

today in brief

FDA refuses to ban common drug

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration has refused to ban a drug prescribed for women more than 2 million times a year, saying its cancer causing potential in test animals apparently does not pose a similar risk to humans. The drug involved is Plagyl, also called metronidazole, which is widely used for the treatment of a common vaginal infection. The Ralph Nader-backed Health Research Group asked the FDA last year to ban Plagyl for treatment of vaginal infections.

Author dies

DANBURY (UPI) — Rex Stout, 88, creator of detective Nero Wolfe, died Monday of natural causes. He had published his 46th Wolfe mystery, "A Family Affair," a month ago. Stout's works had appeared since 1934 in 22 languages and sold over 45 million copies. Born in Iglau, he was reared in Kansas and began writing after service with the United States Navy. His wife, two daughters and two sisters survive.

Franco showing improvement

MADRID (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, 82, is resting quietly and x-rays of his chest have revealed a "definite improvement," his doctors said today. However, they said he was still bleeding internally and his condition remained grave. His reported improvement came as government sources said it may be necessary for Franco to relinquish power temporarily again to his designated successor, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon.

Scholastic test score probe set

NEW YORK (UPI) — The College Entrance Examination Board today appointed a bipartisan panel to probe the big skid in the Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. The test is known as SAT. Willard Wirtz, former Secretary of Labor and president of the National Manpower Institute in Washington, will chair the panel composed of top scholars, sociologists and measurement experts.

Rebel Sooner inmates denied amnesty

GRANT, Okla. (UPI) — Officials said today there would be no amnesty for nine inmates who were holding three hostages in the Oklahoma State Reformatory kitchen and warned "force would be used, if necessary, to free the captives." "The prisoners will be charged with kidnaping," said Dr. Ned Benton, state corrections director.

'Leaks' scored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and some of his aides should be fired for conducting "leaky" negotiations with the Soviet Union on strategic arms limitations in 1972. That is the view of Colin Gray, associate director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, who charges in a magazine article that the Russians are avoiding or evading the agreement's terms.

NOW pushing for ERA adoption

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Delegates to the National Organization for Women convention Monday approved a resolution for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment. The 2,500 delegates also voted to hold a constitutional convention in Kansas City, Kan., to clear up some of the procedural problems that came up there.

N-test rocks Southern Nevada

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (UPI) — An underground nuclear blast today swayed buildings 100 miles away in Las Vegas and was felt 300 miles away in Sacramento, Calif., and Los Angeles. The weapon, code named "Kasser," was set off at 8:30 a.m. MST 4,150 feet below the surface of the Nevada Test Site. The explosion registered 6.0 magnitude on the Richter scale at Cal Tech's laboratory in Pasadena.

TF builder Vern Schutte, 58, dies

EDEEN — Vern Schutte, 58, Twin Falls, died Monday night at his home after a short illness. Mr. Schutte was owner of Vern Schutte and Sons, a firm specializing in frameless steel building construction. White Mortuary will announce funeral arrangements.

Default issue keeps on boiling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will take no action to prevent New York City from going into default, his chief spokesman said today.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen made the statement in advance of Ford's "important speech" before the National Press Club Wednesday on the New York City financial crisis.

Nessen said Ford will meet with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller today. Rockefeller has taken a view on New York City somewhat in opposition to Ford and has indicated that some assistance should be forthcoming, perhaps through legislation.

Nessen refused to give any clues on the details of Ford's address. He said Ford "has been thinking about a possible statement on New York City for about two weeks."

When asked whether he stood by his previous statement that Ford will do nothing to block New York from going into bankruptcy, Nessen said, "The President will not take any action to prevent New York City from going into default."

The Senate Banking Committee agreed today to vote by noon Thursday on a proposal to provide billions of dollars in federally guaranteed loans in a last-ditch effort to avert the city's default.

White House aides, shortly before Nessen's announcement, said Ford wanted to restate his position on New York City and they, seriously doubted he had softened toward giving any federal guarantees to back up the city's municipal bonds.

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., today asked

Congress to approve a plan requiring New York City's banks and union members to make some sacrifices in return for federal help to avert default.

Stevenson proposed the plan in the Senate Banking Committee as an alternative to a plan advanced by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the panel chairman. Proxmire's bill called for making $6 billion in federally guaranteed loans available to the city and did not contain the new conditions.

Sadat seeks wider US-Mideast effort

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Egypt's President Anwar Sadat urged the United States today to take the lead in establishing a "dialogue" with the Palestinian refugees in an effort to include them in eventual overall Middle East peace talks in Geneva.

Sadat said he laid the proposal before President Ford at a White House meeting this morning. Asked about Ford's reaction, Sadat referred briefly with his foreign minister and said, "no comment."

"I urge a dialogue between the United States and the Palestinians because the United States is the main party in the (Middle East) game," the Egyptian president said. "If we are going to achieve any global solution to this problem, it should include the Palestinians."

Ford and Sadat met for an hour today and White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said they discussed economic aid and possible future military help as well as the situation in Lebanon. He gave no details or specifics about the views of either president.

The meeting with Defense Secretary James Schlesinger was regarded largely as a protocol visit, since Egypt's military needs have been spelled out during Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's frequent trips to the Middle East.

Administration sources said the key element in the question of U.S. arms aid is when, not whether, aid will be given.

Spokesmen for both sides said Ford told Sadat Monday that he plans to ask Congress for major economic aid to Egypt for his year.

Sadat arrived in Washington Monday for an unprecedented state visit.

On the diplomatic front, Sadat urged efforts toward an Israeli-Syrian disengagement accord and a settlement on the future of Palestinians. On the military side, Sadat is looking to the United States for aid.

While Sadat's hardware shopping list includes F16 fighter jets, tanks, Hawk missiles and sophisticated electronic equipment, U.S. officials expect significant military aid to Egypt is unlikely until after the 1976 presidential election.

During toast remarks at a White House banquet honoring President and Mrs. Sadat, both presidents declared their intent to maintain the momentum for peace in the Middle East. Ford described Sadat as a leader "for all the people of the Middle East, and I say again tonight emphatically and categorically that we share the view that the process of making peace for all must continue."

Ford said "there can be no peace until the legitimate interests of all the peoples of the Middle East are taken fairly into account in a final peace settlement."

Sadat said in his response "we feel that the momentum for peace should not be squandered under any circumstances."

First edition 71 years ago

TWIN FALLS — Today is the Times-News' 71st birthday anniversary.

The Twin Falls News, first published Oct. 28, 1904, preceded the establishment of school, bank or barber shop in the fledgling town.

About a year later, a competitor, the Twin Falls Times, appeared on the town's unpaved streets. After 38 years of competition, the two papers merged Feb. 16, 1942, to form the Times-News.

There were only 35 registered voters and a man could get a job clearing sagebrush for $30 a month plus board, according to the Oct. 28, 1904, edition.

The town then had two general stores, two livery stables, two restaurants, two saloons, lumbeyard, meat market and blacksmith, as well as a rooming house and real estate office.

The first edition says, where only six months before there was nothing but unclaimed sagebrush at the site.

Milner Dam was nearing completion and a 70-mile telephone line had been completed to connect Twin Falls with Shoshone. A hardware store, bank, school, hotel, drugstore and barber shop were planned.

During the 71 years the newspaper has grown from a few copies delivered weekly at the dusty tent city to a paper serving about 22,000 homes each day in Magic Valley.

Burley lad dies

BURLEY — A Burley teen-ager died early today, one month after he was wounded by an accidental gunshot.

Bruce Harper, 16, died about 4 a.m. today at Cassia Memorial Hospital. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Harper, Burley.

Harper suffered a gunshot wound in the abdomen while riding in a pickup about 4 p.m. on Sept. 28. According to reports, his gun struck the steering wheel and discharged.

Plea entered

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A federal court judge entered an innocent plea today for Sara Jane Moore, charged with trying to kill President Ford in San Francisco Sept. 22.

U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti set a trial date of Dec. 15 for the 45-year-old twice-divorced mother and said a hearing on her mental competency would be held Nov. 17.

Miss Moore was indicted last week on charges of attempting to kill the president, specifically, firing a shot from a .38-caliber Smith and Wesson revolver at Ford as he left the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco following a speech. She was wrestled to the ground by police and Secret Service agents and taken into custody.

a person of influence? How is influence best used? How did they view the survey itself?

Curtis Eaton Curtis Eaton is normally a quiet man, almost shy, and he is not always comfortable talking to the press. During the interview he was careful, by his own admission, to say nothing about himself or about Twin Falls County which could possibly reflect detrimentally on Twin Falls Bank and Trust Co.

Now 57, Eaton has been chairman and president of Twin Falls Bank and Trust since the spring of 1972. He was preceded in both posts by his father, the late Harry Eaton, who died the same spring Eaton was chosen the bank's top officer.

"Eaton is married" and the father of two children, a son and a daughter. He is a former chairman of the Idaho State Board of Education and currently serves on the Governor's Task Force for Affairs of State.

US trade balance gains despite import increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States exported more than it imported in September, but an increase in oil and sugar imports forced the balance of trade surplus to the lowest level since last April, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said the September figure marked the eighth consecutive month the United States has recorded a balance of trade surplus.

But increased oil and sugar imports pushed the balance of trade surplus down $59 million from August to $776 million last month. This marked the smallest surplus since the United States registered a $557 million favorable balance last April.

Boys excluded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cheering delegates to a national Girl Scouts convention voted overwhelmingly today to continue to exclude boys from membership.

Several thousand delegates jumped to their feet and cheered when Dr. Gloria D. Scott, a vice president of the Girl Scouts, called for a vote on a motion to continue to limit membership to girls.

A Twin Falls native and a graduate of Twin Falls High School, Eaton attended Stanford University where he received a bachelor's degree in medical science and biology.

Early in his college career he wanted to become a doctor and at one point was admitted to Yale Medical School. He decided not to go. It was a decision which still mystifies him.

"I can't tell you to this day why I didn't," he says. But he adds that he has no regrets about having come back to Twin Falls.

FROM ATOP an unfinished building in Beirut, a Moslem leftist gunman fires at anything that moves in the streets below. As fighting spread, the United States, Great Britain and most European nations evacuated their nationals. The hotel district was the center of another battle today and the American embassy was under sniper fire. (UPI)

Views of influence differ among trio

Conclusion

when the Times-News surveyed prominent people. The newspaper interviewed the three in length, trying to find out how these men perceived their leadership roles. What did they think of the county leadership structure as a whole? What did they see as essential to become during the Depression. Eaton remained devoted to the bank. On the wall of his wood-paneled office, behind his desk, is a large oil portrait of his father.

"I always have to give immeasurable credit to my family and the good people of this county for whatever accomplishments it may have been my good fortune to be a part of," Curtis Eaton says. "I certainly wouldn't leave out the staff of this bank."

What about county leadership elite? Eaton does not believe there is any such thing. "There probably are those people that, banded together in small groups, accomplish the better things for Twin Falls," he said, "and I think this is true of any area. But most generally they are generated by love of the community and concern for its welfare."

But for himself, Eaton refuses to assess his own influence. (Continued on p. 11)

Y schedules aquathon to raise pool funds

TWIN FALLS — The YW-YMCA will hold an "aquathon" Saturday to raise money for pool equipment and the Y's swim team.

All persons wishing to participate are invited to swim. Swimmers find sponsors who pledge money for each lap they swim.

Forty young members of the Y's swim team have already signed up for the aquathon. The goal for most of these team swimmers is 200 laps.

Council candidates speak

By CRICKET BIRD
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The importance of conservative budgeting and businesslike management of the city of Twin Falls were stressed by candidates for the City Council Monday.

Five of six candidates for four seats spoke to a meeting sponsored by the Twin Falls Republican Women. About 50 persons attended.

Incumbent council member Steve Lincoln told the audience that "as a rather conservative-minded city councilman" he would closely scrutinize any proposed wage increases by city employees and spoke out against possible unionization.

In the interest of taxpayers living on fixed incomes and relatively low wages, Lincoln said he could not justify wage increases except for cost of living raises.

And he added the council is standing against "unionization and strikes by our city employees. We have one too many unions in the city already with our firemen."

Leon Smith, also an incumbent, emphasized the need for conservative budgeting. He felt the budget should be held no higher than what it is now.

From a legal standpoint, Smith said, preparing the budget and deciding how the city should spend its money is "the only really big duty," the council has.

Gordon Cox told the group he felt the city should be run as a business. "The citizens as taxpaying stockholders have a right to the best for their money."

He suggested some city services might better be provided by contract, such as the sanitation services are. He named the golf course as one area which might be operated by contract.

Margaret K. Youtz said the council has to plan and budget well in order to have efficient administration in the short run and to maintain and improve the physical environment in the long run.

She presented a five-point plan to modify the council's budgeting procedure. She suggested the city develop a capital expenditure budget for a period of at least five years, and that budgets for various departments be drawn up without building in a cushion. Any department which underspends should be investigated immediately to assure that its services are being delivered satisfactorily.

Chris Talkington told the audience, "A lot is being said about the need to maintain conservative fiscal management," but he added, "there is a sharp line between what is said and what is done." The council recently voted itself a 100 per cent pay raise, he said.

Speaking for incumbent council member Stephen Bancroft, Harold Gerber told the group Bancroft's skills as a certified public accountant would aid in the city's budgeting process.

Bancroft "knows money," Gerber said, and knows that to save a dime now may cost a dollar next year. "The city must learn to spend the dime now if it needs to, he said.

Other issues which elicited comments from candidates were:

— The proposed regional airport: Smith told the group, "From Twin Falls' standpoint, we should always stay out of it," unless Joslin Field is adopted as the site. Smith said, "there's no practical reason" for the new facility and denounced the motivation to build as "just provincialism."

— Planning: Mrs. Youtz said the Comprehensive Plan does not "reflect what exists here." She said "the primary issue the council faces now is to determine what growth we can reasonably incorporate without harming our area."

Cox said the Joint Planning Commission "is the ace in the hole" to prevent problems in Twin Falls before "costly cures" are necessary.

Lincoln advocated reorganization of the planning council. "What has been purchased is somewhat tenuous," he said, and added the council should "take a second look at joint planning."

— Election procedures: Chris Talkington suggested council members be elected from districts to increase the contact and communication between the members and their constituents. He also told the group he felt the city benefited when as many people as possible served in its government, and added that he would step down after one term to make way for new people. He suggested that incumbents should follow this procedure.

— Traffic problems: Mrs. Youtz said, "Poor vision at many intersections and the need to upgrade many streets and intersections are genuine problems for most of us."

Shelby's markets change name, prices

TWIN FALLS — Shelby's food stores in Twin Falls, Burley and Buhl will reopen Wednesday morning with a new name — Smith's Food King.

All three stores were closed today so prices on over 8,700 items could be lowered, according to Ken White, division manager for Smith's Food King. He said the prices have been cut because the stores have "gone discount."

White attributed the price reductions to the store chain's decision to eliminate trading stamps and "by advertising under one name instead of many different names." The stamps will be dropped at the end of this year.

Smith's Food King, a Salt Lake City-based chain, acquired the three Shelby's stores five years ago, according to White. The name was not immediately changed because "our company had a policy of keeping the hometown name," he said.

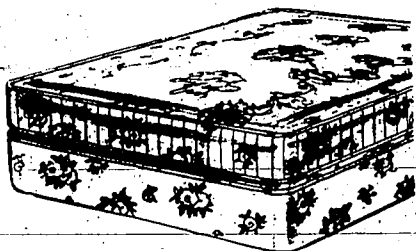

But "we're now in the process of converting all our stores to discount and it is more feasible going under one name," White added.

The chain has 120 stores in California, Nevada, Utah and Idaho. The other Idaho stores are in Pocatello and Boise. White said between 25 and 30 new employees have been hired at the three Magic Valley stores.

The stores' hours will remain the same, he said.

When's the last time we missed school?

To the dismay of most kids, schools rarely close because there's no electricity. Your school relies on us for electricity just as much as you do at home or on the job.

But keeping electric service reliable costs more these days.

One important reason is all the environmental control we must provide to maintain today's air standards.

Depending which control system is used, it can add as much as 30% to the cost of making your electricity.

We rely on you to understand this.

Just as you rely on us to keep your electric service up to the same standards you've always known.

We rely on you as much as you rely on us.

Leadership group reflects changes

Every community has its leaders. However, there are many different kinds of leadership groups in different communities.

There is reason to believe that the pattern of leadership in Twin Falls County is changing rapidly, perhaps for the better.

There is widely held belief among old-timers that Twin Falls still was a tightly-run community as recently as 20 or 30 years ago.

If you were to draw a picture of that kind of leadership group, it would be very narrow with a very high peak. It would contain few people.

If that historical picture is at all accurate, then there has been a great deal of change in recent years.

A Times-News project designed to roughly measure the size and shape of the current group of influential people came up with some interesting results.

Today there still is a clearly perceived leadership group. Almost all survey responses fell on the same group of people.

The group has grown to include about 80 people.

Its shape is no longer pointed, but fairly flat. That is, influence seems to be fairly widely spread throughout the entire 80-person group.

If this picture is correct, then there is reason for optimism about the state of leadership in Twin Falls County.

It appears that leadership now is spread around to more people than before. And it appears that there is no leader who can get things done without working with and through other influential people.

This provides a much greater opportunity for diverse views to sprout up, for issues to be differentiated and perhaps even brought before the public, and for increased access to the levers of power for the ordinary citizen.

It is interesting to note that the apparent broadening of the leadership group also corresponds to some dramatic social and economic changes in the county.

It brings us back to the question of the chicken and the egg. Does the county power structure reflect local society and its changes, or is it the other way around?

Perhaps it is enough to enjoy a comparatively open, forward looking social and economic climate and also have a reasonably wide, diverse and accessible group of leaders available for use.

"We wouldn't want to get our fingers burned!"

Another sort of trouble for Ford

WASHINGTON — You can paste this in your hat: Gerald Ford will have trouble hanging onto the White House if many more high-stakes Democrats take to talking like Hubert Hoover.

The fashion — or disease — is spreading like the plague. First there were Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who decided they should live like ordinary working-class folks.

Brown and Dukakis are newcomers whose liberalism was only presumed. But Lucey is a veteran of the New Frontier and Great Society, and Muskie's record has been so liberal that he was the Democrats' vice presidential nominee in 1968 and last year got a "perfect" rating from the Americans for Democratic Action.

Ford should be dismayed. If this thing catches on, the Democratic Party may run its presidential candidate next year on the platform of fiscal conservatism. Ford thought he had locked up instead of clinging to his traditional advocacy of free-spending government.

By now everybody who bothers to read the newspapers knows about the sparse economizing practiced by Brown and Dukakis — a practice which won Brown an almost unbelievable 89 per cent approval rating in a Los Angeles Times poll, and has the old pols in Massachusetts in a state of panic. But Muskie has been working under wraps as chairman of the new Senate Budget Committee, and he got little publicity until recently when he made a speech asking why liberals couldn't talk about fiscal responsibility and productivity without feeling uncomfortable.

A year or so ago, Muskie would have been burned at the stake by the leftist Torquemadas for publicly demanding to know why liberals can't start raising hell about a government so big, so complex, so expensive and so an expensive that it's dragging down every good program we've worked for."

He still may be hauled into the radicals' dungeon for a spell on the rack, but he's got something working for him.

That is, of course, the general disenchantment with big government and small politicians reflected in every poll from Gallup and Harris down to the annual straw vote of Elm Street's Ladies Aid Society.

At any rate, Muskie can claim he knows what

Lawyer employment act

WASHINGTON — The campaign reform law sponsored by the Watergate abuses has been branded an employment act for lawyers and accountants.

It is deemed unwelcome by many candidates, consultants and political managers. A few of its critics, including former Minnesota Sen. Eugene McCarthy and Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., have challenged its constitutionality on the ground that it infringes First Amendment rights.

The Supreme Court currently has it under review. Notwithstanding the admitted complexities of the law, the two top officials of the Federal Elections Commission, which was created by it, believe that it can be made to work with some hard work and congressional cooperation.

FEC Chairman Thomas Curtis, a former GOP House member from Missouri, and Vice Chairman Neil Staebler, a veteran of Democratic politics from Michigan, concede they're still trying to master the intricacies of the act, which was designed to prevent the corrupting influence of concealed campaign contributions.

Both Curtis and Staebler insist that it isn't as complicated as it may look to the average citizen, who needs only to know the limits it places on their political contributions.

All the "average citizen" is required to know, says Staebler, is that he or she can contribute up to $1,000 to a candidate, volunteer his or her time up to $500, and entertain in the home up to $500.

There are no severe limitations or complications for the average citizen," Staebler maintains.

The difficulties arise for "those who want to do more," the multi-candidate contributors, the many committees organized for a political campaign, corporations and labor unions, according to Staebler.

But the commission, both Staebler and Curtis acknowledged to reporters here Wednesday, is required to make hundreds of decisions dealing with myriad political activities, many of them trivial and pleasurable. The 88-page law requires endless definitions and interpretations, ranging from "contributions in kind" to how matching funds can be used. Among the "Solomon-like" decisions the commission must make, for example, is to determine how to allocate the expenses of such White House aides as Chief of staff Donald Rumsfeld and press secretary Ron Nessen when President Ford starts campaigning in his own behalf.

It also must decide soon when the President travels as a private individual, as a head of state, as a party leader, and as a presidential candidate, in order to determine what part of the traveling expenses must be picked up by the Ford Election Committee.

Recently, the Republican party in Texas sent the commission all of the state laws covering campaign contributions and expenditures and inquired how they could be reconciled with the federal law. A member of the House also inquired recently whether an honorarium received in 1975 for a speech made in 1974, before the law went into effect, had to be reported.

PETER LISAGOR

The law says nothing about the expenses of a convention delegate, and the commission must decide whether the delegate is a federal or a state official.

Curtis and Staebler agreed that the law has a "chilling effect" on political activity by ordinary citizens in the short run, but argued that in the long term it would have a "liberating effect," in that people will understand its limits and thus feel freer to participate in politics.

Curtis noted that people have already been chilled by the abuses the law seeks to correct. He cited as evidence the fact that in the 1974 elections, "fewer people voted than watched the Super Bowl" on television.

Curtis expressed concern that the law might be a breach of the First Amendment in its restrictions upon individual citizens to take part fully and freely in political activity.

Both officials said they were confident Congress will cooperate under the provision that gives the legislative branch 30 days in which to veto any permanent decision the commission makes. They also said they realize that those in congress opposed to the law for one reason or another will "huck at us" at every opportunity.

Sales ban eased

CLEVELAND (UPI) — It is no longer legal to sell glue, plastic cement or even nail polish remover to anyone under 21 years old in Cleveland.

The city council unanimously passed a law Monday aimed at making such glue sales a criminal offense because such substances can be sniffling to get "high."

Violators risk a fine of up to $200 and a maximum jail sentence of 90 days.

Besides glue, plastic cement and nail polish remover, the ordinance also prohibits the sale of lacquer thinner, cleaning fluid and acetone.

It also is illegal for anyone to purchase glue for use as an intoxicant.

President has one advantage in the body shop

WASHINGTON — There are several advantages to being President of the United States — the best one is that when you have an automobile accident you don't have to deal with auto body people or garage mechanics.

I can just imagine what would happen if President Ford had to bring in his limousine to an auto body shop after his accident in Hartford, Conn.

The limo has a slight dent in the fender which President Ford shows to the repairman.

"Wow," says the repairman, "the car's been totaled."

"Totaled? There's just a slight dent in the fender. All you have to do is knock it out and repaint it."

The repairman takes a clipboard and a pen. "I've never seen such damage to a car," he writes down $100.

"Is that what it will cost to fix it?"

"Fix it? That's just a-er looking at it." The repairman crawls underneath the fender and looks up at it. "Oh boy!" the President hears him say. "Oh boy!"

"What's wrong?"

"The bent fender's attached to the hood of the car. We're going to have to install a new hood." He gets back on his feet and writes down "New hood, $500."

"Six hundred dollars to fix a dent in a fender?" the President says.

"Nope. If I give you a new hood, that means we have to install a new windshield." He writes down $500. "And then we'll have to put on new doors." He writes $650. "And install a new trunk to go with the doors." He writes down $450.

"Wait a minute," the President says. "This isn't even my car. I lease it from the Ford Co."

"Well why didn't you say that?" the auto repairman says. He adds another $350 to the list. "How did the accident happen?"

"I was driving home from a fund-raising dinner in Hartford and there was this red light and I went through it."

"You went through a red light?" the auto repairman says, adding another $235.

"Why are you adding $235 because I went through a red light?"

"We're going to have to check the brakes."

"No, you don't understand. I purposely went through the red light. I had to get to the airport."

"You purposely went through a red light? No wonder you totaled the car."

"It was totaled."

The repairman writes down $1,200.

"Why are you writing down $1,200?"

"You'll need a new engine. If the other car was totaled he obviously did irreparable damage to your engine. Do you want new safety belts?"

"No, I don't need safety belts. It'll never happen again."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that the way you drive."

"What about the other car?" the auto repairman asks.

"It was totaled."

The repairman writes down $1,200.

"Why are you writing down $1,200?"

"You'll need a new engine. If the other car was totaled he obviously did irreparable damage to your engine. Do you want new safety belts?"

"No, I don't need safety belts. It'll never happen again."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that the way you drive."

"I didn't total the car," the President shouts angrily. "I just denied the fender."

"What about the other car?" the auto repairman asks.

"It was totaled."

The repairman writes down $1,200.

"Why are you writing down $1,200?"

"You'll need a new engine. If the other car was totaled he obviously did irreparable damage to your engine. Do you want new safety belts?"

"No, I don't need safety belts. It'll never happen again."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that the way you drive."

"What about the other car?" the auto repairman asks.

"It was totaled."

The repairman writes down $1,200.

"Why are you writing down $1,200?"

"You'll need a new engine. If the other car was totaled he obviously did irreparable damage to your engine. Do you want new safety belts?"

"No, I don't need safety belts. It'll never happen again."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that the way you drive."

"I wasn't driving. My chauffeur was driving."

"You've got a chauffeur?" the repairman writes down another $500. "Why didn't you tell me you had money? I was giving you a break, because I thought you were some poor guy who couldn't afford to have his car repaired."

"Look, when can I have the car?" the President asks.

"Let's see. Today's Thursday. How about two months from Friday?"

"Two months? I need the car right away."

The repairman shows the President his list.

"Look for yourself what has to be done. I'll give it to you sooner, but I can't guarantee you that you'll be able to drive it out of the garage."

Pearl scores hit at Sadat's dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Broadway Star Pearl Bailey danced with President Ford and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, sang a duet with actor Omar Sharif and hosted Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's horn-banded bifocals during a swingeing evening at the White House Monday.

President Ford and his wife Betty, elegant in a brown and white Esteeve gown, stayed on the dance floor until 1:30 a.m. EST, long after Sadat, the guest of honor, and his wife had departed.

Miss Bailey, who has performed several times at the White House, was at her best at the Sadat dinner, waltzing several standing ovations and the longest applause heard in the East Room in many a year.

"It was brilliant," said Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. "She missed me."

The First Lady asked Miss Bailey to help out when country singer Johnny Cash had to bow out at the last minute.

Miss Bailey began to snare her audience when she borrowed Rockefeller's glasses to read a song.

She put them on, then cracked, "Where did the people go?"

Handing them back, she advised Rockefeller, "Don't sign anything without these." But later on in the banter he handed the spectacles back to her and said his wife, Happy, would lead him home.

Then she sang about places on the Sadat

Itinerary, bringing gleeful howls when she reached "I'll Take Manhattan." That was followed up with "Chicago" and "The Eyes of Texas."

Sharif accepted her invitation to the stage and they joined — with Miss Bailey prompting — in "Easy to Love."

During one of her most famous numbers, "Hello Hollywood," Ford rose from his chair and followed up around to prove crownmen.

Miss Bailey returned to the microphone to sing "Happy Birthday" to former stage star Nanette Fabray. Miss Fabray, who has a hearing defect, responded in song and sign language with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," reducing many to tears.

Middleman's food $ cut dips

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The middleman's share of the consumer's dollar for a market basket of food decreased 3.2 cents in August to the lowest level for the year, the Agriculture Department says.

The farm-retail spread, which covers the costs for assembling, processing, transporting and distributing the market basket of foods, dropped 2.8 per cent from August to September. But the farm-retail spread in September still was 3.4 per cent wider than in September, 1974.

The sharpest spread decreases came for beef, pork, fresh fruits and vegetables. Moderate decreases also were recorded for poultry, eggs and processed fruits and vegetables.

The department's Economic Research Service said returns to farmers for market basket foods increased 2.2 per cent from August to September. The farmer's share of a dollar spent in retail food stores for farm-originated food was 44.3 cents in September compared with 43.1 cents in August.

The retail and wholesale share of the consumer's dollar was 53.7 cents compared with 56.7 cents in August.

The price spread report said the average retail price per pound for all beef cuts was about $1.53 compared with $1.55 in August, a drop of about 1.7 per cent.

Yanks in Russ prisons?

CHICAGO (UPI) — The executive director of the Christian Defense League says he has obtained documents purporting to show that a U.S. bomber downed by Soviet fighters over the Sea of Japan in 1953 are prisoners in Russian "slave labor camps."

The charges by the Rev. Paul Lindstrom, former head of the now-defunct "Remember the Pueblo Committee" and now heading the CDL, were made in a letter to the U.S. State Department.

Lindstrom said he and CDL associate director Dr. Phillip Bennett had first learned from Soviet embassy sources in Algiers in 1974 that 10 survivors of the 1953 incident were being held "in a series of five slave labor camps in eastern Russia known as Bogoshi, Keska, Komsmolsk, Gandala and Wangar."

He says the CDL has received documents from a Senate intelligence committee staff aide substantiating the 1953 attack on the bomber and the apparent capture of the crew.

He says he has obtained copies of notes from the State Department to the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs and responses from the Soviet Foreign Ministry to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

The notes, he said, indicate the Air Force B50 bomber, on a navigational mission over the Sea of Japan, was downed by MIG15 fighters over international waters on July 29, 1953.

"The aircraft," he quoted a State Department note as saying, "had reached a point... approximately 40 miles south of Cape Provorotny, ...when suddenly, at approximately 6:15 in the morning local time and without any prior warning whatever, Soviet MIG15-type aircraft intercepted and fired upon the United States aircraft."

The document, he said, also charged "the U.S. Government finds that a number of crewmembers, if not all of them, successfully parachuted to the surface of the Sea of Japan."

He said Soviet responses denied any American airmen had been captured.

Drug flow cutback sought

CHICAGO — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill. has asked top Ford administration officials to interfere with Mexican counterparts to help reduce the flow of heroin from Mexico to the United States.

Pointing to Drug Enforcement Administration figures he requested that show Mexico has replaced Europe as the major source of U.S. heroin, Percy yesterday urged Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi to "undertake immediate diplomatic steps to dam up this international stream polluted with deadly granules of brown heroin."

In Washington, Percy said DEA reported that 90 per cent of 303 heroin samples confiscated in 14 U.S. cities during the first six months of this year were Mexican-processed, compared to only 40 per cent in 1972, 63 per cent in 1973 and 76 per cent in 1974.

The supply of Mexican heroin, which is brown due to impurities in the opium-refining process, has increased steadily since 1971, when Turkey banned cultivation of poppies, heroin's raw material.

Percy said the most startling aspect of DEA's latest analysis is that Mexican heroin now flows to the major cities of the Northeast. A 1972 survey showed that the furthest penetration of the Mexican product east was along a rough line from Detroit to the Florida panhandle.

Percy's letters to Kissinger and Levi suggested they work directly with Mexican President Luis Echeverria and Mexican Atty. Gen. Pedro Ojeda-Paullada to develop a joint enforcement strategy.

Burns proposes aid price

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns is proposing that New York City banks and municipal employees take some lumps as the price for federal help to avert the city's default.

Burns' proposal introduced a new element in congressional negotiations over how to rescue one city without rewarding those within it who are often seen as the villains of New York's financial troubles.

Decisions are expected this week in the House and Senate committees that have been considering whether Washington should come to New York's rescue with a federal guarantee of multibillion-dollar loans to the city.

Bottlenecks are expected to submit legislation forward. But opposition is strong in both chambers, and a filibuster looms in the Senate.

Treasury Secretary William Simon, who has argued New York City's default, while "awful," would be preferable to federal help, was to offer his latest views today before a House banking subcommittee.

The city owes $1.2 billion. Since March it has been unable to sell bonds to repay debts.

Default on debts could occur in early December. No one knows whether the city then could meet day-to-day police, fire, sanitation, health, welfare and education expenses.

UPI obtained a copy of a letter from Burns to Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the House subcommittee. While still opposing a federal role, Burns said that if Congress decides to help the city it should require unions to renegotiate pension plans and banks to accept delayed payment and reduced interest rates on the money they have lent at interest rates of 8 to 11 per cent.

"There are no groups whose interests would be more drastically affected by a default than New York City financial institutions and city employees," Burns said.

"It is highly appropriate that these groups, who have such a great stake in the continued vitality of the city, be required to demonstrate their own firm commitment to the city's rehabilitation as a prerequisite for federal aid."

Key Senate staff members said support for federal help is increasing from the financial world but the public, as it focuses on the issue, is becoming increasingly hostile.

Soviets build 3rd carrier

NEW YORK — The Soviet Union has begun construction of a third aircraft carrier in 1974 that Defense Department analysts reported Monday.

The vessel is expected to displace 15,000 tons, like her sister ships, Kiev and Minsk.

The Kiev is undergoing trials in the Black Sea and the Minsk is nearing completion at Nikolayev in the Ukraine.

Physicians on strike

CHICAGO Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The strike by resident and intern physicians at Cook County Hospital has thrust Chicago into a so-far-tiny group of cities that have faced a physicians' refusal to work.

The striking physicians were ordered back by their courts Monday afternoon by Circuit Court Judge Donald J. O'Brien after picket lines appeared at the hospital activity at most of the huge hospital complex was severely reduced.

Like residents of New York and Los Angeles, which earlier this year became the first and second cities in U.S. history to entertain such a development, people here may wonder why and how young doctors concluding their clinical on-the-job training chose to abruptly stop treating the sick and injured.

55 dead in crash

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Air force helicopters set out over the steep slopes of the Andes mountains today to recover the bodies of 55 men, women and children killed in the crash of a military transport plane.

Col. L.P. Garcia, a Bolivian air force spokesman, said investigators are trying to determine whether pilot error or mechanical failure caused the crash of the twin-engine Convair 440.

The propeller-driven plane, carrying army officers and their families from a weekend vacation, struck a mountainside 150 miles west of La Paz.

The plane stalled into the slope Monday morning 10 minutes after taking off from Tomonisco, a military resort on a tropical plain below the snow-capped peaks of the Andes mountain range.

The spokesman said the pilot had to clear a sharp, 10,000-foot climb soon after takeoff to clear the towering Andean peaks between the resort and La Paz.

WENFORD COULD BE A MODEL PRISONER A REAL PRISONER COULD BE OTHER INVITES

I WISH YOU'D RECONSIDER AND STAY OUT

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A couple, whose youngest child left for college asked your readers to help them decide whether or not to sell their big home.
I say, sell while you can still get your price! We didn't wait for your kids to come home for a visit. It was always the same story: "Too busy. Maybe next year."
The one in college chose to spend Christmas with her boyfriend's family!
We finally wised up and sold it for what we could get.
POOR TIMING IN WISCONSIN.

DEAR ABBY: Sell now! It's better to move to a strange place where you know no one while you are together. I suggest a retirement community where all others have been uprooted and are eager to make new friends. Choose a place where each of you can pursue new interests and hobbies and prepare for that day when one of you must carry on alone.

Not to sell
— or sell?

DEAR ABBY: Sell! Sell! Sell! Store what furniture you want to keep, buy a camper and take off, leaving no forwarding address.

Hold hands, sleep late, make love and enjoy each other. Get some great clothes, go dancing, check to check, then come home if you want to. And never let your children use you as a free babysitting service or a place to go for a free vacation.

OREGONIANS WHO DID IT

DEAR ABBY: Sell the house and get into something cheaper and easier to care for. If the kids come, put them up in a nearby motel. Even if you have to pay for it, it's still cheaper, and they won't stay as long.

CANADIANS

DEAR ABBY: I've worked with college students for 15 years, and I would advise parents not to sell their homes until their youngest is through college. Until that time, children desperately need a home to come back to, and it should be there whether or not it's made use of.

SANTA BARBARA

DEAR ABBY: Hang on to your home even though your children are gone. We have six grandchildren who come to visit us the day school lets out, and they stay all summer. If we had sold our big, five-bedroom home and moved into a small apartment, we'd have missed some wonderful dividends.

THE G'S IN GA.

DEAR ABBY: Would you like to hear what our parents did after their kids left home? They sold their big house and they visit each one of their six married children for two months every year. They said, "We took care of you; now you can take care of us!"

THE KIDS

DEAR ABBY: I don't think those people should sell their big house. If they were to move into a little apartment and

TF appearances set by 'Up With People'

TWIN FALLS — Going into homes and meeting new people is one of Patti Ellison's favorite parts of belonging to the "Up With People" group.
"For me, it's the most meaningful experience of being in "Up With People," said nineteen-year-old Miss Ellison.
"Mrs. Tom Kieley, who with her husband hosted two girls when "Up With People" appeared in Twin Falls several years ago echoed Patti's sentiments.

"Mrs. Kieley said the experience was a good one. "We were just quite impressed with the caliber of the kids, their enthusiasm and their intelligence."

"Up With People" is performing in Twin Falls Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium and families are still needed to host some of the cast members. Interested persons should contact CSI.

A resident of Fargo, North Dakota, Miss Ellison has spent three months in the musical group.

"Some people feel like we only stay in really big homes," she said. "It's not that way at all. The important part is the people themselves," she said.

"I stayed in one home where there were eight of us and one bathroom," Miss Ellison said. The hosts were an older, widowed woman and her daughter.

The women weren't supposed to have six girls, but at the pickup point for hosts, the older woman refused to go home until she was sure all the girls had homes to stay in, Miss Ellison said.

She recalled her to say, "I'm going to wait around because if there's anyone who doesn't have a home, I want them, too."

Mrs. Kieley said her two guests were "exceedingly friendly" and very good at talking with the family's young children about their experiences.

Mrs. John Detweiler, whose family also hosted two girls, said, "I really enjoyed it immensely. It was really a very nice experience."

Mrs. Detweiler plans to host more "Up With People" cast members this year, but this time requested boys. "I prefer boys, because I've raised boys," she said.

Miss Ellison commented, "I've never stayed with a host family I didn't like. You know already if they've offered their homes to you that they're pretty special people."

"We're always saying 'Wish there was more time,' that's the only sad thing," she said.

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has angina pectoris and is quite hampered in doing anything like working in the garden or mowing the lawn, things that require a little exertion and precision. He wonders if there is a way around it that would allow him to do a little light work again. What is your opinion of having this operation they call a coronary bypass? Would it help him if he had that done? — Mrs. R.B.

There are thousands of these coronary artery bypass operations done each year, and incapacitating angina pectoris is one of the chief indications for such surgery.

higher or lower to see if such a change helps.

Another cause is related to food, particularly to that containing the amino acid tyramine. This is present in cheese, certain beans, wine and beer. If you snack on cheese or sip before bedtime or before your nap this could cause your discomfort.

I recall one case of a woman who had such headaches. I found out she was in the habit of covering her head with a blanket or sheet during sleep. She was breathing stale air. Good ventilation during sleep is important.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read somewhere that licorice is good for diets. Do

Bypasses common

The cause of angina is a narrowing of the heart muscle brought about by an obstruction in the artery serving it. This exertion brings pains that radiate throughout the upper chest and arm area.

The bypass is done by removing a portion of a superficial vein in the leg and using it to bypass the obstructed segment in the coronary artery. Pain is often relieved completely. The procedure has a high success rate. The risk is considered to be about a half of one percent.

However, in any such surgery your husband's heart status must be thoroughly investigated, since such procedures are not recommended if the heart muscle itself is in poor condition.

Also, because of your husband's age, the doctor would have to weigh carefully his general health before recommending such surgery. There would probably be an extended period of even less activity.

Except in severe cases, angina need not doom one to a wheelchair, especially with available drugs. My booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris," will instruct you and your husband on important aspects of this disease. If you wish a copy, send 25 cents to me in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 69, and I awaken every morning with a vicious headache. I nap each day after lunch feeling fine. On waking an hour later I have the same kind of headache. Can you explain this? — E.B.G.

One cause of morning headache is high blood pressure. It is not too common, but it should be looked into nevertheless.

Another possible factor at your age is arthritic change in the neck vertebrae. Arthritis of the neck spine is common and the positions of your head during sleep can cause muscle spasm. You might try adjusting your pillow or head rest had one chance for his contract. He needed to take two spade finesesses and that meant he had to find two entries to dummy.

Therefore, at trick three he led a low trump and finesse, dummy's eight spot. This would have left him two tricks short if East had produced the nine, but when East had to follow low, South had his extra entry.

A quick spade finesse, a trump to dummy's 10, another spade finesse and it was all over but the scoring.

ASKING GOODBYE

An Indiana reader wants to know when a hand with 13 high-card points should overcall at the two level.

Such hands are worth an opening bid, but not necessarily a two-level overcall. The principle requirement here is playing strength and you would never make such an overcall with a mere four-card suit, seldom with a five-carder, but almost any time with six good cards in the suit.

We will discuss these overcalls in the next few articles.

Club elects

FILER — Teresa Cristobal has been elected president of the Spanish Club of the Filer High School.

Joan Sligar will serve as vice president, and Dorothy Campbell, secretary-treasurer.

The group will meet during the noon hour the first Wednesday of each month.

Refugee aid eyed

SHOSHONE — Members of the United Methodist Women in Shoshone plan to aid Vietnam refugees.

The women, with the assistance of Rev. Nathan Ware, called Camp Pendleton, Calif., Monday to offer their sponsorship to either a Vietnamese family or several Vietnamese individuals.

The obligation of a sponsor is to provide housing, assist with finding work for the refugee and to aid in the refugee's adjustment to the community.

Mrs. Gary Will, secretary to the women's group and promoter of the refugee project, says housing for the refugees has been secured and the group has received verbal commitment of employment from Tupperware.

"Thousands of Vietnamese will be transferred from Camp Pendleton to Fort Chaffee, Ark., at the end of the month. The invitation from Shoshone will provide an opportunity for some of the refugees to come directly to Shoshone without being sent to Arkansas first.

The decision to sponsor the refugees was made after members of the community had been polled, Rev. Ware says.

It is "encouraging to find a balance between a Methodist mission project and an international project and to lend a helping hand" when it is needed, Rev. Ware says.

Church members say they anticipate a warm welcome for the refugees in Shoshone.

JEROME — Marygrace Cox, Jerome, was elected and installed president of the Gem State Writers' Guild in Jerome Friday and Saturday.

EDEN — Only one race has more than one candidate in the Nov. 4 city election as Lelan Fitzpatrick and Arlyn L. Krohn vie for a two-year vacancy on the City Council.

The two-year spot is available because incumbent Don McPartian has resigned.

Running unopposed for the position of mayor will be Claude A. Rogers. He will replace incumbent Mayor James Lulow, who has declined to run for a second term. Also unopposed for his bid for re-election to the council will be Ted Kropp.

"I think if a person has any degree of success, that's measured by other people," he says. "I certainly isn't measured by one's self. I think other people have a right to say whether I'm successful or not better than I do."

Eaton says he took "great pride" in having one named most frequently in the Times-News influence poll, but he questions whether the survey was too narrow to be meaningful.

"Those chosen should be highly 'battered,'" he says, "but perhaps the base was not broad enough to give a true picture. . . . I think we're actually far removed from what could be called a political power structure. . . . I see the leadership as amalgamation of the most interested groups for the benefit of all."

"We're fortunate to have a number of those people. We aren't just limited to a small group. . . . There are a number of groups that work effectively independent of each other. I've never seen it that a worthwhile project, sold properly, was refused by the people of the area."

Asked what qualities he thought necessary for leadership, Eaton names honesty, stability, tenacity, perseverance, dedication.

"I think a modest aggressiveness is required," he adds.

"My fortune," he says, "has rallied around my family, the community, and the staff of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust."

James L. Taylor
College of Southern Idaho president James L. Taylor, appears to be more driven and intense. He paints a picture of himself as a people-loving man who has risen through the ranks through sheer effort and an almost obsessive belief in himself.

"To get any task done an individual must be, number one, aggressive," Dr. Taylor says. "I must be enthusiastic and I must possess the expertise to do the assigned job or task."

Taylor, who like Eaton is married and the father of a son and a daughter, was one of several children born in the village to an impoverished Oklahoma couple.

In the second grade, Taylor was hit in the head by a baseball and suffered an injury which some extent has helped shape his life. Struck in the side of the head by the ball, the nerves which controlled Taylor's eyelids were damaged, causing the eyelids to droop permanently, leaving Taylor with a sleepy look which even today is deep in terms of the quick mind behind his eyes.

The eye injury subjected Taylor to ridicule and teasing as a child. But he now thinks the injury actually helped him, fueling his drive to succeed and leaving him with a kind of badge.

"When I go to a conference and I'm just plain Jim Taylor, people remember me," he says. "I may be ugly. . . but they know they have seen me before."

Taylor was the first member of his family to receive a high school diploma. He married at 18 and then used athletic scholarships and two part-time jobs to put himself through Southeastern-Oklahoma State University.

He coached for several years and then returned to the University of Oklahoma to complete a doctorate in education.

When Taylor arrived in the Magic Valley in 1965 with the assigned task of helping to start the College of Southern Idaho, he began to visit every community, every meeting hall to realize the goal.

"I'm not bragging," he says, "but I don't know of anybody that started March 15 and opened up a college Sept. 15. The logistics are a bit frightening. . . . I was the dean, I was the president, I was the business manager. . . . A guy gets to the point where it's easier for him to do the task than to let somebody else do it."

Today, seated in his rock-walled office behind a huge desk from which he can look out on the campus mall, Taylor feels a sense of accomplishment.

"We put it together in such a fashion that the people of this valley are tremendously pleased," he says. "We've tried to run a quality institution. . . . we passed a $3 million bond issue, and our building assets now are $13.5 million."

Aggressiveness is the primary quality for leadership, Taylor says, but the second essential quality is enthusiasm. Taylor is enthusiastic.

"I possess any ability, I would hope that my number one ability is the fact that I like people. I like to work with people."

It is part of his philosophy to attempt to eliminate the distance between himself and another person.

"I'd be just as comfortable sitting down with a group of welders. . . as I would be sitting down with a group of medical doctors," he says.

"There's no distance between me and another individual. This is something I work very hard at. I work very hard to radiate the image that I'm a human being and that I love people. . . . I have no ulterior motives in getting close to people of interest groups."

"I still believe," he adds, "that I could have been successful in any other endeavor that I might have gone into. . . . One characteristic that I think unusual about me from most professionals, I could be happy doing most any kind of work that you could mention. . . . If I was shining shoes, I could be the best damn shoe shiner you ever saw."

For Taylor, however, aggressiveness and enthusiasm are not enough. To be a leader, a person needs something more — expertise.

"You had to convince these people that you had the expertise if they had the confidence in you, and you built that confidence by being straightforward," he says of his early days trying to get CSI off the ground. "A lot of people like to refer to the fact that I can go out and gather up money as one of my strengths. I don't necessarily look at it that way. I think one of my main strengths is an ability to look to trends in education that others don't see."

But Taylor admits quickly that no leader can operate in a vacuum, that to get things done the leader goes to the others in the community who can get things done, and finally the leader goes to the public itself.

"Definitely, I feel that there are people in our community that you contact to get the job done," he says. "There is a segment of the population that the rest of the population looks up to for leadership. . . . When something is to be done in the community you gather around you the people that have shown up on this question. . . . If you don't see them going to get the job done."

In any group, Taylor believes, a leader will surface who will be "listened to when he speaks."

"Leadership qualities are retained with the individual regardless of where he happens to be."

"I think I have leadership ability," he adds.

But Taylor emphasizes that the leader can't operate without his base, without the public to support him.

"If I was running for public office these people (the influential) could give me support, but your vote would be equally important."

Richard High
State Sen. Richard High is the only one of the three most frequently named influential men to have been elected to public office.

High, like Eaton, is a quiet man. He exhibits a quality of subdued strength. He is less intense than Taylor, more willing than Eaton to speak his mind. Like Taylor, but unlike Eaton, he is not a Twin Falls native, although he has been here a long time.

"It was in 1960, in fact, that I moved to Twin Falls from Arizona with a brother and his father, who also moved to Idaho, he bought and developed farmland, which the three still manage as a family corporation."

He is a graduate of the University of Arizona, where he earned his degree in mining engineering and metallurgy. High, 57, is married and the father of two sons and two daughters.

After graduation from college he served in the U.S. Army in the armored cavalry and as an airborne company commander in Europe.

He first served in the state Senate nine years ago. He currently is co-chairman of the powerful Joint Finance Appropriation Committee.

Like Taylor, High considers himself to have leadership ability, but he restricts his influence to the area of legislation.

"I don't really think I would put myself on the list of the influential except in a very narrow area," he says, "and that's the ability to influence legislation, which I definitely have."

Even as a legislator, however, High perceives his limits, and he describes his role, a powerful one by virtue of his committee assignments, as one of quiet implementation.

"It would be almost presumptuous of me to go to a public meeting and stand up and start shouting," he says. "When it comes to implementing things in the community, I think I have a very valuable role — and that's where I want to put my marbles."

An essential to leadership, High believes, is a natural style.

"Each person has to have his style," he says, "and you have to function in what's natural and in style."

He describes his style as logical, a process of assessment and reflection.

"I don't go into something on the spur of the moment," he says. "I didn't go into the legislature without giving it some thought. But when I have decided to do something, I give it everything I've got."

Another quality of leadership is patience. Influence does not accrue overnight. It is something which must be built up through a process of making solid relationships, gaining expertise and building credibility.

"It is the ability to make good personal relationships," he says. "The second thing is the ability to do the homework and keep informed. You have to know the people you're dealing with and you have to demand some credibility."

On a given issue, High adds, he begins by "examining the train of events that results in approval of what I want — then I start at the bottom and funnel the issue to the top."

"First, you've got to be right," he adds. "If you're right, then I think what I'm saying will follow."

To be a leader also demands involvement.

"Quite often it's the person who is willing to become involved who becomes the leader."

High does not believe that within Twin Falls County the leadership structure is highly organized or restricted to any group of 80 as was suggested by the Times-News survey.

If I was shining shoes, I could be the best damn shoe shiner you ever saw."

For Taylor, however, aggressiveness and enthusiasm are not enough. To be a leader, a person needs something more — expertise.

"You had to convince these people that you had the expertise if they had the confidence in you, and you built that confidence by being straightforward," he says of his early days trying to get CSI off the ground. "A lot of people like to refer to the fact that I can go out and gather up money as one of my strengths. I don't necessarily look at it that way. I think one of my main strengths is an ability to look to trends in education that others don't see."

But Taylor admits quickly that no leader can operate in a vacuum, that to get things done the leader goes to the others in the community who can get things done, and finally the leader goes to the public itself.

"Definitely, I feel that there are people in our community that you contact to get the job done," he says. "There is a segment of the population that the rest of the population looks up to for leadership. . . . When something is to be done in the community you gather around you the people that have shown up on this question. . . . If you don't see them going to get the job done."

In any group, Taylor believes, a leader will surface who will be "listened to when he speaks."

World Series MVP has more goals

NEW YORK (UPI) — The enthusiasm Pete Rose generated as the new man at third base for the Cincinnati Reds in 1975 simply added zest to his future goals of being named next year's All-Star at that position and becoming the first switch hitter to get 3,000 major league safeties.

Rose, brimming with the boyish ebullience that characterizes everything he does, modestly disclaims that he was the 100 percent valuable player in the World Series victory over the Boston Red Sox. "Charley Hustle" was charitable in bringing in the entire Cincinnati team when he accepted a car Monday as Sport Magazine MVP for the classic.

"I hate to lose," said Rose. "I feel that my seasons with the Reds from 1963 to 1969 were wasted years because we didn't do much in the way of flag chasing. That's what baseball is all about — winning, getting into the playoffs, taking the World Series."

Rose said a hard work and dedication to the game kept him going and nurtured his desire to pass the 2,800 hits Frankie Frisch amassed as a switch hitter.

"Then there's the fact I've been an All Star second baseman and was voted to an outfield position on the All Stars. Now I'd like to make it at third base. It isn't the transition was difficult, but when things are going for you, you just can't wait until you get to the park each day."

Rose was shifted to third base early in the season and had to learn his trade at the hot corner. Where other Reds spent time in the batting cage, Pete would show up on a Reds day off and have somebody hit grounders to him for several hours at a city.

hits and .370 batting average in the series, describes Pete as a "true follower of Zen — the ability to achieve total concentration" — and is not surprised that the Reds third sacker spends his off-time trying to perfect a defense that matches his aggressiveness at the plate.

Rose showed this absorption in the game when he rambled into second base late in the final game that may have psyched Boston second baseman Denny Doyle into a bad throw that broke up a possible double play.

"I wasn't going in with a deliberate intent to block Doyle. He simply jumped too high when making the relay. Johnny Bench is a slow runner and they would have had the double play."

Rose, 33, feels he has many years remaining in baseball. He credits his strong legs and the physique his father had.

"My dad was knocking heads in football when he was 47. He died in Dec., 1970, when he was 54. In fact, we were playing basketball when he collapsed. Some people say I showed a cold attitude over his death because I didn't break down. Why should? He gave me so much, and I gave it back. He went to 10 training camps with me and he watched us make the playoffs. Just what any father would want his son to do."

Rose thinks one of the most memorable moments of his post-season triumph was the victory parade in Cincinnati and the talk he gave the children at his five-year-old son's school.

"He's such a great baseball fan," Rose grins, "but do you know when I passed him in the hall and I held out my hand and said 'give me some skin,' he refused to shake hands. He was scared one of the teachers was looking at us."

Hustle pays.

Women's pro softball

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — The new International Women's Pro Softball Association, co-founded by tennis superstar Billy Jean King, began gathering momentum Monday with the announcement of eight franchisees in cities from New York to California.

The new league held organizational meetings here last weekend and accepted applications for the first eight teams of what is hoped to be a league comprised of 16 to 18 teams.

Reds win expensive

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds' good fortune cost the city police department a small fortune — $43,000 in overtime pay.

That's the bill for some 4,000 hours of overtime put in by cops who were stationed at Riverfront Stadium for playoff and World Series games and at Fountain Square for subsequent victory celebrations.

Brazilians give medals

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Brazilian soccer team returned its gold medals to the Pan American games authorities today and prepared to fly home rather than return to a game halted by a power failure.

"The whole thing is a joke," said Brazilian coach Tomas Soares, when asked why he would not play Mexico again for the Pan Am championship Wednesday, as requested by the organizing committee.

"They played the national anthems, they raised both flags, they gave medals to players on both teams," he pointed out.

Soares referred to the situation Sunday, when authorities handed out 22 gold medals to players of both the Mexican and Brazilian teams. The final game went into a 1-1 tie but the overtime period was halted when the lights went out on the Mexico goal end of the field.

The authorities at first declared both teams co-winners and gave medals to all, then decided to order a replay.

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Sonics, displaying the run and pass offense reminiscent of Coach Bill Russell's days as a Boston Celtic, ran away from the Phoenix Suns 113-99 and secured their second straight National Basketball Association victory Sunday.

"... WE CONSISTENTLY SPEND THE MAJOR PORTION OF OUR ADVERTISING BUDGET TIMES-NEWS ..."

Hi!

Some of my best Advertising ideas come to me while "field testing" sporting goods equipment — like this new graphite fly rod.

I have many opportunities to dream up new advertising and business promotion ideas like "Newton's Naturally!" and "Sneakers for Streakers".

However, I rely upon Mike Robertson, my Display Advertising Representative, from the Times-News to convert these ideas into workable display ads for the newspaper.

In a specialty Sporting Goods Store such as ours with its tremendous and complete range of equipment for all sports, we must utilize Times-News newspaper advertising to impress the public with the great selection and diversification we have to offer.

That is why we consistently spend the major portion of our Advertising Budget in the Times-News.

Girls home funds sought

BURLEY — A group of local citizens is seeking funds for Minicassia area home for girls. Cassia County Attorney Al Barrus said the group is seeking $50,000 for a home that could house up to six girls, ages 11-17, who run into difficulties with the law.

Snow blanket

WINTER may have arrived in Blaine County. About 12 inches of wet snow blankets the Wood River Valley today after two days of snow on the weekend.

Three days have put a hard crust on the snow. Unless a thaw occurs soon, Blaine County residents won't get a good look at the ground until next spring.

Farmers may need exams

By BILL LAZARUS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho farmers probably soon will have to take an exam and become certified by the state before they can apply some chemicals to their crops.

According to Bill Fretuel, Boise, consumers safety officer for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, farmers may have to be certified by the State of Idaho before they could use "restricted" fungicides, herbicides and insecticides, under a plan which has been approved by both Gov. Cecil D. Andrus and Reglon X of the EPA.

The plan, Fretuel said, will be read into the federal register within a week. Then, a 30-day comment period will allow public input before the plan is reviewed, possibly amended, and made into law.

But, Fretuel expected there will be no changes made since Idaho's plan is both "simple" and "middle-of-the-road."

In accord with the 1972 Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, all states are now being required to develop a program to certify farmers for use of dangerous chemicals.

According to Fretuel, Idaho's plan would require most farmers who wish to use the restricted chemicals to go to a three hour "training program," put on by the University of Idaho extension. At the end of the program, true-false test will be given. After the test, farmers will be told the answers to the questions and will be able to correct their papers before sending them to receive their certification from the State Department of Agriculture, Fretuel said.

"The test per se is not supposed to be difficult. It's to re-inform what they have already learned," he said. He said that the training programs should be given in towns all across Idaho starting next winter.

Farmers also will be able to be certified by studying a manual or by studying with a tutor. In either case, a test will have to be taken following the study, Fretuel said.

He said the only growers who will have to be certified will be those who use restricted chemicals. The final list of the chemicals has not been developed yet, but must be completed by October 1976, he said.

Once certified, a farmer would stay certified, until the state decided that new technology or new problems made necessary more education programs, he said. Persons wishing to comment on the proposal, can write the Chief of the Pesticide Branch, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, 1200 Sixth Ave., Seattle, Wash. 98101.

Preliminary hearing scheduled

JEROME — A preliminary hearing is scheduled Nov. 13 for alleged kidnaper Duane Amen, 22, Paul. Amen was arrested Sept. 24 in the Snake River Canyon with his estranged wife, whom he allegedly abducted at gunpoint.

Amen is presently free on $15,000 bond and will be represented by Bush attorney Lawrence Duffin on charges of second degree kidnapping and two counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Shoshone meet tonight

SHOSHONE — The Magic Valley chapter of the Idaho Public Employees Association will meet at 8 tonight at the Shoshone Highway Shop. Communications from headquarters will be the main topic for the evening, according to Fred Braga, acting president.

Walter Hast has resigned as president of the Magic Valley chapter because of transfer to Mackay. Braga has said he does not wish to continue as acting president so a new president will have to be nominated and elected.

Hazelton men unopposed

HAZELTON — Three city councilmen here are running unopposed for re-election. Robert L. Brulke, Leven Kincald and Dan Sellers are the only three Hazelton residents to file petitions for the election.

Voters may register until Nov. 1 for the Nov. 4 election at city hall.

Burley councilman resigns

BURLEY — Jerry Vegwert resigned Monday from the Burley City Council. Vegwert tendered his resignation to Mayor Charles Shadduck about 11:15 a.m. Monday. He said he is moving outside the city limits. The resignation was effective Monday.

Vegwert explained that negotiations for purchase of the rural home were not completed until the afternoon of the day for all petitions to be filed for City Council, making it impossible to place the seat on next Tuesday's ballot.

Shadduck said he did not know who might be appointed to replace Vegwert. He said he would wait until after Tuesday's election before considering possible replacements.

Burley growth within means preferred

By SHANE O'NEILL Times-News writer

BURLEY — Growth within Burley's fiscal means was stressed Monday by several candidates for City Council.

Nine of the 10 candidates for four council seats attended a Burley Chamber of Commerce candidates' luncheon Monday.

Seven are vying for three full four-year terms. Ray Barlow, one of those seven, was not at the luncheon.

Those in attendance included incumbent Cloyd Taylor and challengers Don Chessman, James Henderson, Ralph Rasmussen, John Struchten and Steve Westfall.

Vying for a two-year seat are incumbent Leonard King and challengers David Peck and Dale Smith. Both incumbents stressed their experience and felt they could do a "good job" for Burley. King cited the hours spent learning about the operations of the various city departments.

King said he wanted to see Burley grow, but not faster than the city's finances could afford.

Appointed to the council last year, King cited the clean-up work in North Burley and said the police department is "one of the best in the state." He said that a councilman has the duty to attend every council session, both regular and special.

Taylor praised the present council as one that works well together and has been progressive. Peck, who came here from Salt Lake City and is a teacher at Burley High School, said he wanted the city to "keep its progressive and positive image."

Peck said he had learned to appreciate the personalized attention of businessmen in a smaller town.

He told chamber members he believed elected officials should serve the majority of the constituency, but allow minorities a voice, too. He said a councilman should be available to the public and ready to answer all questions, and that government should apply equally to all.

Smith called for "normal growth," but in keeping with a "clean, safe, economic type of environment."

He said the city should keep its police department upgraded and accommodate a steady growth that it pays for "without large amounts of borrowed money."

Tri-county meet slated

By CHARLOTTE BELL Times-News writer

JEROME — A second meeting of the tri-county committee studying the Snake River Canyon rim is scheduled at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Jerome County Courthouse.

The committee which includes county commissioners, planning and zoning members, interested citizens and different representatives of government organizations from Jerome, Gooding and Twin Falls, counties are attempting to correlate land-use planning along the canyon rim from Burley to the Gooding County line.

Raleigh Stevens, Hagerman, appointed chairman of the tri-county committee, said the goal of the group for the next three months is to adopt bylaws and get an advisory committee formed and functioning.

"We must be prepared to transfer to the incoming officers who will be elected in January a study group that is organized and ready and able to go forward from the point where the Twin Falls Rim Study Group so ably took us," Stevens said.

Several items will be considered at the Wednesday night meeting, including several suggestions by Stevens who has recommended the group consider following the Twin Falls study group's idea and appointing a press and media secretary who shall be the only one to make press or other media releases. According to Stevens the press secretary would not make any releases of any kind without the signature of one designated member and the chairman.

Stevens also feels the purpose of the tri-county type committee could best be served by having an alternate chairman appointed from the other two counties. "During direct discussion that applies especially to one county, then the chair should be occupied by the alternate chairman," Stevens said.

Trial date still not set

JEROME — The wheels of justice are moving slowly in the case of a Wendell man charged with assault with a deadly weapon. No trial date has been set for Rufus Tom Riley, Wendell, who has entered a plea of not guilty to the charge and was released on $1,000 bond.

Riley was arrested and charged April 5 after he allegedly fired a .357 revolver at Michael Thompson, Jerome.

According to State police reports, Thompson had been returning from Twin Falls and came up behind a slow-moving truck on the Perrine Bridge on the evening of April 5.

Thompson said he followed the truck over the bridge and up to the Lincoln Bend. He said he honked his horn at the other vehicle and then passed it.

Thompson said the truck, allegedly driven by Riley, came up behind him and a shot was fired at him through the rear window of his vehicle. He said he then forced off the road by the driver of the other vehicle who proceeded to "re-buck him out" for having passed him.

Riley was arrested later in the evening when he was found asleep in his truck west of Jerome. A preliminary hearing May 19 provided enough evidence to bind Riley over for trial on the charges.

7 candidates seek 2 Ketchum City Council seats

By BART QUESNELL Times-News writer

KETCHUM — The growth problems in this resort community have spawned a record number of candidates for the City Council.

Seven men are vying for two vacant council seats. Incumbent Jack Corroek is seeking re-election but a second incumbent, Glenn Brannen, is stepping down from the council.

The Times-News interviewed Ketchum's seven council candidates recently and a summary of the candidates' comments follows:

Jack Corroek, a building contractor, says the budget is probably the biggest problem facing Ketchum. Corroek says that "unwise decisions may have been responsible for the city of Ketchum paying out nearly $100,000 this year in the form of refunds to property owners who had paid building permit fees that were ruled too high."

Head of the street department, Corroek has projects he wants completed regarding street drainage and a long-range program of road surfacing.

"Within four years we will probably have surfaced or dust-controlled every street," he says.

The city should have its own water system, Corroek adds. He believes standpipes should be installed or better access to the river made where there is no water available through the city system.

Bert Barlow, architect

Barlow, retired processor of agricultural products, feels the Sawtooth National Recreation Area can help Ketchum solve some of its problems.

Barlow says Ketchum should get something in return from the U.S. Forest Service since the town is "the key to the SNRA."

Ketchum should push for forest service co-operation, Barlow says, and should ask SNRA officials to help in a carefully prepared plan for the city as well as seeking grants for the city.

"If the help is offered it wouldn't cost us anything and it would be up to the people to accept whatever they wanted from an SNRA plan," he adds.

The forest service, he says, has expert planners in the department working in Ketchum already and contacts in Washington which might make the collecting of federal grants easier.

Berry Kutzen, a radiologist at Moritz Community Hospital, feels the lack of money to run Ketchum is the biggest problem here.

"Money is not the entire solution but it is a partial solution," he says. "If we are going to increase services we need to raise more money."

He supports a strong push for federal grants, a bed and liquor tax.

"If we must provide services for the people who use our roads, police and fire departments, why shouldn't they pay for a fraction of the cost?" Kutzen says the tax would not be prohibitive and would probably be expected by tourists coming here based on the experience from other towns they visit.

Kutzen notes Ketchum people have said they want controlled strict growth. However, he was not sure how they would handle the continual building in the designated flood plain zone along Big Wood River.

Doug Shaw, an architect in the firm of Neil Wright, feels there is a "far, far, much, zoning in Ketchum and not enough planning."

Shaw says it is time to put plans and suggestions set forth by several completed studies to work. "Nobody wants to be wrong but that's impossible," he said. He personally feels the amount of building in Ketchum is about right. Shaw would be against a hard scale build-up scheme.

He says an architectural review board could be a good thing if it were legal. "A person running for office must be committed to giving time," Shaw says. "A person cannot take this job thinking he can just meet every Tuesday. He's got to do his homework."

Joseph Koenig, Koenig, owner and manager of the Tyrolen Lodge, is against any added tourist tax, especially bed tax, to supplement the city budget.

"Motels have always been good whipping boys," he says. "and the city couldn't control a bed tax either unless they audited all the hotels."

A tourist tax is a punishment to the person who comes to the area, Koenig feels.

He is against higher property taxes on city land because new home builders will move from the city core, decreasing the tax base, he said.

Koenig feels rent rates in Ketchum should be maintained on a supply and demand basis.

Doug Sweet, Sweet, former editor of Ketchum Tomorrow and until recently a reporter for that newspaper, thinks the present City Council is ineffective.

Sweet is running for office because "the historical actions of this City Council have been to inhibit problem-solving rather than acting as an agent to help the Ketchum community."

He views the present decision making in Ketchum as "a thing apart" from the people who voted for the present leadership.

Sweet favors added taxes for tourists mainly who use the city's facilities.

"Why not charge according to use such as a bed tax, road use tax and other services," he said. "Don't burden Ketchum with paying the overhead for the mountains and Sun Valley's profit."

Tom Dutcher, Dutcher, a self employed architect, believes the present tourist level in Ketchum is about right.

Dutcher does not advocate setting population ceilings. He would like to see less asphalt and more trees inside the city limits.

The present Ketchum-Sun Valley shared sewer system is the major problem facing the city," he said. Innovative solutions are needed, Dutcher feels, to preserve the quality of life in Ketchum.

Waste products in the sewer system should be converted to methane energy, he said. He says the project would not be any more difficult than many other projects.

"Too many people are letting Big Brother take care of them," Dutcher says. "People are lazy. We've got to start doing some of these things ourselves."

Question arises as to why cheese originally was packed in round drum-like wheels. That goes back to farmers of old who grazed their dairy herds on mountain slopes. They milked above the foothills. And they made their cheeses at the sites, storing same in caves thereabouts. The traditional great cheese of from 60 to 100 pounds was shaped into a wheel so it could be rolled downhill to the farm. Chet L. Switell told me that, too.

NO DOUBT you've seen countless cents-off coupons on countless products of countless manufacturers. But do you know who originated them? C. W. Post was the bright fellow. In 1895. He offered a one-cent discount coupon to introduce "Grape Nuts."

DOCTORS' FEES

Q. "Did you say doctors' fees had gone up 50 per cent in the last year? Incredible! Can you confirm?"

A. No, I quoted a source I now am sure was in error. Statisticians with the Health Insurance Institute and the Bureau of Labor Statistics report those doctors' fees went up 11.2 per cent from August of 1974 to August of 1975. They reportedly rose 40.1 per cent from August of 1970 to August of 1975. Dentists' fees likewise did not climb as sharply as previously reported.

ONE OUT of every 10 women on welfare is a college graduate, a recent survey shows. . . WHAT, YOU can't get that tar off your hands? Rub the spots with grapefruit, orange or lemon peel. . . SOME SCIENCE BOYS contend not more than one in 20 babies hereabouts is without white genes.
