Russ rocket into orbit

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

Two Russian cosmonauts carrying a United Nations flag rocketed flawlessly into orbit from a Central Asian desert today 7 1/2 hours before three Americans were scheduled to blast off for history's first meeting in space of men from two nations.

Col. Alexei Leonov and civilian flight engineer Valeri Kubasov reported their Soyuz 19 spacecraft was working perfectly as it circled the globe in the opening half of the international project drawing the attention of millions around the world.

America's Apollo astronauts Thomas Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton waited patiently at Cape Canaveral, Fla., for launch at 1:50 p.m. MDT in pursuit of their Russian comrades. Congratulations from the Americans were radioed to the cosmonauts nearly two hours after launch.

"Thank you very much," Leonov said. "Everything is perfect."

Two cosmonauts went into orbit. He said he was "very impressed."

The countdown at the Florida ocean-side "spaceport" was clicking along without a hitch and project officials reported the best weather there in months.

If all goes according to plan, the five spacemen will meet in orbit Thursday, docking 136 miles above Germany. The symbolic handshake will come three hours later when Stafford floats through a special docking module attached to Soyuz.

Leonov, 47-year-old Soyuz commander, and Kubasov, 40, blasted away only five thousandths of a second later at 2:00 a.m. MDT from Baikounur Cosmodrom near the town of Tyuratam east of the Aral Sea.

With Soviet television bearing the view to hundreds of millions of persons around the globe for the first time, the 162-foot, 20-engine Soyuz rocket climbed slowly out of a pit in its concrete firing pad and rose over the flat, hot expanse of the Russian base that opened the space age in 1957 with Sputnik.

The rocket's engines, gulping liquid oxygen and kerosene, produced 1.5 million pounds of thrust. Their combined red and orange flame soon became all that could be seen as the booster accelerated in the clear sky.

The cosmonauts gave a running technical commentary in Russian of the launch phase.

"Very slight swinging," Leonov said. "Pressure normal. Everything is perfect. Little overload (pull against gravity) but it is possible to work under these conditions."

"One hundred and sixty seconds and the sky is very, very blue," one of the pilots said. "Saw little white snowflakes."

Ten minutes after launch, Soyuz went into an orbit ranging from 137 to 116 miles high.

Road districts offer reward

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four highway districts have joined to offer $1,000 rewards for information about vandals who removed a stop sign which led to the death of three persons or any other road sign vandalism.

The $1,000 rewards were announced by board chairman Kenneth Poe at a special meeting of the Twin Falls Highway District early today.

The reward decision was made following the Saturday crash in which three people died when their car drove through an intersection whose stop signs had been uprooted.

In addition to the Twin Falls district, Filer, Buhl and Murtaugh highway districts have joined in the reward program.

Highway trustee Ora Jones said the board took a tour Monday and found a number of areas in the district where there are no signs. He said it is impossible to keep them up because of vandals. These are in remote areas where traffic is not heavy, but where signs have originally been located.

Areas such as the corner south of Curry require frequent resigning, he said.

Uroy Shumaker, board member, said he feels the removal of stop signs or other warning signs should be more than a misdemeanor because people's lives depend on these warnings.

"Anyone who drives a car should know the importance of these signs, if they have passed the driver's test. These people have no excuse for vandalizing the signs," Shumaker said.

"It doesn't take much of a man to tear out a sign, or much of a sportsman to shoot up a sign," he said.

Although monetary value of the signs, posts and labor to replace them is not the major factor, Poe said, the districts spend hundreds of dollars a month in attempting to keep important crossroads signed.

Poe said last year taxpayers spent $6,250 for signing in the Twin Falls Highway District, most of it replacement of damaged signs.

Vote today in Murtaugh

MURTAUGH — Murtaugh voters will go to the polls today to determine the fate of a proposed $190,000 water and sewer revenue bond issue.

If the bond issue is approved, Murtaugh will build a city water system and assume the mortgage on its present sewer system. A water system would be a first for the community, which has never had water beyond the individual wells used by most residents.

The $190,000 generated by the bond issue would be added to a $43,000 grant already approved by the Farmers Home Administration. Total cost of the joint water and sewer project is estimated at $233,000.

Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at the home of City Clerk Elva Petersen.

The proposed water system would use a pump, water tank and other installation which now provides water for the Staley store plant which opened in Murtaugh about a year ago.

Of the $190,000 proposed in the bond issue, about $97,000 would be used to build the water system and the remaining $93,000 would be used to buy the mortgage on the city sewer system installed in 1969. The sewer system is now owned by the Murtaugh Water and Sewage Association.

If the bond issue passes, Murtaugh residents can expect an increase of $1.40 a month in their water and sewer bills, according to Mrs. Petersen.

Current sewer charges are $7 per month. Mrs. Petersen said, and with the addition of a water system the combined billing would climb to an estimated $15 to $17 charge per month.

A simple majority is needed to pass the issue.

GA's hike predicted
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb said Monday that President Ford's compromise control plan which would increase the price of gasoline seven cents a gallon by 1976 was designed to increase domestic production while limiting excess profits for oil companies to be fair to consumers.

"Will it do the job?" Zarb asked. "We think it will. Will it make everybody happy? Probably not."

Japan sets US gift

TOKYO (UPI) — The Kyodo news service reported today that Japan would give the United States a $3 million theater on the top floor of the Kennedy Center in Washington and a cherry blossom park at a west coast location on occasion of America's 200th birthday next year.

Kyodo said the gifts were agreed on at a meeting of a government-civilian group appointed by Prime Minister Takeo MIKI to select Japan's gifts to the U.S. Bicentennial.

The selections have to be approved by MIKI.

Governor lists appeal

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter said Monday that of all the likely presidential candidates he himself can appeal to all segments of the political spectrum.

Carter said he will draw on his experience as a peanut farmer, on his administrative success as governor in Georgia, and on his expertise as a state senator and school board member. He says his background as a nuclear physicist and a businessman won't hurt him, either.

Yakima man killed at GF

GLENN'S FERRY, Idaho (UPI) — Jack Kyle Silva, 63, Yakima, Wash., died Monday night when he lost control of his car and it careened down a steep embankment at a high rate of speed.

State police said Silva was spunbound on U.S. 30 about one mile east of Glenn's Ferry when the car went off the right side of the road. It struck a boulder and overturned.

Silva and a passenger, Kenneth Dwayne Morik, Phoenix, Ariz., were thrown from the vehicle.

Cassia school drafts bias plan

By DAVID BOCKMAN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — One day before a federal deadline, Cassia school trustees approved a plan to eliminate discrimination against Chicano students in district schools.

The plan was described in a letter written by Supt. Harold Blauer. It proposes an education program providing "equal educational opportunities for all students" and promises to pay particular attention to language and cultural barriers that prevent minority students from getting an equal education.

The letter also promises to establish a discipline policy that is "just and free of bias and provide for the rights of due process."

The "preliminary" plan calls for implementing "special bilingual education programs," by June, but the plan does not elaborate on the program.

The plan also intends to develop "non-discriminatory" curriculum by December, also without elaboration.

The plan also calls for writing a student rights and responsibilities handbook by September and proposes revision of the Federal Civil Rights act and in May ordered the district to form a plan complying with the act by today.

An affirmative action hiring plan would be developed by January, according to the letter.

The hiring plan should eventually bring in teachers "representative of the community's ethnic makeup," the letter says, a term suggesting a teacher mix of about 10 per cent Chicanos.

The trustees unanimously voted to approve the letter in response to an order of compliance by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW had charged the school district with several violations of the Federal Civil Rights act and in May ordered the district to form a plan complying with the act by today.

HEW has charged the district with failing to develop a curriculum meeting language and cultural needs of Chicano students. HEW also says the district disciplines Chicanos more frequently and more severely than other students and assigns a disproportionate number of minority students to special education and "language-learning-disability" classes.

The board rejected without a vote a sentence in the letter that would have "welcomed" technical help from HEW to bring the district into compliance.

School attorney Herman Bodie advised against seeking federal assistance to keep control in local hands.

Extension kept on oil prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate today approved a six-month extension of emergency legislation that has kept the price of nearly two-thirds of American-produced oil from soaring to world levels.

The Senate's swift action came one day after President Ford announced he would ask Congress to let the controlled price of oil rise from $5.25 to $12.50 a barrel over the next 30 months.

Congressional liberals plan to fight Ford's decontrol plan. Under existing law, it goes into effect automatically unless either the Senate or House rejects it within five working days after it is submitted.

Energy Administration Frank Zarb said the plan would be sent to Congress Wednesday.

The current control law expires at the end of August. Unless Congress approves an extension and it is accepted by Ford or his veto of it is overridden, the price of "old oil" could jump from the present $5.25 a barrel to around $12 a barrel being charged by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

"Old oil" — the price of which is now controlled — represents oil from wells producing before 1973 and accounts for about 60 per cent of domestic output. The price of oil that came into production after 1973, or "new oil," is not controlled.

The Senate passed legislation, which was sent to the House for action, also extends authority for the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) to order power plants — which have the capability — to switch from oil to gas to coal.

There was no debate on the bill today. Attempts yesterday to limit the extension to four months and to add other amendments were soundly defeated.

75¢ gasoline?

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Gasoline prices probably will hit 75 to 76 cents a gallon by Thanksgiving, according to Lewis Haskell, president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

"All the major oil companies are afloat with crude oil, but the refineries have cut back 15 to 20 per cent," Haskell told a news conference Monday.

Haskell said reduced production would trigger higher prices, boosting prices to 70 to 75 cents a gallon by Thanksgiving.

"I would rather see rationing than see the prices keep going up," he said. "We could allocate it for the rich and poor alike, but prices increases hit the working class."

Elections postponed

NEW DELHI (UPI) — The Indian government will postpone elections to the legislative Assembly in the Southern state of Kerala where a mass campaign against the country's state of emergency is under way, a lawmaker said today.

The postponement of the Kerala elections could be an advance indication that the government may skip the national elections due in February- March next year, the lawmaker said.

Food prices rise again

By DIANE ALTERS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After stabilizing over the last six months, food prices in Twin Falls are again on the rise.

The cost of a market basket of food was up about 2.3 per cent over last month's prices. Items which would have cost $20 last month would cost $20.46 this month.

Prices stood at a 2 per cent above a year ago, when the same grocery basket would have cost $19.93.

Potato prices leaped 62 per cent this month, with the price of a 10-pound sack ranging from $1.39 to $1.96, averaging $1.67. Last month's average was only $1.03, with the sack price ranging from 89 cents to $1.19. In the five weeks checked in the Times-News survey, last July's 10-pound sack averaged $1.52.

Combined with small increases in bacon, ground beef and some staples, the market basket would have been far costlier if the price of sugar hadn't dropped $2.2 per cent.

Sugar, which averaged $5.52 for 10 pounds at the end of the year, has dropped rapidly to this month's low average of $2.39 for 10 pounds, down 23.2 per cent from the $3.11 average last month. Store prices for the 10 pounds ranged from $2.33 to $2.49.

Last July's prices were 31 per cent higher at an average of $3.46 for 10 pounds.

Shoppers this month will again increase in bacon, ham, sausage and beef. Bacon, although it was only 2.8 per cent higher than last month at an average of $1.44 a pound, is a 31/2 per cent higher than it was a year ago when the average price was only $1.15 a pound. Last month's bacon prices averaged $1.77 a pound.

The Times-News survey takes account of 20 items in a typical market basket adjusted to their use in a typical household.

2 escaped elephants cause worry

TWINGO, Okla. (UPI) — The owners of Isa and Lilly, two young elephants frightened away from their companions at a watering hole, said Monday the 1,500-pound babies probably are having a great time alone in the woods. "I know they are having a better time than I am because they're not worrying about me," the representative of the Carson-Barnes Circus said. "But I am worrying about them."

"There's plenty of vegetation out there for them to eat — grass and tree leaves and the kind of things they like," she said. "Wherever they are, they're probably having a ball."

Three die in N.J. flood

By United Press International
N.J. — Patrolman John Guerinro clung to the underside of a bridge, pressing his face into a tiny air pocket and sucking in breath as the rain-swollen Third River tore at his body and swirled about his head. Rescue workers thought he had drowned trying to save a dog — who had been hanging from a tree limb over the raging river. A patrolman held one of Guerinro's drenched shoes that had washed to the bank. Then a worker standing above the bridge suddenly became aware of a dull tapping underneath his foot. It was Guerinro, who below was hanging in a death grip and pounding the cement. Rescue workers drilled through 16 inches of concrete and pulled Guerinro through to safety. But three other persons weren't as lucky. Another Nutley municipal employe, identified as Lou Bolcato, drowned Monday when he was swept into the river while attempting to rescue the boy. Bolcato was a heavy equipment operator who was doing flood control work near the river. The boy was lost to safety by his friend. Heavy rains which soaked New Jersey Sunday and Monday left at least three persons dead and caused some $2 million in damage to crops. Charles Cappozzo, 17, of Warren Township, drowned in Toms Brook while floating on a home-made raft in the swift currents. An unidentified elderly man drowned in the Passaic River near Kearny.

Kangaroo forsakes big city?

—DECATUR, Ill. (UPI) — The Kangaroo that fought policemen in Chicago last fall may have forsaken the big city for the quieter atmosphere of central Illinois. Rosemary Hopwood of St. Elmo spotted a kangaroo on Illinois 128 near Dolton, where she and a group of several motorists to spot the marsupial. Several sightings have been reported around the state since last fall, when 10 Chicago policemen corralled a kangaroo in an alley and tried to handcuff it. Both officers were hospitalized and the kangaroo hopped off. The police never have learned the kangaroo's origin.

Russ blastoff said flawless

"The program of flight for the first orbit has been normal," said Moscow control as the 25-foot spaceship went into its second 86-minute swing around Earth. The basic objective of the Apollo-Soyuz mission is to demonstrate that men of different languages, using different technologies and speaking different languages, can rendezvous and link up in orbit. This could be used for future rescue flights and more ambitious cooperative ventures.

U. S. Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel Jr., his wife and two other Americans watched the launch from the cosmodrome. They were the first Westerners to see a manned shot there. President Ford watched the shot on television with Russian ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin in a ceremony watched with delight in Washington. The ambassador then flew to Florida to see the Apollo blastoff.

Twice the 300 viewers in the State Department auditorium burst into applause during the show from Russia and both times it was the President, his hands raised over his head and clapping, who led the cheering. "I am impressed," Ford said. "I am very impressed. I wish them well."

"The launch marks the beginning of a very epic venture into space. It's my judgment that this joint space mission is a truly historic occasion. Never before have representatives of two countries lived and worked together in space. They have a wonderful, unique opportunity as a result."

In Moscow, Secretary Leonid Brezhnev wished the spacemen a safe journey and a successful accomplishment of the mission. Small crowds stood outside Moscow radio and television stores to watch and listen. "They're off," the citizens said as the white space-reeb-ay-ward-it was the first time a space shot had been televised live in Russia. "We see this mission as a contribution to space navigation as well as a contribution made by space explorers to the consolidation of friendship between peoples," said Lt. Gen. Vladimir Shatalov, the cosmonaut training chief. Aboard Soyuz 19 was a United Nations flag the cosmonauts plan to give to the Americans who will bring it back to Earth for presentation to the United Nations. Both spaceships also carried seeds, medallions and other gifts to be exchanged.

The Apollo also had 8 ounces of gold and 45 ounces of lead to be melted and mixed in a special furnace in the Apollo. Some of the resulting alloy will be presented to the Russians. On the American crew, Stafford, 44, was making his first spaceflight. But it was the first for Brand, 44, and Slayton, 51-year-old Mercury pilot grounded for years by a minor heart irregularity. Leonov and Kubasov were scheduled to parachute to a landing on the Siberian plain near Karaganda Monday. The Apollo astronauts planned to stay in orbit three additional days to carry out experiments, splashing down in the Pacific Ocean July 24.

US warehouse seized in Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Communist police have seized a U.S. information service warehouse for a second time, one hour after Laotian authorities returned to the Americans, an embassy spokesman said today. The warehouse, which contains office supplies and furniture, is one of three U.S. facilities held by the Communist Pathet Lao since their seizure by militant youths more than two weeks ago. An embassy spokesman said the warehouse was promised to the Americans late Monday but the Pathet Lao asked to delay the actual physical turnover until after dinner. The Americans changed the lock and went to eat. The spokesman said one Pathet Lao guard was left at the facility but when embassy personnel returned later in the evening to take possession of the building they found four more Communist soldiers. The spokesman said during the dinner break student guards visited the warehouse and ordered the Pathet Lao students to stay at the building and keep the Americans out. The embassy spokesman said the issue would be discussed with foreign ministry officials. In addition to the USIS warehouse, the Pathet Lao are also holding the General Services Organization warehouse and an American housing compound. All three facilities, along with the USIS library, were seized by Communist police and students 17 days ago. The library was returned one week later because it was a cultural facility.

First case lost

BOISE (UPI) — Law students at the University of Idaho lost their first case Monday.

Federal Judge Roy McNichols upheld the validity of a $100 per semester tuition fee charged the students for construction of the law building on the university campus at Moscow.

McNichols, ruling from the bench, said there was no constitutional infirmity in the imposition of the fee against the law students inasmuch as the law school was a unique professional school on the university campus. He said plaintiffs were not deprived of equal protection of the laws nor was their property taken without due process.

He further held that the use of the building by non-law students was not unreasonable.

Wind storm hits Boise

BOISE (UPI) — A wind swept storm lasting only a matter of minutes pelted the Boise area early Monday evening, with rain and hail stones the size of marbles.

The abbreviated storm caused some crop damage and knocked out power in several sections of Boise.

The National Weather Service said it was unable to give an accurate reading of the wind velocity because of a power failure at its facilities at the Boise airport, although a meteorologist said that the winds were generally 25-30 miles per hour. There were reports of gusts over 50 miles per hour.

The meteorologist said that an "inch of rain fall" was recorded in a two-minute period.

He said there were storms throughout the area, but the one that struck the immediate Boise area was in a narrow band across the Boise Valley.

'KRAMIEN' ... master magician

Optimists present 'mad man of magic'

TWIN FALLS — A magic show is coming to the College of Southern Idaho July 23.

"Magic-Capades", sponsored by the Optimist Club, will feature master magician "Kramien" who the late broadcaster Walter Winchell dubbed the "mad man of magic."

In this show Kramien will levitate a young lady over his head. He will remove the center section of another young beauty and will change another girl into a huge live Great Dane. Live animals, birds and girls appear and disappear in a fast moving show.

Magie Capades has just completed a tour of major cities in the east and played to capacity crowds in the national armory in Washington, D.C.

The show will be held at the CSI Fine Arts Center at 4:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $2 and proceeds will go to fund Optimist projects.

BOISE (UPI) — Review of guidelines and approval of 1975-76 applications for Land and Water Conservation funds will be high on the agenda of the Idaho Parks and Recreation Board meeting July 23-24 in McCall.

The board also will consider the 1975-76 proposed budget presentation for the Department of Parks and Recreation, Steven Bly, agency director, said Monday.

It will be the first board meeting chaired by Kent Gist of Fruiland, who was elected chairman at the spring meeting. It also will be the first meeting for two new board members appointed last month — Joyce Wilson, St. Anthony, and Herman McDevitt, Pocatello.

TF youth arrested

TWIN FALLS — A 16-year-old Twin Falls youth was being held in the Twin Falls County Jail today following the alleged theft of two pickup trucks.

Sheriff Paul Corder said the youth allegedly stole the two trucks from the area of the Highway 93 - Highway 30 interchange Sunday.

The youth got stuck in the first stolen truck before taking the second, Corder said.

He said the arrest occurred at the youth's home after he had taken the second truck to Boise and then returned.

Juvenile petitions are pending, Corder said.

Credit union charged

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County Prosecutor David Leroy accused the Public Employees Credit Union Monday of running an illegal lottery and a magistrate ordered it to show cause why its prize should not be seized.

Leroy asked the court for an order requiring the credit union to show cause why a 1975 Volkswagen Sun Bug automobile it was offering members should not be seized as a violation of the lottery act.

He based his action on an affidavit from Deputy Attorney General Rudy Barchas who contended a deposit drive being conducted by the credit union actually was a lottery because it contained the elements of chance, consideration and prize.

Barchas said in his affidavit he wrote to the credit union manager, Mrs. Frances West, and advised her this giveaway appeared to constitute an illegal lottery. But, he said, the credit union "by its manager gives every appearance of continuing its giveaway program and has scheduled the final drawing and disbursement of the Volkswagen Sun Bug for July 23."

He said the scheme constitutes an illegal lottery under Idaho code and that the car "constitutes property offered for sale or distribution in violation of the provisions prohibiting illegal lotteries and is appropriate for seizure and possible forfeiture."

Magistrate Alan Smith ordered the credit union to show cause at 3:30 p.m. next Monday why he should not order seizure of the car.

Hanson may seek post

BOISE — Max Hanson, defeated candidate for U.S. Congress in 1974, says he is "leaning toward" making another attempt for the seat now occupied by Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho.

Max Hanson, Boise, unsuccessfully ran on the Democratic ticket against George Hansen in 1974. He also had run for governor in 1968 but was narrowly defeated in the primary.

Today Hanson told the Times-News he is "leaning toward" running again for Idaho's second district congressional seat. But he said he has not definitely made up his mind. At his point, he said, his decision hinges on whether he has the money to enter the campaign.

Editor, Times-News:
 (Reading Senator McClure's spring report.)
 In the report you say for youngsters to think back on the qualities which have made our nation great:

1. I'd say first of all the people who came here were thinkers; and rebels who dared to face a wilderness of wild Indians rather than endure the desolation of Europe.
2. The economic freedom which is the base, the foundation, the root of all freedom. Where economic freedom is destroyed, all other freedoms soon wither on the vine.
- a. The right to own and control the family sized farm. b. The right to vote for public officials. c. Our free public school system. d. Public land survey. The land was surveyed on the basis of the family sized farm. One section in each 36 section.

All land below the Rio Grande River was parcelled out under the Spanish-Grant system where large estates were given to individuals. The people were slaves or peons to the nobility. All land was owned and controlled by a few.

In Canada, the central government owns the land and farmers are just given a permit to use the land. People are British subjects. In the U.S. we are U.S. citizens.

We have progressed far ahead because of economic freedom. Yankee ingenuity and constitutional form of government.

Our greatest problem today seems to be in-nation. The Constitution says Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof. In 1913 the Federal Reserve took over the job. They just pour more water in the soup. I think we now are ready for the 10 cent dollar. That is why everything costs so much.

You made a TOSY report on the Hells Canyon bill, but how far can you trust the federal government? Senator McClure.

I would say about as far as you can throw a bull by the tail. According to Senator Len Jordan, all our Southern-Idaho-water comes under state laws and now you sell us down the river and give control to the federal government. Where do we stand?

Sixty-five per cent of Idaho is now under federal control. I guess you fellows would give it all away if you could. Where do the taxes go on the 65 per cent?

I think with all those city slickers controlling Congress, you might as well stay home. You sure made a big trip to the Middle East.

Isn't it the duty of the state governor and legislature to defend us against Federal encroachment. What have they been doing?

In 1966, Idaho paid $264,785,000 to the Federal Income Tax. At $40,000,000 cost, that would build six American Falls dams and have $24,785,000 left over. Don't you think we had better keep our money home and build our own dam? Water is the blood of Idaho.

"We're sinking! Lighten the load!"

Editor Times-News:
 Although it has been some months since my visit to your city, I feel compelled to write to your newspaper to express my opinion on a situation that exists in your area.

Earlier in the year, I was on vacation visiting some relatives in Twin Falls with my daughter and our 2-month-old daughter. I was excitedly relating to my sister the birth of our daughter and saying that a comfort and relief it was to have my husband there by my side throughout the entire labor and delivery.

He added that the birth of our little girl was, by far, the greatest experience of his life.

I was also explaining my current involvement as a class assistant in childbirth classes. It was then that she informed me that the father is not considered an instrumental factor in the labor and delivery procedures at Magie Valley Memorial Hospital.

I find this such a shame! As it takes both parents to create a child, I feel it also takes both parents to bear and deliver a child. In labor, nothing is more comforting than having a supportive husband by your side, guiding you through each contraction that helps to bring new life closer to entering the world.

Both parents are offered an insight into the mechanics of labor and delivery as well as a chance to learn techniques to help cope with labor and delivery through classes offered by an affiliate of the national Educated Childbirth, Incorporated. Being involved as I am with the Lakewood Childbirth Center, I find it so disheartening to find an area where the classes are offered and then the fathers are denied the right to see their child born.

Because of the classes, a father is not totally ignorant of childbirth and the course it follows. A husband can know what to expect and help his wife to handle the situation. It is much easier to build a house with two people working together than just one alone trying to do all the work.

Basically, what I am trying to say is that prepared childbirth is for both parents — not just for the mother who is delivering. If people are making an effort to offer classes, shouldn't the doctors and the hospital also make an effort? I cannot see where any major harm can come from an informed father watching his child be born.

There certainly have been no adverse effects from this type of practice at any of the hospitals in this area. There's

Movie on gun criticized

Editor, Times-News:
 I have just finished watching a very disgusting movie on television. It was the ABC Tuesday Night Movie entitled "The Gun." This movie starts with the final assembly of a revolver at the factory, then follows the gun as it is passed from one person to another by various means. It ends with a small boy shooting himself with the gun.

With the events in the movie could have happened, I have no argument with the movie script on that note. But, the movie put forth the idea that the gun was at fault; and yes, even evil. Now any intelligent thinking person knows that a gun is a piece of machinery, having no brain and is therefore incapable of any action on its own part.

The various people in the movie who possessed the gun (all but one by illegal means) were at fault for the circumstances in which the gun was used. At the end of the movie, a small boy shoots himself with "The Gun." Upon seeing this, a good many TV viewers will emphatically state "those evil things should be outlawed!"

Several children have been killed in Idaho this year when their parents backed over them with the family car (again an unthinking piece of machinery), but no one demands that cars should be outlawed.

One final thought: Several years ago, the well meaning but misguided state legislature passed a law outlawing "dangerous" fireworks, firecrackers, rockets, etc. The result? Firecrackers, bottle rockets, cherry bombs and whatever were detonated in profusion on the Fourth of July. Banning handguns, liquor or anything will have the same results, namely the opening of a black market for the object that has been outlawed.

Perrine bridge pedestrian mall?

Editor, Times-News:
 This is a copy of a letter sent to the County Planning Council.

Dear Sir:

I don't know if I am writing to the right place or not but I have an idea or two concerning the construction taking place at the Perrine Bridge. My idea concerns the old bridge rather than the new one now being built.

It is my understanding that plans call for demolition of the old bridge once the new one is completed. While I have no idea what the cost involved there is, I assume it to be considerable. At any rate more than what I have in mind.

Why not convert the old bridge into a real tourist attraction? A pedestrian mall. The possibilities are endless. A wire mesh could be built to completely cover the bridge so as to protect sightseers. This is done frequently on crosswalks that must span busy thoroughfares.

Ample space could be provided at either end of the bridge for parking. In fact there is enough available land so there could be concessions, cafes, shops and whatever else demand would call for and space would allow. There would be only foot traffic on the concourse with one exception: a bike path.

It has been pointed out there is now no legal way for bike riders to cross the Snake River at this point. Short of using it to their backs and swimming across. It's a long way around to get back and forth to the north side. This would solve the bike problem.

Anyone who has seen people trying to walk out on the bridge to take pictures or just look at the magnificent view will see the wisdom and the possibilities of a pedestrian mall. In the process we would be preserving one of the oldest monuments in the area.

And the cost? It should be much less than the cost of tearing it down. In fact it is possible that it would cost the taxpayer nothing. If the right businessmen got a vision of the many possibilities involved here they might even be willing to bid for the rights to operate a concession and those who won those bids would share jointly in the cost of the entire project.

I am sending similar letters to one or two other parties. I have found interest in this already. I believe it is worth looking into. Why don't we explore it?

Ford woos conservatives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's vetoes of legislation produced by the Democratic majority in Congress have been inspired by his need to win the favor of the "ultraconservative" wing of the Republican Party, says House majority leader Thomas P. O'Neill.

O'Neill's "opposite" number, minority leader John J. Rhodes, says the vetoes approve of the vetoes.

The two were interviewed separately in U.S. News & World Report.

Ford, whom O'Neill called "King Veto," will veto any piece of legislation that we send him in order to curry favor with that wing of the party that has been giving him a hard time," the majority leader said. "Then he hopes to come back and compromise."

Predicting more vetoes, O'Neill said Ford "lost a wing of his own party when he chose Mr. Rockefeller as vice president... President Ford realizes he is in trouble with that ultraconservative group, and he is moving to recapture them."

Rhodes said, "The grass-roots is supporting the vetoes much more than the original legislation" because they are most concerned about inflation.

By passing bills they know will be vetoed, the Democrats "are trying to make some kind of record which (they) feel will help them in 1976," he said.

"We don't think there is anything to be gained either politically or in the interests of the welfare of the country, by trying to 'me too' the old Democratic philosophy of 'spend and spend and elect and elect,'" the minority leader said.

"We think the country is getting pretty sick of that."

$46 million in gifts disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Exxon Corp. has disclosed gifts of $46 million to Italian politicians, the largest amount for any company since federal probes in 1973 began uncovering the corporate financing role in U.S. and world politics.

Exxon said political contributions are legal in Italy, but acknowledged that its subsidiary Esso Italiana had disguised the gifts for nine years "so that they could not be identified as political contributions."

"This was a mistake," Exxon said in a statement Monday. Exxon said the practice was stopped in 1971, two years before the Watergate investigations discovered illegal involvement of corporations in U.S. politics.

Exxon disclosed the amount of its contributions in Italy in advance of company officials' testimony Wednesday before the Senate multinational corporations subcommittee, which has been investigating foreign payments by U.S. companies.

Exxon's gifts outstrip those of other U.S. corporations that have either disclosed, or been required by law to disclose, legal and illegal domestic and foreign political contributions. Gulf Oil reported paying $5 million in gifts and bribes to politicians in South Korea, Bolivia, Lebanon and Italy.

More than 20 U.S. corporations and corporate executives have been convicted of making illegal contributions to the campaigns of President Nixon and other politicians from 1960 to 1972. Exxon was not among that group and repeated earlier statements that no contributions were made to domestic candidates.

But the oil giant said Esso Italiana contributed $27 million and the local managing director, Vincenzo Cazzaniga, gave another $19 million.

Dooley foundation leaving America

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Thomas A. Dooley Foundation is moving to Europe and leaving the American flag behind, according to its founder.

"We as an organization will have to get rid of the American flag," Dr. Verne E. Chaney Jr., said Monday in announcing the move to Geneva.

Chaney set up the foundation in 1961 after the cancer death of Thomas Dooley, a fierce anti-Communist who had become known for his medical clinics in Indochina, starting with refugees in South Vietnam in 1954.

The foundation headquarters in San Francisco subsequently maintained a string of jungle hospitals in Southeast Asia. Chaney said he expects the work to continue after the foundation moves to its new headquarters and assumes a new name — still undecided.

"We are seeing the end of a period of history," Chaney said. The theme of American humanitarian organizations like Dooley, the Hospital Ship City of Hope, and the Peace Corps is drawing to a close.

"They represent, in the eyes of leaders of emerging nations, the last vestige of colonialism and imperialist power," Chaney, who worked with Dooley in Southeast Asia in the late 1950s, said the foundation's new title will include the name Dooley.

The fall of the American supported government in Saigon led to closure of the foundation's orphanage in Saigon and the staff was reduced from 11 to two employees because of recent U.S. demonstrations by leftist students, he said.

"The needs are still the same but the rhetoric of the 1950s will no longer do," he said.

Some walkouts seen in cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contract talks between the postal service and its unions may extend beyond next Monday's strike deadline, but there may be some walkouts in big cities, according to a union source.

W.J. Usery Jr., White House special assistant for labor management relations, brought the two sides together for long weekend sessions and more took place Monday.

Usery, also trying to prevent a nationwide railway strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT Monday, said "we run the risk of demonstrations" by disgruntled postal workers after Sunday night.

"Demonstrations are everything from people walking around with signs just demonstrating to people not showing up for work for one reason or another," he said.

The outcome of the postal negotiations certainly will influence the size of the deficit of operations by the U.S. Postal Service. Even if there is no raise, however, postal officials acknowledge rate increases are needed to get the system out of the red.

Money and fringe benefits were at issue. But the union source said "the unions have made it clear the no-layoff clause must be continued in the next contract. That's not even negotiable. I think they got the message now."

The unions represent about 665,000 workers in all, including the American Postal Worker Union, the National Association of Letter Carriers and the National Post Office Mail Handlers, Watchmen and Group Leaders' division of the Laborers International Union, all AFL-CIO, and the independent National Rural Letter Carriers Association.

Brush fire burning in California

WARNER SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — A brush fire razing out of control across 2,000 acres of Southern California countryside forced the evacuation today of the small community of Ranchita, 35 miles northeast of San Diego.

Shifting winds turned the fire south along an eight-mile front, forcing some 40 people to abandon their homes, smothered by flames, just after midnight.

Residents were taken to an evacuation center set up at Warner Springs Division.

A California "Division of Forestry" spokesman said the blaze was "ironically, the result of a fire prevention project that started Monday afternoon in the Anza-Borrego Desert State Park wilderness area, about midway between Escondido and the Salton Sea, and moved towards the small Ranchita settlement.

HENRY KISSINGER speaks

Kissinger raps 'third world'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has warned developing nations they are undermining the United Nations and jeopardizing their future.

In a speech Monday night, Kissinger said "third-world" or developing nations have used "opposed, loaded voting, biased results and arbitrary tactics" in the UN General Assembly.

"The utility of the General Assembly both as a safety valve and as a center of international cooperation is being undermined," he said.

Tragically, the principal victims will be the countries who seek to restore what substantially could be theirs if they proceeded cooperatively.

Kissinger, who is in Milwaukee to throw out the first ball in tonight's All-Star baseball game, addressed an overflow audience at a dinner sponsored by the Institute of World Affairs of the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

While there are the nagging problems of the Middle East, nuclear arms reductions, and other issues, Kissinger said, there is also the major problem of global economic concerns. This fall's special session of the General Assembly will be an early and important test: "Will the rich nations and poor nations identify their common goals and solve problems together?"

"Never before has the world been more in need of cooperative solutions," Kissinger said.

"We are eager to cooperate, but we are also determined to insist on orderly procedures and adherence to the charter. The United Nations was never intended as an organization of like-minded states, but rather an arena to accommodate and receive different policies and different interests."

Vigilantes alerted

LISBON (UPI) — The Communists and other extreme left groups alerted their vigilantes today in response to Socialist calls for a mass protest against the creation of a military-dominated Communist state. Clashes seemed almost certain.

In what appeared to be a dangerous development the Communist party called the demonstration to be held outside the Socialist party's national headquarters at 7:30 p.m. — the site of the Socialist rally.

"We appeal to the workers, the popular masses and all revolutionaries to be vigilant and to unite and organize themselves to prevent any counter-revolutionary adventures," a Communist statement said.

At least two extreme left splinter groups made similar calls.

'It pulls at your heartstrings'

CAPT. GANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Rinkey Geiger has been to 14 baseball World Series and has never missed a rocket launch "from the beaches of his boyhood."

"There's nothing like being in the ball park," said the 41-year-old historic resident of Brevard County. "It's the thrill of being there, even though you're better informed watching television, whether it's a ball game or a space shot."

Geiger, who retired as postmaster of nearby Cocoa three years ago, joined tens of thousands of others today to watch the American astronauts blast off for a space date with the Russians on Monday.

"When there's a man in there, everybody's holding their breath, and praying," added Geiger, who says he has watched them all "since Von Braun and those boys shot that V-2."

"It pulls at your religion and your heartstrings, too," he said.

Not all the crowd-on-the-beaches to watch the last American manned shot into space for at least four years shared Geiger's enthusiasm.

"I don't know why they have to spend millions to go shake hands in space when they can't do it on earth," fumed Leslie Smith, 22, attractive blonde daughter of a former space worker. "It fascinates me to watch them, but I just don't understand why they're doing it."

Days before the launch, the Florida Highway Patrol was predicting a crowd of up to one million persons to view this last act in the long run of Apollo. But on the eve of the launch, Whitey Bridges was serving beer in Mason Jars labeled "Rocket Fuel" at his Anchor Club on the beach and frothing.

"If they're going to come, they damn well better hurry," he said. "Most of the folks here are local people."

But a brunette with a

Mississippi voter, who stopped to ask advice, gave evidence all the motels in the area were full.

"We've stopped in 15 already and I'm tired of asking," she said.

"I don't know why I drove all the way down here for this anyway, just to watch some rich people shoot up in the air and have fun."

Then there was George Carmichael, getting his 10-year pin Monday for service on the Redstone, a "missile tracking ship."

"It's something to see when it goes up," he said. "You see what you've accomplished. The American people should be proud of it."

And Gary Autry, who quit his job as a computer programmer because "it just wasn't fun — anymore" — and opened a snack bar on the beach.

"The rain and the newspapers scared everybody off," said Autry.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., has for some time been concerned with the Army's use of beagle puppies for test purposes.

Monday he asked Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to investigate charges the puppies, used in chemical warfare tests at the Edgewood Arsenal, Md., are being housed under intolerable conditions.

Aspin referred to a recent inspection of the facility by Humane Society officials. They found that at least 30 of 500 dogs were being kept in a building — where the temperature was over 100 degrees. Others were kept in overcrowded conditions, and still others were confined to cages with wire mesh floors.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1973 by Chicken House, Inc., New York, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I know you'll never print this because you cater women have the idea that we housewives are second-class citizens, but I've kept this poem for a long time and want to share it with you. (I never did find out who wrote it.)

JUST A HOUSEWIFE.
Hello, Mrs. Jones, I've just called to say I'm sorry I cried when you phoned today. No, I didn't get angry when your call came at 4:00. Just as eight cub scouts burst through the door: "It's just that I had such a really full day. I baked eight pies for the P.T.A."

Housewife's lament

And washing and ironing and scrubbing the floor. Were chores I had finished not too long before. The reason I cried and gave that big yelp Was not 'cause you phoned just to ask for my help. The comment that just about drove me berserk: "Wags." "I'm sure you'll have time because you don't work."

Sigh me.
A HAPPY HOMEMAKER
DEAR HAPPY: I think the poem is great. And for the record, before I became "Dear Abby" (at age 37), too, was a cub scout den mother, and I also baked my share of pies for the P.T.A.

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one who hates to have people come to my home for dinner and just sit there, picking at the food, and telling me they are on a diet and can't eat this and can't eat that!
After I have gone to the trouble of making a nice dinner, I get very annoyed when a dinner guest hardly eats enough to feed a bird.
If I were on a diet, I would tell the hostess not to count on me for dinner, but I'd come afterward.
It hardly pays to invite people over to eat anymore. Almost everybody is on a diet. Think I'll just pass out carrot and celery sticks, and let 'em chomp like horses.

DEAR ELLA: A thoughtful hostess includes some low-cal food for the caloric counters. And the ideal hostess pretends never to notice what her guests eat—or don't eat.

CONFIDENTIAL TO O. J. IN HOUSTON: The girl who steals your fiancé steals your troubles. Let her have him. He's too wishy-washy to make a good husband.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

ALBERTSON'S

TWIN FALLS AND BURLEY

Jerome firm on tax issue

JEROME — In spite of protests from disgruntled businessmen, the Jerome County Commission is standing behind the county's tax reassessment of commercial property. "On the average, I don't think anything is out of line," county commissioner Milford Jones said this morning. He said that the commission has found the county's reappraisal of property to be in accord with the guidelines set down by the Idaho Tax Commission and with judgments made by the Idaho Supreme Court. He said that about two weeks ago the Jerome Development Corp. had protested that tax reappraisals for businesses are exorbitant in the county; and that businesses are being discriminated against compared to other classes of property. In response, Jones said, the commission is sending out a letter today saying it "has decided to make no blanket changes in the appraisal policy but will consider each individual case on its merits." When reappraisals for a class are not completed in time, the property which has not been reappraised will be put on a "sub-tax roll," Jones said. He said this would allow for taxing the property equally with the previously assessed property by extending the date of possible taxation. Jones said that taxes will never be 100 per cent equitable but that the assessor is "doing the best he possibly can." When mistakes occur, he said, the county commission will consider them on an individual basis. To show that commercial property is not being taxed out of line with other property, Jones cited the following rates of increase in assessed value in Jerome County between 1968 and 1975: dry grazing, up 104 per cent; rural subdivision, up 300 per cent; rural improvements, up 122 per cent; farm machinery, up 20 per cent; residential lots, up 157 per cent; mobile homes, up 1,835 per cent. In comparison, he said, commercial property has risen in assessed value from $332,024 in 1969 to $2.4 million now, up 156 per cent. As with the other categories, new businesses in 1976 account for much of the rise, he said.

Equipment lease costs approved

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital trustees voted Monday to pay about $16,000 a year to lease new intensive care unit equipment. Dr. Charles Brumback, chairman of a committee named to check into the IC unit needs, recommended a five-year lease of General Electric equipment at a cost of $15,963.60 per year. He said there is a critical need for more monitoring equipment in the unit as there are seven beds, but only four being monitored at this time. There is a 90 per cent occupancy in the unit, he said, and many times nurses must determine which patient is in the most need of monitoring. He said with the proposed seven new units, all of which will provide double the patient monitoring the present units offer, and with a 90 per cent occupancy the hospital would be able to pay the yearly lease fee with about $8,000 a year net gain.

Brumback said the $25 per day for the monitoring units is too low, according to other hospitals, but without increasing fees the lease would still be more than covered by unit income.

The lease price, he said, covers full service and maintenance of the units. He said the four existing units, with no trade-in value, can be used in the recovery room and elsewhere in the hospital where it is necessary to monitor a patient. An eighth new unit would be acquired for use by patients outside of the IC unit but with special problems.

Outright purchase of the new equipment would be less than the lease, but there would be no maintenance and the lease will give the hospital an opportunity to "test" the equipment before purchasing. Dr. Brumback said. He said delivery has been assured within 60 days of order.

Dr. Roy Shaub, chief of the medical staff, told the board with the loss of five beds to reconstruction work, there were no beds available Monday night to handle any unit in care. He said the situation is serious and will probably continue this way until space is available for new beds. He also reviewed a new set of bylaws and regulations for the medical staff which the board adopted. Dr. Shaub said the medical doctors at the hospital donated $500 to the Larry Eklund fund, which he said was ignored by the "newspaper." Dr. Shaub also reported on the "muck" disaster drill of last week, which he said was successful except for some improvement in communications.

Building chairman Wood Percy reported progress is being made on the reconstruction program and the contractor is doing all possible to get the second floor area ready for additional beds.

Jerome woman still missing

JEROME — No lead has been made in the search for a missing 41-year-old Jerome woman whom police say may have been abducted. The Jerome sheriff's office said today that nothing has been determined in the disappearance of Mrs. Nora Cook, who was last seen about 1 a.m. June 27 in a Shoshone tavern, before she reportedly left in her vehicle with an unidentified passenger.

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council boosted city employe wages $25 a month, with the police chief and maintenance manager receiving $50 more. The city gave the raise after the regular 6-month review of employe wages. Chief of police Dan Norton argued that two men on his force were being underpaid $25 a month. He said he agreed to pay the men in January but failed to comply with the regulation. The council will review the case with Norton before giving the promised salary. In a related matter, city policeman Dennis Peterson will be paid $150 a month to act as city animal control officer. Peterson said he was now spending over 15 hours a week on his own time catching and caring for stray dogs. Peterson will continue to act as a policeman on a full-time basis. The $150 will be in addition to his regular salary. The council announced the old Fox building on the corner of Main and Croy Streets will be reopened. The council issued a building permit, Saturday to remodel the old structure after JUB, the city engineers, approved the new plans. The building has been condemned and a legal battle was forming between the city and the building's owner. The city now says the building can open with improvements and will contain a variety and a hairdressing shop.

Lincoln thistle

BYRON HALL, who stands 6 foot tall, is "shown up" by this scotch thistle plant that is appearing in Lincoln County. This particular patch where the weed stands a good 7 feet high along the Minter-Gooding canal bank about six miles northwest of Shoshone and is typical of the lush ground the noxious weed is making.

Thistles plague Lincoln

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County is being invaded by a "new weed called the scotch thistle," Byron Hall, county weed supervisor, told Lincoln County commissioners Monday.

Hall asked for landowners and farmers to be on the alert for the weed and to act fast to eradicate it. It spreads about three times faster than Canadian thistle. It first appeared in the county two years ago but has spread to serious proportions this year. The scotch thistle grows six to seven feet in height when it blossoms into a purple seed. It has long thorns and large, flat green leaves. During the early stages of development it can be easily controlled, Hall said, with a 2-4-3 spray, but after it has grown to a foot in height or more it is best controlled by simply cutting it down. Anyone with evidence of the weed on their property may secure further information by calling the county weed office, Hall said. To his knowledge, the weed is more or less confined to the North Shoshone area, Hall said.

Crews battle range fire

TWIN FALLS — A lightning-caused range fire at the edge of the farming area near Castleford burned about 2,000 acres Monday night. Bureau of Land Management crews battled the fire all night and by this morning it was pretty well contained, according to fire control officer Everett Goehour at the Boise office of the BLM. About 30 firefighters used four tankers, 6 helicopters and two bulldozers on the fire. Goehour said the lands were mainly BLM and the burn may have affected grazing, but estimates of extent of grazing land burned were available. Rancher Henry Gandiapa, whose ranch is on the other side of the canyon from the fire, said today the fire did not affect his land. In Lincoln County, a 350-acre man-caused range fire four miles south of Shoshone reportedly has been contained, although a 26-man crew with four tankers were still at the site this morning. The fire started at 2:30 a.m. today, according to Andy Payne at the Shoshone office of the BLM. Payne said he expects the fire to be under control about 2 p.m. today. He said the BLM called the fire man-caused because no lightning was sighted in the area. Lightning caused a 5-acre fire east of Eden Monday evening, but it is now extinguished, Payne said.

Basque fete nets $2,000

SUN-VALLEY — The annual Sun Valley Basque Festival raised about $2,000 for community projects. It was reported today. The event, held here Saturday, drew about 800 persons who cheered traditional Basque weight-carrying contests. According to Ruth Lelder, Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce president, the proceeds will be used for the Hi-Line highway, school playground and the city park. The crowd watched and cheered as Melinda Markley, a Tryall Creek welder, carried two 116-pound weights over 70 feet in the traditional Basque weight-carrying game. The Onkari Basque Dancers, Boise, performed after the "jarraque" of lamb and traditional Basque food. A rainstorm halted activities briefly, but most of the crowd remained through the evening to watch the contests of carrying the 116-pound weights around small posts 100 feet apart. Jose Gurenabarrena, a North Fork sheep herder, won the $50 first prize with a 700 foot carry. Peter Dewar, brother of singer John Denver, placed second with a 650 foot carry. Don Atherton, Ketchum, won the high bidder for a prize lamb with a 800 foot carry. The board accepted the resignation of Mrs. Lella Poppen, a home economics instructor.

Airport plans get clear path

By DAVID BOCKMAN
Times-News writer
BURLEY — The environmental impact statement for the proposed regional airport near Jerome has been approved, clearing the way for final planning of the airfield.

Announcement that the Federal Aviation Agency had approved the impact statement earlier this month was made at a meeting of the Southern Idaho Regional Airport Authority in Burley Monday night.

The approval also authorizes completion of the master plan for the airport. Authority chairman George Forschler (termed the FAA's approval a "significant step" in building the new airport and said the authority is "going full force" to get the plan completed in ten months ago the authority hired TAP Inc., Billings, Mont., an airport planning firm, to complete the master plan for the proposed facility. But the planning has been stalled pending approval of the impact statement.

A spokesman for TAP, Jim Munger, said Monday the master plan will take about a year to complete with another year needed for financing and two years for construction. Munger estimated the new airfield could be operational by 1980.

According to Munger, two years ago estimates for building the facility put the cost at between $10 million for the first stage in 1980 and $14 million for the final stage in 1985. But, he said, since the estimates were made construction costs have gone up about 15 per cent per year.

Forschler said the airport will be financed mostly by federal funds with the US government picking up 84 per cent of the construction cost. The remaining cost will be split equally by the state and the counties of the regional airport authority.

Except for Twin Falls and Blaine counties, all of Magic Valley is included in the authority. Today Forschler renewed his plea that Blaine and Twin Falls join the authority as a way to broaden the tax base needed to finance building of the airport.

Until the regional field is built, the authority supports the use of Joslin Field near Twin Falls as the "interim" jet-stop, Forschler said.

In the future, continued operation of Joslin Field as part of a regional airport system is also expected, he said. According to Forschler, if the purpose of maintaining Joslin Field would be jointly borne by all the counties in the authority. At Monday's meeting, TAP's Munger said if the regional port is built there will not be competition between it and Joslin Field. Joslin will be needed as a general airport while the regional port will serve commercial airline interests.

Munger said in addition to Alwegast other commercial airlines have said they're interested in using the regional field when it is built but he declined to name the other airlines. David Fields, FAA representative, said planning for the new airport should include a proposal for a regional "inter-modal" transportation terminal. "Such a terminal would include facilities for passenger buses and cargo trucks as well as airplanes.

According to Munger, his firm will propose at least five alternate airport facilities with different runway alignments and terminals. From these options the airport authority must make a choice. The airport authority has scheduled future meetings to explain the proposed airport for Hailey, Jerome, Twin Falls, Gooding and Shoshone.

Highway units offer reward

He and Sheriff Corder urged anyone with information about the signs at the scene of the Saturday accident as either sign-wandalism, to contact the sheriff's office, or highway district offices.

Sheriff Corder said anyone seeing a sign being vandalized should attempt to obtain the license number of the vehicle involved if vandals are in an automobile.

"It only takes a few seconds to tear out a sign and it is important we have an immediate call," Corder said.

He and highway board members also appealed to the courts for cooperation in giving the maximum sentence to persons apprehended for such acts.

Sheriff Corder said this constitutes a misdemeanor and can bring a $500 and six months in jail. "This is not much considering the act could result in the loss of someone's life," the sheriff said.

Highway board members also asked parents to cooperate by reporting any instances of signs being brought home by their youngsters.

Paul sewage system ready

PAUL — The new Paul sewage treatment lagoons are expected to go into operation this week. The year-long, $40,000 construction project was finished last month with testing and final hook-ups taking place Monday.

The Paul lagoons are the first of several new sewage treatment projects planned in the Mini-Cassia area.

Rupert, Heyburn, Oakley and Layton are planning new or expanded treatment facilities while Declo's new lagoon system is already under construction.

Paul's three lagoons will replace a 25-year-old system that failed to meet Environmental Protection Agency standards. The old facility dumped sewage into waterways while the lagoons are self-contained.

The new ponds cover about 35 acres. The sewage water evaporates and the leftover sludge settles to the bottom of the lagoons. Eventually the sludge will be disposed of as solid waste.

Cassia schools set anti-bias plan

Banford Crane, Burley, was elected chairman of the board in reorganization of the Cassia School Board night. Crane replaces Dr. A. Paul Brown, a Burley dentist, who will remain on the board. A farmer from Burley, Crane has been on the board since 1972. Charles Ward, Malta, a 30-year veteran of the board who was reelected to another term in May, was elected vice chairman. Gerald Frost, Burley, began a 3-year term from zone five Monday.

- In other action, the board:
- Hired seven new teachers.
- Awarded a bid for a sound system at the new Burley Junior High to Gene's Radio and Sound, Idaho Falls, whose bid of $10,797 was about $3,600 below the next lowest bidder.
- Awarded a bid for a seven-gang lawnmower to Turf Equipment Co., Salt Lake City, which bid $7,963.

Jerome seats board members

JEROME — The Jerome School Board held its legally required annual meeting for the seating of new board members Monday night following its regular monthly meeting. Jerry Callen, representing district 2, and Warren Hart, district 4, both elected to the board last May, were officially seated. The board also elected new officers. Jack Thomson, district 5, was elected chairman; Alvin Chojnacky, district 1, vice chairman; and Lyle Van Orman, district 1, treasurer. The board set its regular meetings for the second Monday of each month at 8 p.m. in the office of school superintendent Percy Christensen. During the regular meeting Monday, the board hired four new teachers and accepted resignation of a fifth. Hired were William Rutledge, fifth grade; Donald Hoisington and Mary Truonson, both special educators; and Linda Humphrey, junior high English. The board accepted the resignation of Mrs. Lella Poppen, a home economics instructor.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, showing considerable strength, despite rising interest rates, opened higher Tuesday in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, a 477-point gain, Monday, was ahead 0.86 to 876.64 shortly after the opening. Advances led declines, 180 to 89, among the 620 issues crossing the tape.

Turnover amounted to about 600 million shares. Analysts were impressed Monday the market did not fall apart after a number of major banks, following the lead of New York's First National City Bank last week, raised their prime rate to 7 1/2 per cent from the prevailing 7 per cent level.

US inventories now on decline

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Businessmen sold a record $3 billion worth of inventories in May, the fourth consecutive month of large-scale selling of warehouse stocks, the Commerce Department reported today.

The huge inventory decline was coupled with a modest 0.4 per cent improvement in combined business sales, with most of the strength at the retail level.

The latest statistics were another indication that the nation's economic health is gradually improving. Economists have said that businesses must liquidate their now unwanted inventories in order to stimulate new orders and the overall upturn in economic growth that would follow.

The liquidation began in February and is now the longest on record since a four-month selloff between December, 1960 and March, 1961.

Inventories in May were valued at $264.5 billion, the lowest level since September, 1974, when it was $258 billion.

The May report showed a $4.4 billion decline in inventories at the manufacturing level, $629 million at retail and $823 million at wholesale.

The previous record monthly inventory drop came in March, when stocks fell $1.9 billion. The April decline was $1.5 billion.

The overall 0.4 per cent May rise in business sales was led by a 2.7 per cent increase at the retail level. The rise was 0.5 per cent at wholesale but manufacturers' sales dropped 1 per cent for the month.

This resulted in a slight decline in the stock-to-sales ratio to 1.63 in May from 1.65 a month earlier and 1.47 in May, 1974. This figure means that businesses had an average $1.03 worth of goods on hand for every $1 in sales in May.

Below normal
 The National Weather Service's 30-day outlook for mid-July to mid-August is for temperatures to average below seasonal normals east of the Continental Divide except for near normal from the northern Great Plains to the upper Great Lakes and near to above normal in the Northeast. West of the divide above normal temperatures are indicated except for near below normal along the California coast and near normal in eastern portions of the Intermountain region. Precipitation is expected to exceed the median amount over central and southern portions of the Intermountain region as well as over the eastern third of the nation except for most of the middle and north Atlantic coast. # Federal reserve expenses jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government agency that sets money policy and runs the banks has nearly tripled its expenses in the past 10 years.

A report Sunday by a House banking subcommittee staff said the Federal Reserve System's operating expenses went from $97 to $290 million in the past decade.

Salaries for officials rose 148 per cent. Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., head of the subcommittee, said it disclosed "a classic case of misuse of public funds by a government agency."

Patman, a long-time critic of the Fed, issued the report to spur support for his bill calling for an audit of the Fed's operations by the General Accounting Office, a congressional investment advisory agency. The Fed opposes an audit, arguing it would interfere with its independence.

The congressman said he sent a copy of the report to Attorney General Edward Levi to see if money spent by the Fed above that necessary to run the nation's banking system can be recovered.

A Fed spokesman declined to discuss the report. "These are Mr. Patman's charges and we would not comment on them," he said.

The report said the Fed's own records show that in 1974 — $13,969 was spent to transfer employee Ralph Evans from Miami to the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, a distance of $7,521 for expenses in settling his home.

$34,000 was spent for "employee recognition," including $2,883 for employee birthday luncheons at the St. Louis bank, $402.20 for watches for six 25-year employees at the Atlanta bank and $329 for 110 gift paperweights in Houston.

Douglas sets court return

NEW YORK (UPI) — Justice William Douglas says he "positively" will return to the U.S. Supreme Court when his new term begins in October.

"There's no chance I'll retire," the 76-year-old justice said in an interview with the North American Newspaper Alliance. "I'll be there in October, positively."

Douglas suffered a stroke this year. His absence from the bench during most of the spring term has led to widespread speculation he would be unable to return to the court this fall and might be forced to retire.

But Sidney Zion, who interviewed Douglas for NAANA, reported the justice was "witty, articulate and highly optimistic about his health."

Douglas labored as false recent reports of his colleagues on the high court were refusing to accept his proxy vote on cases where he was absent from the weekly conferences where the justices vote.

"I know what they're saying. I've read the stories and they're not true," Douglas said. "The reason we put off the capital punishment case is that a number of different states are waiting for the penalty on their way up to the court."

"We want to handle them at one time. That's all there is to it."

Douglas said he was "completely up to date" on the court's work. During his absence at Rusk he has completed a difficult volume of his autobiography, "The Court Years."

Douglas wears a brace on his leg and needs a wheelchair, but it hasn't stopped him from making frequent rounds about Manhattan. In May he made a surprise appearance at the 50th anniversary of his Columbia Law School class, and he has been shopping at Abercrombie and Fitch and lunching at Sardi's.

Zion said Douglas apologized to visitors for having nothing stronger to drink in his cupboard than Burgundy wine.

"I sneeze every time I smell the stuff," the jurist said. "I've somehow grown allergic to boozies."

Douglas has a steady stream of callers. His wife, Cathleen, maintains sleeping quarters at the institute. His three law clerks shuttle back and forth from Washington and friends visit him regularly. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., came to see him last week.

DONALD R. Woolbright, left, consults with one of his two attorneys' outside Superior Court before arraignment. Woolbright is accused of demanding up to $1 million in ransom for the return of sensitive documents taken last June, 1974, in burglary of Howard Hughes' Summa Corp. Since Woolbright had voluntarily surrendered, bail was set at $10,000. (UPI)

Suspect in Hughes case gives plea, out on bail

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A well-organized team of burglars broke into the nerve center of billionaire Howard Hughes' empire on June 5, 1974. They tied up a guard and ransacked safes and files getting away with boxes loaded with Hughes' personal files.

Among documents that turned up missing were some detailing relationships with government agencies and prominent politicians and one memo outlining an agreement by Hughes to serve as a cover for the CIA in a secret plan to retrieve a Soviet submarine that sank 750 miles north of Hawaii in 1968.

Police say Donald Woolbright received some of the stolen property and attempted to extort money from Hughes.

Woolbright, 34, pleaded innocent to the charges Monday and was released on $10,000 bail.

Woolbright, a former used car dealer in suburban Canoga Park, originally surrendered to authorities in St. Louis, Mo.

In March but was released during extradition proceedings and agreed to surrender himself here.

"Several days after the burglary, a man identifying himself as 'Chester Brooks' telephoned Hughes officials and offered to return the sensitive documents for a $1 million ransom. Hughes would not pay it, reasoning that the extortionist might keep photographs and repeat the theft.

But Hughes officials were concerned about the document outlining the CIA mission which masqueraded as an undersea mining venture by Hughes, using the Glomar Explorer, ostensibly owned by a Hughes corporation but built and manned by the CIA.

The ship last year succeeded in bringing up a third of the submarine, described as an intelligence bonanza, and was to return for another attempt this year.

Its true mission leaked to reporters earlier this year however — reportedly because pressure on law enforcement agencies to get the memo back spread the story too widely to be concealed.

But the worry was groundless — the burglars never got the memo. The security guard they tied up, Mike Davis, confessed in April, after the Glomar Explorer's cover was blown, that he came across the memo in the debris before police arrived, put it in his pocket "without thinking and took it home."

He said he "panicked" when he read it and realized what he had, and "flushed it down a toilet, fearing to get involved in machinations of Hughes and the CIA.

Dragging plate leads to arrest

BOULDER CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A dragging license plate on a van led to the arrest early Monday of Ms. Mineyva A. Eltzondo on a charge of transporting illegal aliens.

Police Officer Bob Wasley stopped the van because of the license-plate hitting the pavement. He then noticed four men huddled in the back who could not produce identification nor speak the English language.

Ms. Eltzondo was then booked.

Safety board seeks stricter jet laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New and stricter safety rules for jumbo jet airliners announced last week may not be enough to prevent the kind of accident that caused the world's worst air crash.

The cargo hatch of a Turkish airliner DC10 blew out at 35,000 feet, near Paris, killing all 345 persons aboard. The sudden decompression buckled the passenger floor above and cut the plane's control cables.

Last week, the Federal Aviation Administration, in a safety move, ordered all wide-bodied jets be modified so they can remain airborne even if there is a 20-square-foot hole in their cargo compartments.

But the DC10 cargo door, which prompted the new rule, is 23 square feet in area. An official of the National Transportation Safety Board said his agency has asked the FAA to institute stricter rules — requiring an aircraft to remain airborne if a hole is even bigger.

FAA officials said today their order was not aimed at the cargo door but at other potential problems.

Friday's order applies to all jumbo jets — Boeing 747s and Lockheed L1011s as well as the McDonnell Douglas DC10. FAA spokesmen said they had never been a problem with the Boeing and Lockheed cargo doors because they opened inward.

He said the FAA believed it long ago had addressed the problem of the DC10 door by ordering a number of changes including improvements in the latches.

A spokesman said the jumbo jet order was aimed at passenger safety in event of a collision with a small plane, a

Bartels denies probe block

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former federal drug enforcement chief John Bartels says charges he covered up an internal agency investigation are "lies and misstatements."

"Bartels," concluding three days of testimony before the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee Monday, denied he blocked or impeded the investigation of Vincent Promuto, former public affairs chief for the Drug Enforcement Administration and onetime pro football player.

Former Deputy Attorney General Laurence Silberman testified today:

"Silberman, now U.S. ambassador to Yugoslavia, investigated the charges against Bartels and concluded they were 'without substantial foundation.'" After Silberman resigned to take the ambassadorship, the Justice Department reopened the cover-up investigation.

Promuto, who has since been transferred to DEA's New York office, was subject to District of Columbia police allegations he had consorted with known gamblers and drug users.

Bartels said the Promuto investigation was "conducted 'thoroughly,' was only 'aided diligently' without any effort to cover up. When confronted with a memo from George Brosnan, onetime chief inspector of DEA, that quoted Bartels as making several statements indicating sympathy with Promuto, Bartels told the subcommittee:

"That memo is a self-serving statement of lies and misstatements, and I deny it."

"I have no personal truck with Mr. Promuto," added Bartels, who said he only sought to have Promuto "confronted" with the charges and given a chance to answer them before being "amputated," as urged by Brosnan.

Bartels resigned his post May 30 at the request of Attorney General Edward Levi.

The charges were made by Brosnan and Andrew Tartaglino, second in command to Bartels at DEA, both of whom were internal affairs investigators. They have since been transferred to non-DEA posts.

Bartels suggested Monday Tartaglino and Brosnan may have made the charges to draw attention away from a report that criticized aspects of their performance.

The report, Bartels said, indicated the internal investigations office was "pretty much of a shambles" and was being run "in an inefficient manner."

Agency sought to enforce equal employment laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission today recommended abolishing the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and creating a new agency with broad powers to enforce fair employment laws.

In a 67-page report on the federal government's effort to end discrimination on the basis of race, sex and religion, the commission said the federal effort was fundamentally inept.

"I propose the establishment, within the next year, of a new agency, the National Employment Rights Board, with broad administrative as well as investigative authority and with 'at least one and a half times the funds currently provided for the total federal equal employment effort.'"

The new board would have stronger enforcement powers than any existing agency and would be given authority to issue cease-and-desist orders and power to order relief such as back pay and affirmative action.

The new agency would also take over tasks of several other agencies reviewed in the report, including the Civil Service Commission's implementation of an anti-discrimination executive orders, the Labor Department's equal employment implementation in the Office of Federal Contract Compliance and the Equal Employment Coordinating Council.

"The report said while there has been 'some progress' in ending employment discrimination in recent years, 'nevertheless the rate of progress has been inadequate and major problems of systemic discrimination continue to affect adversely minorities and women.'

"The federal effort to end this discrimination," the commission added, "has not been equal to the task."

It charged that existing civil rights laws have been

"weakened as a result of political compromises and do not provide an adequate framework within which federal agencies can work."

To create the new agency the commission called for overhaul of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, rescinding the Equal Pay Act of 1973 and replacement of several executive orders by the legislation creating the National Employment Rights Board.

The commission also published today an 82-page report examining the economic progress of minorities and women in the 20 years since the 1954 Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation.

Arrests reported

SAIGON (UPI) — Saigon authorities have announced the arrests of four more anti-government agents in a publicized crackdown on persons still opposed to the new administration.

The official Saigon government newspaper Liberation Daily said Monday authorities had arrested two armed men at a village on the edge of Tan Son Nhut Air Base.

In another incident, security forces picked up a lieutenant in the former South Vietnamese army at his home. An arrested ice cream vendor told the officials he served as an intelligence agent for the ex-loyalist.

Monday marked the second consecutive day the Saigon newspaper reported the capture of members of the former Saigon regime still opposed to the new Communist government.

Money would help school

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Money may not solve all the problems for the new superintendent of the Caldwell school district, but it would certainly go a long way.

Superintendent Darrell Deide, who inherited the job of chief educator in the district July 1, said the major needs of the district are the areas of program facilities and personnel and "all relate to the ability to pay for it."

Deide said he expected to see more pressure for more opportunities and courses in vocational education and girls' athletics. He added he also expects more and continued interest and concern from parents regarding school curriculum and activities and more watching vigilance from civil rights interests.

Deide said he had a good but cautious take "since please everybody no matter what you do."

The new superintendent also expects "stronger bargaining groups from the teachers."

"The first concern of our teachers here is teaching kids in Caldwell, but there is more attention to improve working conditions and salaries."

Turning to vocational education, he said it was an area where the national trend reflected a shift from a college-bound emphasis program to career or job preparation.

"We need to develop programs and facilities to fulfill this need," Deide added.

He said district patrons already approved a 10-mill plant-facility levy this spring which will enable the district to start planning for a vocational education building. With planning underway by fall, it is hoped that construction could begin early in 1976 with occupancy of the building in the fall of 1976, he said.

Fewer students are going to college for liberal arts, he said. More are looking for vocational training, whether in auto mechanics, nursing, business or other fields.

He also believes that girls' athletics will tax the district budget more, "but it won't infringe on boys' sports."

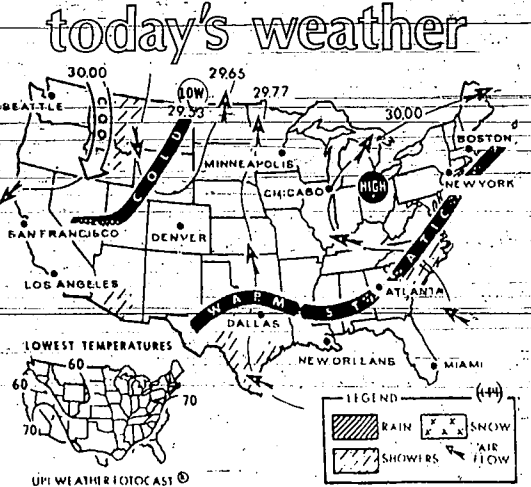

"Gradually we will be able to accommodate more athletes for girls."

Convicted killer given 11 life prison terms

HAMILTON, Ohio (UPI) — James Rupert, convicted of killing 11 of his relatives, the largest mass murder of members of one family in U.S. history, Monday was sentenced to 11 consecutive terms of life in prison.

Rupert, 41, who could have been sentenced to death, took the verdict of the three-judge Butler County Common Pleas court panel calmly.

The 5-foot-6 defendant showed no emotion and asked only one question in a barely audible voice — "If I decide to appeal, how long do I have?"

He was told 20 days.

Rupert attorney's Hugh Holbrook said it was a "safe assumption" that Rupert would appeal.

Rupert, dressed in short-sleeved shirt, yellow tie and tan slacks, stood quietly with his hands clasped in front of him as Judge Fred Cramer pronounced the sentence.

"You are sentenced to the Ohio State Penitentiary at Lucasville on each of the 11 crimes, far and during your natural life," Cramer said. "Each sentence is to be served consecutively."

Rupert was convicted July 4 of the Easter Sunday slayings of his 11-year-old widowed mother, his only brother, his sister-in-law and eight aunts and nephews, aged 10-18.

Although the 11 consecutive life terms make parole improbable, Rupert did avoid the death penalty. Death could have been imposed only by a unanimous decision of the three judges, and Cramer said there was no such conclusion.

Rupert was convicted only on a 24 split decision — Cramer dissenting from the majority decision of Judges Arthur Fiehrer and Robert Marrs.

Prosecutor John F. Holcomb had demanded the death sentence in a final hearing just minutes before the sentencing.

Defense attorney Holbrook begged the judges to spare Rupert's life. Rupert had entered a plea of insanity.

"There are 11 dead — the most horrible thing that has happened in the United States of America in a long time," Holbrook said. "Do not make this a worse crime by adding a 12th person."

"Gentlemen," he told the judges, "death serves no purpose. Only God can give a life, let only Him take it."

"If he is spared his life, at least we will have retained a civilized nation rather than returned to barbaric times."

"I say to you the words 'thou shalt not kill' as applicable to the state as it is to any individual," added Holbrook.

Railroad strike looms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — W. J. Casey Jr., a White House labor trouble shouter, said today that the railroads and a major rail union are unable to reach a contract agreement by Wednesday.

The administration may ask Congress for emergency legislation to head off a national shutdown.

Casey's met with railroads before conferring talks between the representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Airline Clerks and the National Railway Labor Conference.

The union is entitled to strike under the National Railway Labor Act but has agreed to a 30-day extension that expires midnight July 21. Casey said he saw no likelihood of a further extension by the union.

He said there was "no way in head off a strike if contract talks fall through this week short of congressional action."

"We have a very busy week here," he said, "and there is some tough bargaining that has to take place." Casey said "we are going to try very hard to get an agreement by Wednesday night."

He said both sides agreed to the Wednesday deadline to allow for pre-strike preparations if necessary and to let the administration make an "orderly decision" if a strike appears inevitable.

"We want to do everything we can to avoid going to Congress," he said.

The two sides in the talks caucused in separate rooms in a downtown hotel with Casey and George Keys a member of the National Mediation Board, shuttling between the bargaining groups.

The union represents about 117,000 railroad workers.

Brazil soybean boom troubles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Brazil's soybean boom — an increasingly troublesome competitive factor for American farmers — may slow a little in the next year or two, an Agriculture Department expert says.

Garth W. Thorburn, a trade specialist for the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, noted in a report today that Brazilian soybean production has zoomed from 1.5 million tons in 1970 to an estimated 9.6 million tons this year.

The 1975 harvest amounts to nearly one-fourth the estimated U.S. soybean crop of 40-million tons. Many Brazilians believe they can push soybean production to 30 million tons within a decade in addition to turning out "huge" crops of corn, wheat, sugar, coffee and cocoa, Thorburn said.

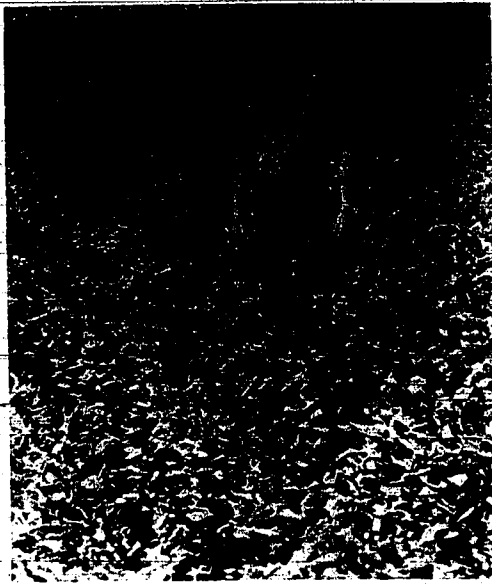

Brazil's domestic use of soybean products is comparatively small. As a result, Thorburn said, farmers there are hoping to export up to five million tons of 1975-crop beans plus about three million tons of soybean meal.

Brazil already ranks second only to the U.S. as a world soybean exporter.

Thorburn added, however, that prospects for future growth in Brazilian production "Seem less buoyant, at least for the near term, than they did in the recent past."

With world market prices declining, the U.S. expert, who recently toured Brazil and three other South and Central American nations, said the 1976 Brazilian soybean crop may rise to a little over half the two-million-ton annual gains of recent years.

He said a crop of 15 million tons by 1980 is a "possibility." But a U.S. research expert, working in Brazil reports production costs there are relatively high. The expert has predicted that unless Brazilian export prices or world market prices remain high, production will increase at a much slower rate in the future.

Bumper crop

FARMER HOWARD ELSON, Boonduant, Ia., stands knee-deep amid a field of soybeans on his farm. In the midst of intense negotiations for a new Soviet grain deal, the Agriculture Department has estimated 1975 US grain crops will boom to new records — meaning larger food supplies to world consumers. Crops in this area of the Midwest are doing well this year, compared to 1974's weather-plagued season. (UPI)

Beef cattle role said important for world

DENVER — With world food needs continuing to increase, beef cattle are being called upon to play an even more important role in providing food for the hungry.

This premise was put forth in a publication released by the American National Cattlemen's Association.

The pamphlet entitled "Cattle — A Vital Link in the Global Food Chain" further explains that cattle are an integral part of the world's food ecosystem because they utilize materials neither man nor animals can use to produce food.

Cattle are efficient protein-producing factories because of the unique nature of their digestive systems. They are ruminant animals, meaning they possess four-chambered stomachs which enables them to digest cellulose, a plant material indigestible by humans, cattle loom large as an important resource in the world's natural food chain.

Beef cattle are also efficient users of the land, according to the ANCA brochure, because they spend most of their lives on grazing land which is too dry, too rough or too infertile to grow crops for human use. Only 350 million acres, or 15 per cent of the land area in the U.S. can be used to grow grain and other crops. There are some 900 million acres of pasture and unutilized grazing land which can be utilized only by grazing ruminant animals such as cattle. Almost 40 per cent of America's feed would be useless as a food resource if ruminants did not graze on it.

Countering beef consumption critics, ANCA challenges those who say it takes 20 pounds of grain to produce a pound of beef. This ratio is inaccurate because cattle actually spend three-quarters of their lives eating grass and forage before they are put in feedlots.

Even in the feedlot, cattle are fed feed grains, not food grains.

AL stars pin hopes on rested pitchers

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The American League, hoping to parlay a combination of well-rested pitchers, a rejuvenated Rod Carew and five World champion Oakland starters into its first All-Star victory in four years, sends southpaw Vida Blue against the National League and left-handed Jerry Reuss Tuesday night in baseball's 66th mid-summer showcase of talent.

After a directive by league president Lee MacPhail that the clubs rest their ace pitchers Sunday prior to the All-Star game, the Americans suddenly find themselves with the luxury of having Oakland's Blue, Kansas City's Steve Busby, New York's Cuffins, Hunter, etc., rested and ready while National League ace Mike Tom Seaver of the Mets and Andy Messersmith of the Dodgers will be pitching with any a day's time between outings.

"I'm going to use all of my starters and none will get to bat," said confident American League manager Alvin Dark. "We've done all of this with my thing by resting our pitchers on Sunday and I think it should pay off."

One last minute drawback to Dark's pitching plans, however, was the removal from the squad of Baltimore's 19-game winner Jim Palmer, sidelined by tendinitis. Palmer will be replaced by reliever Paul Lindblad, the eighth Oakland player named to the 28-man squad.

In addition to Blue, 12-3 with a 2-10 ERA this season, Dark will have the pleasure of starting Reggie Jackson (in right field),

Joe Rudi (left field), Gene Tenace (first base), and Campy Campanera (shortstop) from his world champion A's squad.

The rest of the lineup will be filled by New York's Bobby Bonds (center field), Thurman Munson (catcher), and Greg Nettles (third), plus Carew, openly bitter last year after getting a quick hook from the game by then manager Dick Williams.

"I know I said a lot of things about never wanting to play in this game again," said Carew, the Minnesota Twins' second baseman who, besides leading both leagues in batting at .374, was also the top over-all All-Star vote getter. "But now I'm glad to be here. After talking it over with my wife, I realized the only people I'd be cheating would be the kids."

Dark added that Carew would "play all nine innings, if he's physically able," this time.

The National League, meanwhile, winner of three straight all-star contests and 11 of the last 12, was confident that starting lineup comprised of four Cincinnati Reds, three Los Angeles Dodgers plus Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals could quickly overcome the Americans' renewed optimism.

"If we can't win with this club, then I'm in a slump," said National League manager Walter Alton, who will field first baseman Steve Garvey (.318), third baseman Ron Cey (12 HRs, 33 rbi) and Jimmy Wynn from his own Los Angeles Dodger club — along with catcher Johnny Bench (73 rbi), second baseman Joe Morgan (.345, 60 rbi), rightfielder Pete Rose (.319) and shortstop Dave Concepcion from the red hot (10 straight wins) Reds.

Reuss, 10-6 with a 2.23 ERA and the Pirates most effective pitcher this year, will probably be followed in the rotation by Knucker Phil Niekro of the Atlanta Braves and southpaw Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres — two of the NL's starters who did not see action on Sunday.

"I think Alton has at his disposal two of baseball's most notable relief specialists, Mike Marshall of the Dodgers and Tug McGraw of the Philadelphia Phillies.

But it is his hitting, as usual, with which the National League expects to continue its winning ways. For after people like Bench, Garvey and Morgan in the starting lineup, there are substitutes like Greg Luzinski of the Phillies, who leads both leagues in homers and rbi with 25 and 79 respectively, plus Bill Buckner of the Chicago Cubs' .353 hitting third baseman, and Manny Sanguillen, the Pirates' .336 hitting catcher.

"At this time I'm not going to worry about all this resting of pitchers business," said Alton. "It's pretty hard to ask any team trying to win every game possible to rest its pitchers on Sunday. I wish we had Seaver and Messersmith rested, but I have picked the pitchers who I thought were best suited and, if it turns out I'm wrong, well as you can see by the standings I've probably made quite a few mistakes this year."

Eligibility plea rejected

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — A federal appeals court judge Monday rejected University of North Carolina football player Chris Kuppe's request for another year of eligibility.

Judge Braxton Craven of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals viewed the request, earlier turned down by a district court, saying, "I can't see the courts regulating football."

Kuppe had asked for the injunction to permit him to play this fall for the Tar Heels while waiting for his $200,000 civil suit against the Atlantic Coast Conference to come to trial.

He filed the suit following the conference's rejection of an NCAA rule allowing an extra year of eligibility to players who are injured in one of the first two games of the season and miss the remainder of the season.

The conference allows an extra year only if a player is injured in the first game.

Richard retires

MONTREAL (UPI) — Henri Richard, 39, one of the 10 players to score more than 1,000 points, announced his retirement Monday after 20 years in the National Hockey League.

"Every good thing must come to an end," the diminutive captain of the Montreal Canadiens told a news conference. "It's time to step down and make way for younger players."

The greying Richard scored 358 goals and was credited with 888 assists in 1,256 games in center for the Canadiens. His total of 1,046 points placed him tenth in the all-time NHL point total.

Two Steelers missing

LATROBE, Pa. (UPI) — Two members of the Pittsburgh Steelers were missing Monday when the Super Bowl champions conducted two contact drills in preparation for the College All-Star game Aug. 1.

Linebacker Henry Davis, a 17-year veteran attempting a comeback after sitting out last season with a back injury, telephoned late Sunday that he was en route.

Offensive tackle Marvin Crenshaw, a sixth round draft choice from Nebraska who is the only unguaranteed rookie, has not notified the Steelers of his intentions.

Cabbies protest courtesy cars

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Cab drivers who had threatened to pull their units off the streets during Tuesday night's All-Star baseball game because of courtesy car service being provided for VIP's were mollified Monday during meetings with city and civil officials.

"It's all smoothed over," Alderman Robert Ertl, president of the Common Council, said. "They're the drivers' satisfied the courtesy cars are strictly for VIP's and the cabs will be running."

Lynn named Vikings chief

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Mike Lynn, who joined the Minnesota Vikings last August as assistant to President Max Winter, was appointed general manager of the club in a new management plan announced Monday.

Lynn, 39, has taken over the general manager spot which Jim Flinks held before he resigned a year ago and became general manager of the Chicago Bears organization.

Winter took over active operation of the Vikings club after Flinks left and for help brought in Lynn, for seven years president of Mid-South Sports, Inc., which worked to get a National Football League franchise for Memphis, Tenn.

Orr eyes big offer

TORONTO (UPI) — Boston Bruins superstar Bobby Orr has been offered a multi-million-dollar contract, including a $1 million signing bonus, to join the Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association. The Toronto Sun reported Monday.

The Toronto Sun said the offer was made to Orr's attorney, Alan Eagleson, about a month ago. Eagleson, who is also Executive Director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, is now in Europe seeking support for a six-nation hockey tournament in North America in the fall of 1976.

An Eagleson associate, Bill Watters, said, "While it is true Minnesota has made an offer, everything else is speculative at the moment. Nothing has been finalized. It would have to be a considerable offer for Bobby to jump."

Punter fails physical exam

CHICAGO (UPI) — Brian Doherty, a Notre Dame punter signed as a free agent by the Chicago Bears, was released Monday because he failed the physical examination prior to the opening of training camp.

Doherty, the ninth draft choice of the Buffalo Bills last year who remained with the Bills until the last cut, had surgery on his left knee at Notre Dame and the knee did not meet the standards set by the Bears.

Bulls sign forward

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association announced Monday the signing of 6-foot-6 forward Bob Iverson of North Texas State, their fourth-round draft choice.

Dick Motta, Bulls coach and director of player personnel, said the 205-pounder "could prove to be one of the kids who surprises. He passed up his senior year for religious reasons after being named first-team All-Missouri Valley Conference as a junior."

Williams hurls, hits TF Legion by Sage

RUPERT — Twin Falls Legion rode the hitting and pitching of Scott Williams past the Mini-Cassia Sage 7-3 Monday night.

Williams was three-for-three at the plate and his bases loaded double in a five-run fifth inning highlighted the decisive rally.

The Sage, which broke a nine-game drought against Bonnevile, Utah, moved ahead 3-2 in the third inning but starter Coyell and reliefer Kevin Vogt couldn't hold it.

Twin Falls picked up singles in the second and third. Consecutive hits by Gary Huff, Williams and Clay Birmingham plated the first. Bruce Bird's single and a double by Tim Crist picked up the other.

In the third, the Sage rattled off four of its seven hits off Williams. Ramsey and Coyell opened with singles and Thurston doubled both in Jim Tilly, then singled Thurston.

But in the fifth, Bird led off with a double, Coyell bled on an error, Vogt relieved Coyell and gave Huff and Birmingham walks that backfired when Williams and Birmingham followed with doubles. Gene Turley drew a walk and the inning wound up as Bob Jackson trotted a sacrifice fly and Lee Williams singled.

Twin Falls hosts Idaho Falls at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Jaycee Park.

stars set charity tourney

By MARTIN LADDER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Admittedly, the problems of the inner city, where many lives are wasted simply for the lack of opportunity, are foreign in nature to Bill Bradley, the advantage son of a well-to-do banker.

Bradley grew up in Crystal City, Mo., had every chance to develop his basketball skills, and got the best available education at Princeton University and as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford in England. When his playing career is over, it is likely he will turn to politics.

Yet the veteran New York Knicks' forward is a frequent participant in causes to help the underprivileged and it is something of an irony that on Monday he was selected as a spokesman for the 48 players who will take part in a two-day charity basketball tournament to raise money for inner-city blacks.

"It's an age when you have decreasing financial support from the government to help fight the problems of the inner city, it is recognized by basketball players, many of whom come from these areas, that the problems still exist," Bradley explained. "A game like this hopefully will generate some money to resume, and possibly expand, some of those programs essential to the inner city during the summer."

"One of the fringe benefits of being a professional basketball player is having the chance to participate in these kinds of worthwhile causes, as opposed to being a lawyer or an Indian chief."

Virtually every team in the American and National Basketball Associations will be represented in the two-day tournament in Lake place at Madison Square Garden, Aug. 19-20.

The participating players, who receive only a modest amount of money for their time and effort, will be divided into four teams and there will be a doubleheader each night. Ticket prices range from $5 to $100.

"It's a super cause to help our people grow and for us to support and encourage black youngsters to help themselves," said G.J. center Bob Lanier of the Detroit Pistons, one of some dozen players who attended Monday's news conference. Although Lanier won't be able to play in the game because of an ailing leg, he will be present "to give whatever support I can."

Mantle still misses playing

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Maybe you heard Mickey Mantle is hurting. It's true, he is.

Not for money, for baseball. He misses it as if it was life itself, and for him maybe it is.

Financially, Mickey Mantle's okay, in at least shape.

"I never made as much money as I did last year," says the New York Yankees' retired centerfielder now a vicepresident for a billion dollar insurance company in Dallas and part owner of a bank in the same city.

Basically, Mickey Mantle isn't in such great shape because he's no longer an integral part of it, and the only reason he's here for tonight's All-Star game is because he's serving as honorary captain for the American League with Stan Musial doing the same for the National.

Chronologically, Mantle is 43. Inwardly and imaginatively, he's only 23 and still wants to get out there on the grass, on the artificial turf, on the anything, and play some more baseball. Oh, Lord, what he'd give if they'd only let him play a few more innings.

"I miss the hell-outta baseball," he says, and the way he emphasizes the extra word in that sentence offers an unmistakable clue to how much he actually does miss the life he grew to love best.

"I have a nightmare almost every night," he says. "I'm on the bench and they won't let me play. The young guys are a lot better than I am. They if I do get in, in the late innings," and here he gives you one of those pure Mickey Mantle smiles guaranteed to demish even a heart of stone — "I hit a line drive to rightfield. I'm running like hell to get to first and I get thrown out. You know what I do? I wake up sweating."

Mickey Mantle is never happier than when he's around the people he likes best, baseball people. He has been out of the game seven years now but in his heart, he has never been out of it at all.

He's from a different generation, yet he remains part of the present so that it's easy for him to relate to the present ballplayers.

He gets them a little bit better than I get out and talked about how unhappy he was over the fact the American League All-Stars have lost 11 of the last 12 games and 16 of the 22 during the time he was with the Yankees.

Typically, he wasn't easy on himself either. He referred to his own performance in the 16 All-Star games he has played as "only one .23 and drove in only four runs, and how his record in them wasn't good at all."

"Now that I look back, I wish I had done better and tried harder," he said, saying also that the National League All-Stars always seemed to have put out more than the American League and shown more enthusiasm for the game.

Later, though, he said he had always given everything he had during the regular season games, and anybody who knew saw him play, so often on only one good leg, ever saw how true that is.

"If anything," he said, "I tried too hard. A lot of times I tried to run out ground balls so hard I hurt myself. The only thing I'm sorry about is that I didn't finish up hitting 200 lifetime. I always felt I was a 200 hitter, but I wound up with 298 or something like that."

Players ask to revise two rules

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Major League baseball players, softpedaling any talk of a strike, met Monday and decided to ask management for revisions — but not abolition — of two of baseball's most controversial rules, the reserve clause and the free agent draft.

Representatives of each major league club met with Marvin Miller, executive director of the players association, and attorneys for nearly four hours to draw up proposals for the basic agreement which is being negotiated with baseball owners.

The proposals are expected to be given to the owners the last week in July and the basic agreement expires in December.

"The players looked at the problems responsibly and tried to tailor solutions to the problems," Miller said. "I think the players demonstrated good faith. They're not looking for trouble at all."

The players association meeting was held in conjunction with the Major League All-Star game here Tuesday night and, in some cases, members of the All-Star team replaced player representatives. Many player reps, however, flew in specifically for the meeting and then left immediately for their homes.

"It was an extremely important meeting," said Milwaukee Brewers representative Mike Ilegan. "I think that's why so many came in."

Miller said the proposals include several changes in the basic agreement, with the reserve clause and the free agent draft drawing most attention from the public.

"We are not saying that a player should be free at all times," he said, without outlining the specific proposals for change.

"There is a certain investment in the development of a player and perhaps this entitles the investor to some guarantee of his services for a specific time," but not his entire life. That's unreasonable," he said.

"If we got everything we're asking, players still would not have a free and open market. Players would still have limitations, but it would be a lot freer."

"The players don't say, well, let's abolish all the rules. Their proposals were well thought-out, probably some of them will be eliminated, but others will be put in their place."

Miller said the players' main aim was to "try to work it out so that we don't ever get into a crisis area. We think it would be beneficial to all concerned."

He also said the players, in their discussions, considered greatly public reaction to the football players strike last year "in the light of everything, management statements and all."

"He said there were two ways a crisis could be averted — by extremely hard work and if management would accept a player's proposal that everything unsettled after Dec. 1 be put to "impartial arbitration."

"Our proposal is still on the table," Miller said. "The owners did not accept it, we wish they had. It was made in good faith, trying to avoid problems."

Miller said the talks so far seem to be "constructive," but added, "Sometimes the kind of pressure needed to move one or both sides to deadline, pressure.

Red's Trading post of Twin Falls dropped Walt's Tavern to nail down the A invitational slowpitch tournament Sunday.

Red ended a four-game run by Walt's through the losers-bracket to take the title without a defeat.

Earlier in the day, Red's dropped Ward's Glass of Jerome 12-6 to gain the finals.

Meanwhile, Turf Club ousted the Merchants and Walt's defeated American Waterbed. Walt's then eliminated Turf Club and sent Ward's to the sidelines in the loser bracket semifinals.

An invitational for the "B" women's league is slated for Harmon Park this weekend.

ABA Denver signs Thompson

DENVER (UPI) — The Denver Nuggets signed All-American forward David Thompson of North Carolina State Monday, making him the first No. 1 draft pick of the National Basketball Association to sign with the eight-year-old American Basketball Association.

For the rights to Thompson, drafted by the ABA Virginia franchise, the Nuggets sent the Squires starting guard Mack Calvin, starting center Mike Green and reserve forward Jan van Breda Kolff. Denver also received forward George Irvine.

Terms of Thompson's contract, a multi-year, multimillion dollar pact, were not released, but he was reported the player would receive around $2.5 million. President/general manager Carl Scheer of the Nuggets said, "David turned 21 Sunday and I would have to say, he is one of the most secure 21-year-olds I have ever known."

The Nuggets actually came to an agreement with Thompson last week but announcement of the signing of the 6-6 forward, who averaged 26.6 points and 8.1 rebounds during his college career while twice earning UPI player of the year honors, was delayed pending the sale of the Nuggets to a local group headed by Scheer.

Thompson was made the opening pick of the NBA draft by Atlanta, which also selected Marvin Webster of Morgan State as the third player in the NBA draft. Both signed with Denver.

The swap and the departure of Calvin and van Breda Kolff left the Nuggets with a questionable back court and coach Larry Brown said the team "might make some moves before the season begins."

The Nuggets are interested in guards Chuck Williams, George Karl of San Antonio and Bobby Warren of San Antonio.

Thompson said the major factor in his signing with Denver was the city.

"I enjoy the climate, the people and the way I was accepted," said Thompson after disclosing he could have signed with virtually any club in the NBA and had entered negotiations with the New York Knicks.

"Denver also has a winning program and has shown me a desire to provide the city with a championship," he said. "I wanted to be associated with a winning team in a good city and Denver was the only city that offered that."

Rapid River spawner return exceeds 1974

This year's counts of chinook salmon returning to Rapid River Hatchery is the first bright spot in an otherwise dark chinook picture.

Even Parrish, Department of Fish and Game hatchery superintendent, said a 3,022 chinook had returned to the hatchery near Riggin's July 9, and the run is averaging about 200 fish a day. By this time last year, 1,100 chinook had returned to the hatchery.

"We can use every egg these chinook provide," Parrish said, "because the Rapid River run must pick up the slack of very poor runs throughout the rest of the state."

Eggs from Rapid River fish, Parrish said, help stock the Clearwater drainage, Hayden Creek and Lemhi River as well as replenish Rapid River. Rapid River usually gets between 18 and 30 percent of the spring chinook run counted over the Snake River dams, he said.

Expert believes NFL can afford Rozelle rule loss

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — An expert witness testified Monday that elimination of the Rozelle rule would never cause teams such as the Minnesota Vikings or the Green Bay Packers to become bankrupt.

Dr. Roger G. Noll, a professor at California Institute of Technology who has studied economics of professional sports, said "fan interest" and the size of the metropolitan area supporting a team are the critical issues. Commissioner Pete Rozelle testified as the last defense witness that the Vikings and Packers and other cold weather area teams would fall without the rule, used four times since it was started in 1963. He said the players would migrate to clubs which offered more money in better climates.

Fifteen football players are challenging the rule in federal court. The players say the rule limits salaries, possibilities. NFL witnesses claim only the superstars would get higher salaries without the rule. "Without the Rozelle rule, salaries of football players would go up, even the fringe players," Noll said. "The value of a superstar would be determined by the competition among the teams."

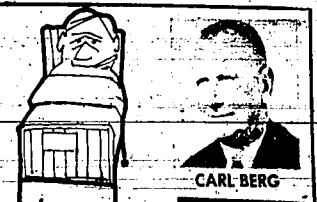

He said the compensation given to a club by the team which acquires a free agent is "the value of the player's future revenue" which the athlete, should receive in salary.

Noll said there is no direct relationship between salaries and ticket prices. "If the opportunity exists to increase a profit, a team will increase the price of tickets, whether salaries are going up or down," Noll said. He said football is a profitable business.

Pointing to the bankruptcy of the Philadelphia Eagles in 1968, he said the club still returned a profit of $500,000 to the owner, adding the bankruptcy was caused by other financial reasons. He said a population between 900,000 and 1 million such as Minneapolis-St. Paul or Green-Bay-Milwaukee can support one football club, a metropolitan area between 3 million and 3.5 million, or the size of Chicago and Los Angeles, could support two teams; and an area the size of New York, or between 7.5 million and 8 million, could back three teams.

He said Memphis, Indianapolis and San Antonio each have the market for a professional football team.

such as Seattle acquired this year. "It can be absorbed by the cities in which NFL teams are located."

Bears killing elk calves

Bear trapping in the Lochsa River area winds up this week, but early results are confirming black bears are killing elk calves. The Department of Fish and Game reports. Using spanned out steelhead as bait for snare traps and tranquilizing darts shot from helicopters, biologists have caught 27 bears. Radio collars were put on the bears to find out their territories and their movements in relation to elk movement. So far this year, the department said, 25 elk calves also have been caught and radio-collared. Fourteen of these calves have been killed by predators. Mike Schlegel, a senior game research biologist with the department, said 12 of the calves were killed by black bears, one was killed by a cougar and one calf was killed by an unknown predator. The age breakdown on the trapped bears, Schlegel said, has been 19 bears, 13 of which were adults, two were yearlings and four were 2 1/2 years old. Of the eight female bears trapped, seven were adults and one was a 3 1/2-year-old.

Schlegel said the information gathered so far this year on both bear and elk calves must be brought together and analyzed before plans are made for the Coolwater-Glover Ridge bear and elk study area. "We will look at the information we have collected, then come up with a plan," Schlegel said. An estimated time between the end of

Finley company suspended

OAKLAND (UPI) — Charles O. Finley and Co., Inc., is under suspension in California because the feisty owner of the Oakland A's failed to file a tax return when he sold the California Seals hockey team. It was disclosed Monday.

The suspension came to light during a Superior Court hearing for 11 East Oakland residents who are suing to halt the use of aerial bombs at Oakland Coliseum. Finley has ordered the bombs detonated each time one of his players hits a home run, or whenever the world champion American League club wins another game.

The 11 homeowners near the Coliseum sought an injunction from Judge Robert K. Barber. Ronald Jackl, a legal aid attorney for the homeowners, disclosed that the secretary of state suspended the Finley corporation for failure to file a profit and loss sheet with the state Franchise Tax Board on the sale of the Seals in 1974.

Ms. Jackl said the suspension lifted all the corporate powers of the corporation, including the privilege of appearing in court, and that the homeowners were entitled to a default in their action against Finley.

It has been said that a married man ideally should fulfill four requirements: Be a good husband, a good father, a good provider and a good craftsman in his own line of work. That's ideally. Scholars who study such matters say he only has to fulfill any two of those four to be socially valuable. A married woman ideally should fulfill three requirements: Be a good housewife, a good mistress and a good mother. Again, that's ideally. Those aforementioned scholars say she only has to fulfill two of those three to be socially valuable.

Specifically, 33 per cent of those women earned $17,000 or more a year while only 22 per cent of the men made that much. Also, 10 per cent of the women were in management jobs while only 9 per cent of the men were bosses.

your health

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I am 22, and am in good health. But maybe once or twice a year the corners of my mouth crack. After applying creams and trying to keep my lips moist, the cracks heal up but leave unattractive scars.

Do you know why this happens to me, and how it can be prevented? — MISS L.N.

I cannot tell you what the specific problem is in your case, but I can offer a few general thoughts that might apply.

The first possibility that comes to mind is what is called "angular stomatitis." This is usually related to a vitamin deficiency, and the symptoms are erosions and fissures at the angles of the mouth — hence the name. Stomatitis means any inflammation of the mucosal membranes of the mouth.

Angular stomatitis possible

The usual vitamin deficiency is in vitamin B group, and you might investigate whether your episodes can be related to variations in your intake of vitamin B during the year. A primary source is milk and other animal protein food.

The same syndrome can be caused by sensitivity to denture material, by chronic diarrhea, a liver problem or chronic alcoholism. You should have a blood test to rule out the possibility of anemia, even though you say you are in good health. Anemia can be a subtle and unnoticed problem.

Such symptoms, needless to say, do not occur without a reason, and it is best to determine what that is. It is rather easy to alleviate the condition with vitamins, either in supplement form or in diet, if that is the underlying cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Isn't it true that if a person wanted to do it, he or she could lose the desired amount of weight without dieting? Isn't good exercise enough to do it? I mean, take a person like me. I'm a woman, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 147 pounds. I would like to lose 30 pounds. Can I do that without dieting?

I have no dieting willpower, so you can see why I'm interested in your answer. — MRS. F.E.

Sure you can do it, but it might take you quite a while. I'm assuming you presently tend to overdo on fattening foods, or just eat too much.

A recent, very interesting study shows it can be done. In a University of California study, a group of overweight women managed to lose an average of 22 pounds over a year strictly on the basis of exercise.

The women used brisk walks as their exercise. It was reported that no weight was lost until the walks went beyond a half hour a day. The greatest loss occurred in the women who walked up to two or three hours daily.

The weight loss was rather slow, and it was quickly put back on if the exercise stopped even for a few days. There was no dietary restriction at all. Researchers observed that even though exercise tended to increase appetite and food consumption somewhat, weight loss was still reported.

So I'd say yes, it can be done. But I believe a combination of reasonable diet and moderate exercise is the best method. — And if you don't have the willpower to lose weight through cutting calories, I must wonder whether you would be able to summon sufficient motivation to follow an extended exercise regimen. The whole matter is discussed in greater length in my booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing." After all is said and done, and after all the fat diets (although I wouldn't categorize the exercise plan as a fat diet) are come and gone, I do believe my plan is more sensible. For a copy of the booklet, send 35 cents to me care of this newspaper and enclose a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

My sister is going to have surgery to remove what looks like small clumps of skin that have appeared around the area of her eyes. She has learned that these clumps are due to an excessive amount of cholesterol in her body. Does cholesterol cause such growths? Why isn't there another way to get rid of them except surgery? — G.

Such clumps can appear as small, yellow areas, chiefly on the nose side of the eyelids. Any that contain cholesterol. The condition is called xanthoma, and it is not uncommon. Surgery is the only way to remove them; and this is done usually for cosmetic reasons. They may recur with time. She should have her cholesterol level checked.

Although cholesterol has been implicated in heart attacks and other circulatory troubles, it is also vital to human life. For this reason Dr. Thosteson has entitled his booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly."

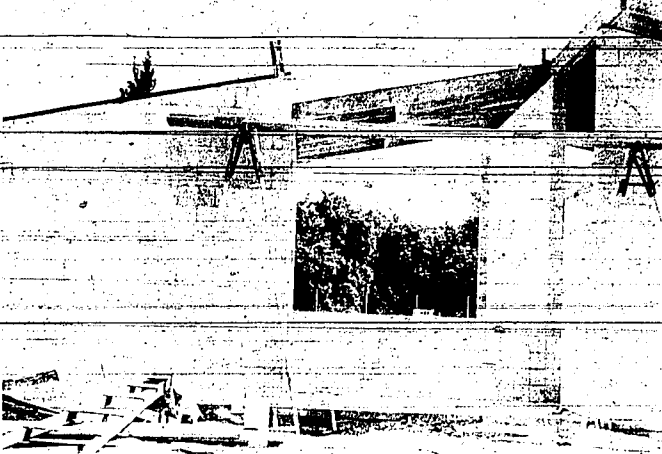

For a copy write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 9999, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

RECENT "cloudbursts" in the Sawtooth mountains have produced swollen creeks, such as Baker Creek shown here, overrunning its normal summer course, north of Ketchum. The muddy water has also discolored the Big Wood River.

CONSTRUCTION of the new Lincoln County swimming pool is continuing on schedule this month, according to Urie Pools, the contractor from Blaine County. The pool manager, Mrs. Chris Derfziger, said plans are to offer swimming lessons in the new structure in August. She suggests anyone interested contact her this month. The pool is located on the west edge of the Shoshone City Park.

Ticks, spotted fever, spotlighted

NEW YORK (UPI) — This is tick season and if you're one of their victims, you can probably blame the family dog for bringing the critters indoors. Or maybe you brought them in yourself on your clothes or skin.

In which case there's a chance the dog might become infested with the noxious insects.

And, then, there's spotted fever to consider. Ticks carry the bitter fever if improperly treated, can kill, although this is not common.

Symptoms include rashes on the wrists, hands, ankles and feet which may eventually spread over the body. Headache, backache, fatigue and an low-grade fever are other signs. The fever can go up to the 104-to-106-degree range, especially if the rash appears.

Nationally, the U.S. Public Health Service reports that spotted fever cases increased from 298 in 1968 to 771 last year. But many mild cases are not reported.

Normally a bigger problem in Gulf Coast and Southeast states, ticks now are well entrenched in the Middle Atlantic states.

Suffolk County on eastern Long Island, New York, is particularly hard hit by spotted fever this season. Dr. Mahfouz Zaki, Suffolk Director of the Bureau of Public Health, thinks his county may be one of the most heavily infested

Ford gets 'clean bill'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford got his semi-annual physical checkup on his 62nd birthday and his doctor gave him a clean bill of health.

Dr. Williams Luskah, the White House physician, examined the President for 25 minutes in the White House library, press secretary Ron Nessen told reporters.

"He found the President to be physically fit and the result of laboratory tests were completely normal," Nessen said. The tests included an electrocardiograph checking on the President's heart.

"Dr. Luskah sees no reason not to be confident the President will maintain his good health," Nessen said.

Ford has kept his weight between 195 and 200 pounds, slightly lower than when he first entered the White House, Luskah said.

AS THE North realizes that diamonds are not going to run, White South may hold something in one of the unbid suits. It is almost certain that he does not hold strength in both, so North passes.

Against a heart lead North would go down one trick at three notrump. He might bring it in against some other lead, but you expect your opponents to defend well and North and South should be happy when South brings his diamond partner home.

In the language of bids, North's two notrump call is either an absolute, one-round force or a strong invitation for South to bid again.

It is a bid of one less than game.

South's three-diamond call conveys the message: "I don't have the number of high-card points I should have for my initial two-diamond response, nor do I have a running diamond suit. If you want to bid three notrump do so at your own risk."

Change North's hand so that his spades are headed by queen-jack and his jack or diamond is the ace. He has the same dis-

NH election debate unsettled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, which has had the disputed New Hampshire electoral college in its hands since January, will continue the bitter debate no matter how long it takes — even a year, says majority leader Mike Mansfield.

"We're going to stay with it. We've got no other choice under the Constitution," he said in a weekend interview.

Asked whether the fight could last all year, Mansfield replied, "Yes, it could."

New Hampshire has been without a second senator since January when Democrat John A. Durkin, who lost by two votes, to Republican Louis C. Wyman on a second recount, contested the election and asked the Senate to resolve it. The Senate so far has been unable to do so.

The rules committee deadlocked on 35 key issues and asked the full Senate for guidance. But the debate has dragged on since June 12 and no decisions have yet been reached on any of them.

There may, however, be a break this week. Both parties have agreed to vote on the first of the 35 questions.

The heavy Democratic majority has tried six times to end debate, the most times closure has ever been attempted on a single issue, and failed each time.

The first vote on substance involves a request by Wyman for a recount of certain precincts that he contends may have been miscounted during the first recount.
