Compulsory sterilization dropped in India because of facility lack

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The government today ruled out a nationwide program of compulsory sterilization because India does not have the necessary medical facilities to implement such a vast project.

Karan Singh, minister for health and family planning, said individual states could pursue a sterilization law, if it wished.

"It is clear that public opinion is now ready to accept much more stringent measures for family planning than before," Karan Singh told a meeting of health ministers from 11 states.

But he said administration and medical facilities in many parts of the country were still not adequate to handle a nationwide program.

As a result, Karan Singh said, federal legislation has been ruled out "for the time being." But when a state legislature decides the time is ripe "to pass its own sterilization laws," it may do so.

The minister suggested states use forced sterilization only for parents having three or more children and that be uniformly applied to government employees without distinction of caste, creed or community.

He said the central government would take steps to cut the annual birth rate in India — the second most populous nation in the world with 600 million citizens — from about 2.3 per cent now to 1.4 per cent by 1984.

To implement the plan, the government would:

- Raise the marriage age for girls from 16 to 18 and for boys from 18 to 21.
- Guarantee that states with a declining birth rate would not lose political representation or government funds disbursed on the basis of population.

Several states and the New Delhi administration have announced programs to punish government employees who have three or more children and refuse to be sterilized.

The legislature in the western state of Maharashtra voted in March to introduce a law forcing couples having three or more children to have one parent sterilized if the man is under 45 and the women under 55. The bill is being studied by a committee.

Soviet author reports violent incidents in trial

MOSCOW (UPI) — Nobel peace prize winner Andrei Sakharov said today his 53-year-old wife sustained severe bruises in a shoving match with officials at a disloyalty trial in Siberia.

Sakharov, 51, and his wife, Yelena, returned to Moscow today from Omsk, where they reported violent incidents at the trial of Mustafa Djemiliev, 31, a Crimean tatar accused of slandering the Soviet state.

Djemiliev received 2 1/2 years in a strict labor camp in a trial Sakharov called "appalling, illegal, an unbearable mockery."

He said prosecutors showed one witness pictures of the man's wife and daughter, telling him he would never see them again unless he testified. The man intimidated Djemiliev but refused to support his statements in court.

The trial coincided with a Moscow case in which human rights campaigner Andrei Tverdokhobov, 36, facing similar charges, was sentenced to two years of internal exile.

Asked about reports of unwillingness in Omsk,

Sakharov said the trial's opening Wednesday found "plainclothes citizens without official badges" — a euphemism sometimes used for KGB secret police officers — pushing people from the court entrance.

"Yelena shouted 'don't touch me or I'll hit you,' so the battle began," he said. "I struck one of the plainclothes citizens and also the militiaman who dragged me out of the door at his command. Yelena also hit somebody."

Sakharov, in a telephone interview with Western reporters, said the couple was taken to a police station for three or four hours, then released.

In the second incident Thursday, trial officials summoned Mrs. Sakharov to a room bearing the sign "Advocates."

"The people inside gave the impression of assassins, not advocates," Sakharov said. "They rushed at her and left many bruises on her arms. Again she was taken to the police station and demanded a doctor be summoned. The doctor proved she had bruises."

Czech leader retained

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Gustav Husak won reelection today as leader of the Czechoslovak Communist party, but the party dropped former President Ludvik Svoboda from the party presidency.

Husak's election was virtually assured Tuesday when Andrei Kirilenko, leader of the Soviet delegation to the Czech party congress, headed lavish parties on the Czech leader.

Husak, 63, replaced liberal Alexander Dubcek as party leader in April 1969 and his reelection showed that besides being the Kremlin's first choice, he is also the only man to command backing from both moderate and pro-Moscow party factions.

Svoboda became president in March 1968 at the height of Dubcek's liberal reform movement and held office during the "Prague Spring" and the Soviet invasion that followed it.

His departure did not come as a major surprise.

Husak took over the presidency in May 1975, when Svoboda was incapacitated by a serious illness. No presidential replacement was announced for Svoboda, leaving the body with eleven members.

Political observers said the party choice, announced at the end of the week-long congress, showed a continuing stalemate between moderates like Husak and pro-Moscow hardliners.

The observers said that in choosing Husak — the Soviets apparently had decided to forgo Moscow orthodoxy in favor of a leader with broader support.

Reenacts rites

Rome's churchbells quiet as Good Friday observed

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The bells of Rome's 600 churches fell silent as the center of Roman Catholicism observed Good Friday, the day marking the death of Jesus Christ on the cross.

Altars were bare and sacred images were draped in mourning purple in Roman Catholic churches throughout the world for the only day of the year when mass is not celebrated.

Church bells will not ring again until midnight mass on Easter Sunday to announce the resurrection.

The planned climax of the most solemn day of the Christian calendar was Pope Paul VI's traditional carrying of a light wooden cross in a torchlit way of the Cross procession against a backdrop of pagan Rome.

More than 100,000 pilgrims and an international television audience of millions annually watch the ritual as it is enacted in the colosseum.

Despite the painful arthritic condition of his knees that makes walking difficult, the 78-year-old Pope has maintained the last stations of the cross, re-enacting the steps to the crucifixion.

The Pope also carried out the Holy Thursday rite recalling Jesus' washing of the feet of the Apostles at the Last Supper.

Walking somewhat stiffly, the Pope put on a white apron, poured water from a silver pitcher on the bare right foot of each of 12 seminarians, wiped it with a linen towel and kissed it.

The 12, two from the Catholic Western rite and 10 from various Catholic Eastern Churches, sat on a raised bench in the Basilica of St. John's in Lateran as the Pope would not have to bend to his task.

POPE PAUL wipes perspiration from his face after washing and kissing the feet of 12 seminarians Thursday in a Maundy Thursday rite reenacting Christ's gesture to the Apostles at the last supper. (UPI)

Officers hurt in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Police said today that 17 policemen and an undetermined number of students were injured slightly in Thursday's street march by thousands of students protesting university reforms.

No one was hospitalized, police said. The best battle in the Left Bank student quarter involved youths wielding rocks and steel bars and police throwing teargas canisters; a police headquarters spokesman said.

Two hundred youths were picked up by police and questioned but not booked, police said.

Officers estimated the marchers at 20,000 students while organizers of the demonstration claimed 40,000.

Police also said 24 store windows were smashed, but leaders of left-wing student unions that called for the demonstration said the store damage and most of the fighting came from nonstudent hoodlums who joined the marchers.

University students in about 30 other towns throughout France also paraded Thursday.

The students, many of whom have been on strike for more than a week, were protesting government plans to channel more students into business studies and away from liberal-art programs, which bring them no employment.

The government has said it will go ahead with the reforms, but promised not to apply them until after further talks with university professors, a majority of whom voted against the program.

France has an estimated 800,000 students in 75 universities.

Pilgrims retrace Via Dolorosa

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Thousands of Christian pilgrims today retraced the Biblical route Jesus followed to his death, carrying large wooden crosses through the narrow, winding alleyways of the old walled city of Jerusalem.

Under sunny but somewhat hazy skies, the solemn Good Friday procession wound through the ancient Via Dolorosa (street of sorrow) from the point where Jesus was sentenced to where he was crucified.

Police said about 10,000 pilgrims took part in the procession, marking Christianity's most sorrowful occasion. They mingled with Jews on their way to the Walling Wall for sabbath and Passover services at Judah's holiest shrine.

Retracing the biblical route, the pilgrims stopped at each of the traditional 14 stations of the Cross, under the watchful eyes of police and troops stationed on rooftops and along the way to guard against possible Arab guerrilla attacks.

Reaching the top of the cobble alleyway, the pilgrims filed quietly through the pillared entrance to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, site of Mt. Calvary and the Tomb of Jesus, for brief services.

The solemn Good Friday procession will give way to the joyous Easter Sunday high mass in the Church, celebrated by the Latin Patriarch to the Holy Land, Msgr. Joseph J. Beltritti.

Rhodesian situation simmering uncertainly now

WASHINGTON - The Rhodesian situation seems to be simmering uncertainly these days...

New Morality have been preaching all these things. We heard the preachments as to Arigola and Mozambique...

friendly gesture toward Salisbury or Pretoria would set the liberal wolf pack howling.

ment because it is undemocratic but because it is white; the other nations of the world, from a variety of motives...

The editors of National Review took a look at the record: The Organization of African Unity is composed of 47 nations...

National Review's prophetic coincides exactly with my own: "The Zimbabwe regime that would succeed the present Rhodesian government is going to be one of those despotic, arbitrary, usually personalized, often tribal, frequently bloody political arrangements that are Africa's indigenous political products."

Whether the process is known as rebellion, revolution, liberation, conquest, coup, or reform, in Africa the cynical adage applies.

Sputter and shake won't save MVAG

Old bureaucracies never die, they just sputter and shake until someone comes along and pumps more money into them.

The Magic Valley Association of Governments is putting on a last ditch sputter and shake performance in an attempt to attract somebody's attention before the organization runs out of money June 30.

Three months ago county commissioners in the Magic Valley voted to pull the life support systems from the MVAG because they concluded the organization wasn't doing much good as a regional planning agency.

Now, MVAG's executive officers think their organization should be given one more chance to prove itself.

Why they think the ill-fated organization should be revived is a bit nebulous.

During the first year of operation the MVAG succeeded in spending a few thousand dollars, had a couple dozen meetings, and offered steady employment to three planners.

Disagreements between the Mini-Cassia area, the Northside, and Twin Falls County continually got in the way of the regional planning effort which was the main reason for having a Magic Valley Association of Governments.

The issue of land use planning has become so controversial most Magic Valley county commissioners are afraid or at least skeptical about joining any regional planning effort with other southern Idaho counties.

Under the right conditions regional planning is a good idea. Much of Magic Valley could benefit from a unified consistent land-use philosophy.

Unfortunately, the MVAG never assumed the role of great mediator on land use issues.

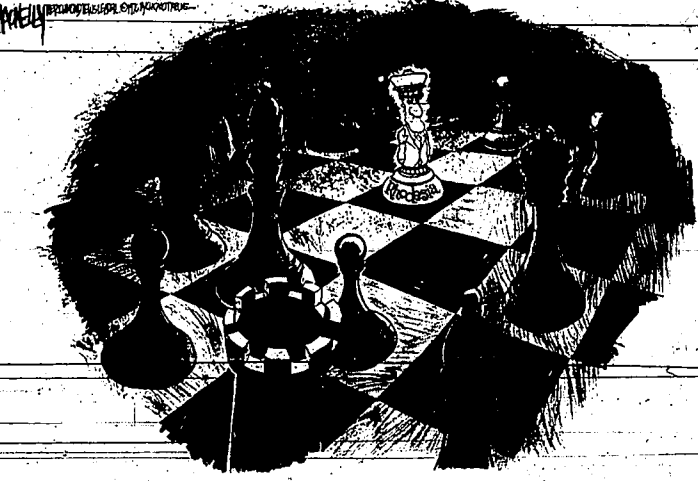

In two weeks the directors of the MVAG will present their case for keeping the organization going another year. They will have to show that the eight Magic Valley counties are somewhat closer to agreement on the need for a regional planning effort if MVAG is to survive.

Unless the counties have made a shift in attitude the justification for re-financing the MVAG is hard to see.

Simple offering generalities about MVAG's ability to get federal funding isn't enough reason to keep the organization going.

If the Magic Valley Association of Governments can function as an effective political unit then the group should continue.

If the MVAG only plans to duplicate its role from the last 12 months then goodbye and good riddance.

Towns meet plan problems in 'Petaluma precedent'

SAN FRANCISCO (S. LENS) - Plans to limit housing being long being fighting in many of California's suburban communities, but few have come into effect because building interests on the one hand, and groups working to end discrimination in housing on the other, have challenged their legality.

An impressive array of national interest groups lined up on either side of the issue. Concern is not limited to California. Many other towns and cities have been trying to limit their growth, with mixed results in the courts.

It imposes standards for builders to meet if they want to share in the allocation of the 500 new housing units permitted each year. Builders score "points" by submitting plans for houses that fit best with public facilities, blend unobtrusively with the landscape and add least to the volume of traffic.

Beauty to play Hughes

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI)—Actor Warren Beatty will play Howard Hughes in a movie, Warner Brothers said Thursday, announcing the second film in as many weeks based on the life of the billionaire recluse who died earlier this month.

"It will be one of the most important films to be produced by us in recent years," said Fred Astley, Warner's board chairman.

Discussions with Beatty, who also probably will produce the film, have been under way for six months, he said.

In state taxes, $4,395 was withheld and he put in for a rebate of $660—for a net tax payment of $3,735. In federal taxes, $14,962 was withheld and he applied for a refund of $1,939 for a net payment of $13,023.

curfew

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Joseph Ravolta has been a bartender since 1943 and he's never heard of a state law making it illegal to sell liquor after midnight.

"I've never heard of it," he said. "New Orleans is a place you can eat 24 hours a day or drink 24 hours a day. You can gamble, you can have it 'round' time, what do they mean, closing the bars at midnight?"

Not that police are ready to swoop down on the city's thousands of watering holes, but an 1886 state law does exist making it illegal to serve drinks over a bar after midnight.

"We also have a law on the books that says it's a violation to drive cattle on Canal Street from Chalhome to the river on Sunday," Ravolta said.

Ralphard said, "New Orleans is open 365 days a year and 24 hours a day. That law doesn't apply here."

The question was raised when Lafayette, La., passed a city ordinance exempting it from the midnight curfew and the state attorney general promptly ruled the city's exemption unconstitutional.

"State law or no state law, we're not going to close our bars at midnight," said Sonny Oelsner, manager of Pat O'Brien's in the French Quarter said.

"If you can't drink after 12, what would make New Orleans different from any other city?" he said.

"The city has always had a more liberal attitude toward temperance laws," Oelsner said.

"Like drinking in the streets," he said. "That's always been a big selling point here. People like to stroll down the street with a drink in their hands."

Non-enforcement of the closing law cut down on fun, Oelsner said it would not make good business sense.

"If you can't do the business why not stay open?" he said.

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, director for the posh Royal Sonesta Hotel on Bourbon Street, said closing bars at midnight would distort the image the world has of the city.

"It's a fun and frivolous town where everyone comes to enjoy themselves," he said.

Legally blind man to run race for research unit

NEW YORK (UPI)—One might say Tom Rongos of Honolulu is running for his life. A legally blind former New York state race-track ticket salesman, Rongos will take his place among 2,200 participants in Monday's Boston Marathon; a doctor and two nurses at his side during the 26-mile, 385-yard course.

Thursday, he trained for the event in Central Park and invited the news media to listen to his story.

Battling a retinal disease that is slowly robbing him of his eyesight and a coronary condition that clogged 95 per cent of three arteries, Rongos is running to earn money for a foundation that hopes to find a cure for retinitis pigmentosa.

Rongos learned in 1968 that he suffers from retinitis pigmentosa, an eye disease that causes tunnel vision.

A year ago in April, Rongos' health problems were compounded when doctors told him his arteries were clogged from years of improper dieting.

The exercise and strict dieting, prescribed to help clear up his heart condition, he said, put him on the race track and into the world of marathon running.

Since he began his "reconditioning program," Rongos has run in two other marathons, enduring a mild heart attack in one of them. He said he averages about 14 miles daily in his training.

Strict dieting and exercising gets the credit for his making medical history, he said.

Nathan Perkin, director of the Longview Research Institute in Santa Barbara, Calif., said Thursday Rongos will go down in medical history as the first man, after having three documented closed arteries.

Evidence backs 'giant' blow-up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New evidence was reported Thursday supporting the controversial idea that a giant planet blew up between Mars and Jupiter several million years ago.

Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern, an astronomer at the U.S. Naval Observatory, traced backward the paths of 60 comets with very long orbits and found that nearly all intersected at a point in the asteroid belt.

This, he told a meeting of the American Geophysical Union, "strikingly confirms" the calculation of a Canadian scientist who theorized four years ago that a planet 90 times the size of Earth existed between Mars and Jupiter around 15 million years ago.

"Taken in conjunction with the already existing evidence, these new results leave little room to doubt that a Saturn-sized planet did exist between Mars and Jupiter 15 million years ago and then violently exploded," Van Flandern wrote in a report prepared for the meeting.

In an interview, Van Flandern said his studies indicate the missing planet may have disintegrated more than 6 million years ago — a time when mammals walked the Earth.

He suggests that the comets he analyzed came from that planetary breakup and were propelled by explosive force in all directions to become erratic satellites of the Sun. He said chunks of rock that make up the asteroid belt presumably also are debris from the planet.

Astronomers have long theorized that the asteroid belt might represent the remains of a planet. But that was just speculation until Dr. M.W. Owen, of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, reported in 1972 that calculations of the orbits and masses of the existing planets showed that a massive planet once existed between Mars and Jupiter.

Chinese helpful to Los Angeles

WASHINGTON — Reported Chinese success in saving thousands of lives in an earthquake disaster last year in the provincial city of Hancheng may provide some lessons for Los Angeles, which faces the prospect of a similar disaster. Earthquakes are common in China, but the devastation in the Hancheng area of northeast China was different, according to Massachusetts Institute of Technology geophysicist Frank Press.

Desert north of Los Angeles. But no one knows quite what to do about it.

Indian water rights 'greatest' favor yet

NESPELEM, Wash. (UPI) — Al Aubertin, Chairman, Colville Confederated Tribes, said Thursday the U.S. District Court ruling giving Indians sovereignty over their reservation waters is "the greatest decision in favor of Indians that I have seen since the 1850s."

Aubertin said Judge Marshall A. Neill's decision "also helps establish the sovereignty of Indians over non-Indians entering the reservation for any purpose."

The state is expected to appeal the precedent-setting ruling removing the state from its claimed jurisdiction.

The implication of the ruling is crucial.

The state for years has attempted with little success to halt the sale of tax-free liquor by Indians to non-Indians.

Thursday's legal opinion stems from the arrest last June of four non-Indians fishing at a reservation lake with only tribal fishing licenses.

The tribes contended, and Judge Neill agreed, that the state had no jurisdiction over fishing on the confederated tribes' 1.3 million acres.

The state argued that the tribe must abide by state game laws for non-Indians.

About a year before the arrests, the tribe set up its own fish and game department and issued licenses on the reservation but the state contended that tribal regulations applied only to Indians.

He told a session of the American Geophysical Union here Wednesday night that "the Hancheng shock may well be the most significant earthquake in history, because it was predicted within a few hours. As a result, more than a million people were evacuated from their homes, and tens of thousands of lives were probably saved."

"The origin of this uplift and its possible relation to a forthcoming earthquake is not understood but it clearly bears watching," the director of the U.S. Geological Survey, Dr. V. E. McKelway, told the scientific gathering earlier this week.

While he is seeking more money to monitor this activity, federal and state officials are pondering ways of preparing the public for the worst, even though there is no way to know exactly what that might be.

The Chinese experience "shows what is possible," according to Press.

The issue of earthquake prediction and preparedness is becoming increasingly less academic, because of geological surveys and studies that an uplift of as much as 10 inches has occurred across a large stretch of the Mojave

Standard letters sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Rate Commission Thursday recommended letter envelope sizes be standardized so the Postal Service can sort and route them by machine at less cost.

If the regulations are adopted, mailers would have to pay a surcharge for oversize envelopes. Under size envelopes would be banned.

The Postal Service has sought standardized letter sizes since 1973 because letters cost more to handle if they are too big or too small for its processing equipment to handle. The commission, an independent agency Congress set up to rule on postage rates and other Postal Service policies, said its recommendations are a first step toward basic mail classification reform.

Churches

Church follows ancient tradition
TWIN FALLS — Easter celebration at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension follows the ancient Christian tradition. The services will begin on Easter evening with the kindling of the Paschal Fire, the lighting of the Paschal Candle, Holy Baptism and the Easter Vigil (a series of scriptural readings in final preparation for Easter Morn.).
 The services will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday.
 The final Eucharist will be at 8 a.m. The full Choral Eucharist together with the singing of the Elyotring Cross for the children will be at 10 a.m. Nursery care for small children will be provided at this service.
 The choir offerings under the direction of Helen C. Allen, accompanied by Mary Howell, organist, include "O Morn of Beauty," "Stabat Mater" and "Chippie's setting of 'Cantata'."
 Pastor Fr. Albert E. Allen, rector of ascension, will preach on the Easter story as a Paschover theme.
 The Easter communion will be distributed to sick and shut-in parishioners on Easter Monday and Tuesday.

Conference scheduled in Twin Falls
TWIN FALLS — The United Pentecostal Church Idaho State Conference will be held at the Calvary United Pentecostal Church, 450 Third Ave. W., on Tuesday and Wednesday.
 The conference will be held both days from 10 a.m. to noon with a short recess and resuming from 2 to 4 p.m.
 The conference will cover business and have an evening evangelistic service with special choir services. Rev. Norman Rutzen, Caldwell, district superintendent, will be in charge of services.
 Rev. J. Chambers, general superintendent of the United Pentecostal Church, Hazelwood, will arrive at 7:30 p.m.
 Pastor J. L. Chender says the United Pentecostal Church has a large foreign missionary division and home missions department and build a church everyday and somewhere. He also said the harvest program which is heard on KLIX every Sunday at 8 a.m. is heard worldwide.

Duo presents concert at Valley
TWIN FALLS — A well-known religious singing duo, Henry and Hazel Slaughter, will perform Monday evening at the Valley Christian Church.
 The concert will begin at 7:30. Seating capacity is being enlarged and the doors will open at 6 p.m.
 The Slaughters have appeared many times with the Gathert, Trio. Slaughter is a composer and it is expected the newly published song he wrote with Dr. Carlton Buck of Twin Falls will be in the program.
 Slaughter has a publishing house in Nashville, Harvest Time Publishers.
 Dr. Buck says, "Although the program Monday night is being sponsored by Valley Christian Church, the public is warmly invited and welcome so long as room in the building permits."

Medical studies pushed

CHICAGO — The chief rabbi of the British Commonwealth urged a group of Chicago Jews and medical staff members to study the traditional Jewish positions on modern medical questions like abortion, euthanasia, birth control, suicide, organ transplants and homosexuality.
 "Jews have received 20 percent of all the Nobel prizes for medicine, the result of a long tradition of Jewish doctors going back to the Middle Ages," said Rabbi Immanuel Jakobovits, one of the world's authorities on Jewish medical ethics.

"Paramount—in this century of association between Jews and medicine in the Western world has been the emphasis on ethics," the rabbi said in a talk last week.
 "Therefore it is inconceivable that there is still not a single chair in Jewish medical ethics at any university or medical school in the world, not even in Israel."
 The rabbi was invited by Michael Reese to give the first Morris L. Parker Memorial Lecture named for the late surgeon and medical educator who was a member of the hospital staff for more than 50 years before his death last year. Dr. Parker pioneered many surgical techniques and concepts, and maintained a strong interest in Jewish affairs.

Jesus arose from grave

(Editor's note: This last article in a series is taken from "Good News for Modern Man," the New Testament in Today's English Version of the Bible.)
 After the Sabbath, as Sunday morning was dawning, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to look at the grave.
 Suddenly there was a strong earthquake; an angel of the Lord came down from heaven, appeared with lightning and his clothes were white as snow.
 The guards were so afraid that they trembled and became like dead men.
 The angel spoke to the women: "You must not be afraid," he said. "I know you are looking for Jesus who was nailed to the cross. He is not here; he has risen, just as he said. Come here and see the place where he lay. Quickly, now, go and tell his disciples: 'He has been raised from death, and now he is going to Galilee ahead of you; there you will see him.' Remember what I have told you."

 So they left the grave in a hurry, afraid and yet filled with joy, and ran to tell his disciples.
 Suddenly Jesus met them and said, "Peace be with you." They came up to him, took hold of his feet, and worshipped him. "Do not be afraid," Jesus said to them. "Go and tell my brothers to go to Galilee, and there they will see me."

Mass sterilization scored

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Leaders of India's Hindu but vocal Roman Catholic population announced their official opposition to forced sterilization anywhere in the country, four churchmen said.
 "Mass sterilization has all the appearances of reducing human persons to guinea pigs or objects at the mercy of an imperial state," a working paper prepared for the Catholic Hospital Association of India said.
 Compulsory sterilization attacks the basic values of a family and reduces the couple and their mutual relationship to a mere economic function," the working paper added.
 The director of the hospital association, Rev. Emmanuel A. Pallikunnen, said in an interview that representatives of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of India, the top Catholic church group in the country, unofficially expressed their opposition to compulsory sterilization during a recent meeting with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.
 Mrs. Gandhi was reported to have been "sympathetic" to their complaints but made no commitments.
 About 11 million of India's 600 million population is Catholic, but Mrs. Gandhi has often praised the achievements of the Christian community in the governing ministry of Indira Gandhi and the Catholics have more influence than their numbers would indicate, especially around the cities of Bombay and Calcutta.

 The chief minister of Maharashtra, the western state that includes Bombay, announced three weeks ago his government would soon introduce legislation providing for compulsory sterilization of people having two or more children.
"Love thy neighbor" topic study
FILER — Mrs. Lois Anderson presented the opening devotional service of the Peace Lutheran Women's Missionary League at its meeting in the church.
 Mrs. Reuben Lierman led the topic study on "Love Thy Neighbor — In Spite of Everything," noting that it takes understanding, patience, love and, most of all, a sense of humor to overcome the little problems that creep up between neighbors, but that it is possible and worthwhile to love your neighbor, in spite of those minor problems.
 Mrs. Hilda Wyatt was a guest. The group decided to furnish the cookies and drinks for vacation Bible school. Delegates who attend the LWML Convention at Salt Lake City will give reports at a following meeting.
 The May meeting will be guest night with the Kimberly LWML as invited guests.
 Mrs. Del Butterfield and Mrs. Inez Schlang served refreshments.

your health

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D. Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 49-year-old woman. For the past year and a half I have been having nosebleeds. Sometimes the bleeding is heavy.

Nosebleed causes concern

Sometimes there is an ulceration that requires cauterization. Or it could be the nasal membranes are extra dry, resulting in crustation, the loosening of which causes the bleeding.

Persons with nosebleeds should not lie down, but should be seated with the head tilted slightly forward.

With your history of bleeding, you should be examined to rule out any of the possible causes mentioned.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 41 years old and have more strength and endurance than I had 50 or 30 years ago.

But is there anything that can invigorate my mind so that I would not constantly be lulled when I can't remember events that were important in my own and my family's life?

We have traditionally accepted some mental decline as a natural condition of aging. It need not be so.

The state of the arteries (hardening) is determined in part by hereditary and in part by nutrition.

There is an interesting book out on this subject, which discusses it much better than I can in this limited space.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any way a woman, who has had three normal births and then had her tubes tied after the last, could become pregnant?

You do have some strange notions about human physiology for a woman who has borne three children.

Birth control is highly relevant topic in today's society. Find out what you should know about it in Dr. Thosteson's easy to read book.

Citrus, poultry, beef exports hinted by Butz

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said today the United States was interested in exporting top quality "beef," citrus and "poultry" to Australia.

"Australia would take even a little of our top quality beef, and not insist on a complete ban," it would ease emotional and political pressures from our own growers on the question of export quotas," Butz told a news conference.

Butz said he realized the differences that existed between Australia and the United States on the matter of beef quotas but assured questioners that, in fact, Australia would have the same access as previously to the American market if exports occurred later in the year.

Butz earlier had discussions with Trade Minister Doug Anthony and Agriculture Minister Ian Stewart.

Butz said reports of severe drought in U.S.

wheat states had been exaggerated and a special winter wheat crop survey showed that although there was a decrease of 48 million bushels, the United States still had plenty to meet domestic requirements and export needs.

He agreed that the Soviet Union was likely to need more imported wheat in the coming months, especially feed grains if livestock and poultry were to be maintained following that country's own poor harvest.

Butz said the United States was not interested in participating in a new international grains agreement, because of the American experience of becoming the world's residual surplus holder.

He said the question of who controlled the disposition of surplus grain was critical and the United States was reluctant to have reserves of American grain controlled by an international body.

Probe by Curtis irks sugar firm

DENVER (UPI) — Great Western Sugar Co. officials and several sugar beet grower associations say Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., could best serve the industry by dropping his request for an investigation of recent contract negotiations.

"Although we now have a contract agreement that everyone can live with, there is one matter in which total satisfaction has not been achieved — freight rates," said a joint statement issued Wednesday.

"This item is one that has been a continuing roadblock in the path of contract agreements for years."

The statement said Curtis could be of "immense aid" by attacking the problem of freight rates which are set by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"We believe this would be of much greater value than would a Senate investigation," said the statement, signed by G. Michael Boswell, GWS vice chairman of the board, and Kish Glasuka, spokesman for another beet grower association in the Rocky Mountains.

Curtis said this week he was asking for an investigation into the negotiations which had been stalled prior to a six-hour session at the governor's mansion Tuesday and Wednesday.

The growers were threatening to plant alternative crops such as corn or beans if a new agreement was not reached.

"The new three-year contract will be substantially the same as the 1975 contract for the first year," the growers said.

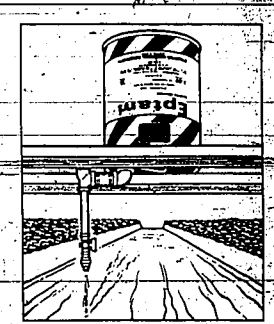

base rates for beets delivered in 1977 and 1978.

The officials said Lamm, state Sen. G.H. "Hank" Brown, R-Greeley, and Nebraska officials represented by Agriculture Director Glen Kreuscher aided in negotiating the settlement which involves 4,000 growers in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana.

Butz said he was only a messenger during the negotiations and said both sides were "reaching out to each other for agreement."

"They all were willing to realize the extent this matter has to the economy and the other states — that it was very vital. There are many jobs involved and it was in the public interest to reach an agreement."

Beet thinning time is time for Eptam

Apply Eptam herbicide in irrigation water after thinning sugar beets. That's it! Eptam controls weeds for the rest of the season. For bigger sugar beet yields and easier harvest.

It's easy. Meter Eptam into the irrigation ditch or sprinkler line. The water does the work of application. It disperses Eptam evenly throughout the soil to control grass and broadleaf weeds in your beets from thinning time to harvest.

Also, use Eptam in irrigation water to control weeds in alfalfa and potatoes. Always follow label directions carefully. Without weeds you'll have cleaner fields and bigger crops.

Sugar stockpiling policy for Latin lands remains

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — The Dominican Republic and other Latin American sugar exporters have changed their withholding this year's production from the market despite recent Philippine sales, the head of the State Sugar Council said Wednesday.

Council Director David Rodriguez said the nation would pursue its policy of stockpiling sugar to await improved world prices. He said he had received reports from other members of the Latin American Sugar Exporters Association they would also continue the policy.

On Tuesday, the Dominican Republic sent a strong note to the Philippine government protesting last week's sugar sales, which the Dominican authorities said could drive the world price down to less than 10 cents a pound.

The Dominican government had adopted its stockpiling policy when the world price was about 15 cents, and announced it would be sold until the price went up to at least 17 cents. This week, the price on the New York exchange has fluctuated around 13 cents.

The Dominican position, expressed in its note, was that the decision by the Philippines to break the international boycott could spark a disastrous price war among sugar producing nations.

According to the Dominican report, the Philippines signed contracts to supply 1,750,000 tons of sugar over the next five years to two U.S. importers, Sureset and Great Western Union.

The Dominican authorities said the Philippines had also committed 200,000 tons to the Soviet Union and 50,000 tons to Romania and China.

The Dominican Republic, which expects to produce 1,500,000 tons of sugar this year, depends on sugar exports for 65 per cent of its foreign earnings.

Economic observers said that while the government had set a 17-cent-a-pound floor for resumption of sales, they likely would sell at least small lots if the world price rose to 16 cents to help offset the immediate economic bind created by the boycott.

Industry officials have admitted the warehousing of anything more than 500,000 tons of sugar would create serious logistical problems, while the government has already had to offer special guarantees to commercial banks to preserve their sovereignty during the no-sale period.

Grass seed dealers hit by lawsuit

SPOKANE (UPI) — A class action suit has been filed against grass seed dealers, brokers and wholesalers by seed farmers who allege they are violating the Sherman Antitrust Act.

George Fair, Seattle, attorney for the farmers, said the seed firms are being sued for what he charges are anti-competitive practices by conspiracy, boycott and exercise of monopoly power in the grass seed industry.

"What these firms and individuals have done," said Fair, "is to exclude competition in the grass seed industry."

Plaintiffs in the suit are McDonald Farms, Inc., Silzel Land & Corbin, and Lehn Ranches, Inc.

Firms named in the suit include Northrup King Co., Scott Seed Co. and Heart Seed Co.

The complaint charges that the price manipulation by the grass seed firms has been so effective that in the past few years the price paid to grass seed growers has remained relatively constant while the price paid by retail purchasers of grass seed has increased dramatically.

DI-SYSTON prevents stress set-back caused by sucking pests.

Dry beans are delicate short-season crops. They can't stand a lot of stress that robs them of vital early-season growing time. DI-SYSTON liquid or granular insecticide, applied as you plant, prevents stress-loss caused by thrips, aphids, mites and leafhoppers. Insect protection is inside seedlings the instant they emerge. And it lasts for weeks. Bean plants take off quick, and keep on developing the thick, juicy foliage essential for high yields of high-quality beans.

Mostly good news in consumer food prices

Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — Food economists see mostly good news in consumer food prices for the rest of the year.

With reports last week of good spring planting weather in southern states, food economists were cautiously hoping for only a 4 to 5 per cent price rise through 1976.

Economists say the big factor in keeping food prices down is the existence of large surpluses in many categories — accumulated because of good crops and reduced per capita consumption.

The biggest cloud on the food-price picture is the price of coffee, going up steadily with no end in sight. A disaffection from Brazil means that world coffee production could well be less than the amount people drink for the next three years, the U.S. Agriculture Department says.

Here — according to analysts at the Department of Agriculture — the Chicago of food prices are expected to be stable through 1976.

Exchange and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America — is the outlook for other foods.

Beef — the future market perked up in the last two weeks, indicating moderately higher prices coming. Much of the increases will be in hamburger cuts that have been plentiful because of a glut of grain-fed cattle. Some seasonal price decreases in October, November and December.

Chicken — frying chickens, which went for an average of 61 cents a pound in Chicago last week should drop slightly until the summer use and pricing peak, they decline slightly.

Fish — Prices have been zooming as consumers used fish instead of high priced meats. The rise should continue, with some slackening in the second-half as seasonal supplies grow. Frozen eel fillets was selling for $1.09 a pound last week.

Milk — Prices might have declined, but Earl Butz, the Agriculture secretary, and the USDA stepped in with increased U.S. supports. Little change until summer, then a gradual seasonal rise.

Eggs — Large grade A eggs were 79 cents a dozen last week and figured to remain high until Easter, followed by a drop off until the seasonal rise in the second half of the year.

Pork — High prices may drop around June, as larger supplies hit the market. Per capita consumption of pork last year was the lowest since the Depression year of 1935.

Tea — Normally a stable item, with constant supply and demand. But prices will probably rise because of higher processing costs and switches over from some coffee drinkers.

Potatoes — Current high prices to continue or get higher the next few months, then drop significantly in second half as new crop hits the market. The rule of thumb, says Larry Summers, an agricultural economist in the USDA research department, is that high prices in the volatile potato market rarely come two years in a row. White potatoes were selling for an average of 28 cents a pound last week in Chicago, according to the city Department of Consumer Sales, Weights and Measures.

Cooking oil — Prices probably will remain stable because of price competition to American soybean oil from Brazilian soybeans and Malaysian and African palm oil.

Margarine — Essentially same ingredients as cooking oil. Same outlook.

Sugar — Prices have fallen moderately since the 50-per cent jump in 1974 and 25-per cent last year. Probably will remain stable, or decline a little near the end of the year.

Canned vegetables — No tendency to cut prices, despite heavy inventories and good crops last year. Should remain stable, although a lot depends on this summer's weather.

Frozen oranges — Juiced bumper fruit crop last year, probably good crop this year should cancel out higher production costs and keep prices stable.

Bread — Hard to predict, as wheat cost is comparatively small, labor and marketing costs high. Prices will probably remain stable, despite some winter wheat failures.

Dust bowl looming for large share of world

Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Although it won't be as severe as the disaster that struck the American farm belt in the 1930s, a dust bowl looms for a large part of the world because of accelerated erosion, deforestation and increasingly serious flooding, an environmental expert warns.

In a grim assessment of what he terms land mismanagement in much of the world, Erik Eckholm predicts that, without far-reaching internal social and political reforms, poor countries face "catastrophic agricultural collapse."

"Only a combination of improved land use habits with a drastic slowdown, and eventual halt, in the population growth of Africa, Asia and Latin America can put off nature's day of reckoning altogether," Eckholm said.

While poor countries will bear the brunt of ecological disasters, their impact will be felt elsewhere, particularly in the United States, he said. "As countries lose the capacity to feed themselves, they will become increasingly dependent on North America for food supplies. This unhealthy trend will cause difficult economic and political problems for both rich and poor countries. In an interdependent world economy, the loss or degradation of arable land anywhere concerns everyone."

Eckholm, a senior researcher with the Washington-based Worldwatch Institute, said an exhaustive study of disastrous droughts in recent years shows they are invariably preceded by environmental stress.

Last year large-scale famine relief efforts took place in Somalia, Ethiopia and Haiti. The immediate cause of famine was drought in each case, but the stricken regions were "ecological disaster zones" well before the drought set in, he said.

Chemical stunts some grains

ABERDEEN — Testing the resistance of small grains to a chemical used to kill weeds in potato rows, researchers at the University of Idaho College of Agriculture found big doses of metribuzin caused stunting of some varieties.

Several varieties of barley escaped injury.

Dr. R. H. Callihan, assistant research professor of weed science, said that crops tested for their susceptibility to metribuzin included barley, wheat, oats and sugar beets. Barley proved to be the crop least sensitive to metribuzin carryover, and some varieties of barley showed a marked tolerance for the chemical.

Purpose of the UI research studies in 1974-75 was to determine metribuzin's possible effects on crops grown on soil that had been treated with the weed-killer during the previous season.

"Farmers must check the container label for restrictions on crops that may be planted after metribuzin treatment," Callihan said. "There may be some changes in the restrictions this year."

If the label permits the planting of barley following a treated potato crop, this would be the logical crop to grow in the event a metribuzin carryover problem is suspected. A carryover problem with sensitive crops could result from late treatment (after mid-July) or accidental over-application of the chemical in amounts exceeding the recommended dosage.

The University of Idaho tests indicated sugar beets would be a risky crop to grow on land with metribuzin residues resulting from late applications of excessive doses. Barley suffered less than wheat or oats — and sugar beets were most sensitive.

Varities of barley which were rated high in metribuzin tolerance were Pilotine, Caribou, Steelhead and Lead.

The presence of metribuzin caused damage to Steptoe, Tralli, Moravian III and Klages barley.

"We found no evidence of toxic carryover when metribuzin was applied to the recommended rate of one-half pound per acre," Callihan said. "This is a safe chemical, when applied properly. To avoid carryover, metribuzin should be applied early in the summer."

The UI scientist urged farmers to follow these three rules:

- Follow label directions carefully and don't exceed the registered dosage.
- Apply the correct amount of metribuzin by the end of June — or July 10 at the latest.
- Avoid planting sensitive crops after potatoes that have been treated with metribuzin. Be especially careful to plant only crops permitted on the label.

Callihan said further studies

Proper ale for Arabs produced

LONDON (UPI) — It took eight months, but Theakston brewery, known for its strong beer, has finally figured out a way to make ale for Arabs who do not drink.

Last year Saudi Arabia asked Theakston to invent a nonalcoholic beverage suitable for Moslem teetotalers.

Theakston, a brewery in Masham, North Yorkshire, handed the job to head brewer Hugh Curley. Eight months and thousands of bottles later, he came up with a drink that delighted Saudi taste-testers in the ancient city of Jeddah.

The beer contains hops, malt sugar and water from the Yorkshire Dales, but it lacks the yeast that reacts with sugar to give ordinary beer its alcoholic content.

Paul Theakston, managing director of the 149-year-old family-owned brewery, said, "With our reputation for strong ale, we didn't know if we could produce a non-alcoholic beer."

"I wasn't easy for Curley, because he takes a pride in producing real ale, but he did it in the end."

Theakston believes the beer could have a potential market in Britain, particularly among motorists — and children can drink the pint without any effects.

When you ask your dealer or applicator for Sorba-Spray, you know you're getting the genuine product. The Number One Follar Spray on the market today!

There is only one Sorba-Spray and only Leffingwell makes it! Sorba-Spray products are formulated by Leffingwell Chemical Company since 1903 — one of agriculture's major suppliers and formulators. More than 40 years were spent in the research and development of foliar nutritional spray products in the laboratory and in the field. Sorba-Spray performance has been tested almost every major crop and under a wide variety of area crop and growing conditions. Sorba-Spray is the result of this extensive research and testing program. Sorba-Spray products have an outstanding performance record. They have successfully demonstrated many times that they can effectively improve crop quality and increase crop yields.

And Sorba-Spray is safe to use and won't damage crops when used at recommended dosages. It is compatible with most pesticides. Sorba-Spray is also an excellent buffer for alkalizing spray water and eliminates the need for using a spreader.

Sorba-Spray nutrient, buffer and spreader is a product your dealer or applicator can recommend. He knows from his long experience in the use of foliar nutrient spray products, that Sorba-Spray has a proven record of dependable performance in practically all crops and crop growing areas.

Call your Leffingwell dealer for all the facts of Sorba-Spray products or write directly to us.

Wintry weather hangs on in MV

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert area: Decreasing clouds and snow this afternoon. Winds diminishing and partly cloudy tonight. Partly cloudy and a little warmer Saturday. Highs in the upper 40s Saturday with lows in the 20s.

The outlook for Sunday, warmer with a chance of precipitation. Highs in the 50s, lows in the 30s.

The outlook for Sunday, warmer with a chance of precipitation. Highs in the 50s, lows in the 30s.

Cloudy through Saturday with a chance of snow flurries over the mountains. A little warmer Saturday. Highs Saturday 45 to 45. Overnight lows 15 to 25.

The outlook for Sunday, partly cloudy and warmer. Highs in the 40s, lows in the 20s.

Gusty winds continue in the Magic Valley today as a winter-like storm continues. A cold front moved into the Magic Valley Thursday bringing gusty winds and rain.

Cold unstable air followed the front, producing wide areas of snow. Little improvement in the weather was observed this morning as gusty winds and light snow were reported in most areas of the Magic Valley.

Decreasing clouds, snow and wind are forecast for tonight with mostly partly cloudy conditions expected Saturday along with warmer temperatures.

Another Pacific storm now in the Gulf of Alaska is moving into the ridge of high pressure now along the West Coast. This should weaken the storm a little before it reaches the Magic Valley area, therefore the outlook for Sunday through Tuesday calls for slight warming with a chance of precipitation Sunday and again Tuesday. Highs will be in the 50s with lows 20s.

Spuds, grains advance

Commodity News Service said Maine spuds stayed mixed, with 75 point limit gains in the current crop May opposing declines of 31 to 39 points in new crop contracts. Trading in May was restricted by an overabundance of unfilled buy orders, causing sales to be allocated out of pools.

A rush to cover short positions as a result of Tuesday's bullish planting intentions report. As a result of the limit gains Monday's expanded trading limit will be 100. Cash prices of about 7.00 per cwt. in Maine provided underlying constructive support.

The increase in fall plantings was 3.5 per cent. With Maine staying the same at 12 million acres. Larger increases were expected in Western plantings.

Wheat closed with 10 to 11 cents gains, leaving most obstructions at a loss. In explain why. The trade followed corn and beans, and ignored rain changed. Corn rose first on the strength of heavy commercial buying, then short covering by commission houses and locals kept the momentum going.

Corn closed a quarter cent to 27 cents higher. Corn acreage in the planting intentions report was in line with expectations. Soybeans closed strongly, gaining 3 1/2 to 5 cents, meal finished 7 cents to 10 cents higher and soybean meal ended up 15 to 22 points. The bean market generally followed corn's pattern, and a late surge of short covering developed when there was a sharp decline in meal.

Live cattle posted modest gains in slow trading which consisted mostly of evening up before the cattle on feed report and the East weekend. Final prices were from 27 higher in April to 2 higher in distant February with most active June gaining 2 points.

Plant share sale sought

SALEM (UPI) — Portland General Electric Co. said Wednesday it is negotiating with two utilities for the sale of 20 per cent of its coal fired power plant, under construction near Boardman in Eastern Oregon.

Glen Bredemeier, a PGE vice president, said during a public utility commissioner's rate hearing that negotiations are under way with Idaho Power Co. and Pacific Northwest Power Co.

Live hogs closed just off the day's highs, up 30 to 75 points. In light of pre-holiday trading. Short covering, higher cash markets and a sizeable under-run at the six principal terminals produced an early rally. April closed at 49.97, up 45.07 points, while most active June gained 52 points, closing at 52.07.

Pork bellies advanced the permissible limit in May and August late in the session and other months approached their limits. Final prices were down slightly from the highs due to last minute profit taking. May settling 192 points' high and July gaining 185. Both 1977
