As soon as LSAW... it was there," he says. Poulton climbed out of the demolished building from beside the hoist and although shaken, had only a few bruises and one scratch to show his narrow escape.

Ford may OK NYC bailout

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Without saying so, President Ford appears to have agreed to federal aid to help New York City — and to be taking credit for saving the city from bankruptcy.

The general expectation is that within a week or so, after negotiations between and among Albany, Manhattan, the White House and Congress, there will be signed legislation providing the federal billions that will be needed to preserve solvency in the city.

Washington's aid would still be needed under a $1.4 billion rescue plan — "the last chance to avoid default by New York City" — New York Gov. Hugh Carey laid before leaders of his state's legislature Thursday.

Legislative sources said the governor proposed massive increases in state and local taxes, budget cuts, a freeze on salaries for state workers and a plan to delay repayment of debts to city bondholders.

Washington in response. But I assume that they would not put us through this exercise for nothing." The governor and state legislative leaders planned meetings with Ford administration officials here today.

Officially, the White House said only that it was waiting for signed commitments from all participants in the Carey plan before it would make any commitments.

Treasury Secretary William F. Simon said in St. Louis it would be "premature and inappropriate" to say the administration accepts the Carey plan, but he did say it points in the right direction.

Albany and Congress read the signal as meaning Ford had abandoned his insistence that the city would receive nothing from Washington except assistance in entering bankruptcy.

Obviously, there has been finally a long last some serious action by New York City and New York state to solve their own financial problems," Nessen said Thursday.

Reuss was to go before the House Rules Committee today to seek clearance for House action early next week on the loan guarantee bill his committee has approved.

It would provide $7 billion in guaranteed loans, but Reuss said he was ready to accept Republican amendments to cut that figure to $5 billion.

Another development — A report said six banks across the country have invested 20 per cent or more of their capital in New York state, city and agency securities.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts went to Wall Street to try to convince investors that his state "has clearly passed the point where default is a serious possibility."

Panel OKs Rumsfeld

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee has voted unanimously to recommend that the chief of President Ford's staff, Donald H. Rumsfeld, be confirmed as secretary of defense.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., said Thursday he imagined the full Senate would vote next week on whether Rumsfeld would replace James R. Schlesinger at the Pentagon, part of Ford's shake-up of his top national security experts.

Stennis said the questions were some of the toughest he had seen and praised Rumsfeld's answers.

An exchange with Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., indicated how well Rumsfeld prepared, over and above the loose-leaf briefing book of expected questions drawn up by the Pentagon staff.

Jackson had submitted four written questions for Rumsfeld, dealing with strategic arms limitation. He asked Rumsfeld Thursday whether the State Department had any hand in preparing the answers, and explained he was worried that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger would have undue influence on Pentagon policies.

Rumsfeld explained how the answers were written: "I prepared some notes. I called a Defense Department expert on SALT, a civilian, to my office and we talked about them; then I talked to a military member of the same Defense Department office, then I consulted with a source outside the department and with the National Security Council to see if there were any changes. If there were, they were minor."

Rumsfeld said Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the President's adviser for national security affairs, was the NSC official.

However, he said, "It would be a disservice to let the Defense Department have the blame or praise for this. The answers are pure Rumsfeld."

Decision due soon on Carey Act land

By DAVE HORSMAN
Times-News writer

BOISE — Carey Act applications for temporary withdrawal of about 220,000 acres of federal land in Idaho will be decided by the end of this year, according to U.S. Bureau of Land Management (BLM) officials.

Fred Cook, a public affairs officer in the BLM's Boise office, today said federal action will be completed "in two weeks to a month and a half" on 35 applications for temporary withdrawal of 217,660 acres for development under the Carey Act.

Much of the proposed homestead land is in the Magic Valley. Cook said the applications have been distributed to BLM district offices for review and recommendations. They will be returned to the state office in Boise where a "special crash force" will work full time in processing them and forwarding them to the Idaho Department of Water Resources (IDWR), according to Cook.

The IDWR then will notify successful applicants that they have one year to complete feasibility studies of the land and apply for permanent withdrawal. If they are granted permanent withdrawal by the BLM and the state, the homesteaders will farm the land for five years, after which they may be given permanent ownership.

acres) and north of Lake Walcott (3,200 acres). The Burley district office has one application for 24,510 acres east of Burley and south of Lake Walcott. That application was submitted by the Lakeside Irrigation project, which has more than 90 participants, according to Nick Cozakis, manager of the Burley district.

The remaining applications are for land in the Idaho Falls BLM district. Cook said the current court dispute over Carey Act regulations will not affect the federal decisions on temporary withdrawals. However, it will affect applications for permanent withdrawals, he said.

The state has claimed that a husband and wife can file jointly on 320 acres under the Carey Act.

Chocolate chips lead to arrest

JEROME — A trail of chocolate chips led law enforcement officers to the home of a Hazelton couple who have been charged with first degree burglary.

Arrested were Loy Dean McAllister and his wife, Learn, and Lloyd Peoples, who have been charged with first degree burglary. Peoples' wife, Roma, has been charged with receiving stolen goods.

Gene Frederickson, prosecuting attorney, said the burglary was reported at the Hazelton Grade School. Several boxes of food were taken from the cafeteria.

Frederickson said further investigation by the Jerome County Sheriff's Department turned up a trail of chocolate chips which led from the school to the front steps of one of the suspects' homes.

FOREMAN Reid Lauderman checks the tension of wire as mousetraps move along assembly line on conveyor belt at Woodstream Corp., Little, Pa. The firm makes more than a million "Victor" mousetraps a year. (UPI)

Commune makes better traps of all kinds

LITTLE, Pa. (UPI) — In 1848 the members of a new commune in upper-New York state decided what they really needed, besides peace and quiet, was a good way to make money. So they made animal traps and in the 19th Century just about every American trapper used an animal trap produced by the commune. Woodstream Corp. in this small Pennsylvania Dutch community can trace its origins back to the beginning of the commune, which prospered and later became a corporation. And traps are still Woodstream's business. The outfit makes more than a million "Victor" mouse traps a year in a tidy little factory. "You know, mousetraps are not basically an impulse item," said John Reid, a Woodstream official. "People don't buy them unless they need them. They shop for price. Ours are cheaper." They cost about 25 cents. Woodstream also makes sporting goods and other products, but long after the brick building has crumbled Woodstream will be remembered for its mousetraps. John Mast is the father of the modern mousetrap. In 1890 he answered a challenge from a friend and developed the wood and spring device that is so effective in killing mice and rats. He opened his factory in Little around 1905, and shortly after Oneida Corp. bought him out.

creating the Victor Mouse Trap Co. Oneida went into the silverware business. In the 1920's and sold the trap company to three employees. The firm takes its mousetraps seriously. The plant is automated with machines that klunk and wheeze their way through tons of copper wire and pine-wood frames each year. Each mousetrap is a simple wooden block, a spring and a trigger molded by a machine into an efficient little weapon in the war against rodents. A big red "V" is the trademark. There have been refinements over the years — Victor markets a prebaited mousetrap that smells like a cheesy, three-day old salad. Its main ingredient is olive oil. Reid said the company also is beginning to push the disposable mousetrap — designed for the weak of heart. "The average housewife is just not that interested in seeing the body of a dead mouse right there in front of her, so she just tosses the trap and the body into the garbage," Reid said. What happens if someone comes along with a better mousetrap? Will the fortunes of the firm that started as a commune plummet? Will the world beat a path to someone else's door? Hardly. "If there was going to be a better mousetrap, it would be here by now," Reid said. "We've already got the better mousetrap."

Shelly Reedy

FAIRFIELD — Mrs. Shelly L. Reedy, 25, Fairfield, died Thursday morning in an automobile accident 30 miles east of Mountain Home on Highway 68. Funeral services are pending at Humphreys Funeral Home, Mountain Home. The aides provide transportation and do housework for older people. They are being paid off to balance the budget and to allow more emphasis to be put on child protection services in the region, according to Scott Cunningham, HAW Region V (Magie Valley) manager of administrative services. Cunningham said Monday that after the personnel budget had been set a new mandate came down requiring that caseworkers in the child protection area handle no more than 40 cases each. To meet this mandate the state would have to hire more caseworkers for the region. Since no additional funds were forthcoming, hiring of more caseworkers would mean cutbacks in other areas, he said. Laying off seven out of 15 personnel service aides involved in the community social service program will allow for hiring 3.5 caseworkers starting in January, Cunningham said. But, even with these new caseworkers, he said, the child protection service is still likely to be under staffed. Cunningham said a squeeze in federal funds also has helped cause the cutback. The services performed by the personnel service aides being laid off are not required in order for the state to receive federal funds, he said. The seven aides who are losing their jobs largely were involved in providing transportation services to older people. The eight aides being kept, he said, mostly are involved in providing homemaking services. Both tenure and an employee's performance were taken into consideration in determining who would be laid off, he said. "It's not a savings, in essence. It's a cost to the agency," Cunningham said. But he said, the department had to make the layoffs in order to "maintain budget responsibility." The aides, he said, "were at least notified in August and September that we had some real problems" and were offered assistance and counseling to find other positions. "Those who wanted to do something about it have," he said. According to Kent Henderson, HAW manager of social services in the region, the cutbacks are occurring "primarily because we really didn't receive the same amount of money from the legislature that we have asked for" and because of the ceiling on federal funds. For two years, he said, federal funds coming into the state have stayed about the same and the state has not made up for the impact of inflation. "For the past couple of years" he said, the department has had a staff of just about 58 persons in its social service programs. Now, he said, that "being reduced by seven." The department is hoping to hire four more caseworkers with the savings, but this is not certain, he said. Just to maintain its current staffing, Henderson estimated the social services program in this region would need about $50,000 yearly. In order to make up for the seven aides being laid off, Henderson said the department is planning to "hedge up" its younger program.

Jerome couple awaits sentence

JEROME — A Jerome County couple has pleaded guilty to charges of lewd and lascivious acts with minor children and await sentencing. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Anderson were arrested in September after an anonymous phone call to the Jerome County Sheriff's Department was received. Five charges of lewd and lascivious acts were filed against Kenneth Anderson, a 35-year-old construction worker, and two charges of lewd and lascivious conduct against Anderson's wife, Mrs. Anderson was also charged.

with one count of a crime against nature involving six dogs. Gene Fredericksen, prosecuting attorney, said Wednesday the Andersons asked to appear in Fifth District Court Nov. 4 where they pleaded guilty to some of the charges. Fredericksen said Anderson pleaded guilty to three counts of lewd and lascivious acts with minor children, and not guilty to the other two counts. Fredericksen asked that the other two counts be dropped. The court agreed. The prosecutor said Mrs. Anderson pleaded guilty on two counts of lewd and lascivious acts with minor children and not guilty to a charge of participating in an unnatural act involving dogs. Fredericksen said he asked that the last charge be dropped and the court granted his request. Fredericksen said the Andersons are still in the Jerome County jail awaiting a presentence investigation which will be held in conjunction with a psychiatric investigation. Under Idaho law the charges against the couple carry the same penalty that rape does and they would draw up to a life sentence.

Bush nomination withdrawal possible

WASHINGTON — The wholly predictable storm over President Ford's nomination of former Republican national chairman George Bush to head the CIA has forced the White House into a dangerously overzealous calculation of political realities, with withdrawal of the nomination now a possibility.

based on the President's suddenly expressed desire to keep Bush at his present post in Peking at least until Ford's China trip. If, as presently assumed, Ford goes to China within the next month, Bush would not be available for his confirmation hearing until well into December.

Precisely that probability was instantly perceived by Capitol Hill operatives when Ford summoned Colby back to the White House last week and asked him to stay at the CIA until a successor had been confirmed by the Senate.

Such a condition has now reached the state of gospel inside the Democratic Senate establishment, and particularly with Democrats on the Senate Armed Services Committee. Although Sen. John Stennis, conservative chairman of the committee, has said nothing at all, intimates of the highly influential Mississippian fully agree that all vice-presidential doors must be closed to Bush to avoid an inflammatory confirmation battle.

Failure of the President to consider this aspect of his appointment of Bush, a highly regarded and extremely popular politician, was further exacerbated during Ford's appearance on "Meet the Press" last Sunday. Instead of seeking to calm the rolled waters when asked if he should not eliminate both Bush and Secretary of Defense-designate Donald Rumsfeld from all consideration for second place on the 1976 Republican ticket, Ford bristled.

"I don't think people with talent... ought to be excluded from any further public service," he replied coolly.

Thus, the President's gravely mistaken reading of the political impact of the Sunday morning massacre continues in his failure to perceive that, to the controlling Democrats in Capitol Hill and many Republicans as well, the director of CIA must be above political suspicion.

But some presidential aides are more keenly tuned in to congressional frequencies. It is no accident that even though Bush's nomination has been formally sent to the Senate for confirmation hearings, no hearings are now scheduled for several weeks at best — and possibly not until next year.

That raises the question of a deliberate stall.

With Congress eyeing either Dec. 12 or Dec. 19 for the start of the Christmas recess, it now looks doubtful that Bush could be confirmed before next year. By then, with far deeper understanding of the anti-Bush sentiment, the President could make another mid-course correction, giving Bush a different post which would keep him available for a possible vice-presidential nomination next summer (the job Ford came within a whisker of giving Bush instead of Nelson Rockefeller last year) and naming someone else to succeed Colby.

Still one of Washington's darker mysteries is why the President chose to put the long-suffering Bush through such a wringer without understanding the political realities. White House aides normally involved with CIA affairs, including the congressional probes, knew nothing of Colby's sudden sacking or his replacement by Bush until too late.

Indeed, on top of the CIA's long misery in the grip of congressional investigations and press exposes, the Bush nomination is regarded by some intelligence experts as another grave moral deflator. They reason that any identified politician, no matter how resolved to be politically pure, would aggravate the CIA's credibility gap. Instead of an identified politician-like Bush — former member of the House, twice-defeated Senate nominee from Texas and vice-presidential aspirant — what is needed, they feel, is a respected non-politician, perhaps from business or the academic world.

Not all experts agree. One former CIA official wants the CIA placed under political leadership capable of working closely with Congress. But even that distinctly minority position rebels against any presidential scenario that looks to the CIA as possible stepping-stone to the vice-presidential nomination.

Speeding law should have teeth

Idaho's law setting a maximum speed limit of 55 miles per hour should be given some teeth. When the Idaho legislature, under federal pressure, reduced maximum speed limits from 70 to 55 m.p.h. during the "fuel crisis," it deliberately balked at serious enforcement.

Instead of leaving the speeder's penalty up to the judge's discretion as has been customary in speeding cases, the legislature set a maximum fine of $5 for any rate of speed up to the former speed limit.

And even the habitual petty speeder couldn't lose his driver's license because his customary infractions wouldn't count as points against him so long as the speed remained below the former levels.

This means that an interstate driver can purr along at 69 miles per hour with relative impunity. No wonder so many interstate truck drivers routinely move at excessive speed. They're making money by forgetting the Idaho law.

It should be a simple enough thing to straighten out the law. The Legislature can eliminate the provision for the $5 maximum fine and throw the penalty back to the judges. The offenses also should count against a driver's license.

It should be easy, but it won't be. A false issue has been thrown into the fray, which could slow down corrective legislation.

The false issue is whether or not the federal highway officials can "push around" Idaho. Idaho has been given notice that unless it controls speed on its highways, it could lose federal highway funds.

Idahoans, like people elsewhere, don't like to be pushed around. Idaho legislators are likely to bristle at the federal pressure, and the bad Idaho speed law likely will stand.

We hope the legislature can see the real issue: whether the state will enforce its own law.

The current law unwittingly encourages petty speeding and disrespect for the law itself.

Growing Senate staffs

Baltimore Sun

The Senate voted recently to add 120 committee staff members to its payroll, an increase of 10 percent.

Normally we support efforts to strengthen the Congress, but what the Senate did is not likely to make the Senate or its members more efficient. The new rules allow each member of the Senate who does not now control staff positions on committees to spend up to $101,925 a year for professional help in the area of his committee assignments.

Presently committee staffs are controlled by senior members, so the new rules will allow junior senators to enlarge their staffs. Now senior senators will tell juniors to use their own new aides even when there is a greater need for concerned committee staff effort.

Senators' personal staffs have increased dramatically, too. Joseph Tydings had a staff of 18 when Glenn Beall defeated him in 1970. Mr. Beall now has a staff of 31. If Mr. Tydings had had that large a staff in 1970 he might still be a senator today.

That is one thing that worries us about the continued growth of the staffs of senators and representatives; the political fortunes of incumbents are improved at taxpayers' expense. These aides are writing speeches and doing other political chores, particularly in election years.

A second thing that concerns us is that there is a vicious circle at work here; senators ask for more staff because they have wider responsibilities, and when they get more staff, they increase their responsibilities. Today's senator is spread so thin that he seldom can be an expert in anything.

Take the Tydings-Beall case further. Both served on the Commerce Committee. Mr. Tydings was on four of its subcommittees; Mr. Beall is on nine. Mr. Tydings was on 12 subcommittees; Mr. Beall is on 20.

Nine is too many; 20 is ridiculous. There are 147 Senate subcommittees.

Troglodytes make everyone's life miserable

WASHINGTON — The late Alben Barkley used to tell me late, but the story of the ungrateful constituent probably was old when Clever was young.

It is the oldest yarn in politics, and it always has timely application. In the Veep's version, he was campaigning one day in Breathitt County, down around Hazard, when an old mountaineer told him straight-out that he was going to support Barkley's opponent in the next election. The Veep was astounded.

"Who, Teecece," he said, "the first thing I did, once I got to be senator, was to make your Mam postmistress at Harshel! I got your Uncle Jub a job as deputy marshal in Lexington; and he can't even read. Last year I saw you got your crop loan, and when your Cousin Tilly got in a family way a couple of months ago, I sent her the government baby book."

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

"That's all true," said Teecece, rolling his good eye, "and I don't want you to think I've forgotten But, Senator, what have you done for me lately?"

Single term has appeal

I have read, or listened to, at this point, analyses by 32 commentators of the meaning of President Ford's reshuffling of last week, and all of them, and this one makes 33, ascribe primarily political motives to the entire transaction.

Simply now, but the arguments are in fact reducible roughly as follows: 1) GF has to get rid of Schlesinger because Schlesinger and Kissinger are on a collision course; and Kissinger is more valuable than S given his immense prestige.

2) Congress and the critics of CIA have got to have a victim, or else they will think GF insensitive to the crimes of CIA; therefore, Colby has to go.

3) The approach of Reagan requires that a couple of Vice Presidential alternatives should be catapulted into public view, or else R will get it by default; so bring Bush back from China, and send Rumsfeld over to the Defense Department, where he can be photographed not with typewriters and clerks in the background, but in queer battleships.

4) Let Rockefeller go without a fight — he has taken the hints like a gentleman. That will take some steam out of Reagan... And so forth.

When all this happened, and the most obvious people had been found by Walter Cronkite and Barbara Walters and the Washington Post and Associated Press, the time came to get comments from second-echelon people; so someone put in a call to John Connally. Guess where he was? In New Hampshire, conferring with Governor Thompson.

He did not say anything novel about the political meaning of the reshuffle. But he did reiterate a proposal he has been advancing in speeches around the country. It does not deter me, in endorsing the proposal, that I made it myself in a book published two years ago. Surely there was no reason to be especially zealous about Watergate and its "surrounding" implications bore on the compulsive desire by Nixon for re-election. Re-election becomes a compulsion. All of reality is subsumed to that goal. And so natural is it, thought by others, that the President should seek re-election that people whose instincts are truly normal, whose sense of the hierarchy of values is highly refined, get swept up by the ultranationalist passion to re-elect the incumbent.

me lately?"

Gerald Ford is suffering these days from the Barkley Syndrome. Over the past nine months, in an effort to please Republican right-wingers, he has stopped just short of urging honorary citizenship for Genghis Khan. He lifted their heavy hearts with Mayaguez. He has vetoed a string of big-spending bills. He has denounced excessive federal regulation. He has rejected the pleas of small Manhattan. Last week he gave his conservative critics the head and hide of Nelson Rockefeller. Has he thus won their hearts and minds? No, indeed. There is the Barkley question: What's he done for them lately?

The dramatic events of a week ago will not improve matters. "In dumping" Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, Ford dumped the ablest member of his cabinet and the figure most admired on the Right. In bringing Elliot Richardson back from England as secretary of commerce, Ford has honored a liberal viewed with our suspicion. In promoting Donald Rumsfeld to Schlesinger's spot, the President has boosted the career of an unreliable whip-sawyer too clever by half. So what if Henry Kissinger has been taken down a peg? So what if Rockefeller has been put in the family freezer? The disgruntled Right will not be appeased.

This is the way it is. Nothing on this earth — nothing under moon or sun — will squelch Ford's conservative critics. Willy-nilly, they will keep picking at him. He is their Mr. Everest. They climb him because he is there. Some fellow on television the other night was saying that Gerald Ford is the most conservative president since Hoover. I would have termed Ford the most conservative president since McKinley. No

If one were calmly to ask the question, in a roomful of Republican supporters — Ford, whether in fact someone else might do a better job as chief executive, one is treated as if having suggested the retirement of James H. D. to the Pettit Trianon.

This would pass, under the Connally Amendment, and its passing would I think prove a great blessing for the public. The standard argument against it is that the American people should not be prevented from renewing the mandate for their chief executive. But in fact they were prevented from doing so by tradition established by George Washington: a tradition written into the Constitution after Franklin Roosevelt — two terms, no more.

It is said that six years is an infinity if you find you have a bad president after the first year, and have to wait another five years to get rid of him. Comment: a bad president can be substantially immobilized by the Congress; and anyway, at least you are certain he will be removed in five years. No matter how bad he is, he might, through his public appeal and through the canny exercise of his powers, effect his reelection for another four years. In any event you are talking only about an additional two years; and we are trading off these two years against the organization of public policy and the resources of the executive for the sole purpose of effecting re-election.

Why does Ford want so badly to be elected president? He did not aspire to the presidency. He never entered a state primary. His ambitions were entirely within the House of Representatives, where he functioned extremely well. He is not surrounded by barbarians so that, like Cincinnatus dropping his plough with a sigh, he must take up arms and lead his country. And yet, if America is barrenest to an ambition which is entirely personal, Ford is a good man, with the right instincts, a better intelligence than he is given credit for, and he is a quintessential American. But his accession was something of an accident; and the insistence on his re-nomination is deemed a closed question by minds that would be liberated, the better to perform for their country; by the passage of the Connally Amendment.

matter. He is Mr. Nice Guy. My troglodyte brothers can't stand him.

My troglodyte brothers can't stand anybody long. Twenty-odd years ago, they were whooping it up for Richard Russell of Georgia. Then Russell made some overtures toward Walter Reuther of the Auto Workers, and it was Nixon on Die! For a time, Ohio's Robert Taft was their hero, but Taft made some moves toward public housing, Goodbye, Bob. My beloved trogs once had the hots for Ted Agnew, but he would have disappointed them soon or late. Now their idol is Ronald Reagan. Mark it down: If Reagan should be nominated and elected, six months won't pass before the sniping begins.

This is the nature of the breed. Out on the farthest reaches of the political Right; no contemplation is allowed. No sin is ever forgiven. In the lexicon of the true-blue trog, accommodation is a dirty word; compromise is equated with dishonor; and moderation is no virtue. The hapless Ford is now beyond redemption.

All right; Ford has been a disappointment! But considering the cards he's picked up — Inflation recession, the stigma of Watergate, the collapse of Vietnam — the frustrations that stem from a hostile Congress — Ford hasn't played his hand too badly. He's clumsy; he's inclined to take inept advice; he doesn't follow through.

But conservatives will not make themselves happier — they will only make themselves more miserable — if they succeed in so low-rating and maligning Ford that they destroy his candidacy in advance. He may not have done much for us lately, but if Humphrey wins, Humphrey will do nothing for us at all.

IT FINALLY TOLLS FOR THREE

Doctor's insurance law repealer asked by panel

BOISE (UPI) — A special legislative committee on malpractice insurance directed the Legislative Council Thursday to draft a repealer of a requirement that medical doctors must be insured to be licensed in Idaho.

Several committee members expressed concern over the mandatory provision included in legislation passed by the last session in face of a crisis over medical malpractice. They said they had received numerous objections from physicians throughout the state over the mandatory section.

State Rep. Jack Kennevick, R-Boise, moved that the repealer be drafted. He said this way it could be ready for consideration when the committee met again the first week of the next legislative session, which begins Jan. 4.

Committee members also agreed that at that time they could take up any other legislation with regards to malpractice.

Chairman Vernon Brassey, R-Boise, said proposed legislation was coming from the Idaho Medical Association. He added he was certain that the committee would have to submit proposals.

Brassey said he didn't feel the group should take any action until the committee had all the legislature. He said the only area he felt the committee should act upon was a repeal of the mandatory provision.

Rep. Herb Hill, R-New Meadows, raised the question on mandatory insurance. He said, "It is beyond me why we have to have mandatory insurance. Why is it forced on them (the doctors)?"

Sen. Robert Saxvick, D-Burley, said he thought the mandatory requirement was above and beyond provisions which allowed the doctors to become self-insured. He said this way "everybody shared the burden."

Kennevick said he thought the doctors felt if they started their own insurance company they "wanted to have the numbers so the money will be there."

Dave Vaughn of the Idaho Insurance Department said told the committee he thought the malpractice liability bill passed by the last session was in "limbo" because of a district court ruling that it was unconstitutional.

The bill provided for $150,000 liability by an individual and $300,000 by more than one person.

Rep. Ron Twiggler, D-Boise, said he felt that the longer the Idaho Supreme Court delayed in ruling on the district court's decision that the bill was unconstitutional "the better off we all will be."

Panel takes 'wait & see' stand on tax proposals

BOISE (UPI) — A legislative committee studying highway needs agreed Thursday it was premature to take positive action on tax proposals to provide additional highway funds in the next fiscal year to offset inflation and reduce gasoline revenues.

In fact, Senate Transportation Committee Chairman Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, suggested that the committee wait and see what Gov. Cecil D. Andrus has in mind.

"In the past he has proposed no tax increase," Budge said. "Let's wait and see his position."

Sen. E. V. Mellan, R-Ketchum, joined with Budge, saying "we'll get all kinds of hell on this when we get into the session."

He said the committee should take the various proposals presented by the Idaho Transportation Department to the Joint Interim Highway Needs Committee and study and talk with constituents and "maybe wait and see what the executive does."

Sen. Dick Egbert, D-Tetonika, said there was an obligation to point out proposals out to the people and inform the business community what is happening to the highway program.

The committee decision to put off action came after the Idaho Transportation board and officials of the State Division of Highways outlined the financial problems facing the state's road construction programs.

Transportation Director Darrell Manning told the joint committee that the legislature can come up with an additional $10.6 million for the next fiscal year there will be no new construction starts and highway rehabilitation will be eliminated.

Manning presented what he called an "auspicious, bare bones" budget. He suggested several alternatives to produce new revenue, including a gasoline tax increase.

The transportation chief stressed the importance of receiving the additional funds in order to provide $2.3 million for highway rehabilitation.

Manning said the $2.3 million was just about one-third of the necessary funds needed to keep the state's roads in repair. He said unless the state kept up with its maintenance program it would have to suffer the consequences.

Because of "inflation unknown in the history of this country" and the reduced revenue due to the 55 miles per hour speed limit and use of smaller cars, Manning said the department would not have the revenue necessary to keep existing roads repaired or match federal funds for new construction.

PUC grants IP request

BOISE (UPI) — The Public Utilities Commission Thursday granted Idaho Power Company's petition to receive $13 million over 10 years as the utility's share of liability for ending an agreement with Utah Power & Light Co.

In testimony, Idaho Power Company president James Bruce said the company entered into the agreement with UP&L in 1973 to purchase power.

Under terms of the agreement UP&L was to speed up construction of its proposed Naughton No. 4 generating facility to supply power to the Idaho utility through 1982.

Alternate energy, food sources eyed

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — "New sources of energy and food will be needed if food production is to keep pace with rising worldwide demands, University of Idaho College of Agriculture dean Aultie Mullins said Thursday.

"Unless alternate sources of energy are developed in the relatively short period we have left, the depletion of the world's petroleum reserves could cripple food production," Mullins said.

"Food-related energy consumption now amounts to a slightly more than one-ninth of our total energy use in the United States."

He said U.S. farmers will continue to use modern techniques to set high levels of efficiency in producing crops and livestock.

"In the short run, expansion in world food production will have to come from increased yields and greater conservation of all food products," Mullins told the Idaho Soil and Conservation Districts meeting here.

"And in the long-term future, new forms of food may be needed to supplement conventional foods."

He said about 60 per cent of the world's grazing land is unsuitable for cultivation while almost one-third of the world's potential crop production is being wasted due to pests and diseases.

He added that world population growth places a serious strain on available water, land, energy and all other natural resources.

He warned that world population is now increasing at a rate faster than world food production.

Suspect arrested in Gem

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — A man arrested in southern Idaho on a charge of reckless driving was identified Thursday as a suspect in armed robbery, kidnaping and rape cases at Holbrook, Mass.

Bannock County Sheriff's officers said the man identified himself to Pocatello police when he was arrested as Jan Steven Davis. Officers said a routine check with the National Crime Information Center revealed his identity as Steven Mattie, 24.

Attitude 'problem'

BOISE (UPI) — It's still possible to discriminate by race, color or creed but most individuals or organizations cannot economically afford to do so, a Seattle affirmative action consultant told an Idaho conference Thursday.

Larry Sanford, assistant vice president for the Seattle First National Bank, told the Idaho Conference on Family Planning Projects that the biggest barrier to providing equal opportunities is "the problem of attitude."

He said the writing of an affirmative action program is not hard but the commitment that comes from attitude is where many fall short.

"Without that commitment, affirmative action becomes a burden instead of a management tool and a way to do service," he said.

A good administrator, concerned with economics, must consider the potential cost to the organization through loss of funds, lawsuits or a tie up of funds through investigations, and the loss of customers through bad publicity.

Power demands studied

BOISE (UPI) — An interim report on the need for additional power generating facilities in Idaho released Thursday said Idaho Power Company will require "substantial" additional generating capacity to provide for future demands.

But the interim report prepared by Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., said the demands might not be as large as those forecast by the company.

The report is a preliminary assessment of the company's need for additional generating capacity. The Public Utilities Commission requested the report to help weigh the company's request for authority to build the Pioneer coal fired plant.

The final report is due late in January. The findings in the interim report are subject to revision in the final report.

It concentrates on the year

1985 as the end year of the period for which plans would now have to be made if a power shortage was predicted.

The "preliminary" results show the company's requirements growing by between 3.3 per cent and 5.5 per cent annually through 1980 and by between 2.5 per cent and 4.5 per cent annually during 1980-85.

The report concludes that the company's generation system planned to exist in 1985 — without Pioneer or three, small hydro generating plants — will be inadequate under median water conditions both in terms of average megawatt and peak megawatt capacity to meet the low forecasts.

"If critical water conditions occur the system would be severely in deficit," it said.

It said the situation could be improved with the addition of three potential hydro units —

'Cool it,' Jackie tells party-trotting Caroline

LONDON (UPI) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis has warned her 17-year-old daughter Caroline to ease up on her swinging lifestyle or expect a trans-Atlantic visit from her mother, the Daily Mirror said Thursday.

Mr. Rorip gossip columnist Paul Callan said Mrs. Onassis was upset by reports from friends and relatives "that her daughter has been recruited into the swingiest set in London since the sixties."

He said she "has burned up the telephone lines across the Atlantic" telling Caroline not to overdo the partygoing.

"Her last two calls particularly were lengthy sermons which can be summed up in two words, 'Cool it,'" he said.

Callan said Mrs. Onassis now is "particularly perturbed" over advance reports of an elaborate birthday party where Caroline plans to "whop it up" with her country set friends later this month.

These classes, Jackie satisfies herself within the next few days that her daughter is taking her advice. She may be coming to London to arrange a birthday party in her style — even if that may not be to Caroline's liking," Callan said.

The daughter of the late President John F. Kennedy came to London for a three-month art course at Sotheby's salesrooms, but Callan said much of the time has been spent playing and that Caroline has been late for classes three times in the past two weeks.

"An evening has hardly passed without some party — dancing at clubs, late dinners in chic restaurants not to mention lively country weekends," Callan said.

"What worries Mrs. Onassis particularly is that these reports have also reached Caroline's grandmother — the formidable Rose Kennedy — who is pressing her to bring the girl home," Callan said.

The columnist said Mrs. Onassis' dilemma is that Caroline was reluctant to leave the United States in the first place.

"Her mother's main purpose in sending her away was to separate her from some less than desirable friends," he said.

Squabble centers on badge

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — It might be county property, but the widow of Deputy Sheriff Wallace N. Schilling wants his badge.

"Our son David keeps saying, 'I want my dad's badge,'" Mrs. Jane Schilling said.

The two top officers in the sheriff's department have other ideas.

They said Schilling's badge would be placed on a plaque in the department's training school instead of being given to the family.

"It's county property," said Capt. Robert Blak.

"In 50 years — no, 50 months, even 50 days, who in that school is really going to care?" Mrs. Schilling said.

Schilling, 38, died when he was accidentally shot last month by a fellow officer in a struggle with a suspected auto thief.

"We have to maintain the authority of the badge and the authority of the law," said Blak, referring to the decision not to give the badge to the family.

Mrs. Schilling said she talked to Blak about the badge in October.

"He didn't want to be bothered with me about it. He was very rude," she said. "He said I shouldn't be bothering him any more about it. He said he didn't like me intimidating him on the phone."

Blak, questioned about this, said she was rude.

"I think what you're saying was reversed. She was rude. The onus is on her."

"I was very polite," he said. "I mentioned my heart went out to her. There was no rudeness."

Study confirms drink aids talk

CHICAGO (UPI) — A study costing several thousand dollars shows that some people might think it obvious: after a few drinks, the average person talks more and listens less.

Dr. Robert Smith of the University of Chicago said today he does not think his study is a waste of money or that the conclusion was so apparent.

He said he thinks public opinions "tend not to be based on very accurate information."

Most people think alcohol tends to reduce anxiety. But according to another study Smith conducted, that isn't true, "even in a non-threatening situation."

"Actually, it sometimes increases anxiety, which is quite opposite to what the general public believes," he said.

To determine the results of alcohol on social conversations of "relatively normal people," not heavy drinkers, Smith used 15 volunteer couples ages 21 to 35.

Some drank 80-proof vodka in two peppermint-flavored cocktails. Some drank two peppermint drinks without vodka.

Smith said the peppermint-vodka drink was used because "it had enough flavor so that it was difficult for a person to accurately say certainly whether he had alcohol or something else," and because vodka is used in many mixed drinks.

"Over all, alcohol appeared to make social communication more disorganized and intoxicated subjects seemed less likely to follow conventional rules of etiquette in their speech," Smith said.

"Participants broke into their partner's conversations more frequently, and their responses tended to show less acknowledgement of what their partner was talking about."

Smith said the study was conducted while he was at the University of California at Irvine and was funded by that school, the University of Chicago, and a federal grant.

He doesn't recall exactly how much it cost but it was in the "few thousand dollars range."

Stars meet Won Ton Ton at party

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Producer Adolph Zukor 102 and ageless Mae West were there.

So were Zsa-Zsa Gabor, Rhonda Fleming, Jackie Coogan, Cesar Romero, Jack Carter, Hugh O'Brian, Rory Calhoun and other stars who appear in the upcoming movie.

But the star of the end of the production party on the Paramount Studios sound stage was the star of the film — Won Ton Ton himself.

Won Ton Ton, a male German Shepherd, sat on a throne for much of the party for the cast of his first film, "Won Ton Ton: The Dog That Saved Hollywood." During the affair Zukor, Miss West and most of the stars came up to the throne to pay him homage.

The movie, a spoof on Hollywood tales of the chivalrous tale of a dog who becomes a big star, then starts in drinking and his Skid Row, but is saved in the end by a girl who loves him.

Lebanon fears kidnapping wave

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Troops clashed with Christian and Moslem gangs manning roadblocks in Beirut today and a new wave of kidnappings kept fearful residents barricaded inside their homes.

An army unit attempting to remove a roadblock in eastern Beirut killed a right-wing gunman, raising the casualty toll for seven months of fighting to nearly 4,000 dead and 8,000 wounded.

Several people were abducted at roadblocks today and more than 100 were kidnapped Thursday, Radio Beirut said. Many of the kidnap victims were later released.

Announcer: Sharif, Al

Akhawi, whose security reports are heard by almost all Beirut listeners, quit his post to protest the situation. He said he would not return until security forces controlled areas he reported safe.

Premier Rashid Karami called an emergency security meeting to discuss Thursday's shootout at Beirut airport and the wave of kidnappings that threaten to collapse the 13-day-old cease-fire between the rival militias.

As word of the abductions spread, banks and businesses shut down and the streets were left deserted as fearful residents locked themselves indoors.

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Thousands of Communist-led workers, shouting "victory, victory," freed Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo today, ending a 36-hour siege of his residence in exchange for higher wages.

A government spokesman said Azevedo "accepted" the wage proposals of the

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Our daughter, age 42, has Osgood-Schlatter's disease. Our family doctor diagnosed this a year ago when she began having pain in her knees when running.

Initially, she had cortisone shots in the knee and took aspirin for pain. Her activities were not curtailed. But during the past year she tried to participate in gym classes until her legs began to hurt her. Swimming does not seem to bother her.

The doctor tells us she may outgrow this by age 20. What else can you tell us about this condition? — Mrs. O.N.

Just below the knee cap, at the upper end of the big bone of the leg, is a bony prominence called the "tibial tubercle." It is at this point that the tendon of the kneecap (patella) inserts.

O.S. disease is a disorder in this tubercle. Injury or excessive irritation to the area can predispose a youngster to developing the problem. There may be a tear in the tendon at the point of insertion, or a bone chip, or a fragment. The problem is more common in boys, and there is pain on kneeling or with strenuous use.

The disorder can heal by itself in time, but it is difficult to say just how long it will take. It probably should occur well before age 20 in your daughter's case.

Some support, as a firm bandage, will hasten healing and lessen discomfort. Hydrocortisone injections are also used to relieve discomfort.

While some weight bearing is tolerated and permissible, exercise, such as jumping should be avoided. Swimming is ideal, especially since it does not bring pain for her and gives her an athletic outlet.

Your daughter may have tried to be a bit more active than was wise before the diagnosis was made. Patience is a part of the healing process in O.S.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

You recently discussed pregnancy masks in your column. I have nothing to be done for this? My daughter's face and neck broke out with dark blotches while she was carrying her first baby. After the pregnancy it went away.

Now she is in her charge of life and she is taking hormones. Do the hormones bring about the same pregnancy mask? If so, is there anything she can do about it? — Mrs. W.P.H.

The hormone therapy may well cause the mask if the dosage is high enough, especially if the earlier pregnancy and its attendant hormonal activity did.

If it does, only cosmetics will help, and there are several medically safe preparations on the market that seem to work well. I have had letters from women readers who have used them. They act as a sun screen and also as a base for regular makeup.

A dermatologist would be able to recommend one for your daughter. They probably were not available years ago when she first encountered the problem. I understand, too, from my readers, that they are now available in various shades to match skin tones.

I don't favor one over the other just so long as it is medically approved.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Would you please explain what viremia is? Also, its cause and cure? — M.B.G.

This is a general term that means there are viruses in the blood. It can mean nothing or it can be very significant depending upon the type of virus involved. You would have to be more specific.

Some viruses can be harmless, but all require susceptible host cells in order to multiply and become active.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 999, Elgin, Ill. 60120, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Explosion kills six in Jerusalem square

By MATHIS CHAZONOV UPI Reporter

JERUSALEM (UPI) — "Another one, another one," wailed a woman in the cafe as a powerful time bomb exploded only yards away, killing six persons and injuring 42 in a fury of fire, smoke and glass.

Only moments before, it passed within a few feet of the bomb — hidden in a hand truck near a Zion Square snack bar — and entered a cafe two doors away.

Suddenly, a deafening blast rocked the building, followed by screams of terror, and the crash of breaking glass as hundreds of windows shattered.

An unshaven man with wavy black hair staggered in from the sidewalk, his face twisted with pain and his knees doubled.

"I'm hit," he groaned and fell to the black and white tile floor, bleeding from wounds in his back and thighs. His blood made a pool a yard wide.

Outside, people ran back and forth, screaming for help and ambulances.

A dead man lay face down in the gutter outside the Migash Habourkas snack bar. His body was blown in half at the abdomen and the two parts lay a foot apart.

The 20-pound bomb exploded during the evening rush hour Thursday, killing three women and three men and wounding 42 others. 10 seriously. Among the wounded was an American, Mrs. Lola Nunberg, 56, of New York City.

The Al Fatah guerrilla organization claimed responsibility for the blast, which came on the first anniversary of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat's appearance before the United Nations.

A smaller bomb placed in the Mahane Yehuda market, 800 yards from Zion Square, was discovered and safely dismantled 45 minutes before the explosion at the snack bar.

Authorities questioned about 200 Arab suspects in connection with the blast. The Israeli government sent additional troops into the city to bolster security.

Mrs. Nunberg, who was on a two-month visit to Israel with her husband, said she was boarding a bus when the explosion knocked her to the pavement.

"I was one step up on the bus and then I saw fire and I fell down," she said. "The explosion knocked me down on the sidewalk. I was not able to walk on my feet. In fact, I was not feeling my foot. I was hurt and bleeding."

A Dutch tourist, Gerhard van Drent, 47, of Rotterdam, said, "The force of the explosion knocked me into a car. A man lay beside me dead."

"Every day another bomb," said one spectator in the crowd of hundreds milling about the hastily thrown-up police barriers.

Paul Gauguin, the famed French painter of South Sea Island scenes, spent six years of his childhood in Arequipa, Peru.

Cassia charter fete tonight

BURLEY — The Cassia County Historical Society holds its annual charter night banquet tonight.

The annual dinner will be at 7 p.m. at the Ramada Inn. It will be followed by a documentary film, "Heritage '76," which includes an account of the Sleepy City of Rocks.

The slide-sound program will be presented by A. W. (Al) Dawson, former-Burley resident and now oral history coordinator for the Idaho Bicentennial Commission. It is open to the public.

The script for the documentary was written by Dawson and narrated by Dennis Dunn of radio station KIDO as part of a volunteer production staff.

Lillian Dawson selected and synchronized 145 old photographs, maps and drawings. They included photos from the state's historical societies, some from the Cassia County collection.

The presentation was produced under auspices of the Idaho Bicentennial Commission and the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, with help from the National Park Service.

It describes this area from 10,000 years before recorded history to the white man's arrival in the Northwest and presents a series of vignettes of Idaho history.

These include the account of the City of Rocks and the area's designation as the "crossroads of the pioneers."

This will be the first time the documentary has been shown in the Mini-Cassia area. Dawson has been showing it in various cities since its release six months ago and estimates that 3,000 people have now seen it.

Other features of the evening include a display of the society's crafts projects, which are under the direction of Ruth Miller. They include spinning, remarking Indian weaving and macramé.

Program chairman Keith Amende, historical society director from Albion, said several youngsters will demonstrate the skills. A macramé flower pot hanger will be awarded as a door prize.

Mike Feller, president of the society, will act as master of ceremonies. Musical entertainment will be furnished by Ralph Heller of Albion.

DEAR ABBY: We will have been married 10 years next January. Since we didn't have any fanfare when we were married, my husband promised that we would have a big blow-out on our 10th wedding anniversary.

I booked a band and hired a hall and made deposits on both. Now out of the blue, my husband says, "Cancel everything!" I asked him why, and he said, "I just don't want it."

I know it's not the money. Even if I were, I'm able to pay for it myself, as I have a good job.

I know there's no other woman. So what should I do? I don't want to make him angry, but I really want this anniversary party, and I don't think he should go back on his word. Please guide me.

WANTS TO CELEBRATE

DEAR WANTS: Cool it for a while. He may have had a bad day. Don't mention the celebration until a month before the date. Then when he's in a good mood, hit him with your guest list and ask for his approval and suggestions.

If he still balks, you'll have to cancel the band and hall and probably take a loss on the deposits. You can't very well have an anniversary party without him.

Good luck. I'm in your corner.

Candy sale under way

JAMMIE Riddle, Phyllis Nield and Kerry Troodwell from left, display candy they and other Camp Fire Girls will be offering for sale beginning today. The sale will run through the first week of December and proceeds of the sale will be used to finance Camp Fire Girls activities for the coming year.

She wants to celebrate

DEAR ABBY: I am 21-years-old and my boyfriend is 20. We've been going steady for a year and three months. Being a very up-front gal, I told my boyfriend all about my past, and it just so happens that I have gone to bed with more guys than he has gone to bed with girls.

He wants to marry me, but he says first he wants to even the score.

Should I just sit around and wait for him to catch up with me?

J.

DEAR J: If you do, you are even more immature than he is, which in my opinion is far too immature for marriage!

DEAR ABBY: We have a boss in our office who has got to be the world's most conservative man.

Although he has a car, he won't buy a second car for his wife. Instead, he has her drive him to work every morning, and every evening arriving quitting time, it's like Russian roulette to see who he asks to drive him home.

Since we all need our jobs, we never turn him down, but after two years of this, it's really an imposition. (Some of us have taken to hiding around quitting time so we won't be asked.)

We are all tired of driving out of our way to accommodate him, but nobody has the nerve to tell him how we feel about it.

Can you help us?

UNPAID CHAUFFEURS

DEAR CHAUFFEURS: Compose a letter advising the boss that the office crew has just gone out of the taxi business—and have everyone in the office sign it. I doubt that he'll fire the entire office force on masse. (P.S. If that doesn't work, put in an expense account for mileage.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: What are you doing Saturday night? If you want to see me, I'll be on the Miss Teenage America telecast on NBC.

ABBY

clubs. South could count on five clubs and six spades. Give his partner an ace and seven would wrap up. He Blackwood, "found" out ABOUT THAT ACE and bid seven notrump.

In rubber bridge he might well have bid seven spades to score the 150 honors. In duplicate bridge, where honors don't count, there were two reasons not to. The first was that notrump counted 10 points extra and 10 points could win a match-point game. The second was that if some one held six trumps to the nine spot against him the spade grand slam would not make, but there would still be 13 notrump tricks.

When you use an artificial two-club opening with the two-diamond response to show a very bad hand (no ace, no king, no two queens) and an artificial two-heart response to show some values, but no definite bid, then the responses of two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and three clubs become natural. Most players have decided that these suit responses should guarantee a suit of five cards or more, headed by at least two of the four top honors.

Today's North-South were playing this method in a match-point game headed by at least two of the four top honors. Once North responded three

A Kentucky reader wants to know how to bid against the Woodson two-way notrump. Fortunately, this bid is like the whooping crane and is almost extinct. The opening notrump shows either 10-12 or 16-18 points. The best way to handle it is to let the user get into trouble on his own. He will do so.

Cardinals over 80 denied pontiff vote

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI ruled out today the participation of bishops in choosing his successor, confirming the nine-century monopoly of cardinals in electing the Pope.

He offered a concession to reformists, however, by formalizing his earlier ruling stripping cardinals over 80 years of age of the right to participate in the voting.

The 78-year-old Pope also argued that technicians inspect the site of the cardinals' conclave to ensure a secret ballot and check for electronic eavesdropping devices.

"The right to elect the Roman pontiff belongs solely to the cardinals of the Holy Roman Church," the Pope said in a decree.

"Any intervention of any other ecclesiastical dignitary of lay power at whatsoever degree and order is absolutely excluded," the Roman Catholic reformists had pressed for a broadening of the electorate eligible to choose the next Pope.

Pope Paul said twice before he was considering giving six Oriental patriarchs and some bishops participation in the papal vote.

A Vatican spokesman said the Pope dropped the plan because the patriarchs themselves opposed it.

Tussock moth studied by Idaho science team

University of Idaho student studying moth

Bigger crop due

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Washington Wheat Commission said plantings indicate next year's crop will be in excess of this year's record 140 million bushel harvest.

"For that reason, the commission plans to send a two-man team to Washington, D. C., to arrange additional foreign sales."

Traditionally, about 90 percent of the state's wheat crop is exported, but this year's record crop has resulted in an abundance of grain.

Carey withdrawal decision pending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management is expected to release its decision on Carey Act land withdrawal applications within the next few days, Rep. George Hansen said today.

Some of the applications have been before the agency for as long as two years, Hansen said. Hansen said he learned the bureau is close to completing its decisions on classification of various lands for approval of one-year temporary segregation.

"The Idaho State Department of Water Resources then becomes the applicant on behalf of individuals and has up to one year to pass the site can be developed agriculturally," Hansen said.

"Once proven, the land is then released on long-term ventures by the BLM," he said. "The State Department of Water Resources and BLM is then responsible for monitoring compliance to the development plan."

"Although there have been numerous delays due to various reports required, particularly environmental studies, it appears BLM is now about to move on the applications," Hansen said.

"These releases will lead to further land development through the use of private capital which means more farms, more agricultural output for the nation and more jobs and more income for Idahoans."

MOSCOW — Scientists at the University of Idaho are studying the biology and control of the Douglas-fir tussock moth in Northwest forests, hoping to uncover better ways to handle future outbreaks of the forest pest.

Howard W. Smith and Arthur R. Gittins of the UI Department of Entomology are studying the parasites and predators of the dusky-maroon moth which stirred much controversy between environmentalists and foresters during a major outbreak in 1973 and 1974.

Native to this region, the Douglas-fir tussock moth remains at relatively low population levels most of the time. If cause no appreciable damage at these endemic levels, and probably goes undetected to anyone but the trained observer.

However, every six to 10 years the pest population explodes into epidemic proportions. Tussock moth caterpillars kill thousands of trees and stunt the growth of thousands more because of varying degrees of defoliation or needle loss. The quality of future timber supplies is frequently reduced because of the insect's damage to a tree's main shoot or leader.

Very dry weather, coupled with large tussock moth populations, increases the chances of forest stand losses. These circumstances coincided in 1973 and 1974 to produce a major outbreak in the Northwest.

The economic impact of tussock moth damage differs from one kind of forest owner to the next.

"Government and large timber companies can usually absorb the losses; small landowners usually cannot," Smith asserts. The threat of the recent and still controversial — spraying program which used DDT was toward assisting the small landowner who could hardly afford to lose even a single acre to "moth attack," Smith says.

Working jointly, the team of entomologists already has staked out 81 one-tenth acre plots in northeastern Oregon near LaGrande. These timber stands are typical of those throughout the Northwest that might be attacked by the tussock moth.

Besides a preliminary study of the vegetation on each plot, the UI entomologists are taking a census of the forest insects and living on the experimental sites.

"As far as we know, there are very few tussock moths on these plots at the present time," Smith says. He indicates that this may make it easier to see the impact on other forest insects of planned, experimental spraying.

Next year, U.S. Forest Service personnel will spray one of three or more experimental pesticides on most of the plots.

"We'll be looking at the entire forest environment on each plot before, immediately before and after spraying," Smith says. "In 1977 — the final year of the three-year study — we will check on how the moths, other insects and trees are faring during recovery from spraying."

To catalog the parasites and predators themselves, the research team is collecting for laboratory rearing tussock moths and all other insects that could be alternate hosts of the parasite wasps and flies. They are being gathered from plots in northern Idaho, near Coeur d'Alene and in the Flathead Lake area near Polson, Mont., where there have been recent tussock moth outbreaks, as well as from plots near LaGrande, Ore.

"While parasites sometimes knock-off up to 80 percent of the tussock moth population, we still don't know how much effect many of them have," Gittins points out. Although there are about 60-80 known parasites throughout the entire Northwest range of the moth, probably only half that many are present in any one area, the entomologist says.

The UI scientists' projects, which are funded by Cooperative State Research Service grants totaling $30,000, are part of an accelerated Douglas-fir tussock moth research program by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Congress has funded the program at about $6 million for the three fiscal years 1975 to 1977.

Purpose of the concentrated research effort is to learn about the tussock moth's life history and habits, determine what causes its cyclic population explosions and look for feasible means of control. Other researchers, primarily foresters, at the University of Idaho and elsewhere are focusing on the traits of individual trees and entire forest stands which influence tussock moth outbreaks. They are also looking at ways to predict the degree of moth damage and to manage moth-attacked forests.

Scientists from cooperating universities, state and federal agencies throughout the region are all work on the special project. Information from these studies will provide an ecological basis for developing better pest control practices.

Texas horse rustling thriving to meet European dining demand

DALLAS (UPI) — Horse rustling, a crime which once brought the death penalty in equine-dependent Texas, is becoming a thriving business again because of European dining preferences.

Slaughter houses in Fort Worth, Ladonia, Houston and Palestine are butchering horses for export to Europe, principally to Germany, France and Belgium, where the horse is a primary food for dog food in the United States, is considered a delicacy.

"At one time, killer buyers were paying as much as 32 cents per pound for healthy, well-bred horses," said Mervyn E. Tex., Police Sgt. Donald Robertson, himself a horse owner.

"Anything over 1,200 pounds was bringing top-dollar. Man, they were grading them out like helters."

"A 1,500 to 1,200 pound horse brings in a lot of money and quite a few people are taking note of that. About the time the horse meat price skyrocketed, a lot of pastures came up empty and owners started calling in about missing horses."

Six horses, including an expensive quarterhorse racing mare and a $20,000 stud, currently are missing in the Dallas suburb of Irving. Five more were taken in nearby Mesquite.

"There isn't an urban area in this state that isn't having problems with horse thefts," said Don King, an officer of the Texas Southwestern Cattlemen's Association.

"Horse rustling has definitely been on the upswing. There's a good market apparently for the meat. We're not losing all that many ranch horses, but horses in the urban areas — well, that's another thing."

Charlie Hodges, an investigator for the Cattle Raisers Association, said rustlers don't hit well-guarded ranches where they might be spotted.

"Most of the thefts take place around the metropolitan areas where horses are boarded in pastures without people living on the place," he said.

The thieves just pull a trailer to the pasture — usually at night — take down a fence, load up the animal and calmly drive away.

"And if you get ripped off, it's like looking for a needle in a haystack," Robertson said. "They are hard to trace. No one likes to brand their horses."

"Usually the thief will take them to another state to sell them to a killer buyer — usually Oklahoma or New Mexico — and once they're butchered, there's no way to track them."

Packhouse operators are particularly sensitive to the fact they may have become the ultimate fence for stolen merchandise.

Mike Estes, general manager of the Baltic Corp. in Fort Worth, said his workers check every horse they have bought when they are notified about a missing horse.

Gem growers elect

BOISE (UPI) — Robert Slach, a Nepesee-area farmer, Wednesday was named to succeed Max Parkinson, Ashton, as president of the Idaho State Wheatgrowers Association.

Robert Geddes, Bannock, and Jerry Johnson, Worley, were elected vice president and secretary at concluding sessions of the association's 19th annual convention.

The wheat growers adopted several resolutions, including some pertaining to export sales and the federal government's moratorium on wheat sales to Russia. These included:

- Calling for financial support for the national association of wheat growers.

- Proposed legal action against the federal government's interference in sales to Russia and Poland.
- Supporting a national policy of unrestricted exports.
- Calling for a united effort by involved federal and state agencies to eradicate Mormon cricket infestations.

Energy key to growth

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — New sources of energy and possibly new forms of food will be needed if food production is to keep pace with rising worldwide demands, an agriculture professor said today.

Dr. Aulis M. Mullins, dean of the University of Idaho College of Agriculture, told the state meeting of the Idaho Soil Conservation Districts that depletion of the world's petroleum reserves could cripple food production and processing industries unless alternate sources of energy are developed.

"Food-related energy consumption now amounts to slightly more than one-ninth of our U.S. total energy use," Mullins said.

American farmers will continue to use modern technologies to set high levels of efficiency in producing crops and livestock, he said.

"In the short run, expansion in world food production will have to come from increased yields and greater conservation of all food products," he said. "In the long-term future, new forms of food may be needed to supplement conventional food production."

To gain consumer acceptance, he said, new kinds of food will have to be palatable as well as nutritious.

Weak laws listed among crime causes

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

BOISE — Light sentences, a high percentage of probation and weak laws are chief causes for crime in Idaho, according to Ben Cavness, president of the Prosecuting Attorneys' Association.

right to disqualify. Under Idaho law, both prosecutor and defense attorneys have the right to disqualify one judge without stating cause.

Cavness, who is also chairman of the Region 3 Law Enforcement Planning Commission, warned a meeting of the Idaho Police Chiefs and Sheriff's Association in Boise Thursday, law enforcement agencies are going to have to "start solving the problem."

Cavness says victims who report crimes, grow angry when they see the criminal back on the streets in a few weeks.

He says they give light sentences, too many probationary sentences and make convictions too difficult to obtain.

"It's the guy that's mad at (the police) when the offender is not in the penitentiary," Cavness says.

Citing a 26 per cent increase in crime, Cavness says the association is running a test in Boise and other areas. It shows a very low percentage of those convicted of robbery are sent to the penitentiary.

Cavness also called on prosecutors to make use of automatic disqualification to eliminate judges who make conviction difficult or hard down light sentences.

In some places, he says, law enforcement officers have poor arrest records. He charges chiefs and sheriffs with responsibility to help change weakened laws and then to enforce them.

Cavness charged that many judges, because of lenient because they know the state will not appeal the case. They let young defendants to avoid having decisions appealed.

He says measures are being considered to legislate a determinate sentence, so everyone convicted does time in jail.

"Probation is no deterrent," he says. The prosecutor revealed that efforts are being made to renew the felony murder law, which provides that a death during commission of a felony is basis for a murder charge.

He says prosecutors and law enforcement officers should be constantly aware they have the right to disqualify. Under Idaho law, both prosecutor and defense attorneys have the right to disqualify one judge without stating cause.

It seems that criminals are inordinately protected so that society is inordinately unprotected," Cavness charged.

Airline shifts, eyes expansion

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In an about-face from past predictions just last week Air Idaho now says it is set on expansion.

The airline plans to acquire new aircraft, increase scheduled flights, fly charters into Canada, expand airfreight service and provide maintenance services to other airlines, according to Calvin Anglin, Huntington Beach, Calif., Greater Idaho's new vice president and chief operating officer of the corporation's subsidiaries.

Greater Idaho Corp. owns Air Idaho, Pan-Am, Trans World Airlines and several other companies. In 1971 Greater Idaho is owned by Dalhart, an Oklahoma City, Okla., corporation formed last spring by five men.

Last week Greater Idaho President John Hadley, San Clemente, Calif., told the Times-News that an "ultimate decision" on whether to sell Air Idaho, but it doesn't keep it open was to be made soon. He said the airline was sporadically losing money or just breaking even because the Idaho Public Utilities Commission would not give it permission to fly passengers to points within Idaho.

But as of Wednesday Anglin is no longer president of Greater Idaho. Hadley said. He said Hadley remains as a director of Dalhart, but that Rudy Lang, Palm Springs, Calif., is the new president of Greater Idaho.

Hadley said that Hadley's departure as president is not related to differing opinions on Greater Idaho's future by other directors of Dalhart, but to Hadley's having another job to do in Florida or somewhere.

Anglin said the changes took place at a Dalhart board meeting.

"We have decided to expand the airline. We're remodeling the fleet. We're going into intercity card sales. We're adding new flights starting Dec. 13. We're presently negotiating for the acquisition of some better aircraft. We're negotiating new interline agreements with every major carrier and we're presently equipped to write you a ticket for anywhere you want to go in the United States. We're getting cleared to charter into Canada," Anglin said Thursday.

He said it's true that Air Idaho has been sporadically losing money or breaking even since the beginning of the year. But he maintained that the airline has been rapidly building up the number of passengers it serves and is a sound financial investment.

"It's no use in shutting the thing down. It looks like we're going to start making money," he said.

Because of an agreement worked out this summer with Western Airlines, Anglin said that making use of Air Idaho will be the cheapest way for people coming into Salt Lake City, Utah, to go to Sun Valley. He predicted this factor would boost passenger use of Air Idaho tremendously during ski months.

On Dec. 13, he said, Air Idaho will add more weekend flights between Salt Lake and Sun Valley and Salt Lake and Twin Falls.

Next week, he said, Air Idaho plans to take a look at two Eastern new planes it may want to purchase.

The airline is also planning to use its Federal Aviation Administration certification to provide maintenance services to other airlines, he said.

Between the new flights, charters, more air freight service, and the maintenance station, Anglin maintained that Air Idaho will make a profit even if the PUC does not grant it permission to carry passengers between spots within the state.

The commission last spring denied an intra-state permit to Air Idaho because the airline had failed to get permission from the IPUIC before it changed ownership, according to an IPUIC spokesman.

Buhl man missing

TWIN FALLS — A search is underway in Twin Falls County for "Buhl" Fire Chief Walter "Duh" Harnar missing from his home since Wednesday afternoon.

Acting Sheriff T. M. Kendrick said the family reported Harnar missing Wednesday afternoon.

Two planes were flown over the south and west areas of the county Thursday afternoon without any success. Kendrick said. He said the Buhl officers have covered Snake River Canyon, and the sheriff's officers flew the reservoirs in the Honeoyah and Salmon Dam areas.

An air search also was made of Cross Creek, Devot Creek and as far west as the Saylor Creek desert area.

Kendrick said Harnar was last seen about 4 p.m. Wednesday when he drove away in an older model light blue Ford pickup truck.

It was not believed he had gone fishing or hunting, Kendrick said, although he had a gun in the pickup, family members said. At first reports indicated the pickup had a camper bed, but later it was reported the camper had been removed.

Kendrick said Harnar, in his 40s, is not believed to have health problems or difficulties at the fire department. He said officers have not been able to determine why he would leave and not return to job or family.

TF man asks $50,000 in damage suit

TWIN FALLS — A $50,000 damage suit has been filed in Fifth Judicial District Court by Tim Qualls, chief of detectives in Twin Falls, as a result of a magazine article.

The suit names Jim Scott, writer, and popular Publications Inc., publishers of Argosy Magazine, as defendants in the suit.

"He charges the writer with damaging his reputation as a law enforcement officer and damaging him professionally as a result of an article, 'The Vigilantes Are Back,'" which was printed and circulated in Twin Falls and other areas in February, 1975.

In the article, on page 32, the complaint states the article said a bomb had exploded in the Twin Falls courthouse.

"I don't blame the sheriff. He does not have enough men to watch everything," the suit quotes the article as saying.

In a meeting of 160 men which was held in 1974, the complaint continues quoting "Ten Qualls chief of detectives for the city police, spoke in favor of a posse. It was on his property where Knevel was his abortive canyon jump."

Qualls charges the defendants deliberately acted to damage his reputation and position as a law enforcement officer. He asks $25,000 in general damages and $25,000 punitive damages.

today in brief

4 escape injury

TWIN FALLS — When a heavy runaway hoist machine crashed into the Zesto drive-in in Kimberly Road Thursday morning, demolishing the drive-in, owner Ted Poulton climbed from the debris with only a scratched finger.

He said although the machine was demolished, he felt fortunate he and three employees escaped with their lives. When the careening machine came to a stop it was almost touching him, he said.

Not everyone in the Poulton family is so lucky. Mrs. Poulton was taking the couple's grandchildren to kindergarten in an hour or so later when she stepped in a hole and broke her leg.

"I think she's trying to steal some of the limelight from me," Poulton said.

Kimberly extends bus route

KIMBERLY — Kimberly school trustees have extended the bus route north of town for one-half mile off Falls Avenue on the morning run only.

Supt. Vernon Exner said 17 children who live in the area have been picked up on Falls Avenue, but that many youngsters congregating on the road pose a safety hazard. After school they will be dropped off on Falls Avenue as they will be dispersing to their own homes and not waiting on the highway.

Trustees approved plans at the monthly board meeting Monday night to allow teachers to participate in a tax sheltered annuity plan with October designated as the time for signing.

James Monroe, high school principal, and Exner reviewed anticipated enrollment for next year and curriculum changes to accommodate it. There are around 50 seniors this year, but the junior class numbers 50.

Vandals break windows

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls business firms suffered window damage by rock and brick throwing vandals Thursday night.

Officers said Monte Evans, janitor at Hellman Credit Corp., 137 Second St. W., notified officers at 8 p.m. when he found a broken window and rock inside the building. Damage was estimated at $200.

Walker Furniture Co., 433 Main Ave. E., was also damaged when two windows were broken. Two large bricks were found about 15 feet inside the building from the broken windows. Damage there was listed at $250.

At the Mountain States Mobile Homes, 1500 Kimberly Road, another window was reported broken, but officers said it was apparently not broken by a thrown brick or rock. Damage was estimated at $100 there.

TF firm reports cash stolen

Israeli withdrawal said 'key to peace'

By BILL LAZARUS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A just peace in the Mideast will only be achieved when Israel withdraws from Arab lands and recognizes Palestinian rights, an anti-Zionist Mideast expert said here Thursday.

The United States and Russia or a "mini nuclear war" between the Arabs and Israelis, he said.

"The Israeli government has said it wants peace, but in practice it appears to want a piece of Egypt, a piece of Syria and a piece of Palestine," he said.

"No Arab country can come to accept the Israelis until the Israelis accept the Palestinians," Dr. Edmund Hanaouer told a group of about 40 people at the College of Southern Idaho.

Hanaouer, who describes himself as "an American Jewish critic of Israeli policy," was invited to speak by Mothers Against Involvement in the Mideast.

While the Israelis have been unwilling to withdraw from Arab territories and to recognize Palestinian rights, many Arabs have been unwilling to recognize the existence of Israel, he said.

Hanaouer said the Israelis accept the Palestinians who are Israeli citizens and who are denied equal rights in Israel, about 1.5 million Palestinians who are in exile and about another 500,000 Palestinian refugees in the West Bank and Gaza Strip areas.

Now, he said, there are about 400,000 Arab Palestinians who are Israeli citizens and who are denied equal rights in Israel, about 1.5 million Palestinians who are in exile and about another 500,000 Palestinian refugees in the West Bank and Gaza Strip areas.

Hanaouer proposed that Israel grant "first class citizenship" to Palestinians and allow them to return home. He also proposed, at least for the present, a separate Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. A long term peaceful solution would be the joining together of the two states, he said.

In some places, he says, law enforcement officers have poor arrest records. He charges chiefs and sheriffs with responsibility to help change weakened laws and then to enforce them.

But he says prosecutors and law enforcement officers should be constantly aware they have the right to disqualify. Under Idaho law, both prosecutor and defense attorneys have the right to disqualify one judge without stating cause.

Phelps rips NCAA over restrictions

NEW YORK (UPI) — An annoyed "Digger" Phelps, coach of the Notre Dame basketball team, lashed out at the NCAA Thursday, claiming that the governing body of collegiate sports acted in haste when it passed a rule last August limiting college basketball traveling squads to 10 players. Phelps, here to promote his team's game with the Russian Olympic champion basketball squad at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 20, said the new rule was supposedly established for economic reasons but would result in destroying the morale of the players. "They're hurting the kids," Phelps said. "The whole system is to blame. We're all to blame, including me. Eighty NCAA institutions convened and rushed new rules through too quickly. The rule changes, which are hurting the kids, were made presumably for economic reasons and adopted by the NCAA's executive committee.

"It's always the kids who are getting hurt and we should think of the kids, not politics. We're too inconsistent and not looking out for the youngsters."

Phelps said the new rule, which limits traveling squads to 10 players while permitting 12 to be in uniform for home games, was bad for youngster's morale. "That has nothing to do with economics," Phelps said.

Phelps said the new rule might restrict his team in the forthcoming game with the Russians.

"We can only dress 10 players for the Russian game, even though Notre Dame is the 'home team,'" said Phelps. "But the Russians will have 12 men on their bench. Why the inconsistency? We have a few injured players, who will probably be okay by game time, but the Russians play rough and if we end up with only four players on the court, it'll be embarrassing for United States basketball."

The Notre Dame coach also said he was upset at the way the Amateur Athletic Union had given in to the Russians' request for a 30-second clock in their forthcoming game.

Phelps said that he earlier agreed to play the Russian team only if the amateur AAU would conduct the Notre-Dame-Russian game under NCAA rules and not international rules. "Put that in writing, put that in the contract, I told the AAU, and it was put in the contract," said Phelps.

But, Phelps said, the Russians wanted a 30-second shooting rule and the AAU, perhaps in keeping with Washington's detente theme, acceded to the Russians' request.

Phelps' words were in soft tones but the anger came through. Referring to the United States, he said: "We're always in the back seat and we were also in the back seat in the 1972 Olympics. Why are we puzzle me?"

He stated that in the Russian game "the officials will have to control the game or someone might get hurt."

Former NFL players fight for pension

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The attorney for seven old-timer grid pros said Thursday he will appeal the rejection of a federal court suit to obtain benefits from the National Football League players' pension fund.

The seven, all from Rhode Island, are fighting a pension fund rule that denied eligibility to those retiring before 1959. The suit was filed on behalf of more than 1,000 NFL players who retired prior to the cutoff date.

Chief Judge Raymond J. Pettine of U.S. District Court said the NFL Players Association had no obligation to include older players in the fund.

"Our present intention is to appeal to the First Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston," attorney Leonard Deod said Thursday.

The core of the lawsuit is a claim that late NFL Commissioner Bert Bell made an oral promise in April, 1969, that benefits would be extended to the older players as the fund increased.

Even if Bell made such a statement, there was no evidence he had the authority to make such a promise and at least one player's negotiator, Kyle Role, knew that, Pettine said.

The suit was brought by Albert "Hank" Soar of Pawtucket, 61, of "Cruelty" Obed B. Cranston; Frank "Mink" Maznielki of West Warwick; John P. Cronin of Gloucester; Walter "Pard" Pearce of Johnston; Orland F. Smith of Providence; and Raymond W. Monaco of North Providence.

The suit contended that more than 1,000 players excluded from the fund collectively spent more than 5,000 years as players from the inception of the league until 1959, helping it grow from a relatively obscure sport into the multi-million dollar business it is today.

USC will try new passer on Huskies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — "I'm excited," said University of Southern California's new starting quarterback. "I've really worked hard for this all season."

Mike Sanford, a 6-foot, 175-pound sophomore from Los Altos, Calif., has been named to replace Vince Evans, who quit Washington at Seattle Saturday.

Outgoing USC Coach John McKay hopes he can breathe some new life into the Trojans, sagging offense. Since McKay announced he was leaving to go to Tulane Bay of the NFL, the Trojans have lost two straight to virtually eliminate themselves from a shot at going to their fourth straight Rose Bowl.

"I did surprise me," Sanford admitted. "But I didn't find a good spring. Since I came here, my passing has improved a lot."

"I was mainly a running quarterback in high school. That confined me somewhat."

Evans played himself out of a job and sophomore Rob Hertel is out with a broken leg. Sanford beat out Max Carey, another sophomore who had been listed as the No. 2 quarterback after Hertel was hurt.

CONTOURING Andre Wakefield of CSI prepares to deliver a cripple as he flies between Sav-On Drug defenders during exhibition action Thursday night. CSI won 100-95 and the clubs meet again at 8:15 tonight at Bjarley gymnasium.

CSI Eagles outlast Ogden crew 100-95

With a plus and two minuses, College of Southern Idaho Idaho dropped Sav-On Drug of Ogden 100-95 in an exhibition game Thursday night.

The same two teams will meet again at 8:15 p.m. Friday at Bjarley high school gymnasium to wind up the exhibition tour before CSI's opener Nov. 22 against Northwestern Colorado.

Fresh Dwight Williams, hit a scoring spurge early in the second half to lead the way for the victory. But CSI coach Boyd Grant wasn't at all pleased with the showing against the ex-Weber aggregation.

"We were out-rebounded and didn't play well defensively," said coach Grant afterward. "But we scored well."

"It's a lonesome feeling sitting on the bench knowing the other team can score like that. But I was surprised with the ease that we scored, too," he said.

Most of Coach Grant's reason for apprehension came from Riley Wimbley who pleted up a lot of rebounds and threw through 37 points for Ogden.

Meanwhile, Williams, a freshman from Buffalo, N.Y., came off 29 for the Eagles while all-American Ken Davis added 21 for the Eagles.

Ogden's dominance of the boards came largely in the opening eight minutes when Wimbley hit eight points and Chalmon added six to give Sav-On a 18-12 lead.

But three steals a cripple and Andre Wakefield's follow shot gave CSI a 22-18 advantage and the Eagles never trailed again — nor by more than 10.

By half-time Sav-On had reduced the deficit to one point by outscoring the Eagles 15-8 over the last four minutes.

Williams threw in six straight points to open a 56-47 lead early in the second half with Wimbley replying with four.

Over the next 10 minutes CSI protected four to eight-point leads and in the last five minutes CSI was up by as much as nine. Weber cut back to within three on buckets by Wimbley and Strong before Davis led off with two free throws seconds from the end.

St. Louis, down 17-0 to Philadelphia, erased the deficit and won on Jim Bakken's 30-yard field goal late in the game.

In the first game between the two teams Redskins rookie Mike Thomas rushed for 101 yards and scored two TDs, while the Washington defense created five turnovers and

Grid bowls will fill quickly Saturday

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer
Invitations to the post-season bowl games are to be officially extended Saturday, and for the first time in quite a few years, not one team in the top 10 is absolutely certain where it will be playing in post-season competition.

With most of the major conference races still undecided, the final pairings for the Rose, Orange and Sugar Bowls aren't likely to be known for at least another week and, in the case of the Cotton and Fiesta Bowls, even longer.

The Rose Bowl, for example, pits the winners of the Big Ten and Pacific Eight Conferences but neither of those races will be decided until Nov. 22.

Top-ranked Ohio State and fourth-ranked Michigan are both undefeated in Big Ten play and will meet a week from Saturday at Ann Arbor, Mich., and the Pac Eight race won't be decided until that date either when California, the current leader, meets Stanford and UCLA takes on Southern California.

The Orange Bowl won't be filled until next weekend either. The Big Eight champion gets an automatic bid to the Orange Bowl, and the Orange Bowl committee has decided to fill the other berth with the Big Ten runnerup. The loser of the Ohio State-Michigan game will represent the Big Ten and the Big Eight probably won't be determined until next Saturday when, second-ranked Nebraska says seventh-ranked Oklahoma currently leads Oklahoma by one game.

The Sugar Bowl and Cotton Bowl will probably fill half their pairings Saturday. Fifth-ranked Alabama, if it beats Southern Mississippi, will most likely be invited to play in the Sugar Bowl, with the Big Eight runnerup expected to be selected as its opponent.

The Cotton Bowl has its eye on ninth-ranked Notre Dame as an opponent for the Southwest Conference champion, and the Irish will probably get the bid Saturday if they defeat Pittsburgh. However, if Pitt should spring an upset, 10th-ranked Penn State, which is idle Saturday, emerges as a leading Cotton Bowl candidate.

The Gator and Liberty Bowls also are interested in Notre Dame, but Coach Dan Devine says the Irish will go nowhere if they do not defeat Pitt. Notre Dame has been tabbed a three-point favorite.

Sixth-ranked Texas holds a half game lead over third-ranked Texas A&M in the SWC race, and those two will meet Nov. 27 in what should be the deciding game. There is a possibility, however, that the conference race won't be determined until Dec 6 when Texas A&M meets Arkansas.

The host team in the Fiesta Bowl — the champion of the Western Athletic Conference, and that title may not be determined until Nov. 29 when Arizona State meets Arizona. Arizona State could clinch the championship this week, though, if Colorado State upsets Arizona.

BSU risks unbeaten mark against Utags Saturday

BOISE — History will be in the making Saturday, November 15, when the Boise State Broncos and the Utah State Aggies meet for the first time on the football field. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in BSU's Bronco Stadium.

Boise State takes an 8-0-1 season mark into the non conference game while Utah State has a 4-5 season mark. BSU defeated Nevada Reno 49-6 last Saturday in Reno, while Utah State was defeated by Brigham Young 27-7 in Logan, Utah. The two squads have faced just one common opponent in 1975, the Weber State Wildcats. Boise State defeated Weber State 28-13 while Utah State beat the Wildcats 36-7.

"Utah State is a strong, quick and disciplined football team," commented Bronco head coach Tony Knapp. "This will be the toughest battle of the season for us." He added Knapp is a former head coach of the Aggies. While at Utah State he compiled a 25-14 record. Phil Krueger was Knapp's assistant at Utah State in 1961.

Commenting on the Aggies, talented tailback Lute Giammona, Knapp said, "Giammona is a great little runner and he has a huge line to operate behind. So, both offensively and defensively, the Broncos will be hard-pressed." Giammona is averaging 112.7 yards a game rushing. He had 110 yards against BYU last Saturday.

BSU running back John Smith set a school single game record in gaining 177 yards in 17 carries. He had touchdown runs of 56 and 39 yards. The old record was 151 yards set by Gary Hoshaw in 1971.

Knapp said he was very pleased with the manner in which the Broncos have improved over the past four weeks. "I hope that this trend will continue. We showed a strong inside running game in Reno for the first time this season." BSU had 345 yards on the ground. "This running is an important addition to our arsenal of offensive weapons. We'll need everything we've got to be able to move the ball against the Aggies," he added.

Utah State's defense is filled with veterans. They have seven seniors and are giving up just 132.6 yards a game on the air. The defense has faced such teams as Florida State, San Diego State, Texas, West Texas State, Arkansas and Brigham Young to name a few.

The starting quarterback for Utah State will be junior Greg Van Ness. Van Ness has completed 74 of 131 passing attempts for 1,021 yards and four scores. The top two Aggie receivers are junior Paul Tappels who has 22 catches for 317 yards, and one score and junior Greg Dally who has eight catches for 307 yards and two scores.

The Aggie offense will fare a better defense which has been improving each week. Utah State is averaging 127.3 yards a game on the ground while BSU's defense is giving up 163.8 to their opponents. USU is averaging 117.9 yards via the air while Boise State is giving up 101.6.

Bronco linbacker Gary Gorrell, a senior from Gooding, Idaho, was named the Big Sky Defensive Player of the Week for his effort against Nevada Reno. In the Reno game Gorrell had six unassisted tackles, six assisted stops, two quarterback sacks and one pass deflection.

The Utah State wins in 1975 were: 1-7 over Utah, 21-7 past West Texas State; 30-7 over Weber State and 37-21 past Wyoming. The Aggies have lost to Florida State, San Diego State, Texas, Arkansas and Brigham Young.

ALREADY FRAMED by the sides of an open pit mine, the ridge in the background is one area proposed for its own pit running thousands of feet along its length. About 35 percent of the estimated 425-million-cu-yd phosphate reserves are located under some of the most productive wildlife range in the western United States — the southeast corner of Idaho.

Mining threatens endangered species

By ROYCE WILLIAMS
Idaho Department of Fish and Game

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series assessing the impact of proposed phosphate mining in southeast Idaho. Included is the best information the Department of Fish and Game has been able to obtain to date on the impact of phosphate mining on the state's fish and wildlife resource. A draft environmental impact statement is due in December, and the final statement is scheduled for mid 1976.

The spotting scope shook a bit, and the rusty-white shape was fuzzy from three-quarters of a mile away.

In the yellow haze of late afternoon, the scope followed a whooping crane, one of about 50 of these large cranes left on earth. The whooper was feeding in a stubble field with its foster parents, two greater sandhill cranes.

Fall had just begun to touch the aspen on the mountains surrounding the 22,000-acre marsh. Mountain maples stood out in red-orange blotches on the hillsides. Cattail heads showed the blue-green marsh with wide strokes of deep russet.

Eggs from the endangered birds' nests had been brought to Grays Lake from Wood Buffalo National Park in the remote Northwest Territories. Whether a new wild flock can be established at Grays Lake still is unknown, but the chances are good. Six young whoopers were raised at Grays Lake this year, and have followed their foster parents to New Mexico.

If these endangered birds return to Idaho next April, a major hurdle in establishing the flock will have been crossed. Yet, their future, as well as that of their foster sandhill parents, is in jeopardy.

Planned phosphate mining in the area probably will not reach Grays Lake, but the disturbance both from the mining and the pressure of a growing population, will reduce considerably the small flock's chances of surviving and expanding their range.

Whoopers as well as sandhill cranes have reached the numbers present at Grays Lake because of the marsh's relative wild state. Both birds are wilderness birds and do not usually survive intense development and human disturbance.

The sandhill cranes make up one of the largest nesting populations of the species left in North America. Habitat comparable to Grays Lake is extremely scarce.

In late November, another relatively rare bird stops at Grays

Lake and Bear Lake, crossing the phosphate area on their southern migration from northern Canada.

Whistling swans stop on the two large lakes, as they move from their remote tundra breeding areas in the fall.

Trumpeter swans could extend their breeding area from the Red Rocks Refuge in Montana to Grays Lake. Birds have been known to nest at Grays Lake in limited numbers. But, mining disturbance may halt that extension of range. It will rule out their return to Diamond Creek, Swan Lake Gulch, Slug Creek and Woodcut Marsh.

Impact of phosphate mining on swans is illustrated by eight swans that landed on a settling pond near Pocatello in 1974. The small flock picked the pond as a resting spot. All eight birds died.

Several golden eagle nesting sites were abandoned because of destruction, increased human activity and lowered numbers of the small animals these birds feed upon.

A bald eagle aerie in Middle Sulphur Canyon could be destroyed.

Of the 200 pairs of nesting peregrine falcons left in the country, four are found in the phosphate area. This is nearly half the known nesting sites left in Idaho. While the nesting areas themselves are not expected to be destroyed, the falcons are especially sensitive to human disturbance and could abandon their nesting sites.

Abandonment of even one nest would be considered a serious loss to the species.

There are 184 species of songbirds in the phosphate mining area, and they will be reduced in conjunction with the loss of shoreline vegetation on the streams, lakes and marshes. Replacing the songbirds will be those birds that can adapt to human development — English sparrows, starlings and pigeons.

Small rodents and reptiles are well established throughout the area, and their habitat needs are very precise.

Any alteration of their habitat and reduction in their numbers means vast changes in the birds and animals that depend upon them for food.

O'Bed TKOs Oliveira to claim ring title

PAHNS (UPI) — Bahamian challenger Eusebio O'Bed Thursday won the World Boxing Council light middleweight boxing crown by scoring an 11th round technical knockout over defending Brazilian champion Miguel de Oliveira.

De Oliveira, 27, failed to answer the bell for the 11th round of their 15-round title match after being knocked twice to the floor in the 10th round by the gamely 24-year-old Nassau boxer.

The broad-shouldered Brazilian made a strong start, but a lightning right hook he sent O'Bed to the floor for a count of eight in the second stanza.

The Bahamian, slightly mocked by French experts as being too prone to taking blows with impetuosity, rallied in the third round and battered de Oliveira with a rapid fire series of hooks.

De Oliveira was clearly shaken with a right hook at the close of the second round. He shook off his adversary, though and the score appeared evened out. The more experienced Brazilian boxer made the best of his punching power throughout the coming rounds.

Before the decisive 10th round de Oliveira was leading on points — 57-35, according to the two ringside referees. The match referee, West Germany's Kurt Halbach, also gave the Brazilian a technical edge.

But the hard-fighting Bahamian boxer's relentless pounding began telling on de Oliveira.

Twenty seconds before the end of the 10th stanza de Oliveira received a vicious hard hook to his chin knocking him down for a few seconds.

Barnes' lawsuit to interrupt ABA play

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The Spirits of St. Louis may be without the services of basketball star Marvin Barnes during his U.S. District Court trial in a $1.5 million civil damage suit.

The trial, scheduled to begin Monday, stems from Barnes' 1974 guilty plea to a charge of attacking former Providence College teammate Lawrence Keltvirtis with a tire iron after an October, 1972, practice session.

"Last season's American Basketball Association rookie of the year was absent in the Spirits' 36-81 loss to the Kentucky Colonels Wednesday night."

A team spokesman said he wasn't sure how many games Barnes would miss, saying it would be possible for the 6-foot-9 center to play Friday and Sunday. Court proceedings may start and end Monday, he added.

Chief Judge Raymond J. Pettine refused last month to delay the trial until after the ABA season. He said it might last a week, but added it was only a "sheer guess," because he was unsure how many will miss or be called on if there would be an out-of-court settlement.

Attorney Jerome Katz contended trial this fall would interrupt the Spirits' operation because Barnes is the team's "most outstanding attraction."

Idaho meets WSU Saturday

MOSCOW — Agreeing to terms at the summit table is one thing, but on the gridiron. It is another matter.

After nearly three-quarters of a century of bruising football in the annual "Battle of the Palouse," officials of neighboring Idaho and Washington State resolved the series' win-loss record during negotiations last summer.

WSU leads 267-143.

No one expects the two teams to agree to terms on Saturday afternoon in Pullman, Wash., however, when the 74th renewal unfolds in Martin Stadium — (27,800).

One will try to prove to the other that they are better in 1975. The contest will begin at 1:30 p.m. PST with a crowd of more than 18,000 expected.

The Vandals (3-2) will be attempting to break a 10-year losing streak in the series and move another notch closer to the school's first winning season since 1971. They also hope to avenge last year's controversial 17-0 defeat at the hands of the Cougars.

The Washington State will be trying to stop a seven-game losing streak (2-7) when they take to the field. Their last triumph was the second week of the season, 20-14 over host Utah. USU's last victory came two weeks ago against Montana State (41-23). Last weekend, the Vandals and Weber State set a new NCAA Division I record for the highest tie score of all-time (40-40).

"The Cougars are always primed for us," reported Idaho head coach Ed Troxel during a break from formulating his team's game plans for Saturday. "They will crank it up for this one and try to really get after us. And to make matters worse, they will be healthy for the first time since the opener. I won't be deceived by coach Jim Sweeney's statements that they are hurting because of injuries. Of course, they may be missing a few players, but so will we."

The Idaho boss added, "The Cougars have played very well most of the year, but the breaks have just gone against them. The defense has done a fine job, especially last week against Oregon State. Besides, they have plenty of potential on offense. Quarterback John Hopkins is a fine signal caller, and Dana Doornick is one of the finest running backs in the Pacific Northwest."

Barnes' lawsuit to interrupt ABA play

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The Spirits of St. Louis may be without the services of basketball star Marvin Barnes during his U.S. District Court trial in a $1.5 million civil damage suit.

The trial, scheduled to begin Monday, stems from Barnes' 1974 guilty plea to a charge of attacking former Providence College teammate Lawrence Kvetvirts with a tire iron after an October, 1972, practice session.

Last season's American Basketball Association rookie of the year was absent in the Spirits' 98-81 loss to the Kentucky Colonels Wednesday night.

A team spokesman said he wasn't sure how many games Barnes would miss, saying it "would be possible for the 6-foot-9 center to play Friday and Sunday. Court proceedings may start at the end of Monday, he added.

Chief Judge Raymond J. Pelline refused last month to delay the trial until after the ABA season. He said it might last a week, but added it was only a "sheer guess" because he was unsure how many witnesses might be called or if there would be an out-of-court settlement.

Attorney Jerome Katz contended trial this fall would interrupt the Spirits' operation because Barnes is the team's "most outstanding attraction."

BSU risks unbeaten mark against Utags Saturday

BOISE — History will be in the making Saturday, November 15, when the Boise State Broncos and the Utah State Aggies meet for the first time on the football field. Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in BSU's Bronco Stadium.

Boise State takes an 8-0-1 season mark into the non-conference game while Utah State has a 4-5 season mark. BSU defeated Nevada Reno 49-6 last Saturday in Reno, while Utah State was defeated by Brigham Young 24-7 in Logan, Utah. The two squads have faced just one common opponent in 1975, the Weber State Wildcats. Boise State defeated Weber State 28-11 while Utah State beat the Wildcats 30-7.

"Utah State is a strong, quick and disciplined football team," commented Broncos head coach Tony Knap.

"This will be the toughest battle of the season for us," he added. Knap is a former head coach of the Aggies. While at Utah State he compiled a 25-14-1 record. Phil Krueger was Knap's assistant at Utah State in 1961.

Commenting on the Aggies' talented tailback Louie Giannona, Knap said, "Giannona is a great little runner and he has a huge line to operate behind. So, both offensively and defensively, the Broncos will be hard-pressed." Giannona is averaging 117.7 yards a game rushing. He had 110 yards against BYU last Saturday.

BSU running back John Smith set a school single game record in gaining 177 yards in 15 carries. He had touchdown runs of 36 and 38 yards. The old record was 151 yards set by Gary Hoshaw in 1971.

Knap said he was very pleased with the manner in which the Broncos have improved over the past four weeks. "I hope that this trend will continue. We showed a strong inside running game in Reno for the first time this season. BSU had 345 yards on the ground.

"This running is an important addition to our arsenal of offensive weapons. We'll need everything we've got to be able to run the ball against the Aggies," he added.

Utah State's defense is filled with veterans. They have seven seniors and are giving up just 122.6 yards a game via the air route, 291 yards on the ground, and 22.7 points per game. That defense has faced such teams as Florida State, San Diego State, Texas, West Texas State, Arkansas and Brigham Young, to name a few.

The starting quarterback for Utah State will be Junior Greg Van Ness. Van Ness has completed 74 of 131 passing attempts for 1,021 yards and four scores. The top two Aggie receivers are Junior Paul Tippets who has 22 catches for 303 yards, and one score and Junior Greg Daly who has eight catches for 197 yards and two scores.

The Aggies' defense will face a Bronco defense which has been improving each week. Utah State is averaging 130.1 yards a game on the ground while BSU's defense is giving up 105.2 to their opponents. BSU is averaging 117.9 yards via the air while Boise State is giving up 191.6.

Bronco linebacker Gary Garrett, a senior from Gooding, Idaho, was named the Big Sky Defensive Player of the Week for his effort against Nevada Reno. In the Reno game Garrett had six unassisted tackles, six assisted stops, two quarterback sacks and one pass deflection.

The Utah State wins in 1975 were: 1-7 over Utah, 21-7 past West Texas State, 30-7 over Weber State and 27-21 past Wyoming. The Aggies have lost to Florida State, San Diego State, Texas, Arkansas and Brigham Young.

Idaho meets WSU Saturday

MOSCOW — Agreeing to terms at the summit table is one thing, but on the gridiron, it is another matter.

After nearly three-quarters of a century of bruising football in the annual "Battle of the Palouse," officials of neighboring Idaho and Washington State resolved the series' won't-lose record during negotiations last summer. WSU leads 56-14-3.

No one expects the two teams to agree to terms on Saturday afternoon in Pullman, Wash., however, when the 74th renewal unfolds in Martin Stadium (27,800). One will try to prove to the other that they are better in 1975. The contest will begin at 1:30 p.m. PST, with a crowd of more than 10,000 expected.

The Vandals (12-2) will be attempting to break a 10-year losing streak in the series and move another notch closer to the school's first winning season since 1971. They also hope to avenge last year's controversial 17-0 defeat at the hands of the Cougars.

The Washington Staters will be trying to stop a seven-game losing streak (2-7-0) when they take to the field. Their last triumph was the second week of the season, 30-14 over host Utah, UT's last victory came two weeks ago against Montana State (41-23). Last weekend, the Vandals and Weber State set a new NCAA Division I record for the highest score of all-time (49-40).

"The Cougars are always primed for us," reported Idaho head coach Ed Trostel during a break from translating his team's game plans for Saturday. "They will crank it up for this one and try to really get after us. And to make matters worse, they will be healthy for the first time since the opening I won't be deceived by coach Jim Sweeney's statements that they are hurting because of injuries. Of course, they may be missing a few players, but so will we." The Idaho boss added, "The Cougars have played very well most of the year, but the breaks have just gone against them. The defense has done a fine job, especially last week against Oregon State. Besides, they have plenty of potential offense. Quarterback John Hopkins is a fine signal caller and Dan Beornik is one of the finest running backs in the Pacific Northwest."

what's what

J.M. Boyd

When a mother is known to be mentally ill, her neighbors tend to fear for the safety of her children. But that's unwarranted, usually. Or so say medical specialists at the University of Alabama. Mysteriously, that mother's capacity to take care of her youngsters is the one thing about her that's least apt to be impaired by her ailment. Those scholars studied numerous offspring of disturbed mothers who were outpatients of mental clinics. Said offspring themselves checked out generally to be exceedingly healthy of mind.

FLAUNT IT
Q. "What did we say before we came out with: 'If you've got it, flaunt it?'"
A. How about: "Them that has them, wears them." That was Diamond Jim Brady's line. In reference to the 20,000 diamonds he owned. He sported batches of them all the time. Yes, they were real. Just one of his sets, containing 2,548 diamonds and rubies, would sell for more than $1 million now.

IF PUT INTO a corral with a rhinoceros, which would you prefer as a weapon, a .45 pistol or a baseball bat? A big-game hunter of some experience says the bat might be best. When you hit a rhino solidly on the tip of its horn, you can knock it cold for six seconds, he says. He thinks your chances of missing the horn tip are a little greater with a handgun.

CHESS PLAYERS
A study of the world's great chess players reveals that a relatively large proportion of same were known to be mentally ill and seriously so. But an even larger proportion were recognized as extraordinarily gifted in other unrelated professions.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH proves that a girl on a date spends a lot more time looking at the fellow she's with than the fellow spends looking at her. Why is that?

AFTER WRITING the novel "Vanity Fair," William Thackeray never again passed that house wherein he wrote it without taking off his hat and bowing toward the front door.

DID YOU KNOW why tree leaves work so well to muffle traffic noises? Because those leaves typically are just about the same lengths as the traffic sound waves.

Botulism strikes California youth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department said Thursday California officials have diagnosed botulism in an 18-year-old boy who became ill after eating a frozen meal pie.

Scholarship to Idahoan

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Dave Hoffman, a plant science student at the University of Idaho College of Agriculture, has won the first award in a new scholarship program established by Ore-Ida Foods, Inc.

This scholarship of $500 will be awarded annually to a College of Agriculture student preparing for a career in agrifusiness or crop production.

Hoffman, a junior, is interested in research work related to crop production. His father, Arthur, has a farm south of Moscow.

But they said a preliminary investigation indicates the problem was not with the pie but with the fact that the victim had the product sitting at room temperature for two days after he prepared it, and then ate some of it.

The victim was hospitalized last Saturday at the University of California Medical Center in a coma after suffering cardiac arrest.

Botulism poisoning is often fatal.

The Agriculture Department, which has jurisdiction over food poisoning cases where meat is involved, said details are still "very sketchy."

A spokesman said California health authorities told the department "he had prepared the pie, eaten a portion of it, left it out at room temperature for about two days and ate another portion of it. That's when the symptoms developed."

We have no reason to believe that there's any problem as far as the product is concerned.

Agencies split on bridge

BOISE (UPI) — The Coast Guard sympathized with members of the Idaho Transportation Board today but said it could not go along with their recommendations for replacement of the bridge across the Clearwater River at Lewiston.

"We sympathize with your problems, but we feel we have certain restrictions," said Ralph Mancill, Washington, D.C., Chief of Bridge Modification.

After the meeting, Board Chairman Carl Moore of Lewiston told newsmen, "We're caught between two federal agencies within the same department," explaining that each had different standards which the state must comply with to obtain necessary construction funds.

The Coast Guard agreed to a high level, fixed bridge with a 62 foot width and urged the board to accept that proposal so that the federal body could proceed with an Environmental Impact Statement. But the board charged that a minimum width of 82 feet was necessary.

Moore told the Coast Guard representatives said a decision would take "serious consideration" because of the great deal of money involved.

"We're affected by several federal statutes," Moore said. Board member Lloyd Barron, Fairfield, told the delegation: "We're not a little state trying to gouge the Coast Guard. We have to look at the future, which you refuse to do."

Barron said the 62-foot width was not adequate to take care of the flow of traffic.

Later the board met with a legislative interim committee and Idaho Transportation Director Darrell Manning said, unless the legislature can come up with an additional $10.6 million for the next fiscal year there will be no new construction starts and highway rehabilitation will be eliminated.

Manning presented what he called an "auster, bare bones" budget to the Joint Legislative Interim Highway Needs Committee. He suggested several alternatives to produce new revenue, including a gasoline tax increase. Manning stressed the importance of maintaining Idaho's existing highways.

"We can't continue this without paying the consequences"

Farmers!

Don't Be Misled

Buildings are being quoted and sold in this area by out of state salesmen. These buildings, sometimes are delivered short of materials, and without any warranty. We know of people who lose their down payment, or sometimes the entire price of a building. Guarantees on material are not included, and the farmer loses by buying for price only.

We at Perc Petersen Construction Co. handle two of the best lines of buildings in the United States. Guarantees that are for 5 years. Shortages are unheard of with our buildings. We stand behind what we sell.

Let us give you a figure on a building delivered to your jobsite. We can compete with the unknown building. And we furnish plans, and guarantee what we sell.

50'x96'x16' Galvanized with 20'x13' double sliding door. $1.57 square foot plus sales tax and freight. Same size building with 20'x15' double slide door. $1.62 plus tax & freight.

4 TF 4-H'ers 'best' in 1975

TWIN FALLS — Four 4-H'ers from Twin Falls County have been named Idaho's best for their 1975 4-H projects.

Two Buhl youths, Luann Howard, 18, and Tom Busmann, 17, and a young woman from Kimberly, 17-year-old Susan Jesser, have won expense-paid trips to the 54th National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 30-Dec. 4.

The fourth local winner, Scott Fehrenbacher, 17, Buhl, received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond as a state winner in the 4-H public speaking program. He now enters sectional competition for a trip to Congress.

Miss Howard, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Howard, goes to Congress as state winner in 4-H's beef program.

Her 4-H beef projects have won 31 ribbons and earned her funds for college. An active 4-H'er she has been president of her local 4-H Club.

Busmann heads for Chicago as Idaho's best in the 4-H automotive program.

His automotive projects earned seven county and district awards before taking top state honors this year. He is the son of Phil Busman.

Miss Jesser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jesser, won her trip for excellence in 4-H's safety program. Her safety demonstrations and exhibits have taken county and district 4-H awards for the past three years.

Fehrenbacher, public speaking winner, hosted and spoke at this year's Twin Falls County 4-H awards assembly and at the leader's recognition banquet for 4-H adult volunteers. He took top public speaking honors after two years in the program.

Fehrenbacher, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fehrenbacher, served on this year's volunteer staff for the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course in Washington, D.C.
