CIA plots against Castro revealed

Rocky to attend funeral

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller will represent the United States at the proclamation of Juan Carlos as king of Spain and at the state funeral of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, a White House spokesman said today.

Rockefeller will attend the swearing-in of Juan Carlos as chief of state in Madrid Saturday and the last rites for Franco on Sunday, the spokesman said. Mrs. Rockefeller will accompany her husband.

Ringed planet transmitted

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (UPI) — Pioneer 11, heading for the first rendezvous ever with Saturn in 1979, has transmitted back to earth its first picture of the ringed planet.

The planet, showing up little bigger than a dot in the picture, appeared without its rings because they were hidden by shadows cast from the sun.

Spokesman Peter Waller of the NASA Ames Research Center said the picture received Thursday was from an angle which could not be taken from earth.

NY university head named

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Sawhill, former head of the Federal Energy Administration, was invested Thursday as 12th president of New York University.

Sawhill to show his commitment in cutting costs at the University at a time "when private higher education is in danger," called on the faculty and student body to reaffirm their commitment to the troubled city of New York.

Sawhill succeeded James Hester as NYU president. Hester, president for 13 years, left to become head of the United Nations University in Tokyo.

Handgun bill gets nod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee has narrowly approved a handgun control bill which would make prison sentences mandatory for persons convicted of using a gun in a federal crime, but does not outlaw so-called "Saturday Night Specials."

The House Judiciary Crime subcommittee voted 4 to 1 Thursday to send the measure to the full committee for action, possibly next month.

The mandatory sentencing was the only major controversial point left in the bill worked out over the past month as a compromise between a proposal by Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., proposal for a ban on most private ownership of pistols and the administration's measure to merely tighten current law.

Aussie bomb defused

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — Postal officials today found and defused a mail bomb addressed to Governor-General Sir John Kerr, the man who fired Labor Prime Minister Gough Whitlam last week. It was the third bomb sent to a public official in three days.

Governments officials said the bomb was detected in the Canberra mail Exchange by a magnetic screening device. Police said the bomb was similar to those mailed Wednesday to interim Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, and Queensland Premier Johannes Bjelke-Petersen, a political ally of Fraser.

British ram gunboat

HEYKAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — A British trawler captain, angry because Iceland's coast guard cut his fishing lines, tried many times to ram an Icelandic gunboat but failed, the coast guard said today.

It was the second British attempt at ramming since the resumption of the fish war between Iceland and Britain over the extension of Icelandic fishing limits from 20 to 200 miles.

Retrial planned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department announced today it has charges to retry former Sen. Edward J. Gurney, R-Fla., on a decision of conspiracy to create a political slush fund and making false declarations to a grand jury.

Gurney, 61, was acquitted by a federal jury in Tampa, Fla., Aug. 6 on five of eight counts, but the jury deadlocked on two remaining counts, causing a mistrial. Four counts named only Gurney's alleged co-conspirators.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With exotic weapons ranging from exploding seashells to poison cigars, the CIA plotted unsuccessfully to murder Cuba's Fidel Castro and Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba and helped rebels who killed three other foreign leaders, a Senate report said Thursday.

The Senate intelligence committee said the Central Intelligence Agency planned at least eight attacks on Castro, including one to make his beard fall out. It said the agency also gave arms to insurgents who, on their own, killed officials in the Dominican Republic, South Vietnam and Chile.

The report, signed by all 11 members of the committee and released over the objections of President Ford, said no foreign leaders were killed as a result of the assassination plots but added the panel was "unable to draw firm conclusions concerning who authorized the assassination plots."

While saying it could not find any evidence that any president approved of the plots, the report said, "Whether or not the respective Presidents knew of or authorized the plots, as chief executive officer of the United States, each must bear the ultimate responsibility for the activities of his subordinates."

The controversial 37-page report recounted a passage of a law making it a federal offense to conspire to kill foreign leaders abroad.

The report spanned the administrations of President Dwight Eisenhower, John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

The committee said there was "a reasonable inference that the plot to assassinate Lumumba was authorized by President Eisenhower" and that Nixon had ordered actions against Salvador Allende in Chile. Nixon was not linked to murder schemes there.

No concrete evidence was cited that any of the four presidents knew of murder plans, but committee member Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said that "on balance, the likelihood that presidents knew of assassination plots is greater than the likelihood that they did not."

"No foreign leaders were killed as result of assassination plots initiated by officials of the United States," the report said.

But it cited "concrete evidence" of at least eight plots against Castro and one against Lumumba. CIA supplies arms of other aid to insurgents who, acting on their own, killed Dominican Trujillo March 31, 1961, South Vietnamese Pres. Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother Nhu Nov. 2, 1963, and Gen. Rene Schmeder, commander in chief of the Chilean army Oct. 23, 1970.

The committee said it found "some evidence" of CIA involvement in plots to kill President Sukarno of Indonesia in the late '50s and Haitian strongman Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, who died of natural causes in 1971.

The long-awaited document was signed by all six Democrats and five Republicans on the committee after the session Thursday morning to consider whether the report should be made public but reached no conclusion and their committee went ahead with publication on its own.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and committee vice chairman John Tower, R-Tex., said they opposed publication of the report, although they signed it.

Committee chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, told a news conference as copies of the white-bound, inch-thick report were handed to reporters that Ford made a "considerable effort" to prevent publication right up to the last moment.

The report included 12 names of individuals the administration had argued should have been exposed for their own safety.

Church said failure to publish the report would have damaged U.S. interests abroad and led to endless "speculation and innuendo."

Two new channels readied for area

TWIN FALLS — Television fans here may soon be able to watch two new free channels.

The FCC has approved applications by two Boise television stations for translators in the Twin Falls and Jerome area, which would rebroadcast the Boise programs for local viewers.

Approved were an application by KTVB, Inc., Boise, channel 7, for a UHF translator to be based in Twin Falls on channel 57, and one by Boise Valley Broadcasters Inc., operators of KBCI Boise, channel 2 for the operators of KIBL Boise, channel 4 for translator stations channel 55 in Twin Falls and channel 39 in Jerome.

KTVB-TV is an NBC network affiliate and KBCI is a CBS station.

The applications were opposed by KMYT and Magic Valley Cable Vision. These organizations now have 30 days to file petitions asking the FCC to reconsider its decision to okay the translators.

James Jahnz, president of Boise Valley Broadcasters, said presuming no protests are filed or accepted, the new station could be in operation some time next year, perhaps early in the year or toward mid-year. He said he could not predict what kind of reception viewers would have on the new channels, however.

A translator is a low-powered device which rebroadcasts the signal from television stations without changing the installations here will be 100-watt translators.

The applications were approved by the FCC with the condition that the translator stations could not broadcast in the same day programs aired by KMYT. Although KMYT is primarily an ABC affiliate it does use some CBS and NBC programming, so some programs might be deleted on the two translator channels.

The KLIX Corp., operator of KMYT, and Cablevision claimed they would be injured economically by fractionalization of their viewing audience if the translator applications were granted according to an FCC news release.

But the commission found that the purpose of the law governing translators was not to protect petitioners against competition. Economic injury resulting from competition was not the commission's concern unless that injury "rebounded to the public detriment," the news release stated.

No such non-duplication condition is imposed for the Jerome channel, however.

General snowstorm hits valley, slickens roads

BY BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The first general snowstorm of the season for Magic Valley has left roads and highways in hazardous condition.

The Idaho Department of Highways office in Shoshone and the Idaho State Police in Twin Falls report icy conditions out of Twin Falls in all directions this morning. Highway crews were sanding but it was not necessary to plow in any areas.

The heaviest depth reported by the highway district office is on Sawtooth Summit near the Utah-Idaho state line where four inches of snow fell. Most areas were sanded by 9 a.m.

Pomerelle ski area, south of Albion, which opens for the season Saturday, also reported four inches of light dry snow.

Sun Valley received a light amount of new snow with a half inch in Ketchum, according to the district ranger's office of the Sawtooth National Forest. Somewhat more fell on Bald Mountain where total depth is 16 to 18 inches.

State police said they have had numerous traffic accidents reported, but most were just drivers going off the highways because of icy conditions. No serious accidents had been reported this morning.

City police in Twin Falls reported nine traffic accidents Thursday evening and three early this morning but no injuries were reported.

Highways were icy into Nevada and to the west but reported clear from King Hill to Boise, by department of highway officials.

The weather caused no major harvest problems because harvesting is complete except for a few sugar beets. There were 18,000 acres of beets harvested in the Twin Falls and north side area this year.

Robert Day, Amalgamated Sugar Co. manager here, said only six acres of sugar beets on the north side are yet to be harvested. He said trucks are hauling from receiving stations to the plant which is operating at capacity. The hauling will continue through the campaign, Day said.

Potato harvest ended several weeks ago, and beans have been harvested with the possible exception of a few late fields or parts of fields.

In the Mendocino-Cassia counties area the sugar beet harvest was completed Wednesday with about 38,000 acres of beets harvested this year.

Blaine County officers reported black ice conditions and snow floor Thursday afternoon and this morning.

Three accidents were reported with minor injuries or heavy damage and many others involved vehicle sliding from roadways.

William Ryan Jr., Slaterville, Nev., lost control of his vehicle on an icy curve five miles south of Bellevue Thursday afternoon. He escaped with scratches.

Donald Lupp, juvenile driver, failed to keep his vehicle under control and skidded on ice, going 150 feet before crashing into a tree on the Bradford Road Thursday. Three passengers with Lupp were treated for cuts and bruises and released from Blaine County Hospital.

Calixto Barayazarra, 49, escaped injury when his vehicle collided with a herd of 10 deer on State Highway 68 near Stanton Crossing. Two of the deer were killed.

The U.S. Weather Service in Kimberly reports widespread snowfall with three inches of snow in the Burley and Rupert areas, two inches of snow in Kimberly and one and one-half inches in Jerome, a narrowing down to a trace of snow in Fairfield and a half inch in Ketchum.

This storm compares to the Nov. 29 storm in 1964 when 3.5 inches of snow was reported in Kimberly, the most to be recorded in November since the Weather Service office opened in the 1960s.

Temperatures accompanying the storm were also reported below normal in most areas of Magic Valley.

TF belt route endorsed at crowded public meet

BY CRICKET BIRD
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The proposed Twin Falls major street plan met with generally positive response at a crowded public meeting Thursday night.

A straw vote requested showed the group overwhelmingly favored the conception of a belt route to take traffic around the outskirts of the city.

Joseph Haynes, area manager for J-U-B Engineers, the firm which prepared the street study, detailed the $21 million project which will take 20 to 25 years to complete.

The plan calls for the construction of a belt route around the city, the impingement of 33 intersections and at least 15 streets. Funding would be primarily federal, according to Haynes.

The street plan was drawn up with the intent of feeding it to the planners "for inclusion in the comprehensive plan, Haynes told the group.

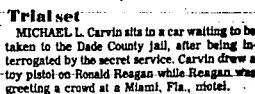

— Although most of the comments centered on the belt route, questions by the audience brought up some interesting facts.

— The cost of the project, estimated at $21 million, is inflated at 1974 prices. No adjustment is made for inflation over the next 20 to 25 years, which at 6 per cent could more than triple the cost of the project.

The street's front end and construction are strongly opposed to extending or expanding streets in front of schools.

The plan proposes to extend Cassell Avenue through to Blue Lakes Boulevard, passing by Harrison School. It also calls for the siting of Addison Avenue by Lincoln School to a four-lane arterial and suggests improving Madrona Street past the high school and the new Sackcloth Elementary School for malpractice litigation.

Dr. Howard Reed, chairman of the Twin Falls School board, told Haynes "We just disposed of one school because it was in a bad situation as far as traffic was concerned... The thing that's concerning me is putting more major arterials past our public schools."

TRIAL SET
MICHAEL L. Carvin sits in a car waiting to be taken to the DeLoe County Jail, after being interrogated by the secret service. Carvin drew a toy pistol on Ronald Reagan while Reagan was greeting a crowd at a Miami, Fla., motel.

Margaret Youtz said her children walk to school, crossing Madrona Street, and added she believed it would be "a terrible mistake" to extend the street past the high school and mix high school and other traffic with elementary school children.

— The projected traffic counts are somewhat "softened," with consideration of an increasing petroleum shortage.

— The route for the belt loop is not firm, but merely suggested, Haynes emphasized. A half-mile corridor to the east and west of the city form the area where the belt route might be located.

Several persons proposed that the belt route use existing roads, Eastland or the next mile road east for instance, rather than cutting somewhere in the middle.

Haynes said one problem with using existing roads was the difficulty in acquiring controlled access. The engineers suggest access on the loop road be limited to half-mile or mile intervals.

Also, purchasing right-of-way on existing roads may be more expensive, Haynes said, because many homes could be involved.

— The belt route should be a faster, if not shorter, way around the city, Haynes said. If the loop fits this description, it would probably be used by local traffic in getting from one side of the city to another, as well as out-of-town traffic bypassing the town.

Haynes also insisted the belt route would not have that much effect on business in the town, except perhaps for tourist-oriented operations, such as motels.

"People who want to go to Twin Falls are going to go to Twin Falls, no matter what you do," he said.

One man in the audience repeatedly questioned Haynes about the belt route's effect on businesses. He suggested widening in-city streets to accommodate more traffic rather than constructing a belt-loop bypass.

"After all, Twin Falls isn't a big city... It's a country town," the man commented.

Government probes meat firm 'fraud'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The government has uncovered evidence of massive fraud by a meat firm during an investigation of suppliers who provide billions of dollars worth of food to the Defense Department, the U.S. attorney's office says.

The fraud involved at least $750,000 in one year's dealings of the first firm studied for a single year and could indicate much wider cheating by government suppliers, Assistant U.S. Attorney David P. Bancroft said Thursday.

A team of 17 FBI agents raided the San Francisco offices of Alpine Frozen Foods, Inc. Wednesday night. They seized records, duplicating machines and other evidence.

Bancroft said an investigation disclosed the company, whose main business was supplying meat for the Defense Department, cheated by short-weighting, using false Department of Agriculture documents to cover shipment of inferior meat and by "salting" shipments — putting high quality produce on top of inferior meat.

Bancroft said the alleged fraud was discovered at the outset of a systematic investigation he undertook of firms supplying the Defense Supply Agency facility at Alameda which ships great quantities of goods to Pacific stations.

"I decided to go alphabetically and I didn't get past Alpine Foods," Bancroft said. "We uncovered a fraud of almost a million dollars for just 1974 on this firm. We intend to do a complete analysis of further years in its dealings with the government and we intend to go through the contract files on other major suppliers."

"This was not a Washington ordered investigation but something we did on our own," Bancroft said. "I hope it will spark other districts to look into these contractors."

No one was arrested in the raid Wednesday on Alpine Foods, but Bancroft said a number of arrests would probably be made "as soon as we determine who the responsible parties are."

He said there was no evidence of any complicity on the part of Defense Department or Agriculture Department employees.

'Oregon Two' draws 200 at Oklahoma City seminar

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The "Oregon Two" said Thursday night the 22 persons who dropped out of sight because of a September seminar on UFOs "are out doing their father's work."

Heri Applegate and Donnie Lu Trusdale, the mysterious couple who conducted the Oregon seminar, addressed a group of about 200 persons Thursday night. Each had paid $2, and an estimated 75 remained to visit with the speakers after the two-hour lecture.

Applegate said humans must overcome aggression before they can attain a "heavenly existence" on "the next level."

The pair described the "next level" or "upper level" as being "in the heavens and beyond the conception of the human mind. They said it is not another planet and people do not have to die to reach that level.

Although Jesus came from this other level, Applegate said, he was "not a spirit" and was "not a spirit."

"There is at this time something in the heavens that you look at," Applegate said. "It is a very important time as it affects this planet."

Applegate said humans must respond to this "heavenly sign" according to their desires.

"There is opportunity for growth as you get through the maze of choice and graduate into the level above human condition," he said.

He said humans will "experience severe things happening in the heavens" unless they change and elevate.

Applegate said Jesus Christ was one of the beings from the "upper level," but that he never intended for his teachings to become a religion.

"This Bible is a history book," Applegate said. "He (Christ) is not the only one in this next level but he is a leader of the garden."

The pair denied advising people to abandon their homes and families.

Miss Trusdale said she and Applegate had been passengers on a UFO before "we became incarnate at this time."

"They (UFO beings) would love to come and visit people on this planet," she said. "But they would be received hostilely, such as we have."

She said the beings could show humans how to solve their problems.

"The world's problems can be easily solved," she said.

Applegate and Miss Trusdale were both in bluejeans and plain, wool workshirts.

He denied any harassment of former members.

"They would have to condemn us if they no longer followed us," he said.

We have advertised in The Times-News for the past 14 years!

Results from Times-News advertising has helped our business grow.

We first started in the television business as J & K Appliance in Buhl in 1961. Since that time, we have moved our business headquarters to our 80 acre farm West of Filer on the Clover Road.

Our main reason for doing business from our home is to make televisions and appliances available for less money. We can do this because our overhead is lower now that we no longer pay rent for floor space, and since we sell directly to the customers, there is no salesman's commissions to pay.

We use Times-News consistently because we know that the paper goes to almost 80% of all the homes in Magic Valley, and we have found that people are willing to drive a few miles to save a lot of money.

Results from Times-News advertising has helped our business grow. We are now dealers for Whirlpool, Amana, Corning and Jenn-Air appliances and RCA Television.

Since moving to the country, we have sold 3 times as much merchandise per year as we did when located in town, and we have consistently sold more RCA televisions than any other dealer in Twin Falls County.

We are pleased to have had the opportunity to work hand in hand with Times-News to bring lower prices to our friends in Magic Valley.

America's choices: a process of elimination

WASHINGTON — "Why," I cried the other night in despair, "out of a country of 240 million people can't we find an outstanding person to run for President?"

Turnbill asked the waiter for another cocktail napkin. "Out of this 99 million, 38 million are under 35 years of age and are therefore ineligible to run for the Presidency."

"So?" "Well, you and I know the country isn't ready for a woman President for at least 20 years."

States who is afraid to fly. It would be a sign of weakness to our adversaries.

The senator can speak

One of the recent wonders of Idaho political life is how the Idaho Sunshine amendment could come to be used as a device to silence free speech.

The Sunshine Initiative was overwhelmingly approved by Idaho's voters who responded to appeals to open government up to the public view.

What a turnaround from the spirit of the Sunshine law, then, when the law is used to question the legality of a public speech.

This week Oklahoma State Sen. Mary Helm was brought to Twin Falls by the John Birch Society to speak against the Equal Rights Amendment.

After her speech, a critic in the audience suggested Mrs. Helm might be required to register as a lobbyist under the Sunshine law in the event she was paid more than $100 plus expenses for her speech.

The obvious implication being that a well-paid public speaker might be considered a lobbyist and must register in the state under the Sunshine law.

In our view nothing could be more counterproductive than to turn the Sunshine law against the First Amendment right of free speech.

In fact, if the Sunshine law really prohibited such speeches, the courts would quickly toss the law out as an unconstitutional prohibition of free speech.

A healthy republic thrives both on open public discussion of legislation and vigorous free speech.

So even though we strongly disagree with the visiting senator's opinion about the Equal Rights Amendment, we firmly believe she has a right to express her views in Twin Falls.

In fact, if we ever had to choose between the freedom of speech and the Sunshine law, the Sunshine law would have to go.

Fortunately, the Sunshine law probably is unclear enough to permit Mrs. Helm to give her Twin Falls speech. We doubt she could be successfully prosecuted.

But if there is any doubt, we should be looking toward clarifying the law in the next legislative session to prevent its misuse.

Saigon to Sinal

Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists

Whether the Egyptian-Israeli Sinal agreement becomes the cornerstone for a general political settlement in the Middle East, it remains to be seen. But despite the frailty of the accord, it holds great promise for world peace.

The first is that Kissinger's success ought to strengthen the hand of those in the United States who advocate new and healthier forms for the exercise of American leadership in the world. Through diplomacy, the United States has achieved, or at least approached, goals which have been pursued in vain through other means elsewhere in the world at infinitely greater cost.

The second lesson is that there are other problem areas no less important than the Middle East which cry out for application of the bold and simple formula which was followed in the Sinal.

If the unrelenting, uninhibited exercise of diplomacy has brought measurable results in the Middle East, why not apply it with the same urgency to superpower strategic arms limitations, where the stakes are so much higher? Or to Western Europe, Korea and other American armed camps which are potential battlegrounds of World War III?

The most vital arena for testing the new American diplomacy is the United States itself. It is here that we must come to terms with forces which, far more than the Israeli, Egyptian and Syrian hard-liners or the Palestine Liberation Organization, are the major threats to world peace and thus to the ultimate best interest of the American people.

These threats consist in the main of a misapprehension of the real dangers to American security, a misapprehension brewed in the chemistry of American political and economic life and manifesting itself in the most massive and far-ranging war machine the world has ever known.

Not until these forces are recognized, confronted and dealt with, first in the United States and then in other societies beset by similar fears, can the good works of men like Henry Kissinger have lasting effect.

— Samuel H. Jay, Jr.

Quinlan case serves as catalyst

The Karen Ann Quinlan case settled not very much, but brought to prominence the whole question of the right of the individual to command the movements of his doctors under dire circumstances. Dr. Milton Hefetz, a prominent California neurosurgeon, has written a subtle and informal book on the subject called The Right to Die. It is entitled in the Karen Ann Quinlan case on the side of the petitioners.

everyone, including the judge, studied the relevant phrases of Pope Pius: quite properly, I should think, since ethics are best defined not by legislators, but by moralists.

There is crystallizing agreement that in cases of irreversible paralysis, doctors should be permitted to pull the plug if that is the will of the patient. The practical problem is ascertaining the will of someone in a comatose condition.

Farmer profits defended

Editor, Times-News: Your editorial in last Tuesday's paper, titled "Growers, not Bandits," has just come to my attention.

Overall you are quite fair in your analysis of the farmer's situation, but I cannot agree with you that the farmer should be "producing food to help feed the world, not withholding food for his personal profit."

What else under the sun do you think these three million Americans are out here digging in the dirt for it is not to make a living for themselves and their families — for personal profit?

You say that you doubt that the farmers would ever stage a national period of hunger. We're not talking about hunger, we're talking about getting a price for our product that provides us with a little income above cost of production.

When the consumer discovers that he must pay the farmer a reasonable price for his product, he will pay what is asked and he'll get the good. Do you go tell the car salesman how much you'll pay for an automobile? Or the newspaper supplier how much you'll pay for his paper? Or, for that matter, do you tell the grocer how much you'll pay for milk and eggs?

Then why should the purchaser of farm products tell the farmer how much he'll pay for potatoes and corn?

Would you please put my name on your mailing list for the Times-News starting immediately? Of course, you would not expect me to pay for this service.

—RALPH MAUGHAN, Minidoka

Clout needed

Editor, Times-News: Your Nov. 11th editorial on farmers calls for comment.

Less than five per cent of our population lives on farms and we have about that much political clout. President Ford's reaction to the mistletoe plumped to George Meany's coat tail is a case in point.

You expect us to survive weather, bugs, interest rates, inflation, market tampering and neglect and feed the world while counting future profits based on buying retail and selling wholesale. Given the above equation, it would seem that a little organization would beat a farm sale all to hell.

—A. WALKER, Bliss

Which issue?

Editor, Times-News: I must take exception to your usual slanted opinion expressed in Friday's edition. You state, "Speeding law should have teeth," and that you hope the legislature can see the real issue.

Now I ask you what is the real issue? If it is enforcing existing laws, there are thousands of archaic and irrelevant laws in the books that are not enforced.

If speeding is the real issue, why was 70 m.p.h. deemed safe, reasonable and prudent before the energy crunch.

If wasting energy is the real issue, why should a responsible citizen be subject to losing his driving privileges when the people that made the law are still being chauffeured around in gas guzzling, energy wasting limousines.

The original intent in reducing speed to 55 m.p.h. was to save fuel, not lives. All fines and penalties should be predicated on that intent.

Gunmen throng streets in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Three days of violence brought hundreds of gunmen into the streets of Beirut today in first large-scale mobilization of rival Christian and Moslem militias in three weeks.

The militias traded sniper and machine-gun fire in various sections of the war-battered city. Radio Beirut declared most roads around the capital unsafe.

Israeli warplanes soared over the city for the third straight day, touching off air raids.

The two aircraft, apparently on a reconnaissance mission, remained at high altitude, however, and the all-clear was sounded ten minutes later.

Radio Beirut said security forces moved into the suburbs of Chlah and Ain Rumayneh — strongholds of the warring militias — to contain the fighting.

Scattered shooting erupted in other suburban trouble spots. On-again off-again, religious warfare has claimed nearly 4,100 lives in seven months and 8,500 have been wounded.

Hundreds of gunmen roamed the streets of Eastern Beirut, manned sandbagged fortifications and guarded roadblocks in the first mobilization-in-force of the rival militias since a shaky cease-fire halted hostilities Nov. 1.

In upper Beirut, an outburst of gunfire created widespread panic. Street vendors fleeing automobiles created a traffic snarl made worse by a frightened motorist who abandoned his car in the middle of the road.

Other merchants drew rifles and pistols and moved down the road toward the sound of gunfire. They found a funeral procession with gunmen shooting into the air as a funeral cortege.

It was one citizen said, "just another day at the market."

Each side has accused the other of starting the fighting to sabotage the peace efforts of French Envoy Maurice Coussy de Murville.

Leftist spokesman Abdel Amir Abbas of the Lebanese branch of the Syrian Baath Party accused the Christians of starting the fighting to create "a crisis in the face of the visiting French delegation."

The right-wing Phalangist party, the largest of four main Christian groups, made similar counter charges. Clashes erupted only hours after Couve de Murville's arrival from Paris Wednesday afternoon.

Most political observers held the leftists mainly responsible for starting the latest spate of violence.

Arab guerrillas break into school, kill three

RAMAT HAGSHAMIM, Israeli-occupied Golan Heights (UPI) — Arab guerrillas broke into a religious school dormitory, and four students in against a wall and opened fire on them with submachine guns Thursday night, settlers said today.

Three students were killed and one was wounded by the gunfire, the settlers said. A fifth was beaten on the head with an ax.

Israeli national radio said the three raiders told the students they were members of Al Fatah, the largest Palestinian guerrilla organization.

But in Damascus, a spokesman for the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine said his group was responsible for the attack.

The spokesman said "a large number of enemy soldiers were killed or wounded" in the raid.

It was the first time an attack on a Golan Heights settlement resulted in any deaths, military sources said.

Israeli forces immediately set out after the guerrillas, but they eluded pursuers and apparently made it back safely to Syria, a news broadcast on the army radio station said.

But the Palestinian spokesman in Damascus said the raiders took one hostage and reached their base camp only after an hours long battle with Israeli helicopter gunships.

Israeli military sources identified the three dead men as religious students serving as sergeants in the army's soldier-farmer corps. They were assigned to the settlement as part of their national service.

Spaniards bid farewell to Franco

THOUSANDS line up to file past the casket of Generalissimo Francisco Franco in Madrid's Royal Palace, background, Friday, as the body was placed on public display for the first time since his death early Thursday. (UPI)

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Thousands of Spaniards bade farewell today to Generalissimo Francisco Franco, their only ruler for 36 years, and to his era of iron discipline.

The body of the diminutive 82-year-old dictator was transferred today from his suburban residence to Madrid's 18th century Royal Palace, to lie in state for 70 hours of public viewing.

Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, who will be sworn in Saturday as king and chief of state, led 200 Franco family members and government officials at a private mass Thursday in the candlelit chapel of the general's El Pardo Palace.

Four hours earlier, a shiny black hearse carried Franco home for the last time.

The last of Europe's fighting dictators clung as stubbornly to life as he had to power, but finally succumbed to heart failure at La Paz Hospital after a 34-day struggle against a succession of medical crises.

Within hours after his death, the outlawed political parties that opposed him in life hailed the opening of a new era and demanded immediate democratic reforms.

"With the death of the dictator a new chapter in our history opens," the Socialist Workers Party said in a clandestine statement that amounted to secession under Franco law.

"It is marked by the necessity of liquidating the authoritarian institutions that make freedom impossible and by the hope and will to build a free and democratic Spain," the statement said.

Another socialist group, the Popular Socialist Party, said it was ready to accept any type of democratic government as long as the Spaniards people chose it themselves.

But Franco himself left behind a deathbed testament which said his authoritarian policies must continue declared his enemies were Spain's enemies and called on the nation to rally around Juan Carlos.

The 37-year-old prince, a political moderate, favors democratic reform by constitutional means. But he also must avoid alienating Franco's conservative backers and touching off a new era of political turmoil.

Officials said that as many as one million persons may file by Franco's gilded, satin-lined casket to view his body, dressed in a bedeviled commander in chief's uniform.

Police barred automobile traffic from the area around the Royal Palace to create "an area of silence." They set up barriers to guide Spaniards into the palace from eight different approaches.

Until 1931, the elegant palace was the home of Juan Carlos' grandfather, King Alfonso XIII.

Talks conclude

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — North and South Vietnam today concluded talks laying the groundwork for reunification of the divided country under a single government.

A Saigon radio broadcast monitored in Bangkok today said North Vietnam's National Assembly chairman Truong Chinh and Pham Hung, chairman of the Central Office of South Vietnam, both called for speedy reunification.

Recent Vietnamese Radio broadcasts said the week-long conference was the most important meeting since 1954 at the end of the French Indochina war.

According to prior broadcasts and reports from Saigon, reunification will follow nationwide general elections — possibly early next year — to elect a national assembly, which will then elect a central government.

A 25-minute ceremony of martial music and a flag display marked the end of the conference which was chaired by two of the four highest ranking members of Hanoi's politburo.

Few details were given in today's broadcast, but it said "the political consultative conference on reunification of the fatherland... has fulfilled its mission."

Truong Chinh and Hung said the conference approved two documents: A communique on reunification, and "a paper discussing 'problems' of reunifying the two Vietnams."

The conference opened last Saturday with a speech by Chinh clearly stating that reunification was not too distant in Vietnam's future.

The decision to reunify so quickly after the Communist victory in South Vietnam caused some surprise. Viet Cong officials had said last May they expected reunification to take at least five years.

But Truong Chinh and Hung indicated the Communist Party had decided more problems would be caused by the existence of two Vietnams than a unifying of the two zones.

Hope diamond heavier than first record

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The famous Hope Diamond was weighed for the first time in 145 years and it turned out to be a full carat heavier than previously recorded.

The dark blue, oval-shaped diamond, which the Smithsonian Institution received in 1958 from New York jeweler Harry Winston as a gift to the nation, was removed from its setting Monday and weighed at 45.52 carats. It was registered for many years as 44 1/2 carats.

Robert Limon, a Bethesda, Md., jeweler and gem authority who weighed the diamond and later reset it, attributed the discrepancy to the difference between the international standard for a carat weight, adopted in 1913.

Forgetting keys results in jail

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mike Choy, 27, an unemployed truck driver, is behind bars because he forgot where he put a key.

Police said Choy entered the Lim Pharmacy and forced owner Allen Lim, 35, to lock the door and give him the key. Then, detectives said, he took $25 from the cash register and items from the shelves.

When Choy was finished, he went to the front door but could not find the key. He searched the premises.

In the meantime, Lim's father, Sang, 75, walked past the store and noticed the intruder. He called police.

Military chief backs Lisbon oyster demand

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — Military security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho today endorsed "radical" left-wing demands for the ouster of Portugal's striking provisional government.

Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo led his two-month-old cabinet in a walkout Thursday, saying they would not return until the military agreed to supply the authority needed to govern effectively.

"If this government considers itself incapable of governing under the present circumstances, I think we can consider that the (Azevedo's) government has fallen," he said.

Carvalho, interviewed by the Communist-controlled newspaper Diario de Noticias, also serves as chief of the Lisbon military district responsible for security for the government.

The Communist-controlled station Radio Celo quoted sources as saying the military's deeply divided 19-man Revolutionary Council decided to replace Carvalho as Lisbon military chief and name Azevedo ally Capt. Vasco Lourenzo in his place.

The station said the Council also decided to reshuffle the government but indicated the changes would not affect the political composition of the cabinet.

The Council ended a nightlong discussion of the crisis without comment.

Carvalho's remarks came as leftists besieged Lisbon's presidential Palace, calling on supporters to arm themselves and fight for the creation of a Soviet-style "people's" government.

The crowd of thousands shrunk to a few hundred blanket-draped figures bunched around bonfires during the night, but appeared to grow again this morning.

Police said a five-pound bomb was discovered and defused outside the palace gates in the pre-dawn hours.

Troops in the conservative north, loyal to Azevedo's regime stayed on alert while leftist troops in Lisbon continued their occupation of the city's radio and television stations.

SNOWMOBILING & SKIING—YES

The Magic Valley Snowmobile Club has consistently maintained America's Public Lands can accommodate everyone.

Why then, the controversy over the Forest Service proposal banning snowmobiles and other motorized vehicles from an area of interest to cross country ski enthusiasts?

Snowmobilers maintain it is unwise to impose Federal Regulations in such a petty dispute. It is folly to unleash the Federal Government with the power and penalty of law to achieve what could be better accomplished by both sides sitting down and negotiating a mutually satisfactory arrangement. We welcome negotiations. We strongly oppose Federal intervention in local user conflicts, however, the Magic Valley Snowmobilers continue to support legitimate Federal restrictions which protect wildlife, the environment, public safety, or other valid concerns. ## PUC authority questioned

BOISE (UPI) — Granted some "life," the Public Utilities Commission may not have legal authority to deny Idaho Power Company's request to build the Pioneer coal-fired plant near Orchard.

James Bruce, Idaho Power president and former legal counsel for the company, gave that interpretation of the law Thursday during a PUC hearing on the power company application.

It is based, however, on several conditions. If the company had accurately assessed the future needs and could not find the generating capacity to meet such needs.

If the coal-fired plant was the best available source of electricity. If the PUC based its decision primarily on the high economic burden of the rate payers and not public safety factors such as pollution.

Solons obtain support on coyote control plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sens. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, and Cliff Hansen, R-Wyo., obtained Senate support Thursday directing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Bureau to expand its program of coyote control in the West.

The senators were able to obtain $570,000 for coyote control from a $2.5 billion section of the budget earmarked for wildlife resources.

Originally, McClure and Hansen intended to support an amendment to add the money to the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for Resource Management.

They said "given the tremendous loss of sheep and lambs due to coyotes, increased funding for conventional control techniques such as trapping and shooting along with the M-41 device is imperative."

McClure and Hansen said because popular poisons like 10-80 have been banned by federal orders, control must be carried out by conventional methods.

"Sheepmen need control now and this will not be provided simply by additional research on such unproven methods as the toxic collar filled with sodium cyanide," they said. "Although conventional methods are not the total answer to the coyote problem, they are the only available means for control now."

They said now efforts for control at least will be partially funded.

The use of 10-80 and strychnine has been banned by an Environmental Protection Agency order, which is being appealed in federal court.

Andrus urges conservation at state safety conference

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus stressed conservation of human resources Thursday in remarks to delegates at the state's 25th annual industrial safety conference.

Andrus said it is necessary to convince a throw-away, wasteful society to think of conservation, particularly as it concerns people. It is possible that man, the most precious resource on earth, could become an endangered species for lack of concern about safety, he said.

Andrus also criticized federal administration of the Occupational Safety and Health Act by saying safety guidelines could be better administered at the state level.

The state's "Washington's industrial safety law is a good example of how the job can be done better," he said.

Nothing that Idaho is the only state in the western region that has deferred to the federal law, Andrus said leaving the job up to the federal government was a mistake.

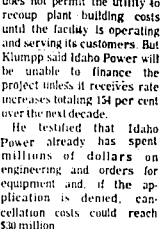

"Some day history will determine whether we were the dumbest or the smartest and I think it's the first," he said.

Andrus said he had no quarrel with the reasons for the federal law but he differs with its implementation.

"Much criticism of OSHA results from inspectors and bureaucrats who are arrogant in their dealings with people and forget they are the servants of the people," he said.

Death said accidental

BOISE (UPI) — Coroner Steve Jablonski says the death of racing promoter Bill Crow in a fire at Meridian last month was accidental. Crow was found dead in the basement of his Frontier Bar after a fire in the building. Officials said he died of carbon monoxide poisoning. At first authorities looked into what they considered "questionable circumstances" surrounding the death. But Jablonski said there is no evidence of foul play or a suicide attempt and ruled the death accidental.

CowBelles eye myths

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Hunger action groups are disseminating myths which possibly could upset the food supply, the Idaho CowBelles charged Thursday. # Henry works on deadlock

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says the complex diplomatic efforts to break the deadlock in Syrian-Israeli negotiations are underway.

Kissinger told the Senate appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations Thursday that intensive diplomatic activity between Syria, Israel and Jordan has started.

Kissinger said "We are sending some considerations to Syria" by way of the U.S. Ambassador, whom he said was returning to Damascus next week after several weeks of consultations here.

Kissinger said consultations with the U.S. Ambassador to Jordan already were underway here and the U.S. Ambassador to Israel is expected here next week for serious consultations.

"We expect that the Prime Minister of Israel will visit us in January," Kissinger added. "We hope that out of all these discussions a process for peace will emerge," Kissinger said.

Kissinger indicated he did not expect to resume shuttle diplomacy. "Of course, the negotiations also depend on confidence. But basically I am trying to get out from under the shuttle diplomacy business," Kissinger said.

On other matters Kissinger said:

"Spain has a chance to have closer relations with Europe and NATO now that Generalissimo Francisco Franco is dead.

"The chances of a summit meeting between Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and President Ford before the end of the year are highly unlikely. Maybe the President will spend Christmas Eve in the White House."

Spaceflight cooperation praised

HOUSTON (UPI) — The technical aspects of July's U.S. Soviet joint spaceflight were important to scientists, but the demonstration of international cooperation was more important to the Soviet people, according to the Russian director of the mission.

"This mission confirms international cooperation is possible," Professor Konstantin Bushuyev said Thursday. "The people of our country recognize this as a prime achievement of this mission. It is evidence that two peoples, two great nations can cooperate successfully."

"This mission was very important for our mutual understanding between our nations."

Bushuyev headed a 25-member Soviet delegation which worked with American counterparts at the Johnson Space Center for two weeks preparing the final mission report.

Dr. Glynn S. Lunney, the American technical director for the flight, said the report would be ready for distribution next week.

"The review continues to show we really didn't have any problems with the standard equipment we were using and indeed the special equipment we designed for the flight performed in excellent fashion," Lunney said.

Romance in congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans generally are predicting their party will benefit by Ronald Reagan's decision to oppose President Ford for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination. But few are saying the challenger will win.

Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., a leading conservative, called Reagan's announcement Thursday "an event of major political importance."

Buckley said it was "essential not only for the party but for the country, that the Republican party select its strongest candidate, the one most likely to win in the general election."

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, a longtime political foe of Reagan, said, "There is no question in my mind that President Ford will be defeated."

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said he "always believed that the Republican party has room enough for everybody and that ... Republicans should do more to bring people" into the party."

Scott, in a tersely worded statement, warned that "candidates should scrupulously avoid divisiveness." He said Ford has taken "firm public positions on all issues" and that Reagan must come up with some "precise answers."

Saying "the President needs to demonstrate that he can win elections outside the 5th District of Michigan," Rep. Alphonso Bell, R-Calif., said the GOP and Ford need a visible public campaign.

"If President Ford lacks widespread voter appeal, the Republicans are entitled to know about it before our nominating convention," Bell said. He added that Reagan's candidacy "will help, not hurt, the GOP next year."

Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois said a Reagan nomination would lead the party to "a crushing defeat" in the general election.

South Carolina Gov. James Edwards, however, said Reagan would be "a formidable candidate" and one he "would find ... very difficult not to support."

GOP leaders see benefit from Reagan's decision

Reagan rejects third party setup

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Ronald Reagan opened his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination with a pledge of party unity and flatly rejected the possibility of a third party ticket with Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

The former two term California governor said he has chosen New Hampshire and Florida as the first battlegrounds in his campaign to oust President Ford.

On Thursday, Reagan, 64, launched the most serious conservative challenge for the GOP nomination in more than a decade with a formal declaration in Washington, D.C. and an airborne assault on Miami and Manchester.

The smoothly-organized opening day was marred by an assassination scare in Miami where a 20-year-old man pulled out a toy gun just as Reagan had finished speaking to an outdoor crowd.

The youth, Mike Lance Carvin, was quickly subdued by Secret Service agents. Others rushed Reagan into the hotel.

The unaffiliated candidate continued his schedule and later told reporters he had no intention of changing his campaign activities.

Judge warns attorney

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The judge in the Lynette Fromme trial says if the prosecutor tried to "brainwash" a witness into changing his testimony, the prosecutor and not Miss Fromme, should go on trial.

Miss Fromme's attorney, Thomas J. Virga, won permission Thursday to question Assistant U.S. Attorney Donald Heller about alleged brainwashing of a witness who claimed he heard Miss Fromme's first remarks after her arrest for attempting to kill President Ford.

During the hearing, held away from the jury, Miss Fromme, 27, appeared in the courtroom for the first time since Chief U.S. District Judge John MacBride ejected her Nov. 7 for disrupting the proceedings.

"I couldn't resist it," she told U.S. Attorney Dwayne Keyes, referring to her return from self-imposed exile. But she first had to agree to sit quietly.

Virga charged Heller and Keyes with the statement of college student James Dammir, 23, who told police he heard Miss Fromme say, "It's not leading anyway," after she thrust a .45-caliber pistol at the President.

Dammir allegedly later changed his mind and told the grand jury she said, "I didn't go off anyway, what are you worried about?"

Grand Island still offers speedy service

By United Press International

Their city may be buried under more than a foot of snow and clogged with stalled cars, but the Grand Island, Neb., police are still offering speedy service.

"If you don't know where your car is, call the police," said Grand Island Police Chief Tom Simaha. "We'll tell you where it is and how much it'll cost to get it back."

Business, government and education ground to a halt in the Central Plains and Upper Midwest Thursday as howling winds piled a foot and a half of snow into 13-foot drifts.

Wallresses at the Husky House Restaurant at Limon, Colo., on Colorado's eastern Plains, were among the few things moving in the blizzard-swept regions.

Hundreds of motorists sat in roadside cafes in Limon, waiting for highway crews to assault mammoth drifts blocking major transcontinental highways.

"We're full of people," said Karen Briggs of the Husky House. "We have a lot of people just sitting. They can't go anywhere."

A state police officer radioed Denver that Limon, a town of 2,000 persons, "is unable to cope with the high influx of people."

Thousands of travelers were stranded, cities were immobilized, schools shut down wholesale and businesses and government offices closed from Colorado, to Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Only two deaths were reported — both in traffic mishaps on snow-backed highways.

Fingers of fog may shroud MV

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley.
Partly cloudy through Saturday with areas of night and morning valley fog. Changes of light snow at times. Overnight lows 15 to 25. The highs Saturday in the mid 30s.

The outlook for Sunday, chance of showers.

The effects of an upper level low pressure area now in northeast Utah were just about finished in the Magic Valley this morning. Only a few snow flurries were experienced this morning.

Snowfall was widespread throughout the Magic Valley Thursday and last night, with Burley and Rupert reporting three inches of snow on the ground this morning. The Weather Service office at Kimberly reported two inches, Jerome one and one-half inches and one inch was reported at Pocatello, while Fairfield only reported a trace on the ground this morning.

Temperatures in the Magic Valley area were all about 15 degrees below normal and are not expected to warm much over the weekend.

Another frontal system is approaching the Washington coast and will bring increasing cloudiness to the Magic Valley by late Saturday night, increasing our chances of showers Sunday.

The extended outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for unsettled weather with chance of showers at times through the period. Highs in the 30s and low 40s through the period with overnight lows 15 to 25.

Hare Krishna sect shunned as neighbors

DALLAS (UPI) — A leader of the Hare Krishna religious sect said Thursday the group still might buy an Aledo, Ill., military academy for use as a school despite objections from the surrounding farming community.

"The final decision should come some time next week," said Jagadisha, a leader of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness and master of the sect's Dallas school.

"We feel that the response of the audience (at a town meeting in Aledo Monday night) held by the trustees of the Roosevelt Military Academy was misleading," he said.

"This opinion is based on the fact that present at the meeting were many people who had come from outside areas, specifically to try to get the people of Aledo to reject the possibility of our moving our school here."

"These people were insulting and rude deliberately in an effort to discourage us," Jagadisha said, however, that since the meeting he had received numerous apologies from the townspeople, some of whom invited the sect to move its school of 115 children to Illinois.

The sect has elected to move its school from Dallas because of lack of space in its current facility, formerly a Protestant denomination church, and because the Texas Welfare Department would require renovations in the present building which would cost approximately $40,000.

Monday night Jagadisha and the sect's business manager met with the community of Aledo to discuss their probable move to the farming community of 3,000 residents.

They will maintain a home in Washington while attending the Congress for which each will run again in 1976.

Marriage makes congressional history

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Reps. Martha Keys, D-Iowa, and Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., announced Thursday they are getting married in January. It is believed to be the first marriage between members of Congress.

Keys and Jacobs both serve on the House Ways and Means Committee and have spent long hours together there since each entered the House as freshmen this year.

They said they would retain their respective names, would keep their homes in their respective districts and each will seek reelection in 1976.

She is 45 and he is 43.

Both their offices are in the Longworth House Office Building but are three floors apart.

Keys, a sister of Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., was divorced earlier this year from her husband, Samuel, a university dean who was born in Indiana. She has two daughters and two sons.

Jacobs, also divorced, likes to compose brief poetry about Congress' activities. He had served four terms in Congress from Indianapolis before he was defeated in a reelection bid in 1972. He was elected again last year.

Although no such records are kept, veteran observers could recall no previous husband and wife incumbency in Congress.

A brief announcement of their wedding plans stated that "both, by pre-nuptial agreement, will retain their respective names and continue to live in their respective districts."

Caroline's 18th party 'off'

LONDON (UPI) — Warning telephone calls from her mother have had a dampening effect on the social life of Caroline Kennedy and she has canceled plans for an 18th birthday party next week, the Daily Mirror said Thursday.

"The party is off. I'm not holding one next week, and that's it," the newspaper's gossip columnist Paul Callan quoted Miss Kennedy as saying.

Callan reported last week that Jacqueline Kennedy-Onassis, in a series of transatlantic telephone calls, gave her "oldest daughter" a sharp scolding for going to too many parties and paying scant attention to her art studies at Sotheby's, the art auctioneers.

"No, I won't talk about how I'm enjoying my art course," Caroline added and stomped off with a girl friend to a nearby sandwich bar for lunch, the newspaper reported.

Miss Kennedy narrowly escaped injury or death last month when a bomb exploded under her car outside the home of her London host just moments before it was to have taken her to her art classes.

London gossip columnists have reported that following the incident, Miss Kennedy was urged by her mother to come home out of the range of terrorist bombers.

Unique surgery explained

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A team of doctors Thursday reported on a unique surgical effort to rid patients of abnormally fast, and potentially fatal, heart rhythms that had resisted other forms of treatment.

Dr. John Bolneau of Medical College of Georgia at Augusta, spokesman for the team, described the procedure before the American Heart Association's 48th scientific sessions.

He said it involved mapping the electrical network of the heart and then destroying those areas found to be sites of abnormal transmission of the heart's signals.

He said the surgery either ended the irregular rhythms or greatly reduced them in five patients. A sixth patient died, but the ventricles beat exceedingly fast.

The danger is that the fast rate may lead to fibrillation in which the main pumping chambers begin to beat in an erratic way which, if it continues, usually ends in death.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Barbara Oros husted her three children off to school Thursday, sat down to a steaming cup of coffee and a few moments later was festering over what to wear to blow up a bridge.

At precisely 8:17 a.m., in ceremonies featuring a high school band on the steps of city hall, Mayor John Hutchinson had reached his hand into a big box and pulled out the blonde housewife's name.

With the drawing, the hopes of several thousand potential bridge blasters from across the nation died. The 38-year-old former Houston, Texas, resident will push the button at 9 a.m. Sunday sending the Kanawha City bridge plunging into the Kanawha River in an explosion of smoke, dust and debris.

"I'm so excited I think I'm going to have to make a special 'suit' just for the occasion," said Mrs. Oros, who canceled her plans to attend a sewing class when she got a call informing her of the honor.

Mrs. Oros said her date to destroy the bridge coincides with her husband's birthday.

"I guess that's the way we will celebrate," she said. "It certainly is a unique present."

Although the winner was decided by a simple drawing, the newspaper sponsoring the contest, The Charleston Daily Mail, had requested that each entrant pay $100 if she wanted to destroy the old span.

On her entry, Mrs. Oros had written she wanted the job "because it will be the most exciting thing I've done since moving to Charleston six months ago."

$18 million loophole eyed by RR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The country's profitable railroads would be richer by $18 million per year for the next 50 years under a little-noticed amendment recently inserted in a tax revision bill by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The amendment — one of hundreds in the tax bill now before the House — is an example of how what have become known as "loopholes" find their way into the tax law.

The extra money it would give railroads, through lower taxes, amounts to about 8 percent of the total tax paid by all railroads in 1974.

While many marginally profitable railroads would have their tax bills wiped out by the amendment, the greatest reductions would go to those lines that make the greatest profits, and therefore now pay the highest taxes.

Southern Railway, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western, Chessie System and Burlington Northern.

When the amendment was discussed in the committee, the only major voice raised against it was a Republican, Rep. William Steiger, of Wisconsin, who called it an "unconscionable" giveaway to railroads he believes do not need it. Proponents said that even the taxpaying railroads will go bankrupt if they do not get money to modernize. Congress is working on a $2 billion plan to save a number of bankrupt railroads.

Elimination of the provision was not included in the list of reform amendments that Ways and Means Committee liberals want the right to offer on the House floor.

The new tax break would be brought about by allowing railroads to depreciate for tax purposes rail line grading and tunnels in place prior to 2001.

The 2 per cent per year depreciation schedule would apply to the value the grading or tunnel bore at the time it was cut, or, if it was cut prior to the 1913 income tax amendment, the depreciation would apply to the estimated value in 1913.

Under present Internal Revenue Service rules no depreciation is allowed on any item that has an indefinite life. Since grading and tunnels presumably would last for centuries, no depreciation was allowed until 1969 when Congress set up the 20-year schedule.

Rep. John Byrnes, R-Wis., then the ranking GOP member of the House Ways and Means Committee, the tax break was limited to tunnels and grading cut in 1969 and later.

UNICEF worried about U.N. vote

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — The U.N. Children's Fund is worried that Americans outraged by the General Assembly's anti-Zionism resolution will take it out on the fund and its Christmas cards — to the detriment of impoverished children.

Officials say it's too soon to judge the effect on card sales, but there already has been reaction.

The assembly declared Zionism a form of racism Nov. 10, touching off a furor in the United States.

Within days, two New Jersey chapters of the League of Women Voters decided not to sell UNICEF cards this year, last year they sold about $7,500 worth of cards, turning over 90 per cent to the fund and keeping 10 per cent.

In the Detroit area, several groups indicated they plan to boycott the cards to register disapproval. In Chicago, a woman selling the cards reported Jewish coworkers refused to purchase them and Dave criticized her for selling them.

UNICEF, with its Christmas cards and Halloween trick-or-treating, is probably the U.N. agency most visible to Americans — and most likely to feel the wrath.

The U.S. Committee for UNICEF says last year's Christmas card sales brought in $3 million, after expenses, for the fund. Sales throughout the world of cards celebrating Christmas, Ramadan, Buddha's birthday and other holidays brought UNICEF more than $9 million.

Half the cards are sold by direct mail, the rest through various groups which set up out in banks, offices or other public places.

The U.S. committee and UNICEF itself are stepping up publicity campaigns to point out the fund is independent of the General Assembly and subsists on voluntary contributions that go to children regardless of politics.

UNICEF runs programs in more than 100 nations in Africa, Asia, the Americas and the eastern Mediterranean, and expects to spend at least $120 million this year, much of it helping children threatened by war or hunger.

Mrs. Gloria Cherry, a lawyer who is president of the Temnelly, N.J., chapter of the League of Women Voters, said the decision not to sell the Christmas cards was "a direct response and a form of protest to the General Assembly resolution."

"We all know the distinction between UNICEF and the General Assembly," she said

Foul play not issue in graves

GERVAIS, Ore. (UPI) — Occupants of several new but unidentified graves at a small cemetery here were not victims of foul play, officials of the cemetery have been assured.

The two-acre, 100-year old cemetery is owned by the local Masonic Lodge, whose officials got worried when seven fresh graves showed up in recent weeks. The burials were all done at night with no notice to the cemetery caretaker.

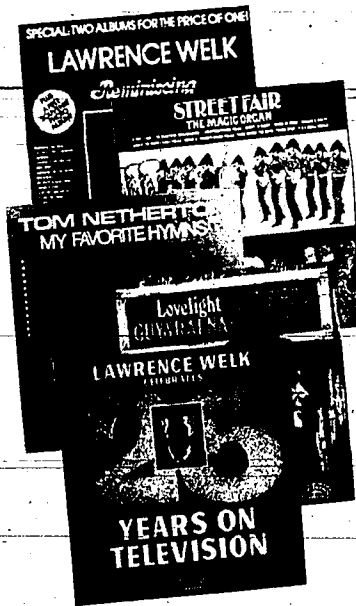

The mystery was cleared up when the Russian and Greek Orthodox religious community was contacted. Brother Ambrose Moorman, of nearby Mt. Angel Abbey, who acted as an interpreter, confirmed to a deputy that burials had been conducted by the community and that everyone was accounted for.

Several years ago, the community bought 40 grave sites in the cemetery, but those have since been filled and James P. Fones, a Masonic lodge officer, said that the latest burials were "going outside the real estate" purchase. "He said the lodge was considering filing trespass charges."

In addition to not identifying the occupants of the graves, Fones said some persons were buried over older, unmarked graves, Fones said. Brother Ambrose was able to identify some of the grave sites and said he would get identification for the rest.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Anyone want a wife? I'm 24-years-old, and I can't find a guy. I haven't had one date since high school.

Let me state my qualifications: I can cook and bake really well. I can sew and make all my own clothes, and I'm told I'm the best-dressed girl at the office. I have nice skin and teeth, and I keep my hair in the most flattering style for me.

I own my own car, color TV, stereo and have money in the bank.

I love all kinds of sports and outdoor activities like camping, fishing and hiking. I am well-liked by everyone at work and have many close friends.

Know why I don't get dates? I was told by one of the guys I work with it's because I'm overweight. Now before you start condemning me, let me say I am not grossly obese. I have lost some weight, but my doctor says I can't lose any more because I am a large-boned girl. I am well-proportioned and can play tennis better than my thin friends.

Why do guys want thin girls? I am ready to give up.

DISGUSTED

Everything but dates

DEAR DISGUSTED: I don't mean to be unkind, but plenty of overweight girls are dating up a storm. A young woman who has an attractive, outgoing personality and gets involved in activities (church, political or volunteer) is bound to meet a fellow who will want to see her again.

Instead of wondering what's wrong with YOU, forget about yourself and concentrate on doing something for someone else. It will add a charming dimension to your personality and enhance your chances.

DEAR ABBY: At the time of our marriage (three years ago) I took my husband's name to be my legal name.

I am an artist and feel that my husband has done nothing to merit having his name on my work. It is awkward for me to have to sign my first, maiden and married name on my paintings now when I formerly used only my first and maiden name. How do I get my name legally changed back to my maiden name? My husband knows I love him, and he doesn't object.

I don't know what lawyers charge, but I'm betting it's an arm and a leg. Is there some do-it-yourself book I can get?

FATHER'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Do-it-yourself legal work can be the most expensive money-saving gimmick around. Find a lawyer and pay him an honest fee.

DEAR ABBY: I am married and have a lovely set of rings, but I am not sure which ring I should put on my finger first, my wedding band or my engagement ring.

Please tell me the proper way to wear my rings. And I hope you print this because I am sure other wives would like to know, too. Thank you.

WAITING

DEAR WAITING: The wedding band goes on the finger first—then the engagement ring. It is said that the wedding ring should be worn closest to the heart.

ASK THE JACOBS

An Illinois reader wants to know what he should have bid next. His hand was:

♠ A K 6 5 4 3 A Q 9 8 7 6 5

♣ A K 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

He opened one diamond, partner jumped to three clubs. He bid three diamonds and partner three hearts.

The answer is that he should have bid three spades with every intention of heading for a slam—probably in no trump.

Golden Eagle games take on new look, 'Spirit of '76'

TWIN FALLS — Golden Eagle Basketball fans will be seeing more than just basketball at the 1975-76 games.

Two young Twin Falls women have organized eight talented young College of Southern Idaho coeds to guide the cheering fans in their verbal team support. They will be known as the "Spirit of '76."

Rita Gray and Bonnie Detweiler have been working with eight song leaders selected recently from a group of 15 applicants. A judges panel of 25 selected the finalists on a basis of their dedication, ability, personality and originality.

With the help of Mrs. Gray and Ms. Detweiler, they have worked out a number of special routines guaranteed to please the fans and athletes alike.

"We have a lot of new ideas for the 1975-76 season. With hard work, the girls plan to gain the recognition to go along with the outstanding track, baseball and basketball teams for which CSI is known," Mrs. Gray said.

"We can't take all the credit," Ms. Detweiler added. "Most of the ideas are ones that the Golden Eagle Boosters have had for years. There's just never been anyone to put them into effect."

The Student Senate at CSI must also be credited for funding the program, the two song leader advisers say. The budget has been substantially increased to get the new program off the ground.

Bonnie Detweiler, a former Utah State Aggieite, has been teaching the girls pom pom routines, gymnastic drills and formations.

The girls have been practicing daily and Ms. Detweiler says the girls and the advisers now feel the routines are done with effectiveness and precision. "The girls are doing well and learning fast. It takes a lot of encouragement and a little criticism to keep them working hard," Ms. Detweiler says.

Not only are the song leaders instrumental in carrying on the spirit of the fans, they are also instigating a move for fans to wear gold to the games. Any shade of gold, from a sweater to a hat or coat, shirt or dress, but always gold.

A majority of the fans dressed in the team color can do a lot to boost morale of the players, says Mrs. Gray.

"While in Hutchinson, Kan., last year for the National JCCA tournament, we saw how impressive the fans can be when they unite and wear team colors. The color there was red and everywhere you looked people were wearing red. The crowd was overwhelming," Mrs. Gray said.

In addition to the six girls in the Spirit of '76, there is a male mascot. He is Tracy Hatfield who will be performing special gymnastics on a mini-trampoline throughout the

The new cheer leading group promises good half-time entertainment for every game. Drill teams from around Magic Valley as well as college drill teams from other areas will be invited to perform in the first game Friday.

The song leaders will be doing routines at halftime with high school cheerleaders from Magic Valley schools.

The girls have written words to a school light song. It is done to the tune of the Michigan Fight Song and the words are simple with fans encouraged to learn.

Included on the eight-woman, one-man song leader squad in addition to Hatfield are: Karma Florence, Katherine Brady, Kay Cooper, Laurie Beal, Cathy Corey, Kathy Utley, Millie Darnell and Jana Anderson.

Short reviews given on new books

TWIN FALLS — Mini-reviews for recent publications to the Twin Falls Public Library have been released by library officials.

"Reverend Randolph and the Wages of Sin" by Charles Merrill Smith.

"Does life have any meaning? This is the terrifying question Augusta Turnley now faces. She is 84, the victim of an accident that left her unable to speak or move, imprisoned in her old body. Yet her mind is anything but paralyzed.

She relives the past — how she married blindly adoring Carter Turner who took her to a Montana settlement, then to an equally alien city in the Deep South where he was born. There, among her husband's relatives, Augusta and her young daughter were stranded when Carter was killed in World War I.

Searching for a more meaningful life, she moved—Asterisks. Do. Rob Martin with the help of her only grandchild, breaks through Augusta's sealed-off world, lending perspective to her passionate inquiry.

"The Last Valley" by A.B. Guthrie.

The author says it is altogether probable that this is the concluding novel about America's push westward. It continues the story of Arville, Mort Ewing and Doc Crabtree appear again, along with Benton Collingworth and his daughter, Mary Jess.

The protagonist is Ben Tate who purchases the "Arrive Asterisks" with money saved from military service in World War I. He and Mary Jess turn the weekly Advocate into a lively and controversial paper, often under attack.

"This is an account of a young man's growing to maturity and a country's growing older. It is underscored with a feeling for the land and the belief that the interior northwest has come fact to face with the future, and so it is as contemporary as fallout and pollution.

"Reverend Randolph and the Wages of Sin" by Charles Merrill Smith.

Enjoy the heresies, detentions, holy and hot water in this mystery about a murder in the church choir room.

Rev. Randolph becomes interim pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd and has to use more than just his clerical judgment to find the murderer.

"Search for the Peking Man" by Christopher Janus.

Question: What was the Empire State Building

after the Peking Man? What is the mastermind theory?

To whom will the bones belong when — and if they are found? Has the Peking Man been hidden for 50,000 years out of greed? Ignorance? Or out of fear?

Are there unanswered questions in the incredible, true saga of the search for the Peking Man: secret meetings, mysterious phone calls, intervention by the FBI and CIA, and the assistance of Chinese generals. Illustrated with maps and photographs. It is a dramatic story of international intrigue and cooperation and out-questions left to solve.

CAHLSLE, Pa. (UPI) — Robert L. Bear says he loves God and just wants to lead a quiet Christian life with his wife and six children on their potato farm.

But on Nov. 24, Bear will be in Cumberland County court for a legal fight he hopes will destroy his church, save his farm and bring back the family that deserted him three years ago.

Bear was a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church, known for charity to others and for the seemingly inhumane punishment doled out to those who break the church's strict doctrines.

It has about 500 members in the U.S. and Canada. They believe theirs is the only true Christian religion, the bishops who lead them, are appointed by God and their word is God's word.

Persons who question the church's doctrines at the bishops' potestas must be excommunicated and subjected to a form of symbolic execution known as shunning.

It happened to Bear in June, 1972, for accusing the church's elders of living by "one set of more worldly rules and expecting church members to live by another."

Bear's wife and children at first refused to speak to him and later walked off saying they, neither loved nor respected him anymore. His parents did believing he was a heretic and would burn in hell.

The ordeal turned Bear, 49, into a bitter man. He says he will dedicate the rest of his life if necessary to fighting the church.

"I want my wife and my family back," he said. "Unfortunately, the backbone of the church will have to be broken."

Bear's parents were Reformed Mennonites. At age 29, he married Gale Gross, 20, whose brother is the local bishop.

Bishop Gross, who runs a successful farm market, said neither he nor any other church official would have any comment until Bear's suit comes up in court.

"I have decided not to talk about this publicly on this," Gross said.

Bear says "the problem is that you have to marry in the church. My father wanted me to marry another woman when I was younger and said that I would learn to love her."

"But I have seen how some of the church's 'make do' marriages work out and I wanted to marry for love. And when we married, Gale and I were both very much in love."

Bear said his life with Gale was idyllic from their wedding in 1958 until June, 1964, when he wrote a paper challenging church doctrine and both he and Gale were excommunicated for a year.

"That broke her spirit," he said. "She was a devoted Reformed Mennonite and she thought I had led her wrong. Our marriage was never the same after that. The church set her against me."

Bear said while his marriage was strained, it was still peaceful until 1972 when he was again excommunicated. But this time, he refused to repent.

"Gale was against me," he said. "She wouldn't talk to me. She wouldn't eat at the same table. She wouldn't let me touch her. Worst of all, she turned the children against me by telling them she wouldn't believe a word I said."

Bear contends the church encourages women married to men who have been excommunicated to use the temptation of sex to try to force their husbands to repent and get back into the church.

"Your wife must be loyal to the church first and her husband second. Her job is to remind you that you are damned to hell unless you repent. They're heartless. The Reformed Mennonite women are heartless," he said.

Bear said he decided to leave in the spring of 1973 when his wife refused to co-sign a loan he needed to continue farming that year.

"When I went down to the house to say goodbye, little Sharon, who was three at the time, threw her arms around me and begged the other children to stop me from going," he said.

"But two years later, she said to me, 'I wish you weren't my daddy. I wish I had another daddy.'"

Then his wife moved out, taking the children to her mother's. He had to sue to get visitation rights.

Bear then decided to fight back. He hired a public relations firm, published a book at his own cost and filed a suit against shunning in Cumberland County Court.

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has upheld his right to sue and the case will be argued Nov. 24.

Bear said he rejected divorce as one of the options.

"First, I don't believe in it and second, the church has been separating families for 400 years through the practice of shunning and it's time someone does something to stop it," he said.

Bear said that his battle against shunning is gaining support. He said 18 church members, including four bishops, have been excommunicated for backing him.

Bear says a victory for him would likely bring the downfall of the Reformed Mennonite Church.

"If they would allow Gale and me to live together in peace it would destroy the church," he said. "After all the suicides, adultery and broken homes shunning has caused, to change the policy would be to admit that the church was wrong."

Woman destroys Sasquatch marks

ROSEBURG, Ore. (UPI) — When Jean Fitzgerald sees monster-like footprints, she quickly rubs them out.

"We destroy them so some 'Bigfoot' hunter won't stumble across them," said Mrs. Fitzgerald.

She is crusading for legislation to protect the legendary Sasquatch — the hominid known as "Bigfoot," a sort of lowland North American version of the Himalayan "abominable snowman."

Mrs. Fitzgerald said she and her family have seen the apelike creatures often and they spotted nine of them together.

"They proved to us they don't mean any harm," she said Wednesday. "Each time we saw them, they were as curious about us as we were about them."

Her husband, Steve, said he once left a candy bar for a Sasquatch, but nearby, and watched the creature devour the treat — wrapper and all.

Bigfoot's existence has been debated for decades, but Mrs. Fitzgerald says the family has seen the nine-foot hairy mammal on numerous occasions over the past two summers.

She described the creature as covered with short, black hair, except for the face, hands and feet, which she said were dark brown and "weirdly bearded." It also had high cheekbones, a flat nose and hands like a human hand, except that the thumb was the same length as the fingers.

"He could have killed us many, many times over the past two summers if he so desired," she said. "He's so huge he could have done almost anything he wanted to."

Her son, Danny, 15, said he once saw six of the Sasquatches "sauntering across the road in order, the tallest first, down to the smallest."

Danny said his school chums have ridiculed his sightings as tall tales. For that reason he disagrees with his mother, who is against the capture of the creatures.

"I'd like to see somebody bring one in so it could be proven once and for all," he said.

Reagan welcomed by aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's campaign manager today welcomed Ronald Reagan to the Republican presidential race because voters will be able to choose between Ford's "record" and Reagan's "rhetoric."

Howard H. Callaway said in a statement following Reagan's nationally televised announcement of his candidacy that the former California governor has already started to "duck the tough issues."

"It was evident today that Mr. Reagan will answer specifically only what he wants to but reporters as well as voters will note how he ducked such tough issues as military spending, FBI activities and federal aid to New York City," Callaway said.

"A president cannot duck the tough issues," he added. "Nor should a presidential candidate."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ind., another Reagan critic, said if Reagan is nominating the GOP would suffer a "crushing defeat" in the general election.

In a statement, Percy said the nomination of Reagan would be "a nationally recognized victory for the Democratic nomination of Sen. George McGovern — proved to be in 1972."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okl., said Reagan's decision to enter the race "should be welcomed by all Americans, Republican and Democrat alike." But he stopped short of an endorsement, extending only his "best wishes" as Reagan begins his campaign.

"Mr. Reagan is one of the most eloquent political figures on the national scene," Bellmon said. "His successful service as governor of California qualifies him as a worthy contender for our nation's highest and most responsible office."

Callaway said he welcomes Reagan's decision to enter the race "because it now gives the voters a clear choice between candidate Reagan's rhetoric and President Ford's record."

Both rulings allowed NEPCO to make-up differences between the cost of domestic crude oil and the high priced foreign oil it imports every month.

NEPCO and the FEA have denied there was any relationship between the rules exemptions and Edward Carey's relationship to the governor.

The latest decision applied to oil imported by NEPCO in September, with the price offset entitlements coming in November. FEA officials, in imposing the one-month limit, turned down a NEPCO request for an indefinite exemption.

"A review of NEPCO's balance sheet as of Sept. 30 indicates that the firm's continued existence is in very serious jeopardy," the FEA decision said, noting that the firm's liabilities exceed its liquid assets.

"Exception relief should be granted to permit the firm to operate as a viable, competitive force in the fuel oil market," the FEA said.

Oil industry sources said NEPCO has lost an estimated $90 million in the past two years.

FEA grants oil firm exemption

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Energy Administration said today it has granted a one-month rules exemption worth $2.7 million to the oil company owned by the brother of New York Gov. Hugh Carey.

It was the second such exemption granted to Edward Carey's New England Petroleum Co., a fuel oil firm which FEA officials said is in serious financial difficulty. The first exemption, granted last May, was worth $18.5 million.

Both rulings allowed NEPCO to make-up differences between the cost of domestic crude oil and the high priced foreign oil it imports every month.

Kissinger still daily visitor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is still getting his daily session in the White House, but President Ford has begun making his promised changes in how he spends his time.

One major change is that Ford may make no more fundraising appearances for the Republican Party. Political sources said he will all but restrict himself to coming only to the financial aid of his own bid for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination.

In announcing his Cabinet and staff changes two weeks ago when James Schlesinger was fired as defense secretary, Ford said there would be changes in how he operated in the White House. His press secretary, Ron Nessen, said there would include Kissinger's losing his daily audience with Ford.

The reasoning was that Kissinger, stripped of his other post as Ford's national security affairs adviser, would not need the oval office daily hour and not his official positions as the basis of his power.

But Kissinger still comes in every morning, both in and out of a White House official car, to believe this will end when U.S. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, Kissinger's deputy national security affairs adviser, is sworn in as his successor as adviser.

The change already has affected Scowcroft. Previously Scowcroft every morning reported in person to Ford on national security affairs. Now he sends in a written report.

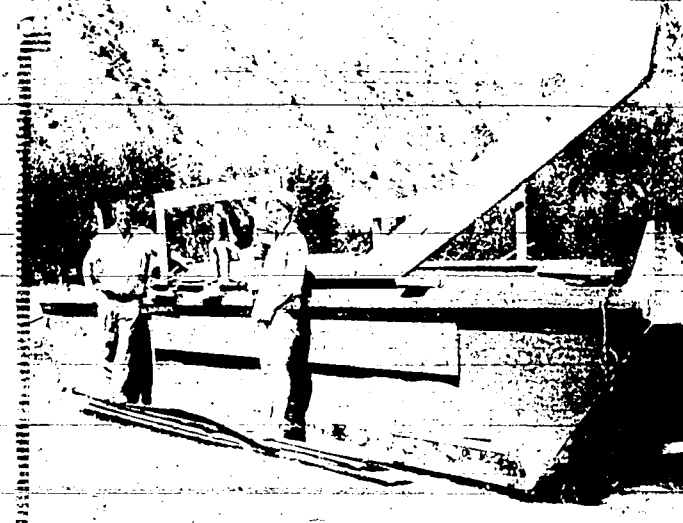

Richard Cheney, the deputy who succeeded Donald Rumsfeld as White House chief of staff when the latter was named defense secretary, said the President now prints it possible to handle a discussion by telephone rather than in person.

On the political side the sources said, Ford feels he has level up the promises made when he became vice president. To raise money for state GOP bodies. They said he has raised more than $4.2 million, pulling more than a dozen state organizations out of the red.

By contrast they said, Ford's own campaign committee has raised less than $1 million of its 1976 goal of $3 million.

The sources said Ford also has been told that the money he raised for state GOP candidates opposed to his nomination. And they said the President would help him with the public

Boating first Historic boat saved in Salmon

SALMON — The first metal boat to run the Salmon River is being saved for its historical significance.

It was built by a foot-all-welded aluminum craft was launched in Salmon June 20, 1918, by Don L. Smith, veteran river runner.

That first trip was called the Wolf Expedition and took a party eight days all the way to Lewiston, down the Salmon and Snake rivers.

Smith recalls he was the captain with Bill Taylor running the rear sweep with Bob Carns the engineer.

That was considered an extremely high water year. "Smith, who resides on Fourth of July Creek, recalls — "We had to fix the Carmen bridge first and just barely got under it."

Smith operated what he called the "One-way Club."

That was the first party were Raphael G. Wolff, Karl Wolff, C. Coward, J. C. Bonning, H.

L. Schmidt and R. H. Bonds.

The party left Salmon June 20 and arrived in Lewiston June 30.

Smith constructed the boat in Spokane and ran it four years on the Salmon and Snake rivers. It then was used to haul lumber — in the Smiths hunting camp on the river below the end of the Salmon River Road.

In 1952, the boat was "retired" and was enclosed to house a kitchen at the Smith river camp.

Prior to the all metal boat, river runners had built their boats out of green lumber, constructing seams.

"The reason we built this aluminum boat was that it didn't weigh any more loaded than the old wooden boats did. It was built to haul passengers, mainly fishermen, sightseers and hunters in the fall," Smith said.

In 1952 the Smiths turned to using Army surplus rubber bridge pontoons and landing craft to run the river.

"These types were so much easier to haul back after the trip was finished," he said.

Smith maintained a regular schedule with the aluminum boat, with 14 days "tied up" in each trip to Lewiston.

This boat hauled 10- to 12 persons, including the three-man crew. It was run by sweeps with a 22 horsepower outboard engine used to place it for running the rapids or getting through the slow-moving holes.

In May this year, Bob Smith, North Fork, son of Don, set off down river in the aluminum boat in its final voyage.

"We got it down into the river and on May 21 took it as far down river as Lemhi Creek. Then on May 22 we ran to Spring Bay below French Creek where we loaded it on a trailer and the next day brought it back to North Fork."

On the boat's trip out, Smith ran the front sweep and Fred Porter the back sweep. There were four others aboard.

"It floated pretty good after all those years of service," Smith said "but it was leaking pretty bad. We all hated as we went."

Smith used a seven-horsepower motor on the trip which took 12 hours of actual running time.

Smith says the boat will remain in his front yard of his place along U.S. Highway 91 and he hopes to restore the craft.

Human rights push not prudent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department has told Congress that pressuring other countries to abandon their racial, religious and sex discrimination practices would harm U.S. foreign policy.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, appearing before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee Wednesday, said that because violations of human rights are so common around the world it "found no adequately objective way to make distinctions of degree between nations."

The department said that because violations of human rights are so common around the world it "found no adequately objective way to make distinctions of degree between nations."

He was referring to legislation passed two years ago mandating a halt of particularly in the case of Saudi Arabia.

Earlier, the State Department, in a report to Congress on the subject, said there is no way to judge which foreign aid recipients are guilty of human rights violations and cutting off aid to violators would hurt the cause of equality and U.S. security.

At the Kissinger hearing, Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., told the Secretary: "This is not a matter of interfering in the internal affairs of another country. It is, then, our internal affairs should be predominant."

Case said he considered the matter as being of the utmost importance. "I would hope that the Congress would stick by the provision."

Here's the latest wrinkle in environmentalism

Sun shines during 'official' night

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Charles Tudor said he and a companion went hunting in Orange County one day and bagged two doves while the sun was still shining.

That's when they were tickled by an agent of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, who maintained the sun had "officially" set 14 minutes earlier, signaling the end of the hunting day.

Lt. Jim Reed, the commission's regional information officer in Ocala, said the state hunting law recognizes sunset as the astronomically determined time published in newspapers, which is not necessarily the same time as the sun dips behind the horizon.

Tudor said he and his companion were not wearing watches on the day they were cited and did not know what time it was. "The sun was still shining," he claimed.

Orange County Judge Frank Kaney sentenced Tudor and his friend to three days in jail, although the maximum sentence under the misdemeanor charge is two months.

WASHINGTON — "The latest wrinkle in environmentalism," the Washington headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce said in a recent brochure, "would deny people the use of large sections of the United States for future development and set them aside as huge clean air preserves."

"It is not a matter of cleaning dirty air," the chamber continued. "It is a matter of arbitrarily deciding that air already relatively clean should be left undisturbed regardless of the cost in future jobs or the fact that many poverty areas would be forever doomed to slay poor."

What the Chamber of Commerce was inveighing against was the policy of "non-degradation" — a policy embodied by all three levels of the federal courts and given substance, on court orders, in regulations of the Environmental Protection Agency.

In simplest terms, the policy of non-degradation means that the Federal and state governments can ban or restrict new industrial development in those areas — including, but not limited to, national parks, wildlife refuges and wilderness areas — where the air is now cleaner than is necessary to meet the minimum Federal standards designed to protect health and welfare.

Two weeks ago the Senate Subcommittee on Environmental Pollution, headed by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, of Maine, and the House Subcommittee of Health and Environment, headed by Rep. Paul G. Rogers of Florida, sent to their respective parent Public Works and Commerce committees draft bills amending the 1970 Clean Air Act. Both bills would put in statute form provisions for protecting clean air areas that are tougher than EPA regulations.

The subcommittee bills were a big defeat for the electric power industry, the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers, which have led the lobbying against non-degradation. They had urged the subcommittees to adopt an amendment proposed three years running by the Nixon and

Ford Administrations "It would have allowed degradation of clean air up to the most restrictive air quality standard."

This week the full Senate Commerce Committee will begin final revision of its subcommittee bill. The lobbying will be intense. Industry representatives seek to persuade members that a non-degradation policy is "nothing more than a 'backdoor' approach to Federal land use control." Environmental groups counter that industry statements are "scare" tactics.

The real impact of the non-degradation amendments, the environmental groups contend, will not be nationwide and their objective is not to "blot our future development." Rather, they argue, the real issue is whether the electric power industry will be permitted to build multithousand-megawatt plants near new strip mines in the Dakotas, Wyoming, Montana and Colorado, many of which would be close to national parks and wilderness areas.

In November, 1974 Russell E. Train, the EPA administrator, issued regulations on non-degradation to become effective on Jan. 6, 1975. Under these regulations, which applied only to sulfur oxides and particulates (soot and smoke), the states were allowed to establish three classes of clean air regions.

Class I would be areas of clean air where almost no change of quality was desired and where allowed increases in the two pollutants would be very slight. The regulations made clear that areas in mind included national parks, wilderness areas and the like.

Class II would be areas where the states desired moderate change in clean air levels to accommodate some development, but where permitted pollution levels would still be stringent.

Class III would be areas "where major industrial or other growth is desired." But even in these areas the two pollutants would not be allowed to rise beyond the level of the national secondary standards.

Buhl defeats school bond

By LINDA LEE Times-News writer

BUHL - Thursday Twin Falls County tax notices arrived in the mail and Buhl voted down a $2.3 million high school bond issue...

The Buhl vote was 1,080 in favor to 648 against, a 63 per cent majority. The bond needed a 66.7 per cent favorable majority to pass...

"I am very disappointed," Buhl school trustee Dr. Harold Hammerquist said. "To a degree I think we are proud enough of our community, but a contributing factor may have been that county tax notices hit the mail the same day the vote was taken."

In addition, Hammerquist said, "People vote against taxation whenever they can... they can't rationally so they do locally."

Both James Twin Falls County treasurer said tax notices are mailed and the day they are ready, "we have no control over how that might affect local bond issue votes."

"I was disappointed the bond failed, but bonds are failing everywhere these days," Loomis said. "This community needs new schools."

Buhl Mayor Ted Pence said, "I'm sorry it didn't pass. There will be a lot of disappointment, some people wanted it real bad."

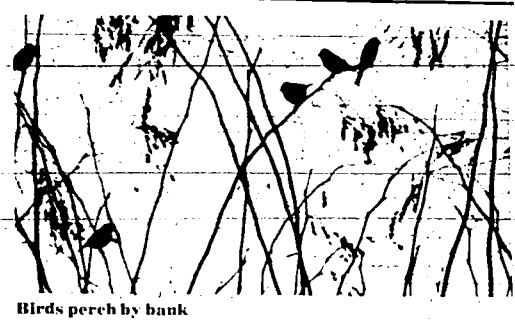

Buhl Superintendent Dan Mabe said he was in favor of the bond and thought it would pass.

"In January of this year, we passed a bond to buy the land for new school buildings," Mabe said. "Our long range plan for the 73 acres is to build new senior high school, new junior high school and new vocational-agriculture buildings on the site."

"I'm not sure when the voters will be ready to start that process," Mabe said, "we have a lot of worn out buildings."

The present junior high school building was built in 1968, the senior high building in 1920, and the vocational-agriculture building in the 1940s.

Mabe said the bond issue defeated Thursday would have provided a new senior high school building and allowed the junior high students to move into the present senior high building.

Birds perch by bank

Birds give up bank trees

By CRICKET BIRD Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Bank & Trust may be winning its war against the birds.

The bank took up a shotgun Tuesday to frighten away hundreds of sparrows and starlings who have been roosting overnight in the seven trees in the bank's parking lot and creating a "sanitation problem."

Public relations director John Angerbauer, began his shotgun campaign against the feathered flocks Tuesday night after receiving official city permission to discharge a firearm within city limits.

To reassure bird lovers, Angerbauer is not shooting at the pesky creatures. Special ammunition provided by state wildlife officials provides a two-blast charge designed to make the birds think of finding a calmer and quieter roost in some other tree.

Angerbauer reported this morning progress on the project is "great." "We're making progress," he said, adding, "We were free of them all night (Thursday night). We're very encouraged at this point."

Angerbauer said when he roost to shoot on Tuesday he fired about 50 times trying to get the birds to roost in somebody else's trees.

But Thursday night he only fired 14 times. "When I left at six last night there wasn't a bird in sight," he reported happily.

TF population rises to 24,600 this year

By GORDON RUDD Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS - City of Twin Falls population has risen to approximately 24,600 persons as of November 1975, according to a recent survey. Although the city experienced only a minimal gain of 1,788 persons in the ten year period from 1965 to 1975, the survey points to changes, which if they continue, will result in the number of city residents increasing approximately three to four thousand every five years until the city has approximately 40,000 residents in the year 2000.

"To state that the City of Twin Falls has experienced substantial growth since 1970 should come as no surprise to anyone," Wayne Muellerbach, Staff Planner, Twin Falls Joint Planning Council, states in the report. "Subdivisions have grown seemingly overnight, city boundaries constantly change," he says.

"Employment opportunities have apparently played a key role in Twin Falls as agricultural production continues its traditional dominance. However recent manufacturing additions, have opened other avenues of occupation. Young families have apparently become disenchanted with finding their fortunes elsewhere. There is ample opportunity to make a comfortable life in Twin Falls," Muellerbach points out.

The report goes on to credit The College of Southern Idaho for the number of young people who have remained. "Since 1965 its doors in 1965, C.S.I. had an initial enrollment of 650 which steadily increased to today's total in excess of 3,100. Projections call for a total of 4,000 students" by 1977-78 the report states.

Other interesting findings include an increase in the number of persons in the 15 to 29 age bracket and "consistently higher percentages for persons older than 35," comparing 1960 to 1970 figures.

In addition to elderly people in outlying areas of the county moving into the city for convenience reasons the survey also calls attention to the facts that "favorable year-round climate conditions have had its effect on retiring couples who had admired the area during a past vacation." Many have expressed their dissatisfaction with the "rat race of city living" and have found Twin Falls much to their liking according to an interview with Ann Seherer, Twin Falls, Welcome Wagon.

The report would suggest that although Twin Falls is not headed for "zero population" that its young couples become more conscious of family planning and birth control resulting in fewer children being born. "1960 was earmarked by fewer but larger families while 1970 portrays more but smaller families," the report states.

Bank officer shoots to scare birds

Compromise plan favored for health systems unit

TWIN FALLS - The South Central District Health board is favoring a compromise plan between major groups seeking to be designated Health Systems Agency (HSA).

The Health Planning and Resources Development Act of 1974 requires that each state create an HSA to be generally responsible for preparing and implementing plans designed to improve the health of the residents of its health service area.

In addition, the HSA will increase the accessibility, acceptability, continuity, and quality of health services in the area; and restrain increases in the cost of providing health services; and prevent unnecessary duplication of health resources.

Dr. Charles Parker, Hatley, member of a state wide ad hoc committee appointed at the request of the governor to resolve conflicts between groups seeking HSA designation, reported to this district board meeting on Wednesday.

Parker said his groups recommendation would include aspects of both The Coalition to be Designated HSA and the Idaho Federated HSA plans.

Dr. Parker said the compromise plan would be for a stock corporation rather than a member corporation. The six Uniform Planning Districts of the state would form sub-area councils for health planning.

Blaine sheriff questions cattle report

By BART QUENSELL Times-News writer

HALLEY - Orville Drexler, Blaine County sheriff, believes many Idaho law enforcement officials will disagree with the Idaho attorney general's report which concludes none of the cattle mutilations in the state have been done by humans.

Upon hearing the findings of the attorney general's report Thursday, Drexler said he could only think of one out of 18 reported mutilations in Blaine County which was definitely the work of predators.

The others, he says, could not positively be tied to predators.

A report released Thursday by the attorney general found no evidence any of the 90 cattle mutilations in Idaho during the past six months were the work of humans.

"We found that there was no conclusive proof of any human involvement in the deaths of these animals and no conclusive proof that the mutilations were done by human beings," David Howe, a special investigator for the attorney general says.

But Drexler disagrees. He says most of the mutilation deaths in Blaine County were clouded with unresolved mysteries. But the method of mutilation seemed similar in all cases, he says.

Drexler says the fact the animals were decomposed and could not be analyzed clouds the validity of the state's conclusions.

Rowe admits, "The examinations were pretty sketchy." The majority of cases, Rowe says, indicated a predator, probably the coyote, made the round incisions in most of the animals without touching the meat.

Drexler says he can't believe "there's an animal capable of cutting out geometric cuts on animals as neatly as these were."

"Predators generally go after something to eat not just to rip a chunk of hide out," "that would be something to see," Drexler says, referring to a predator marking a circle on an animal.

Drexler points to one of his reports on a steer belonging to "Beard," Bellevue, which states "the animal's throat was slit and blood was found on the ground near the animal. In another instance, the tail of a cow found mutilated in Muldoon Canyon was found burned near the carcass, Drexler says. He says other parts of the tail were brought to the sheriff's office and when burned appeared exactly as the hair near the Muldoon cow.

Rowe says the department received only 35 written reports of the nearly 90 mutilations across the state beginning in June. However, he says, his investigators conducted interviews with other enforcement agencies' reports relate to the mutilations.

Travel stickers required

TWIN FALLS - Travel and camping trailers currently subject to personal property taxes and motor homes and truck-campers will require a recreational vehicle (RV) sticker after Jan. 1.

House Bill 247 passed by the 1975 legislature defines and sets a schedule of fees for licensing recreational vehicles. "A recreational vehicle means a motor home, travel trailer, truck camper or camping trailer, with or without motive power, designed for human habitation for recreational or emergency occupancy, with a living area less than 200 square feet, excluding built-in equipment such as wardrobes, closets, cabinets, kitchen units or fixtures, bath and toilet rooms.

The term "recreational vehicle" as used in this act shall not include pick-up hoods, shells or campers designed, created or modified for occupational usage."

Stocks at midday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed in slow trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average was behind 0.15 to 843.96 shortly after the opening bell. Advances led declines, however, 103 to 87, among the more than 325 issues traded.

A jump in the Consumer Price Index and the uncertainty surrounding New York City's fiscal future weighed on the market Thursday. Wall Street observers said the 0.7 per cent rise in the October price index was expected following the 1.8 per cent increase in the Wholesale Price Index. But investors were worried about renewed inflationary pressures, which could impede the economic recovery.

Courtesy Sinclair & Co. CHICAGO — Maine potato futures moved lower again Thursday with a decline of 50 points in May, 45 in April and 25 points in March compared to a 16 point advance in the distant November. Commission house selling early in the day in response to a combated weakness and the slightly bullish construed Wednesday started the decline. When values penetrated the May contract's August lows, heavy stop loss selling was touched off, bringing sharply lower prices despite heavy short covering by the trade. Volume totaled 4,270 contracts. In wheat futures, rainfall over all the winter wheat belt Wednesday and beginning snowfall over the consuming influence on trade. The first serious approach of winter in the Midwest supported fall grain prices and in turn bolstered wheat futures around midday, but by the close speculative profit taking had erased the minor gains. In soybean futures, the 1 1/2-cent advance from 110 1/2 cents down with new contract lows again established for next year's crop. Commercial and commission house performance was mixed throughout the session with a slight preference for the sell side. A nervous attitude is developing around the wheat trade as "bottom picking" becomes more of a difficult chore. Thursday morning 3 cents or more protection below the bid basis for Gulf hard wheat reflected this attitude but into the day bids ranged from 23 to 25 over Kansas City December. Soft red wheat bids at the Gulf were reported at the Chicago Dec option. Hard winter Chicago basis strengthened nominally 3 cents, now 4 over Chicago Dec. The soft red Chicago basis nominally increased 8 cents to rest on the December price. The advance of the first serious cold front of the season was seen generating additional outside market support for corn futures Thursday. With some unsecured corn still needing protection, the moisture in the forecast presents an additional potential hazard. Futures closed 10 1/2 cents higher for current crop contracts and up minor fractions in new crop months. Chicago cash corn basis 3 cents higher for boxcars at 5 cents under Dec and Gulf basis unchanged to 1 cent higher at 8 1/2 cents over Chicago Dec for railcars. Soybeans closed mixed after an active day with prices ranging mostly on the plus side but with something for everyone. Commission house buying along with commercial demand firm bean prices from the opening and afforded a buying cushion to accommodate moderate-sized hedge offerings from a number of commercials. However, some processor purchases of bean futures again resulted in crush spread selling of

GNP, profits improve

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's gross national product and corporate profits rose in the third quarter at the fastest rate in at least 25 years, the Commerce Department reported Thursday. The rapid improvement came on top of the largest two-year profit margin in preliminary estimates of the real gross national product. Real GNP was initially estimated last month as growing 11.2 per cent from the second quarter. But Thursday's revision put the growth at 13.2 per cent, the highest since the third quarter of 1959 when the real GNP increased 17.5 per cent. Commerce said.

Progress made in beetle control

BOISE Good control of the Mexican bean beetle was achieved in 1975 through the Idaho Department of Agriculture's garden inspection and spray program.

U of I budget backed by panel

BOISE - Pointing to the need for more agricultural research to help cope with the problem of feeding the world, the Idaho Bean Commission Thursday voted support for the University of Idaho's college of agriculture's research and extension budget request for fiscal year 1976-77.

according to a report made by the state agency. The report, presented to the Idaho Bean Commission by Wilson Kellogg, director of the state agriculture department, pointed out that the program was by no means entirely successful since there was a significant increase in the number of infestations.

In spite of this increase, however, there was actually a six per cent decrease in the total number of gardens infested," Kellogg explained.

The report noted that the program incorporated three tools - publicity surveying and spraying - to combat the insect, which poses a serious threat to southern Idaho's $68 million bean industry.

Exports supported

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard Bell says he hopes the Soviet Union will buy more American wheat later in the 1975-6 marketing year.

Bell says wheat exports will be heavy anyway because demand for American wheat is strong in other parts of the world.

He said India, for example, has been buying wheat steadily at the rate of 100,000 tons or more weekly in recent weeks.

The Soviet Union, which has so far ordered 11 1/2 million tons of all American grains this season, brought both wheat and corn initially but has placed orders only for corn in recent weeks.

Bell said he hopes negotiations between Soviet officials and American wheat traders and processors will have some further sales.

The department anticipates wheat sales for the year to be between 1.3 billion and 1.4 billion bushels.

Bell added, however, that farmers should look primarily at domestic use in hoping for stronger prices.

regions - of their respective areas in which the greatest density of infestations had been found.

In addition to the Boise program, surveys were also made of 69 Twin Falls gardens, 47 in Rupert and 150 in Kimberly, with no infestations found in those areas, the report said.

However, an infestation was reported and confirmed in Caldwell and some three square miles of the area surrounding the infestation was subsequently inspected, and a total of 19 gardens sprayed.

Kellogg said the 1975 project was terminated on Aug. 22 with a total of 2,424 hours of combine effort spent. The 2,300 gardens surveyed was a significant increase over the previous year's 4,500, as was the number of infestations found - 1,317, as compared to 879 in 1974.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) - Last week, Alvin Green of nearby Chase shot and buried his dairy herd. It was contaminated with PBB, a toxic fire retardant accidentally mixed with tons of livestock feed at a feed plant.

New Green himself is showing symptoms of PBB contamination.

MOTORISTS would do well this time of year to use caution on county roads and highways, says T. M. Kendrick, acting Twin Falls county sheriff. He said many ranchers are moving cattle from summer range to their ranches and must drive them along roads and highways over part of the route.

Soviets beat Irish

NEW YORK (UPI) — Notre Dame blew an eight-point half time lead and a 16-point second half edge Thursday night as the Russian national basketball team, behind Serge Belan's 21-point, posted a 77-70 victory over the Fighting Irish.

Belan's last points came on a field goal from the side with 1:47 to play and lifted the Russians from a one-point deficit and won the game. Adrian Dantley was high scorer for Notre Dame with 24 points.

Dantley opened the second half with eight points in a 41-31 span and three more quick Notre Dame goals gave the Irish a 66-59 lead. But the edge evaporated when the Soviets refueled with 12 straight points in 2 1/2 minutes. A 7-2 spree then gave Russia a 71-69 lead.

Jardine won't quit

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The flop of the 1975 Wisconsin football team has dejected Badger fans and coach John Jardine alike, but Jardine put to rest Thursday any speculation he might quit when the seasons end.

He said he would be around next year to try to bring the Badgers back.

As the finale of perhaps the unhappiest football campaign of Jardine's career approached, he had been talkative that he might forsake the last four years of his contract. There have been no indications he would be fired.

Jardine conceded that he agonized and tried to reassess his players, his staff — and himself — during the "down" periods when Wisconsin was getting knocked around on the football field.

Falcons sign Herron

ATLANTA (UPI) — Jack Herron, a 5-foot-5 running back who had an outstanding season at New England in 1974, Thursday signed as a free agent with the Atlanta Falcons.

Herron, placed on waivers by the Patriots, last year rushed for 824 yards, caught 20 passes for 474 yards, returned 25 punts for 517 yards and returned 23 kickoffs for 629 yards.

Herron, 27, led the NFL in kickoff return yardage in 1974 when he returned 41 for 1,992 yards.

A star at Kansas State, Herron was a sixth round draft choice of the Falcons in 1971 but instead of signing with Atlanta joined Winnipeg of the Canadian League. In 1972, Herron led the CFL in rushing with 1,547 yards and finished second in balloting for the league's most valuable player.

Squires back on griddle

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The future of the money starved Virginia Squires was clouded once again Thursday as the head of a group of black businessmen credited on Tuesday with paying the franchise $2 million to return to the city to finance the club.

Kirk Saunders, general manager of the Norfolk Investment Co., said the firm plans only to make money available to individuals interested in investing in the American Basketball Association franchise.

Saunders' financial reports Tuesday that his group agreed to meet $200,000 to the franchise on a non-sharing-standing and "on credit" obligation.

SAVING General Manager Jack Anderson said he was surprised by the development, but said he remained confident the Squires would not become the third ABA franchise to fold this season.

Braves drop Cleveland

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Bob McAdoo scored a Coliseum-record 50 points to lead the Buffalo Braves to a 118-115 overtime victory over Cleveland Thursday night.

McAdoo broke his own Coliseum scoring record of 49 points set Dec. 19, 1974. The 6-foot center and guard Randy Smith, who contributed 21 points, led a Buffalo comeback in which the Braves rebounded from a 21-point deficit.

With his team trailing 79-56 with 5:34 left in the third quarter, McAdoo scored 19 of the next 16 Buffalo points and the Braves cut the deficit to 14 at the third quarter break, 86-72.

A three-point play by Smith with 4:31 left in regulation play helped the Braves catch up at 88-86. The Braves went ahead to stay on Smith's 10-foot jump shot after a rebound midway in the overtime.

Bullets topple Hawks

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — Fred Cherner scored 22 points and Wes Unseld 21 Thursday night to lead the Washington Bullets to a 105-96 National Basketball Association victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

Elvin Hayes, who was saddled with five personal fouls through most of the third quarter and played only 20 minutes, scored only 15 points but contributed five in the final four minutes when the Hawks twice ceded to him two points.

Dean Meminger scored 8 of his 10 points during the final period by hitting Atlanta back from a 10-point deficit early in the period.

Unseld, last year's NBA rebounding leader, also contributed 17 rebounds. Atlanta's attack was led by John Brumby who scored 18 points and hauled down 10 rebounds. Connie Hawkins contributed 13 points for Atlanta.

Slake breaks leg

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Kim Mumford, one of the top U.S. Ski Team women's downhill racers, suffered a broken leg Thursday in training at Val d'Isere, France, for the first 1975-76 World Cup race and will be lost for the Olympic year, it was reported here.

U.S. Women's Coach John Borenstein said Miss Mumford fell in a bumpy section near the bottom of the downhill course. She went off the course at speeds estimated of more than 50 miles per hour and broke both bones in the lower portion of her left leg.

"Accidents like this are an unfortunate reality of our sport, and I really we have never learned to accept or adjust to," Borenstein said. "We are all very saddened by her loss. She was one of the most dedicated members of our team."

Lings top Yugoslavia

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Utah State broke away from the Yugoslavian National Team midway through the second half Thursday night to grab an 87-78 exhibition basketball win.

The Aggies had taken a 49-30 halftime lead. The Yugoslavs held USU to just three points in the opening six minutes of the second half to tie the score at 52-52.

The teams traded baskets for the next two minutes before Utah regained a large lead behind the shooting and rebounding of 7-foot center Ed Greig. Greig finished with 19 points and 22 rebounds.

Hockey series set

MONTREAL (UPI) — National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell says arrangements are now complete for an opening exhibition series between eight different NHL clubs from four Soviet hockey teams.

This series presents a new potential for hockey in North America, Campbell said Thursday. "All practices and snow conditions, which is probably the most significant one now being worked out."

Big weekend? It's all been there before

By BILL MADDEN
UPI Sports Writer

This weekend, we will all be witnesses to college football's version of déjà vu.

The scenario from Ann Arbor, Mich., to Norman, Okla., to New Haven, Conn., to Stanford, Calif., we already have seen so many times before.

For starters, we have two too excitable madcap hard losers, Woody Hayes and Bob Schembechler, throwing or is it running every third they have at each other in an effort to nail down the Big Ten championship and a ticket to Pasadena, Calif., for the Rose Bowl.

One year it was Ohio State's Hayes doing the throwing — downs markers that is — after his Buckeyes were beaten by the Wolverines. On other occasions, Woody has been known to throw punches at fans or photographers.

Similarly, Michigan's Schembechler has done his share of throwing — tantrums, of course — sometimes at the Big Ten for failing to provide an alternate choice of bowls for the loser of this traditional season's end grudge affair. Other times merely at the officials after a Wolverine loss to the Buckeyes; and most recently at a photographer for attempting to take pictures of Bo's closed practice session from a nearby apartment building.

It is not known if any vital secrets would ever have been divulged by such pictures. What is known is that, (1) barring injuries, Ohio State's Archie Griffin will get his 100 yards Saturday, (2) the game will likely be decided by a touch down or less, (3) there will be significantly more running than passing and (4) somewhere along the way, there'll be a sufficient controversy to allow the losing coach a good tantrum after the game.

The oddsmakers, overlooking Michigan's home field 105,000 capacity advantage, like Hayes' unbalanced and sprained Buckeyes to remain that way — by six points. No matter what, however, this year's loser will go to the Orange Bowl.

Then at Norman Okla., we have the annual Big Eight bloodletting between No. 2 Nebraska and No. 6 Oklahoma back in 1971 when these two teams met, they called it the game of the century — and it almost lived up to that. This year, it's somewhat less than that, although the Orange Bowl berth and possibly an eventual national championship could ride on the outcome.

Oklahoma's one loss hasn't derailed the oddsmakers from making the Sooners a 5 1/2 point favorite. Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne has said it's Orange Bowl or nothing, but the Cornhuskers have nonetheless asked for scouting passes to the Arizona State-Arizona game next week — no doubt keeping their option open for a Fiesta Bowl bid if they lose.

At New Haven, Conn., Harvard and Yale will again lock up for their version of "The Game" with what else? The Ivy League championship again at stake. To no one's surprise, "The Game" is spick-um.

Finally out west at Stanford, what is traditionally called the "Big Game" between Stanford and California will be just that this year. Often the Pacific Eight also runs by this time, but always the ferret of rivals, both the Cardinals and Bears still have a shot at the Rose Bowl.

First requirement is, of course, a victory in the "Big Game." Then UCLA, currently the Pac 8 front-runner, must lose to or be tied with its arch rival, Southern California next week. Joe Roth's Southern California next week's reigning have consumed the oddsmakers to install explosive Cal as a 2 1/2 point favorite.

But as we have already seen (and certainly already heard a thousand times too often), you can throw out the point spreads (not to mention the record book) in all of these games.

Elsewhere across the country, ninth-ranked Colorado hosts Kansas State, No. 10 Penn State is a 2 1/2 point favorite at Pittsburgh, West Virginia is a 2 1/2 point pick at Syracuse, Mississippi is rated one over Kansas; LSU is a four-point choice over Tulane and South Carolina is a 10 1/2 point pick over Clemson.

Illness to owner slows Giant sale

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Three news indications Thursday the financially pressed San Francisco Giants are close to being sold, but completion of the transaction will have to wait at least a week while owner Bruce C. Stoneman recovers from abdominal surgery.

With most of the prospective buyers — including interested parties from Japan and Canada — eliminated, it appeared San Francisco financier-sportsman Robert Lurie, who sits on the board of the National Exhibition Co., the parent company of the team, and owner of a small portion of the Giants, appears to have the inside track.

Ariz., said the prognosis was good, and that surgery would require a week's hospitalization.

There were strong indications the sale was to be closed at the special meeting and that Stoneman would reject the National League's loan offer of up to $5 million to operate the team again in 1976.

The way was cleared for the sale earlier Thursday when the Giants revealed contract termination letters were sent to manager Wes Westrum and his coaches — Don McMahon, Joe Amalfitano, Andy Gilbert and Ozzie Virgil.

If the club is sold, Mr. Stoneman does not want to saddle the new owners with a manager and a coaching staff, a spokesman said. "I'd want them to have a free hand in hiring their own people."

"We also made the move at this time in order to allow Wes and the coaches to contact other clubs for jobs. There was no animosity in the termination of their contracts."

Just prior to the end of last season, Stoneman asked Westrum, who guided the team to a third consecutive 100-win MLB West with an 89-69 record, and his staff for their resignations, but they declined.

Pitchers bid for negotiating freedom

NEW YORK (UPI) — Andy Messersmith will try to become another Catfish Hunter today — but it won't be by hurling a baseball.

What Messersmith will be doing is presenting his case to an arbitration panel in an attempt to try to become another Catfish Hunter today — follow in Hunter's footsteps and become a free agent. He will be joined on a common legal ground by Dave McNally. Both pitchers will take the position that since they had contracts which expired in 1974, the reserve clause — which allows a club to hold for one year an unsigned player — cannot be used in perpetuity against them.

In addition to the panel members, those expected to be in attendance today include Dodgers' General Manager Peter Ueberall, Messersmith's lawyer, Joseph R. Miller, and Messersmith's agent, Herb Osmond, and numerous witnesses.

"Messersmith's case has tremendous merit," said Miller as he prepared for the pitcher's hearing. "His chances of success? I never heard a case in arbitration. Messersmith will know of the panel's decision in about four or five weeks."

Messersmith, a 19-game winner for the Los Angeles Dodgers this past season, presents his case to the arbitration panel today, while McNally, who quit the Montreal Expos on June 4 after posting a 3.6 record, makes his presentation on Monday.

The panel consists of arbitration chairman Peter M. Seitz, whose decision in favor of Hunter last year led to his $2.8 million contract with the New York Yankees, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, and John Galgieri, executive secretary of baseball's management council. Seitz' vote of course, is the pivotal one.

Miller said the difference between Messersmith and McNally's cases and Hunter's was that a different section of the standard player's contract was violated.

In Hunter's case, it involved a breach of contract by the Oakland A's. The player had a provision which gave the player the right to rechoose under those circumstances.

"In Messersmith's case, it was a renewal clause of the contract and the interpretation of it. Messersmith's 1974 contract was renewed for one year by the club without his signature. That's an option clause — for one year."

"That year is over. It is our position there is no continuing contractual relationship and therefore Messersmith should be declared a free agent."

Ducks Unlimited fete reaps $15,000 benefit

America's duck population benefited to the tune of about $15,000 Thursday night.

That was the amount that chairman Bill Reeves said appeared went into Ducks Unlimited efforts through the fifth annual Sage Valley Ducks Unlimited banquet.

A total of 425 duck hunters showed up for the fete, purchased $47,000 worth of raffle tickets — in addition to the $23,000 ticket — and then spent a record amount for the auction items offered.

Heading that list was the $2,500 bid by Leo Soran, Twin Falls, for the special edition Ducks Unlimited Winchester pump shotgun.

"It's for my grandson," said Soran who now has purchased two of the guns for record amounts.

Jay Miller and Ron Nielsen of Idaho Construction successfully bid for the two artwork and screeled painting prisms. They paid a total of $1,100.

"That wasn't bidding," said Miller. "Ron kept pushing my arm up after it."

The total take was more than double the previous best amount at the fund-raising event and, included with the $13,000 benefit from September's Sage Valley banquet, put $29,000 of Sage Valley money into the preservation of breeding wetlands on the North American continent.

Cal favored by two points against Stanford Saturday

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — It's a five-point consolation to Mike White, both John McKay of Southern Cal and Dick Vermeil of UCLA think the California football team will beat Stanford Saturday in the Big Game.

"That's fine and I hope they're right," White said today as he prepared to put his team through its final drill for the game which could decide who goes to the Rose Bowl this year as the Pacific-8 Conference representative.

"Still, we have no illusions about the job ahead of us," White continued. "In many ways Stanford could be the best team we faced all year. We're not easy to defeat against."

"California has a 310' top-down pick over Stanford and coach Jack Christiansen feels that's about right."

"Cal has the No. 1 team in the nation in total offense," said the Stanford coach. "So they should be favored in any game they play. But if you look back over the years, being favored in the Big Game means very little."

"Christianity is a 310' top-down pick over Stanford as head man four years ago. California hasn't been to the Rose Bowl since the 1957 season while Stanford went their most recently in 1970 and 1971 and beat Ohio State and Michigan, respectively."

stand another finish like that.

"Cal goes into the game, which will get under way at 1:30 p.m. (PST) and before a sell-out crowd of 87,000 in Stanford Stadium, with a 7-3 record. The Cardinals are 6-4 and currently are working on a five-game winning streak. The winner will earn a share of the Pac-8 title at the least and, if Southern Cal defeats or ties UCLA next Friday, will also get a Rose Bowl berth as well. If UCLA beats USC, the Bruins would go based on their wins over both Cal and Stanford."

Each side will be missing a key player. Running back Ron Inge has a gimpy leg and won't open for Stanford while Tom Newton, whose blocking sets up Cal's running and passing offense, has a neck injury and won't play at all. Freshman Paul Jones will be at fullback for Cal.

Nebraska hopes to put dent in Oklahoma's latest dynasty

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — With the Oklahoma dynasty slightly shaken, the Nebraska Cornhuskers will try to do some further damage Saturday in another of their bitterly fought games that will decide the Big Eight Conference championship and a spot in the Orange Bowl.

The undefeated and second-ranked Cornhuskers will go into the contest as a slightly surprising four-point underdog to the sixth-ranked and one-beat-Sooner.

A capacity crowd of more than 70,000 will squeeze into Owen Field for the contest, a meeting which will mark the last of the costly television blackout of Oklahoma games imposed by the NCAA two years ago.

A win or a tie for Nebraska would give the Cornhuskers the Big Eight Conference title outright and the trip to Miami New Year's Day.

If Oklahoma wins, the Soothers will tie Nebraska for the league championship and take the trip to Florida.

The Fiesta Bowl has offered a spot in its game to the loser of the Sooner-Cornhusker confrontation. Oklahoma has said it would go and Nebraska has said it wouldn't, but privately Nebraska has said they would re-eval and likely change their position.

"They are probably the most physical team we have faced since we played them last year," said Oklahoma coach Jerry Soltzer.

"If we are to win, we will have to play the best we have this season in every phase of the game. We will have to play two halves of football like the first one we played in Missouri (at which time Oklahoma was ahead, 20-0.)"

The Soothers have often struggled this year, narrowly beating Miami of Florida, Colorado, Tennessee and Missouri, and losing to Kansas. The failure against the Jayhawks two weeks ago was the first loss for the Soothers since 1972 and it touched off grumblings among the rabid Oklahoma backers.

"It's just like I've been saying," one upset Oklahoma fan was quoted as saying. "I never heard Soltzer we would lose a game every two or three years."

The Cornhuskers, meanwhile, have all but coasted through 10 victories and now have their best shot at defeating the Soothers since their 1971 triumph at Norman, a thrilling game that they matched the nation's top two teams.

"Oklahoma's defense will be the best we've gone against in 1975," said Nebraska coach Tom Osborne. "But there are some things I think we can do against them."

NFL players question expansion draft legality

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pro football players union questioned Thursday the legality of the National Football League's plan to stock new expansion teams at Seattle and Tampa Bay and executive director Ed Garvey said in an early meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"This could be in violation of individual contracts and probably illegal," Garvey said in a statement through NFL Player Association headquarters.

The plan allows the existing teams to protect 20 of the 15 active players on their rosters and only two from their reserve list, consisting this year mainly of injured players. It also allows the two expansion clubs first crack and extra picks in the college draft.

Garvey said in his statement: "We will have to look at it. We don't believe veteran players can be included in the draft."

After giving the possible illegality of the procedure, he added: "We are consulting our attorneys now. I plan to call Commissioner Rozelle and expect to meet with him soon."

Garvey is currently visiting with players of every NFL team to get their views on the present deadlock in which there is no labor contract between the NFLPA and the league owners.

The union is believed to be concerned by probable placement of many veterans in the expansion pool merely because they were injured this year and placed on the reserve list. The use of the injured reserve list was resorted to frequently by coaches this season when the active roster was cut from 47 to 43 and the traditional taxi squads were eliminated.

There are more than 120 players now out for the season after being placed on the injured reserve. Under the expansion plan, only 20 of them would be protected from being made available to Seattle and Tampa Bay.

John Thompson, general manager of the Seattle franchise, acknowledged Wednesday when the plan was disclosed that there would have to be negotiations with the players' association on the disposal of veterans.

But there was a question of whether the union would agree to the expansion draft system without first reaching a general contract settlement with the NFL. Management Council bargaining talks conducted through federal mediators have been abandoned in recent weeks following a short-lived pre-season workout by players of four teams.

There have been no signs recently that they will resume. In addition, the NFLPA is awaiting the outcome of several major court suits to determine the legality of the standard player contract and other provisions which would be involved in the expansion draft.

Kilmer works out with 'Skins'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bill Kilmer and Randy Johnson divided quarterback duties Thursday as the Washington Redskins worked out for their reinstatement with the Oakland Raiders but Coach George Allen refused to say who would start Sunday.

Kilmer reported he felt no pain in practice after sitting out last Sunday's sudden death loss to the St. Louis Cardinals with a shoulder separation. Allen is expected to wait until minutes before game time against the 72 Raiders before designating his passer.

The guessing was that Kilmer would get the nod to try to pull the 6-3 Redskins out of a possible disastrous three weeks of competition against the Cardinals, the Raiders and, still to come, the undefeated Minnesota Vikings.

Washington trails St. Louis in the Eastern Division of the National Football Conference by a game and is tied with Dallas in the struggle for a playoff berth.

The Redskins are faced with the task of trying to shake off the psychological impact of their 2-17 loss to the Cardinals, which came after St. Louis scored a tying touchdown on a controversial pass possession call only seconds before regulation play expired.

"It's going to take a special type of team to come back from that," Allen commented. "But we've got a special sort of team."

Miami meets Baltimore in key game of division race

By United Press International

Brother, could Don Shula use Larry Conka, Jim Kirk and Paul Warfield now?

Leading Baltimore by two games in the American Football Conference East, the Dolphins take on the last closing Colts Sunday at a time when Shula's Miami crew is at low ebb.

Miami lost a close 20-19 game to Houston last weekend when the Oilers scored the winning touchdown with 1:11 to go.

"What's worse," moans Shula, "is that it looks like we're catching Baltimore when they are really starting to put it together. Our loss to Houston was frustrating."

The Colts always like to beat Shula, who deserted Baltimore for Miami in 1970. Shula could have a current string of four consecutive division titles stopped if Baltimore gets the Dolphins and the Redskins. Miami into a disastrous 1975 finish. He won his AFC East titles with Conka, Kirk and Warfield before they jumped to the now defunct World Football League.

Baltimore lost four of its first five games this season and then reversed the field with four straight victories, including a 32-19 clobbering of the New York Jets last Sunday. During this winning stretch the Colts scored 170 points. They failed only 1-0 in a 14 game schedule last year.

Statistics-wise, Miami rates its eight-point favorite's role. The Dolphins are third in the National Football League in total offense, second in rushing and fifth in passing. On defense, they rate second in least yards allowed, second in rushing and third against the pass. Baltimore is 7-3 on offense and 6-9 on the defensive categories.

Baltimore quarterback Bert Jones injured a rib in the Jeds game after completing 16 of 22 passes for 277 yards and three touchdowns. But the Colts have him fully recovered in the injury statistics sent to the league office at midweek.

Bob Griese was equally effective in the air against Houston with 21 of 29 passes for 257 yards and a TD.

Other games Sunday see Cincinnati at Cleveland, New England at Buffalo, Chicago at Los Angeles, New York Giants at Green Bay, Minnesota at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at San Francisco at New Orleans, Denver at Atlanta, Detroit at Kansas City, Oakland at Washington, St. Louis at New York Jets and San Diego at Minnesota.

Pittsburgh visits Houston for a Monday night game.

There are two other close races in the NFL. Cincinnati and Pittsburgh are tied for the Central Division lead, with Houston a game back and St. Louis heads the Eastern Division by a game over Dallas and Washington.

Minnesota is the only club with a perfect record, and Cleveland and San Diego have lost their first game. Games this season.

Brown claims NCAA rules cause cheating

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Dale Brown charges that NCAA rules encourage cheating.

"In our rules, we don't give a boy a chance to go to school honorably," said the Louisiana State basketball coach. "The system makes a cheater out of you."

Brown contends NCAA rules are so complicated no one understands them all and many are broken unknowingly.

"We've got to get sanity back," said Brown. "We need to trim the rule book from two inches to two pages."

"I think we have legislated against human dignity in the rules. It's false, it's wrong. We're all being false as hell if we say we're not breaking the rules," said Brown. "We don't know what all the rules are. The rule book is like 'Looney Times'."

Brown gave an example of a rule that has been bothering him: "What do you do when one of your boys comes in complaining about a toothache and your trainer tells you he needs immediate dental care? The rules allow you to spend thousands of dollars on a shoulder or a leg, but nothing for teeth."

"You know the boy's family can't afford to send him to a dentist and you also know he isn't going to be able to play until something is done."

"We need to change the rules."

Another rule that has Brown upset is one that is expected to be enforced more rigidly in the Southeastern Conference this winter than elsewhere — a rule which says a coach must stay on the bench during a game.

"It's a dream to think you can keep a coach on the bench in the heat of a basketball game," said Brown. "The general rule, which was put in there to cut down on crowd intimidation, is a good one. But we're going overboard."

Auburn coach Hub Davis agrees with Brown: "I'm against any rule that makes me sit down," said Davis. "It might explode."

There's one NCAA rule that all 10 Southeastern Conference coaches meeting here oppose. That's the one adopted in August that allows a team to dress out only 13 basketball players at home and take only 10 on the road.

Conference Commissioner Boyd McWhorter sides with the coaches on that one.

"I will do everything I can to get that rule changed," McWhorter said. "It just doesn't make sense for a boy to go out for a team and work hard, knowing he can't make a trip because someone wants to save $50 or so."

"Being allowed to dress only 13 at home is totally ludicrous," said Brown.

"I don't need 10 for a ball game, but I do need 10 for practice," said Mears. "The rule is going to create a morale factor on the boy who doesn't make a trip."

"It is ridiculous to be allowed 15 scholarships and be allowed to suit up only 13," said Florida coach John Lutz. "It's not fair to the kids."

"It's a stupid rule," said Auburn's Davis. "No other sport has the foul-out rule. I can foresee a team on the road being forced to play the closing minutes of a crucial game with four or less available players."

"They're going to change to 12-12 in January," said Davis. "That's wrong too. They shouldn't set a home limit."

Brown said most of the problems concerning the floor basketball rules laid down to a "lousy job of officiating."

Province begins Olympic bail-out

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — A clause by clause examination in the Quebec National Assembly began Thursday on the bill proposed to take over control of the 1976 Olympic Games from the city of Montreal.

The bill, which set up a seven-member Olympic Installations Board with responsibility for games financing and construction, was passed in second reading Wednesday. It was expected to be rushed through a third reading and final signing early Friday.

The government bill came after the city of Montreal ran up a $600 million deficit in the games, scheduled to begin next July 17. It in effect usurps Montreal's control of the games.

Examination of the bill was delayed over an hour while members of the National Assembly's standing committee on municipal affairs debated a demand for testimony from city of Montreal and Olympic organizing officials.

Parti Quebecois Olympic critic Marcel Legger said

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau should have been summoned to "explain exactly in what a deplorable state he has surrendered the games to the province."

Dr. Victor Goldbloom, municipal affairs minister and now head Olympic politician, told the committee the OIB would seek cooperation with Montreal unions, city officials and contractors.

However opposition members on the committee called cooperation "very doubtful," considering differences between the government and city on the trimming of non-essential Olympic construction.

Olympic critic Legger itemized the provincial and city shares of the deficit, quoting "competent authorities" for his information.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1975

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's wise today to engage in the recreations and other pleasurable outlets you like for there is in the air a desire to find relaxation and to wear a long face. This is quite unnecessary if one makes the smallest effort to rise above depression and be optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go out for amusement, but do something thoughtful for kin first. Get true facts about a new interest before starting it.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't fall for the bait when others try to get you on to some needless arguments. Check written material for any errors.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You feel financial lack and could get yourself in a lather. Cool down and think constructively instead. Be thankful and start building.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get into activities that will cheer you. Improve health, dress well, and feel more like yourself. Be happy.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get rid of anxieties and push through on whatever is of a constructive nature. Work like a lion at the tasks at hand for big headway.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't criticize your friends, but gain their goodwill. Avoid social gatherings until you are in a better mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure not to act in such a way in public that you would be seriously criticized. Do not try to handle credit wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good day to make changes, so stick to tried and true. Don't make new allies who could get you into trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't procrastinate any longer about handling responsibilities. Losing your temper with mate could lead to big trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't fly into a partner because you could easily be misinformed and the trouble not be his or her fault. Sociable p.m.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You want to rake a co-worker over the coals, but it is best to maintain your cool. Do Saturday tasks and all's well.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Enjoy inexpensive recreation as you later regret spending too much. Don't fly off the handle with irritable mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY......he or she will be a delightful person who will cry at the drop of a hat to give tasks to way, so teach early to be more self-sufficient. Give tasks to perform and a small allowance for getting them done, thus starting the habit of working for what is wanted. The field of selling and manufacturing is fine here, whether male or female. Much success is possible. A good education is a must. Sports are fine.

what's what

J.M. Boyd

My dear, why don't you put on your long underwear? And a sweater? And a warm coat? If you and your female compatriots hereabouts dressed as warmly this winter as do the European girls, this country could save 23,750 barrels of imported oil every hour. Or so the Federal Energy Administration estimates.

"DIVORCE," says one medical statistician, sadly, "is a fairly common sequel to rape." The psychological researchers are now trying to figure out how to prevent the husbands of rape victims, too, from coming undone. That crime creates an awesomely intricate mess.

MRS. KISSINGER
Q. "Is Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's wife Nancy guarded when abroad by a Secret Service man?"
A. A Secret Service woman, yes. One Mary McAteer of Appleton, Wis.

Q. "IN THE LINGO of the London pubs, what's a 'shout'?"
A. A round of drinks.

Q. "DO YOU LOSE weight in the sauna?"
A. The weight of the water you lose, that's all.

LOOK OUT, the birtrate is on the rise in California. And you know how California tends to start trends. The population watchers think a minor baby boom is in the offing nationwide.

GRIZZLY BEARS
Another little known fact about grizzly bears is that they possess a phenomenal capacity to heal when injured. Their quick recovery from most wounds is so extraordinary, in fact, that some early American Indians thought grizzlies were supernatural. It's true that hunters find those bears hard to bring down. But that Indian superstition remains all the essence of their reputation as unkillable.

IMAGINE YOU guessed that school vandalism costs more than textbooks, much is the pity.

UNDER ULTRAVIOLET LIGHTS, the skin of a white man fluoresces only when it's not sunburned, that of a black man only when it is sunburned, oddly.

MEDICAL RECORDS contain numerous cases of citizens who become alcoholics because of the kitchen flavorings and patent medicines they drink.

INASMUCH AS WOMEN generally prefer longer fingernails than do men, it's unfair that men's fingernails grow faster than women's, isn't it?

The axe test made the Radarange look good.

Normally, we wouldn't show Amana Radarange Ovens looking less than their best. But this was their finest hour. Battered... but not beaten. That's how these Amana Radarange Ovens looked when they finished safety tests to earn an exemption from all labeling requirements under Federal Regulation 21 CFR 1030.10 (c) (6) (i). As a result, Amana RR-4DW and RR-6W Radarange Microwave Ovens do not have to carry the permanent warning sticker on the door. The Government created an "Exemption Clause" that permits a manufacturer to submit data showing that the warnings to users are not necessary for the safe operation of the oven. But the Government told manufacturers that the burden of proof was on them.

These are some of the torture tests the two Amana Radarange Microwave Oven models passed to earn their U.S. Government labeling exemption. Incredible!

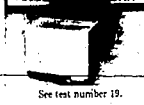

1. Amana trapped two thicknesses of paper towel at various places in the doors. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
2. Amana trapped four thicknesses of paper towel in the doors. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
3. Amana trapped 1/2" cord. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
4. Amana trapped two and four thicknesses of wax paper. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
5. Amana trapped a cloth towel. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
6. Amana trapped plastic food wrap. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
7. Amana trapped a hot pad. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
8. Amana trapped a paper plate. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
9. Amana forced the door closed on an oversized plate. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
10. Amana hung a 40 pound knapsack on the door. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
11. Amana hit the door with a broom handle. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.

See test number 20.

See test number 20.

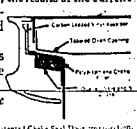

See test number 19.

12. Amana lifted the unit by the handle off the floor. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
13. Amana hit the open door with a meat cleaver. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
14. Amana removed the door gasket. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
15. Amana removed the hinges and pushed the door all the way to one side. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
16. Amana dropped a two pound can of food from three feet (a 6 foot-pound impact). They still didn't leak in excess of Federal standards.
17. Amana dropped eleven dishes from a height of three feet on the open door. No leakage in excess of Federal standards.
18. Amana jammed the doors shut on a 5 1/2" block. Still no leakage in excess of Federal standards.
19. Amana pushed the units off a 30" counter onto their face on a concrete floor. Incredibly they didn't leak in excess of Federal standards.
20. Amana hit the door and door seal with a steel ball on a pendulum—up to sixty foot-pounds of force (equivalent to dropping a large three pound can from a height of twenty feet). Same incredible result.
21. And, finally, Amana hit the door-and-door seal with an axe head on a pendulum, also up to an impact of sixty foot-pounds—and again, as always, the result was the same. No leakage in excess of government standards. In no case did the units exceed the limits imposed by the Federal Standard, even with astounding levels of abuse.

What makes these Amana Radarange Microwave Ovens so safe? The exclusive, patented Amana Choke Seal Door, primarily. And this patented choke seal has been used on every Amana Radarange ever built. This choke section, built into the door and inserted into the oven cavity when the door is closed, reflects energy back into the cavity. It is not subject to wear or deterioration. Proof of its effectiveness is best illustrated by the 1973 Survey of Microwave Ovens by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. HEW made severe tests above and beyond the Federal standards on microwave ovens which were in use in homes and commercial establishments. And remember, these weren't laboratory tests. These were field tests on microwave ovens in home and commercial use.

Amana surpassed all government requirements. Beyond the obvious virtues of the exclusive Amana Choke Seal Door, the results of the current torture tests were a direct result of the overall quality of construction, durability of design and strength of materials. And advanced technology throughout. There you have it. The reason these two Amana Radarange Ovens were exceptions to the U.S. Government rule—is that they are exceptional microwave ovens. Simple as that. Take a look at these torture test pictures again. Because they prove the old adage is true. Beauty is more than skin deep.

Patented Choke Seal Door mechanism.

Amana Radarange Microwave Ovens make the most of microwave cooking.

- Stainless steel interior is easy to clean and virtually immune to rust or corrosion.
- Interior large enough to cook a 20 pound turkey.
- 675 Watts of cooking power—so it cooks almost everything in 1/2 the usual time. And it uses 60% to 75% less energy than a conventional electric range.
- Die-cast chrome plated door—won't warp with wear.

- The patented Choke Seal is an Amana exclusive—a basic reason behind the Government exemption from the labeling requirements granted to Amana RR-4DW and RR-6W.
- Two Timers on Model RR-4DW—one up to 6 minutes—one up to 90 minutes.
- Model RR-4DW also features an automatic Defrost Cycle which defrosts frozen foods in minutes.

The Revolutionary Amana Touchmatic Radarange (RR-6W) is the first microwave oven with a memory. Get food from the freezer to the table simple as 1-2-3! Touch the numbers to set defrost and cooking times—push start—and the Amana Touchmatic Radarange will "remember" how long to defrost, "remember" how long to wait for the temperature to equalize, "remember" how long to cook. "Remember" to shut itself off and call you for dinner. When cooking's done—the timer even "remembers" and displays the correct time of day. That's why you'll want to "remember" the Amana Touchmatic Radarange when you buy a microwave oven. Remember—it's the first microwave oven with a memory!

Only Amana Radarange Microwave Ovens come with a FULL 5-Year WARRANTY on the magnetron tube. Many manufacturers provide a one year FULL warranty on their magnetron tube. No one but Amana provides a Full 5-Year Warranty on the magnetron tube—parts, labor, service—man's travel time provided without charge. This is important—because the magnetron is the heart of a microwave oven and replacement costs are high. This kind of aware protection is one more way Amana makes sure you get your money's worth.

If it doesn't say Amana...it's not a Radarange.
