

today in brief

US court takes growth ban case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today laid a ruling which for the first time strikes down a state law aimed at obscene or abusive telephone calls.

The justices also agreed to rule on whether voters can determine what limits they want to set, through zoning, on commercial and residential growth.

In the telephone call case, the Court affirmed the 4th U.S. Circuit Court's ruling that Virginia's law in this regard is too broad and could infringe on free speech rights.

Virginia argued that its law against such calls was similar to those in 49 other states, and that those laws would also be threatened unless the Supreme Court acted.

The appeal involving zoning changes in Eastlake, Ohio, is the first case the Court has agreed to hear involving controversial methods aimed at limiting community growth — keeping new arrivals out.

Cases raising similar "land use" issues are on appeal from San Jose and Santa Clara, Calif. The Court did not rule on whether to grant review in those cases.

A third California case from Petaluma, Calif.

has drawn national attention and also may be appealed to the Supreme Court.

In its second week of the new term, the Court also agreed to decide whether the Federal Power Commission must take into account a utility's history of unfair employment practices when fixing rates and granting licenses.

In other actions, the Court:

- Rejected an attempt by the FPC to deregulate winter prices of natural gas in a manner which critics claim gives gas producers windfall profits.
- Let stand a $161,000 libel judgment against TV Guide. It was the "fourth libel case" the justices have declined to review in two weeks.

- Refused to review a lower court ruling which upheld a District of Columbia law against indecent sexual proposals used mainly to prosecute homosexuals.
- Agreed to hear cases from Chicago and North Carolina involving a city's right to fire police officers without a hearing.
- Agreed to re-examine standards for making warrantless arrests and searches of a suspect in his home.

Colorado forest fire out of control

EAGLE, Colo. (UPI) — A $21 million forest fire, the largest in recent Colorado history, burned out of control today in the White River National Forest but officials said they hoped favorable weather would help them control the blaze.

The fire, which apparently broke out late Friday in an elk hunters' camp, has burned its way through 4,788 acres of spruce, aspen and pine in the north central Colorado forest.

Atlanta teachers join janitor strike

ATLANTA (UPI) — City teachers joined custodial workers today in the first public school strike in Atlanta's history.

A spokesman for the Atlanta Association of Educators, which voted earlier today to support a walkout of the custodial workers, claimed that about 3,500 of the system's 4,000 teachers were out. The union claims to represent about half the teachers in Atlanta's 180 public schools.

Dismsal cited

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (UPI) — Historian Dumas Malone says Thomas Jefferson would be appalled by the cynicism and lack of faith in democracy in America today if he were to return.

Malone, 83, a Pulitzer prize winner who has written five volumes on Jefferson, said he was "an excessive optimist" with an "undamned faith" in the future and in his country.

Illinois fugitive hunt continues

SALEM, Ill. (UPI) — Two "extremely dangerous" fugitives from a federal prison, tired and thirsty, were captured Monday night. Two others were believed in this southern Illinois area and authorities closed a grade school and modified bus routes of other schools as safety measures.

The hunt, using dogs and spotter planes, sheriff's deputies, state police and FBI agents, went on through wooded areas and along highways and rail tracks.

Demo chairman pleads for unity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pleading for unity as the 1976 campaign approaches, Chairman Robert Strauss told the Democratic National Committee today squabbling will only repeat the party's "tragic pattern" of defeat in 1968 and 1972.

Strauss made his appeal as the 361-member committee began five days of work in preparation for the party's national convention next summer in New York City.

Coverage hit

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (UPI) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said coverage of the Patricia Hearst case and attempted assassinations of President Ford by the national news media have been "appalling" and "totally irresponsible."

Helms said he believes had Lynette Fromme not been treated like a celebrity after her attack on President Ford, Sara Jane Moore would not have made her attempt a few days later.

Kissinger China visit under cloud

HONG KONG (UPI) — China cast a cloud over the impending visit by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger with the strongest public protest on Sino-American relations since the signing of the Shanghai Communiqué in 1972.

The protest accused the United States of "interference in China's internal affairs" by permitting supporters of the exiled Dalai Lama to operate in the United States.

Portuguese army chief fights mutiny

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Army chief Gen. Carlos Fabiao flew to northern Portugal today in an attempt to reach a settlement with mutinous troops occupying a military base on the outskirts of Porto.

Military sources said the soldiers have demanded the ouster of the military district chief Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso and the return of the Communists to government power as their price for ending the weekend occupation.

Boy in custody

GOODING — Investigation into the fatal shooting of Donald C. Black, 20, Gooding, should be completed this afternoon, Pros. Atty. Andrew James said today.

He said a 15-year-old boy is being held in protective custody, awaiting results of the autopsy which are expected this afternoon. Further action will depend upon the results of the autopsy, the prosecutor said.

Mr. Black died Sunday afternoon at Gooding Memorial Hospital about an hour after being shot in the head with a .410 shotgun. The prosecutor said he was not certain how the incident took place, but the autopsy results should confirm whether or not it was accidental.

Searchers press hunt for Storey

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rescuers searching California's rugged Sierra Nevada Mountains hope to locate the downed plane of Del Storey and Ted DeLoog today.

"Hopefully, we'll find them today. We've got good weather and we've got it down to a certain area where we can concentrate," said Tom Shaffer, public information officer for the Fresno, Calif., Civil Air Patrol, directors of the search.

The twin-engine Cessna 310 piloted by Storey, 43, presumably fell down about mid-day Friday. Storey and DeLoog, 18, Jerome, a close friend of Storey's daughter, were returning to Twin Falls from Palare in central California.

The men have been down for nearly four days now, with freezing temperatures and snow reported in the mountains.

An "all-out effort" Monday, which kept four to five planes in the air throughout the day, failed to locate the downed plane by pinpointing a fading electronic signal.

"We lost our signal before we could pinpoint it," Shaffer said.

The search is continuing today with three aircraft searching the mountainous section of the Sequoia National Forest where rescuers feel Storey's plane went down. Clear weather with visibility of 10 miles is cheering rescuers, after storms and cloud conditions plagued them during the early days of the search.

Helicopters are also being used today to "get right down in the canyons" which are extremely steep and dangerous for airplanes, Shaffer said, adding, "We believe he's in a canyon."

Meanwhile, another aircraft has crashed in association with the search for the men. Just after take-off from the Yale International Flight Strip, near Sacramento, Calif., Monday morning, pilot Michael Andrykiewicz, 28, was killed, and passenger Edward Warmoth, in his late 20s, was critically injured. Both Sacramento Civil Air Patrol members, the men were on their way to aid in the search efforts.

The men from Twin Falls left this morning to join the search. Storey's close friend and copilot at the Twin Falls Christian Center, Sheldon Siegel, flew down with Eric and Bob Wells, also friends of Storey. The men plan to search in their airplane, or on foot, as rescuers direct. They took backpacking equipment for a possible back-country trek.

Storey family members have been requested to stay at home, however, Shaffer said. "We believe that that would be better until we have some definite information."

Budget cut list set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has made a tentative list of more than $30 billion in federal budget cuts, White House sources said today.

Other administration sources said the specific cuts range from welfare to defense and represent Ford's answer to Democratic protests over his demand for a $356 billion budget ceiling next year.

The White House sources said Ford is expected to pare the proposed cuts to $22 billion before submitting them to Congress in his annual budget message next year.

The President has demanded cuts in federal spending as a tie-in with his proposal for $28 billion in tax cuts for individuals and business next year.

James Lynn, director of the Office of Budget and Management and Ford's chief expense watchdog, and other aides helped the President make up the list which was outlined to the Cabinet last week, according to administration sources.

The general cuts were outlined today as Ford prepared to take a brief campaign trip to Connecticut later in the day.

A White House spokesman confirmed that Ford was circulating the list and said there was "nothing unusual in it at all. It is standard procedure in preparation of the budget."

The President wants each department and major agency chief to comment on the list — suggesting added cuts or giving reasons why some cut should not be made, the sources said.

Ford's proposed $356 billion budget ceiling for fiscal 1976 actually would be an increase of $25 billion above the current budget.

But the $356 billion budget for the accounting year beginning next July 1 would be $28 billion less than the $423 billion budget the administration earlier estimated would have to be spent.

Hansen debt may hamper chances for re-election

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $64,000 debt may severely hamper Rep. George Hansen's chances for re-election.

Hansen said today that since July he has only been able to pay off about $4,000 of the total debt he incurred from his "last campaign" campaign and the legal trouble which followed.

In an interview, the conservative Idaho Republican representative told the Times-News he expects to be able to pay off the remaining debt by Dec. 31.

But, if he is not able to pay it off, he may face serious difficulties in financing his primary and general campaigns for Congress next year.

A new federal law puts a basic $70,000 limit on the amount of money congressional candidates can spend in both the primary and general campaign separately.

The problem is that starting Jan. 1, 1976, any money Hansen uses to pay off his debt may be counted against that limit.

According to Russ Welsh, an official at the U.S. Clerk of the House office, who handles campaign finance statements, the Federal Election Commission has decided that any debt from previous campaigns paid by Dec. 31 will not be counted against the 1976 election campaign spending limits.

But the commission has made no decision on whether money used next year to pay off old debts will be counted against the spending limits, Welsh said. He said the commission has not yet considered the question but should come up with an answer by the end of the year.

That leaves Hansen in a precarious position unless he can raise a net $64,000 quickly.

So far, the going has been slow. In his July 10 campaign finance statement filed with the U.S. Clerk of the House, Hansen listed his total debt at $51,722.

Now, according to Hansen, the Oct. 10 finance statement shows his total debt at $64,420.

But, Hansen said, this figure includes $16,704 that his election committee owes Hansen himself. The July report had included this information but had not added it into the total, he said.

TV cop shows turn off Valley officers

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Television is a poor place to learn about police work, according to Magic Valley law officials.

With few exceptions, the rash of cops-and-robbers portrayed in television series only distort the true story behind law enforcement, the officials said.

"I think they are a hell of a big joke," says Twin Falls Asst. Police Chief Roy Lindell.

"I wish everybody could solve their cases like Kojak does. We wouldn't have very much to do," adds Ed Culver, Rupert's chief of police.

"None of them turn me on much," Burley Police Chief Dick May chimes in, "I'm strictly a football and baseball fan myself."

In some cases, the TV shows actually make it harder for a policeman to do his job, according to Lindell.

Television viewers expect Twin Falls officers to act like TV cops, he says. "It's pretty well influencing the people as far as (police) procedure," he said. "We have to contend with people on what to do."

Most TV programs "pretty well abuse the profession," Lindell believes, adding, "I don't think over all that it's doing the people a bit of good."

There is usually no need for patrol cars to squeal around corners on the way to the scene of a crime, according to Lindell. "As a general rule, we drive within the limits."

But "as far as all of them are concerned, 'Streets of San Francisco' would be my pick" as the best of the television portrayals, Lindell says.

"They use a little better judgment and it isn't as exaggerated as some of the others."

"Frankly, I don't watch TV too much. I like wildlife and wild game pictures," the assistant chief says.

May, Burley's top police officer, notes that many programs, especially "The Rockies," always show police "sliding around corners and burning up the cars."

"Young officers watch this and it gets out of hand, May admits.

In Burley, if an officer recklessly chases "a guy who just went through a red light, then he'll have to deal with me," the chief adds.

"It all depends on the circumstances," he said. "It could be jeopardizing the citizen's life."

"Police Story" is a "fairly decent show" if its episodes are based on "true, actual cases," according to May.

"Others are glorified so much, like Kojak, and his sucker," he added.

Rupert's Ed Culver offers a different interpretation of TV. "The way I look at this TV proposition, 90 per cent of the time the officer is the villain. I think this is wrong."

US resists rigid meet agenda

PARIS (UPI) — The United States and other industrial countries today resisted attempts by oil-exporting nations to set a rigid agenda for the December conference on energy and raw materials.

Ten delegations representing industrialized, oil-exporting and developing countries agreed Monday to hold the first stage of the world economic conference in Paris Dec. 15.

But the delegates have yet to work out the agenda for the conference, popularly known as the "North-South dialogue," — specifically the tasks for four commissions on energy, raw materials, Third World development and finances.

The United States, Japan and the European Common Market have urged the oil exporters and developing countries to stick to the vague terms of reference for the commissions drawn up by the French hosts.

US pushing in Mideast

Chicago Sun-Times

WASHINGTON — Signing legislation to send U.S. technicians to the Sinai, President Ford has served notice that there will be no letup in pressure by the United States for new Mideast accords.

"I reaffirm that we will not accept stagnation or stalemate in the Middle East," Ford said Monday, using words that had become closely associated with administration pressure on Israel to make concessions in negotiations with Egypt.

As administration sources have made clear, the next U.S. push will be for an agreement between Syria and Israel on the Golan Heights, although it remains unclear whether the United States will seek a merely cosmetic Israeli withdrawal or a broader settlement.

Syria has said it is unwilling to negotiate with Israel on the Golan Heights, but the statements are being taken as diplomatic bluff and domestic ploy by both Israel and the United States, especially in view of Syria's having once previously accepted a partial Israeli pullback.

Israel has expressed willingness to negotiate either an overall settlement or a small new interim settlement. Even in an overall agreement, however, Israeli spokesmen say that Israel would not be willing to fully evacuate the heights captured at high cost in 1967.

The administration has not indicated when full-scale negotiations will start on Golan. White House press secretary

Ron Nessen declined either to confirm or deny reports that President Ford will meet in Europe next month with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Such a session could signal the onset of serious talks in the same way that Ford's meeting last June with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg, Austria, kicked off renewed negotiations that led to the Sinai interim agreement.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is expected to visit Washington either in November or December.

The measure signed by Ford paves the way for 200 U.S. technicians to be placed in key early-warning stations between Egyptian and Israeli forces.

Ford said in a statement read before television cameras and reporters that the Sinai agreement was "a significant step toward an overall settlement in the Middle East."

The Chicago Sun-Times reported exclusively last week that Arab leaders were told Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had secretly promised Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that the United States would begin pushing in two years for an overall Mideast settlement, including full Israeli withdrawal from lands captured in the 1967 war. Kissinger denied making such promises.

In his statement, Ford said that the United States "must continue our diplomatic efforts with the parties in order to sustain the momentum toward peace generated by the Sinai agreement."

Trudeau orders partial control

OTTAWA, Canada (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau imposed selective wage and price controls on a number of segments of Canada's economy today, saying it was on a destructive course.

The controls limit wage hikes for many workers to 10 per cent a year and restrict price boosts by some corporations to their increase in costs.

"This program of restraint is the heaviest imposed upon Canadians since the Second World War," Trudeau said in an 18-minute "nationwide" address Monday night.

"I am asking the people of Canada to accept tough limits on their behavior so that our economy can recover, so that we can all be better off in the future than we would be if we allowed the economy to continue along its present destructive course."

The prime minister said the controls would take effect immediately and remain "for a considerable length of time."

He said while they apply only to certain select groups "everyone is expected to observe the guidelines."

The guidelines permit annual salary increases of 8 per cent, but an additional 2 per cent hike will be given for productivity. Annual increases up to $600 are not under the controls and the maximum annual pay raise is limited to $2,400.

"I am telling you that this program must work, because if it does not, the government may be forced to impose mandatory, comprehensive all embracing price and income controls upon every man and woman in Canada," Trudeau said.

He said the guidelines apply "to the federal government and all its employees, on the 1,500 largest companies in Canada, including virtually every company in the construction industry, and on all the employees of those companies."

These products contain more than four per cent methanol, which can cause blindness or death if swallowed.

panies.

"The guidelines apply as well to all professional people, such as doctors, lawyers, accountants and engineers."

He added, "I want to make clear that the income guidelines apply to all forms of income — including rent, dividends, fees charged by professionals, business profit margins, and government wages."

Government officials estimated the controls would affect about one-quarter of Canada's work force. The controls "do not" affect labor contracts and agreements now in force, but apply only to new pacts.

Trudeau said an anti-inflation review board will monitor the controls and report to an administrator who will be empowered to order rollbacks.

No new war looming, Allon says

By United Press International

Israel Foreign Minister Yigal Allon says Syria hasn't shown any interest in reaching a peace settlement with the Jewish state, but he doesn't see a new war on the horizon.

"Israel declares clearly that she is ready for negotiations with Syria without any preconditions," Allon said Monday night on returning to Tel Aviv from the U.N. General Assembly's policy debate.

The foreign minister expressed pessimism about Israel and Syria negotiating a new truce agreement similar to the recent Sinai Desert accord between Israel and Egypt.

"Syria does not show any interest in such negotiations for an interim agreement or for an overall agreement," he said.

"Her position is totally negative."

Allon warned Syria about intervening in Lebanon's religious warfare, but said he does "not see any war with the Syrians on the horizon."

He said Israel would step in if Syria sent troops to Lebanon and the ensuing fighting could lead to "the fall of the regime in Damascus."

In Jerusalem, Defense Minister Shimon Peres accused Syria Monday of making "belligerent" statements and said Israel would maintain "necessary alertness."

In Washington, President Ford Monday signed a congressional resolution sending 200 Americans to the Sinai Desert to monitor the Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement.

The Israeli national radio said Monday Egypt has agreed to allow a ship with cargo for an Israeli port call through the Suez Canal on Oct. 22.

Egypt had barred Israeli cargo since nationalizing the waterway in 1956. But the new peace pact provides for the passage of non-Israeli ships carrying Israeli cargo.

Absent-minded spy nabbed

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — U.S. naval intelligence officers have arrested an absent-minded spy who stole documents about U.S. 6th Fleet movements in the Mediterranean but left behind his passport, Italian police said today.

A U.S. Naval Support Activities spokesman said a Belgian named Roger De Brujcker, 28, of Antwerp, was arrested by the Naval Investigative Service in July on espionage charges and turned over to Italian authorities for questioning. He gave no further details.

Italian police said De Brujcker allegedly entered a U.S. Navy office in suburban Agnano by mingling with a busload of Navy men and carrying a briefcase of the kind used by NATO officials.

They said he then hid in a rest room, came out during the lunch break and stole a number of documents regarding 6th Fleet movements.

Only after leaving the building did he remember he left behind his passport in the briefcase, police said. They said he was arrested while trying to re-enter the building to retrieve it.

Police said De Brujcker allegedly told investigators he worked for the military "at tache of an unidentified foreign power."

Idaho quake insurance rates high

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Earthquakes in Twin Falls? The possibility is remote, but homeowners here still must pay more for earthquake insurance than families living in San Francisco.

An earthquake expert who helps set national earthquake insurance rates says the danger of quakes is "substantially less" in Idaho than along the California coast. But quake protection still costs more in Idaho than almost anywhere in California.

Idahoans also pay considerably more than Utahns for earthquake insurance.

But an Idaho seismologist says a catastrophic quake is more likely to occur in Utah — and southeastern Idaho — than in California. Volcanoes could accompany such a catastrophe, says Carl Savage, associate chief of the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology.

Protection from earthquakes is not included in basic homeowners insurance policies. It must be purchased separately. In Idaho the quake insurance can cost homeowners nearly five times more than the basic policy.

A typical $25,000 wood frame house in Idaho would cost $51.25 a year to protect against quakes under ISO rates. The same insurance in San Francisco would cost $30 a year and in Utah $40 a year.

The basic insurance policy for a $25,000 frame home would run between $75 and $85, according to Twin Falls agent Steve Berg. That means buying the extra earthquake coverage would raise the cost of the premium by more than 60 per cent.

On a $25,000 brick home, earthquake coverage costs a whopping $260 yearly in Idaho under the ISO rates. That is at least four times the basic insurance policy cost of $55 to $65 a year on such a home, according to Berg.

Again, the quake protection rate on a brick home in Idaho is higher than the rates in either San Francisco or Utah, under the ISO guidelines. In San Francisco it would cost $259.75 and in Utah $191.75 to insure a $25,000 brick home each year.

ISO earthquake rates are standard throughout both Idaho and Utah. But in California where about 90 per cent of the nation's earthquake insurance is sold the rates vary by zone.

The only zone with higher rates than San Francisco is in the Imperial County southeast of Los Angeles. In this zone it would cost $81.25 to insure a frame home and $370 yearly to insure a brick home worth $25,000.

According to Karl Steinbrugge, manager of ISO's earthquake department, earthquake insurance rates in Idaho should be lower than in California.

Steinbrugge said he was not familiar with Idaho rates and was unable to quickly look them up. Although he is responsible for helping to set the quake insurance rates across the nation, he said he did not know why the Idaho rates would be higher.

But, on an earthquake danger scale of 1 to 5, with 1 representing the greatest danger, most of Idaho would stand at 3, he said.

"That doesn't mean you can't have an earthquake, but it's relatively unlikely," he maintained.

Steinbrugge said only the southeastern corner of the state would be given a higher danger rating of 2. In comparison, he said, the San Francisco area is rated 1.

Steinbrugge said he is using the 1-5 scale in making a re-evaluation of earthquake insurance rates around the country.

He said that just in terms of earthquake danger he would recommend two rates be established in Idaho, corresponding to the two danger zones. But he said the number of people taking out insurance in the state may be too small to warrant the paperwork involved in establishing separate rates.

Steinbrugge said the Idaho rates should be lower than those in San Francisco since the quake danger is less. He would not say how much lower they should be, however.

Even if the Idaho rates are lowered following completion of Steinbrugge's analysis, the impact on Twin Falls probably will not be great. Three local insurance agents working for separate companies said they could not remember selling any earthquake insurance in recent years.

Seismologist Carl Savage takes a somewhat different view from Steinbrugge of potential earthquake dangers in Idaho.

The state has "one of the most potentially active seismic zones anywhere," Savage said. This zone extends from the Wasatch fault in Utah into southeastern Idaho. Extensions of the fault zone head west into the Raft River Valley and north into Montana, he said.

Two major faults run along both the east and west sides of the Raft River Valley. The hot springs in the area are an indication of the faults. Surface water, Savage said, moves down the faults and becomes "super heated" when it hits the hot rock below.

Volcanic activity is a problem which may accompany an earthquake in the area, Savage said. He said that when the ground shifts, passages may be created for hot molten rock to come forth.

Savage said that a map completed this summer by the United States Geological Service shows that there are a couple of minor faults in the Hollister area and several short, minor faults in the Camas Prairie. However, he said the Twin Falls area is "probably not all that hazardous."

He said there is one major "suspected active" fault running from a point north of Mountain Home into the Bliss area.

But, he said, the greatest activity appears to be in the southeast portion of the state where "stress is building up."

Unlike the California coast, frequent minor tremors do not occur in this area, he said. "Actually, it's very desirable to have these small movements," since they help to relieve the stress building up, he maintained.

Because the minor tremors are not occurring along the Wasatch front zone, a quake in that area would likely be more catastrophic than a quake along the coast, Savage said.

But Steinbrugge said a "diametrically opposed" logic is just as valid as that used by Savage. He said frequent minor tremors may indicate an area is more subject to earthquakes, including major ones.

Steinbrugge said that no one really knows exactly where earthquakes are going to occur. He said only the "hotspots" in general are known. The greatest hotspot in the United States, he said, is along the coast while the second is along the Wasatch range.

Republic will survive, but how does it do it?

WASHINGTON — You would have to mine a million tons of political ore to find a situation more ironical than the situation one finds in the nation this fall.

It makes you wonder how we muddle through. Here is the greatest Republic in the free world. And here are the two greatest parties in the greatest Republic in the free world. What a picture! Take the Republicans first—Almost nobody else will take the Republicans, but for purposes of discussion, take a look at the GOP. Depending on which poll you believe, only 13 to 21 percent of the voters still identify themselves as Republicans. So many statehouses have been lost to the party that when the Republican governors meet, they can barely get up three tables of bridge. The party just managed to lose a Senate seat in New Hampshire, which until recently was one of the most Republican states in the land.

Behold this poor old elephant! It is saddled with blame for the worst recession in years. In the popular view, it is the party of double-digit inflation. That inflation was fueled by cumulative federal deficits, over the past seven years, amounting to $171 billion. These have been seven years of Republican president. Unemployment still is running at 8.3 percent in the nation. In certain areas, it's twice that bad, twice that bad. The Republican party is a party of distinction. This is its distinction: It is tainted by Watergate with the worst political corruption in American history — worse than the corruption of Grant, worse than the corruption of Harding. They were Republicans, too. No fewer than forty men associated with the Nixon campaign of 1972 have pleaded guilty, or been found guilty, on criminal charges. The number may be higher. One loses count. Some of these birds are still in jail.

The Republicans' landslide winner of 1972 had to resign before he got impeached. No other party can make that claim. Gerald Ford is the Republicans' putative nominee for 1976. Only 46 percent of the people approve of his presidential record. Until this moment, Ford has never campaigned for national office. His putative vice-presidential choice is Nelson Rockefeller, three times repudiated by his own national party. The three leading conservative journals, closely studied with the GOP, treat Ford as if he had amnesia. They think Rockefeller is Typhoid Mary.

This is the irony: Given such a gorgeous opportunity, at such a time against such a woebegone party, whom do the Democrats have to beat? You have to beat the Democrats. You do. Every time you open the paper, some other Democrat is responding to popular clamor that he run for the White House. Fifty-two of them, more or less; have modestly indicated their availability, but when it comes to presidential limber, this is second-growth stuff. What you have is 52 vice-presidential prospects. These are mostly bullen parties.

The Democrats' best prospects for '76 are Senators Henry Jackson of Washington and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. They are not what you might call fresh faces. Scoop appears to have peaked too soon: he peaked in the spring of 1972. The Happy Warrior is 64. If elected, he would be the oldest inaugurate since Buchanan in 1857.

Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is said to be still a Democrat. So far as the national party is concerned, he is very still. The last time the government — who carelessly supported a Democratic nominee was in 1954, when he went all out for the late John W. Davis. Wallace was five at the time. No one expects him to stick with the party in 1976. If he somehow got the nomination, he would split the party asunder.

For the rest, you have a gaggle of agreeable gentlemen who are variously named Bayh, Carter, Church, Sanford, Bentsen, Udall, Harris, Shapp, and Shriver. Their names turn up in the polls about six points behind one of the above. Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota toyed with the notion of trying again, but gave it up. Someone told him he might lose Massachusetts also if he ran again. Bella Abzug may yet announce. In this field, don't write her off.

We are four and a half months from the first primary in New Hampshire. The voice of the people will be heard in the land, rolling up votes for Whaddyacallim and Whatsisname. The Republic doubtless will survive, but by the bones of the Founding Fathers, you sometimes wonder how.

How to tell UFOs from the planets

There seem to be a lot of UFOs (Unidentified Flying Objects) and planets in the nighttime skies these days.

There has been a rash of UFO sightings around the Magic Valley, and there also is a rare display of four planets in the evening. By the weekend, there will be five planets visible at once, something that takes place only once or twice every hundred years.

Because of the high interest in both the UFOs and the planets, it would be useful for the layman to be able to tell them apart.

At the risk of treading where angels fear, here is a handy layman's guide for telling planets from UFOs.

Planets only appear in a small area of the sky. If the light you see is not in this area, it can't be a planet.

Planets are visible only in a narrow arc. The arc roughly follows the path the sun follows across the sky, rising in the east, swinging up over the South and then back to the horizon in the West.

The visible planets appear to follow the sun's path through the sky, varying only a few degrees.

This means that there are wide areas of the sky where planets never will be seen. For example, there never will be a planet in the north three fourths of the sky. There never will be a planet directly overhead. There never will be a planet close to the horizon at the south. There never will be a planet high above the horizon in either the east or west.

So if you see a mysterious light in any of these areas you can be sure you're not seeing a planet — assuming your sense of direction is accurate.

You'll have to rely on common sense to tell whether a light sighted in these large planetless areas might be an airplane (with blinking colored lights that move) or a star (with flashing colors as the star twinkles dimly, but which does not appear to move).

The odds are that what you see is no more interesting than a small private airplane or a national guard helicopter on patrol for cattle, pilots.

But if you do see a real UFO or better yet, a flying saucer, give us a call. We'd love to take its picture.

Strip mining Death Valley

New York Times

As surprising as it may seem, open pit mining may soon begin despoil one of the most scenic and popular parts of Death Valley National Monument in California. The Interior Department has ruled that the National Park Service is powerless to prevent the private exploitation of this extremely fragile desert landscape.

How can a private individual or corporation have the right to extract minerals in parks dedicated to protecting the natural scenery? Contrary to basic national park policy, Federal law for many years has unfortunately granted prospectors and miners special privilege to stake claims and exploit the mineral resources in five National Park areas. Claims are currently being established in Death Valley at the rate of 200 per year; and many remote areas of the monument are already scarred with access roads, mine tailings, and the litter from drilling and mining operations.

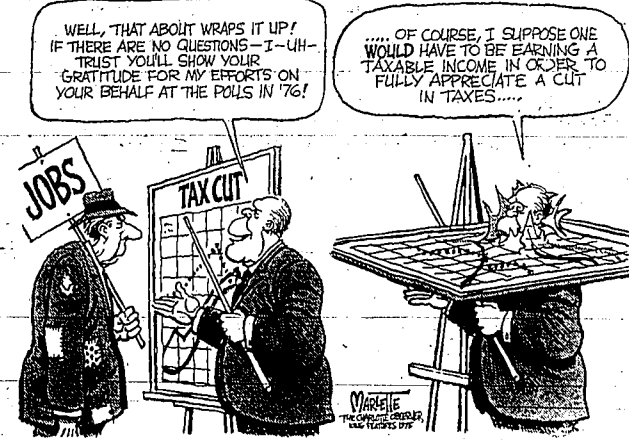

The threat of major open pit mining of sodium calcium borate in the Gower Gulch, within just a mile of Death Valley's famed Zabriskie Point — along with other imminent mining operations in Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument in Arizona, and Glacier Bay National Monument in Alaska — has caused a swift reaction in Congress. Senator Melvoin of Montana and Representative Seiberling of Ohio have introduced legislation to block the granting of any further mining claims within these monuments, and also within Mount McKinley National Park in Alaska and Coronado International Memorial in Arizona, and to establish a three-year moratorium on open-pit and strip mining on existing claims.

Now is the time to end this unwarranted commercial privilege, and safeguard these irreplaceable scenic areas for the inspiration of future generations.

"SHHH! He's in to TM — three martinis!"

If it's proposed, it may even pass

WASHINGTON — Melbrow, who heads up a large government bureau in Washington, was bemoaning the bad publicity that the federal bureaucracy has been getting lately.

He told me, "Everytime you pick up the paper you see where some Senate or congressional committee is investigating hanky-panky in the government. If it isn't the FBI breaking into people's homes, it's the CIA refusing to obey a presidential order. One day someone is blowing the whistle on the Agriculture Department shipping rotten grain abroad, and the next day they talk about high officials in the Pentagon taking free hunting weekends from Northrop Aviation. I tell you all this stuff is giving the government a bad name."

"I hate to see the U.S. government get a bad name," I told Melbrow. "I don't see why the public has to know every little mistake we make," Melbrow said. "You can't have a smooth-running federal system if government officials are going to be called on the carpet because of incompetence and violations of the law. Sure, there is stupidity and fraud in the government, but does everybody have to know about it?"

"I shouldn't think so," I said. "I'd rather believe that government officials have the best interests of the country at heart, and if they err it's because they're human."

"There was a time," said Melbrow, "when we could operate without people finding out what we were doing. If we made mistakes we were the only ones who knew about it."

"How did you do it?" I asked. "By classifying every document that came across our desk. The idea of classifying documents was not only to protect national security, but also to make sure nobody outside a department would find out what we were up to."

"What a foolproof system," I said. "Yes, except! In every branch of government there are now people on the lower levels who have been leaking classified documents to the press. They are trying to make their superiors look stupid," Melbrow said fiercely.

"But that's treason!" I exclaimed. "Of course it is. A classified document is a Holy Writ that must be guarded with a bureaucrat's life. Once it is made public our enemies, domestic and foreign, can make hay with it."

"But there is a new breed of employee who believes everything the government does is the public's business. If he have a billion-dollar overrun on an airplane, he thinks the American people should know about it. If the administration is keeping a secret list of political enemies, he'll pass it on to Jack Anderson. He has no loyalty to the people who pay his salary."

"The links," I said. "What can be done about these people and spillover front-runners. There is now a bill in Congress called S-1 which will take care of these rats. The bill provides for a prison term and fine for any government employee who hands over a classified document to an unauthorized person. If I give you a paper that reveals a government secret I can go to jail. Even if I give it to a congressman I can go to jail."

"That's fantastic. You mean Congress is considering a bill to keep the public from finding out what their government is up to?" "Correct," said Melbrow. "With S-1 you will never have another Watergate scandal, a Lockheed overrun hearing, a Pentagon Papers revelation or an IRS investigation. We'll have clean government for the first time in our history."

"Do you think Congress will vote for S-1?" I asked. "Why not? If they're dumb enough to propose it, they're dumb enough to pass it."

GOP showdown in February

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — The New Hampshire presidential primary, a first-in-the-nation contest that has lapped the re-election ambitions of two presidents in 24 years, stages a Republican showdown next year.

Gerald Ford faces Ronald Reagan, the conservative former governor of California, who still hasn't officially announced he is running for the nomination. Reagan opened presidential campaign operations Wednesday, "I can't overemphasize the importance of the New Hampshire campaign to our effort," the national chairman Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., told a news conference.

The contest between Ford and Reagan offered New Hampshire's traditionally unpredictable voters the cherished national spotlight Feb. 24.

In recent years, the contest has been kind to underdog and spoiler front-runners. In 1972, frontrunner Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, suffered a setback when Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., ran better than expected.

Both President Lyndon Johnson and President Harry Truman decided against campaigning for re-election after the results of this primary were in. Anti-war Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D-Minn., carried 38 per cent of the vote in March, 1968, a moral triumph that prompted Johnson three weeks later to withdraw.

Candidates have won impetus here: Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952, John F. Kennedy in 1960 and Richard M. Nixon in 1968 all won the primary and went on to capture their party's nomination and the presidency.

Henry keeps clout, avoids offending Kremlin

WASHINGTON — President Ford's refusal to name a Pentagon representative on the new trade board created by Congress to monitor trade with Communist nations reflects Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's continuing power to veto policy moves that might offend the Kremlin.

When congressional demands that Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger be named to the East-West Trade Board were raised at a board meeting, objections were quickly voiced by Deputy Secretary of State Robert Ingersoll. Inserting the Pentagon into non-military matters, Ingersoll asserted, would be inappropriate and could be resented by Soviet leaders at a time of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on many delicate matters.

Kissinger has successfully kept Schlesinger off the board so far, pointing to two power realities: first, though his prestige in Congress has fallen drastically and his national popularity is slipping, Kissinger keeps the upper hand over Schlesinger in their continuous struggle over global strategy; second, Kissinger still decides international economic policy despite challenges from Treasury Secretary William Simon.

But Kissinger may have to back down on East-West trade thanks to Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, the flamboyant chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. Such a retreat on an obscure issue would be seen by Kissinger's rivals as a first step in stripping international economics from his empire.

The East-West Trade Board was created by Congress as an amendment to the 1974 trade act pushed by Long, who feared dangerous Communist gains (especially in transferring technology) resulting from U.S. businessmen being outfoxed by Soviet bureaucrats. A sharp eye for the national interest in these deals would be kept by a board, as outlined by Long, consisting of several cabinet members — definitely including the secretary of defense.

On April 8, Ford named a board including nearly all of Long's nominations — but excluding the secretary of defense. On June 5, Long wrote Secretary Simon, the board's chairman, protesting Schlesinger's omission as a "violation of congressional intent. In monitoring 'transfer of technology vital to the national interest,' wrote Long. It is extremely important that the Department of Defense advise the East-West Trade Board on the national security aspects of transactions. There's no argument from Simon, who would take a much harder international economic policy line than Kissinger. On Jan. 2, Simon wrote Long supporting Schlesinger's membership. But when Simon brought it up at a board meeting, he ran into Ingersoll's objection.

That was enough to blackmail Schlesinger, Ford's closest ally could not remember ever seeing anything about the East-West Trade Board, and it is extremely doubtful the President himself knew about the controversy. On such matters, Dr. Kissinger's writ goes unchallenged in the White House, including the secretary of defense.

On April 8, Ford named a board including nearly all of Long's nominations — but excluding the secretary of defense. On June 5, Long wrote Secretary Simon, the board's chairman, protesting Schlesinger's omission as a "violation of congressional intent. In monitoring 'transfer of technology vital to the national interest,' wrote Long. It is extremely important that the Department of Defense advise the East-West Trade Board on time. For its part, the Pentagon is eager to move deeper into East-West trade questions. But more than trade is at stake: Kissinger is unhappy about the State Department's helping him away from U.S.-Soviet grain talks and would like to restore the Treasury to its pre-Kissinger eminence in international economic policymaking. Lining up against Kissinger on the trade board is, therefore, a symbol shot across the State Department's bow.

Moreover, excluding Schlesinger from the trade board fits a larger pattern: Kissinger wants the Pentagon confined to strictly military pursuits and has kept it out of strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) and military aid negotiations with Israel and Egypt. Backing down on trade board membership would be small retreat from overall policy.

Even if such a retreat is ultimately forced, however, Kissinger performed remarkably in this backstage Washington shuffle. For nearly a year, while the President apparently stayed aloof, Kissinger has ignored a congressional mandate, defied a senior Senator, and stood off the Defense and Treasury Secretaries in make sure his own power and his own concept of detente were not diluted even in a tangential bureaucratic dispute.

'Up With People' group plans TF appearances

'Up With People' plans 2 performances in TF

TWIN FALLS — "Up With People," an internationally recognized music group, will present two performances here Nov. 1 and 2 at the College of Southern Idaho.

The key to the group, founded in the midst of the often turbulent 1960s, is a "we care about people" attitude, says advance man Bob Dumont, 20, who grew up in Kellogg.

In the '60s, the prevalent view was "down with this, down with that," Dumont says. The theme of the new group was "up — up with people, up with different ideas," he says.

Dumont and other advance team members Marilyn Turborg and Patti Ellison will be in Twin Falls from now until the performances, working on another aspect of the "Up With People" review: community participation.

The cast of about 150 college-age young people attempts to do as many mini-shows as possible while in a community. They go to schools, nursing homes, hospitals, special education classes, prisons, youth detention centers — any where people are gathered.

And while in town the cast members stay at the homes of host families.

The advance team works on arranging performances at different community institutions and at setting up host families. Hosts can be of any age, with or without children of their own.

For more information on the group or becoming a host family, call Bob, Marilyn or Patti at CSI, 733-9554 ext. 263.

A non-profit organization, "Up With People" will donate half of the proceeds of its Twin Falls performances to the YW-YMCA here.

During the group's tour of the United States this year, "Up With People" will perform in more than 700 different cities before an estimated two million people.

Since its founding the group has visited 38 countries...and 3,500 young people from 27 countries have spent a year traveling with the show.

The theme of the group — a positive, caring attitude toward all different types of people — is expressed in the makeup of "Up With People," Dumont says.

Many different national origins, colors, and races are represented by the cast members. But the group is simply a collection of people — no religious or political ties hold it to a certain philosophy.

John Denver top country music entertainer

News Tips
733-0931

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — John Denver, America's biggest-selling recording artist and Colorado's poet laureate, has won the country music industry's highest accolade, the Entertainer of the Year award.

On the year in the Far East, Denver accepted the Country Music Association honor via satellite from Perth, Australia, during the nationwide telecast of the 9th Annual CMA awards show aired live from the Grand Ole Opry House Monday night.

"I was rated on country music. It was part of my life and it's beautiful to be able to share this with you," said the blond, bespectacled singer, who also garnered the Song of the Year honors for "Back Home Again."

Denver is an example of the overlapping worlds of country, pop, rock and folk which have produced a hybrid sound that well but angers some hard-core country veterans who feel "his" music is being watered down.

On the other hand, two longtime country chart inhabitants, Waylon Jennings and Dolly Parton, took Male and Female Vocalists of the Year.

Best known for "I'm a Ramblin' Man," Jennings is an acknowledged rebel whose beard, long hair and unconventional attitude do not always sit well with the CMA aristocracy.

"The blonde and buxom Miss Parton said she was surprised by her victory.

"I'm proud of it and I just hope that everybody thinks I deserve it. I hope nobody thinks I got it because of what happened last year," she said, referring to the 1974 Female Vocalist award which went to Olivia Newton-John, a pretty Australian who records out of

The Newton-John award raises the hackles of many a country veteran and led to the organization of the Association of Country Entertainers. The group works for more representation in the CMA and a different format for the awards show.

Freddy Fender received the Single Record of the Year award for "When the Next Teardrop Falls."

For the fourth year in a row, Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn captured the Vocal Duo award for their many hits including "Feelings."

Blind singer-musician Ronnie Milsap switched from rock to country two years ago and was last year's Male Vocalist of the Year. This year he won the Album of the Year award for "Feelings."

honor for "A Legend in My Time."

Stetler Brothers received the Vocal Group of the Year, while guitarist Roy Clark and banjo picker Buck Trent were voted Instrumental Group of the Year.

Johnny Gimble, a fiddler for 30 years in several bands, was voted Instrumentalist of the Year.

Mrs. Henry Cannon, better known as the country-comedienne Minnie Pearl, broke into tears when her longtime friend, Tennessee Ernie Ford, announced her induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Attired in a Thai silk tunic and pants instead of her usual gingham apron and price-tagged straw hat, she said she had conditioned herself to the fact that I wouldn't get it. I think this is the eighth time I've been up for it and I didn't really think this was my year. I feel like I'm in a dream."

MINNIE Pearl tearfully accepts a plaque naming her as the inductee into the "Country Music Hall of Fame" during the televised broadcast of the Country Music Association awards Monday night. Presenting the award is Tennessee Ernie Ford. (UPI)

Early October auto sales boom

DETROIT (UPI) — Auto analysts say the introduction of the 1976 model cars helped push early October sales up an estimated 16 per cent from a year ago. A new consumer survey, however, indicates the industry shouldn't expect a quick recovery from its two-year slump.

Sales reports for the Oct. 1-10 period, the first in which three of the four American auto companies had their higher priced '76s on sale, were due today and appeared likely to show sales of about 255,000 cars, analysts said.

That would be the best month-opening period since October, 1974, and the best year-to-year upturn since mid-September, 1973, when sales were up 33 per cent.

While overall consumer confidence has improved, the University of Michigan Survey Research Center said attitudes toward buying a new car in the next 12 months did not improve between May and September. The survey indicated heightened fear of inflation might dampen any recovery.

Survey Director Jay Schmiedeknecht said greater economic recovery would occur next year, both in autos and in the general economy.

"History suggests that sooner or later even a relatively slow recovery

Las Vegas 'full of bats'

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — This city is known mostly for its gambling, but it's also full of bats.

The sixth annual North American Symposium on Bat Research opened today, and some 150 scientists agreed the desert city is a good location for it. It is on a major migration route, and more than 100,000 bats pass through here during the spring and fall.

At least 21 species make their home here, which is the largest variety of species of any area in the country. Some say Las Vegas could be the Bat Capital of North America.

Even so, the future may not be bright for them. One area of research to be examined here is the possibility bats are becoming an endangered species.

Dual roles eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover dispatched FBI men to Congress to serve as double agents, according to the Washington Post.

Post reporter Ronald Kessler said in a story in today's editions that Hoover sent agents with special expertise to Capitol Hill to help members of Congress who needed assistance in particular areas, such as investigative accounting.

But Hoover's personnel also performed at least two other functions, lobbying for their

Cult members camp in Illinois

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Illinois officials have confirmed that between 50-70 followers of a mysterious couple promising a UFO trip to another planet camped for almost a week in northeastern Illinois early this month, a Portland newspaper said today.

License plate numbers on three of the group's vehicles matched those of cars that disappeared along with 23 persons from Oregon following a Sept. 14 meeting in Waldport, Ore. The Oregonian quoted the state officials as saying.

The group reportedly stayed at a campground near Fox Lake, Ill.

Oregon license plates on the three vehicles were registered to Michael D. Kelly, Blodgett, Ore.; Gerald Anderson, Eugene, Ore.; and E. Don Stagg, Springfield, Ore.

Park officials said a man using the name Al Kaplan registered for the Kelly car and E. D. Stagg for the Stagg's vehicle. They said it was not known who registered for the vehicle linked to Anderson.

A man in his mid-40s, "who had eyes that looked funny; they stared all the time," was operating a "red Ford van" that was among the other vehicles that registered at the park, a park spokesman said.

People who attended the Waldport meeting said that a man known as "Him" who conducted the session with "Her" had "holow eyes."

One of the other vehicles was a brown pickup truck with blue fenders operated by a woman, who apparently was in charge

Protest settled without violence

LANSING, Kan. (UPI) — About 100 inmates armed with baseball bats agreed to end a seven-hour protest at the Kansas State Penitentiary and returned to their cells today to await negotiations with state officials on their complaints of harsh security.

"The inmates who staged a sit down strike at the Kansas State Penitentiary were all secured in their cells without any violence of any kind," said R.A. Atkins, assistant director for corrections.

Atkins said the inmates gave him a half-page list of complaints, but he refused to make the grievances public. He said agency and its objectives and reporting back to the chief on the private doubts of Congressmen and their staffs.

Kessler quoted a source "with first hand knowledge of the operation."

The report quoted the unnamed source as saying "the idea was the infiltration of Congress."

The FBI labeled the allegations as "absolutely false. Mr. Hoover didn't need anyone to lobby for him in the Congress, as he did a very good job himself."

Truby, Pocatello teachers confer

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Supt. of Public Instruction Roy Truby traveled to Pocatello today to meet with opposing sides in the weeklong teachers strike in that city.

Pocatello school district teachers voted a week ago Monday to go on strike and last Tuesday set up pickets lines at the district's 23 schools. Schools have been closed since last Wednesday.

Truby said he will propose appointment of a fact-finding team to look into the troubles between school board members and the teachers, pointing out that a three-member team went to Idaho Falls and after being there two days both sides came to an agreement in the seven-day walkout of teachers.

The Idaho school chief said he would first confer separately with opposing sides then have a joint meeting with representatives of the two factions. He said he will make his proposal at the joint meeting for a fact-finding team composed of members acceptable to both school administrators and striking teachers.

"My primary purpose is to listen to both sides to find out where they are and where they've been," Truby said. "I have not even a rough plan of settlement at this point. I just want to understand what's happening."

Cowpokes honor Charters

NAMPA, Idaho (UPI) — The Cowboys Association will award its 1975 all-around championship award to Tom Charters, Boise, during the group's annual awards banquet Nov. 29 at Nampa.

Prior to the banquet, there will be a directors meeting and a general membership session with election of officers.

Honesty pays

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — Motorists have put $3,401 into Mountain Home parking meters in the past year and a half, even though the meters weren't being used by the city.

"We've got honest citizens," exclaimed City Clerk Ramon Yraszabal. He said the meters went back into operation Oct. 1 after the moratorium.

ERA foes prepare

BOISE (UPI) — Opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment are planning another attempt at the next session of the Idaho Legislature to rescind the measure.

Mrs. Sylvia Mc Keeth, Boise, a member of the Idaho Committee to Stop ERA, said Monday "we are going to lead the movement for rescission."

She said as more women "become educated to the real effect of the ERA, they recognize this amendment will strip all women of all their present protective rights. In this way their status is reduced, not enhanced."

The amendment was ratified by the Idaho Legislature in 1973. Since then, there have been repeated attempts to rescind it.

Mrs. Mc Keeth noted that last year 17 states voted on the ERA question and only one ratified it.

"ERA supporters say they need only three more states to ratify to make the amendment part of the Constitution, but they don't take into consideration that two states — Nevada and Tennessee — have rescinded their ratification," Mrs. Mc Keeth said.

Jockey's death not suicide

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County Coroner Steve Jablonski has ruled that the death of Lloyd E. Teller, a Boise-area jockey who was struck by a pickup truck on State Highway 15 Sept. 18, was a traffic fatality and not a suicide.

Jablonski said Teller, 34, died of "massive trauma" suffered when he was struck by the truck.

Idaho State Police investigated the possibility that Teller committed suicide after witnesses to the accident said the victim appeared to have dived in front of the truck.

Buhl HS to change grade system

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

BUHL — Buhl High School will change its grading system from a percentage to a letter grade before the first grading period this fall.

Trustees approved the recommended policy change Monday night after Principal Dale Thornberry made the recommendation. He was backed up at the board meeting by six members of the faculty advisory committee. Thornberry said Buhl High School is the only school he knows in Idaho using the percentage method of grading. "We are misrepresenting ourselves when we use a system not coordinated with other schools," he said, adding Buhl students are at a disadvantage when their grades are transferred to college. Converting to the traditional letter grades would be less restrictive, he said. "Percentages are awfully confusing," the principal said. Buhl currently uses 94 to 100 for an A; 83-86 for B; 75-78, C; 70-74, D; and below 70, F. The principal, who is new to the system this year, recommended that beginning next year the system be changed to 90 to 100 for an A;

80-89 for B; 70-79 for C and 60-69 for D, with anything below 60 an F. Thornberry also went over a financial report of all income and expenditures of student funds to date. He estimated athletic receipts of about $18,000 this year, with costs running slightly under. Receipts will include season tickets, student activity tickets and gate receipts.

John Jund reported on improvements for the school athletic field, including fencing for the football field. He estimated cost of about $13,900. Trustees approved professional leave for several teachers and officially adopted a commodity agreement covering participation in the federal school lunch program.

Affirmative action goals met

BURLEY — Mountain Bell met all of its affirmative action goals in Idaho last year, a telephone company official said Monday.

Kenneth Mann, Twin Falls, district manager for Mountain

Bell spoke on the measures the company has taken since a 1974 consent decree on equal employment opportunities signed by American Telephone and Telegraph on behalf of the entire Bell system.

He said the company's affirmative action program had been accepted with some modifications by federal officials and will be reviewed annually in light of the company's meeting the specific targets and timetables.

House panel opens probe of FBI-Oswald-Ruby ties

© N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee has opened an investigation into the Federal Bureau of Investigation's relationship with Lee Harvey Oswald and Jack Ruby before President John F. Kennedy's assassination, the subcommittee's chairman said Monday.

This is the first official public inquiry by Congress into whether evidence was withheld from the Warren Commission since it reported in 1964 that Oswald was the sole assassin.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the Civil and Constitutional Rights subcommittee, said that the purpose of his panel's investigation "is not to reopen the Warren Commission, others may later decide to do that, but to set the record straight on just what went on."

Edwards said that several recent disclosures about the FBI's role before the assassination on Nov. 22, 1963, had convinced members of the subcommittee that the matter required its scrutiny. Edwards' subcommittee has oversight responsibilities for the FBI and has been conducting a long-term investigation into the bureau's operations.

He said that the subcommittee had "scheduled public hearings for next Monday and Tuesday and had asked senior FBI officials to testify under oath. It may later subpoena FBI field agents involved in various phases of the case, he added.

He said that the committee would concentrate on the "following three main areas in its initial investigations:

— The disclosure that the FBI, presumably on orders from its then director, J. Edgar Hoover, destroyed a letter written by Oswald several days before the assassination in which he threatened to "blow up" a Dallas police station unless the bureau's agents stopped trying to interview him.

— Recently uncovered documents that indicated that Jack Ruby, the man who killed Oswald in the Dallas police headquarters, was a paid informant for the FBI.

— The charge by William Waller, a former code clerk in the New Orleans FBI field office, that the bureau warned its Southern field offices five days before Kennedy's death that there will be an assassination attempt with a rifle in Dallas.

The House committee's investigation is only one of several reappraisals of Kennedy assassination evidence. The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence appointed two of its members, Sens. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., and Gary Hart, D-Colo., to be an informal subcommittee and screen possible new evidence.

The Senate committee has a broader mandate than does Edwards' panel; it can gather evidence on the Central Intelligence Agency's activities as well as FBI materials. Based upon what Schweiker already learned as a member of the intelligence committee, he called last month for the Warren Commission's inquiry to be reopened.

Among the matters believed to warrant re-examination was the disclosure that the CIA had never told the Warren Commission that it was involved in attempts to kill Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba. Considering Oswald's deep involvement with pro-Cuban elements, Schweiker has said that it would appear this information might be pertinent to the Warren inquiry.

The events surrounding the destruction of the Oswald letter by the FBI are under investigation both within the bureau and by the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice.

Clash ahead over New York aid?

© Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — President Ford and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller apparently are on a collision course over the question of federal aid to financially-distressed New York City, but the White House is standing firm and says that everyone — even a vice president who happens to be the former mayor of New York — has the right to his own opinion.

Ford, who apparently has offered suggestions to Gov. Hugh Carey and Mayor Abraham Beame, believes that if the city and the State of New York do what is needed to restore responsibility to the Big Apple's fiscal affairs, "there is no need for the federal government to step in."

"If the city and state can pull it out, there would be no need for a federal bailout," Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Monday, amplifying and restating Ford's opinion.

Yet Rockefeller takes exception to this view and to Ford's promise that he would veto any legislation passed by Congress to offer federal help to the city.

"It is . . . essential that the Congress . . . focus on the problem now and enact appropriate legislation," Rockefeller told the annual Columbus Day dinner in New York over the weekend.

The vice president meant that Congress should pass — and presumably that the President should sign — legislation (furnishing a "bridge" to the city, which is under mandate of the State Assembly to come up with a plan this week under which the budget would be balanced by June 30, 1978.

"Helping to bridge this gap — to give opportunity for these economies and improved municipal measures to take root and produce results — is certainly in the interest of all of us," Rockefeller said.

"After the Control Board and New York City have acted to restore financial integrity, it will be a true test of the responsiveness of our congressional system as to whether the Congress can act in time to avoid catastrophe."

Indeed, the Ford view is that catastrophe would be avoided if the city and its watchdog Control Board are able to restore the fiscal integrity of the city, and in Nessen's words, "the President does not think the question needs to arise."

"The President believes New York has the means within its own power to recover and not default," Nessen added.

The press secretary, who regards reflecting the views of the chief executive as his primary job, told reporters who asked whether New York's dangerous financial mess would be a 1976 campaign issue:

"New York is an economic issue. It is a constitutional issue, but I've never heard it discussed as a political issue. The President has had some talks with Mayor Beame and Gov. Carey, and they have kicked around some ideas."

"And what of the difference in view between Ford and Rockefeller?"

"Anyone in this administration can give his own views," Nessen said dryly.

Task force seeks not de-emphasis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford is studying a White House task force report recommending de-emphasis of marijuana in federal efforts to curb drug abuse.

It may be made public this week, says a White House spokesman, who denied an allegation the report was withheld so far because of the admission last week by the President's son, Jack, that he had smoked pot.

The report of the White House Domestic Council Drug Review Task Force said drug abuse costs the nation up to $17 billion a year and may be an insoluble problem.

Instead of aiming at marijuana, federal law enforcement and treatment efforts should be directed more toward such drugs as heroin, amphetamines and barbiturates, which pose a greater risk to the individual and to society."

One of the report's major conclusions is that national drug abuse problems may never be solved. Therefore, we must be prepared to continue our efforts and our commitments indefinitely, in order to contain the problem at a minimal level, and in order to minimize the adverse social consequences of drug abuse."

The monetary cost of drug-related theft, health care and lost productivity are estimated at $10 billion to $17 billion a year.

The report does not cover two of the most abused drugs in America, alcohol and nicotine, because they are

Busing aid fund totals $3 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than $3 million in federal aid is now available for school districts forced to desegregate by court orders handed down after the original deadline for aid applications.

The Ford administration Monday specifically asked 200 school districts to apply for $3,250,000 in emergency aid.

Many of the districts are in the North and West and have to desegregate by busing. But money from the emergency allocation probably will not be available for busing.

Recipients of Emergency School Aid Act grants in recent years have not been allowed to use any of the money for new or increased busing, said Herman Goldberg of the U.S. Office of Education.

The funds may be used for such desegregation-related activities as teacher training, bilingual education and curriculum changes.

Alabaman, aide meet

LONDON (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace swept under "Big Ben" and into the historic Parliament complex today to meet Conservative opposition leader Margaret Thatcher.

A three-car convoy, with Wallace in a silver limousine, drove through New Palace Yard as the hands of the big clock showed 11:40 a.m. under gray skies that carried the chill of winter to the British capital.

Aides lifted Wallace from the car into his wheelchair and, after he bade his wife, Cornelia, and their three children goodby, pushed him into the building and through the ornate corridors to Mrs. Thatcher's office.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1975 by Chicago Tribune & N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and my boyfriend is 18. We've been going steady for two years and hope to marry some day.

Here's the problem: I used to take birth control pills, but my boyfriend made me stop because he said he heard they could cause blood clots, make my hair fall out and cause lots of other terrible side effects.

We've continued to have sex relations, but nothing has happened. He thinks maybe I am sterile from the Pill. Is that possible?

We want children some day, and now I am worried that there is something wrong with me and that if I ever do have a child, it will be deformed.

I am terribly worried about myself, Abby. Please help me. I have no mother to ask, and I don't know any doctors.

WORRIED IN PA.

DEAR WORRIED: You need professional counseling. If your school offers that service, please take advantage of it. If not, your local Planned Parenthood office can help you. You may be worrying needlessly, but it's important that you learn the facts.

Counseling advised

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to a wonderful woman for nearly two years. We get along very well, but I have one complaint. The only night she lets me make love to her is Thursday because she gets her hair done every Friday.

Any suggestions?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: When the time for "making love" depends upon when your wife has her hair appointment, it's time to make an appointment with a marriage counselor!

DEAR ABBY: SEEN IT ALL complained about a 68-year-old neighbor lady who bent over to plant panes in a short dress and exposed her uncovered behind.

Another reader suggested SEEN IT take a picture of the penny painter in living color, enlarged it and send it to her so she could see herself as others see her.

Let me tell you how WE cured a similar problem.

Several years ago, we moved into a really nice section of town. Imagine my surprise when my two boys (ages 10 and 12) came running into the house to tell me there were naked people next door!

I couldn't believe it, so I went outside to see for myself. It was true. There were three children running around completely naked. Their mothers were sitting at a nearby picnic table, naked from the waist up and nursing their babies out in the open yard.

I was speechless! I gave my boys firm instructions to play in their own front yard until the situation improved.

My husband and I discussed it, immediately bought a six-foot-high redwood fence and put it up.

When I ran into this neighbor on the street, I told her WHY we had put up the fence, and she said, "The human body is beautiful and should be on display like Greek statues."

After I gave her a piece of my mind, she added, "I notice that you hang your wash outside, which makes the whole neighborhood look like Dogpatch!"

How's that for nerve?

Anyway, a fence is the answer to improve the view—not a picture.

YORK, PA.

DORIS JENSEN
state leader

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Doris Jensen, Twin Falls, has been named to the Hospital Auxiliary Council of the Idaho Hospital Association. She was elected during the 42nd state convention of the Idaho Hospital Association in Sun Valley.

Jensen said her duties as representative of a part of Idaho for the coming year will include coordination of the junior volunteer organization within the auxiliary. Her appointment is for a four-year period with the first year an orientation effort followed by a year as chairman — elected and the third year as chairman in the fourth year she will serve in an advisory capacity as past chairman.

Mrs. Jensen, president of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, also served as chairman of a panel discussion on "Share and Compare" during the annual convention.

She has been active in the auxiliary for the past three years and has served on the local basis as vice chairman and has worked on numerous committees and projects.

She also has served as delegate to the western regional conferences and meetings of the hospital auxiliary.

Others elected during the 1975 convention included Colleen Mahoney, Lewiston, as chairman, succeeding Fil Van Camp, Boise.

Survey shows 'it's still a man's world'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Men are better than women at answering questions on simple everyday problems in arithmetic, grocery shopping or politics, reports a federally funded education survey.

"When it comes to educational achievement, it appears it's still a man's world," concluded Sunday's report by the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

The NAEP is a federally financed periodic survey of how well children and young adults learn subjects traditionally taught in schools. The surveys are conducted by the Education Commission of the States, based in Denver, Colo.

The latest report represents an evaluation of eight English surveys conducted among 640,000 persons of various ages.

The major conclusions: — Males generally did better in mathematics, sciences, social studies and citizenship. — Females score better at reading and literature at age 9, but fall behind males by the time they are young adults. — Females maintain a slight advantage in music at all ages. — Only in writing do females consistently outperform males by a wide margin.

"What is particularly puzzling when comparing male/female achievement is that in the male-dominated areas — mathematics, science, social studies and citizenship — males and females at age 9 show scholastic understandings that are fairly equal," the report said.

"By age 13, however, females have begun a decline in achievement which continues downward through age 17 and into adulthood."

One "inexplicable" finding, the report said, is that as young men grow older they consistently do better than women on tests involving consumer buying and such household situations as taking a turkey out of the oven at the right time, even though it traditionally is assumed women are the more experienced shoppers and homemakers.

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Women at the University of Utah want to oggle beautiful males just as men like to view beauty queens.

The Women's Resource Center at the university is hosting a "Boys' Beauty King Contest" Friday.

Contestants will be judged on appearance in bathing suits, talent competition, and poise reflected by answers to questions.

A reader from Sarasota wants us to discuss the "Short Club."

This bid, invented by Oswald Jacoby in 1933, was described then as your general utility man. It is not forcing, but may be bid with just three clubs to an honor with a balanced hand that is too weak for a one notrump opening. Partner is supposed to respond just as if opener had at least four clubs. We will discuss this in our next week's columns.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Many of the hands from the "Return of Sherlock Holmes — Bridge Detective" are old timers of the type known as "Book" hands.

That doesn't stop them from being interesting. In today's hand Sherlock Holmes sits East and Scurry, his foil, is South. We hold no brief for Scurry's bidding except that it got him to a spot where unusual defenses by Holmes was necessary for the defeat of the contract.

West started out with three rounds of clubs. Almost anyone would ruff that third club automatically. Then irrespective of what East returned, South would get to dummy twice with diamonds to finesse twice against East's king on line. The defense would wind up with three tricks they had started with and no more.

your health

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

I had a baby eight months ago, and I was wondering if you have a post-partem exercise booklet. My doctor didn't give me any specific exercises, and I haven't been able to find any.

Also, I attempted to breast-feed my baby but had to quit because I didn't have enough milk for him. Does breast-feeding cause your breasts to become saggy? I am a 36-C, and I wear well-fitting bras. Are there exercises that would help firm them? — C.W.

You probably should have begun your exercises before now. Generally, post-partem exercise can be begun after the six-weeks checkup if the doctor sees no objection.

There are many exercises that can accomplish what you apparently seek — a firming up of your tummy and chest muscles. They include arm-stretches, sit-ups, etc. You should be able to select the suitable ones for yourself. They would be those that produce muscular activity in areas you want to "tone up."

I don't like to print exercise "blueprints" for fear some will misread them and end up trying to do kneebends while standing on their hands. Public libraries have shelves of books on exercises, and you will undoubtedly be able to find one designed specifically for your needs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Enclosed is 25 cents for your booklet, "Help for Hypoglycemia." I'm also enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. One thing, can you explain to me the difference between glycosuria and hypoglycemia. I hear these terms, but am only confused by them. — Mrs. H.S.

Glycosuria means only that abnormal amounts of sugar have been found in the urine, whether in yours I cannot tell from your letter. Anyway, this need not be a symptom of any disease, although it can be. This urine sugar can occur normally after a meal particularly heavy in carbohydrates — either sugars or other foods, as starches, which can be converted into sugar in the body.

You probably are thinking that high urine sugar logically indicates hypoglycemia, since that condition is marked by an abnormally low blood sugar. But, in fact, glycosuria does not occur with hypoglycemia.

However, glycosuria can occur with a normal or moderately low blood sugar reading. Contradictory? Not really. Often high urine sugar will be found in persons whose kidneys, because of some defect, allow it to pass into the urine too readily. This is called "renal glycosuria." It has nothing to do with hypoglycemia, which is a problem of blood chemistry.

What about diabetes? In this, there is usually both an abnormally high urine sugar and elevated blood sugar. I hope this has cleared up the matter for you. The booklet you order will help you in further understanding of the whole matter of sugar, blood and urine.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Over the past 20 years I have had throbbing pains in the calves of my legs, and I have been told that this condition is not attributable to blood circulation. What else could it be? — O.F.

I would agree. If it was a circulation problem, this fact would have emerged unmistakably long before now. A circulatory problem severe enough to cause throbbing pains for 20 years would probably have incapacitated you.

You don't mention varicose veins, which I assume have also been ruled out. That, too, is a circulatory condition. I would have to suspect faulty foot mechanics. This could stem from an arch defect, even improper shoes.

Coyote takes longing look at lamb dinner

Poison collar latest weapon

By LINDA LEE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is trying to develop a poisonous sheep collar here to help ranchers battle coyotes.

Guy Connolly, wildlife research biologist stationed at the Twin Falls Wildlife Research Station, is at work developing the collar.

The collar would contain a poison designed to kill attacking coyotes.

Connolly's idea is that when a coyote buries its teeth into the neck of a sheep wearing one of these collars, a poison like sodium cyanide will be released into its throat killing the predator in seconds.

"The goal of the Fish and Wildlife Service is to reduce predation on sheep, not to destroy the coyote population," Connolly said.

"We are trying to find an approach that will satisfy farmers, ranchers and environmentalists. It's a severe political problem."

In the past fish and wildlife techniques for killing coyotes have included shooting them from an airplane with a 12-gauge shotgun, shooting on the ground with use of a dying rabbit call, trapping them in steel traps, digging out dens in the early spring to kill the young and placing poison on other dead animals with the hope of attracting coyotes. This last technique is referred to as a bait station.

When use of bait stations created a large national controversy in 1972 President Nixon issued an executive order outlawing use of any poison to control coyotes.

Environmentalists were concerned that many harmless animals were being killed by bait stations, as well as too many coyotes.

In July President Ford amended the '72 executive order to permit the use of some poison, but not bait stations.

The Service is now using a tool known as a "coyote getter." A metal tube filled with sodium cyanide is buried in the ground. A piece of sheep wool is attached to the top. When the coyote bites at the wool, the poison shoots into its mouth.

Although the poison collar is still in the experimental stage, Connolly hopes the amended executive order will permit its use because it will affect only the coyote, he said.

Connolly feels that the collar would be a more discriminate use of poison than a bait station.

"It is intolerable to kill animals that are not a nuisance."

Flying habits mapped

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Searchers attempting to locate a downed plane don't just concentrate on where the plane might be, they try to figure out how the pilot was flying.

Doug Cairns, air operations officer in the search for Del Storey and Ted DeHog, believed lost in rugged mountains near Fresno, Calif., has already spent hours trying to reconstruct Storey's flying habits.

"I picked Mrs. Storey's brains," Cairns said, to get information on just what kind of flier her husband was.

"We can try to reconstruct psychologically how a man flies," Cairns said, and that way better predict where his plane went down. The way he turns is important, how he acts in adverse weather, and other information is all useful, Cairns said.

The twin-engine plane piloted by Storey presumably went down sometime Friday, meaning the two men, if alive, have been subjected to freezing weather and snow for nearly four days now.

Cairns has also talked to Storey's former flying instructors, looking for habits or preferences which give him clues in the search.

To help Cairns in scoping out the route Storey may have taken, Richard Nelhaus, owner of the plane Storey was flying and a close personal friend of the Twin Falls evangelist, has flown into the search center at Fresno.

Cairns, a veteran flier, said a comment by Mrs. Storey has led searchers to "redouble efforts" to locate the pair. Storey, according to his wife, "has previously said he would not try to walk out from a crash if he ever had one."

Mrs. Storey also mentioned her husband had extra clothing with him in the plane, carried matches even though he wasn't a smoker, and other items such as plastic bags for wind protection, Cairns said.

Squadron commander for the Fresno Civil Air Patrol, Cairns is optimistic about the men's chances.

Two other men familiar with Storey's flying habits, Bob and Ernie Willis, Twin Falls, left this morning to join the search and add any knowledge they might have to add to Cairns' psychological search for Storey.

Hansen debts hamper plan

Hansen said since July he was able to raise $15,975, primarily due to the Linkletter fund raising rallies in Twin Falls and Idaho Falls in August.

But the expenditures during the period, including $4,000 to Linkletter and $4,000 to a Washington law firm, took up most of the income, he said.

Hansen was optimistic this morning that he would be able to pay off the debts before the end of the year. Besides organizing efforts to seek contributions from individuals in Idaho, he said, he is seeking funds from several conservative national groups, including the Committee for the Election of a Free Congress, the National Conservative Political Action Committee and the Conservative Victory Fund as well as the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

Also, he said, he is planning to launch soon a mail solicitation effort both in and out of Idaho.

Despite his legal battles, he said he has received money from 491 new contributors this year. He maintained this is an indication that he is "politically stronger than ever."

Not just in case he is not able to pay off his debts by the end of the year a possible alternative would be to delay paying those debts.

According to U.S. Clerk of the House official Welsh, the law only limits the amount of money Hansen can spend, not the amount he can go into debt.

But Hansen wouldn't say today whether he would delay any debt payments if they run into next year. "We'll just have to meet that problem when we get there," he said. But he again emphasized he plans to have the debts paid off.

Radios installed in Fairfield buses

FAIRFIELD — Two-way radios have been installed in Fairfield school buses, Supt. Harold Stroud told trustees Monday night.

He said having the radios in the district's four buses will be of great help this winter when deep snow and storms often cause problems in transporting students to school.

"The radios also will be monitored by the highway district and Sheriff's office so they can tell where a bus is in difficulty."

It also was reported at the trustee meeting that the kindergarten class is progressing well. The 11 students are housed in a remodeled part of the special education building.

Utah man arrested

BOISE — A Utah man was arrested in Burley Saturday afternoon while attempting to sell recorded tapes.

David Probert, 21, was arrested about 1:30 p.m. Saturday and charged with violation of the city's Green River ordinance.

Burley police said Probert was going house-to-house selling the tapes.

GOP committee agenda heavy

BOISE — A heavy agenda has been set for an Idaho State Republican Central Committee meeting Saturday.

Chairman Bob Linnville of Boise announced that he will resign as of that date. Selection of a new chairman will be made for a more orderly move into the spring presidential primary.

"We believe that this central committee meeting could be one of the most important in the past several years," Linnville said, "and are calling upon members to make every effort to be present."

Heleen Chenoweth, central committee executive director, said the meeting will be the "workshop type." It will start at 9:30 a.m. in the Alturas Room of the Rodeway Inn, Boise.

Bright star reported

TWIN FALLS — A man called Twin Falls police shortly after 5 a.m. today to announce there was "a bright star in the east."

He said he only wanted to know if the police were aware of it. When told "yes," the man hung up, apparently satisfied.

Public auction set

SHOSHONE — Howard Johnson, Idaho Division of Highways district engineer, announces there will be a public auction at 1 p.m. Oct. 21 at the district headquarters yard, Date Street, Shoshone.

Among items offered to the highest bidder will be a variety of sedans, pickups, trucks and buses, a motor grader, two trailers, a chain saw and a large quantity of miscellaneous shop, office and laboratory equipment.

All items will be available for inspection at the above location on the morning of the sale only.

Rupert man released on bond

RUPERT — A Rupert man was released on $1,500 bond Monday after a Saturday incident where he allegedly assaulted a police officer and resisted arrest.

Arlen Burkert, 32, was arrested about 6:40 p.m. Saturday at a drive-in restaurant on Highway 24 in Rupert.

Burkert allegedly resisted an off-duty police officer there. Two other officers were called and arrested Burkert. He was charged with disturbing the peace, assault on a police officer and resisting arrest.

Dietrich tot classes set

DIETRICH — Kindergarten classes will start at the Dietrich School beginning Oct. 27, according to Supt. Wayne Perron.

The sessions will last at least 18 weeks. Parents of children who will be 5 years old by Oct. 15 should bring the children to school Oct. 24 at 1 p.m. for registration.

The children will also be checked for vision, speech and hearing.

Project under way by firemen

RUPERT — Firemen are going door-to-door in Rupert selling fire extinguishers this month.

Fire Chief Odell McLane said the project is part of Fire Prevention Week, which ended Saturday. The sale will continue until the end of the month.

McLane spoke to the Rupert Chamber of Commerce Thursday about the importance of fire prevention in the home and initial suppression or escape.

MV hospital to lease blood analysis machines

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital board members voted Monday night to lease three new blood analysis machines.

The total value of these computers is over $100,000. They will be leased over a five-year period for $2,175 a month.

James Rosenbaum, hospital administrator, explained that advances in medical techniques over the past five years necessitate the use of more sophisticated equipment than is now available to the hospital.

Included in the lease arrangement will be a blood chemistry analyzer valued at $57,000; a blood cell counter, $30,000, and a blood gases analyzer, $15,000. Rosenbaum said at the end of each year in the five-year lease period the hospital will have the option to purchase these machines for the balance minus money paid on the lease.

Broader power sought by PGI

BURLEY — The Potato Growers of Idaho is seeking authority to represent its members at pressing plants this year.

The PGI will hold a meeting at 8:30 tonight at the Ponderosa Inn to amend its bylaws and authorize representation of grower members in situations on processing, plant premises where growers still have a financial interest in the potatoes.

Jerry Murphy, general manager of PGI said the organization has acted as agent for the growers in grading, handling and storage of potatoes in previous years. That authority was included in a blanket contract between the processors and growers.

New HAW contract eyed for Hailey shelter home

By BART QUESNELL
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Two new shelter homes for boys, should soon have a new Idaho Department of Health and Welfare contract for services and new house parents.

But the contract may have cost the home the services of Cliff and Lois Morgan, original Other Side of Time (OSOT) house parents who resigned and moved to Boise.

Mill Klein, director of HAW region 5, said his district has approved a new contract bonding state pay for services from $150 per month to nearly $400 a month for each boy and said it may be approved and signed by the end of the month.

Director of the HAW department, Joe Nagel, still must sign the approval, Klein said. Klein doesn't expect any trouble with state approval, "though it is still premature to say for sure."

There was outright conflict with negotiations between Cliff Morgan and HAW throughout his term as house parent and administrator of OSOT.

Two months ago Morgan decided to submit his resignation to the board, he said, because it appeared the contract would neither resolve Klein's denial any prejudice against the Morgans. He misses negotiations and HAW have been constructive.

Board members went to Twin Falls last week to work out final contract figures and services. Klein said the district's office has approved the contract and sent it to the state office.

Under the present operating contract the state could pay no more than $150 per boy per month, Klein said, even though there were other services being performed which should have been paid for.

Klein did not have the new contract before him and did not say what was contained in the new contract terms. The board of OSOT said a meeting will be held in November with the press. Board members declined comment on the new contract until it is formally signed and approved.

The Morgans had talked of starting a new 16-bed shelter group home for girls. Klein said it appeared the projected budget of OSOT would not allow that home to be started in the near future.

He said an institutional license would have to be applied for to start a new home and additional services would have to be implemented.

Board members have declined comment on the proposed new facility.

The board of OSOT is soliciting needed items. The Morgans loaned much of their own furniture to the board while they acted as house parents for two years.

OSOT needs a television, single bed linens, including blankets, towels and washcloths, tablecloths, kitchen table, folding chairs, lamps of any kind, small area rugs, chest of drawers, a single bed mattress, end tables and plants.

Donors can contact Marilyn Stavros at 788-4127 or Ellen Glacum at 726-9218. Items can be taken to JoAnn Kawamura at the Triple S Grocery Store, Hailey.

3 pound spud

CLARENCE Peterson, Filer, says his potatoes in his garden plot got off to a slow start this year but they certainly made up for it. This Pontiac red, which weighed in at an even three pounds on the bathroom scales, is the largest one Peterson said he has ever grown. None of the spuds were big enough for the traditional new potatoes and peas last July 4, he said.

Shooting team wins brighten hostile day

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The shooting team saved the day for the United States Monday after the track stars suffered a series of reverses on the opening day of competition at the Pan American Games in which the hostility between the Cuban and American athletes was plain for all to see.

The United States won three of four shooting gold medals, but the track team was shut out in three finals, much to the delight of the crowd which saw Mexicans finish 1-2 in the 10,000 meters.

Hershal Anderson of Columbus, Ga., put the Americans on the scoreboard with 590 of a total which saw Mexicans finish 1-2 in the 10,000 meters.

Anderson of Columbus, Ga., put the Americans on the scoreboard with 590 of a total which saw Mexicans finish 1-2 in the 10,000 meters.

The individual gold went to Mexico's Oligario Vazquez who broke his world record by a single point with a 393 total. Larry Basham of Bedford, Tex., was second with 384 with Cuba's Albert Gilart third with 381.

Anderson, who failed badly at the Munich Olympics, said, "I hope this will give me the boost I need to make next year's Olympics at Montreal."

Cuba won the steel team gold from Brazil and Mexico.

At the Olympic track stadium—the Cuban athletes and their Latin cousins batted the American runners, but the U.S. team took it in stride and came up with a few verbal barbs of their own.

There were unconfirmed reports of bad blood between the two teams during training at the training course.

The track failures were particularly hard for the Americans to take after coaches had predicted the possibility of two gold medals.

Arnie Robinson, the defending long jump champion from San Diego, could only manage a leap of 26 feet one-half inch and had to settle for the silver behind Brazil's Joao Oliveira who cleared 26-3/4. Al Lanier of Cincinnati leaped 25-11/2 for the bronze.

Garry Bjorklund of Boulder, the man with the fastest time in the field, faded after 7,000 meters and finished fourth in the 10,000 meters.

Luis Hernandez produced a killing 60.2 second final lap to beat his Mexican teammate Rodolfo Gomez by 10 meters in 29:19.28. Domingo Tibaduzia of Colombia was third.

Cuba's big Carmen Romero got off a throw of 197-4 to win the women's discus gold medal ahead of teammate Maria Botancourt and Canada's Jane Halset.

The United States qualified its top runners for both the men's and women's sprints, but in the men's division Silvio Leonard appeared to be striding when he clocked 10.15 seconds to win his semifinal heat.

Both Clancy Edwards of Santa Ana, Calif., and Bill Collins of Houston finished third in their heats.

James King of San Diego was the fastest of the 400 meters hurdles semifinals with a time of 49.3 seconds, but he said he suffered a torn muscle in the right side of his groin.

Defending champion Ralph Mann of Washington State also progressed, but he conceded "I may have to swallow my pride tomorrow. I may not win."

Ohio State retains top spot in rating

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ohio State continued to be the overwhelming choice of the UPI Board of Coaches with 34 first place votes of the 42 cast but second ranked Oklahoma narrowed the gap somewhat with their hard fought victory over arch-rival Texas.

The Buckeyes rolled over winless Iowa, 49-9, Saturday to improve their season mark to 50. Despite their impressive victory over the Hawkeyes, Ohio State lost three of its 37 first place votes a week ago to Oklahoma after the Sooners defeated Texas, 24-17, in a brutalizing game.

Ohio State dominated the UPI poll with a total of 413 points, followed by Oklahoma with five first place votes and 372 points.

Except for the slight reshuffling among the bottom teams, the top 10 remained virtually as it was last week.

Southern California, with two first-place votes, again was third and Nebraska again was fourth. Texas A&M, which picked up the other first-place vote, climbed from sixth to fifth.

Alabama continued its climb back among the leaders, after losing its season opener to Missouri, and moved up a notch from last week to sixth. Michigan and Penn State also moved up one spot to seventh and eighth, respectively.

Texas, which was fifth last week, dropped to ninth. Missouri, which made the biggest gain of the week, jumped from 10th to 10th after demolishing last week's 10th-ranked team, Oklahoma State, 41-14.

Nolan faces Wise as series resumes

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Gary Nolan and Rick Wise, a pair of comeback right-handers whose pitching careers teetered on the brink of baseball's scrap pile only a year ago, draw "gratifying" starting assignments tonight when the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Red Sox meet to break a one-game apiece deadlock in game three of the 1975 World Series.

Nolan, given up for lost by his manager and Cincinnati Reds teammates after two seasons of virtually no activity because of a mysterious bone spur in his pitching shoulder, earned his starting nod by putting together a 15-2 record and a 3.16 earned run average as the National League's surprise pitcher of 1975.

Wise, a bespectacled ex-National Leaguer, who missed nearly the entire 1974 season after coming over to the Red Sox in a key off-season trade, played a major role in Boston's 75 pennant drive by winning 19 games against 12 losses.

"I'd be lying if I told you we were counting on Gary Nolan this year," said Reds Manager Sparky Anderson. "When we went to spring training in February, he wasn't even listed on my 12-man pitching prospectus. I just didn't want the team to feel we could count on him."

The Nolan comeback is, of course, one of baseball's most heartwarming stories of 1975. Stricken by a mysterious shoulder pain when he attempted to throw out the late Roberto Clemente of the Pittsburgh Pirates on a routine grounder to the mound in 1972, Nolan could not convince anyone he was really seriously handicapped.

Only after the famed Los Angeles career-saving athletic surgeon, Dr. Robert Kerlan, operated on the arm, was the bone spur discovered, and it still took years of alternate rest and rehabilitation for Nolan to make it all the way back this past spring.

"There was a time," said Nolan, "back in 1974 when I really began to think the cards were against my having a long career. I wasn't to the point where I was beating my kids, but it was hard to joke around like I do knowing the joke was had been so long since I had gotten anybody out, I began to question whether I could do it mentally as well as physically."

"You have no idea what it is to be out of baseball for two years and not know if you can ever throw strikes again. Pitching this World Series is naturally very gratifying to me."

Similarly, Wise, who threw his shoulder out pitching on a cold and rainy April day early in the 1974 season, had his doubts about making it all the way back.

"I had never had an injury to my arm in my 10 years in the majors," Wise said, "and there's always that prospect running through your head that you're never going to play again. Until you do it between the two lines, it's there."

Although one of the two comeback sagas will be curtailed, at least temporarily, Wise feels he himself can provide the underdog Red Sox a couple of bonus assets. For one, his two-best-pitched games came in Riverfront Stadium—a no-hitter against the Reds in 1971 and a one-hitter two years later. And second, although idled two years by the American League's designated hitter rule, Wise still considers himself one of the best hitting pitchers in baseball.

"The first thing I wanted to do when we had our warmup here," Wise said, "was to grab a bat and see what it feels like. I really miss hitting because I feel I always had an advantage with my ability to hit."

Power poles, parachutes, people . . .

Please play it safe!

Some days it seems like you're in for trouble no matter what direction you look.

Consider for instance the day last June a sky-diver landed near one of our power lines. His chute was blown into the line, and POOF! We have an outage on our hands.

Fortunately, the parachutist wasn't injured and service was quickly restored.

Idaho Power takes pride in the dependability of its service, but sometimes outages are unavoidable as when the forces of nature damage poles, lines or other equipment — or when man and electrical facilities occasionally find themselves having an unexpected encounter.

When an outage does occur, company personnel normally are on their way to the scene within moments. Depending on the nature of the problem, power usually can be restored in a short time.

But despite their usual brevity, outages do cause inconvenience and expense. So, please, be alert to the possibility of accidents involving electrical facilities. And if you do have a run-in with a power pole or line, remember: don't try to retrieve your vehicle or other equipment; do remove yourself to a safe distance, keep others away from the accident site — and call the nearest Idaho Power office.

Examples of man-caused power outages in June, 1975:

- Six outages caused by low-flying crop dusting aircraft slicing through lines.
- Six outages caused by construction crews accidentally digging up underground lines.
- An outage caused by a dump truck rolling along with the dump bed raised. The bed snagged an overhead line, and Snap!
- Another outage — perhaps our most embarrassing — involved an Idaho Power truck driving down a highway. The winch clutch accidentally engaged and the truck's boom headed skyward. Result: spars of street lights and other service lines out of commission.
- That same month we had an average of one accident a day involving vehicles running into poles or other equipment.

You can buy a more expensive Canadian, but not a smoother one. Windsor. A rare breed of Canadian.

Jury still out on WFL fate

NEW YORK (UPI) — The jury deciding the fate of the World Football League was still out Monday with a possible verdict expected to be delivered late today as to whether the two-year old league will live or die.

The WFL, beset by financial difficulties and steadily dwindling attendances, continued to fight for its life at the Board of Governors meeting in an all-day session attempting to stave off the league's demise. It was expected that a decision would be reached one way or the other today on the league's future.

The three alternatives being proposed, including:

- To continue with the present 10-team format with the stronger franchises subsidizing the weaker ones. Last week $300,000 was assessed from the more successful league members in order to keep Portland and Philadelphia operating.
- To eliminate the league's weaker teams, the Portland Thunder and the Philadelphia Bell, both of which have had limited success at the gate.
- To cease operation of the league.

"We are attempting to make the WFL go," said WFL President Chris Hemmeler. "We are staying away from the ultimate negative possibility of it going down the tube and we are exploring all directions to save the league."

The Chicago Wind were expelled from the circuit earlier this season for failure to keep their financial house in order.

Hemmeler said at the beginning of the season an average attendance of 17,000 a game was each team's break-even point. He said the current WFL attendance is 13,323 with the teams breaking down as follows:

Jacksonville — 12,984; Charlotte—10,890; Hawaii 14,867; Memphis — 19,835; Portland — 7,853; Southern California— 12,765; Birmingham — 19,279; Philadelphia—3,705; San Antonio — 11,058; Shreveport — 16,080.

Hemmeler admitted concern over the diminishing attendance which has been dropping slowly every week.

"The decision to be made is whether to shut down the league now, come clean and move into other areas independently, wherever that might be," Hemmeler said.

The future of the WFL hangs in the balance as the league's owners continue to seek a solution to their problems.

NCAA committee hears arguments on violations

DENVER (UPI) — The NCAA Committee on Infractions, continuing a policy of confidentiality in its investigations, Monday heard Michigan State's arguments on alleged recruiting violations by the school.

NCAA officials would not confirm that Michigan State was being discussed during the three-day meeting, which opened Sunday.

However, a contingent from Michigan State, headed by University President Clifton Wharton and football coach Danny Stolz, came to Denver to appear before the five-member committee.

"I can't mention any names, but we are studying allegations against several schools," said NCAA chief investigator Warren Brown.

"It is our policy to wait until an action is taken and upheld before making any announcements."

Brown said the NCAA wanted to guard against premature disclosure to avoid schools which were found innocent from bad publicity. He said schools could make any statements they wish.

"We are not trying to be evasive, however, from the NCAA side everything remains confidential until a decision is reached," said Brown.

Brown said if a decision was reached on any violation, a school would be given 15 days from the day it receives notice in writing to appeal the findings of the committee. He said it could be at least three weeks from the date a decision is made before it is known.

Michigan State was under investigation for its efforts in recruiting sophomore halfback Ted Bell from Ohio, who has been plagued with knee injuries since arriving at the East Lansing campus, and starting defensive tackle Larry Betha, a sophomore from Newport News, Va.

The Spartans also have been under investigation for the alleged use of an assistant coach's credit card by one of their football players.

Pass off fake kick helps Redskins win

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Redskins scored a touchdown off a fake field goal attempt and rookie Mike Thomas plunged for two more Monday night to produce

Earl plays for the Cards. Climaxed a 76-yard Washington drive by diving over from the one with the winning score early in the final quarter. The rookie from Nevada-Las Vegas wound up with 100 yards on 18 carries.

Washington's Mark Moseley followed Thomas' score by kicking a field goal from 34 yards to seal up the contest.

The victory kept the Redskins, 3-1, on the heels of the undefeated Dallas Cowboys in their NFC Eastern Division race but dropped the Cards two games off the pace.

Metcalf's run opened an explosive third period and tied the contest at 10-10.

The Redskins, however, countered with the fake field goal touchdown on the pass from third-string quarterback Theismann to Pergine, who had never had a reception or a touchdown in his seven-year career. Washington was fact with a fourth-and-five situation on the Cardinal 30 when Moseley dropped back, apparently to kick.

After being caught flat-footed, the Cardinals rebounded a minute and a half later when Jim Hart teamed with Mel Gray on a 48-yard scoring shot to deadlock the contest, 17-17, going into the final period.

But Bill Kilmer marched Washington downfield, completing five of five passes, and Thomas plunged into the end zone with the game-winning points.

Thomas' second-period touchdown, after a Mike Bass interception, enabled the Redskins to force to a 103 yardline lead. Bass picked off a Hart pass to give the Redskins possession on the Cardinal 38 and after Kilmer passed 12 yards to Jerry Smith, Thomas did the rest almost alone, gaining 20 of the 38 yards needed and scoring from the two.

His first pro touchdown broke a 3-3 tie.

Carbo patches up spat with Anderson after ten seasons

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Sometimes it's difficult for one man to go up and tell another he made a terrible mistake.

That he developed such an intense dislike for Anderson is almost a laughing, but with the passing of time he had grown much smarter so that where once there was this hate in his heart, now there was something else. Instead, something resembling love.

Bernie Carbo, one of the Boston outfielders in this World Series, wanted to find some way of expressing his feelings to Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, a man who had been a "second father" to him for almost 10 years, only he didn't know how to go about it.

He didn't want to sound maudlin, maudlin or phony. He wanted it to come out purely the way he felt inside.

Carbo plucked up his courage in the Florida Instructional League, with Asheville in the Southern League and with the Reds for more than two years, and it always seemed to him Anderson worked him harder than any other coach more than anyone else. Anderson worked him so hard and so long sometimes, Carbo's whole body ached and throbbled, and frequently his hands bled from continuous hours of gripping the bat.

Now I liked that man," says Bernie Carbo, looking back. "He was always on for something or other. Look at your sideburns. They're getting too long," he'd say. Or maybe he'd say my hair, or my clothing. It was as if he was my father and I was his son. Sometimes I felt if I did something wrong, he was gonna take away my license and I wouldn't be able to have the car anymore.

"That's how it was with him and me in the minor leagues. The time I first met him in 1967, and when he took over the Reds in 1970, he brought me up from Indianapolis and he was the same thing all over again. He was always on me."

From a baseball standpoint, Anderson employed Carbo perfectly in 1970. Carbo batted .310, driving in 63 runs and hitting 21 homers to wind up National League Rookie of the Year.

The following spring, Carbo held out. When he finally did report, he didn't play as much as the year before. Nor did he have anywhere near as good a season, falling off sharply to .219, only 20 RBI's and five homers.

"I couldn't see myself sitting on the bench even though I wasn't hitting," says the 27-year-old Carbo. "I didn't look at it from his side at all, only mine. Just me, me, me. I cursed him and said things to him I shouldn't have. I forgot he had traded Al Johnson more or less to give me the job. It got to the point where I didn't have any use for him anymore, and felt he was harder on me than anyone else."

Carbo was traded to St. Louis in May of 1972 for Joe Hagge and the Cardinals sent him to the Red Sox at the end of 1973 along with Rick Wise in the Reggie Smith deal.

"I think I've done this man wrong. I honestly used to hate him, but now I have a feeling for him that's like, well, I guess you'd call it love. I wish I could just go up to him and tell him I'm sorry for the way I acted the past few years. I only wish there was some way I could tell him."

The day before the World Series opened, after both teams had finished their workouts at Fenway Park, Bernie Carbo approached the Reds' manager out in right field and asked if he could talk to him—a few minutes—Anderson said sure, and the two of them walked toward a bench used by the groundskeepers and sat down on it.

"I've had something on my mind. I'd like to tell you," Bernie Carbo began. "You once said to me, 'Bernardo, you think I'm always picking on you. Some day you're gonna play for someone else and you're gonna see that I care about you. I care what happens to you now and later in your life.'"

Bernie Carbo paused a moment before continuing. "I think I've grown up now. I've went on. I was immature then and didn't understand what you meant. Now I do, and want to thank you for everything you've done for me."

The Reds' manager listened silently.

"Let me tell you something now," he replied. "You played for me when I was still immature. I also have to tell you I think I've grown up. I appreciate what you've told me, Bernie, but I want you to know we all have faults. As soon as we realize that, we become what is commonly known in our society as a 27-17 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in a nationally televised struggle.

The surprise pass from quarterback holder Joe Theismann to John Pergine, a linebacker on the specialty team, was good for 30 yards in the third period and gave the Redskins a 17-10 lead shortly after St. Louis' Terry Metcalf had tied the contest with a 93-yard kickoff return to open the second half.

With the score again tied 17-17, Thomas, whose brother

Players urge end to Rozelle rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Leaders of the pro football players union urged Congress today to outlaw the reserve clause and other contract restrictions and to end "a system that robs a man of his dignity in order to save wealthy owners some money."

Kenneth Alexander, president of the NFL Players Association, and executive director Ed Garvey, appealed for enactment of legislation to subject all professional sports to antitrust laws in testimony before a House Judiciary subcommittee.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle also was on hand to testify on the bill by Rep. John F. Selberling, D-Ohio.

Alexander, a former player, said in his prepared statement: "If sports are important to our society, it is in part because of the example we set for the young people. The worst example we can set is to justify a system that robs a man of his dignity in order to save wealthy owners some money."

At another point, he commented: "If the current NFL owners cannot successfully operate the league as sound businessmen, then maybe it's time for new owners. If they cannot control themselves and will destroy the NFL through outrageous bidding for players, then we will simply have to start over. Professional football will always survive because there is great demand for it. Some of the owners may not. So be it."

Alexander also noted there are no restrictions on the movement of coaches in the league "yet everyone who knows anything about football knows that the coach is the key to success."

The union president also disputed the owners' contention that only the superstars would benefit by elimination of the reserve system and the Rozelle rule for compensation when a player signs with another team after finishing out his contract.

"That is pure nonsense," he said. "The only people who benefit under the current system are the superstars. Namath reportedly gets $450,000 under this system. How could he get more? Only the superstars can make a meaningful trade to retire if they are not paid enough."

Garvey termed the present system "an outrage" and said: "No member of Congress can, in good conscience, allow this system to continue."

He asserted that antitrust exemptions allowed pro football at the time of the AFL and NFL merger gives the owners "the power to engage in group boycotts of players without any fear of retaliation; economy strength to crush the players' union."

Garvey observed that the NFL was offering a $500 scholarship for the best essay on the contribution of the league to American history and commented: "If we were to write that essay we would say that the NFL's contribution... is to demonstrate that unbridled economic power can be used to crush a free, deprive people of their liberty, eliminate their rights of free speech and justify group boycotts."

Two Twin Falls youths will advance to the district Point, Pass and Kick competition in Salt Lake.

In district competition held Saturday in Nampa, Todd Hegel took the 13 year old spot and Andy Toolson took the nine year old honors.

Winners in the Salt Lake meet will advance to the regional test to be held at the Denver Bronco NFL football game.

Fair, cool with patches of fog temperatures near 30. Sunny and little warmer Wednesday. Highs near 55. Winds diminishing after sunset this evening. Probability of precipitation near zero.

Halley, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley: Fair, and cool tonight. Low temperatures near 20. Sunny and little warmer Wednesday. Highs near 55. Winds diminishing after sunset this evening. Probability of precipitation near zero.

Prospects are good for favorable harvest weather this week. Bran combines should be back in the fields by mid-week, while potato and beet diggers should be able to work all week.

Daytime temperatures will slowly warm, reaching the upper 60s or lower 70s by the end of the week, but the nights will be cool with patches of frost at least until mid-week.

The weather maps show that last week's off-shore storm system has weakened and moved northward, leaving the intermountain region dominated by high pressure.

Land, equipment prices hike asset value

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Higher prices for land and equipment, primarily the result of inflation, pushed the value of farm assets nationwide up 9.3 per cent in 1974 despite the greatest drop in poultry and livestock values ever recorded.

In a study called "The Balance Sheet of the Farming Sector," total farm assets on Jan. 1, 1975, were placed at $520.2 billion, up $44.3 billion from January 1974.

Real estate values rose $46.1 billion or 14.1 per cent, while machinery and motor vehicles increased $11.6 billion or 26.2 per cent.

But the value of livestock and poultry plunged $17.8 billion in 1974, a 42.1 per cent decrease blamed almost entirely on lower value of cattle and calves.

The average value of farmland per acre jumped from $310 at the beginning of 1974 to $354 in early 1975, with crop farming areas showing larger gains than predominantly livestock areas.

North Dakota and Minnesota farm land, up 37 and 30 per cent respectively, had the greatest jumps in the nation. Other states registering a 20 per cent or higher increase were Idaho, South Dakota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware.

By contrast, land in Texas, Arizona and Nevada showed virtually no change in value.

Motor vehicles and farm machinery increased substantially in value as prices shot up as a result of inflationary pressures.

At $24.6 billion, the value of livestock and poultry on farms in 1975 was only about 60 per cent the value of a year earlier, the sharpest drop ever recorded. Every class of livestock and poultry experienced a drop in value, but cattle and calves were hit the hardest, with the average value per head almost cut in half.

Farmer-owned crop inventories increased $1.1 billion in 1974 to reach a record $22.2 billion. The more valuable stored crops were corn, hay and forage, soybeans and wheat. Except for wheat, higher prices rather than larger quantities caused the increase in value of stored crops.

On the other side of the ledger, farm debt outstanding on Jan. 1, 1975, totaled $81.8 billion, $7.7 billion more than on Jan. 1, 1974.

Debt secured by farm real estate was $46.3 billion, up $5 billion or 12 per cent during 1974. Non-real estate farm debt on Jan. 1, 1975, totaled $35.2 billion, up 8 per cent from a year earlier.

As with farm real estate loans, short and intermediate-term loans did not accumulate as rapidly during 1974 as in 1973. Economists said deteriorating cattle markets and greater caution among farmers in general affected their willingness to borrow heavily for operating purposes and for machinery.

Also, the relatively high farm income in 1974 allowed farmers to pay cash for a larger proportion of purchases, thereby reducing the need to borrow.

Evidence ties humans to cuttings

SALEM (UPI) — Investigators for the Oregon Department of Agriculture today confirmed the first reports linking humans to some of the 19 incidents of cattle mutilations in Eastern Oregon reported since August.

"Doc" Wright, administrator of the department's enforcement division, said four cattle found mutilated during the first week of October in separate locations along the border between Harney and Malheur counties were mutilated with a "sharp instrument" such as a knife.

He said in each of the four killings, the udders and sex organs of the animals were cut away and in two cases the animal's tongues were also cut out.

The animals were all mutilated after they already were dead, but department investigators have been unable to determine a cause of death for any of the cattle.

Laboratory analysis and autopsies on the mutilated animals have failed to show any cause of death.

Wright said investigators have not linked the mutilations to any occult ritual killings.
