Gem water plan draws farm ire

By KEN HODGE Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — Some of Idaho's most powerful agricultural voices have unleashed an attack on the proposed state water plan. Minimum streamflow and "a ban" on construction of new dams on the Snake River received the harshest treatment from the agricultural leaders. At a meeting of the Magic Valley Water Information Committee Wednesday night, opposition to the state water plan came from state legislators, the head of the Idaho Water Users Association, the executive director of the Carey Act Association and others. Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Albion, chairman of the special legislative committee on minimum stream flow, told the group Idaho is not yet ready for minimum streamflow legislation. Ted Diehl, Jerome, president of the Idaho Waterusers Association, said the state water plan would make Idaho "a state of play instead of a state of work."

adjudicating process in 1964 and many members have been disappointed with what they got. He told of some area farmers who had been allotted three acre feet of water annually. And a farmer can use up that much water by June, according to Herndon. Herndon cautioned against the wrong kind of state intervention. "We don't really know what we've got now in terms of water and how to protect it," he said. Sy Young, North Fork Water Users Protective Union, objected strongly to the state plan because it precludes the building of much-needed future dams which he says are beneficial to recreation and agriculture. "I think we should have dams everywhere," Young said. Young also protested minimum streamflow requirements set forth in the plan. The water plan would upset long established practices of the canal companies in the North Fork area which have been replenishing ground waters which reach northside users.

"All we hear in this state is how much money recreation brings to the state," Diehl said, "but agriculture is the backbone of Idaho. If we sit back and are not heard we won't come out on top" (in the debate over the state water plan). In addition to opposing the proposed minimum streamflow legislation, the agricultural leaders attacked the state water plan because it does not allow for more dam construction on the Snake River.

Vernon Ravenscroft, executive director of the Carey Act Association, told the group that additional dams were needed on the Snake River and other areas. Ravenscroft also argued that the legislature should have the power to ratify any water plan adopted by the state. Ted Quigley, member of the Magic Valley Water Information committee, spoke briefly about the development of the stream plan and read statements from two men formerly listed on the Idaho Water Resources Board.

One statement came from Dr. Evan Kackley, former member of the IWRB. "The state water plan is a plan without reference to the water laws of Idaho," Kackley said. He went on to call the plan "outdated." Dr. Robert Lee, former director of the staff of the board, bemoaned depletion of ground water and aquifers and recommended the construction of more dams. In a statement read by Quigley, Attorney Jim Herndon, secretary of the Lemhi Irrigation District, enumerated the problems the area has had trying to get state officials "to measure water flows, quantify users' needs, and adjudicate the irrigation district. According to Herndon, the district began the Support loss may wreck Utah power plant plans

WASHINGTON Star — Two California power companies Wednesday announced withdrawal of their financial support for the controversial $4 billion coal-fired Kaiparowits power plant in Utah, according to reliable sources. The withdrawal, of about 63 per cent of the financing, would mean the scuttling, if not a substantial delay, of the plant's construction. Interior Department spokesmen said. The companies are Southern California Edison of Los Angeles and San Diego Gas and Electric Co. Interior sources cautioned that they are uncertain whether the "surprise move" means an end or a delay to the project, or merely a regrouping of electric utilities for financing purposes. Interior said Wednesday that the 500 kilovolt transmission system with supporting communications network would span 1,460 miles through four states. The generating plant, the mines and support facilities — including a new town — would require 7,320 acres of land. The transmission system on site would take up another 1,715 acres. Interior speculated that the California utilities' withdrawal because of the recent government report that the state would have a surplus of energy once Alaska oil comes into production next year. Companies involved in the Alaska project are looking for an oil pipeline — beginning in California and stretching to Texas, to deliver the surplus oil to the Midwest and East. Another partner in the Kaiparowits project is the Arizona Public Service Co., which is responsible for 18 per cent of the financing. Interior says it does not believe this utility wants to withdraw from the project. The Kaiparowits plant, the last of six major coal-fired generating plants in the Four Corners area of Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada, would be one of the largest ever to be built and has been bitterly contested by environmental groups. Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe had planned to visit the site next week and had promised to make a decision by the end of this month on whether he would allow its construction. This decision presumably is now temporarily moot. The Kaiparowits project would require 12 million tons of coal annually from four underground mines. The major reason for the controversy over its construction is that an unexploited, clean air to supply electricity to Los Angeles. Another reason for its controversial nature is that the Kaiparowits site is less than 100 miles from Grand Canyon, Bryce Canyon, Rainbow Bridge and Lake Powell and within 250 miles of 20 per cent of the total land area administered by the National Parks Service. The Park Service has joined environmentalists in fighting the project.

Gimlet Airport granted public use designation

BY BART QUENSELL Times-News writer GIMLET — The Idaho Transportation Board has given Gimlet Airport a public use designation. Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, who operates the private airstrip, applied to the department for public use standing. Worthie Rauscher, administrator of the division of aeronautics and public transportation, said today the decision to apply public use to Gimlet was based largely on a public hearing two months ago where a majority of people favored public use. Before the order, a pilot had to receive permission to land at the mountain strip two miles south of Ketchum. He can now land without permission. Mrs. Johnson now can fuel and service all planes that land at the strip rather than the private planes she was restricted to handling before. Even though the transportation board has given public use designation to the strip, Rauscher said, "It is still privately owned. We're not telling them what they have to provide." The Blaine County commissioners and several landowners south of the airport objected to the public use designation. Blaine County Planning and Zoning Administrator Alan Reynolds, speaking for the county commissioners at a public hearing in February, said the proximity of mountains made the strip too dangerous for public use. Several landowners who live in Gimlet said planes have barely missed their homes as it is. Those arguments were not enough for the board to deny the public use application. Rauscher said, "Gimlet is a typical mountain valley airport. You have to use the same judgment there as you do flying in mountains anywhere. It is no more difficult than any other typical mountain airport." Rauscher said a private air crash a month ago west of Gimlet was weather related and was not connected with the operation of the airport. Two restrictions were placed on the private strip, Rauscher said. There will be no night lighting installed, meaning pilots can land only during daylight hours. Secondly, all pilots must be able to see the airport in order to land. Rauscher said instrument approaches would not be allowed if the strip were not visible.

Pistol-packing judges theft targets

By DAVE HOBBSMAN Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — Pistol-packing judges have had a streak of bad luck in Magic Valley. Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer's gun was stolen from his car soon after he took office. Another district judge, Theron Ward, Twin Falls, reported this week that his .38 caliber derringer was stolen from the desk in his chambers at the Twin Falls County Judicial Building. Ward said he probably will get a replacement weapon. "Being in a district judge's position, it's almost essential that you have some protection," he said. Kramer says he will keep a pistol in chambers "if I receive any more threats." He currently carries a can of mace in his car. Although he has never been physically attacked in the courtroom, Kramer has received threats of "harm" since he went on the bench. District Judge Sherman Bellwood, Rupert, refused comment when asked if he keeps a firearm in the courthouse. He agreed, however, that "physical attacks on judges in courtrooms all over the country are on the increase. I think they have to figure out some way to protect themselves." District Judge James Cunningham, Twin Falls, said he has never carried a gun. "I have never carried a gun," he said. "I have never carried a gun."

his desk and went off and shot him in the foot," Cunningham added. "That would be as good a reason not to have one as I can think of." Ward said the derringer had been in his desk drawer for five years. The "tiny" pistol was lost fired two years ago and proved to be "very accurate" within 40 feet. "I think all district judges have had threats made against their lives," Ward said. His life has been threatened three times in his 17 years on the district bench. Twin Falls Sheriff Paul Corder fully supports judges who have weapons. "I don't think they are any different from any other people who work under the same situation."

Medics list Patty 'fair'

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's hospitalization for a collapsed lung came after an ordeal of jail interviews and court appearances that caused her to lose 15 pounds since her arrest. The 22-year-old heiress, now down to 90 pounds, was reported in "fair" condition and resting comfortably today at Sequoia Hospital, where she underwent emergency surgery Tuesday night. (Related stories, p. 8) Doctors said the lung collapse wasn't uncommon for persons of slight build and added that Miss Hearst's quick reporting to jail officials of "a fluttering in her chest" may have saved her life. The healing of her condition — a ruptured blister on the right lung — would take at least five more days at the hospital and at least a week of restricted activity after her transfer back to the San Mateo County jail, according to the chest specialist who admitted her, Dr. Donald Rowles. "She looked very bad. She's thin and in pain," newspaper executive Randolph Hearst said Wednesday after a 1½-hour bedside visit with his daughter in a heavily guarded hospital room. "She's very pale. That's logical because she has had no sun for seven months."

Minnie Freymiller

BURLEY — Minnie Freymiller, 89, Burley, died Wednesday at the Frey Care Center. Complete obituary and funeral arrangements will be announced by Payne Mortuary.

MINOT, N.D. (UPI) — The prognosis was simple.

"If the dikes hold, we'll just have the inconvenience of building dikes, moving out and going to a third of the city will be flooded and we will have at least 50 million damage."

"If the dikes fail, six to 14 feet of water will gush through the central core of the city."

Some 13,000 Minot residents — about a third of the city's population — have to plan their belongings in whatever would carry them, and fled from the meandering mouse — the Souris (Mouse) River.

The normally meek Souris spread a mile to two miles across in some areas and was more than three feet above flood stage early today, swallowing some 50,000 acres of farm and ranch land; it will rise more than three feet before cresting Saturday.

Evacuations were completed Wednesday night and the center of the city looked like a ghost town today, except for the roar of heavy equipment piling dirt — on 10-to-20-foot dikes, residents hope will hold back a record flood.

A bear, a deer and a wolf were the first victims. They died while being moved from Roosevelt Park Zoo near the river. The trauma of moving and tranquilizers used to calm the animals apparently was too much for them, a zoo spokesman said.

Police, firemen, police reserves and national guardsmen checked the evacuation area door-to-door Wednesday night to make sure everyone was out.

About 35 families refused to leave. The city council voted to make them and unauthorized persons entering the flood zone subject to imprisonment, but there aren't any immediate arrests.

Most of the 4,200 houses in the evacuation zone were empty and curtainless, their residents at high-ground homes of friends, in motels or in Cross shelters in three schools.

One of the last families to evacuate was Rosemary Kelley and her six children. The youngsters — the only children in sight — played catch and wrestled with their dog.

They were confident of the dike.

"Our dike builders ought to be the greatest in the world by now," Mrs. Kelley said.

"They've certainly had enough practice."

- Veterans: $16.6 billion, 5.1 percent.
- Law enforcement and justice: $2.9 billion, 0.9 percent.
- General government: $3.1 billion, 1 percent.
- Revenue sharing and general fiscal aid: $7 billion, 2.2 percent.
- Interest: $31 billion, 9.6 percent.
- Undistributed offsetting receipts (minus figures): $ 14 billion, 4.5 percent.

Christians storm fort near Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian militiamen backed by armored cars stormed a major left-wing stronghold east of Beirut today despite Syrian fire of missiles and intervention to restore order by force.

At least 400 persons were killed in an upsurge in fighting since early Wednesday in Beirut and the Mt. Lebanon area east of the capital, raising the death toll after a year of civil war to nearly 17,000.

Scattered clashes and shelling continued overnight in the capital.

Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat planned to carry a four-point peace plan to Damascus today to try to ease a rift between Syria and the Lebanese left-wing movement, led by Socialist Party leader Kamal Jumblatt.

The rift developed when 6,000 Syrian troops took up positions inside Lebanon close to the eastern border and threatened to use force to settle the war. They have shown no sign of advancing while negotiations continue.

In what appeared to be a renewed major offensive, the Christian forces overran the Mt. Lebanon town of Dhour Choueir — 15 miles east of Beirut.

Left-wingers said they lost three men in the attack.

The Mindoka County Sheriff's Department said Whistler had suffered a single gunshot to the head — County coroner Kim Christensen said a .357 caliber gun was found at the scene.

Christensen said, "From all indications, it looks like suicide."

However, the coroner ordered an autopsy which was performed Wednesday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls.

Whistler was single and lived alone in the rural house. His parents had tried to phone him. Getting no answer, the father went to the home and found the body.

Andrus defends layman choice for Idaho court

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus says those who drafted Idaho's constitution in 1890 did not intend to limit voters' choices for the Supreme Court justices.

In a letter to Attorney General Wayne L. Kidwell Andrus said the constitution provides specific qualifications for certain other officers but, in contrast, does not condition membership on the Supreme Court.

"We believe this demonstrates an intention by framers of our constitution to let the voters of the State of Idaho decide the qualifications of a judge of the Supreme Court without hindrance by the constitutional or statutory qualifications," the governor said.

Andrus has asked the Judicial Council to consider recommending a layman for appointment to a vacancy on the high tribunal and the council has asked Kidwell for an opinion on the legality of the proposal.

Kidwell invited Andrus, as well as potential lay candidates for the court, to present their arguments to him before he issues an opinion on the question.

In his letter to Kidwell, Andrus said Article VI, Section Seven empowers the legislature to provide for nomination and election of candidates for the offices of justice of the Supreme Court and district judges.

"The legislature is given no power to provide qualifications for those offices," Andrus said. "It would have been a simple task for the framers of our constitution to expressly provide that the right to stand for these judicial offices might be qualified by the legislature."

"We infer that the framers did not want the legislature to place qualifications on these offices but to permit the people of the State of Idaho to elect any citizen they believed to be qualified to serve in the position," he said.

He said research by his staff indicates the legislature did not put any qualifications upon membership of the court until 1933.

REP. STEVE SYMMS ... he's at risk

Canal Zone 'giveaway' irks Symms

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said Wednesday he was shocked and dismayed over confirmation from Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker that President Ford is negotiating ownership of the Panama Canal.

"This action will jeopardize not only our nation's security but also the cost of consumer goods to every household in America because of much higher rates that will surely be imposed on ships using the canal once they have full control over it."

Symms said, "To negotiate about the U. S. Canal in Panama is like arguing with a thief over the money in your wallet. We built it, we paid for it, it's ours and today I am again requesting that President Ford and the State Department stop these negotiations."

"In fact, this is one of the reasons that I am backing Ronald Reagan for President. His opposition to the giveaway of the Panama Canal is consistent with public opinion," he said.

FRUITLAND, Idaho (UPI) — Former Police Chief Raymond Riggs is suing the City of Fruitland for more than $100,000 for damages he said resulted from his dismissal last year.

Riggs asks $3,168 in back pay for four months and $100,000 in damages for embarrassment, mental suffering, paid and future loss of wages, legal costs and other incidental losses.

Former Mayor Andy Anderson fired Riggs last Aug. 29. Riggs was appointed in January 1975 to serve a one-year term as chief. He also served as chief in 1974 and part of 1973.

The Fruitland City Council dismissed him without having a regularly scheduled meeting and the vote was not in accordance with that law.

His future employment chances were damaged, his reputation was damaged, his family was embarrassed, the action caused mental suffering and he was forced to sell property as the result of his job loss.

BOISE (UPI) — Ada County Prosecutor David Leroy has begun an investigation into alleged irregularities in handling of code books, pocket supplements and session laws assigned to the secretary of state.

Jerry Hill, chief deputy secretary of state, and Legislative Auditor Clyde Koonz presented Leroy with a ledger and a pile of records Wednesday to assist him in his probe.

Leroy planned to meet with Hill and Koonz again today after reviewing the material. Secretary of State Pete T. Conarus announced April 2 he planned to look into reported sales of the books. Dryden Hill, a deputy who handled the books, resigned the same day for "personal reasons."

Directors also appointed Roy M. Watson first vice president and Keith and Margaret Keener co-second vice presidents, filling vacancies in those positions.

The next general membership of the organization will be held on April 27 at Bishop Tuttle House in Boise.

Council dismissed him without having a regularly scheduled meeting and the vote was not in accordance with that law.

Bear water use aired

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The governors of Utah, Idaho and Wyoming met briefly Wednesday to discuss the allocation of water in the Bear River.

Govs. Calvin Rampton of Utah, Cecil Andrus of Idaho and Ed Herschler of Wyoming agreed to turn Idaho's request for a bigger share of the river over to their water staffs.

The governors asked the experts to draft amendments to the Bear River Compact and decided they would meet again in 60 days to study the proposed changes.

Idaho asked to be guaranteed 200,000 acre-feet of water for storage above what it currently uses. The figure is "a little high," said Daniel F. Lawrence, Utah water resources director.

At present, the compact doesn't specify what amounts of water Utah and Idaho use.

Owners of the Woodruff Narrows Dam and Reservoir are asking for 25,000 acre-feet of storage this year, something Idaho officials say might violate the current compact.

The Bear River originates in the Uinta Mountains of Utah, flows north into Wyoming, re-enters Wyoming, crosses into Idaho above Bear Lake, and then turns south into Utah again. It drains into the Great Salt Lake.

Jam remains at Idaho pen

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's new but overpopulated state prison may be overcrowded for the next 10 years, according to Corrections Director Donalds R. Erickson.

Earlier this week, Warden Richard Anderson told the Board of Correction the two-year-old penitentiary south of Boise was designed to hold 475 inmates but at present has 550.

He said that means some inmates must share a cell with another inmate, "a situation that causes tension and management problems."

Erickson said planned construction of new housing in the next few years will not bring the prison to its "one-man-one-cell" goal.

"I assume we will have to live with a real population problem for a long period of time, probably the next 10 years," he said.

Debt aid eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, joined as a sponsor Wednesday for legislation that would permit individuals to designate $1 of their tax payment for use to reduce the national debt.

"The interest which must be paid on the national debt costs us $100 million each day, and the debt has continually increased until it stands at $507 billion," Symms said. "If the American people were given a greater option when dealing with the check-offs, I think that they would prefer the chance to make a dent in the national debt than help to subsidize political campaign road shows," he said, referring to the existing check-off allowed to help finance political campaigns.

BOISE (UPI) — Directors of Idaho Consumer Affairs, Inc., have elected attorney Allen R. Derr, Boise, to succeed James D. Golder as president of the organization.

Golder resigned March 30. Derr previously served as charter president of the Voting record monitors should be investigated

WASHINGTON — House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona is fuming mad because he was listed by a group called "Environmental Action" as one of the "Dirty Dozen" congressmen who have consistently voted against environmental bills.

never intended that organizations in this country would make up lists of congressmen who had opposed legislation affecting Americans.

Mr. Rhodes said the House Republican Research Committee is reviewing rating practices of special interest groups and may recommend legislation to restrict them.

pamphlets, newspapers or magazines must suffer the grave consequences of violating congressional secrecy.

Nixon's birth too late

(To the reader: I deliberated for some days before writing the following column. The question was whether I should give added exposure to the allegations in the Woodward-Bernstein book. I decided it was important to say a word on behalf of compassion.)

And certainly Woodward-Bernstein are not pinners in the sense of journalism that some of the staff they have written can hardly be classified as contributing to the much-abused right of the public to know.

Has the public the right to read that David Eisenhower, Nixon's son-in-law, reportedly told somebody he was waiting for Nixon to "go bananas"?

I usually don't like to take sides, but I hate to see anyone, Republican or Democrat, put in a "Dirty Dozen" or a similar list.

Potato processors need minimum stream flow

"Potato processing plants employ thousands of Magic Valley residents. When the processing industry starts talking about having to close down because of an Environmental Protection Agency order, people get worried."

The source of the trouble is a stringent EPA water pollution permit which has been issued to the Ore-Ida and Simplot sewage treatment plant in Cassia County.

Right now the processing plants are appealing the new permit. There is a chance the EPA order will be overturned but the more likely outcome will be a court order forcing Ore-Ida and Simplot to honor the conditions of the permit.

Under the conditions of the EPA permit, Ore-Ida could not use its waste treatment plant when the Snake River flows at less than 700 cubic feet per second by the processing plant. Ore-Ida environmentalists say the river often falls below that level.

For example, three times in the last 14 years the Snake River was below the 700 cubic feet per second level not just for a day but for a period of three months.

Under the new EPA permit, processing plants would have to close down.

A three month shutdown of the plants would damage the economies of Burley and other Magic Valley towns.

The EPA is unlikely to back down from the conditions of the sewage discharge permit. Instead, the potato processors probably will face a difficult decision in the coming year.

Will they build a $3-million addition to their waste treatment plant to process waste on land when the river is low? Or, will the processors suffer the economic hardship of closing down every time the river flow falls below 700 cubic feet per second?

This unpleasant choice seems unnecessary. A logical solution to the problem would be to make sure the Snake River always flows at a rate of 700 cubic feet per second. Since the yearly average flow in the river is nearly 10 times that figure, namely 6,779 cubic feet per second, maintaining minimum flow should be easy.

Instead, maintaining a minimum flow is difficult because Idaho does not have any minimum stream flow legislation on the books.

Southern Idaho farmers—the very people who benefit from the potato processing plants, are the biggest lobbyists working against minimum stream flow legislation.

Many southern Idahoans stubbornly think all water in the river should be saved for irrigation.

The problem facing the Ore-Ida plant points up a solid reason agricultural interests should endorse minimum stream flow, not fight it.

According to the Bureau of Reclamation, maintaining a 700 cubic feet per second minimum stream flow in the Snake would not be difficult. Even in below average water years, a 700 feet per second flow could be maintained if Idaho enforced comprehensive minimum stream flow program, according to the Bureau of Reclamation which controls the flow in the Snake.

With half a dozen dams upstream from the processing plants, the Bureau of Reclamation could accurately regulate the flow of water past the processing plants at all times of the year.

Without any statewide minimum stream flow legislation, however, the Bureau says it has no reason to maintain the flow. Instead, other wateruser interests keep water backed up at American Falls dam or other dams.

Potato processing is the major industry in the Magic Valley. Farmers who grow potatoes locally rely on a steady market for their crop and will share the grief if the processing plants are forced to close part of the year because of the EPA pollution controls.

Farmers also make up the largest single bloc of opposition to minimum stream flow.

With the threat the processing plants may be closed unless minimum stream flow legislation is enacted, Magic Valley farmers should rethink their position.

Ore-Ida and Simplot also carry considerable political weight in Idaho. So far, neither of the companies has made any formal commitment to minimum stream flow legislation.

With the latest EPA ruling it's about time these two industrial giants also put their weight behind minimum stream flow legislation in Idaho.

By NEA/London Economist News Service—President Ford says he means it. He will not accept another Cuban military intervention in Africa, Angola-style.

Saying it is one thing; doing something about it is another. What action could the Americans take against Cuba if its army does go into another African country? It comes down to a choice—between bombing Cuba, invading it, clapping economic sanctions on it again, and blockading it.

Bombing by itself is not much good. It would make another martyr, Cuba—a martyr. Besides, it would be hard to identify the sort of target that could achieve the desired result. The airfields used to fly Cuba's troops to Africa might seem the right target, but it would take a lot of bombing to keep all the possible airfields closed for any length of time, or to destroy all the aircraft that ferry the soldiers to Africa.

With the new laser-guided, and lv-directed precision weapons, there might be fewer civilian casualties than there would have been 10 years ago. Even so, bombing would be slow to take effect, and almost anti-Americanism from the moment of the first strike.

Invasion is an even less plausible idea. It is certainly possible for American troops to occupy Cuba either by advancing from the naval base at Guantanamo Bay or by landing somewhere else. But a Guantanamo operation would require a lot of troops; it is a long way from there to Havana, and much of the way lies through rugged country. An amphibious landing near Havana would probably be easier.

An invasion has the theoretical advantage that it could depose Fidel Castro and his government. But it would not be a walkover; and it might not be easy to find an alternative government for Cuba that did not require a prolonged American occupation. The United States could wind up with a large airbase around the neck.

The Americans tried economic sanctions years ago. They did not work very well then even though most of Latin America and a lot of other countries joined in applying sanctions—because the Russians and their allies did not. They are even less likely to work now, because a number of Latin America and other western countries would probably not accept the Cuban's actions in Africa as a reason enough for sanctions.

This leaves the possibility of a physical blockade, which would have a better chance of success, and would probably cost fewer lives, than either bombing or invasion. A blockade now would be harder in one way, and easier in another, than the quarantine imposed in the missile crisis of 1962. It would be harder because the American navy has fewer ships now than in 1962, and numbers of ships are what count in a blockade.

In 1962 every available ship in the American Atlantic Fleet that could move was used to put a ring around Cuba, and even that number was barely enough. But the number of ships in the world is the best sort of blockade ships—the destroyer-fragate size—are around six knots slower than their 1962 counterparts.

This is the curious result of the modernization of the American navy since 1962. Almost all the 1945-model ships are gone. Their replacements tend to be larger, more expensive and chiefly designed to fight aircraft and submarines.

Neither of these jobs is considered to require a great deal of space, so money, space and weight have been saved by putting in less powerful engines. But a given number of blockading ships can do only about 21 knots will intercept fewer blockade-runners than 27-knotners would.

In one way, though, the operation would be easier than in 1962. No suspended licenses need a total blockade, but a selective quarantine on Russian arms shipments. The American navy's job was to stop Russian ships and check whether they were carrying missiles. This meant inspecting at close quarters a great many merchant ships.

If the United States were now to impose a general blockade, a closed zone for all ships could be declared around Cuba and patrolled from the air; only intruders would have to be intercepted on the surface. So maybe fewer ships would be needed than in 1962.

What would the Russians do? After all, the dramatic expansion of their navy over the past few years is due almost wholly to the hard lesson in the use of sea power they learned in the 1962 crisis. The Russians now have a large, modern fleet. Would they use it to break an American blockade? There might be some tense moments if Russian cruisers and destroyers tried to escort some of their merchant ships through. But the Americans would certainly see them coming, and the Russians know that the Americans have enough air power close at hand to destroy anything the Russians could put into the Caribbean.

There is no doubt that the Americans still have superior strength in that area. The question is whether the Russians would fight, and whether the Americans are prepared to undertake a blockade to break through it.

But there is a variation of the blockade option that would entail almost no risk of a confrontation with the Russians. This would be the mining of Cuba's main ports. Mines could be planted from aircraft—as they were off Hanoi in 1972—which would switch themselves off after, say, three weeks. The whereabouts of the mined areas would be made public; no one would get hurt unless a government ordered its ships to sail through them. If the mine and of three weeks the Cubans had not abandoned what they were doing, three or more miners could be laid. Even if Russia sent some of its mine sweepers over, it would take them months to clear the area.

This all sounds pretty hypothetical. But the Americans' allies were more disturbed by the blockade of Cuba than the Cubans had not abandoned what they were doing. Cuban intervention in Angola than is generally realized. The stock is still seeping through the western political system, and the United States could probably count on fairly wide support if it decided to take limited military action against Cuba in retaliation for their actions in Africa.

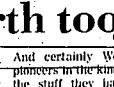

Of the actions it might take, a blockade would be the most effective, and blockade by mining the best way to do it.

Has the public the right to read a report that Gen. Alexander Haig, a high Nixon confidant, joked that Nixon and Bebe Rebozo had a homosexual relationship?

Public, secret stances create Ford 'canal gap'

WASHINGTON — An apparent conflict has developed between President Ford's public statements and his secret negotiating position on the Panama Canal.

Ellsworth Bunker, Ford's chief negotiator, confirmed that Panama eventually will gain full control of the canal under treaty terms agreed to by the United States in secret detail.

The President, on the other hand, insisted in a press conference in Dallas last Saturday that the United States will "never" give up the right to operate and defend the canal.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen Wednesday refused to admit any contradiction between Ford's campaign statement and Bunker's secret diplomacy.

The flap over the canal was the latest in a series of alleged policy inconsistencies provoked by Ronald Reagan's challenge to Ford for the Republican presidential nomination.

In an appeal to the conservative vote in the Republican primaries, Ford also has taken hard-line positions on Eastern Europe and Israel in the face of apparently conflicting statements by his leading advisers.

The controversy over the canal broke out when Bunker's secret testimony to Congress was made public by Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky.

According to a partial transcript, Snyder was asked whether the negotiations were designed to give up the canal zone to Panama.

"To give up the canal zone after a period of time," Bunker replied, "that is correct."

"And the canal over a longer period of time?" Snyder continued.

"Over a longer period of time," Bunker agreed.

Snyder said that under the new treaty the United States would abolish the present canal zone government—in six months, give up jurisdiction of the zone in three years and turn over the canal itself in 25-30 years.

State Department officials said the United States had no choice but to yield on the canal in the face of overwhelming pressure in Latin America and the possibility of violence in Panama.

The officials commented ruefully that Ford was having trouble sticking to a realistic foreign policy line on several issues in the face of Reagan's attacks.

Reagan has made a major campaign issue out of his claim that the United States has a sovereign right to the canal and should defend it.

Similarly, Ford declared at a press conference Tuesday that he favored an "independent and autonomous" position for the countries of Eastern Europe.

On the Middle East, Ford and Kissinger also have declared that there has been no change in U.S. policy toward Israel despite (1) testimony by Harold Saunders, another top Kissinger aide, that the Palestinians are the heart of the problem, and (2) reports that the President assured the Arabs that he wanted Israel to return to its borders of 1947.

JAMES KILGORE ... may have answers ... D.A. BRUCE BALES ... reveals testimony

Patty tells tale of crime roles

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst has admitted taking part in the bombings of two sheriff's cars, a month before she was arrested and may be involved in other crimes that have never come to light, authorities have disclosed.

Marin County District Attorney Bruce Bales said Miss Hearst, hospitalized with a collapsed lung, admitted she was one of four persons who blew up the patrol cars in the parking lot of the Marin Civic Center, across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco.

He said Miss Hearst said she was at the scene, "but didn't actually throw the bombs."

Bales said Miss Hearst was ready to testify against the other three, who were not named, although James Kilgore, who knew Miss Hearst while she was underground, is being sought for questioning in the case.

The Marin Civic Center was the scene of a shootout in August, 1970, in which a judge and four others were killed. Black militant Angela Davis later was tried and found innocent of supplying the guns used in the shootings.

U.S. Attorney James Browning Jr., asked if he thought there were still other incidents Miss Hearst was involved in that have not been disclosed, said, "I suspect there are."

In Los Angeles, William and Emily Harris criticized Miss Hearst, their onetime companion, for providing evidence which resulted in charges being brought against them for the original kidnaping.

The Harrises were charged Wednesday in a 19-count indictment with the Hearst kidnaping and other kidnap-related charges, including assault with a deadly weapon, robbery and false imprisonment.

Leonard Weinglass, attorney for the Harrises, said, "Their experience has now been that she is willing to say anything, no matter how reckless, no matter how untrue to advance her own cause."

The latest disclosures by Miss Hearst grew out of a four-hour session she had with government prosecutors Monday after her sentencing for bank robbery.

'Look-alike' saw holdup

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A psychologist who bears a striking resemblance to Steven Sotkin, Patricia Hearst's former lawyer, says he was present during the fatal bank holdup for which Sotkin is on trial.

Victor Kops, 30, opened the defense case Wednesday. He said he first became aware of his close resemblance to Sotkin when an FBI agent showed him a photograph of the defendant.

The agent testified he noticed a similarity in appearance but never showed Kops' picture to other witnesses, including two persons who identified Sotkin as a shot-gun-wielding, sobriety-shouting bandit.

Kops' testimony was important to an attempt by defense attorney Sheldon Oils to discredit the testimony of the witnesses.

Sotkin, a 27-year-old housepainter who shared an apartment with Miss Hearst before her arrest, accused Sotkin of taking part in the robbery of a suburban Sacramento bank during which a woman was killed.

Four bandits, linked by authorities to the Symbionese Liberation Army, escaped with $15,000. San Francisco television station KQED reported "sources" had disclosed to the names of five persons involved in the robbery.

According to the sources, Emily Harris, Michael Berlin, James Kilgore and an unidentified sixth robber, all wearing ski masks were in the bank and Sotkin and William Harris were outside.

KQED sources said Emily Harris pulled the trigger that killed the woman.

The station reported the prosecution said it has not disclosed the names in court because it might "dilute" its case and that the defense said it has not given names because to do so would not be in the revolutionary spirit.

Defense attorney Sheldon Oils denied any knowledge of such a defense statement.

Kops is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs about 150 pounds. Sotkin is about three inches shorter. Kops' hair is darker than Sotkin's but is combed in a similar manner. Their facial characteristics are also similar.

Kops said he stood just inside the front door of the bank near where the two witnesses testified they saw Sotkin during the holdup.

Kops also testified he was shown a "spread" of photographs Oct. 1 by FBI agent Robert Basham.

Canal new campaign question

By United Press International

Republican challenger Jimmy Carter in Texas, said the Panama Canal is as much a part of the United States as the Louisiana purchase or the state of Alaska.

He suggested President Ford is delaying the current treaty negotiations until after the election.

The canal question, which Reagan had sounded earlier without much response, now looms as a major political issue.

At a news conference in Austin, Reagan found some inconsistency between President Ford's pledge never to surrender the canal and his chief negotiator's statements in a House subcommittee that it is "perfectly clear" the Republic of Panama eventually will gain control over it.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said there is no inconsistency.

Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter told CBS he has a list of two dozen possible vice presidential names and his staff is studying their backgrounds.

But he would not rule out the possibility the choice would be a negotiating point to assure his own presidential nomination.

Carter, Henry Jackson, Morris Udall and Frank Church answered questions from an American Society of Newspaper Editors panel by telephone Wednesday to avoid crossing an NBC picket line around the hotel.

But noncandidate Hubert Humphrey stole the show. He entered by a nonpicketed entrance and wowed the group with a luncheon speech full of one-liners.

"The word 'never' in politics is a very finite word," he said. "Let's just say I don't expect to enter any primaries."

The candidates turned back to their vote-getting issues for a morning convergence in Washington, and reporters questioned Nessen about Panama.

The Panama question has become one of Reagan's standards — but largely ignored — issues for a month or more.

This week Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, named by Ford to work out final details of a new treaty with the Panama government, told a House subcommittee the deal of the Canal Zone after a period of time, that is correct.

Asked if it also meant giving up the canal itself over a longer period of time, he agreed. "Over a longer period of time."

Stockpile sold down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Columnist Jack Anderson reported today that during 1970 President Richard Nixon pressured the General Services Administration to sell off strategic metals to industrial allies of the Nixon White House.

In his syndicated column, Anderson said the official Nixon administration explanation was that this strategic stockpile was no longer needed for the nation's security.

But Anderson said his investigation shows the real motive was to reward friends in the metals industry.

Acting on Nixon's orders, the GSA sold more than $3 billion worth of the metals to industrial giants such as Alcoa, Bethlehem Steel, Englehard Industries, General Electric, Kaiser, Reynolds Metals, U.S. Steel and Westinghouse, Anderson reported.

He said the National Security Council has studied the situation to see if the stockpile needs to be replenished in light of the sales.

Group explains how to beat tax

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Half a dozen persons conducted a news conference Wednesday to explain how to beat the tax collector.

Speakers calling themselves the Portland Peace Investors said they are pacifists and oppose use of their money for arms forces. Instead of paying taxes, they said they will give money to a child care center.

Ben Richmond, a dishwasher who said he earns too little to pay income tax, said he refuses to pay federal taxes on airline tickets and telephone bills.

"When you pay by mail you deduct the amount that would go for federal taxes," Richmond said. "The telephone company and the airlines tell the Internal Revenue Service. I have had hundreds of notices to pay and I've had four or five IRS notices of intent to seize — but I have nothing to seize."

Nessen to appear

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ron Nessen, a former NBC reporter and now presidential news secretary, says he intends to host NBC's "Saturday Night" show despite a protest from striking network employees.

"As a former member of the working press, we believe you will appreciate our insistence on maintaining fair conditions for our members and will refuse to cross our picket line," the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians said in a telegram to Nessen Wednesday.

$450,000 awarded

WIDEN, N. J. (UPI) — A woman who had half her nose bitten off by a horse at a Camden County stable has been awarded $450,000 in damages by a jury that found the stable negligent.

Mrs. Clarine Foglio, 38, of Somerdale, N. J., was bitten by the horse, "Big Boy," at Slim's Ranch in Gloucester Township in March, 1971.

The jury, which deliberated for about 2 1/2 hours Wednesday, awarded Mrs. Foglio's husband $450,000 in damages.

During the two-week trial Mrs. Foglio said the horse pushed his head through a plank in the side of the stall where he was being housed and bit off her nose. She testified that she has undergone 10 operations and skin grafts to restore her nose.

Nixon rapped

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former White House aide Charles Casper says he was "disappointed" in Richard Nixon because he had "deserted" his staff and not pardoned them before resigning.

Casper, who served seven months in prison for Watergate-related crimes, told the Atlanta Press Club Wednesday "Mr. Nixon told me one day that he'd never go out of office without pardoning all of his aides."

Arin for food

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Black activist Dick Gregory says he will quit from Los Angeles to New York City to emphasize the hunger problem the United States is facing.

Gregory, who plans to leave Los Angeles April 21 and expects to arrive at City Hall in New York City July 4, said, "If America doesn't change its food policies, we're going to have food riots this year."

A former University of Illinois track star, Gregory also said he would begin a fast in front of the White House on Good Friday and end it on Easter Sunday.

Bernstein weds

NEW YORK (UPI) — Washington Post reporter Carl Bernstein and Esquire editor-columnist Nora Ephron were married in a civil ceremony Wednesday in New York City.

Bernstein, 31, and fellow reporter Bob Woodward wrote a series of stories that helped uncover the Watergate scandal. Their book, "All the President's Men" was made into a recently released film by the same title.

Relatives will temporarily control Hughes estate

HOUSTON (UPI) — An aunt of Howard Hughes and his attorney soon will be named to administer temporarily the Texas holdings of the late billionaire, who may not have left a will.

Probate Court Judge Pat Gregory appointed Mrs. Frederic Lummis, Hughes' closest living relative, and William Lummis in a three-minute proceeding Wednesday granted on an urgent request by the attorney.

The Lummis application said there were "more than 100 creditors" against the estate and tax matters which needed immediate attention. "The debts were not defined," the order applies only to Texas.

Hughes died of kidney failure April 5 while enroute from Capri, Italy, to the Methodist Hospital in Houston.

In Acapulco, a medical expert said Hughes was in a state of "shock" three days before his death but that his personal physicians did not act to hospitalize him.

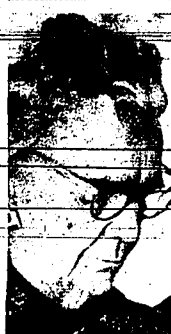

"Howard died of an illness called neglect," said Dr. Vicente Manuel Montemayor.

The extent of Hughes' Texas holdings is not known, but Hughes disposed of the Hughes Tool Co. foundation about four years ago. His worth was estimated at $2 billion.

As temporary administrators, the Lummises have control over all the assets of Hughes' estate in Texas. They also can seek appointment as permanent administrators.

Officials of Hughes' Summa Corp. in Los Angeles and members of his family told the court they believe Hughes executed a will but that it has not been found.

Racetrack 'annoyance'

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — To the sellers of pari-mutuel tickets at the nation's racetracks, the return of the $2 bill is a minor annoyance, but they hope a short-lived one.

The big problem, in addition to the fact that ticket-sellers' cash boxes have no slot for the new bill, is that cashiers keep asking for items which slows the selling process.

Carroll DeLatt, in charge of pari-mutuel sales at Keeneland Race Course, said Wednesday, "We've got drawer space for ones, tens, $5s, $10s, $20s, $50s and $100s. Our sellers took in about $600 worth of twos, or 300 bills Tuesday. "We don't carry them in our drawers," he said. "It's not going to help or hurt our organization. Actually it would be nice if everyone at the track used only $2 bills. But people are superstitious — did you ever see a gambler who wasn't?"

Betty's 'tickled to death'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford is "tickled to death" at her 18-year-old daughter Susan's remark that she has no intention of having an affair yet.

The first lady won plaudits and criticism last summer when she said in a televised interview that she "wouldn't be surprised" if Susan had an affair.

Susan, who is vacationing with her uncle and aunt on St. John's Island near Charleston, S. C., told reporters this week she has no intention of having an affair yet.

"I'm tickled to death," Mrs. Ford said Wednesday when she was asked about her daughter's remark. "I didn't expect her to. But I just wanted to make it clear that if she did, she should come to me and not anyone else."

Mrs. Ford talked with reporters after she formally opened the red and white capped bleachers in the park behind the White House, where tourists now can be admitted to the executive mansion.

Royal switch

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — King Carl XVI Gustaf of Sweden is a polite and soft-spoken monarch — but he knows a king's privileges.

Visiting in the Los Angeles area Wednesday, the Swedish king was guest of honor at a party given by Warner Brothers Studios, to which some 200 movie celebrities were invited.

When asked to pose for pictures, the king wound up beside Charlton Heston. He looked down the line, nudged Heston and asked to change the lineup. The royal switch put his majesty next to attractive Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann.

Soliah identified as SLA robber

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Two witnesses say Steven Soliah, Patricia Hearst's former lover, was an obscenely filthy robber in a Symbionese Liberation Army bank hold-up during which a woman was shot to death.

One woman said Tuesday at Soliah's trial she stood "face to face" with him during the April 21-1975 robbery and would not have testified unless she was absolutely certain of her identification.

Another said the husky 27-year-old housepainter carried a shotgun, shouted obscenities and told us they meant business.

It was the first time in the month-old trial that witnesses identified Soliah in front of the eight-woman, four-man jury as one of several bandits. The testimony was crucial to the prosecution's case, which has depended on circumstantial evidence.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Nichols said the prosecution would end its case today.

Defense attorney Sheldon Otis said he "fully expected" to call Soliah. He said the defense case could take from three days to a week.

Soliah, who shared an apartment with Miss Hearst before her capture, is the only person charged with the robbery in which Myrna Opsahl, a mother of four, was killed by a shotgun blast.

U.S. Attorney Dwayne Keyes asked bookkeeper Kathleen James, one of the government's two key witnesses, how long she saw the accused robber standing at the front of the bank in suburban Carmichael.

"Five to 10 seconds,"

"What did he look at?"

"At me — face to face."

"Do you see him sitting in the courtroom?"

"He's sitting next to Mr. (Steffan) Imhoff (a defense lawyer), wearing a blue suit."

She also testified Soliah carried a shotgun under his arm and kept moving "as if he was covering."

On cross-examination, Otis asked Mrs. James whether she had any doubt about her identification.

"No, Mr. Otis."

"You're absolutely certain?"

"I wouldn't be here if I wasn't."

At the point during questioning by Keyes, Mrs. James began crying. The trial was halted momentarily while she regained her composure.

Earlier, Patricia Tommerason, a teller at the bank during the holdup, also identified Soliah.

She said "four to six" robbers entered the bank as she stood near the driven teller window and that she saw Soliah run to the front door, shouting obscenities and carrying a shotgun.

She said Soliah gave orders and "ran down the lobby to the north end and told us they meant business."

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Charges and countercharges have been filed as a result of an alleged hotel room altercation involving actressinger Kathryn Grayson, psychic Peter Hurkos, a newspaper reporter and the grandmother of a missing girl.

Cecilia Holcomb, 65, brought the first action Monday, charging Miss Grayson with assault and battery. The actress, Hurkos and the Dutch-born psychic's wife then accused Mrs. Holcomb and Ken Harrell, a reporter for the Fort Lauderdale News, of assault and battery Tuesday. They also charged Harrell with trespassing.

Shortly after the first charges were filed Monday, Miss Grayson left Fort Lauderdale for an undisclosed location in California.

The charges stem from a fracas Sunday in Hurkos' room at the Galt Ocean Mile Hotel, where both he and Miss Grayson had been appearing in a nightclub floor show. Mrs. Holcomb told police she went to the room with Harrell to recover a picture and clothing owned by her missing granddaughter, Teresa Fittin, 18.

As she entered the room,

Mrs. Holcomb said, Miss Grayson rose from a chair and hit her in the face. Harrell confirmed Mrs. Holcomb's account.

Mrs. Hurkos contended that Harrell, who stands 5-foot-5 and weighs 125 pounds, came into the room swinging. "He hit Miss Grayson and he kicked me. Then he lunged back and caught that woman," Mrs. Holcomb, right in the eye.

Mrs. Holcomb said the photo and clothing had been given to Hurkos last week by her daughter, Mrs. Jocella Fittin.

Gold Medal winner causes 'memories'

OGDEN—(UPI)—The ice skating performance by Dorothy Hamill that won the 1976 Olympic Gold Medal brought back memories of hard work and "fufufu" to an Ogden woman who once studied under Miss Hamill's coach, Carlo Fassi. Betty Jones, 26 and a resource teacher in Ogden public schools, started skating at a young age and began lessons while in the fifth grade. Two years later, she was competing in Salt Lake City and her figure skating instructor recommended she go to Fassi.

"I was really scared. The first time I went to have a lesson I was chewing gum and he got really mad. I was just barely chewing it," she giggled. "I guess the main thing I remember was that he was real serious. He didn't joke around, or sympathize or encourage me at all." Skating was the main subject for Fassi, she said. Miss Jones is a resource teacher in an Ogden public school. During the summer with Fassi she took three private lessons a week at the rate of $6 for 30 minutes of instruction. When she was not taking lessons, Miss Jones was out practicing on the ice with her friends. "I skated about six hours a day," she said. Miss Jones said she agrees with critics who rate Fassi as the best figure skating coach in the world and almost impeccable when it comes to the instruction of figures. Dorothy Hamill was such a good freestyle skater but she wasn't that good in figures. She went to Fassi and he brought her way up in figures so she could go on and win the Olympics the way she did. Although Fassi demonstrated great patience with Hamill, Miss Jones said he was not always patient as her coach. "Once I remember I was jumping a double jump on two feet and getting in the habit of putting two feet down instead of one. He said he'd hit me if I didn't land the next one on one foot. I didn't know if he was joking or not. "Anyway, I crashed," she recalled with a laugh. "I just completely wiped out and all he said was 'Let's go do something else.'" A native of Italy, Fassi retained a strong Italian accent when Miss Jones knew him. "He'd say, 'Do a fufufu,' and I'd say, 'A what?' I just couldn't understand him. My girlfriend took lessons from him before me and she said, 'Betty, when he tells you to do a fufufu that means ...' and she'd tell me what it meant. He really had quite an accent." The lessons with Fassi paid off for Jones. The winter following her lessons with Fassi she won the women's figure skating championship at the competition held for Utah's skating clubs in Salt Lake City.

Controversial plant loses major backers

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—The two major sponsors of the Kaiparowits power project have withdrawn their applications to build the controversial southern Utah generating facility. Utah Gov. Calvin Rampton said today the project, which would burn coal mined on the Kaiparowits plateau to provide power for southern California and the Phoenix area of Arizona. Rep. Shirley Pettis, D-Calif., and the Environmental Defense Fund both reported that Southern California Edison and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. had asked the Interior Department for permission to withdraw from the project. Rep. Pettis said officials from both firms had contacted her about the decision, which ends a decade of efforts to build the 3,000-megawatt on the north shores of Lake Powell. She said officials of Arizona Public Service Co., the third sponsor, were meeting today in Phoenix to decide on their course.

Nevada set for 'first'

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)—Secretary of State William Swackhammer today named seven Democrats and President Ford and Ronald Reagan to appear on the ballot in Nevada's first presidential primary election May 25. Nevada, Idaho and Oregon will hold the first regional primary election on the same day. Swackhammer said the Democrats would be Sens. Henry Jackson of Washington and Frank Church of Idaho; governors Jerry Brown of California and George Wallace of Alabama; former governor Jimmie Carter of Georgia; Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and former Senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma who had dropped out of the presidential primaries. He said he chose the names after compiling a massive file of newspaper clippings and public opinion polls.

Courthouse begins tree replacement

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County Commissioners Monday authorized the County Extension Agent Ivan C. Hopkins to order 11 trees to be planted around the Courthouse in Shoshone. This is part of a program to replace trees that have died or had to be removed from around the courthouse block in recent years. Hopkins said about 26 trees had been removed and the overall program calls for replacing that number. Commissioners said that studies of a location for a countywide sanitary landfill have indicated that area north of Shoshone originally considered, has proven having insufficient soil. A test indicated most of the area only allowed digging three feet and they feel that purchasing dirt for fill would be too costly. Selection of a sanitary location is continuing. Treasurer Myron D. Johnson met with the Commissioners, requesting that the job of selling food stamps be removed from his office. Johnson's office has handled sale of the stamps for several months, and he said his request for removal was based on the fact that "since my deputy is paid the normal wage in the courthouse, I don't feel I should ask her to do this extra work and suggested they give the job to one of the offices where wages were better. Commissioners said they would remove the work from the Treasurer's office, but did not designate which office in the courthouse will handle the sales. Johnson said there are about 70 transactions handled through the office each month, from Lincoln, Blaine and a few from Jerome Counties. Bid on insurance for vehicles for the county went to the Harrell A. Thorne Agency. Mrs. Don Williams took the oath of office as a deputy in the office of County Assessor E. Dr. Savaria. She replaces Mrs. Nathan Ware, who is moving from the community. Quarterly reports received included $44.50 from Sheriff B. Anderson, and $5,082.50 from County Clerk, Joy McClure. The license fees from snowmobiles is now at $104 and the boat license fund is $833. Use of the money is set by Idaho Statute, boat ramp at the Little Wood River near the Shoshone Sale Hut, was constructed a few years ago with some of the boat money since the money may be used for improvements on navigable streams within the counties.

Military aid explained

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger today assured Congress that U.S. military aid to Jordan and economic assistance to Egypt and Syria "do not undermine in any sense our traditional friendship with Israel." Testifying before the Senate foreign operations subcommittee, Kissinger said the $1.8 billion in military aid and credits for Israel which the Ford administration is seeking in 1977 "is our best judgment of the appropriate assistance required from us." The administration is also seeking $70 million in grant military aid for Jordan and $8 million in training programs. Syria has been scheduled to receive $90 million in economic assistance under the administration's 1977 request. Kissinger said the United States was seeking $750 million in non-military aid for Egypt. He noted "Egypt has demonstrated its good faith and sincerely by ending its long-time close dependence on the Soviet Union and by moving dramatically toward closer relations with the West." "It is clearly in our interest to demonstrate that countries which pursue such policies can obtain the support of the United States. We stress that our security assistance to, and improved relations with, Arab nations do not undermine in any sense our traditional friendship with Israel."

Coffee growers' windfall may be siphoned away

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Coffee prices may have doubled this year on the New York futures market, but Colombia's symbolic Juan Valdes probably won't see the bonanza.

The typical Colombian coffee grower — the Juan Valdes of American television commercials — has just begun to watch his beans ripen on the sunsplashed slopes of the Andes mountains.

He hasn't yet sold a single sack of coffee at the new high price, but Valdes and his mates have already started grumbling about a government policy expected to siphon off most of the coming windfall.

The New York futures market quoted coffee at 67 cents per pound a year ago, but a frost in Brazil, a civil war in Angola and an earthquake in Guatemala combined to drive the price to $1.35.

Theoretically, the misfortune of others should be Colombia's gain, but the government is deliberately putting brakes on the economy to keep inflation down.

Colombia should export about 7.5 million 137-pound sacks of coffee in 1978 — about half the country's total exports — but the government fears prices for everything would skyrocket if all of this year's extra coffee dollars were allowed to enter the country.

To sidetrack inflation, the government has fixed coffee prices at $1.20 a pound on the Colombian export market.

If the international market price is higher, $1.20 for the coffee. Nor will exporters.

The government-run National Federation of Coffee Growers has just increased the "retention" — the government's share of coffee export income — from 30 to 45.5 per cent, its highest level in history.

Growers will be lucky to sell their 275-pound two-sack loads for $150 in the local market, and up paying 70 per cent of coffee's free market value in taxes.

The government will put most of the extra income into a fund kept outside the country in order to control domestic inflation.

The arrangement has met with widespread disapproval among growers and has sparked an upsurge in smuggling as means to beat the tax bite.

A growers' spokesman last week estimated some 450,000 contraband sacks left the country in the second half of last year alone, and he knew it's increasing.

Autopsy done

COCONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Mrs. Virginia Bennett, mother-in-law of Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, died of an inflamed heart muscle brought on by bronchial pneumonia, preliminary autopsy results have shown.

Police said Mrs. Bennett, who was discovered dead at her ocean-side apartment here last Thursday, was visited by a daughter, Candice McMurray, about two weeks before her death, and found suffering from a severe cold. The daughter told police her mother indicated she planned to see a doctor.

Mrs. Bennett's body was found after friends wondered why they hadn't seen her and asked the building manager to investigate. Her body was shipped last Saturday to Deer Park, N.Y., where services were held.

Milk co-op gets whopping tax bill

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service has hit the nation's giant milk co-op, the Associated Milk Producers Inc., with another whopping tax bill — $7.8 million in unpaid taxes and fraud penalties for fiscal years 1972 and 1973.

The most recent IRS tax demand — the third such notice the Texas-based milk lobby has received in 12 months — brings the total amount the federal government is seeking from AMPI in back taxes and penalties to more than $16 million, AMPI lawyers said Monday.

The new tax bill is only the latest in a series of legal headaches for the milk lobby dating back to 1974 when AMPI pleaded guilty to "cavalier violation" of the law in making a total of $280,900 in illegal political donations to both political parties.

Two of the milk co-op's top executives also received jail sentences for using contributions in an attempt to influence the White House and Congress on milk prices.

What in 1974 was the year of the special Watergate prosecutor has become in the last 12 months for AMPI the unforgettable year of the tax man.

Philippines Named for King Phillip II of Spain, the Philippines were visited by Magellan in 1521. The islands number more than 7,000 and have a total area of 115,707, about equal to the state of Arizona. The archipelago was ceded to the United States in 1898 following the Spanish-American War for $20 million. The Philippines became independent in 1946.

Non-expiring permits sold

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — John Bates sells non-expiring gun permits, good nationwide, his classified ad say. He issues them for 75 cents from his service station.

They're constitutional, Bates says, and he's ready to take on anyone who challenges his right to peddle them. But Bates may soon be out of the gun permit business, said Lt. Larry Furnas of the Indiana State Police.

Only the state is supposed to issue gun permits, Furnas said, and "his permits are neither nonexpiring nor good from coast to coast."

Herchel Green, supervisor of the Indiana State Police central region, called on Furnas after Bates sold one of the permits to a state policeman. Green, who deals with gun regulation, said he believed Bates may be violating the law.

"They're based on the Constitution," Bates said. "If they arrest me, they're going to find themselves on the other side of a lawsuit."

"I bought a pistol in a gunshop. I showed them my permit, and I walked out with the gun. You're supposed to wait seven days here in Indiana, according to the phony statute," Bates said.

Bates' permits cite the Second Amendment on the "right of the people to keep and bear arms," and also appropriate case law citations. "It's all documented so you don't have to research the law," he said.

Green said selling the permits, advertising them and using one to buy a gun all were questionable actions. He said the gun dealer ought not to have accepted a permit other than an official state personal protection or target permit.

Green's state police likely would inform the Boone County prosecutor who then could decide whether to proceed against Bates. He said he also notified the Treasury Department's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division.

After 20 years in the Air Force "fighting communism," Bates said he came home to find infringements on freedom in America.

"I finally got like a steer in the road. I'm tired of being herded," he said.

Bates said he had sold about 600 permits and had 1,000 more on order. He makes no profit on them, he said — the 75 cents covers the printing cost and a little beyond it. He said he tells the buyers they still may face trouble, although he believes the permits are legal.

"Of course, you're going to have to stand up on your hind legs and tell those bureaucrats that," he said.

Grandmother wins Tennessee post

JONESBORO, Tenn. (UPI) — A silver-haired grandmother decided the oldest town in Tennessee was ready for a woman mayor. So she put on her white gloves and beat three seasoned politicians — including her ex-husband.

Mayor Grace Shipley Haws said she did most of her campaigning door-to-door as she defeated three male candidates, including her former husband, Lyle Haws, who had served a term as mayor, and Ernest McKinney, the first black to run for mayor since reconstruction.

"I only spent about $100 altogether," said the 61-year-old mayor, who has taught fifth graders for 25 years. She was sworn into office Monday night.

"Every day for about two weeks I went visiting after school for two or three hours. I only spent about $5 on gasoline because I walked most of the time."

"I went up and down the street and knocked on every door. I didn't ask anyone to vote for me. I just said I hoped they would. I didn't promise anyone anything."

As a candidate in this 197-year-old town in 955 registered voters, Mrs. Haws had a decided advantage — she knew almost everyone she called on.

"Sometimes we'd hardly talk about the election at all. We'd just chat and catch up on things."

Her opposition used the routine tactics of radio spots, newspaper ads and fliers. "One man even had a television spot on the day of the election," she said.

She said she thought she won because "people have faith and trust in me. They thought I could do the job and serve with integrity."

Until she had made her campaign calls, she was not sure she could win. "I decided to run thinking that I could pave the way for a live woman mayor in a few years. But after I started talking to people, I fell like I would win."

She kept a list of registered voters and marked down those she knew would vote for her. "I figured if 700 people voted, I would get 240 to 250. Less than 600 people voted and I got 223 votes, but I won by a 25-vote margin over Mr. McKinney."

She declined to discuss the reaction of her former husband. "I announced three weeks before the other candidates and if I had known who was going to run then, I probably wouldn't have announced. But I'd rather not talk about it. We have a son and a daughter, you know."

"I ran for Grace Haws. I didn't run against anybody."

Ford Motor tests hot air engine

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. Wednesday demonstrated the world's first experimental Stirling hot air engine for passenger cars and said it would be at least 10 years before it could be put into mass production.

Ford said preliminary tests indicate the century-old external combustion engine achieved a 92-per-cent fuel economy improvement over a 351-cubic-inch V-8 engine—while meeting stringent 1978 clean air standards.

The engine, mounted in a midsize, four-door Ford Torino sedan, was first conceived by a Scottish clergyman in 1816 and is now considered one of the most promising alternatives to the present internal combustion engine.

It produces fewer exhaust emissions and noise while providing greater fuel economy on a wide variety of fuels.

In tests the Stirling "4-215" achieved an average 16.2 miles per gallon in laboratory tests duplicating those conducted by the Environmental Protection Agency. A standard 351-cubic-inch V-8 engine, calibrated to meet California clean air standards, was able to manage just 12.3 m.p.g. in the same tests.

In the emission tests, the Stirling engine was able to meet 1978 standards for exhaust gases containing unburned hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and oxides of nitrogen while the V-8 engine failed to come in below the standards.

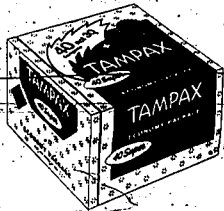

The Stirling is a closed-cycle external combustion engine. Burning fuels heat and cool a working gas within four cylinders in a manner that pistons and connecting rods are moved, turning a swashplate drive mechanism at the rear of the engine. Swashplate drives are commonly used in oil pumps, torpedo motors and air conditioning compressors.

Dr. W. Dale Compton, a Ford vice president in charge of research, said the engine demonstrated Wednesday was only in the first stage of development.

"Compared with conventional internal combustion engines, the Stirling utilizes sophisticated electronic controls, ceramic components, extensive amounts of stainless steel tubing and other parts which are inherently expensive," Compton said.

Survivor of tragedy finds inner strength

By SUSAN HOLLIDAY BEAUDRY
Kent, Washington

By the time I turned 22, I was pretty much of a snob. I was mainly interested in good times. Appearances meant a great deal to me. My boyfriends—also had to be athletic because I was crazy about sports.

One Sunday morning in June, I walked out of my apartment, climbed into my car, buckled my seat belt and headed for church.

As I drove through an intersection, a car driven by another young woman sped toward me. I had the right of way, but that was little consolation for what happened next. The other driver slammed into me broadside on the passenger's side. I was wrenched from under the seat belt and thrown free of the car into a rocky wall on the side of the road.

For the next three and a half months I was in a coma.

"If Susan didn't live," the doctors told my parents, "you should be prepared to see considerable brain damage."

At best, they suggested, I would likely be a physical cripple and mental vegetable.

But I guess God had other ideas. For some medically unexplained reason, I pulled out of the coma mentally alert. But even though my mental powers were intact, my body had undergone a radical change. I had lost about 40 pounds, I couldn't speak and I was unable to stop my legs from involuntarily thrashing against the hospital-bed railings.

Screams of frustration welled up inside me. I've got to say something or even moan or grunt. I'd think as I strained my throat and moved my lips. But no sound came out.

Emotionally and physically drained, I finally decided to try prayer. Then I discovered that God. I'd backtracked to remember from the Bible: All day long I repeated in my mind the first two words of Psalm 12: "Help, Lord. Help, Lord."

Finally, that very evening, God responded. As I sat outside my room in my wheelchair, I saw my doctor at the nearby nurses' desk and I somehow softly rasped my first words in more than four months: "Hello—Doctor Nelson."

Friends from my church and members of my family and their best to communicate with me. But of them all, John Beaudry, a young man I'd known slightly from my high school days, became my most concerned and understanding companion.

Still, I wasn't prepared for his words one afternoon soon after my late November discharge from the hospital. He came into my room at home and, looking very serious, said, "I love you, Susan—and I want to marry you."

"Confused and upset, I responded lamely. "I can't see right now, John. Give me some time to think."

"Finally said yes.

Our church was packed that July day in 1970 when my dad rolled me down the aisle in my wheelchair. It was a beautiful wedding, and a lot of eyes were wet—but not mine. You see, another side effect of my accident was that something had gone wrong with my tear ducts. I couldn't cry.

And as I embarked on my challenging but frequently frustrating new career as a handicapped housewife, I often wished I could fall back on the emotional release that tears can provide.

Gradually, strength and flexibility began to return to my legs and increase in my arms. I found that I could hobble along haltingly behind a walker then walking by leaning against a wall for support.

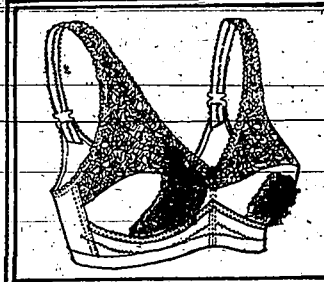

But—most wondrous of all despite the "preventions" of medical experts that I could never become pregnant, I did.

Our daughter Janine was born a year and a half after our marriage.

As I was recuperating from the delivery, John gave me a little book called, "How Much I Love My Wife." The sense of my blessings overwhelmed me as I sat there holding that volume. And suddenly, for the first time in more than two years, I cried—not tears of frustration, but tears of joy.

Hughes 'neglected' to death?

ACAPULCO, Mexico (UPI) — Although he was one of the richest men in the world, the late Howard Hughes died of "a sickness called neglect," according to a Mexican physician who was called in to examine the billionaire in his final hours of life here.

Dr. Victor Manuel Montemayor-Martinez, in an interview with the Mexico City newspaper El Sol, said he found Hughes unconscious, his body covered with sores and consisting of "nothing more than skin and bones."

Although he had four American doctors in attendance at his 20th floor hotel hideout here, Hughes was not getting the medical attention needed, the Mexican said.

"Hughes expressed a sickness called neglect," he said.

He said he dreaded his dissatisfaction to the American doctors when he saw the billionaire shortly before he was put aboard a chartered jet for Houston last April 5 in a futile effort to save his life. Hughes was dead when the plane reached that city.

Montemayor said "it would be very difficult to determine" why Hughes did not receive better medical attention.

"Senor Hughes was nothing more than skin and bones, unconscious, with an epileptic aspect because of a lack of cerebral circulation—a situation that was worsened by the inexplicable fact that his head was raised," said the Mexican.

"He was suffering from extreme dehydration and in the last 24 hours had produced only a quarter of a gallon of urine. In addition he had sores all over his body, his eyes and extremities were paralyzed, and there was bleeding from a wound on the left side of his head, apparently from an open benign tumor."

Montemayor said Hughes had the left side of his face sunken and his breathing was weak, he added.

Angered by what he found, Montemayor said he criticized the American doctors present.

"I asked them to explain to me why they had not taken him to the Houston Medical Center which he (Hughes) owned," Montemayor said.

"I also warned them that if he got any less medical attention he would die within two or three hours."

The Mexican did not give details on what response he received from the Hughes medical team, nor exactly how it was that he was summoned to the dying man's hideout in the first place.

Fires costly

TEN SLEEP, Wyo. (UPI) — The Gordon Hoffman's insurance adjuster hopes they don't ever have a three bucket fire.

In January, a fire in a Franklin stove at their ranch caused $2,000 damage, and they said they snuffed it out with one bucket of water.

Last week, another fire broke out in wiring for the kitchen stove, and it did $7,500 to $10,000 damage and took two buckets to put out.

Jail pay for year $48,000

CHICAGO — Watergate figure Dwight L. Chapin was paid at the rate of $48,000 a year by insurance company Clement Stone while serving his federal prison sentence.

Stone told The Chicago Daily News that Chapin, 36, former appointments secretary to former President Richard M. Nixon, did not work for the money because prison rules forbid it.

"I've have a long-term contract with him," said Stone, who donated some $2 million to Nixon's 1972 campaign. "He (Chapin) is a man of outstanding character and ability."

"He (Chapin) has made a lot of money for us. He took companies that were losing money and turned them around. He's a brains."

Chapin was released April 2 from the Lompoc, Calif., minimum security federal prison camp after serving 7 months and 22 days, longer than six other Watergate figures released before him.

Chapin was convicted of perjury before the Watergate grand jury.

He was found guilty of lying when he denied to the grand jury that he had ordered Donaj Sargent, Nixon's "dirty tricks" specialist, to concentrate on Sen. Edmund Muskie's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Chapin is on the payroll of W. Clement Stone Enterprises, which Stone said handles his non-insurance activities.

Chapin, reached at the Enterprises office here, said he was pleased to be back at work in Chicago. "He declined to discuss the payment of funds to him while in prison."

Stone and Chapin both said that he was put on the payroll of the "Clement Stone Enterprises after his conviction in April 1974. Chapin resigned his job as a marketing executive for United Air Lines after his indictment in November, 1972. He said he was unemployed from then until Stone hired him.

Stone, in discussing Chapin's conviction, said, "What's the difference? It is not fair to him and his family to hold this against him."

"We have a contract with him. He's in my employ."

Chapin, whose wife and children continued to live in the couple's suburban Winnetka home during his prison sentence, was originally sentenced to 30 months in prison.

However U. S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesel ordered the term to 6 to 18 months after an appeal.

Chapin cited the short terms served by other Watergate defendants.

Yugoslavia uneasy with policy

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Yugoslavia echoed Romania today in expressing concern over a State Department paper on U.S. policy toward Eastern Europe, which both say its concepts undermine their desire to chart independent courses under Communism.

U.S. embassy officials in this city have been queried by East European diplomats about the meaning of the paper, delivered to a group of U.S. ambassadors in London in December by State Department Counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt, No. 2 to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The paper, dubbed the "Sonnenfeldt Doctrine," included a reference to an "organic unity" between the Soviet Union and Communist East Europe. The statement was interpreted by many in Yugoslavia, which is not in the Soviet bloc, hinted strongly that relations with the United States could be endangered if Washington did not respect Belgrade's "independent and nonaligned policy," Romania, the most independent-minded of the bloc nations.

"It can be assessed that the Sonnenfeldt Doctrine, by its whole essence, is a doctrine of denying the peoples' right to independence and development, a doctrine of domination and oppression, a doctrine of dividing the world into zones of influence among the big powers," the Romanian Communist party newspaper Scinteia said Tuesday.

Boiba said the text of Sonnenfeldt's remarks "burst like a soap bubble" and alluded to the Yalta conference after World War II in which the Big Three allied powers divided the world into their own spheres of influence.

Both countries said the "doctrine" was a return to Cold War thinking.

Boiba said it was a product of U.S. alarm over American inability to intervene in Angola.

"NATO is the instrument by which Mr. Sonnenfeldt means to keep the world at a standstill," the Romanian newspaper said.

Romania is in the Warsaw Pact, the Soviet equivalent of NATO. Yugoslavia, although Communist, is not a member.

Blaine hospital endorses program

HALLEY — The Blaine County Hospital Board has endorsed a breast examination program but without a quorum, left the decision to adopt the program to the medical staff.

Blaine County Hospital administrator Gary Steinbach said Tuesday the Mountain States Tumor Institute was sponsoring a one-week training program for registered nurses in June.

The program will allow the nurses to conduct mass detection and education programs and teach self-examination of breasts for possible cancer signs.

The Blaine County hospital will sponsor free screening clinics, Steinbach said when the nurses return from the sessions.

"Although there was some discussion just how effective self-examination techniques are without a physician on hand, the board decided to go along with the program if the staff was for it."

The board also left up to the medical staff a proposal for an inhalation therapy program. Medical Rehabilitation Services Inc., a private organization, will provide the staff with a therapist, equipment and disposable supplies, Steinbach said and get 60 per cent of the net revenue from the program.

Inhalation therapy is used for various chest, lung and respiratory problems using various techniques and medications.

Steinbach said seven other hospitals in the state have contracted with the private group. The contract can be dissolved, he said, by either party after three months.

Blaine County Hospital will collect all monies and pay the private firm. Steinbach said several doctors have expressed an interest in an inhalation program.

High grades bring honors at Jerome

JEROME — Jerome Junior High School's honor roll for the third nine-week grading period has been released by school officials.

Students earning all "A's" included seventh grade Jimmy McKean, Rita Nutsch and Julie Hosman.

In the eighth grade the students were Linda Bidi, Robert Galsler, James Heatherington, Tracy Ahrens, Kathi Silver, Cheryl Webb and Patty Fredericksen. Only one ninth grader, Brett Weigle, took home all "A's."

Students who earned "As and Bs" with the majority being "As" in the seventh grade were Tracy Briggs, Heather Blom, Mary Ann Carpenter, Julie Laird, Judy Lewis, Vicki Meyers, Corbin Miller, Salice Mobley, Jan Mogenson and Monte Wilson. Seventh grade students who earned "As and Bs" were Carrie Becker, Clint Fichte, Eisa Hill, Gloria Hunter, Joanne Rose and James Kinsey.

Eighth grade students with the majority of "As" were Doug Ahrens, Roger Brown, Kurt Clark, Todd Critser, Lisa Farnsworth, Chris Hosman, Mary Ann Jauregui, Bob Nutsch, Dean

Waltman and Kay Weigle.

Ninth graders with "As and Bs" are Richard Deek, Jerry Goodhart, Chris Hadlock, Mary Humphrey, Layne Perme, Ronda Pheasant, Kevin Quinn and Theresa Bingham.

Ninth graders with a majority of "As" included Kathy Deek, Alfred Galsler, Theresa Klaas, April Lackey, Eric Murrell, Jane Towle, and Kathleen Van Orman.

Coin flip decides road aides' terms

JEROME — A flip of a coin has determined the length of terms newly appointed Jerome Highway commissioners will serve.

John Mogenson, H.E. "Hop" Wilson, and Raymond Clark were appointed as commissioners by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus earlier this month.

The appointments came following an election favoring consolidation of the Jerome and Gooding Roads Highway District. Gov. Andrus selected the three commissioners from the six that previously served on the two old district boards. Falling to be appointed were David Callen, Dale McClinton, and Lester Hills.

Mogenson, by the flip of the coin, was selected to serve a four-year term. He was also elected chairman of the board.

Clark and Wilson will serve two-year terms. Clark was elected secretary of the board.

Because of the consolidation, the Jerome County commissioners must reorganize the new district into three subdivisions based on population, assessed valuation and miles of roads.

Jerome hopefuls set for election in May

JEROME — Magic Valley precinct committees will be elected to office during the May 25 presidential preference primary.

Under the terms of the 1975 presidential preference primary enactment of the legislature a staggered system of elections for precinct committees have now been established. In presidential election years, precinct committees will be elected in May and in non-presidential election years they are elected in August.

In Jerome County, petitions for the office of precinct committees have been filed by the following persons.

In the Bishop precinct, Ralph B. Peters, Republican and Frank A. Titus, Democrat; Conynside, Dan Suhr, Republican and Mervyn Gultek, Democrat; Falls City precinct, Gerald R. ## Jerome sheriff's posse schedules queen contest

JEROME — Jerome County's Sheriff's Posse will hold its annual Queen contest Saturday at 1 p.m. at Simpson's Arena, three miles west and three miles south of Jerome.

Frank J. "Jim" Davis in charge of the contest said applications are being accepted for the contest and will be accepted until the day of the contest.

He explained that the queen contest is open to any girl in Magic Valley who must be unmarried or never have been married and between 18 and 24 years of age by September 1.

According to Davis, entry blanks can be picked up from him at the Razor's Edge Beauty shop at 118 S. Lincoln.

Davis said the winner of the contest will represent the Jerome Posse at the State Sheriff's Posse Queen Contest in Burley in June and will also be eligible for the Miss Rodeo Idaho Contest in September.

Explorer scouts visit US capitol

TWIN FALLS — Two Explorers from the local Boy Scout organization recently returned from the National Explorer Congress in Washington, D.C.

Brian Crockett, 17, junior, Twin Falls High School, and Tad Haney, 16, sophomore, joined 90 other Explorers from the western states area in Salt Lake on March 27 and flew to the nation's capitol.

In all, 2,000 Explorers from across the country convened to elect national officers and draft their platform for emphasis in the Explorer programs for the coming years.

In addition to attending the Explorer Congress, Crockett and Haney had the opportunity to view the democratic process in action. They spent an afternoon with Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho.

They also attended many seminars on leadership and government given by the FBI, the Secret Service, the Treasury Department, Post Office and Water Resources Department. Crockett and Haney had some free time to tour points of interest in the Washington, D.C., area, including the Smithsonian Institute and the Lincoln Memorial.

According to Del Hanks, scout executive for the Twin Falls scout council, "the two returned enthusiastic and will take a major role in giving leadership to local Explorer government."

Crockett and Haney are presidents of their respective Explorer posts. There are 40 posts in this area.

Jerome's merchants set Easter egg hunt

JEROME — The annual Jerome Merchants Easter egg hunt will be held Saturday in the city park, starting at 10 a.m.

As in the past, pre-schoolers will hunt for eggs in the park by the swimming pool on East First Street. Youngsters through 12 will hunt for their eggs in the South Park, which was the former home of the bandshell.

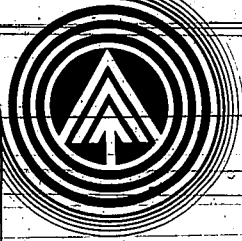

Over 900 colored eggs will be hidden on the park grounds with the one gold egg worth $10 to the finder and the silver egg valued at $5 to the lucky boy or girl who finds it.

In the pre-school hunt 25 eggs have been numbered and youngsters finding these will receive Easter baskets filled with goodies.

The event is again being sponsored by the merchant committee of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce.

TF-group presents donation

TWIN FALLS — The Sweet Adelines have donated a doppler blood pressure device to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital's pediatrics department.

Representing an important scientific advance in monitoring equipment for infants, the doppler incorporates an adjustable volume speaker system which allows the pulse of the infant to be clearly heard.

Traditional methods of checking blood pressure by listening through a stethoscope or sphygmomanometer are not always sufficiently sensitive enough to produce clear readings on small infants.

Doppler blood pressure devices are also valuable for finding weak pulse in the feet of adults with circulatory deficiency in the legs.

This particular device, however, was earmarked for and will remain in the pediatrics area for use on infants and young children as requested by the Sweet Adelines in making the donation.

LITTLE Nicole Marie Blacker, 1 month, and Norma VanDerwalker, licensed practical nurse, demonstrate the new doppler blood pressure and device to Sheila Lozano, a member of the Sweet Adelines, who donated the device. Nicole is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Blacker, Route 1, Heyburn.

DEAR ABBY: If you want to know why so many teenage marriages go on the rocks, just stand around a supermarket and notice what those young wives put into their shopping carts.

Nothing but TV dinners, frozen chicken pies and boxes of mixes. Anything that's quick and easy. Don't they teach girls in home economics how to make spaghetti, roast a chicken and broil fresh fish?

It's no wonder so many young husbands would rather grab a bite with "the boys" than come home for supper. Somebody should tell those lazy wives that the way to a man's heart is still through his stomach.

Tranquility found in man himself

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Tranquility, like all human experiences, is a remarkably complicated affair, but the ultimate source can only be found in man himself, according to the medical director of the Institute of Living.

Dr. John Houck, the director, spoke Tuesday about what he called the "Peaceable Kingdom within the mind" at the opening of the 23rd Annual Mental Health Lecture Series.

"Tranquility is calm, but not indifference, quiet, but not somnolence, relaxation, but not apathy. Its essential quality is a sense of inner peace and freedom from anxiety," he said.

Dr. Houck said the use of remedies to find freedom from anxiety has intensified over the past 20 years since tranquilizers were first identified.

The most popular drug in the world in 1975 was Valium, a small yellow pill, chemically identified as diazepam, he said.

"In 1974, American doctors alone wrote about 60 million prescriptions for Valium and their patients spent about $500 million to buy it," he said. "Its only major effect is to produce a sense of peace and calm, and tranquility, which lasts about six hours."

But the search for tranquility is nothing new, he said.

"Among the most popular of the early patent medicines was Dover's Powders, first prepared in 1709 by Thomas Dover," he said. "They really did work remarkably well and they should have — their main ingredient was raw opium."

"To induce inner peace, pills still rank far behind what Dr. Houck calls the greatest tranquilizer of all time — alcohol. He said for every person who takes a tranquilizer, at least 10 drink alcohol regularly.

"Most drinkers do not want to get drunk. They only want to feel a little more calm, a little more peaceful, a little better insulated from the hassles of living," he said.

In the past, some people traveled to specific geographical places with the hope of finding a "Peaceable Kingdom" at the end of the road, he said.

"Man searches for tranquility in many strange places," he said. "It comes to most people only rarely and often under unpredictable circumstances."

"For some, that was the convent or the cloister. For others, it was a half-mythical spot, not yet discovered but perhaps over the next hill.

Committee reports were given by Margaret Watts, Altrusa information; Oia Cannon, community service; Adde Stoddard, international relations; Virginia Bancroft, vocational service, and Norma Herzinger, membership.

Nancy White, chairman of the finance committee, reminded members of the cooked food sale set Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. at Legionwood Mall.

Clara Nesbitt, president, announced plans for a bi-centennial biography project in conjunction with the Boise Altrusa Club.

Plans were discussed for the District Twelve conference set May 20 in Seattle.

A board of directors meeting is set May 6 at the home of Mrs. Nesbitt, with the dinner meeting May 11 at the Colonial House. The May 27 meeting will be held at the home of Virginia Bancroft, with Mrs. Herzinger and Ardith Klutwell as hostesses.

DEAR GRANDMA: There are plenty of young wives who can't slice a salami straight, and their husbands love them to pieces because of indigestion and heartburn. Then there are gourmet cooks who could win prizes for their souffles, but their husbands prefer other "dishes." And by the way, Grandma, there's more than one way to a man's stomach.

DEAR ABBY: After so many letters of response, I would think that the man who wants to sue his parents for having him circumcised feels like people are picking on him.

Well, buddy, I have one thing to say to you: Consider yourself lucky that you don't live in the 18th century. Back in those days, they castrated young males to combine the power of the adult male singer with the high range of the female alto or soprano. Compared to that, I'd say that you got off lucky.

your health

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

We enjoy your column so much, and we would like some advice on a very important and touchy subject which has caused my husband and me much concern.

We have a 10-month-old baby girl — our first. We also have an uncle who visits our home once or twice a month when he comes to town. He is a lovable man, but he has the bad habit of asking for a cold beer before he gets planted in his favorite chair. We don't mind him having his beer, but what we do mind is when he puts our little girl on his knee and feeds her beer. If he is given a cocktail, he does the same thing.

When we suggest that a baby shouldn't be given spirits of any kind, he simply says, "A little drink won't hurt her." We believe our uncle is pretty close to being an alcoholic, if he isn't one already. What can we do to prevent him from possibly injuring our baby? — W.B.

Of course, your uncle is trying to be nice to the little tike in his own way. But the child is much too young for alcohol. Your uncle should be given a stern ultimatum — no spirits.

At 10 months, this child's digestive system is just beginning to adjust to an amazing array of new tastes and foods as she gradually works toward an adult food intake. No need to introduce an unnecessary and potentially harmful substance. We know the effects on metabolism alcohol can have in adults.

Too young for alcohol

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Little ones, like your daughter, are much less capable of coping with it.

Quite apart from the harmful effects of her health, the exposure to the beer and cocktails is dangerous from another aspect. She might lose a natural aversion to other "strange-tasting" and dangerous liquids as common household cleaning fluids, etc.

Knock it off, uncle.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

Is there a stroke club in Connecticut? My husband had a stroke in January and is still paralyzed. I think it would give him a lift to talk to others in the same boat. And perhaps people who have recovered would be there. — Mrs. L.T.R.

I'm sure there are several in the state. You are from a relatively large city, where there must certainly be a stroke rehabilitation center. Check with the local hospital or a local unit of the American Heart Association.

You are on the right track. Such clubs are great morale boosters, and they do make a habit of having recovered victims to give talks. It might do your husband a world of good. Incidentally, my newest booklet, just back from the printer's, is called "Stroke — Hope and Help." If you want a copy, send 25 cents to me in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

My husband had my original engagement ring repaired this past Christmas. It was gold. My finger turned black after wearing it. Is there any medical cause for this? — Mrs. H.R.

If the ring was replated, then you might suspect the plating material. Often, nickel, which is used in such procedures, can produce an allergic response. The discoloration is due to a reaction of certain substances in the perspiration to the metal.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:

When a woman has had her female organs removed, and when she and her mate have relations and he comes to a full climax, should the woman ejaculate or not? — J.H.

Lodge visit made

JEROME— Mrs. Muriel Marting, Gooding, district deputy president of Idaho Rebekah Assembly District 6, paid her official visit to Syringa Rebekah Lodge, Jerome, on Monday.

Members of Marguerite Rebekah No. 98, Gooding, were special guests.

Mrs. Judith Capps was received as a transfer member. New members initiated include Mrs. Faye Hunt, Mrs. Jane Bolch and Mrs. Leona Harding, all Jerome.

Mrs. Jean Floyd was program chairman. Serving as hostesses were Mrs. Verla Nelson, Mrs. Ruth Adams, Mrs. Fay Gergens and Mrs. Deloris Silver. Guests and officers were presented corsages of pink and green. The anniversary of Odd Fellowship will be observed at the April meeting. Mrs. Etta Mauldin will be program chairman. Mrs. Dorothy Shires, Mrs. Shirley Shropshire and Mrs. Betty Thompson will be hostesses.

Douching is a matter of personal preference. Having had a hysterectomy has no bearing on the matter. No harm either way.

To learn of the many factors involved in the treatment of hiatal hernia (which concerns the esophagus), write to Dr. Thosteson in care of this newspaper, for a copy of his booklet, "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Combat It." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Kimberly schools return to math

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly school system is returning to traditional math. Supr. Vernon Exner said all math courses for the entire school will be changed next year, requiring complete new textbooks throughout the system. It has been found students have too much difficulty, he said, changing from the "modern math" concept taught in recent years to the everyday application. "When they go to the grocery store, they have to apply traditional mathematical concepts," Exner said. He said Geneva, near Moscow, changed last fall and are "happy with it."

Because of this change in textbooks and inflation the trustees have decided to ask voter approval for a 6 mill override election May 18. Two trustee posts also will be filled at that time. The 6 mills will bring the district an estimated $30,000.

Terms of Holland (Holly) Houghburg in zone 2 and Jack Claiborn J. in zone 3 are expiring. Exner said the incumbents are undecided about whether or not they will seek re-election. The positions to be filled May 18 are for three-year terms.

The Kimberly board has agreed on a salary schedule accepted by the teachers. Exner said this year it was agreed the board and teachers would negotiate two things: a new salary schedule and increased insurance payments.

The district's base salary remains at $8,200, but increments and steps for additional education were increased. The increment went from $125 to $200 for each year of experience and $250 for each 15 semester hours of education.

The district extended its insurance coverage from $10 to $19 for each teacher. This amount pays the premium for the teacher, but does not include the family.

Exner said "We have a good feeling in this district between teachers and administrators." Jim Sorenson is chairman of the teacher's negotiating committee, but the superintendent said all the faculty and trustees met informally to discuss the negotiations.

Pomerelle schedules annual spring fling

ALBION — The annual "spring fling" of the Pomerelle ski resort south of here will be held Saturday and Sunday.

Saturday will feature a number of races and fun events with an Easter egg hunt on the ski slopes Sunday.

Woody Anderson, owner of the resort, said the flings will close for the season following operation on Monday. Schools in Burley and Rupert will be closed for the Easter holiday Monday.

Anderson said the area still has between 70 and 90 inches of snow on the ski runs and operation continues on a daily basis through April 19.

Beginning shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday there will be races for skiers of all ages. A "no alibi" downhill event will be held Saturday morning, with an obstacle course race, gelande jumping contests (no flips-please!) and a volley ball game on skis in front of the lodge during the day. These events are open to all interested skiers.

Sunday Pomerelle staff members will direct an egg hunt on the hill with some of the foil wrapped eggs containing special prize winning numbers.

A special egg hunt for small children will also be held in the vicinity of the ski lodge.

Those interested in participating in the races and fun events Saturday may sign up at 10 a.m. at the resort.

Lebanon settlement outline 'emerging', Henry says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Wednesday an outline for a settlement in Lebanon is beginning to emerge, but he warned "the situation could still explode despite our best efforts."

Kissinger told the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on Foreign Operations the situation in Lebanon has "greatly improved" in the last three weeks.

"The United States is now beginning discussions with other countries, including Saudi Arabia, about a consortium to give emergency aid to the war-torn country.

But, Kissinger said, the passions that have caused 15,000 deaths are still present. "We're walking through a minefield here," he said.

He acknowledged that the Syrians have introduced military forces into the immediate border areas of Lebanon, but he later told reporters that Israel is willing to tolerate this at the present level.

He said the United States' role in seeking a political solution has been "a major one — it not the major one." The United States has been represented by Ambassador L. Dean Brown, a special envoy who was sent to Lebanon on April 10.

Kissinger gave only the barest outline of the political formula that gives hope of some settlement. He said power would be shared on a 50-50 basis between the Moslem and Christian communities.

Other State Department officials who have been following the situation are less optimistic than Kissinger about a solution.

One official said the new president of Lebanon will be faced with the same set of conflicting interests that caused the present fighting, and he will have no real basis of power to enforce any kind of solution.

Kissinger, in his testimony, also confirmed that North Vietnam has responded to a U.S. proposal for talks, but with a request for U.S. aid.

Cambodia hardliner

Yankee rebels gain forgiveness

GREENWICH, England (UPI) — Queen Elizabeth granted her royal seal of forgiveness Wednesday to the American rebels who humiliated her ancestor 200 years ago to found a new nation.

The Queen and Prince Philip, cloaked by light security, walked down the River Thames to perform the formal evening opening of "1776," a priceless exhibition that is Britain's tip of the hat to the American Bicentennial.

WHITSON objects on show, about half from American collections, the exhibition unfolds like a movie through a newly rebuilt wing of the National Maritime Museum at Greenwich. Throughout the 23-room exhibit, the stress is on the British side of history.

One section, for instance, gently sets the record straight on King George III, Elizabeth's ancestor.

"Americans are raised on the image of George III and emerge from the Declaration of Independence—as a monster and a tyrant!" said Kenneth Pearson, the exhibition organizer.

In fact, George III was "the most civilized and cultured of English monarchs," with a long list of cultural and scientific achievements which have lasted to this day, he said.

Prince Charles, heir to the British throne and long one of George's modern champions, plays the role of "George" in recordings depicting his gracious speech to John Adams when Adams presented his credentials as the first U.S. ambassador to Britain. Former U.S. Ambassador Elliot Richardson plays Adams.

More than 1 million people—half of them Americans—are expected to tour the exhibit before it closes Oct. 2.

Few will have the delightful touches which punctuated a private preview: when a loudspeaker system kept broadcasting announcements like:

"Ray, from electricians, please go to the Boston Tea Party."

The Tea Party is only one of a series of full-scale reconstructions.

George Washington's campaign trunk stands next to his medicine chest. Benjamin Franklin's tiny chess set nestles among books from his library.

The exhibition is particularly rich in portraits and unique historic documents. Among these are the three which proved Benedict Arnold a traitor and the "articles of capitulation" of the British at Yorktown.

"1776" is an upstairs, downstairs exhibition, with the British upstairs and the rebels in the basement. The stress throughout is on the English side.

Charges dismissed in '57 death case

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Murder charges against three reputed Ku Klux Klan members stemming from the 1957 death of a black truck driver were dismissed today by a circuit court judge.

Judge Frank Embry ruled the indictment against the three men was improperly drawn. Prosecutors said they will seek a new indictment.

The three men were accused of forcing Willie Edwards Jr., then 25, to jump from a bridge over the Alabama River to his death 19 years ago. The prosecution claimed the action was taken on KKK orders because Edwards was mistakenly believed to have made advances toward a white woman.

The defendants were William "Sonny" Kyle Livingston, 38, a ball bondsman; Henry Alexander, 46, a plumbing contractor; and James York, 73, a retired city sanitation worker. All are from Montgomery.

Embry ruled the indictment was inadequate because it did not state how Edwards had died—Assistant District Attorney Charles Price argued there was no way to determine whether he drowned or died from the fall because his body was not recovered until three months after the incident.

Politicos squabble, plants burn

ROME (UPI) — Arsonists set fire to a Texaco office and a Fiat plant Wednesday while politicians in Rome squabbled for five hours before naming a fierce anti-Communist as president of Italy's ruling party prior to predicted national elections.

"Politicians are fiddling while factories burn," one influential north Italian businessman, who asked not to be named, commented.

The pre-dawn fires, which caused considerable damage but no injuries, were the latest in a series attributed to extremists of the left or right trying to exploit Italy's economic and political woes for revolutionary ends.

Police said unidentified persons broke into the Florence office of America's Texaco oil company overnight and set it on fire with gasoline. They painted on a wall the initials of the "Communist Armed Formations," an underground group not connected with the official communist party.

The fire in a warehouse of the Fiat auto works in Turin destroyed large quantities of tires and foam rubber. The Fiat management said in a statement the fire "is of a clear willful nature and is added to the myriad of daily acts of sabotage and intimidation."

The ruling Christian Democrats, preparing for a likely early election showdown against the West's largest Communist party, elected conservative Amintore Fanfani as party president.

The vote in a party council session, delayed more than five hours by behind-the-scenes horse-trading, was 100 for Fanfani, 51 blank ballots and 30 votes scattered among other candidates.

The win was a major comeback for Fanfani, a strong anti-Communist who was once Italy's most powerful politician until he was ousted as party secretary last year following a regional election debacle in which the Communists made landslide gains.

Gooding man hurt in wreck

TWIN FALLS — Ray Adams, 39, Gooding, remained in serious condition today at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital. Adams suffered multiple fractures in a two-truck accident Tuesday afternoon about three miles west of Filer on U.S. 30. He was a passenger in a cattle truck owned by Cady Auto Co., Hagerman, and driven by Ralundo Legarreta, 29, Gooding, Legarreta and the occupants of the second truck, driver Darrell Dalton, 33, Twin Falls, and passenger Randy Carpenter, 21, Gooding, were treated and released at the hospital. Twin Falls county sheriff's officers said the two trucks were traveling east on U.S. 30 at 3:34 p.m. when the lead truck driven by Dalton and owned by U.S. Steel Co. prepared to turn toward the U.S. Steel fertilizer plant west of Filer. The Legarreta vehicle was preparing to pass it at that time and the two collided. Officers said Legarreta was cited for violation of the basic rule. The collision severed the cab from the Cady cattle truck which was empty at the time and forced the second truck to overturn. Four chemical tanks on the fertilizer company truck remained intact, officers said, but fire broke out, apparently from spilled gasoline, burning the fertilizer truck. Officers said both of the large vehicles were demolished by the impact and fire.

Five interviewees seek MID position

RUPERT — Five men were interviewed Tuesday in the search for a manager for Mindoka Irrigation District. Among the men interviewed by the MID board of directors was Richard Parker, acting manager and water master for the district. The only other interview involving a Mindoka County man was with Donald McCombs, 54, Rupert, McCombs is a former dairyman currently operating a beaver farm for a California firm. The other interviewees were from Burley, Jerome and Wendell. Chairman William Nichols said he did not want to release their names because of their current employment positions. Nichols said he will have to call another meeting of the board to discuss the applications because director Delmas, Beaver could not attend Tuesday. The chairman said he did not know whether the district would hire one of the five or reauthorize the position. MID advertised in the Rupert, Burley and Twin Falls newspapers. When hired, the new manager will replace Erich Knehaus whose contract terminates on April 27. He actually left the district in late March. Knehaus resigned his position charging that his contract "has been violated many times." He also objected to recent turmoil on the board following January reorganization and its action in "placing me on probation without any notice or reasons." Numerous other employees were fired or laid off at that time. Most have been reemployed.

Jerome pair faces court sentence

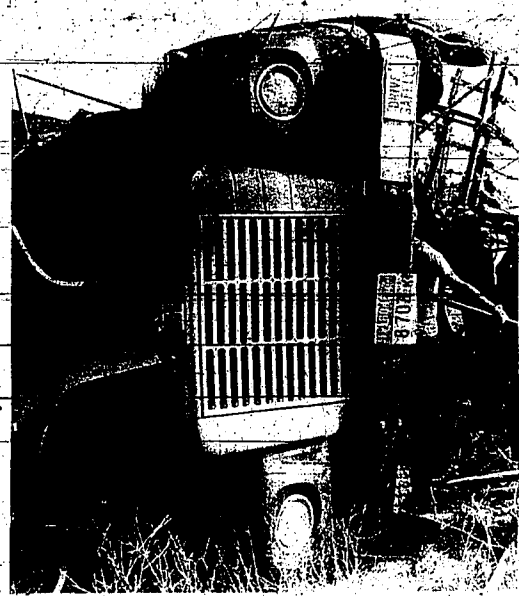

JEROME — A Jerome man and woman were arrested in the raid were Sam and Deanna Wallace, 22, Jerome, Celeste Baldwin, 29, Timolity Hill, Baldwin, 28, both Mesa, Calif. Arrested a few days after the raid was David Alex McKay McKay in an earlier court appearance changed his plea of innocent to guilty on a charge of delivery of a controlled substance, and is now scheduled for sentencing on Tuesday. Also scheduled for sentencing are the Wallaces. Sam Wallace pleaded guilty to two counts of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance and a single count of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver. His wife, Deanna, has pleaded guilty to a single charge of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver. A preliminary hearing was held recently for the Baldwins. Timothy Baldwin was bound over to Fifth District Court on charges of possession of amphetamines. His wife, Celeste, was bound over on a single charge of possession of amphetamines.

Boise man requests preliminary hearing

GOODING — Larry Smith, 24, Boise, requested a preliminary hearing on charges of possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver in magistrate court here Tuesday afternoon. His hearing was set for Wednesday by Magistrate Judge Charles C. Shaw. This is the same date set by the court for hearings requested by three other persons involved in the same charge. Charges resulted from confiscation of more than 100 pounds of marijuana seized last Friday at Bills. Arrested at the time were Smith's brother, Brent, 23, Wendell; Charlie Roy Gridley, 25, Boise, and Joan King, 21, Caldwell.

Mini-Cassia eyed by housing aides

BURLEY — A privately owned senior citizen housing complex of 50 to 60 units is being contemplated for the Mini-Cassia area. Leroy Atwood, of AWB Industries, Inc., Meridian, said Wednesday that his company is conducting a survey of the area and is in conjunction with an investigating committee of local senior citizens. "We'll build according to how much response we do get," Atwood said. He said the 50 to 60 units was based on information from senior citizens in the area and the fact that 27 responses were received in the first two weeks of the survey. Those people over 55 years old would be eligible for residency. Atwood said 4-5 months will be taken to complete the survey. He said he expects construction to begin next spring. AWB Industries moved into senior housing construction about three years ago, Atwood said, after several years in the general housing field. It now operates one complex in Burley and another under construction in Meridian and Prullidale. Atwood said construction of a fourth complex will begin at Mountain Home in August. It will be constructed at Payette during the winter. Atwood looked at several locations in the Burley-Tupert area Wednesday in the search for a site for the proposed Mini-Cassia housing development. The housing complex is financed by the Farmers Home Administration and availability of funds will be a factor in plans, Atwood said. He noted that, although the program is several years old, it has been used to construct only recently and indications are that there will be ample money available for construction in this area.

Association extension considered by officials

JEROME — The Magic Valley Association of Governments may not be dead. Three officers of the association met here Tuesday night to discuss possibilities of extending the association's life for at least another year. At the meeting were president Lon Baldwin, Fairfield; secretary-treasurer William Chancey, Twin Falls, and vice president Lytle Barton, Paul. The officers decided to call an open meeting in Jerome April 27 to discuss revival of MVAG. They will invite mayors, councilmen, county commissioners and other local officials to the meeting. "We want every local official to come and help us to see what we can come up with," Barton said this morning. "If all systems are go and we can get enough financing, we will carry it out another year." Barton is chairman of Mindoka County commissioners. The commissioners voted solidly for retaining the association at the time district commissioners voted to end funding of the organization. The association is due to fold on June 30, but Barton said it still has $9,000 to $10,000 "left in the kitty." According to director Del Taylor, there is a possibility of grant financing. Barton said the association officers are expecting no funds from individual counties following the rejection shortly before the first of the year. Mindoka County did retain a 10 cents per capita charge in its 1976 budget, which would provide $1,573 if Mindoka commissioners approved the expenditure. Barton explained that commissioners felt there was a chance the association could be continued and left the charge in the budget for consideration. Barton said the association, if continued, will probably have a different name. But he said some Magic Valley cities stand a chance of losing money if the association does not continue. He cited grants that have not been completed, as well as some block grants that were returned for one reason or another.

Clayton mines may be revived

CLAYTON — A century ago the central Idaho mountains were alive with prospectors and mining. Now it appears a British Columbia firm may rekindle a mining boom. Dankeo Mining Co., Vancouver, B.C., is planning a substantial mining operation for the tiny, near ghost town of Clayton. John Black, secretary-treasurer for Dankeo, said Monday he is sending an engineer to look at the Challis area mining claims. "I'm certainly not committing anything yet," Black said, "but if the claims there would feasibly allow it, we would put up the mill right now." A 300-ton daily mill would employ about 40 men. However, Dankeo likes to lease claims, which would put even more men to work for the company as prospectors. He said a 300-ton mill is "pretty good sized mill," although nowhere the size of the large smelters in northern Idaho. However, the proposed mill would be the largest in southern Idaho. "All I can say now is that it looks favorable," Black said, "but they have to prove to me there is 300 tons a day available over there." The proposed mill could handle a number of metals found in Idaho, including copper, silver, lead, gold and zinc ore. He said the mill would be a flotation plant which would produce on the average of one ton of concentrate from 30 tons of ore. The concentrate would be ready for the smelter and would be from 85 to 95 per cent pure, Black said. Although the Challis area location may not be as attractive as well roaded land, Black said the backwoods location may keep environmental groups from criticizing the mill. Black and Dankeo built a custom mill at Keremos, B.C., 250 miles east of Vancouver on the Washington-Canada border in 1967. That mill cost $1.8 million to construct, he said. Custom mills can be feasible, but only if great amounts of ore over a period of five years can be guaranteed each day, he said. Gordon Reid, a land planner with the Challis National Forest, said Monday that L.L. "Andy" Anderson, developer of the site of the Clayton Idaho Mining Association, has discussed the mill proposition with the US Forest Service. Reid said the forest service works under the mining law of 1872, which allows a person to stake a mineral claim and maintain it as long as assessment work is done each year. A mill site can be filed on any valid claim, Reid said, depending on the number of claims. He said the forest service makes individuals detail operating plans on federal land. Cut air and water pollution is generally monitored by the state health and welfare office, he said. The forest service does conduct some water tests, he said, to make sure streams are within the anti-degradation clause. He said two other small mills in addition to the long-time Clayton silver mill are being constructed. He said Livingston mill is being constructed in Thompson Creek and a small forbes mill is starting in Garden Creek, "above Challis."

Teachers salaries raised at Jerome

JEROME — Jerome school teachers will receive an average 8.5 per cent salary increase plus other benefits they have requested. Negotiations between the teachers team and the school district team ended Tuesday night after three meetings, with both sides in complete agreement. Formal adoption of the agreements by the Jerome School Board will not be made until Tuesday morning during a special meeting. Judications are that the trustees will accept the six proposals worked out by the negotiating teams. All board members have been present at the three negotiating meetings and Tuesday night board members indicated their approval. In the first session, John Andrew presented a six-item proposal of teacher demands which were slightly modified upward by the district team at the second meeting and finally accepted by both sides at the third meeting. Andrew asked Tuesday night if a master contract should be drawn up and signed by both sides. "I question this because some items that have been set up between the superintendent and teachers in the past have been taken away," Alvin Chojnacky, spokesman for the district, said he did not think such an agreement was necessary since the district has recognized the teacher association as the legal spokesman for the teachers and the agreement will become a part of the district's policies and can only be changed upon approval of both sides. Andrew said the teachers were in favor of the agreement as was indicated by the vote, 83-1 in favor of the contracts. According to Andrew, the Jerome Teachers Association has 87 members out of the 111 teachers in the district. However, Andrew noted some of the teachers were not happy with the coverage they were getting from Blue Cross and requested the district to look into other insurance companies which may be able to provide better coverage for the same price. Judy Schierman, district negotiating team member, said several insurance companies have been in contact with the district and have obtained facts and figures and will be presenting proposals to the superintendent "so the matter is being looked into." Andrew said he has received some "black over how-far-the-two teams came to an agreement." "I've been asked why we didn't go far more since the board was so willing to agree." "I'm sure you have had the same problem with people who feel you have been too generous," Andrew said. Andrew said he thought it should be said that several months of ground work were done before the negotiations ever began. "It's been a matter of good preparation by both sides going into the formal meeting which is why this hasn't dragged on for weeks." Chojnacky concurred with Andrew, noting the teacher negotiating team has been fair and honest in its presentation as was the district. The final agreement provides for a salary schedule that increases the base salary from $7,600 to $8,000, graduated in a 3 per cent increments, addition of another salary step of a B.A. plus 5 college credits and an 11th step on the B.A. plus 10 for an average increase of 7.6 per cent, bringing the total average to 8.5 per cent with the agreement by the district to pay an additional $7 on Blue Cross payments for the teachers. Included in the agreement is a guarantee by the district to try to establish uniform duties in all elementary buildings, giving elementary teachers a half-hour break away from students. A third day of personal business leave with the visual equipment for classrooms and more workshops or classes given on a collage or non-credit basis were also included in the final agreement.

Crop progress, field work normal in Idaho

BOISE (UPI) — A summary from the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service observed that crop progress and field work is near normal for this time of year.

Soil-moisture supplies are adequate in most areas. Field activities while delayed for wheat by midweek rains last week were active in all lower elevations of the state, particularly in the southeastern and southwestern areas of the state.

In North Idaho about 14 per cent of the spring crops have been planted. Winter wheat appears lighter than last year.

Calving has progressed normally. Conditions for weaning and lambing have been very favorable in most of the state. Some sheep were moved to early ranges and in the southeastern area, shearing has made good headway.

Supplies of hay were reported short in some areas and in the southwestern counties the spring grains were 50 per cent planted. About 10 per cent of the spring grain fields have emerged. Planting of potatoes was active and three-fourths of the sugar beets and onions were in the ground.

In the southeastern valleys, more than 25 per cent of the spring grains have been planted and potato and sugar beet planting has started in some areas. High winds caused soil erosion in local areas.

Field work in the eastern counties has been very spotty. Snow still covers much of the higher elevations and except for the timber sale, the ground is too wet to work.

Movement of seed potatoes from the seed producing areas to commercial areas of the state was reported heavy.

Hay supplies are generally adequate although there were some reports of shortages. Pasturing on a limited scale started at the lower elevations.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — The Dominican government Tuesday accused the Philippines of driving down the sugar price by recent sales to the United States, setting the stage for a world-wide price war.

In a strong note to the Philippine government, the Dominican Sugar Authority, a government agency, insisted that the Philippines "take immediate steps to clarify the situation."

"The Philippines is the largest exporter of sugar to the United States."

Recent sales of Philippine sugar to two U.S. companies, and the prospect of additional sales, will drive the world sugar price below 10 cents a pound, considered a disaster-level for the world's sugar producing nations, the message said.

According to the Dominican government, the Philippines had locked a few weeks ago in a stockpile this year's production rather than sell it at the current price, which at that time was about 15 cents a pound. On the basis of this report from the Philippines, the Dominican government announced it would withhold this year's production from the market to await a price improvement to at least 17 cents.

The note referred to two recent contracts signed by the Philippines, apparently in contradiction to the stockpiling policy. The contracts committed the sale of a total of 1,150,000 metric tons over the next five years to two U.S. importers, Suerst and Great Western United.

The Philippines also have committed 200,000 tons to the Soviet Union, 50,000 tons to Romania and 50,000 tons to China, according to the Dominican agency.

While the terms of the sales to the U.S. companies were not made public, the Philippine communiqué said, "Reports confirm that the consequences have been to drive down the price." The New York market closed at 13 1/2 cents Monday.

The Dominican agency said that following the deal, Suerst counseled other U.S. buyers to expect lower prices. Before the Philippine sales, the Dominican authorities had anticipated an improvement in the price later this year as U.S. inventories were reduced and demand increased.

"Under the Philippine government makes an effort to put an end to these reports, we predict disastrous consequences for the market, including a useless and serious price war among producing nations."

Contract accord reached

DENVER (UPI) — Using Gov. Richard Lamm as a messenger, negotiators for Great Western Sugar Co. and growers Wednesday ended six hours of discussion by agreeing on a contract for 1976 sugarbeet crops in five western states.

Lamm, who urged both parties to compromise, carried proposals back and forth between rooms in his executive mansion where the talks were held. He said the new contract calls for per-ton payments established in 1975 and delays a beet provision until 1977.

"That is the kernel, the heart of the compromise," said Lamm. "This was an example of two very good sides reaching out to each other for agreement." Lamm called negotiators for Great Western and the more than 4,000 growers "men of good will."

G. Michael Basswell, board vice chairman of Great Western, said the new contract would be drafted by company officials before details were released.

He credited Lamm and state Sen. Hank Brown, R-Greeley, for mediating the settlement. He said Great Western officials did not intend to negotiate at first but "found a willingness on both sides to compromise. Everybody gave a little."

The negotiations, monitored by a representative of Nebraska Gov. J. J. Exon, began in the managers' salaries—a large, unrelated, issue—officials caucused in separate rooms after two hours of joint talks.

Exon and Lamm said the settlement was possible because Great Western agreed to pay 1975 per-ton rates until a provision calling for reduced payments on low grade beets until 1977. Lamm said the purely provision would be worked out by December.

Dehydrated potato use may expand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dehydrated potatoes may be added to the federal food commodities program for worldwide use if current tests and other factors prove favorable, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday.

A state department official, responding to an earlier request that dehydrated potatoes be supplied to disaster victims of the earthquake in Guatemala, told Church that while this request was "inadvisable" other plans are being considered.

Church said the Office of Food or Peace has tested a potato granule fortified with non-fat dry milk in two Latin American countries and more tests will be run in other parts of the world.

He said the Agency for International Development identified that if it future tests prove as favorable as those in Peru and Honduras and if the products are competitive with current stockpiles, dehydrated potatoes will be added to the U. S. commodity program.

Spud use told

BOISE (UPI) — Processing of the 1975 potato crop in Idaho and Malheur County, Ore., through April 1 used 36.12 million pounds of raw potatoes. The state crop and livestock reporting service said.

Of the total processed, 28.84 cwt. were Idaho potatoes and 7.28 cwt. were produced in other states.

Processing in Idaho, Malheur, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington totaled 71.29 million cwt. of raw potatoes to April 1 or nine per cent less than the comparable period a year ago.

Soviet grain purchases may pass 8 million metric ton contract

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite forecasts of a good growing year in the Soviet Union, some senior Agriculture Department officials believe the Russians will need more than the maximum of 8 million metric tons of grain they have agreed to buy in the year starting in October.

These officials believe the Russians will have difficulty in attaining the reduced target of 205 million tons of grain they had set for the 1978 growing season.

Their view puts them in disagreement with a report on the agricultural situation in the Soviet Union which says the Russians should have little trouble meeting the goal if growing conditions are good.

The report, issued by the department's Economic Research Service, says "a goal of 205 million tons of grain in 1978 seems realistic given a reasonably normal growing season" and that the projected yield for this year "is assumed to represent the high grain harvest possible if weather is near normal."

The ERS report projects a sharp recovery for Soviet grain crops, but there are other factors which could contribute to increased grain purchases by the Russians.

One is poor winter crops because of dry weather after they were planted last fall, as well as insufficient snow in some parts of Russia to protect the crops from severe cold in February.

Another is the depletion of Soviet grain stocks because of last year's extremely poor crop. The ERS estimates Russian use of grain in the 1975-76 season at 173 million tons. This is about 43 million tons more than they harvested in 1975.

Total Russian grain imports were about 26 million tons at the end of February with about half that figure coming from the United States. The ERS said the outlook was for further reduction of stocks to help make up the deficit.

The Russians have already said they will buy between 17 million metric tons of wheat and corn in the next fiscal year, but there is a provision in the agreement for the negotiation of further sales.

So far, the Russians have bought more than 13 million tons of the two grains from the American 1976 harvest.

This year's target of 205 million tons is 10 million tons below the target that was set for last year. A new five-year plan goes into effect in Russia this year. Its goals are less ambitious than in the past with an average of 215-220 million tons a year.

The ERS report also raises the possibility the Russians may be in the market for meat imports this year. It says the outlook for livestock production is "bleak" in at least the first half of the year.

This is because large numbers of animals were slaughtered last year because of the shortage of feed. Meat production could thus be 1.5 million to 2 million metric tons below the 15.2 million tons of last year.

Protest procedure available

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ranchers who are unhappy with new language in federal grazing permits do have an avenue of protest without jeopardizing their preference rights, Sen. James A. McClure said Tuesday.

McClure told his office from Idaho, where he attended the funeral of his mother, that the grazing permits themselves must not be altered and that an accompanying letter of protest may be submitted with the signed permit.

"The forest supervisor is obligated to respond to each letter, providing the letter details specific objections."

McClure said he will meet with ranchers in Salmon next Monday evening and also plans to discuss the possibility of introducing legislation to take some of the burden off ranchers because of hikes in grazing fees.

San Francisco was founded as the pueblo of Yerba Buena in 1834, acquiring its present name in 1847. The San Francisco Bay area was visited in 1769 by Spanish Sgt. Jose Ortega. The city proper has a population of less than 700,000 but it is the center of a metropolitan area of more than three million, sixth largest in the United States.

Sugar grower terms labeled 'unfair'

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — An official of the Louisiana Farm Bureau says contracts offered midwestern sugarbeet growers by the Great Western United refineries are unfair and against the interests of domestic sugar production.

Ferdinand Falgout Jr., chairman of the sugar advisory committee of the Farm Bureau, said Louisiana cane growers last year rejected similar proposals from Great Western, one of the world's largest sugar refineries.

"Louisiana cane growers will not accept any participating contract offer by Great Western, and we fully support the beet growers," he said.

"Great Western owns the Goldenrod Henderson refinery in Reserve, La.

Falgout said the contract offered by Great Western proposes a $1.50 per ton reduction in the price to farmers, while asking them to pay a percentage of freight rates and assume part of the refining losses.

"Sugarcane growers in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming will not plant large areas this year if there is no contract, he said.

Falgout said Great Western had made arrangements to buy large quantities of raw sugar duty free from the Philippines to compensate for the loss in domestic production.

"This action by Great Western shows a total lack of concern for American growers and the domestic sugar industry," he said.

He said the Farm Bureau has asked President Ford to impose tariffs on countries selling sugar in the United States at prices under domestic levels.

The U.S. imports about 40 per cent of its raw sugar duty-free, Falgout said.

13 seal hunters rescued by ship

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — A Norwegian ship Wednesday rescued 13 seal hunters marooned on an ice floe for almost 24 hours in the freezing Arctic Ocean when they were forced to flee their sinking vessel.

Their condition was not known.

The Air-Sea Search-and-Rescue Center at the northern Norwegian city of Bodø said the men were rescued by the seal hunting ship "Kvitingen" in an area between Greenland and the island of Jan Mayen.

"An American rescue helicopter from Keflavik, Iceland, also arrived on the scene and it is possible that it may take them back to Norway later tonight or tomorrow," a rescue official said.

AF Dam major contract bids open

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Bids on the major contract to rebuild the American Falls Dam will be opened April 23, state Sen. John Barker said here Monday.

The president of the American Falls Reservoir District No. 1 was guest speaker at the Castleford Men's Club luncheon meeting at the Red Barrel. He said the eight bidders represent "some of the biggest contracting firms in the world."

Barker said some of the smallest equipment contracts which already have been awarded have run about $3.75 million, instead of the expected $4 million.

He is hopeful that the total cost of the project, estimated at about $44 million, may run less than that, particularly if the bonds can be sold for 75 percent interest.

Another boost in the cost situation for the new dam, Barker said, is that the reservoir district may get $5 million of federal money from a special fund designated by Congress under provisions of the new Transportation Act. This fund is earmarked "Federal roads over dams," Barker said Sen. James McClure, who was "in the decision" has indicated there is a good chance that this extra $5 million will be available for the roadway over the bridge.

Barker said at this time, 13 groups — plus the Bureau of Indian Affairs — representing 75 per cent of the state, have held teleconferences and signed contracts to bond themselves for the cost of the replacement project.

Another 1 per cent have voted but have not officially signed the contract, he said, but the vote so far has been 80 per cent favorable for replacing the dam.

The agreement with the Idaho Power Co. provides the firm will pay 51 per cent of the first $28 million cost. Barker also reviewed agreements the directors have made with the Idaho Fish and Game Department to put $500,000 in a trust fund for fish raceways.

Several questions were asked by men's club members about whether irrigators who have not approved the project will lose their water rights.

Belfast gang sets fire to two boys

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A gang of 15 laughing and cheering Protestant youths attacked and set fire to two young Roman Catholic boys Wednesday as they played on a sports field in the Old Park area of North Belfast.

The boys, 12-year-old Jim Crawford and 10-year-old Bernard Lynch were recovering in a Belfast hospital today suffering from severe burns to the face and hands.

"All the boys in the gang were bigger than us," said Crawford. "They threw us were Catholics because I think some of them recognized us."

"The leader of the gang picked up a can of petrol he had with him and poured it over us," he said. "The others threw a lighted match on us, and they all ran away laughing and cheering."

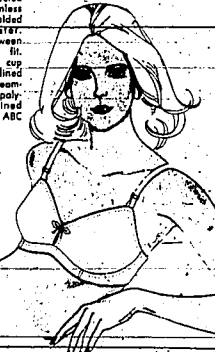

"My hands and hair were burning so I rolled over and over in the grass to put the flames out, but Bernard couldn't put himself out — he was really burning."

"Jim was very brave," Bernard said. "He threw his coat around me and rolled me on the ground and put the flames out. I couldn't do it myself."

Chicago officials to quiz mortician

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police said today they planned to confront a South Side funeral director with a picture of missing Florida stockbroker Estel Blevins in an effort to unravel a mystery involving a body pulled from the Chicago River and misidentified as Blevins.

Police believe Blevins, 32, Clearwater, Fla., posed as his brother-in-law to identify the body as himself and then had it cremated in order to collect more than $250,000 in insurance.

The Chicago Tribune printed a front page picture of Blevins today and another showing a South Side funeral director pointing to the picture and identifying Blevins as the man who ordered the cremation.

"This is the guy," McDonald was quoted as saying. "This is the man who came in here (McDonald Funeral Home) all business and talked to me eyeball to eyeball for a total of 15 minutes — never once blinked his eyes. This is the guy who said the man he was cremating was named Estel Blevins."

Citywide homicide chief John J. McLaughlin said his investigators planned to question McDonald again as soon as the FBI furnishes them with a photograph of Blevins.

Dileonardi said the Tribune funeral director, John J. McLaughlin, said his investigators planned to question McDonald again as soon as the FBI furnishes them with a photograph of Blevins.

McDonald He said he hoped to get a similar picture later today.

A nationwide search continued for Blevins who left his home March 22. Dileonardi conceded the man may have left the country and he was known to have "large amounts of money" with him.

The mystery body was found floating in the Chicago River March 25. Two days later, a man who said he was William Hamilton, Jackson, Mich., told authorities at Cook County morgue the body was that of Blevins.

Hamilton, who is Blevins' brother-in-law, told investigators Tuesday Blevins promised him "a piece of the action" if he kept "his mouth shut" and cooperated in the scheme. Hamilton said Blevins told him he went to the morgue and posed as Hamilton.

After the body was released, a mortgage lawyer, Arthur Stock of "Fingerprints" showed the dead man was Joseph Tallarico, 56, Chicago, who had died of a mixture of alcohol and morphine. Police believe he was dead before he hit the water.

McDonald said the man who came into his funeral home March 27 at first tried to arrange for a funeral. "He came in here and wanted to make it fast," McDonald said. "The man came in the 27th of March. My mortgage is due on the first of the month and the guy had a grand-in-hand — didn't ask too many questions."

"But I did think it was strange when he said, he wanted to bury this relative but when I called the morgue no body had been identified yet."

Later, McDonald said, when the body was identified, the man paid $985 to have the body cremated.

"Listen," McDonald said, "he fooled me and I'm not fooled easily. I've been in this business 17 years. He had a scheme and he used me. I hope they catch this guy and nail him to the cross."

Commission slates little change for Henry's lake

BOISE (UPI) — A group of eastern Idaho sportsmen urged numerous changes in the fish-management and regulations for Henry's Lake, but State Fish and Game Commissioners accepted only one of the major proposals.

Commissioners agreed to change the fish limit during the months of August and September, because of a waste of fish caused by the marshy lake resulting from the high temperatures of the water in the lake.

The commission adopted a proposal which would limit the catch to one fish from Aug. 1-Sept. 15.

The group, which said it represented nearly every sportsman in the upper eastern portion of the state, also asked the commission to change the hours of fishing and to increase the catch.

But commissioners felt they should keep the regulations adopted last year and take another look at the management of the lake after there was more research by department personnel.

Commissioner H. Jack Alvord, Pocatello, especially urged that instead of the 5 a. m. to 9 p. m. hours for fishing on Henry's Lake that they be extended by at least an hour to 10 p. m.

"One hour won't make that much difference," Alvord said.

The group urged that the hours be from 4 a. m. to 10 p. m. as they had been the previous year.

Alvord's resolution regarding the numbers of fish to be planted with the additional hour and the one fish limit during August and September was voted down 2-3.

Commissioners then approved a $2-a resolution by commissioner Will Godfrey, Boise, which would establish the fish plant as well as make the one-fish limit but keep the remainder of the regulations as previously approved by the commission.

The eastern Idaho group had requested that the catch be increased from three to five fish. They also asked the commission to approve planting of 1.2 million cutthroat trout, 200,000 brook and 24-million hybrid.

The resolution adopted by the commission kept the catch at three fish and recommended the planting of 800,000 cutthroat, 200,000 brook and 400,000-450,000 hybrid.

Kent Marlor, Rexburg, one of the sportsmen, told the commission that the plan the group was presenting was a compromise. He said it took into consideration all kinds of anglers.

He said if the group had to compromise it would agree to a limit of four fish. "It is absolutely necessary," Marlor said by not limiting the number of fish during the hot, summer months the department was "perpetuating waste."

Herb Pollard, department Fisheries Management supervisor, said limiting the catch to one fish without restriction on the type of gear used never been found workable.

"It's just as bad to kill them in the lake as to throw them in a garbage can," Pollard said.

He said if a lot of dead fish were found floating in the lake from anglers who had caught them and released them after injuring them, the department would "catch a lot of slack."

Spurs trip Nets in ABA playoffs

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Former Nets Larry Kenon, Mike Gale and Billy Paulitz came back to haunt New York Wednesday night, combining for 68 points and 32 rebounds to lead San Antonio to a 111-103 ABA playoff victory.

The triumph gave the Spurs a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven series with the next game scheduled for San Antonio Sunday.

Kenon, poured in 29 points and snared 16 rebounds. Gale chipped in with 22 points and 11 assists and Paulitz hit 18 points and grabbed 14 rebounds.

George Gervin had 17 points and Allan Briarson contributed 16 for the winners.

Kenon, Gale and Paulitz came to San Antonio last summer in a trade.

The Nets jumped to a 31-21 first quarter lead, but the Spurs cut the margin to 53-48 at halftime. San Antonio pared the margin further after the half and went ahead to stay on a 15-foot jumper by Kenon with five seconds left in the third period.

WBA chief demands title rematch

HONOLULU (UPI) — World Boxing Association President Elias Corvoza Wednesday demanded a rematch between Bill Lightweight champion Ben Vailfior and challenger Samuel Serrano for a neutral ground within 60 days.

Vailfior's fifth title defense here Tuesday resulted in a draw with referee Wilbert Minn calling it. Even at 70-70 and the two judges differing by 10 points in their scores, one awarding a match to Vailfior and the other to Serrano after 15 rounds.

Corvoza demanded the rematch in a Wednesday morning phone call to the WBA's championship committee chairman Brennan in Richmond, Va. Brennan then called Hawaii Boxing Commission President Robert Lee, who is also a member of that committee.

Lee said Brennan would review all reports on the match before deciding to initiate a conference telephone call in which championship committee members would take action on Corvoza's request.

"I am certain that a demand from the president would have quite a lot of influence on what the chairman and the committee decide to do," Lee said.

The tanky Puerto Rican challenger used his long reach to build up an early lead with his hit-and-run tactics but the champion unleashed a barrage of lefts and rights in the 13th round that gave him the final rounds and the draw which entitled him to retain his championship.

There were no knockdowns and the only blood trickled in the 11th when Serrano slashed Vailfior above the right eye.

Judge Walter Cho gave the fight to Vailfior 73-69 on the strength of his hard-hitting 14th and 15th rounds. Tomo Tombarra scored it 72-67 Serrano.

Corvoza scored the fight to go for Serrano.

"It takes two guys to fight," said Jimmy Rodriguez, the veteran trainer for Vailfior. "Ben kept saying after every round that if the guy would stop running it would be a better fight. But the didn't feel he had lost the fight."

"I think the officials vote by listening to the crowd too much," said Serrano's manager, Jose Cordero.

CSI takes triangular meet in Oregon

PORTLAND — College of Southern Idaho took a 3-2 victory in a triangular meet during a solid downpour Wednesday afternoon.

The Golden Eagles scored 67 points while Clackamas had 60 and Clark Community College of Vancouver.

"Due to the rain the pole vault and discus were abbreviated with CSI taking first in both. The Clackamas runways were not completed on the new layout so the long and triple jumps and intermediate hurdles were not held.

Despite the solid sheets of rain that swept the track, CSI turned in some good performances. Looking toward Friday's big encounter with Lane and Mt. Hood, Coach Jim Blaisdell withdrew sprinter Neal McIntyre from the 220-yard dash — so Kevin Blaisdell

$2 bill clutters

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — The sellers of part-mutuel tickets at the nation's racetracks, the return of the $2 bill is a minor annoyance, and they hope a short-lived one.

The big problem, in addition to the fact that ticket-sellers' cash boxes have no slot for the new bill, is that horse-players keep asking for them, which adds to the selling process.

Carol DeLall, in charge of part-mutuel sales at Keeneland Race Course here, said Wednesday, "we've got drawer space for one (ones), $5s, $10s, $20s, $50s and $100s. Our drawers took for about $600 worth of (twos, or 300 bills), Tuesday."

"We don't carry them in our bookrolls," he said. "We turn them in at the bank at the end of each racing day."

All-star ballot conjures up memories of 1957 'Red scare'

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The infamous "Red Scare" that haunted the 1957 baseball All-Star game was recalled today when the entire Cincinnati Reds starting lineup included on the 1976 National League All-Star ballot.

And, the Red-dominated ballot means that what almost happened 19 years ago could now come about.

In 1957, using the war cry "Vote early and often," Reds fans buffeted the All-Star ballot. It is hoped that the National League starters would be Reds.

It worked — until then-Basel Commissioner Ford Frick stepped in and kicked three dubious Cincy All-Stars off the team.

But, with all eight (pitchers excluded) Reds starters on this year's official ballot, the entire 1976 National League starting team that takes the field in Philadelphia July 13 could legitimately turn out to be wearing Cincinnati uniforms.

"Sure, we'll be encouraging our fans to vote for the All-Star team," a Reds official said after learning the welcome news.

"We might flash messages like 'Vote a Red ticket' on the scoreboard, but we won't come out 100 per cent and say stuff the ballot box," he laughed.

Let's just say, we'll encourage our fans to vote. We'll be saying, "Vote for your favorite player," but in essence, we'll be advocating, "Vote the Reds," he admitted.

In 1957, Cincy rooters mailed in more votes than fans from all the other National League cities combined.

Official ballots weren't needed then — a scrap of paper with the Reds lineup scrawled on it did just fine. In fact, a local radio station promoted a massive "Write-In" campaign and even took camp of mailing in the ballots.

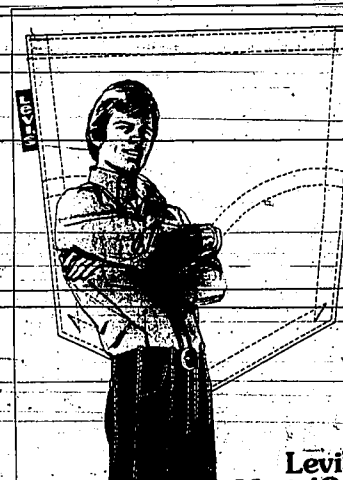

And of course, Reds fans who had voted "early and often" were upset when Frick booted out such "stars" as George Crowe, Wally Post and Gus Bell and replaced them with the outvoted Stan Musial, Hank Aaron and Willie Mays.

In the wake of the 1957 "Red Scare," fans lost their voting rights and for the next decade, managers, coaches and players selected the lineup.

Although fans won back the vote a few years ago, it is now harder to must because the official voting form — still be used — and Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn reserves the right to step in if he suspects hazy-panky.

An All-Star voting rule states, "The decision of the Baseball Commissioner will be final on all matters concerning the election."

But, just as the Reds made believers out of all other teams by winning the World Series last year, maybe Reds rooters can make a believer out of the commissioner this year.

Redlegs off to best start in history

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Both the oldest baseball team and their oldest player are off to their finest starts in history.

The Cincinnati Reds, the sport's oldest professional team, have jumped out to a 4-0 record this season, matching their previous best start ever, and Pete Rose, who celebrated his 35th birthday Wednesday, is off to his best batting start with 11 hits in the first four games.

The Reds, who had a season-opening four game win streak halted in 1970 by San Francisco, try for a club record five in a row Thursday night in Atlanta against the Braves.

The major league record for most victories to start a season is 10, shared by the Brooklyn Dodgers (1955), the Pittsburgh Pirates (1962) and the Cleveland Indians (1967).

Rose, who has had at least two hits in all four games so far, is 11-for-19 for a .579 average.

Even if Rose gets no hits in his next seven at-bats, he still would be off to the best start of his 14-year major league career.

Counting last year, Rose has hit safely in 18 straight games. The club record is 27, held by Ed Roach (1920, 1924) and Vada Pinson (1965).

Meanwhile, with Manager Sparky "Captain Hook" Anderson still jerking starting pitchers every game, the Reds are threatening to break their own dubious major league record of 45 straight games in which the starter did not finish.

Going last season, the Reds have now posted 34 straight incomplete games.

But hitting is the Reds' forte, and they've been unstoppable so far because of their booming bats.

"A pitcher just can't let up against this club," says Rose. "It's the damndest thing you'll ever see in your life."

Acknowledged Atlanta Manager Dave Bristol told Tuesday night's 5-1 Reds romp, "I've probably caught a pitch for a pitcher to walk because the Reds have hit 54 hits and scored 29 runs — an average of about 4 hits and 7 runs a game."

Peterson resigns Jerome football, basketball

JEROME — Ed Peterson resigned as head football and basketball coach at Jerome High School Wednesday. The move, heavily rumored for the past several months, ends six years of football and two of basketball under Peterson's reign. Contacted Wednesday night Superintendent Barry Christensen said both positions would be opened up to applications under the guidelines of Title IX. Peterson led Jerome into the Inter-district A-2 playoffs on three occasions. He indicated he would not seek any further coaching assignments. Christensen said his resignation was for "coaching duties" only.

Left-hander Don Hood picked up the win with 2 2/3 innings of relief and Dave LaRoche pitched the final inning to gain the save. Rick Manning led off the Cleveland sixth with a double, and scored on Duane Kuiper's single. Buddy Bell forced Kuiper at second. Boog Powell walked and George Hendrick scored Bell with another single. Rico Cartwright doubled in Powell, and John Lowenstein walked intentionally to load the bases before Jenkins balked Hendrick home with the tying run. Ashby singled down the first base line scoring Cartwright and Lowenstein and knocked Jenkins out of the game.

History, somehow, ignores Martin and Vicente Pizarro's role in 1492. The two brothers named and captained the Pinta and the Niña, the ships that accompanied Christopher Columbus on the Santa Maria during the New World discovery voyage. It wasn't Spain's Queen Isabella who put up the money for the voyage, it was Martin and Vicente. They were the bigger financial backers, contributing two of the ships as well as the costs of sailing them. Columbus was the fleet commander, all right. His pay ran about $300 a year. Martin and Vicente each got $1,000 a year. And the crewmen under all three of them made do with something in the neighborhood of $2.50 a month, each. It's true that Columbus was the controversialist who won the Queen's official sanction. But the bread-and-butter boys, the Pizarros, were the real worthies who came up with most of the floating stock and the bodies.

Q: "In Chinese, too, doesn't 'ma' mean mother?"
A: "In Mandarin it does. And it also means horse, depending on how you sling it."
Q: "The slower animal, the faster the heartbeat, right? Usually. But not in the case of the hare and the rabbit. Figure the quick hare has a heartbeat of 84 per minute. The beat of the slower rabbit runs 200 per minute."

An eighth of the people in this country have to get rid of their own garbage. They live in places where the boys with the competing trucks or wheelbarrows just don't show up.

ALLIGATORS AND PUMPKINS

Was reported that alligators are native to only two places in this world — the Gulf Coast of the United States and China's Yangtze River. What's also true is that the pumpkin was native both to this country and to China. Not squash, however, but through it's of the same family as the pumpkin. It's solely North American. Mystery is why two such living things as the alligator and the pumpkin flourished in so widely separated spots, while even a family member of one of them, like the squash, failed to travel until modern times. Pretty intriguing puzzle. I've awake at night sometimes, toasting, turning, thinking about it.

Studies show those college scholars in the top third of their graduating classes likewise wind-up in the top third of their companies' pay scales.

As previously reported, you can figure a natural blonde may have up to 120,000 hairs on her head. Calculate a brunette at about 120,000, more or less. But how do you account for the fact that the redhead only has something in the neighborhood of 60,000?
