers faced — parental attention and disapproval because of his life style.

"He has adopted a despicable, nonspiritual way of life," Shri Mataji said in denouncing her son as a playboy and removing him as leader of the Mission. "And his followers in America are spilling him."

Anelli claims Shri Mataji is making a last desperate grab for power.

MONOCHROMATIC color schemes in home interiors are always in Fashion and for very good reasons. What does the word mean in decor? Simply the use of various tints and shades of a single color, along with the neutrals.

The neutrals, of course, are whites and beiges, and some greys, used especially in background areas (including carpets), and for contrast in furnishings.

An effective monochromatic decorative scheme begins with carpet because this is the largest area of "permanent" color. Wall and ceiling paint or paper will change much more frequently than you'll buy new wall-to-wall carpeting.

This if you start with a medium emerald green

carpet, you may use light green walls, a white ceiling. It will reflect some of the green of the room, different shades of green furniture, draperies and accessories. You'll be surprised what color variety you can get with such a plan, and how effective neutral colors become.

One caution: be sure to begin with a color you really like, because you'll have to live with it. And be sure to visit our showrooms to find the quality carpet that will give you the right start, with just the right color. Carpeting is our business.

Famed WWII bridge now tourist stop

KANCHANBURI, Thailand (UPI) — It is not an impressive bridge. It sits in the jungles of western Thailand as a monument to a war that is another. There is a memorial to a different breed of soldier from those who fought in the recent Indochina war.

A classic book was written about the bridge over the River Kwai, followed by hit movies which—while changing the facts a bit—have made the bridge world famous.

One of the facts that got changed was the name of the river. While the title of the movie was "The Bridge Over the River Kwai," the correct name and spelling of the river is the Kwae Yai.

Today, the bridge is a tourist spot visited by thousands of Americans, British, Dutch and Japanese drawn by the legend that surrounds it.

Construction of the bridge and the Burma-Siam railroad began in 1942 when the Japanese felt an urgent need to extend their supply lines to conquered lands in Burma. The Japanese forced thousands of prisoners of war to work on the 229-mile railroad.

Conditions were awful and before the railway was finished in December, 1943, thousands of the prisoners died of disease, starvation and the Allied bombing attacks aimed at destroying the vital supply line.

And therein lies the legend, and the tragedy, of the bridge over the River Kwai.

Kwai. The prisoners of war were forced to work on, day after day, building both railway and bridge, then saw their work destroyed by what to them were friendly forces.

The movie "The Bridge Over the River Kwai" focused on the tragic circumstances of the construction of the bridge and its ultimate destruction. A British officer is forced to have his men build on the bridge, decided to show the Japanese — British superiority by making the bridge more quickly, efficiently and flawlessly than his captives could have done. The bridge became his obsession and he was horrified Allied sapper squad arrived to blow up the structure.

The real story of the bridge is not quite so glamorous. The bridge there were actually two and only sections of one were "blown" by Allied bombers.

Weird Harold closes up massage parlor for good

© 1975 Chicago Daily News

limeral tear glistened in the left eye of Weird Harold Rubin, whose orbs usually gleam for other reasons.

"Do you realize," he said with emotion, "that it was 4 1/2 years ago that I opened my bookstore and you wrote the first article about me?"

"I remember," I said. "I think I said you were a creep, but that the store was a step forward because your previous occupation was barging into motel rooms with divorce detectives — and taking photographs of shocked couples. I said you had progressed from being a crumb to a creep."

Harold nodded. "I appreciate that, and for all those years that column hung in my store window. But now it is over. An era has ended. This chapter in the saga of Weird Harold Rubin has come to a close."

Well, I'm not sure it's that thunderous an end. But I'll try. — Weird Harold Rubin, Bookstore and Massage Parlor has just closed.

The man who pioneered the massage parlor in Chicago has let the water out of his waterbed and is out of business.

"The city finally got me," Harold said. "They tried by arresting me about 25 times, but they couldn't do it. They spent about a million dollars prosecuting me, but they couldn't do it."

"But they found a way, and I have thrown in the towel, which is not a pun."

Harold said that they finally got to him through his landlord.

"The city building department came down on him with both feet. They hit with more than 100 violations. They let him know that the word out was to get him out."

"I talked to a guy at the Building Department, and he told me that he got the word from the police to put on the pressure. It was that big bulk sausage Bleek."

He was referring to Lt. George Bleek, head of the vice squad, the virtuous foe of massage parlors, sluttish ladies, and any personal conduct that is not condoned by the police department's "Manual on Physical Fitness."

"The guy told me: 'We are getting heat from Mike. So you know how the city works. They passed the heat on to my landlord. And my landlord passed it on to me. I was on a month-to-month lease, and he told me he wouldn't renew the contract. So it is over.'"

Not any musician, said Harold, would be about some of the interesting customers among his massage clientele. "I had all kinds, businessmen from all over the world because we are near such classy hotels, judges, politicians — and from both parties, too, although I think we had more Democrats than Republicans because they are more liberal."

"My oldest customer was a man who was born in 1885. That's right. He was 80 years old. — A country gentleman from near Champaign, Ill. Debbie, the girl who gave massages, was worried because of his age. He told her: 'Don't worry — about — me. Sweetie, I've got Medicare.'"

"Then there was this real nervous guy. He was so jumpy that I told him: 'Look, it's not like you got to marry the girl.'"

"And wouldn't you know? Somebody accidentally hit the raid buzzer. So the girl tells him: 'It's a raid.'"

"The guy went running out of here with only his pants on, carrying his shoes, socks, shirt, everything in his arms. The last I saw of him, he was hoofing down Wabash Ave. in his bare feet."

The worst customer? Harold got a malicious look. "That would be Roy C. of Barrington, a respectable, hah, businessman. The sloth."

"You know what he did? He paid with bad checks. Then he had the gall to come back here and write some more of them."

"I got him, though. I called up his company — he is the president — and I told his secretary that if he didn't come in and make those checks good, I was going to go to the state's attorney and bring charges against him."

"He says: 'What can you charge him with?'"

"I said: 'Theft of services,' and he got down here and paid up. Then he went to the cops and got me arrested on a phony complaint."

"He was 5-9 and weighed 300 pounds. Put that in the story. And he was so fat he almost broke the waterbed. And put in that Debbie like if he ever came in again. She was going to quit and get a job in a dime store, the bum."

In one way, Harold said, he doesn't regret going out of business.

"The way the city is, especially around downtown, I was feeling tired of wondering if I was going to get hit on the head every night."

"Nobody ever got hurt in my place, not even a hernia. But Bleek and all his men spent their time trying to find another reason to arrest us."

"But you could walk out of the door and get hit on the head or murdered. And where was Lt. Bleek when you need him? Peeking through my keyhole, that's where."

And what does the future hold for Weird Harold, porno pioneer?

"I am going to go out into the country, say, I have got my eye on a few slices about 20 miles away or farther. We will have the massage parlor, as well as facilities for hiking, fishing, swimming, and the beautiful outdoor life. Sort of a resort. If Helmer can do it, so can I."

Harold's final farewell? "Say good-bye to all my customers. Especially that sausage guy. Tell him he can stop running and put his shoes on now."

That's the Recession — happiness for $12.41!

By ERMA BOMBECK

There's an old chestnut going the rounds that money can't buy happiness.

The other night my husband was squinting over a book when he said, "How big is the light bulb in this lamp?"

"I think it is 40 watts," I said.

"You have a bigger one in your sewing machine. How much would a 150-watt light bulb cost?"

"About 89 cents."

One that I could have for my very own without hair in it that doesn't match mine. Are they out of sight?"

"A comb costs about 29 cents."

"Very good; now, what about a whole newspaper?"

"A what?"

"A whole newspaper. One that hasn't been turned inside out, clipped, folded, bent, spindled, mutilated and littered all over the bathroom before I get to read it?"

"Fifteen cents," I said truthfully.

"Incredible!" he said touching a ballpoint pen to his tongue. "Are they still selling those little seven-cushion for the car seat?"

The ones that are new and don't have the metal springs ripping into your leg every time you slide into the seat?"

"Written down $3.98," I said.

"Oh, and what about those little tables that some people put their forks and tonsils on when they took out of doors instead of using a garbage can lid?"

"They would run you about $5.95."

Bushy, he tallied up the total. "Can you believe it? $ 12.41 would not only buy me happiness, it would buy me ecstasy!"

That's the recession for you. There was a time when $12.41 would have bought hysteria!

Copyright 1975 Field Enterprises, Inc.

At Wit's End

He recorded 89 cents on a slip of paper. "And how about salt and pepper shakers for the table? I've heard of some families that have one set for the stove and one for the table. How much would an extra set cost?"

"You could get a little cheaper for a buck or so."

"He scribbled under $1—and continued, 'What are pencils selling for these days? The little wooden ones that you put by the phone and write down messages when someone calls?'"

"I think pencils are still a dime or 15 cents. What are you doing?"

"I see. And what about a simple comb?"

Hollywood discovers new superhero as 'Jaws' breaks box-office records

© 1975 New York Times Service

HOLLYWOOD, which has uncovered a vein of gold in the past with movies about colts, stallions, animated ducks, mice and bunnies, appears to have discovered a new hero with a fish edge:

A 25-foot-long killer shark.

The shark is helping to revitalize what has been lullbuster business at the box office this year in 1974.

"Jaws" is the filmed version of the Peter Benchley novel about a marauding shark during a fourth of July weekend in a Long Island beach community — had box-office receipts of $25.7 million to Universal Studios.

The studios say this is the highest revenue for a movie in so short a time. Concurring, Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said in an interview, "I don't think there's any question that the box office for 'Jaws' is larger for such a period of time, than any motion picture in history."

Reincarnation thriller mixes suspense with theory

By LIZ CARDINALE

The Reincarnation of Peter Proud, by Max Erlich, published by Bobbs-Merrill, New York, 1974, $8.95.

"Have you ever had a dream which was so vivid, so realistic that remembering it, you were unsure whether you dreamed it or whether it really happened?"

"Have you ever experienced 'déjà vu', that eerie feeling that 'I have been here before.' If so, you have lots of company; thousands of people have similar experiences each year. Experiences which could be 'recollections' of a recounting of episodes from past lives.

These hard to define impossible to prove experiences are what "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud" is all about.

Reincarnation, Erlich argues, is older and better established than most of the world's religions.

Indeed, it is a major tenant of several of the major ones—Esa from being the comforting surplination of idiots, it has been the belief of men of reasoning and intelligence. Men of such stature as Mahatma Gandhi, Benjamin Franklin, Walt Whitman and Voltaire, the author points out, have all been convinced of its value.

Those who ridicule reincarnation call it wishful thinking, a "coping" or a refusal to face the future on rational grounds. But certain phenomena do exist which no one can logically explain.

Almost everyone has had the experience of visiting some place he has never been and yet having the feeling that he has been there before. Psychiatrists have put it down as "opposing a false memory down" but they fail to explain the basis for the false memory.

A second universal experience is meeting someone for the first time and liking or disliking them on a subtle, indefinable basis. This in terms of intuitions but could these feelings come from long buried memories of a past life?

The idea of prenatal memory is another in the sequence of arguments. There have been hundreds of cases of children remembering details of past lives.

In the West, these have been explained as imagination or childish fantasy, but in the East, specifically India, Erlich argues, there have been many such cases which have been verified by trained investigators.

The existence of child geniuses such as Mozart or Mozart, who was composing sonatas at the age of five, has been explained in terms of gene structure, but this theory has yet to be proven. Could these children have learned their skills in a previous life?

Finally, the practice of regression hypnosis has, until now, defied rational explanation. There are many case histories of people who have been regressed under hypnosis back to the time of their birth and beyond. They have recounted experiences totally foreign to them in terms of background and education, and even in certain cases, showed a fluency in languages not possible during their waking hours. All these phenomena exist without explanation: "Reincarnation," says Erlich, is, at least, one answer.

Whether you are inclined to argue for or against reincarnation, you will enjoy "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud." It is well-written, suspenseful, and a book which keeps you interested to the very last page.

Book Review

As author Max Erlich puts it, "suppose we knew who we had been in our previous lives. Where we had lived and what we had done and who we had loved and how we had died. What then? How would this knowledge affect our present behavior? How would it affect our religious beliefs? What if we did know, what then?"

Peter Proud, the protagonist of the novel is a healthy, happy young man. A university professor, he makes an excellent salary, has a bachelor apartment and generally enjoys the kind of life talked about in the women's magazines. This describes his outward life, but in his dreams, he is another man entirely, a man whose personality and voice are different and whose actions are totally incompatible to the young man asleep in his bedchamber, California apartment.

Peter gradually begins to suspect that his dreams are manifestations of a past life and the desire to prove this theory begins to consume him.

The dreams reveal few details. Very few: Life in a New England town, a two-story brick house, a 1940's Packard roadster. These are the only guideposts in the search for his former self. How he happens to see "his" town on a television documentary, finds it, and gradually reconstructs the events of his former life make up the substance of this entertaining novel.

Peter's search for himself and the gradual merging of his two lives lead inevitably to the surprising and terrifying conclusion. Besides being a gripping suspense novel, "The Reincarnation of Peter Proud" recaps the arguments that believers in reincarnation have been making for years. Arguments which are accepted by a majority of at least a quarter of the world's people. The fact that these arguments are, in this instance, drawn out through the device of a

Public favors gun registry

A CBS News poll on questions of gun control indicates that the American public strongly disagrees with President Ford's opposition to a federal law requiring the registration of firearms.

The poll found that the public strongly favors a national law requiring all handguns to be registered by a margin of 101.

The nationwide telephone poll of 800 people of voting age was conducted by the CBS News Election and Survey Unit during the week of June 16, the same week the President delivered his critical message to Congress.

Almost half of those interviewed came from a family where they or an immediate member of the family own a rifle or a handgun. Over two-thirds of these people support a nationwide law requiring the registration of handguns. Three-fourths of those interviewed who said they were Republicans also favored such legislation.

Don't throw out seeds — store them in a dry place

By THE ABRAHAM

SAVE YOUR SEED: Many readers of this paper overbought on vegetable and flower seeds and wonder what can be done to keep them for another year.

First, let me say it's a crime to throw surplus seed away. Most seeds can be stored over winter in a dry place in the house, or in a light container. A glass jar with a screw-top lid is ideal.

Moisture will shorten the life of the seed. Most seeds will have fairly good germination for 2 or 3 years if stored in sealed jars. Cucumber, squash and tomato seed remain viable longer than some others, such as onions or sweet corn.

Don't try to save seed older than 2 years of age. Most garden seeds germinate best soon after they are harvested and processed, but under dry, cool conditions the aging process is slowed down. Seeds subjected to moist, warm conditions lose their vitality rapidly.

Many home owners compensate for lower germination by planting older seeds a bit thicker. Seed over 2 years of age can be tested during the winter by planting a number of seeds in a moist blotter and then counting the number that make good seedlings.

TOADSTOOLS IN LAWNS: What can be done to get rid of mushrooms ("toadstools") in your lawn?

Answer: Not much. Mushrooms occur in circles or arcs and are called "fairly rings." You see them in newer housing developments where scraps of construction lumber were buried in the lawn and have had time to rot.

They also appear around tree stumps where rotted roots furnish the organic matter needed for development. Toadstools appear following cool moist weather and usually disappear when conditions become hot and dry. Grass inside the rings can be killed, leaving large circles or patches of dead grass.

Picking the toadstools and discarding them as they appear is helpful. Keeping the grass cut helps to remove them, although new ones keep popping up as long as there's a rotted root or organic matter in the soil.

If any one has a good chemical control for toadstools, please write and tell us about it.

ATTRACTING HUMMING BIRDS: A reader writes:

"I've seen 8 male humming birds dart back and forth over our currant hedge. They love honeysuckle flowers and weigela, also annual larkspurs, which sell saw each year. Columbine, nasturtium, salvias and other bright flowers are favorites also.

They like the bigonia (trumpet vine), and its season of bloom is very lasting. Humming birds seem to prefer orange or orange-red flowers to any other colors. Many don't realize that these tiny birds catch many insects as well as feed on nectar."

FOIL FOR SHADY GARDEN: Do you happen to have a shady spot in your vegetable garden plot?

If so, light up by using aluminum foil as a mulch to improve the light intensity. Strips of ordinary foil can be used to do this. Lay them along each side of the plant row and cover the edges with soil to keep them in place.

Aluminum foil can also be used in open areas to keep soil cool for plants such as lettuce. The foil acts as insulation, keeping soil temperatures up to 10 degrees cooler during the hottest days of summer.

The foil can also be an effective control against aphids or plant lice. For some unexplained reason, aphid colonies dislike the reflected light under leaf surfaces where they breed.

GOLDFISH HELPS PLANTS: A reader writes: "I've discovered that aquarium water is very beneficial to house plants. I have two 20-gallon tanks of tropical fish and use the water for my house plants.

green thumb

"My plants have been wonderful, more beautiful and prosperous than ever before. Did you ever hear of such a thing?"

Yes, we've heard of people using water from the aquarium for watering their house plants. We can't think of any disadvantage in using water from the tropical fish aquarium. Does anyone wish to comment on the pros and cons of using this enriched water for house plants?

MIDSUMMER SNACK: Most vegetables will be needing a summer snack to promote growth and to improve production. Vine crops such as tomatoes, beans, cucumbers and other fruiting vegetables like a feeding of a balanced plant food (contain nitrogen, phosphorus and potash).

If you use liquid fertilizer, it can be sprayed over the foliage. Dry plant foods are applied along the side of crops, and this is called "side-dressing."

To feed a row of growing plants, you simply apply a two-inch band of fertilizer along the row, at least 3 to 4 inches from the crop.

Many gardeners feed widely spaced plants such as tomato, cucumber, pepper, melons, etc., by placing the fertilizer in a circular band around the plant. Keep dry fertilizers off leaves when applying, and never use more than the recommended rate.

Too much plant food can burn the roots, and if any is allowed to remain on the foliage it can burn the leaves. Water the garden immediately after application to wash off the leaves to prevent burning.

CAUTION: Never use a fertilizer containing a lawn weed killer for vegetables or flowers. It will kill your plants.

QUESTION BOX

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: R. F. of Twin Falls: "Your book on fruits and vegetables states that Naphthaleneacetic acid (NAA) is useful in preventing fruit setting on apples."

"It also says that this acid is used also for making plants bear fruit. I think you made a mistake, if not, how can it work both ways?"

No mistake was made, and we'll try to explain how this useful chemical works for commercial apple growers. Naphthaleneacetic acid (called NAA) is used as a chemical spray on apples for two purposes:

(1) To thin the fruits in the spring, by removing excess blossoms and to hold the fruits on the tree in the fall to prevent undesirable pre-harvest drop.

"You're right — this does seem like a contradiction, that the chemical is able to both remove flowers and also cause fruits to hang on.

This is not a contradiction because the spray is a hormone causing different reactions in the apple tree, depending whether it is sprayed on just after bloom, or just before harvest.

NAA sprays are used very extensively by commercial apple growers for blossom-thinning and control of premature fruit drop.

Did you know there is another chemical which commercial growers use to spray on stubborn, unfruitful apple trees to make them to bear fruit?

It's called Alar and is sprayed on trees two weeks after petal fall, and it promotes flower bud formation in increase bloom for the following spring. This is just one tool developed by agricultural research which has helped convert modern apple growing into an efficient enterprise.

C. P. of Shoshone:

"I live alone and have to work my garden the best way I can. The weeds are getting the best of me, and I wonder if there is a way to keep them down without hoeing them each week."

Mulching requires little labor and is probably the oldest method of weed control. Sawdust, wood chips, rotted manure, peat moss, compost, straw, grass clippings, etc., can be applied to the summer garden now that the crops are well established and the soil has warmed. Add some extra nitrogen to prevent a pale green coloring of leaves.

Black plastic film and newspapers are good mulch materials. Place strips between the rows and cover the edges with stones or some soil. Newspapers are less ornamental, but several layers can make an economical mulch.

Use bricks, rocks, soil clods, etc., to anchor the newspapers. Don't use chemical weed killers in the vegetable garden as they may drift onto desirable plants.

Special diet pet food lives up to claims of cutting fecal mass in half

Question: "Would it be possible for you to give me information about the Scientific Meat Food food you wrote about recently. I missed your column on it and was told about it by a friend."

"I have since tried to find it at the local pet stores and have also called many veterinarians. No one has ever heard of it."

Merry Pet

I would appreciate a copy of your column on it or where I could find it or any more about it and a list of places in this area that might carry it. Maybe it could pioneer it out here. Anyhow, it sounded very practical. Thanks for the good advice you give in your column and for any help you can give me on this matter.

Answer: There has been a lot of interest in this food — and rightfully so. People who have tried it say it lives up to its claims: fully balanced, fed fresh, moist and dry, cuts fecal mass production by half to three-quarters, available for puppies or grownups and liked by both!

Science Diet Food is produced by Hill's Division Harrison Foods, Inc., 401 Harrison, Topeka, Kan. 66603. You could write them for brochures or more information. But, like their other special diets for heart, kidney, or overweight problems, they are only available to veterinarians. So, the place to look for Science Diet is through your veterinarian. If he doesn't stock it, ask him to order it for you. He'll like Science Diet as much as you will once you've tried it. Question: About a month ago someone wrote to your column about what a veterinary assistant is and what they do. You mentioned that a veterinary assistant earns her degree and title from one of the eight A.V.M.A. approved schools.

Could you please give me the names and addresses of these colleges in your column as there might be others who are interested in knowing the colleges which are approved for this type of education?

I also want to say that your column is very worthwhile reading. Answer: There surely are others interested in veterinary technology. It's a fascinating field. For you and for them, the eight accredited schools are: Central Carolina Technical Institute, Sanford, N.C.; Madison Art Technical College, Madison, WI; University of Veterinary Medicine, Waseca, MN; Colby Community College, Colby, KS; Columbia Technical Institute, Columbus, OH; Fort St. Joseph Community College, Tacoma, WA; University of Nebraska, Lincoln, NE; and Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI.

Question: We want to get our dog OPA approved. Can you give us the address for OFA so we can find out the fee and papers we need.

Answer: Before we get several letters on the subject let me explain that OFA stands for Orthopedic Foundation of America. It is an institution for the reading and grading of hip dysplasia radiographs (usually of the larger breed dogs).

Some veterinarians keep a supply of application blanks on hand or you may obtain them by writing: Orthopedic Foundation for Animals, 817 Virginia Ave., Columbus, Mo. 65201.

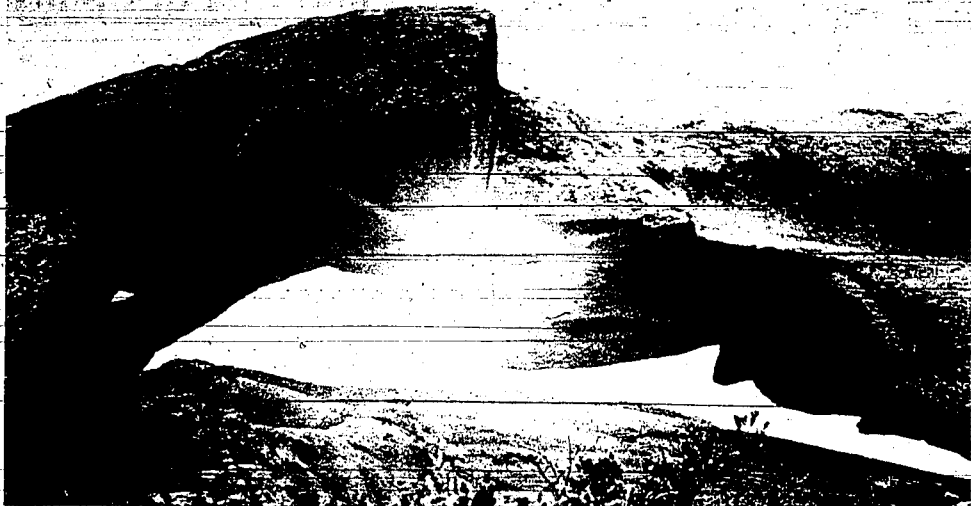

That number puts the power of a Classified Ad to work for you... the ad that goes straight to people who are watching for an offer just like yours.

Blazing sun

SUN blazes through overhanging rocks which seem to be caught in conversation. Sun and wind have combined to create miles of strange, ethereal shapes in City of Rocks south of Burley.

Cityscape

TOWERING from the desert like rocks gave early settlers a glimpse of the future by foretelling modern construction in concrete.

Wind scalloped shell

THIS wind-hollowed stone is more reminiscent of the seashore than a patch of arid desert hundreds of miles from the ocean.

Eternal watch

gently quiet caverns.

Many of the rock formations tower several hundred feet into the blue western sky.

Bathub Rock looms some 100 hundred feet above the desert and can be climbed to its summit where there is a very large depression that catches rain water, in which, according to Indian legend, a bath before and dates carved and scratched into the rocks, many of them messages written with axle grease for people who were following behind the wagon trains. Some of the travelers had to have been suspended by ropes from the tops of the high cliffs to carve their messages since the writings are high up on the rocky walls.

Many of the rocky spires rise nearly three hundred feet in the air and from a distance suggest the famous Manhattan skyline. Other, fantastical, rounded, resemble heathen temples.

The entire region has a fantastic variety of straits and weird shapes perhaps unequalled anywhere.

It's also said there are buried treasures somewhere in the City of Rocks.

According to historical accounts two outlaws, in 1878, robbed the Kelton to Boise Overland Stage of over $20,000 in pure gold. Subsequently, one of the outlaws was killed in a shootout with the pursuing lawmen, and the second was captured a short time later but after he had buried the gold in a secret place somewhere in the City of Rocks.

The outlaw was sent to prison without ever telling where he had buried the gold. But several years later, on his deathbed in prison, he told where he had supposedly hidden the treasure.

He told of burying it among five juniper trees growing in the shape of a heart.

Lawmen as well as hundreds of citizens from the area swarmed into the City of Rocks, searching hours and a couple of heart-pounding moments, the only thing we unearthed was a handful of old, rusted dollars at today's inflated prices. If it could be found, that is.

Meanwhile the desert

BURLEY — Less than 40 miles south of the bustling city of Burley lies the Silent City of Rocks.

This ghostly, natural rock city covers an area of twenty-five square miles and stretches some six miles from north to south. Here, nature ran riot over the centuries to create one of the most awe-inspiring collections of rock formations to be found anywhere in the world.

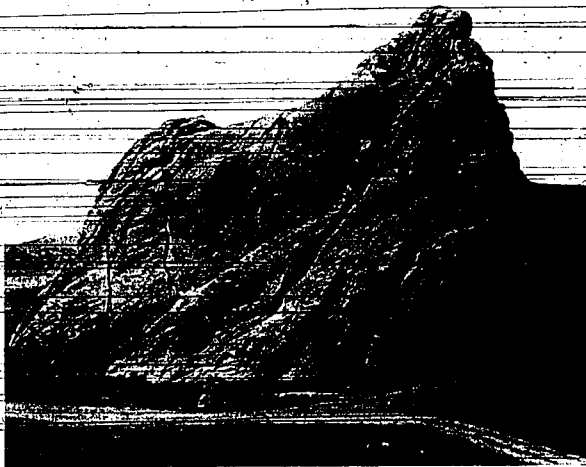

In almost every direction are weird congregations of eroded cathedrals and towers with shattered walls. This silent city presents the extremely bizarre aspect not only of mosques and monoliths and furets, but also of bathtubs and hollow cones with skulls and strange hidden pockets with their

Country singer goes from rags to riches

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD TUPPI
Freddie Hart is a country in the power of faith and hard work.
He is a middle-aged man with a second-grade education. Not particularly handsome nor graceful of movement, Freddie was destined to travel hard roads.
The son of an Alabama sharecropper, one of 15 children raised in grinding poverty, Freddie became a dish washer, oil field roughneck, saloon bouncer and textile worker among other things.

It is this day he wears the look of a loser.
But Freddie is a millionaire country and western singer, song writer, businessman and real estate agent.
Most Americans could pass Freddie Hart on the street and not recognize him. His name is not well-known outside of country music: But Freddie, an ex-convict, friendly gentleman, knows who he is. He hasn't forgotten his humble origins.

"I'm grateful and I'm thankful that my dreams have come true," he says frequently.
"When I was a boy I never had new clothes—I'd run away to Nashville and try to get in to see the Grand Ole Opry. I dreamed of being a singer.
It's been a long, long time. I joined the Marine Corps when I was 13 and served four years during World War II. I got out at 17, which is the minimum age for getting in."

Throughout his years as a menial worker and in the Marines, Freddie composed songs and strummed a guitar. He sang in schools and beer joints to anyone who would listen.
Eventually he recorded in Nashville. He went from one record label to another, occasionally hitting the popularity charts.

"I wrote hit songs for other people," Freddie said.
It wasn't until four years ago that Freddie's "Easy Loving"—which he wrote for himself—became a smash hit single and sales in his first day.
"That record taught me people want something simple and everyday that they know about," Freddie said. "And I'm thankful."

After "Easy Loving," Freddie enjoyed success in a row. For every hit he bought a truck—for his Hartline Trucking Co. based in Nashville. There are more than a dozen big rigs in his fleet today.
Freddie owns plum and almond orchards in California and cattle holdings in Nevada.

Arizona and Oregon.
A resident of the San Fernando Valley for the past 23 years, Freddie spends 120 days a year on the road playing for packed houses. He travels in his own luxurious bus with sleeping accommodations for his backup group; the Heartbeats.

Freddie, with little exposure on the tube, thinks television would broaden his popularity.

"I'd like to reach as many folks as possible with my music," Freddie said.
"I write songs about people's lives—their hurts, as well as the happiness."
At the moment, Freddie's own life is without hurt.
He's a winner now, and of his fans he says, "Without them none of it would have happened. God bless each and every one of them."

Bill Parle, Richard Benjamin and wife Paula Prentiss will head for Broadway in "Norman Conquest." Ricardo Montalban will guest star in an episode of "Columbo." Joey Heatherton stars in her own CBS-TV summer series beginning in July.

Series newcomer

BORN of Italian parents in San Francisco on Columbus Day, it was always expected that Carla Borelli would go places. She has. She has been cast as the cost of the daytime serial drama "Days of Our Lives" on NBC. Carla has been cast as Mary Anderson, wealthy daughter of divorcee-tom parents.

OLIVER REED

...morgiving to Harris

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN
Q: I see there's a new paperback book called "The Queen." Is it an inside story about England's Queen Elizabeth? — S.A., Raleigh, N.C.

A: Not by a country mile — the woman in the title conducts herself in anything but a regal manner. "The Queen" by Morton Cooper will be Bantam Books big seller this summer, with everyone trying to guess the identity of the central character. Same, 'cause she's a beautiful swineer who progresses from mistress of millionaires to TV chat-show hostess and, ultimately, a big name in the Women's Lab movement.

Q: After all those stories about actress Glenda Jackson being so down to earth and happily married for 17 years to a man earning a tiny fraction of her salary, she's leaving him. How come? — R.Z., Palm Springs, Calif.

A: The way Glenda's been talking it appears that she was taking a lot of that another TV comedy series going? — H.O., Bountiful, Utah

A: We hear that he tried another situation comedy pilot but it didn't turn out well. Now there's talk that he will try to come back with a guest and variety format.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Why isn't our new Ambassador to the Court of St. James happy? Because Elliot Richardson went to London with high hopes that his talents and energy would be highly regarded. He took the post on the understanding that he'd be a superb ambassador, licensed to play a strong role in developing U.S. foreign policy in Europe. But tensions have developed between Richardson and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who keeps the reins of policy in his hands. Richardson is said to feel he is being treated as an ordinary diplomat. He is furious.

Q: Curtis Leachman is always winning awards and giving long, kooky acceptance speeches. Is she a bit nutty in real life too? — P.W., Richmond, Va.

A: Well, recently a mushy cake was dropped on her head during a filming session and a couple of jesses later she showed up at a party wearing the messy remainder of the cake as a hat. We don't know if it was a fruit or not.

UPPER CRUST: Why are they peevish at Warren Beatty on the Beverly Hills society circuit? Well Hollywood's "Beautiful People" didn't like it when he turned down most of the party invitations but, worse than that, he refused to give their prints or "Shampoo," to show in their private screening rooms. Warren told friends, "If they want to see 'Shampoo' let them go to a theater where it's playing."

BOOK OF THE WEEK: Marilyn Chambers, the porno star, is just back from Canada where she has been collaborating with Xaviera Hollander, the celebrated hooker, on a new book, "Xaviera Meets Marilyn Chambers." Now Marilyn is off on a national tour to promote her own autobiography, titled "Marilyn Chambers: My Story." Marilyn brought her very own editor to Canada with her to work on the Chambers-Hollander book. Meanwhile the happy hooker is squeezing out one more book with her new ghost, Seattle writer Florence King, who is replacing Robin Moore, the man who did the hooker book.

Q: I guess Anthony Armstrong-Jones, Princess Margaret's photographer-husband, is too independent to be a favorite of the Royal Family. But do they snub his children? — G.I., Bismarck, N.D.

A: British Royalty is really not much bothered by mavericks; they have dealt with plenty of them, and they are very big on family loyalty. Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, Tony's 13-year-old daughter, is said to be a particular favorite of her aunt, the Queen. Sarah is described as a "most marvelous child, absolutely magical, with luminous eyes full of excitement."

Q: With women breaking into professional sports more and more, how are they bearing up under the strains of competition? — D.F., Chesapeake, Va.

A: Tennis is the big money sport for women. And a long-time observer of that scene says that playing for money relaxes the women athletes and reduces jealousy and petty squabbles. Amateurs tend to worry a lot about just how good they are, whereas paychecks and mounting bank balances provide solid assurance of their talents.

QUESTION YOU NEVER ASKED: Who had Hollywood's most ostentatious wedding of the year? Actress Karen Blanche Black and writer L.M. Kit Carson. The wedding invitations went out in a red-white-and-blue motif and guests showed up at the 6:00 A.M. ceremony on July 4 in Franklin Canyon Forest near Beverly Hills. The ceremony was followed by an early-morning reception and after that a picnic for the sleepy-heads who couldn't get up at dawn.

Q: Mick Jagger and wife Bianca are always in the news and moving around. How about their kids? — L.U., Blythe, Calif.

A: Jade, their three-year-old daughter, is something of a gad-about, too. Though she spends most of her time in Paris in care of a nanny, the tot vacationed with her mother in Jamaica and spent last Christmas in Nicaragua with her maternal grandparents.

GLORIA LEACHMAN

...addle-essence

Mick says that he adores the child and she is well taken care of.

Q: Is there a feud between actors Oliver Reed and Richard Harris? — K.I., Chicago, Ill.

A: Apparently so, and of long standing. Way back when Reed appeared in "Women If Love," the bumptious prankster Harris sent him two catches, one engraved "John Russell" the other "Glenda Jackson," implying that Reed couldn't stand up without the aid of his director and co-star. Oliver has never forgiven Harris.

TRAVELERS' CHECKS: What do film stars and movie producers now take along when they go abroad that they never had to bother with before? Bodyguards to ward off kidnap threats. Usually those bodyguards are former New York doobies.

...new and new

Q: Just for the heck of it, I wonder if Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, like other tourists, bought some of that inexpensively tailored clothing when they went to Hong Kong recently? — R.T., Knoxville, Tenn.

A: The British press reports that Philip took some fine material from England and had a hunting suit run up in Hong Kong. But it didn't fit. And being in Prince he was too embarrassed to take it back to his London tailor for alterations.

Q: The English papers say Jackie Onassis will marry Truman Capote. What do you think? — L.E., Benning, Va.

A: We don't think there is even a remote possibility of Jackie marrying Truman. Though they are cordial to one another, that is mostly a result of Truman's close friendship with Jackie's sister, Lee Radziwill. Actually, Mrs. Onassis and Mr. Capote don't even like each other. What chance do they have of getting together? Truman doesn't have the kind of money to keep him in Jackie's league.

Q: I am always seeing something designed by that poor-little-rich girl, Gloria Vanderbilt. Does she do her fabrics and collages for the money?

A: One thing Gloria does not need is money. What she has from somewhere is an enormous amount of energy and drive. Her latest effort will be a four-times-a-year home-furnishings magazine—inaudible by McCall's.

contented housewife stuff for press interviews. She was just waiting for a grand passion to come along and sweep her off the kitchen. So now the 33-year-old actress is off with a new man, like any other self-respecting movie queen.

Q: How come conductor Andre Previn is taking that job with the Pittsburgh symphony? I thought he and wife Mia Farrow preferred living abroad. — B.Y., Montgomery, Ala.

A: Andre is reported to want an American career rather than continue to be an expatriate. The Frowns adore America and always try to vacation here. They were in Martha's Vineyard last summer and will be there again as quietly as possible this year, bridling along the newest member of the family. — a Vietnam orphan (her second).

Q: Why did Bob Hope say he'd like to go a couple of rounds with Hermoine Baddeley, the English actress? Is it a feud? — G.W., Gainesville, Tex.

A: You misunderstood what Hope intended to do a joke on his 72nd birthday. He said, "I could go a couple of rounds with Hermoine Baddeley any time." Hope has nothing but a couple of rounds with Hermoine Baddeley, the housekeeper for "Maude" on TV.
