

Carols on Halloween

By United Press International
 "Dashing through the streets," chanted a group of Waterville, Wis., high school students, keeping it in the melody of "Jingle Bells."
 "What fun it is to trick or treat, and sing pumpkin carols tonight."
 With that, they hoped, a new tradition was born — carols on Halloween instead of trick-or-treating.
 In Delaware, Gov. Sherman W. Tribbitt and the mayors of several cities tried to revise the mood of the mischievous holiday. They urged that "trick or treat" be changed to "meet 'n' treat" to, in Tribbitt's words, "make this a happy and safe occasion."

Malaria bout nearly over

CHOBE, Botswana (UPI) — Richard Burton's bout with malaria reportedly is almost over.
 The Welsh actor contracted the disease during his honeymoon with Elizabeth Taylor in the Chobe game park in remote Northern Botswana.
 Miss Taylor's personal doctor flew in to treat Burton after the actor was bitten by a malaria mosquito earlier this week and caught the disease. He reportedly had forgotten to take a weekly antimalaria pill.

Jack-o-lantern contest

HALLOWEEN at Magee Valley Memorial Hospital is being observed by a jack-o-lantern making contest for the various departments.

Here is a sample of the pumpkin cutting skills of some of the not so surgical talent. The contest entries are on display in the hospital cafeteria.

Deep water test wells OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interior Department announced today it has given preliminary approval for two deep water oil and gas test wells to be drilled in the Atlantic Ocean off the New Jersey and New England coasts.
 It was the first time the government has given approval for test drilling on the Atlantic outer Continental Shelf, a spokesman for Interior's U.S. Geological Survey said.
 Initial approval for the tests — one for the Baltimore Canyon area off the New Jersey coast and one off the George's Bank area of New England — was granted to the Ocean Production Co., operator for the Continental Offshore Stratigraphic Test group.

Aide gets Eagle badge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Robert Hartmann, President Ford's chief business and longtime political adviser, has received the Distinguished Eagle Scout Award.
 Hartmann was honored Thursday at a banquet sponsored by a local Boy Scouts unit.
 Special guests at the affair included Roy Ashe, former budget director, and Robert Finch, former HEW secretary and counselor to President Nixon.

Stevenson eyes candidacy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Sen. Adlai Stevenson may become the 10th Democrat to enter the race for the presidential nomination. At least he is thinking about it.
 He is being urged by Chicago Democratic leaders to make a bid for the nomination, but is undecided, his office said Thursday.

An aide said the senator "has not made up his mind and is in the process of trying to make a decision."
 Two days ago, the county's Democratic organization adopted a resolution urging Stevenson to join the race.

Cargo ship processed

By United Press International
 For the first time since 1959, Egyptian authorities today were processing a ship bearing cargo for Israel in preparation for its journey down the Suez Canal, possibly Saturday.
 After a one-day delay, the 6,352-ton Greek freighter Olympos dropped anchor outside Port Said harbor and instructed its shipping agent to begin the transfer of funds to pay the canal tolls.

Only one day to register

TWIN FALLS — With one day remaining to sign up, only 1,732 persons are registered to vote in the upcoming City Council elections.
 That means just over 10 per cent of eligible voters in the city will be able to vote in the Nov. 4 election.

Six candidates are vying for four City Council seats, including incumbents Leon Smith, Stephen Bancroft and Stephen Lincoln, and Margaret K. Youtz, Chris Talkington and Gordon H. Cox.
 During the last municipal election in 1973 there were 3,428 persons registered to vote, many more than registered for this election.
 City residents may still register Saturday at city hall from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Protest rally asked

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. Hugh Carey wants New York City residents to stage mass protest rallies against "a kick in the groin" — his term for President Ford's promise to veto any federal help for the city.
 Carey said Ford's decision has assured bankruptcy for New York, but city officials still worked on a last-ditch plan to borrow $4 billion by using city workers' pension funds as collateral.
 Mayor Abraham Beame said chances for success of the borrowing scheme were slim, and a spokesman said there was some question whether it would be legal, due to restrictions on the use of pension funds.
 At a news conference Thursday, Carey said, "We're going to take a day and turn out for New York City in Times Square or Central Park and sound off on behalf of a great city."

Spain hails prince

MADRID (UPI) — With Madrid newspapers treating him as if he already were King Prince Juan Carlos presided over a 60-hour cabinet meeting today in his first official duty as acting chief of state. Generalissimo Francisco Franco, 82, already near death, developed peritonitis.
 Medical experts said peritonitis, an inflammation of the abdominal membrane, can be grave and can cause death swiftly if not treated quickly with antibiotics. But the bulletin did not term Franco's condition either "critical" or even "grave."
 The latest bulletin said there is no change in his general condition and indicated no change in this new development. His doctors reported Franco conscious and with no fever.

Although Juan Carlos' assumption of power is regarded as the end of 36 years of rightwing dictatorial rule by the aged Castillo he still cannot become king until Franco dies. But today's cabinet meeting confirmed him as acting chief of state to take up such matters as the continuing threat of war with Morocco or Algeria over their claims to the Spanish Sahara.
 There were signs that the country was ready not merely for a temporary but a permanent changeover.
 The Madrid newspaper Ya, which speaks for the Roman Catholic church in Spain, urged the prince to lose no time in launching far-reaching political reforms.

Aides mum on dismissal

BY CRICKET BIRD
 TWIN FALLS — Key figures in the controversy surrounding Twin Falls city-county planner David Richey today were reluctant to discuss details of Richey's dismissal.
 Jack Muldoon, chairman of the joint planning council, said he had not received a letter of resignation as yet from Richey as the council had recessed Thursday.
 But he added he anticipated Richey would comply with the council's request.
 "He's been a real gentleman about it," Muldoon said.
 Richey, contacted at the planning office today, said he didn't care to make a statement.
 "It's been trying the last two days," Richey said. "I guess I'm worn, and I just don't want to comment."
 Council members Joe Fehrenbacher, Clyde Vannausden and J.A. Clawson refused to comment when asked the reason the council requested Richey's resignation.
 Muldoon said the reason for the council's request "comes back to communications."
 "I initiated the action," Muldoon said. "I talked to Dave that evening after the article in the paper."
 Richey had strongly criticized real estate interests and city officials in an interview printed Wednesday in the Times-News.
 Muldoon said the council met, without city or county interference, and supported the request for Richey's resignation. "They acted on their own," he commented.
 Ann Cover, county commissioner and member of the joint planning council, also credited "poor communications" as the cause for Richey's dismissal, but she declined to be more specific.
 Asked if the news story could have precipitated the action, she said, "Could be, yes."
 Muldoon praised Richey's saying, "He's done a real service to Twin Falls," and added that as planner Richey had collected much valuable information.
 "It's really the public relations and communications that prompted the joint council's action," Muldoon said.
 The council hopes for "a fluid transition," Muldoon said, and plans to meet next week to discuss a "calendar for replacement" of the planner.

Working parents may get tax aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted today to expand child care tax breaks for working parents, regardless of their income.
 The tax-writing committee's action would increase by $10 million the child care tax credit that it approved earlier as part of a new tax revision bill that is expected to go to the House floor — possibly by the week of Nov. 10.
 However, the committee rejected an attempt to end or scale back the federal tax deduction for state and local gasoline taxes. The panel voted earlier to make no changes in the popular deduction.
 The motions came as the committee all but wrapped up its drafting sessions on the bill, which also includes individual and corporate tax reductions. Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said he hoped to complete action on the bill Tuesday.

 Under the revised child-care tax credit, proposed by Rep. Martha Keys, D-Kan., 20 per cent of child care payments necessary for both parents to work could be subtracted directly from tax bills up to $2,000 in expenses for one child — a maximum $400 tax cut — or $4,000 in expenses for two or more children — a maximum $800 tax saving. The credit could be taken regardless of income.
 The committee earlier voted a 15 per cent credit with maximums of $2,400 and $4,800, but changed its decision because it would have actually penalized some parents who take current child care deductions.
 The committee action will allow an estimated 2 million additional taxpayers to claim the deductions.

Gooding boy, 3, killed; father hurt in blaze

By DAVID HORSMAN
 Times-News writer
 GOODING — A 3-year-old Gooding boy was killed and his father seriously burned in a pre-dawn house fire here today.
 The boy, Frank Edward Bolton Jr., died in a bedroom of the log house at 425 Michigan St.
 The father, Frank Edward Bolton, 27, suffered second and third degree burns over a large portion of his body when he reportedly attempted to save the child. He is in critical condition at Magee Valley Memorial Hospital.
 Bolton's wife, Maria, 24, and 4-month-old son, Daniel, escaped the blaze. Mrs. Bolton was treated and released at Gooding Memorial Hospital.
 The fire was reported at 5:28 a.m. but when Gooding volunteer firemen arrived three minutes later, the home was engulfed in flames.
 The blaze was brought under control about 6 a.m. but the boy's body was not recovered until about 7 a.m., Gooding Fire Chief Jack Waldschmidt said. The boy was "burned beyond recognition" but "I would imagine it was smoke inhalation that killed him," he added.
 Waldschmidt said he was told by a policeman when he arrived that young Bolton apparently was still in the house.
 He attempted to get to the boy but was driven back by the intense blaze. "I tried to go around to a side window but it was so hot that no one could get in there," Waldschmidt told the Times-News.
 After the fire was brought under control it took several minutes to fully extinguish the smoldering remains and search the rubble for the boy, he said.

 Young Bolton was found "in the bedroom on the floor about four feet west of where the bed was," Waldschmidt said. "He was lying at the opposite side of the room from where the door was."
 The two-bedroom home's walls were left standing but the roof collapsed during the fire, according to Waldschmidt.
 He said the blaze apparently was caused by a faulty heater. "It looks like that was where the fire originated. Some neighbors said he (Bolton) had been working on the heater."
 Mrs. Lola Colson, Jerome, a sister of Mrs. Bolton, said she had talked with Mrs. Bolton about the family's discovery of and flight from the fire.
 "She said she just heard a loud pop and Ed (the father) said the house was on fire," Mrs. Colson told the Times-News. "She said the flames were just everywhere and she grabbed the baby and ran out."
 "Ed tried to get into Frankie's room" but was stopped by the flames, according to Mrs. Colson. He then attempted to enter windows in the house but was again driven back, she said. He reportedly also suffered some cuts in the rescue attempt.
 Waldschmidt said two Gooding Fire Department engines and a utility vehicle from Wendell reported to the blaze. Fifteen Gooding firemen and two Wendell firemen fought the fire, he said.
 "The only thing you can do on a fire like that is try to protect your exposures (nearby structures)," Waldschmidt said. "The house was entirely gone."

Coal slurry pipeline planned through S. Idaho

BY BILL LAZARUS
 Times-News Writer
 TWIN FALLS — A coal slurry pipeline through Southern Idaho is being planned to connect Wyoming coal fields to coal-fired power plants in Oregon, Washington and Idaho.
 One slurry line plan alternative calls for interbasin transfer of Snake River water to Gillette, Wyo., where the water would be used to flush pulverized coal westward. The line would require about 7,500 acre feet of water a year.
 Northwest Pipeline Corp., out of Salt Lake City, and Gulf Interstate Engineering Co., Houston, Tex., have been planning the coal slurry line for about a year, according to Harry Eaton, vice president of Gulf Interstate Engineering.
 Eaton said in a telephone interview Thursday that the line would carry 7 to 10 million tons of coal a year and would primarily serve utilities.

Price raised
 Rapidly rising production, newsprint and delivery costs make it necessary to increase Times-News subscription prices.
 Beginning Nov. 1, subscriptions will be $4 a month.
 Paperbacks and girls will receive 20 per cent of the increase and rural route girls will receive 30 per cent.
 Another 25 per cent of the increase will go for state sales tax not previously required by the state.

with coal-fired power plants. He said plans are still "very preliminary."
 Possible customers include Idaho Power's proposed Pioneer plant near Boise and two power plants planned by other utilities near Boardman, Ore., Eaton said. He said Northwest and Gulf Interstate has "had conversations" with the utilities but no definite plans have been made yet.
 Also, he said, major industries along the Columbia River which want to switch from natural gas to coal would be likely customers.
 The underground line would range from 20 to 26 inches in diameter. The line would parallel the Snake River, running near Pocatello, Twin Falls and Boise, Eaton said.
 The line is estimated to cost from $300 million to $500 million in total. It would stretch about 400 miles from the Powder River Basin in Northeastern Wyoming to the Boardman, Ore. area or about 800 miles from Rock Springs in Southeastern Wyoming, to Boardman.

 Coal "ground to the consistency of sugar" and water would be pumped through the slurry line by up to 36 huge 2,000-horsepower pumps to "dewatering plants" at delivery points, Eaton said. Because of the high cost of delivery, a customer would have to use at least 2 million tons of coal a year to make a branch line economically feasible, he said.
 About equal portions of coal and water would be pumped through the line. If the slurry carries 10 million tons of coal a year it would need 10 million tons of water or about 7,500 acre feet a year, Eaton said.

Midnight Mary's headstone

Midnight Mary may stroll tonight

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — A restless spirit is said to rise at midnight from a great pink granite gravestone in a local cemetery.
 They call her Midnight Mary. And on this Halloween night it is thought she may join the other spirits for a stroll amid the shadows of the century-old oaks and maples.
 The stone from which the tales say she rises stands near the gate-spiked black iron gate which clangs shut at sunset after the chapel bell has tolled 10 times.
 Among the tales which have grown about the Evergreen Cemetery in the 103 years since Midnight Mary was laid to rest, one tells of a horse and wagon driven by the cemetery in the hour of night, sinking into the earth to disappear forever.
 Another recalls a young man who stood midnight vigil by the tomb. His body, the tale goes, was found the next day rigid in fear — his clothes snagged in bushes.
 But the most ghostly legend of all tells of the death of Mary herself. The story goes that she fell unconscious, victim of a rare disease that

Wanted criminal arraignment set

PEORIA, Ill. (UPH) — Convicted double-murderer William Lewis Herron Jr., 29, one of the FBI's 10 most wanted criminals, was captured Thursday and is to be arraigned on federal kidnaping charges today.
 A spokesman for the FBI said Herron escaped from the Kentucky state penitentiary in Eddyville last April 11, using a prison guard and a fellow inmate as hostages. The federal charges stem from that escape. Both hostages were later found unharmed, handcuffed in a tree.
 Authorities said Herron, heavy set and bearded, was arrested when police stopped his car on Peoria's South Side near a junior high school. They declined to say how they knew he was in the area.
 A spokesman said Herron was to be arraigned before a U.S. magistrate and returned to Kentucky to face the kidnaping charges unless he challenges extradition.

Traffic congestion ills concern 125 at hearing

BY CRICKET BIRD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — About 125 people turned out Thursday night to listen to highway department solutions to congestion problems on Blue Lakes Boulevard North and at North Five Points.

Many Twin Falls residents offered solutions to the Blue Lakes and North Five Points problems.

Norman Tarter brought applause from the audience when he told the Idaho Department of Transportation representatives "I'd like to commend you folks on the plans you have here tonight," and added they were the best he'd seen after attending several such meetings.

"I say let's go," Tarter urged, and the audience clapped. Engineers plan the widening of Blue Lakes Boulevard North between North Five Points and Pole Line Road to permit four lanes and a 14-foot-wide median strip for left turns.

At Filer, Falls and Pole Line the road would be further widened to permit turning bays. The department would have to purchase right-of-way along Blue Lakes to permit widening the street.

The department also proposes to shut off Blue Lakes Boulevard at North Five Points, creating a four-legged intersection and shunting traffic down Shoshone Street to Ninth Avenue North before moving it back over to Blue Lakes.

In addition, the department proposes to buy right-of-way at Pole Line Road for an eventual two-level full diamond interchange. The total program would probably cost about $5 million, with the state bearing most of the cost.

Engineer Ev Kidner, making the division's proposal, told the audience "provisions for bicycles and pedestrians would have to be made."

But asked later if bike paths and sidewalks would definitely be included in the re-done street, he answered, "I'll have to hedge on that one."

He said sidewalks would be replaced where they exist now and could be added in areas which don't have them now for "safety reasons."

"I really think they can be put in there," he said, and added, "We definitely want to consider providing bike paths."

Responding to a question by Jean Miller, Twin Falls city manager, Howard Johnson, highway district engineer, admitted that even with the support of the city and its residents, it would be "four or five years, anyway, for completion of the first stages."

A man in the audience murmured, "Too long," and others seemed to share his feeling.

Most of the questions from the audience centered on the proposed solution to the congestion at North Five Points. Few, if any, persons disputed the need for turn bays and a widened street.

Jerry Gasser questioned the sagacity of closing of Blue Lakes Boulevard, which he said was "one of our better straight arteries existing into and out of Twin Falls."

Several persons suggested that left hand turn phases in the signal lights at North Five Points might solve the problem, but highway engineers said they felt only closing off one leg of the intersection would bring a significant improvement.

Closing of Blue Lakes will mean "a gain of 30 to 40 per cent in the intersection's ability to carry the traffic," Kidner told the audience.

Other persons questioned the idea of moving the additional traffic down Shoshone where a signal light would be used at Ninth Avenue North. Otto Florence Jr. told the group another congested five-point intersection would be created where Ninth Avenue crosses Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Vernon Hixon asked engineers, "If we have 12,000 cars going down Shoshone, why add 6,000 more?" The engineers had said the daily count on Shoshone is 12,000 vehicles with 6,000 using Blue Lakes Boulevard.

Kenneth Poe, who first told the group he had "fully intended not to say anything," suggested that Shoshone Street be closed, and drew applause from the audience.

But Howard Allen, of the downtown merchants group, countered that he felt this solution would be unattractive to merchants.

Others commented on the need for larger curb cuts to facilitate access to shopping centers and other businesses.

Engineers hedged on a question by Gasser concerning plans for exits and entrances to the new Albertsons store at North Five Points.

Johnson said the division had been in touch with Albertsons and was working with them on plans, but said the division does not control where curb cuts are placed.

Planner failed political test

Twin Falls City-County planner David Richey has been given the ax. The decision to request his resignation came less than a day after Richey's last strong criticism of those he believes have been trying to scuttle the planning effort and get him fired. There are at least two sides to the Richey controversy. Richey sees it as a struggle between a planner's high ideals and local forces, particularly real estate interests, which want to make money from poor planning. Others, including many of Richey's critics, see Richey as an incurably impractical planner who is unable to bend to the wishes or needs of the community. They cite his inability to communicate with those involved in the planning process. They are particularly irritated by Richey's public criticisms of those involved in the planning process. Richey also believes there is a split between the "people" want and what is wanted by public officials and the interest groups which influence them. He believes the wishes of the people for a strong plan are being forgotten in order to cater to land developers and other interests. Richey's critics, including public officials and developers, think this talk is hogwash. They suspect Richey's prolonged attempts to involve the general public were a delaying tactic designed to keep the planner employed for as long as possible. They deny there is any clear split between the public's will and what the public officials and others seek. They say everyone wants the best possible plan for the community.

In the final analysis, Richey became an embarrassment to his employers, and he was removed. In our judgment, Richey should have been fired. His basic problem was his inability to understand the planning process as a political process. Obviously there will be two major sets of constituencies involved in planning. First, the general public has a vested interest in the overall quality of life in the community. This general public interest isn't likely to move many citizens to attend planning meetings, but it is nevertheless a real factor which must be considered by those involved. The planner's second constituency is the vested interests. This talk is hogwash. They suspect Richey's prolonged attempts to involve the general public were a delaying tactic designed to keep the planner employed for as long as possible. They deny there is any clear split between the public's will and what the public officials and others seek. They say everyone wants the best possible plan for the community.

To some extent the desires of these separate constituencies will be different. The general public wants a beautiful city surrounded by open farmland. But specific people may want to live in the country, so they will want to build houses here, and somebody will want to sell them those houses and the land they own. What Richey failed to understand is that there is nothing evil or malevolent about such competing interests. Any community made up of a wide diversity of viewpoints and financial interests. Often these interests come in conflict. An effective planner does not lament the fact that he serves different people with different desires. Instead, he would try to hammer out some sort of workable compromise among the various viewpoints and interests. The final compromise would have to have a broad enough base of support to be effective. It is clear that planning, then, is a political process. Richey was unable to deal with the political aspects of the task. We doubt he would ever have been able to forge a compromise plan with enough support to be useful. But even if Richey is not adept politically, he does have much to say of value about the planning needs of the community. For example, he is correct when he talks about the need for general public input into the planning process. If the public is not involved, the planning process surely will be taken over by the special interests. Richey is right in his emphasis on protecting rural farmland from encroachment by urban sprawl. His proposal that farms be defined as 10 acres or more in an attempt to prevent uncontrolled development on land zoned for farming predictably drew howls from those seeking to develop such land. Still, the 10-acre plan or even something stricter will be needed to stop the bulldozing of Twin Falls. Our hope is that a more politically astute planner with some of Richey's vision can be hired to get on with the task. We need a tough, broad based, strongly supported comprehensive plan if we are going to shape our community's future.

Quick OK on rules haunts examiners

BY RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE (UPI) — Even though proposed new state moving expense regulations lay on their desks for three weeks the Board of Examiners approved them last July without thoroughly reading them. Judging from their reaction to a couple of the regulations at a meeting Wednesday it would appear they are sorry the regulations slipped past them in the form they did. Among other goodies contained in the regulations are payment of up to $2,000 in real estate broker's fees — plus actual title insurance and two appraisals — if employees must sell their homes to accept transfers. Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, chairman of the board, was the first to acknowledge he was unaware of that provision. After the meeting, Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell and Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa also acknowledged they were not aware of it. How does it happen that three high elected officials will put their personal stamp of approval — without more than a cursory review — on regulations that will cost the taxpayers money? One reason, offered by Andrus: they are too busy. They are asked to sign large sheafs of documents every day and must rely on the advice of aides familiar with their contents. Another, offered by Cenarrusa: they are too quick to rely on committees, as they did in this case. A committee headed by Transportation Director Darrell Manning drafted the regulations and sent them to State Auditor Joe R. Williams, the board's non-voting secretary.

Williams' staff said it copied them and circulated them among board members at Andrus' suggestion. About three weeks later, each of the board members signed them. They were shown as approved in the minutes of the Aug. 11 board meeting. "Sometimes we act hastily," Cenarrusa said, suggesting the board took more time with matters of this sort. "We've all probably learned a lesson," Kidwell said. "We probably should not rely on committees as much as we do in government." On Kidwell's motion the board has called for review of these regulations and companion regulations on travel expenses by representatives of the auditor's and attorney general's offices — both for clarity and substance. Williams tried to get the board to change the travel regulations — which he considers unworkable as the moving regulations — but the board rejected his suggestions. He tried to get the committee to change the moving regulations and again was turned down. Andrus accuses that the board members are busy men — and his comparison of these regulations to unread approval of a routine stack of engineering reports approved by the board — is interesting. Service on this board is one of the duties of the officers. The members have found time to be quick to dictate internal operations of agencies — even so far as to approve routine destruction of outdated records or sale of old, worn out motor vehicles. Yet, they haven't sufficient time to read through proposed regulations that will affect financial interests of all state employees? This, indeed, seems strange. It sounds a bit like many legislators who claim they lack the time to read all the bills and therefore go along with fellow lawmakers who have expertise in various fields. A lot of bad legislation gets enacted into law that way. And the voting members of this board know that. All are former legislators.

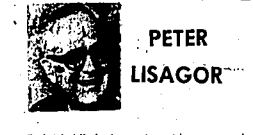

Echoes: From the political past... Andrus not only has buried the hatchet with his old Democratic Party political nemesis, H. Max Hanson, he has found him a job, Hanson went to work Aug. 1 in a newly created, exempt position of "assistant in management" at the State Department of Agriculture. He is paid $1,303 a month for his services. Hanson is an erstwhile legislator, chief clerk of the House and candidate for governor and Congress. He quit a job as state director for the federal Farmers Home Administration in 1966 to run against Andrus for the party nomination for governor after the nominee that year, Charles Herndon, died in a plane crash. Andrus beat him by a single vote at a bloody central committee meeting and later lost the election to Republican Don Samuelson.

Anwar applying pressure

Chicago Daily News
WASHINGTON — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat doesn't have to be pushed too hard to admit he would like to acquire U.S. military aid. He was edged ever closer to a public assertion of his need for American arms by dwelling on the history of his relations with the U.S. and Russia as suppliers of military hardware to Egypt. While disclaiming that military assistance is his top priority in talks with President Ford and other top U.S. officials, the Egyptian visitor said, "The question of arms must be studied very carefully, and we need a decision on it in the near future." Students of diplomatic nuances saw in that statement a stronger indication of a possible agreement in principle on U.S. arms aid than either U.S. or Egyptian officials have hitherto admitted. Apart from the military aid question, Sadat was adding pressures on Uncle Sam to take a livelier role in other areas: opening a "dialog" with the Palestine Liberation Organization, promoting negotiations between Israel and Syria in disengagement on the Golan Heights, and moving toward a Geneva conference in which an over-all settlement in the Middle East might be reached. An agreement between Israel and Syria is an "essential" next step, he told a news conference, and "no one can do it except the U.S." In every statement, loud, news conference remark, Sadat has sounded the same refrain: The U.S. has "most of the cards," which means the power, influence and wherewithal to bring Israel along. The survival of Israel, from "butter to bread to guns," depends upon the United States, he has said. On the issue of arms aid, Sadat had joined U.S. officials in walking around a mine field in which an over-all settlement in the Middle East might be reached. He recalled that in 1955, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles recommended a halt in U.S. aid because the Cairo government turned to Russia for aid in building the Aswan Dam. Egypt was forced to obtain arms from the Soviet bloc "up until lately," he said. After the Russian refusal to replace the arms, Egypt lost the 1957 war, Sadat said, he found himself "in a very peculiar position." The Russians furnished Syria with advanced weapons and the United States supplied Israel with "more sophisticated arms."

Asked about the effectiveness of his armed forces in the light of being refused adequate replacements by Moscow, Sadat said that "up to this moment, I am in a good position." However, he quickly noted that with the U.S. supply of sophisticated weapons to Israel, "the balance is not proper now." Clearly, Sadat doesn't want to press openly for specific arms shipments now, realizing Washington's problems with Israel and the U.S. Congress. But it is equally clear that he wants at least a tacit decision from the Ford administration that it will deal with his desire fairly promptly. Sadat bridled when asked if he was ready to pressure the PLO to accept U.S. resolutions certifying the "existence of Israel." "I'm not ready at all to put pressure on the PLO for the very simple reason they have been denied everything for 27 years," he said. "If I put pressure on anybody, it will be on the U.S." Sadat said the U.S. and Egypt obviously disagreed on the U.N. vote to brand Zionism as a form of racism. "You must not ask me that. In every aspect, we must agree. We will differ," he said. The Egyptian visitor said he considered his visit an "utmost success" in the opportunity provided him to meet with the American people and to exchange views with U.S. officials.

After the Russian refusal to replace the arms, Egypt lost the 1957 war, Sadat said, he found himself "in a very peculiar position." The Russians furnished Syria with advanced weapons and the United States supplied Israel with "more sophisticated arms." Sadat said he then decided to diversify the source of Egyptian arms, "to break the monopoly." And he added that he would like to buy arms from the United States, Western Europe and the Soviet Union "if available." He said again he had brought "no shopping list" with him, but that he had discussed the problem with Ford and other top officials "in outline form." He also said of his arms dilemma, that "I am putting this before the American people."

American annals

By Encyclopaedia Britannica
Although political parties were not in existence until the late 18th century, James Madison early recognized their role. In every political society, parties are unavoidable. A difference of interests, real or supposed, is the most natural and fruitful source of them. The great object should be to combat the evil: (1) by establishing a political equality among all; (2) by withholding unnecessary opportunities from a few to increase the inequality of property by an immoderate, and especially an unmerited accumulation of riches; (3) by the silent operation of laws, which, without violating the rights of property, reduce extreme wealth toward a state of mediocrity and raise extreme indigence toward a state of comfort; (4) by abstaining from measures which operate differently on different interests, and particularly such as favor one interest at the expense of another; (5) by making one party a check on the other, so far as the existence of parties cannot be prevented; (6) by their views accommodated. It is this is not the language of reason. It is that of republicanism.

Discipline decision immediate

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has handed down another of those "O tempora! O Mores!" rulings in affirming a lower-court decision that corporal punishment of public school students is constitutional so long as it is administered with certain safeguards. At issue was a North Carolina law challenged by the mother of a sixth grader who was paddled by his teacher for misbehaving on the playground. Although upholding the law, the lower court decreed that spankings could be administered only after teachers had tried other means to control student behavior and after "clear warnings" that certain conduct would be punished by the rod. The lower court also said a second school official must be present to witness the punishment and hear briefly any protests the pupil may present. Gosh all hemlock, at least one teacher would have run away and made a killing in Wall Street had such conditions been imposed at St. Mary's School in Southbridge, Mass. Sister Gregory presided over the seventh grade with a velvet-hand armed with an 18-inch steel-tipped ruler. She was much beloved by her charges because she was bright and witty and could throw a football 80 yards on target. But said charges also were an anarchic lot, and she would have been defenseless without that rod and the authority to use it promptly.

ANDREW TULLY

At St. Mary's, the pupil knew that punishment for misbehavior was swift and sure. There were no round table discussions about guilt or innocence. Sister's arm came up and the ruler came down. Nor could the pupil hope that the authorities would blame his parents for his misdeeds. In that naive age, it was the kid who was punished, not his mama or papa. The sprout was held responsible for his crime; no parental accessories were named in the indictment. In fact, the vast majority of parents stood with the school authorities. It was no good complaining to the hearthside court of appeals. If you were lucky, your folks merely upheld Sister Gregory's punishment. More often than not, the male parent delivered a casual cuff of his own or sentence you to an hour at the woodpile. I never understood how Sister Gregory could be so sweet and yet so tough. Not for her the whole across a child's head with a well-padded behind. She used the ruler where it hurt — on the knuckles of both hands. When she was in top form, an unruly pupil would feel the effects the rest of the day. She was swift, fearless and impartial. Leo Buchanan, an amiable giant who outweighed her by at least 75 pounds, got his, and so did a superb athlete named Nancy Palmerino and the speedy, cunning and agile Vinny Walsh. Even Marjorie Price, the most beautiful girl in school, felt the ruler, and Marie Dodd, a witty, scholarly, early-day Marya Manass.

There were occasional parent-teacher conferences but these were designed chiefly to devise new ways of maintaining law and order. I recall only one occasion when a parent of mine disagreed with Sister Gregory, and that was on a literary matter. Sister was waxing enthusiastic about the works of John Boyle O'Reilly, a tedious Irish writer much favored by the Catholic education bureaucracy. "Pa" listened her out, but when Sister had taken her departure he exploded. "John Boyle O'Reilly!" he thundered. "No wonder we Irish produce so many saloonkeepers!"

"Trust me!"

Crowded school bus

FOUR afternoons a week bus No. three from Harrison School is overloaded by 20 to 30 students, the result of students taking the bus home from school when they could safely walk, according to Richard Kirkman, owner of the Twin Falls school bus line.

TF school bus driver says overload situation problem

By LINDA LEE
Times-News Staff Writer

TWIN FALLS — When the school bell rings each afternoon at Harrison Elementary over 100 kids usually run out to catch school bus No. three.

The problem is the load capacity of bus three is only 73 students.

At least four nights a week bus three leaves Harrison overloaded by 20 to 30 children.

According to bus driver Glenn Welch, the overcrowding is caused by children who live within a mile and a half of Harrison School and could walk safely to and from class, but ride the bus instead.

When asked why she didn't close the bus door when her load limit was reached, Welch explained that some kids who need the bus service might be left behind.

Richard Kirkman, owner of the school bus service, says some students living on Falls Avenue East have been given permission by the Idaho Transportation Department to ride the bus even though they live less than a mile and a half from school.

The reason, Kirkman explained, is that the children must cross the busy Washington Street if they walk to school.

According to Kirkman and Welch the massive overloading occurs because other children in that same neighborhood also get on the bus even though they do not have to cross the busy street to get to school.

Realizing the safety problem involved with so many kids on one bus, Kirkman has arranged for bus four which operates at Robert Stuart Junior High to stop at Harrison to pick up some of the overflow kids who live on Falls Avenue.

However, Welch said because bus four arrives five to ten minutes later, kids don't want to wait and crowd on to bus three.

Kirkman says he cannot expect bus driver Welch to stand in front of bus three and sort out children who can ride from those who can't ride. He says parents should have the responsibility to see their children do not ride the bus unless they have to cross Washington Street on the way to school.

He says bus four does not drive the same route as bus three and therefore certain students who need to ride bus three cannot be left behind to ride bus four.

School bus records show that the overload situation occurs only four afternoons a week, and not in the mornings. Kirkman says the average morning load for bus three is 70 and the average load on crowded afternoons is 106.

Welch says on Wednesday afternoons 25 children go to church functions at the LDS Church across the street from Harrison School.

Kirkman suggests one solution for the bus overload. He says students should have bus passes marked with their name and the bus they should ride. But he says to do this will require the cooperation of the schools.

Originally, Kirkman says 18 children on Falls Avenue East were given permission to ride the bus but now 80 students from that area ride bus three.

"I know everyone is going to cremate me for this," Kirkman says. "But I can't solve it without school and parent help."

Snow halts timber cutting

TWIN FALLS — No more wood or timber cutting will be permitted in the South Hills for the remainder of this year because of snow.

Lewis Munson, Twin Falls district ranger for the Sawtooth National Forest, said all wood cutting permits have been canceled and no new permits will be issued either for fire wood or timber because roads are snow covered and most cutting areas are inaccessible.

TEACH workshop slated Sunday

TWIN FALLS — TEACH, a workshop on the latest hair styles, will be sponsored by the Idaho State Hair Fashion Committee Sunday at the Holiday Inn.

The workshop features the newest and difficult styling method of permanent waving and will be open to all beauticians. It will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

TF suit names Knievel

TWIN FALLS — A suit has been filed in Fifth Judicial District Court here by Twin Falls County seeking payment of damages alleged to have resulted from the Evel Knievel Snake River Canyon Jump last year.

County Pres. Atty. William Hollifield filed the suit on behalf of the county naming Evel Knievel, the Snake River Enterprises Inc. and United Pacific Insurance Co. as defendants.

The action charges Knievel applied for a large gathering license under the Twin Falls County ordinance regulating such events. The license which was issued for the canyon jump in September, 1974, required a bond be posted by the license applicant for the protection of the county against possible damages and accidents.

The bond in the amount of $10,000 was provided by United Pacific Insurance Co. for Knievel and his Snake River Enterprises Inc.

Hollifield asks the court for a judgment against the defendants in the amount of $5,739.75 plus interest and another $3,000 for attorney fees.

He charges Knievel has refused to make payment or to authorize payment by the bonding company for claims against him as a result of the canyon jump attempt.

Included in the claims are a claim of the city of Twin Falls for damages and clean-up to public facilities in the amount of $4,956.50; a claim from the Twin Falls Highway district for special road services, $300, and a claim from Magie Valley Memorial Hospital for $503.25 for medical treatment of persons injured in connection with the canyon jump and unable or unwilling to pay medical costs.

1,250 Americans willing to serve on task force

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 1,250 Americans have written or telephoned the U.S. government to say they are interested in serving on the 200-man task force that will monitor Israeli and Egyptian military movements in the Sinai.

About 200 have applied through their congressmen in an attempt to secure a bit of leverage. Others have written to various agencies asking for application forms. Still others have sent letters spelling out their technical qualifications.

Between 20 and 30 a day are calling the State Department for information.

Congress approved creation of the Sinai Desert unit in votes Oct. 8 and 9 as part of the recent interim agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Both countries insisted Americans man the monitoring stations. They considered the United States was the only country in which they had sufficient confidence for this singular peace-keeping role. Israel went so far as to delay final signature of the agreement until Congress approved the program.

Both Israel and Egypt will rely on the monitoring unit to sound the alarm if either gives any sign of violating the agreement. The unit will be located in the middle of the UN buffer zone separating Israel and Egyptian forces.

The State Department, where the job applications end up, is for the moment leaving analysis of them to a task force which Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is expected to establish soon. It will write the job specifications and recruit the 200.

Among the names on Kissinger's desk to head the task force is that of Jack H. Vaughan, formerly assistant secretary of state for Inter-American Affairs, ambassador to Panama and Colombia and one-time director of the Peace Corps. He meets Requirement Number One that the director, like all the recruits, should be undeniably nonmilitary, with no intelligence agency connections.

The task force had been expected to be in business by now and to have made recommendations to help President Ford estimate the amount of money he will need to recruit, equip and pay the 200.

Doctors earn more than $100,000 on Medicaid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government says 207 doctors earned more than $100,000 each from Medicaid last year for treating low-income patients.

Federal welfare officials said they had no way of knowing whether any of the incomes involved fraud, but asked state officials to audit these doctors' claims to determine if they were valid.

Medicaid is a federal-state program of subsidized medical care for needy persons of all ages. In 1974 the program reimbursed 99,117 doctors for providing medical services, which means that less than two-tenths of one per cent of the doctors earned more than $100,000 from their Medicaid practices.

The $100,000-plus physicians were located in the District of Columbia (seven doctors) and 16 states: Alabama, 1; California, 59; Georgia, 7;

Hawaii, 1; Indiana, 2; Michigan, 18; Mississippi, 8; New Jersey, 13; New Mexico, 1; New York, 53; Ohio, 2; Oklahoma, 1; Pennsylvania, 4; Texas, 28; Washington state, 1; and Wisconsin, 1.

The top single one-year reimbursement of $451,156 went to a New York state physician. Departing from previous practice, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said it would publicly identify the high-earning doctors by name and address within the next few weeks. HEW routinely has provided such information to congressional committees.

In response to a Freedom of Information Act request by the New York Daily News, HEW released the names and addresses of 13 New Jersey doctors with Medicaid incomes over $100,000 last year.

Americans fed up with US economic conditions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans are fed up with economic conditions and they are ready to try radical new approaches — even if it means sacrificing luxuries and dreams.

That is what a panel of pollsters told the Congressional Joint Economic Committee Thursday after sampling the mood of America in recent weeks and months.

They found Americans deeply pessimistic about the quality of life and the ability of established institutions to improve it.

No longer, said veteran opinion-taker Lou Harris, are Americans gripped with a "predatory, greedy, parochial interest."

Either, he said, they want quality in both goods and leadership.

"It means that the old American dream of leaping upon your table higher and higher mounds of material possessions is now going straight out the window," Harris said. "The three-car and three-bathub syndrome is dying if not already dead."

"The public is sick and tired of politicians who promise the world to people in physical goods benefits. First, they don't think they will deliver, and second, if they do, they think they will pay for it five or six times over in higher taxes."

If national leaders asked them to, Harris said, 76 per cent of Americans would be willing to go without meat once a week and 62 per cent would give up fertilizing their lawns if it would help feed the world's hungry.

— 90 per cent would give up annual styling changes in hair.

— 92 per cent would cut back sharply on paper products and other disposables to conserve energy and curb pollution.

Harris said as of 10 days ago, 81 per cent of the American public believes the recession is still thriving — despite claims of their government that it is over.

"By any measure ... this is not a happy nor optimistic mood out there about the economy," he said. "What it adds up to is not even a wait-and-see, skeptical public. It is a people who are close to voting no confidence in this administration on the economic measures it has taken. On the President's overall economic program, his rating comes up at 68-23 per cent negative."

Record loss

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Gamblers lost a record $1 billion in Nevada's casinos last fiscal year, showing that the nation's weak economy doesn't deter the dice throwers, one-armed bandit pullers and card players.

The casinos' take was an increase of 13.5 per cent over the figure for the previous year, the state Gaming Control Board reported Thursday.

"The industry continues to demonstrate remarkable resilience to a generally soft economy," said Edward Bowers, executive secretary of the board.

From the casino winnings the state collected $82.5 million in taxes, a gain of 11 per cent.

Cenarrusa says evidence lacking in lobbyist case

BOISE (UPI) — Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa Thursday said there is insufficient evidence to warrant prosecuting an Everett, Wash., lobbyist for alleged Sunshine Act violations.

Enacted by initiative of the people in 1974, the Sunshine Act requires lobbyist registration and reports and campaign finance reporting.

Pete Kiepe filed a formal complaint with Cenarrusa Aug. 25, charging lobbyist John Hayes of the General Telephone Co. of the Northwest, Inc., with violating several sections of the act.

The attorney general's office provided an investigator and a formal report of findings issued today was based on that investigator's report, Cenarrusa said.

Among Kiepe's five allegations were accusations that Hayes:

- Failed to disclose in his weekly reports that he wrote "a certain piece of legislation introduced in the Senate."
- Wrote the bill in question in a manner knowingly to deceive or attempt to deceive some of the legislators.

— Omitted from the title of the bill some key words that would have drawn attention to the bill's content.

— Failed to report that the bill's statement of legislative purpose was wholly incorrect.

— Lobbied, contrary to information of his registration statement, for more than one employer.

"After considering all the evidence presented concerning the above allegations the secretary of state concludes that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant referring this matter for prosecution," Cenarrusa's report said.

He did say that one allegation charging Hayes, with an incorrect report on Feb. 5, does have some merit.

Kiepe says after further investigation and personal contact with members of the State Affairs Committee there is not sufficient evidence to indicate that Mr. Hayes knowingly deceived or attempted to deceive members of the legislature," the report said.

Cenarrusa said his findings do not preclude Kiepe from further action on his case — such as submitting the matter himself to the prosecuting attorney.

Hofmeister will seek state post

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Everett Hofmeister started this week as defendant in a first degree murder trial, accused of strangling his wife, but ended it as an announced candidate for attorney general of Idaho.

Hofmeister, 44, was acquitted Thursday by a District Court jury following a two-week trial stemming from the July 1974 death of June Darlene Hofmeister.

Hofmeister, tears flowing, hugged his defense attorney and family members the moment the nine-man, three-woman jury returned a verdict and brought to a close a one-year investigation that was climaxed with a grand jury indictment against the former Bonner County prosecutor last summer.

After he regained his composure, Hofmeister announced he was going to run for attorney general as a Democrat in 1978 — because of the abuses I've seen by state investigators, not only in my own case, but in others as well."

Without naming names, Hofmeister said he was becoming a candidate because he's seen

"so many flagrant abuses unrivaled by an incompetent prosecutor. I want to tell the taxpayers how their money is being squandered needlessly. I want to correct the abuses I know of and tell the taxpayers what they are not getting for their money."

Hofmeister was Bonner County prosecutor from 1968 to 1972. During the trial, Tom Frost, a special prosecutor in the case, contended Hofmeister was guilty based on circumstantial evidence.

He said Mrs. Hofmeister was legally drunk at the time of her death, and he said Hofmeister was having an affair with his legal secretary, Phyllis Tibbets, at the time. Hofmeister and Mrs. Tibbets have since been married.

Mike Hemenovich, one of Hofmeister's two attorneys, repeatedly moved for dismissal for lack of evidence.

Monday, after the prosecution had rested, Judge Edward Lodge agreed with the defense that insufficient evidence existed for a finding of first degree murder.

Selected

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Vicky Adams, 17, Boise, was selected from among 11 contestants Thursday to be Miss University of Idaho.

The first-year interior design major will reign over homecoming at the university this weekend and serve as official hostess for the university throughout the year.

Deborah Olson, Tensed, was first runnerup.

Despite questions, taxes collected

NAMPFA, Idaho (UPI) — Canyon County Clerk Walter Fry said Thursday the county will collect taxes in line with each taxing entity's certified levy despite a question concerning Nampa's levy.

Fry said tax notices for county units already are being prepared to mail in December.

"There is no reason to do otherwise," he said. "We can't stop collection just because we think something is wrong."

The City of Nampa certified a property tax levy to the county in September which was lower than the published budget in March, which Deputy Attorney General Ted Spangler said appeared to be in violation of the Idaho Code.

County Prosecutor James Morfitt has taken the matter under advisement and said he has asked the Nampa city attorney to reply by the end of the week.

Morfitt said he and the county commissioners were meeting with the Idaho Tax Commission Friday to discuss the problem.

Judge hears arguments, sets Dec. 8 trial date

BOISE (UPI) — Counsel for a Denver, Colo., newswoman who is charged with illegal possession of cocaine Thursday asked Fourth District Court to suppress evidence seized from her purse because it could not be identified visually.

Grace Lichtenstein, the bureau chief for the New York Times Denver office, was arrested June 11 at the Boise air terminal as she passed through the pre-flight security checkpoint.

Judge Alfred Hagan took the arguments under advisement and gave the attorneys 10 days to submit additional briefs. The case is scheduled to come to trial Dec. 8.

James Risch, representing Ms. Lichtenstein, told the court suspicion alone is not sufficient to give an officer probable cause to make an arrest, that the arresting officer intruded farther into the defendant's personal belongings than he was allowed, that the seizure of evidence from her purse was illegal.

Risch called airport security personnel to testify about the procedures used by Dave Friesen, a police department intern who made the arrest. Risch tried to establish that Friesen had more interest in making drug arrests than in searching for weapons.

Jim Clark, an attorney from Denver who said he also practices in Washington, D. C., assisted Risch.

Frances Hopper, a city police security officer, said, "I honestly don't think so," when asked if Friesen was more concerned with finding drugs than weapons. Darlene Morgan, another security officer who helped search Ms. Lichtenstein after the arrest, said perhaps 10 to 20 percent of the carryon bags that go through the fluorescence scanner are opened for additional inspection by the officers. She said the search can only be as intrusive as necessary to look for guns and weapons.

Mrs. Morgan said there was little discussion of drugs or drug arrests among the airport security staff.

Patrick Dea, a former security officer at the airport, said Friesen "is extremely concerned with the location of drugs" in the baggage searches, that the hand searches afforded an opportunity to search for drugs and experience in handling arrests.

She said Friesen "was extremely thorough" in making the hand searches and estimated he made five of eight arrests for drug violations at the airport in a seven months time. During that same period there were two arrests for threats involving the security of airplanes but no arrests for weapons.

Association endorses IP coal-fired Pioneer plant

BOISE (UPI) — The Pacific Northwest Waterways Association endorsed Thursday the construction of Idaho Power Company's coal-fired Pioneer generating plant southwest of Boise near Orchard.

Association members also named Howard B. Johnson, Astoria, Ore., and Jack S. Block, Seattle, as state vice presidents and reelected Elbert Stollman, Lewiston, Idaho, and John Burke, Butte, Mont., as vice presidents for their states.

In endorsing Idaho Power's coal-fired plant, the association urged the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to grant the utility a permit to construct the facility.

"Without this plant as an integral part of the power pool Idaho, as well as Northwest business and industry together with residential customers, will be severely depressed economically," the endorsement said.

The endorsement followed the line of presentations made to the second day of the power convention in Boise, where a series of speakers said thermal energy was a must to keep up with energy demands of the region.

One program approved by the convention called for construction of thermal generation projects under its hydrothermal program.

Among other programs adopted were:

- Construction of an enlarged navigation lock in Bonneville Dam.
- Completion of the Columbia River and tributaries study.
- Designation of a deep-water port, or ports, in Puget Sound and/or the Strait of Juan de Fuca.
- Beginning of construction of the Bacon tunnel and siphon on the Columbia River project.

Renewal of negotiations for an interstate compact, dealing with water quality and quantity of the Columbia-Snake River system.

Deepening of the existing shipping channel at the mouth of the Columbia River.

Burglars hit Nampa couple

NAMPFA, Idaho (UPI) — Three burglars broke into the home of a sleeping rural Nampa couple Wednesday night and left with $22 and a shotgun.

Canyon County Sheriff's officers said Leo Lester told the intruders broke into the home through a window and ordered him to lay down in the bathroom. He said he started to raise his head once but was struck by a gun butt.

Estrogen-cancer link studied

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The female hormone estrogen may be responsible for an increasing risk of cancer of the uterus in Caucasian women over 50 years old, results of a new study indicate.

Statistics compiled by the California Tumor Registry from five counties show cancer of the uterus has increased by about 35 per cent in the last seven years and there are about 3,800 new cases of uterine cancer in the state every year.

Researchers say it is endometrial cancer — cancer of the lining of the uterine wall — that has shown the increase, as opposed to cancer of the cervix.

Dr. Donald Austin said there seems to be a connection between the rising cancer incidence and the increasing use of estrogen to combat female postmenopausal symptoms.

"The information we have so far supports the hypothesis that estrogen given to postmenopausal women might be the cause," he said.

Austin said the women most likely to take estrogen are Caucasian, over 50 and in a high socio-economic strata.

It is among these women, he said, that the higher incidences of cancer are occurring.

Other possible causes, however, include the identifying of endometrial cancer cases that several years ago would have been classified precancerous and would not have appeared in cancer statistics.

There have also been an increasing number of hysterectomies which give doctors more tissue to examine and increase the possibility of finding cancer.

This safety play cost him an overtrick, but South did not care. The game was rubber bridge and he was interested in being as sure of his contract as possible.

Film set by league

TWIN FALLS — La Leche League of Twin Falls will present a film "Talking About Breastfeeding" on Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at Room 108 in the vo-tech building at the College of Southern Idaho.

The short film gives suggestions for successful breastfeeding through candid discussion with nursing mothers and their husbands and a variety of specialists. A discussion and refreshments will follow the film. There is no admission charge.

The league is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization dedicated to "good mothering through breastfeeding." An advisory board of 34 professionals works closely with the group.

La Leche meets monthly for informal talks on various aspects of breastfeeding. For more information call Linda Pettenger at 733-3488 or Shari Smith at 734-3833.

Guardians honored

TWIN FALLS — Past guardians and associate guardians of Bethel No. 19 were honored and presented gifts at a meeting Monday night.

Honored were Mr. and Mrs. Art Wylie, Mrs. Erma Scott, Mrs. Helen Harberg and Marian Langdon.

A report on the cooked food sale Saturday was given by Tony and Jerry Barron. Arthur Crumbliss, librarian, gave two readings. Nancy Jones gave a report on go-tech church Sunday.

Bethel and council members are taking orders for Christmas wreaths. Anyone wishing to order one may call 733-5274, 733-5220 or 733-6600.

Bethel's new installed hospitality chairman and Lisa Logan was installed third messenger. Niki Klingner was route jobie, Mary Pat Knight was jobie of the meeting, Marian Langdon was jobie of the meeting and Marian Jenkins was birthday girl.

DEAR ABBY: Ron and I have been married for five years and have a child who is 3-years-old.

Last week, we went to an amusement park and decided to take in the big attraction there. (It was Phi-La Belle and her star-studded review.) We got a table at the front of the auditorium so we wouldn't miss a thing.

Phi came out in a very revealing costume, and she spotted Ron immediately. (He's very good-looking.) She came over to our table and sat down on Ron's lap and ignored me as though I were invisible. She sang to Ron and made a big fuss over him. He claimed he didn't like it, but I noted he didn't push her off his lap. I laughed along with the rest of the audience, but while Phi was on my husband's lap, I was burning up with jealousy.

She ruined my whole day. Should I have pushed her off Ron's lap? I know it wasn't his fault that she picked on him, but if he didn't like it, don't you think he should have pushed her off?

—STILL BURNING

Wife 'burns'

DEAR STILL: It's not unusual for a female entertainer to single out a man and make a fuss over him. It's part of the act and nothing personal. Forget it, dear. Next time, don't pick a ringside table, and you'll not be so vulnerable.

DEAR ABBY: How can I keep my sons, ages 6 and 8, from being jealous of each other? I wait them to grow up and love each other, and it hurts me so much to see the terrible jealousy between them. Please help me.

—MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: Jealousy is a natural (though unattractive) human emotion. Remember that, Mommy, and explain it to your children. It may not eliminate the jealousy, but it will help to reduce their guilt feelings about it.

DEAR ABBY: My son is being married in a church at 2 p.m. I am advised by the bride's mother that it is improper to wear a long dress at a 2 p.m. church wedding, so I shall wear a short dress.

The reception begins at 5:30; followed by cocktails and dinner. I am told that a LONG dress is required for this.

The church is a great distance from my home—making it impossible to drive home after the wedding to change. So I'll have to take a long gown and matching accessories to the church to change into after the wedding.

My question: Is it absolutely necessary to have two different dresses for this wedding? I will if you say so, but it seems like a lot of trouble to me.

—GROOM'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It's not necessary. The dress you wear to the wedding will do nicely for the reception.

Jerome Relief Society fair held

JEROME — Numerous displays, musical selections and a style show were combined to highlight the Jerome Idaho LDS Relief Society Homemaking Fair Oct. 23 at the Jerome Stake Center.

Displays on food storage and preparation, sewed clothing items and lingerie, remade garments, hobbies and art, rugs and quilts, family home evening ideas and children's toys and Christmas and special decorations were arranged and attended by Relief Society members from the Jerome, Wendell, Gooding, Hazelton, Hagerman and Hunt Ward Relief societies.

A style show was presented in the afternoon by Relief Society members of the various wards who modeled casual and evening dresses, pants suits, coats and wedding dresses of their own making. Many children modeled outfits that had been made by their mothers.

At intervals during the day-long event Relief Society choruses and ensembles from eight wards presented a varied program of patriotic, sacred, semi-classical numbers and show tunes. An original song composed by Mrs. Mae Nilsson Gooding, was sung by Mrs. Sylvia Pope and her daughter Mrs. Alice Turner.

Sewing and quilting demonstrations were given during the day. A baby quilt was completed by women as they learned an easy method of tying a quilt.

Church women to celebrate

TWIN FALLS — Church Women United in Twin Falls will celebrate World Community Day Nov. 7 at 2 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church.

In 1941, during the week of Pearl Harbor, when the constituting convention of the United Council of Church Women met in Atlantic City, one of its first acts was to inaugurate a day of peace.

Every year since then, church women have celebrated World Community Day on the first Friday in November to "emphasize corporate action for justice and peace," according to Church Women United.

Lt. Barbara Biks, of the Salvation Army will be program leader for the Nov. 7 celebration with women from other Twin Falls churches taking an active part in the service.

Brida Nunson, associate minister of the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church, will be the meditation speaker, speaking on world hunger and his experiences as part of an ecumenical study held in Geneva, Switzerland, last year.

Nationwide offerings received on World Community Day go into an intercontinental Missions fund.

The Twin Falls unit encourages the purchase of $4 gift certificates through which church women respond with material aid to those in need.

Lutheran auxiliary holds meet

FILER — Peace Lutheran Church hosted the 13th annual meeting of Good Shepherd Auxiliary this month.

Rev. E. Bernthal was in charge of the devotional period. Mrs. Del Butterfield gave the welcome address and Mrs. Herman Martens responded.

Reports were given on a number of projects of the group including an auction at Kimberly Redemer Lutheran Church, a ground hog supper at Eden, hosted by the Lutheran Women's Missionary League, an auction at Burley, bazaars at Pocatello and Ontario, a donation from Curlew, a rummage sale at Boise and a special "Comite Day" at Cuhpi.

Members were urged to save coupons and give them to the auxiliary. Mrs. Irene Adoll, who is on the board of directors of the auxiliary, spoke on the work of the Good Shepherd Home and Mrs. Dorothy Fischer reported on the executive board's work.

During the business meeting Mrs. Don Schroeder, Buhl, was elected president; Mrs. Stanley Wieland, first vice president; Mrs. Morris Hanenworth, treasurer; Mrs. Michael Bierman, Burley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Walter Tollefson, Burley, recording secretary, and Mrs. Herman Huetig, Eden, treasurer.

Jehovah's Witnesses to convene

TWIN FALLS — Jehovah's witnesses from the local area have been invited to attend a semi-annual circuit assembly in Halley Nov. 8, 9.

According to Vern Shaw, spokesman for the witnesses in Twin Falls, the gathering will draw delegates from 12 congregations in Southern Idaho.

An attendance of over 800 is expected to fill the auditorium at Halley's Wood River High School.

Theme for the gathering will be "As For Us We Shall Serve Jehovah" from the scripture at Joshua 24:15.

Group prays for children

MENA, Ark. (UPI) — A band of persons waiting for the return of Jesus prayed 45 minutes Wednesday, but did not try to stop authorities from removing six children from the rural home where the group has waited a month for the second coming of Christ.

Polk County Juvenile Court Judge J. B. Stevenson ordered the children removed because they allegedly were in violation of the state's compulsory school attendance law. Their names were not released but Stevenson said they ranged in age from 6 to 9.

About 25 persons have been keeping the vigil in the house.

"It seemed one of them had a vision Christ was coming on a certain date and after he didn't show up they decided to wait until He did because they knew it wouldn't be long," Stevenson said.

"They held a prayer meeting in preparation for the departure of the children," said Polk County Sheriff A. L. Huttoy, who waited inside the house for 45 minutes before the children were released. "They were supposed to stay together for the coming of the Lord, so this was why they had the prayer meeting."

"Hadoy said those in the two-bedroom brick home were "neat and clean" as was the house itself.

The children taken from the home at rural Gramis were placed in the custody of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Simolin of Mena, who offered to keep them. Stevenson said they would remain with the family indefinitely.

Stevenson said the children would ride the bus to school at nearby Gillham. He said someone would follow the bus to make sure an attempt was not made to take the children off the bus.

"We're not going to let that happen," he said.

Stevenson said he had not heard from any of the parents since the children were taken. The parents were identified by Stevenson as Mr. and Mrs. John Nance, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Nance, Mr. and Mrs. David Nance, all brothers, 3rd and Mrs. J. B. Fenwick, who owns a grocery store in Gramis.

Filer Lutherans combine services

By MARJORIE LIERMAN Times-News writer

FILER — Peace Lutheran Church observed Mission Day and the tenth anniversary of the church dedication at combined services Sunday morning.

Guest speaker for both morning and afternoon services was Rev. Carl Lusser, Sherwood, Ore., who for a number of years was pastor of the Filer church as well as the Clover Lutheran Church.

Although the church was officially organized in 1962, it began in 1949 with a branch Sunday school staffed by members of Clover Trinity Lutheran Church.

Sunday School classes were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bierke until the group became too large and classes were moved to the Filer American Legion Hall. A few years later, Rev. R. Winkelman arranged for classes to meet in the Filer Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Regular morning worship services began in June of 1951 with Rev. Lusser at the pulpit and were followed by Bible study classes and Sunday school. The congregation was known as the Filer Mission Church.

In 1962 the voters of Clover Trinity Lutheran Church voted unanimously to favor organization of the Filer congregation and on Dec. 16, 1962, it was officially organized and the present name selected.

The first congregational meeting was Peace Lutheran Church on Jan. 20, 1963, and officers elected included Henry Westendorf, chairman; Myrl Schroeder, secretary; Walter Mueller, treasurer, and Del Butterfield, assistant treasurer. Tom Harpison, R.L. Plestick and Harvey Maxson were elected elders and Reuben Lierman, Clyde Smith and Walter Mueller, trustees.

Groundbreaking for the new church west of town took place in the fall of 1964. The red brick and wood structure, designed on modern lines, was completed and dedicated in May, 1965. Serving on the building committee were Westendorf, Butterfield, Mueller, Myrl Schroeder and Reuben Lierman.

Rev. Henry Fry was vacancy pastor for a time until Rev. T. D. Johnston became pastor and served until last December when he left to accept a congregation in Nebraska. Rev. H. C. Mubly was installed as permanent pastor in April of this year.

The church has a Lutheran Women's Missionary League, a Walthers League, adult Bible class, Sunday school classes and a cradle roll.

Appeals court reverses ban on poison

DENVER (UPI) — A federal judge erred in stopping a government-ordered ban on three poisons used by farmers to control coyotes hunting sheep in Wyoming, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Wednesday.
The appeals court, in a 2-1 decision, reversed a ruling of U.S. District Judge Irving Kerr, but emphasized the fact it was making no comment on the value of predator control programs.
Kerr had issued an order preventing the Environmental Protection Agency from banning the use of strychnine, sodium fluoroacetate and sodium cyanide. He ruled the federal agency failed to file an environmental impact statement.
The court, in a majority opinion written by Circuit Judge William Doyle, said the EPA was not required to issue such a statement. Even if it were, the court said, an equivalent to an environmental statement was the report it used in handing down the order.
The report was issued in 1971 by the Advisory Committee on Predator Control at the University of Michigan. The report said the poison program against coyotes primarily served the private sheep growing industry and recommended the use of specific poisons, plus repellents and live trapping.
The report said widespread use of the poisons was endangering such species as the bald and golden eagles, the California condor, the black-footed ferret, the mountain lion, the grizzly bear, the Rocky Mountain wolf and the red wolf.
"...we do not weigh the value of the poison program against the injury or damage that it produces," the majority opinion said. "We are concerned rather with the legality of the proceedings."
"We hold that a formal environmental impact statement was not required and that the trial court lacked authority to issue the preliminary injunction."
The dissenting opinion was delivered by Circuit Judge Oliver Seth, who said he felt there was no other administrative remedy available to the plaintiffs. Among those filing the lawsuit were the state of Wyoming, the Wyoming Wool Growers Association and the Wyoming Farm Bureau Federation.
Seth said he believed the EPA should be required to file an environmental impact statement, the same as any other federal agency. He also rejected the argument that the report used by the EPA in issuing its order could be considered an environmental statement.
"It did not purport to be an objective analysis of this problem, but only of selected literature identified with

Electronics in spotlight

MOSCOW — Beef cattle have no secrets in this electronic age, it seems.
Scheduled for demonstration at the University of Idaho College of Agriculture field day at Malta Monday is an electronic device which peers through hide and hair to measure the muscling and internal fat cover of live steaks. The painless system for testing the quality of future steaks and roasts is said to be remarkably accurate.
Also to be spotlighted at the UI field day is an electronic record-keeping system which keeps track of the rate of growth and other personal data for each animal in a large herd. With these facts readily available, the cattleman can quickly select the heifers and cows which should be kept for breeding purposes.
The field day begins at 9:30 a.m. in the Malta High School auditorium. In a panel discussion, five cattlemen will present their ideas about worthwhile goals in beef cattle improvement programs.
A no-host luncheon will be served by the Malta Lions Club.
In the afternoon, computerized record-keeping will be demonstrated at the Jack Pierce ranch near Malta. The computerized system now in operation at the ranch will be explained by Anna Davis, UI extension management information specialist, and by ranch representatives.

Harvesting moves near completion

BOISE (UPI) — Despite adverse weather in Idaho the past week, the Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today harvest operations continued to move towards completion.
Potato and harvest continued active, although hampered somewhat by the intermittent rain and snow showers.
Potato harvest was close to 90 per cent harvested by last Friday and approximately 40 per cent of the sugar beets were harvested by the weekend, the service said.
A year ago the potato harvest was virtually complete and 55 per cent of the beets had been taken from the fields.
The service said the apple harvest continued active with the harvest of Red Delicious and Rome Beauty apples entering the windup stage.
Idaho's 1976 winter wheat crop was 95 per cent planted with 75 per cent of the crop emerged, which compares with 90 per cent planted and 40 per cent emerged last year, the service said. The barley crop is 95 per cent planted and the Austrian winter pea crop was 95 per cent seeded by the weekend.

Toast of Chicago

Chicago welcomes Sadat

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Richard Daley has given Egypt's President Anwar Sadat the kind of welcome New York denied him and made him an honorary citizen of Chicago, home of the nation's fourth largest Jewish population.

Daley and Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., greeted Sadat and his family Thursday at O'Hare International Airport where they began their one-day visit.

Sadat spoke at a formal banquet attended by 700 civic leaders and members of the Egyptian-American community. The city's seven Jewish aldermen boycotted the event.

More than 300 representatives of the Organization of Arab Students outside the hotel shouted "Long Live Palestine" and "Down with Sadat" and carried signs condemning Zionism as racism.

About 50 Jews, behind a separate barricade, chanted and displayed pickets. "Buy tractors not tanks," one sign read. "I am a Zionist," said another. Sadat waved to them all.

Black Muslims, whose world headquarters are in Chicago, distributed color photos of Sadat and the Muslim newspaper welcomed him to the city.

Daley and Sadat exchanged toasts before the six-term mayor presented Sadat with a medallion making him an honorary Chicago citizen.

"We are indeed happy to have President Sadat in our city," Daley said.

Mayor Abraham Beame had refused to greet Sadat when he visited New York on Wednesday. "We congratulate you and hope with the help of God there'll be peace," Daley said.

Nancy Kissinger, wife of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, attended the banquet. The secretary was not present.

Ford's western trip Reagan challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's trip to California was a demonstration of Ford conservatism to meet a challenge from Ronald Reagan.

The President addressed Republican Party fund-raising events in Los Angeles and San Francisco and although the former California governor was listed as a cosponsor for both gatherings he did not show up.

As the President appeared on Reagan's geographic turf, he also muscled in on Reagan's conservative base. However, he also admonished the GOP to discard an attitude of exclusiveness that has kept the Republican party's "door closed."

From California, Ford flew to Milwaukee, where hundreds of Wisconsin Republicans warmly applauded his litany against what Ford calls the "can't do" Democratic-controlled Congress. The President was surrounded by tight security precautions on his first trip to California since the two gun incidents he encountered there last month.

Ford won a standing ovation with his declaration on the woes of New York: "This President will never allow the doors of the U.S. treasury to be flung open to every city with a hole in its fiscal pocket."

Apparently concluding there is little grass roots sentiment for federal help for New York

City, Ford has been getting mileage out of the New York plight.

In California, he told a luncheon audience that San Francisco had recovered from the devastating earthquake 70 years ago with "local coverage and local determination."

But the New York Daily News said that a year after the earthquake Congress appropriated $500 million in assistance for San Francisco, at the request of President Teddy Roosevelt.

All of Ford's speeches rapped Democratic "spenders" and government outlays. "It is neither responsible nor compassionate to erode the value of people's hard-earned money through inflation by piling government spending, program on program, without revenues to pay for them," he said. The President's campaign style has been modified.

On his return visit to California there were anonymous telephone threats.

Moore visited by son

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — In an austere youth guidance center, Sara Jane Moore had her first visit with her 9-year-old son since she was arrested for trying to kill President Ford.

At the same time Thursday, three miles away, Ford himself was back in the city to speak at a Republican fund-raising luncheon. He was in the same downtown hotel where Miss Moore fired a pistol at him on Sept. 22.

The reunion of Miss Moore, 45, a onetime FBI informer who reportedly had been trying to win her way into underground circles, and her son, Frederick, took place minutes after juvenile Judge Francis W. Mayor made the youth, a dependent of the court.

Miss Moore attended the hearing but her son did not.

Some Vietnamese still in camp

FT. CHAFFEE, ARK. (UPI) — Some Vietnamese have been at Ft. Chaffee Relocation Center since the camp opened last spring, prompting official debate whether the refugees represent a hard-core lot difficult to place.

There also is an underlying problem of some refugees having "lost face" and actually trying to avoid agencies, seeking to place them into the mainstream of American life.

A count this week showed 10,961 refugees at Chaffee, which is scheduled to close at the end of the year, out of 49,017 received since the camp opened May 2. Of those remaining, 2,576 arrived in May.

"I don't think they are hard core or hard to place," said Donald G. McDonald, senior civil coordinator. "But there are several reasons they are still here."

"I'm told by some of our counselors many of them are despondent because they haven't got a sponsor. They feel they aren't wanted and have lost face."

However, Carroll Morris of the International Rescue Committee, one of eight voluntary agencies working at Chaffee to link up refugees with civilian sponsors, said frankly, "We're getting down to hard-to-place."

Of the 118 cases on the files of the Catholic conference, Morris said there was only one family, and the rest single males. He said it was harder to find sponsors for single males than for most families.

David Lewis, director of the United States Catholic Conference, conceded many of those who arrived in May do not want to leave the camp and in fact avoid contact with the voluntary agencies by faking registration with his conference.

Heyburn post sought by 2

HEYBURN—A former city councilman this year is challenging the only mayor Heyburn has had.

Carroll Fred Dayley is campaigning against Harold Hurst, two-term mayor of Heyburn and longtime village board chairman.

Incumbent councilmen Bud Scovill and J.R. Brown face competition from Dean Baker and former councilman Bob Hambleton.

Harold Hurst

Hurst has served in city government for 18 years. He is a counselor at Minico High School.

The mayor is first vice president of the Association of Idaho Cities and serves on a state task force to write policy for the councils of government in Idaho.

Hurst has been in Heyburn government as it grew from 250 people to nearly 10 times that (about 2,200) and seen the budget climb from $40,000 to over $30,000. He points out that the budget boost was without an increase in the tax rate.

Hurst prides himself on an efficient city with a capable staff and points out the city is free of debt and has money in the bank to help with its planned sewer expansion. He cites the city's electrical utility, recreational program, and various construction codes to control building.

Fred Dayley

Dayley is a native of Twin Falls and was raised in Burley. He teaches at East Minico Junior High School.

He says the mayor's position should not go unopposed and, after 18 years, it is time for a change.

Dayley worked with recreation and believes some areas need improvement. He calls for park beautification and solution to dog problems.

He agrees there is a need to upgrade the sewer system, develop a water system and provide for orderly growth.

Bud Scovill

Scovill retired in 1971 as city manager of Heyburn after 18 years with the city. He is completing his first term as councilman.

The former manager believes Heyburn has good government now and "I want to see it run as it has been."

J. R. Brown

Brown owns an auto repair shop and is completing his 14th year as a councilman. He is also vice chief for the city.

Brown said he would "like to continue on the council until the things we have in mind do get accomplished." He cited the sewer project and plans for a city water system.

Bob Hambleton

Hambleton is assistant manager at Volvo and has lived in Heyburn since 1964. He served six years on the council, but was defeated two years ago.

He is past president of the Burley Men's Golf Association and coaches youth football.

Hambleton also urges sewer and water systems, but says the city should consider its finances and complete the sewer project first.

Dean Baker

Baker is an electronics teacher at Burley High School.

He spent more than 15 years in aircraft research and development and in the aerospace industry.

Baker moved to Heyburn two years ago and has become concerned about handling the swift growth and the need for sewer, water and other utilities to accommodate it.

He would like to see Heyburn develop civic celebrations and other activities and have more youth athletic facilities such as tennis courts and a swimming pool.

today in brief

Orthopedic workshop set

BURLEY—An orthopedic workshop sponsored by the Idaho Nurses Association Region IV is scheduled next Thursday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Ramada inn in Burley. Registration will be at the door from 8 to 8:30 a.m. The cost is $8 for INA members and $10 for all others. The fee includes lunch and gratuities.

Guest speakers will be Dr. Clair Cutler, orthopedic physician in Burley; Dr. Michael Phillips, orthopedic physician in Twin Falls; Sam Austin, orthopedic technologist associated with Dr. Phillips; Joyce Ogilvie, occupational therapist at Cassia Memorial Hospital and Scott Bloom, physical therapist at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

A demonstration of orthopedic equipment will be given by Gary Bjorn, Idaho Falls.

'Old skeletons' out of closet

RUPERT—The Rupert Chamber of Commerce got their old skeletons out of the closet Thursday and members aired their views on the organization's problems.

Lack of participation by many members was the most frequently cited chamber problem.

"Too many are all too ready to let someone else do it," remarked Chuck Dalry.

John Cameron agreed, adding that the Rupert chamber is one of the most active in Southern Idaho, but has too few people working on its many projects.

Ogden man appointed

OGDEN—William E. (Bill) Murray has been appointed deputy regional forester for state and private forestry in the Intermountain region of the U.S. Forest Service.

He is transferring to Ogden from the Washington office where he has served as director of area planning and development for the past 18 months.

TF woman remains 'critical'

TWIN FALLS—Mrs. Emma Luke, 80, remained in critical condition this morning at Twin Falls Clinic Hospital where she is being treated for injuries suffered in an auto-pedestrian accident late Wednesday.

Mrs. Luke was walking across Blue Lakes Boulevard, where Fourth Street East and the boulevard meet when she was struck by a southbound vehicle driven by Carolyn Knudson, 33, Twin Falls. City police reported Mrs. Luke was wearing dark clothing and was apparently not seen by the driver until too late to avoid striking her.

Officers said apparently Mrs. Luke walked into the street on the pavement. She struck a glancing blow, throwing her to the pavement. She suffered multiple fractures, shock and other injuries.

The accident occurred at 5:56 p.m. Wednesday, police reported.

Ready for Halloween

IT'S the Carl and Cindy spooks. Cindy Stanley, almost 10, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clark, 146 Jackson St., and Carl is the product of Carl Anglin on Fifth Avenue West, all Twin Falls. The 50-pound squash was raised in Anglin's backyard. Cindy and her mother made Carl ready for Halloween.

Burley candidates say no '76 tax cuts expected

BURLEY—Police are underpaid and no tax cuts can be expected, candidates for Burley City Council agreed Thursday night.

They split down the middle on whether or not more policemen are needed in Burley, but all agreed that the department is doing an excellent job and urged complete training of new officers.

The statements came during a "meet the candidates" forum sponsored Thursday night by the Burley Exchange Club.

Candidates present were Ray Barlow, Don Chessman, James Henderson, Ralph Rasmussen, John Struchen, Stephen Westfall, David Peck and Dale Smith. Incumbents Clyde Taylor and Leonard King were not present.

The candidates unanimously deplored closed council sessions and voiced disapproval of a city manager form of government in replying to audience questions asked of all candidates.

Open council meetings were favored by all, except when personnel or property purchases were being discussed, with the public to be informed following the session.

Beyond the open meetings, which some suggested the present council did not always have, the candidates were not sure they would have done anything different than the council has done. Only Chessman remarked that he would put more stress on recreation for teenagers.

All thought the police department had recovered well from the spring firing of Police Chief Gary Booth, although young officers still need training.

As to the size of the force, Struchen said it totaled 28 with only 12-14 patrolmen. He felt more were needed.

Smith agreed, pointing out that the department had 54 miles to patrol. Chessman and Henderson felt the quality of the present officers was high, but thought some additions should be made.

All agreed that more pay was needed for the police force to prevent officers training at Burley and moving to a higher-paying area.

But Westfall, Rasmussen and Peck felt the size of the force now is adequate when new men have received full training.

Election of the city's administrative head was favored, with some fearing concentration of power in a city manager.

School employe salaries differ

By CRICKET BIRD

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Women employed by school districts in Idaho often earn less than men filling comparable positions, state figures show.

But the salary differences may be due to differences in experience and education, between the women and men, according to one Idaho Department of Education spokesman.

However, another consultant "casts the situation" a shocking state of affairs.

Salary figures for men and women employes of all 115 school districts in Idaho were compiled in a statistical analysis prepared by the department of education.

First in a two-part series

Salaries for 1974-75 were compared for women and men in 21 positions for five different district size categories, ranging from districts with 5,000 students or more to those with fewer than 499 students.

In more than two-thirds of the cases where both women and men held comparable positions, the average base pay salary was lower for women than for men.

Lella Lewis, state consultant for pupil personnel, said she felt the differences were due to less experience and education shown by the women.

Most professional school district employes are paid according to a salary scale, Mrs. Lewis said. The rate of pay is determined by the amount of experience and education an employe has, not whether they are male or female, Mrs. Lewis said. She said there was no discrimination involved in the differing salaries.

Barry Bull, the planning and statistics consultant who prepared the report, said a higher mobility rate for women employes may also be affecting salaries.

Because school districts may not accept all previous experience in determining a new employe's salary, the women employes' higher mobility may be resulting in lower salaries for them, Bull said.

Also, some districts may have different interpretations for the job categories listed, Bull said.

However, he added, a sensitive interpreter would probably concede there has to be something more than chance operating. "Time after time, he said, the average salary for women is lower than the average salary for men in a comparable position.

In cases where men are paid less than women in comparable positions, it often occurs in fields where women predominate—for instance, elementary teaching.

A few concrete examples illustrate the pattern. In the big districts, with more than 5,000 students, elementary principals are paid an average of $15,056 if men and $14,462 if women.

Male librarians earn an average of $12,165 in the same districts; with female librarians averaging $10,516.

Intens who are men are paid an average of $8,294, while women intens earn $5,125.

On the other side, women, elementary teachers earn an average of $9,485 in the big districts, while men elementary teachers average $9,310. Female social workers are paid an average of $13,349 while men in the same post earn an average $12,977.

The higher male pay continues in smaller districts. For districts with up to 499 students, secondary principals are paid an average of $11,494, if male, and $9,854, if female.

In this category, too, the reverse situation does occur. For instance, in the small districts, counselors are paid an average of $10,902 if women. Male counselors earn an average of $9,582.

Differences in experience may be reflected in unequal salaries for men and women, but state figures tend to show the average experience of men and women employes is nearly equivalent.

According to the report, a typical level of experience for both men and women professionals is 6 to 10 years, with both in and out-of-state experience counted.

No data is given on the educational level of men and women professionals in Idaho schools. Education also has a direct bearing on salaries, since professionals receive higher salaries with more degrees and educational background.

Ketchum may not file action

KETCHUM—The city of Ketchum may not file a complaint which has been threatened against Idaho Power's installation of poles higher than a city ordinance allows.

City Attorney Bob Rayburn says the council will meet Monday to discuss the problem and explore the possibility of laying the cable underground.

Rayburn says the city has held up on filing a complaint until the IPUC notifies him about the exact provisions of the National Safety Code requiring a certain ground clearance of transmission lines.

Idaho Power has installed 38 to 42 feet high power poles from the Warm Springs Bridge westward to the Warm Springs Ski Lift at the base of Bald Mountain.

A Ketchum City ordinance restricts any structures in the city above 35 feet, the power company did not notify the city when the poles were installed two weeks ago.

Pay and Pack not accused

TWIN FALLS—Pay and Pack Electric and Plumbing Supply, with stores in Twin Falls, Boise and Nampa, is not affiliated with Pay 'n' Pak, a chain of stores accused of deceptive advertising practices, according to officials of both firms.

A UPI story, published Sunday in the Times-News incorrectly identified the accused chain as Pay and Pack instead of Pay 'n' Pak, a Kent, Wash., based chain.

The story had said the Pay and Pack Electric and Plumbing stores had agreed to stop advertising practices the Federal Trade Commission claims are deceptive. Instead, it should have said Pay 'n' Pak had agreed to the advertising claim, not Pay and Pack.

The original incorrect story also had said the accused firm had stores in Boise and Nampa. The Boise and Nampa stores are run by Pay and Pack, not Pay 'n' Pak.

Pay and Pack is an Idaho corporation of about 14 years. It has no connection with any other stores.

Pipeline may use Snake River water

"I don't feel at liberty to fully discuss where water for the line might come from," he said.

But, Eaton did acknowledge that use of Snake River water had been considered and determined to be economically possible.

He said, however, that no government agency has been asked to see if the water is available.

According to Darrell MacKay, vice-president of special projects with Northwest Pipeline, the plan to use Snake River water would entail pumping the water out of the Snake "all the way back to Gillette, Wyo."

"We sort of recognize that it probably would take legislative approval to get something like that accomplished," he said, adding that this plan is "not what we would select first."

A preferred plan is to pump water out of deep wells in the Powder River Basin, much closer to Gillette, Wyo. Water also might be pumped from the Green River in southwestern Wyoming, he said.

MacKay said if the line is to deliver 16 million tons of coal, the coal would come from fields near Rock Springs, and Gillette, Wyo., and Decker, Mont.

He said Northwest and Gulf Interstate are now negotiating with four potential utility customers with coal fields in these locations.

Another possible water plant, according to Eaton, would be to build a second pipe parallel to the slurry line to recycle the water needed to transport coal. But, he said, this would increase the cost of the whole project, from 35 to 40 per cent.

The slurry line is considered economically feasible. But, according to Eaton, three obstacles stand in the way.

One problem is right-of-way. A company now building a coal slurry line would not have the right of eminent domain to acquire land to put the line through.

According to Eaton, the slurry line would have to cross railroad lines.

Since the railroads see the coal slurry as a major threat to their business, they would be unlikely to grant an easement, he said.

Eaton said legislation is now in Congress which would grant the right of eminent domain for a coal slurry line. Until that legislation is enacted, the line can't be built, he said.

The second problem is obtaining the water. The third problem is financing. "These are high projects," he said.

"If you had these three problems solved you'd have a system within three years," Eaton said.

"At this stage we're basically concentrating our efforts on spurring the legislation necessary to obtain the right of eminent domain," he said.

According to Joe Valley, public relations director for Northwest Pipeline, Northwest is also trying to line up customers for the coal slurry line.

Valley said a feasibility study on the line would be completed, showing the line would be economically sound. But, MacKay said the study is "confidential" and plans for the line still preliminary.

Piped coal?

PLANNED coal pipeline would carry a coal-water mixture from either Gillette or Rock Springs, Wyo. across Idaho to Boardman, Ore. Along the way the coal could be used to fuel the proposed Pioneer Plant in southwestern Idaho.

One alternative considered in the plan involves interbasin transfer of water out of the Snake River Basin to the head of the pipeline at Gillette.

Markets

Stocks at midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher in moderate trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which added 0.79 points Thursday, was ahead 0.55 to 839.97 just minutes after the opening bell. Advances led declines: 71 to 120, among the 30 stocks crossing the tape.

As the market opened, retrenching First National City Bank lowered its prime lending rate for top business borrowers to 7 1/2 per cent from 7 3/4 per cent, effective Monday.

The move followed a drop in key interest rates. Citibank was a formula based on short-term rates to determine its prime.

Even before the Federal Reserve Board released its weekly monetary report late Thursday, First National Bank of St. Louis had trimmed its prime one-quarter percentage point to the 7 1/2 mark.

Rozelle finds no sympathy in congressional hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle testified Thursday that pro football owners lost $9 million in two years under the television anti-blackout law but he failed to score any points with a congressional subcommittee considering a bill to make the ban permanent.

Rozelle's claim that the law prohibiting the local televising of sports events sold out in advance was doing "significant harm" to the National Football League drew heavy fire at a House hearing.

Rozelle also told members of the House Commerce subcommittee that while he contemplates no immediate changes in NFL policy of allowing the showing of every game, continued season ticket sales and decline in attendance "raises the possibility some change in the format might have to be considered."

Rep. Torbert MacDonald, D-Miss., chairman of the subcommittee and sponsor of legislation to make the blackout ban permanent, responded: "I think you'd be making a mistake to rock the boat. I think with your present television set-up, you're sitting in a tub of butter." Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the full committee, announced he favored the measure.

Rep. William M. Brodhead, D-Mich., told Rozelle: "Frankly, you're not getting much sympathy from me...I can't see where any business that pays its employees $40,000 and up for five months work can come in and cry poverty."

Brodhead, noting the Detroit Lions had moved from his city to a new stadium in Pontiac, contended the law requiring the local showing of home games sold out 72 hours in advance benefited older people, the unemployed and the poor who are unable to attend games in person.

"This is one of the most arrogant things I've ever seen," the freshman congressman commented. "Millions of senior citizens and jobless and others would be

Sanderson sent to St. Louis

BOSTON (UPI) — "Flamboyant" Derek Sanderson, traded Thursday from the Rangers to the St. Louis Blues, said he was a victim of "too much politics" in New York.

Sanderson, who was to play his first game Thursday night against the Boston Bruins with whom he broke in, said he "jumped at the chance to go to St. Louis. I'll play in St. Louis more than I played in New York."

"There was too much politics in New York. He (Emile) Francis, Rangers' General Manager, doesn't shake up anybody once they've been there for a few years. The only way you can get in the lineup if someone gets hurt, I know I'll be able to play regularly for St. Louis."

The 29-year-old center and his attorney, Bob Woolf, met with Blues' owner Sid Salomon for half an hour following his late afternoon arrival in Boston.

Bowl pressure builds on football teams

By FRED McMAINE
UPI Sports Writer

There are only two weeks remaining before the college football bowl committees officially begin extending invitations, and the pressure already is building on several of the nation's top-ranked teams.

Penn State, Florida and Southern California all will be facing some formidable competition this Saturday, knowing full well that a loss could prevent them from making it to a preferred post-season game.

Penn State and Florida are in the same fix where so much as one loss in the next three weeks could completely ruin their chances of participating in one of the major post-season bowl games.

Both ninth-ranked Penn State and 10th-ranked Florida already have lost once. With more teams for the bowl committees to choose from this year because of the Big Ten and Pacific Eight Conference's decision to let more than one club from each conference participate in post-season contests, it would seem that two losses could be fatal in terms of being selected for a major bowl.

Florida has its eye on an Orange Bowl bid, but in order to land one, the Gators would most likely have to win or tie for the Southeastern Conference title. The Gators are tied with Alabama for the SEC lead, but the two teams do not meet during the regular season this year. Since Alabama figures to win its remaining games, Florida must do likewise.

That may not be an easy task for Florida. Its next three games are all with conference foes — Auburn, Georgia and Kentucky — and the Gators have beaten both Auburn and Georgia in the same season only once in the last 12 years.

Florida, which ranks third in the nation in total offense, is a six-point favorite to defeat Auburn at the Gators' quarterback, Don Gaffney, missed the last two games with injury and the Tigers, a disappointment earlier this season, have won three in a row.

Penn State, which has been to a major bowl game in each of the past four seasons, is being considered by the Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowl committees. But the Nittany Lions have three games remaining, three of which are against formidable competition. This Saturday 15th-ranked Maryland is the opposition, and the game — at Maryland — is a tossup.

Things are a little less uncertain for Southern California. The Trojans haven't lost a game as yet, and even if they were to stumble once before the season ends, it's likely that they would still be selected to play in one of the major bowl games.

However, the Rose Bowl is the only post-season game that really interests Southern California Coach John McKay and right now his Trojans hold only a half game lead over

BSU hosts Montana in final loop test before Idaho State

BOISE — Boise State's football Broncos can take one more step towards their third consecutive league title Saturday afternoon when they host the University of Montana Grizzlies. Game time is set for 1:30 p.m.

It will be the next to last league game for the Broncos. Their last league clash will be November 22 in Idaho State's Mindome.

Boise State is now 6-0-1 on the year and 3-0-1 in league action after defeating Northern Arizona 48-0 last Saturday night. Montana is now 4-2 on the year and 2-2 in league play. They lost in Montana State 20-3 last Saturday.

Boise State is leading in passing offense with 297 yards a game. BSU's rush defense is fifth in the league, giving up 207.4 yards a game, and Montana's pass defense is third in the league, allowing 127.2 yards a game to their foes.

Montana's top rusher is fullback Mike Mickey who has carried the ball 50 times for 238 yards and three scores. Halfback Del Spear has 46 carries for 236 yards and no scores.

Junior quarterback Dan Accomando is expected to get the call against Boise State Saturday.

California in the race for the Pac Eight title and the trip to Pasadena, where the Trojans have played on seven of the last nine New Year's Days. Southern Cal meets California Saturday in a game that is a "must" for both clubs.

"If we lose we're not going to the Rose Bowl," McKay says. "If they (Cal) beat us and don't lose another game, they'll be back in it. They're not really out of it."

The Trojans are an 8 1/2 point favorite to beat the Bears, but McKay is concerned about a possible letdown for his team following last week's 24-17 victory over Notre Dame.

"If we do that, we'll get beat," says McKay. "Our players already have been told that. We know what we have to do. They (Cal) were their own worst enemy against UCLA — they got over 400 yards but lost the ball too much. In all honesty, we haven't met an offense that comes close."

In other games Saturday involving top-ranked teams, No. 1 Ohio State entertains Indiana. No. 2 Oklahoma visits Oklahoma State, No. 3 Nebraska is at Missouri, No. 6 Alabama visits Mississippi State, No. 7 Michigan travels

Vandals eye spoiler role against MSU

MOSCOW — The surging University of Idaho Vandals will try to play the role of Big Sky Conference spoiler this weekend when the Montana State Bobcats (14-0) invade the Boise County.

A crowd of 10,000-15,000 is expected for the 1975 homecoming game set for Kibbitt/ASU Dome. Kickoff is slated for 8 p.m. (PST).

Coach Sonny Holland's cuts are one of three teams still in the running for the conference crown. Idaho leads Boise State. They are 11-1 while Boise leads ID 10-1 and Idaho State is next at 4-0.

The Bozeman-based team turned things around three weeks ago after having a disastrous 0-3 start against non-conference foes. Last weekend they won the battle of Montana by stopping MSU's 21-7.

In the last three outings, Holland's charges have held opponents to an average of eight points a game. Before that time they were giving up 30 a contest. In other words, the defense has definitely matured and helped make the team into contenders.

"They have made a complete turnaround and are perhaps the toughest team in the league at this point," reports Idaho mentor Ed Troxel. "They have one of the finest offenses around with running back Steve Kracher and kicking standout Pat Holton. Add a toughened defense, and it spells trouble for MSU opponents."

The UI coach added, "We must be able to stop Kracher, perhaps the best back we will face all year. He's already pushed for over 1,000 yards and is highly ranked in Division II stats."

Kracher is ranked third in the Division II stats and first in Big Sky with 1,084 yards and six touchdowns. He is averaging 135 yards a game and needs only 278 in his final two games to become the school's all-time rusher. Don Haas (1956-68) tallied 2,954 during his collegiate days.

MSU signal caller Mike Holder is having a fine year too. He has 1,028 yards in total offense and has completed over 50 per cent of his passes during the last four games.

Countering the Montana State attack will be UI's veer controlled by quarterback Dave Comstock, this week's Vandal award winner. The 6-2, 205-pound senior from Pocatello has come on like gangbusters during the past three weeks.

He led the Idaho offense to 548 yards total offense including 335 yards on the ground. They also set a new school mark for first downs by rushing (23). The old mark was 22 against Weber State in 1974.

Hurlers Palmer, Seaver named for comeback of year awards

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles and Tom Seaver of the New York Mets, who struggled through injury-plagued seasons a year ago, have been named Comeback Players of the Year in their respective leagues by United Press International.

The two right-handers, both former Cy Young Award winners, rebounded from the worst seasons of their professional careers to top their respective leagues in victories in 1975. Both were runaway winners in a balloting of 20 baseball correspondents from each league.

Palmer, who bounced back from a 7-12 season last year to post a 23-11 record, received 11 1/2 points to easily outdistance Cleveland's Boog Powell in the American League voting. Powell received four and a half points (one writer split his vote between Palmer and Powell) with Boston's Rick Wise receiving two votes and New York's Chris Chambliss and Kansas City's John Mayberry one each.

Seaver, who went 22-9 this season after going just 11-11 last year, was named on 12 1/2 ballots to beat out San Diego's Randy Jones in the National League voting. Jones received three and a half votes while New York's Dave Kingman, Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski, Cincinnati's Gary Nafziger and Los Angeles' Burt Hooton each got one vote.

The careers of Palmer and Seaver have moved along strikingly parallel lines. Both are the same age (30), both raised in the same state (California), both were Cy Young Award winners in 1973

(Seaver also won in 1969), each has won 20 or more games in a season at least four times each had his worst season in the same year and each is considered the premier righthanded pitcher in his respective league.

Disabled for seven weeks by arm trouble in 1974, Palmer enjoyed the best season of his pro career in 1975. He tied Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the New York Yankees for most victories in the majors and also led the majors in shutouts (10). In addition, he topped the AL in earned run average (2.69), was second in complete games (25) and innings pitched (323) and fourth in strikeouts (193).

Seaver, bothered by scapular problems in 1974, led the NL in victories and posted a 2.30 earned run average with five shutouts and 280 innings pitched. He also led the league in strikeouts with 243 while establishing a major league record for most consecutive seasons with 200 or more strikeouts (5).

Powell, who batted just .265 with 12 homers last season, was the Indians' top run producer this year with a .287 batting average, 28 homers and 86 runs batted in.

Camas County, Hagerman grab sub-district volleyball titles

Camas County and Hagerman volleyball sub-district championship girls took ball tournaments Thursday night.

Camas County took the northside sub-district title by defeating Shoshone 15-6, 15-12. Shoshone had climbed into the finals by beating Hagerman 15-12, 15-11.

On the southside, Hagerman won by dropping Valley 15-10, 15-3. Earlier Valley eliminated Kimberly 11-15, 15-6, 15-10.

Now that the sub-district titles have been established, the question is what next?

"It appears a large number of participants, and specifically the winners, don't want a district playoff."

At a meeting last year, the southside coaches understood an agreement was made under which each sub-district would send their top two teams to play for the right to advance to regionals against the third district competition.

Northside sub-district coaches understood the agreement as stating the two sub-district champions only would advance to regional without a district playoff and flip a coin for the regional seeding.

Possibilities of a district — although the trophies have been purchased — do not appear good since both Hagerman and Camas County would like the northside understanding to stand.

Meanwhile, the classification is looking for someone with the authority to make a decision. The district board so far has declined to enter into the thing for more than advisory purposes.

COMEBACK OF YEAR winners in their league were two pitchers. Jim Palmer, Baltimore, bottom picture, and Tom Seaver, New York Mets, reached career low ebbs a year ago for records of 23-11 and 22-9, respectively. (UPI telephoto).

Boise sophs top T.F.

Boise sophomores scored three times in the final eight minutes of the second quarter to beat Twin Falls 19-12 Thursday.

Tom Lynch scored on runs of five and one yards — the last one with seven seconds left in the half, and a 50-yard pass scored another.

John Miller set up both Twin Falls' scores. In the first period his fumble recovery at the 13 set up an 11-yard pass from Doug Pfeiffer to Dave Skinner. Miller blocked a punt in the fourth quarter, leaving

Netolicky retires

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Bob Netolicky, last of the original members of the Indiana Pacers, announced Thursday night he is retiring from the American Basketball Association squad.

A seven-year veteran of the Pacers, Netolicky also spent a year and six weeks with Dallas in 1972 and 73 and played with San Antonio in 1973-74 before being traded back to the Pacers. He was an all-star center 1007 times.

TF tops Jerome for net title

JEROME — Twin Falls nailed down the class A Volleyball championship Thursday night by defeating Jerome 15-12, 15-11.

Twin Falls defeated Jerome 15-7, 15-9 after surviving a scare and Jerome had come up with back-to-back victories to get there.

Twin Falls' score came in the session opener when Piler, the No. 2 seed, shellacked the Bruins 15-2. But Twin Falls rebounded to gain 15-8, 15-12 victories.

Jerome followed by eliminating Piler in a three-set game. The Tigers took the

Rumor puts McKay in pro ranks

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Amid strong reports that John McKay has decided to announce his intentions to coach the NFL next season, fourth-ranked University of Southern California meets the California Golden Bears Saturday in an important Pacific 8 football game.

Despite a 28-14 loss at UCLA last weekend, the Bears are 3-1 in the Pac-8 and still consider themselves alive in the race for the Rose Bowl. They're hoping a win over USC and a Trojan victory against UCLA Nov. 28 would put them in Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day for the first time since 1959.

The Trojans are coming off their biggest win of the year, a 24-17 triumph at Notre Dame last weekend.

Although McKay has remained mum on the subject, a Los Angeles television station reported this week that he was signed, sealed and delivered to Tampa and had recommended long-time assistant Dave Levy as his successor. McKay is in his 16th season as USC's football coach and also is the school's athletic director.

However, a USC campus news conference the station predicted for Wednesday, for a McKay announcement never materialized.

Reed claims TF golf title

Dick Reed, doubling as men's golf association president, topped a two-men year by winning the city golf championship.

Reed defeated Phil McRobert's 3 and 2 in the final round.

Richard Cook took the first flight by nipping Steve Baitiere 1 up on 19 and Howard Allen took the second flight with a 1-up decision over John Pirtle.

Third flight honors went to Chuck Potter, who defeated Steve Cover 3 and 2 and West Starlin dropped Jake Jakubowit 1 up to win the fourth flight.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOV. 1, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Don't have reservations on how you should get along with those of whom you are fond. Any changes now could upset whatever you have already put in effect.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You find you are satisfied with the part that others are playing in agreements you have made with them.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get right down to that fascinating work ahead of you and forget going off on any tangents. Spend within your budget.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Coming to a better understanding with mate is possible now. Your special talent is at its highest peak right now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get your home improved and then do some entertaining there. You can expand in new area of expression now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make appointments that will help you be more effective in your line of endeavor. Be more positive in your outlook.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) What whatever will make any property you have more valuable. Talk over with an expert whatever you don't understand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can go after your aims and get the right results provided you don't procrastinate. Use finesse with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You like to investigate and this is a time when you can come up with the right answers. Be logical.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have to make certain changes if you want to be successful in the future. Strive for increased happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to handle outside affairs, particularly whatever has to do with civic affairs. Be careful of schemers.

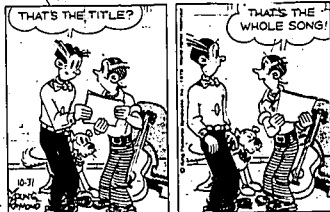

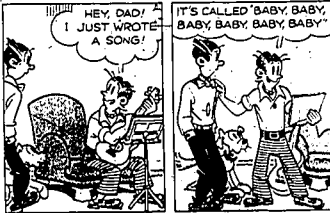

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get out of that rut and engage in new activities that can make your life more interesting. Add to present knowledge.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Follow your intuitive faculties since they are accurate at this time. Be careful of the opposite sex in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of whom others may want to spoil, so teach early to stand on own two feet and earn what is desired. Direct education along artistic lines. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Those students of population growth who like the word "illegitimate" now report it's the appropriate-term for 50 per cent of the children born in Brazil. They say it applies to slightly less than 15 per cent of this country's babies.

A CALIFORNIA oceanographer is trying to grow algae with the flavor of fresh pears. On the theory such a food might solve the world's grub problems, it's said he'd almost succeeded in making algae taste like beer. But that wouldn't do.

NERO

Quint Nero really play the fiddle while Rome burned? What historians think he played was an instrument called the lyre fiddle. They say he was about 35 miles away from the fire when it broke out. He hot-footed it into Rome immediately to boss the firefighters and help those burned out. Then he set up his headquarters in the Trans-Ver area which remained clear of the blast. And one night observers reportedly saw him on the roof of his pavilion, watching the flames on the skyline. They say he picked up his fiddle and sang a variation of the blues about it all. I gather the word fiddle led to our word fiddle.

CARRIE

If that temperance terror Carrie Nation wasn't primarily after publicity to promote her program, why was it that the first saloon she chose to chop up with her hatchet in 1901 belonged to heavyweight champion John L. Sullivan.

NOBODY in the world knows why whales commit suicide by beaching themselves.

LET'S SAY you have about 50 hours a week off the job just to fool around. How much of that time do you spend reading books? Approximately six minutes is said to be the average among grownups. Hold on, I know such a statistic is phony. There are those who do read books and those who don't, and the reading time among the do's is considerably diluted by the lack of same among the don'ts. Still, it's said. This abandonment of our literature comes to mind wistfully now and then, usually during the TV commercials at half time.

Won't my chances of getting results be better where there aren't so many other ads selling the same thing?

QA

 said, here's a good answer.

Where do you like to shop... a store which offers you only one or two choices... or one which offers you greater selection? Whether it's a suit or a dress, a pair of shoes or an automobile, most shoppers prefer several models or styles to choose from. This is also true when people are shopping the items offered for sale in the Want Ads. People are less likely to respond when only one item is offered for sale than when they have a selection to choose from.

You'll find it is easy and inexpensive to advertise with us. Just call the number shown below. We will help you word your ad for maximum response.
