Nuke plant guard up after threat report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission disclosed Saturday it had ordered a nationwide security alert at the nation's 58 nuclear power plants. Midwestern police said they had word extremists might try to seize a nuclear plant.

"We have received some highly tentative, inconclusive information which had caused us to ask operators of nuclear power plants to make sure that their guard forces were particularly alert over the next several days," NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said.

He said plant security men were asked "to make sure their communications with their local law enforcement officials are intact."

Ingram declined comment on "the nature or source of the information" that put the nation's 58 nuclear power plants on guard.

But police sources in Illinois said police were alerted Thursday to the possibility that some extremist group might try to seize a power station by June 8.

Power company officials said extra guards were put on duty at the three Illinois power stations of the Commonwealth Edison Corp., the largest producer of nuclear power in the United States.

June 8 is the date of the next major round of presidential primary elections, with contests in California, Ohio and New Jersey and a huge delegate haul at stake. Debate over the safety of nuclear power production has become a hot political issue and it is on the ballot in California.

California's "Proposition 13" would require the legislature to certify the safety of nuclear reactors. If this and other conditions were not met, new plants would be prohibited and existing plants phased out.

In Trenton, N.J., a public utility spokesman said the security alert would last until "the date of the California primary." — June 8.

Some groups opposed to nuclear power on safety grounds have planned nationwide demonstrations next weekend, before that primary.

In addition, FBI director Clarence Kelley and other law enforcement officers have said they expect a surge in terrorist activity during the Bicentennial year.

"This is not the first of these low-level (power station) alerts," Ingram said Saturday. "We do not expect it to be the last of them."

Boston not bus test case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edward Levi Saturday ruled out Justice Department intervention at this time in the Boston school case, but President Ford told him to "continue an active search" for a Supreme Court test case of forced busing.

Levi said the department would take no action "at this stage" in connection with four appeals filed by Boston groups with the high court. But it will file a brief, as it usually does, if the court decides to take up the controversial Boston plan, he said.

In a statement released simultaneously at the White House, Ford instructed the Levi "to continue an active search for a case which would be suitable for judicial review." Ford had asked Levi to look for an appropriate case in which the Justice Department could join a challenge to court-ordered busing in desegregation schools.

Ford also said he would send Congress a message "at the earliest possible time" to recommend "legislative remedies to minimize forced school busing."

Ford said he would meet next week with Health, Education and Welfare Secretary David Mathews, Levi and other administration officials "to review other possible actions that can be taken to provide communities with assistance in achieving equal educational opportunity for all."

Solicitor General Robert Bork said the Wilmington, Del., desegregation case being appealed to the Supreme Court is "still under consideration. I don't know of any other cases that are that close to Supreme Court review," he added, "but if there are we will look at them."

Asked if Wilmington would be the place to deal with forced busing, Bork replied: "It may, I don't know yet. There is a longer time frame on that case."

Ford's original direction to Levi was seen as a move to garner anti-busing votes in the face of the challenge by conservative Ronald Reagan — particularly after the President suggested, several days before last Tuesday's Kentucky primary, that Levi "might" enter the Louisville busing case. The Justice Department said that Louisville was not being considered.

Bork said Levi's decision was made "absolutely on legal grounds," without consideration to election-year politics.

A Justice Department statement said Levi's decision did not rest on the merits of any appeals for Supreme Court review of Boston busing plan, ordered by U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr.

It said government lawyers would continue studying busing, as Ford directed.

"The desire and intention of the department to seek clarification of the rulings of the Supreme Court in school desegregation cases is well known," Levi said, "as is the strong and continuing commitment of the department not to tolerate acts of lawlessness in violation of the orders of the district court."

Ford said he respected Levi's decision, and believes "ways can be found to minimize forced busing while also remaining true to the nation's ideals and our educational goals. That is my objective."

Levi met with Ford Thursday and Friday, but the White House said the decision would be solely the attorney general's. Levi also met with anti-busing forces from Boston and civil rights leaders such as the NAACP's Roy Wilkins before making his decision.

After reports circulated this month that Levi favored asking the Supreme Court to review the Boston case, Transportation Secretary William Coleman, Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., — both blacks — and civil rights leaders spoke out in opposition.

Later, Delaware officials got Levi's agreement to consider a recent decision involving Wilmington schools.

A three-judge federal court in Wilmington recently ordered a sweeping desegregation plan involving the busing of children across district lines in New Castle County. Hundreds of letters and calls to the Justice Department resulted from area residents opposing the plan.

Filing opens

BOISE (UPI) — Candidates for state senator and state representative must file their petitions between June 1 and June 7 to be placed on the August primary ballot, Idaho Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa said today.

The petitions must have at least 50 and not more than 220 signatures of qualified electors in the candidate's legislative district. A $15 filing fee must accompany the petition.

Cenarrusa said that in accordance with the Sunshine Law candidates must, certify political treasurers with his office before accepting any campaign contributions.

Pellet gun ban lifting good news for sheepmen

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley sheepmen reacted favorably Saturday to news that a ban on poisonous "coyote-baiters" had been relaxed.

But none thought the use of the explosive, sodium-cyanide pellet would eradicate their coyote problems.

A ban on the use of the devices, also called the M44 pellet gun, was lifted Friday by President Ford with the stipulation that their use be controlled by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Ford's executive order amended previous orders in 1972 and 1975 which had outlawed or severely restricted the use of the devices, but the latest order contained its own restrictions preventing the use of the bait guns on recreational lands or where the devices might pose a hazard to endangered wildlife or domestic animals.

Ford's order also excluded the use of the devices in national parks, national monuments, wildlife refuges, wilderness areas or areas of the national forest system set aside for recreation.

The order permitted ranchers and sheepmen to use the devices on federal grazing lands with authorization from the "appropriate" federal agencies and under conditions set by the EPA.

Use of the M44 guns, a favorite of sheepmen, had been fought by environmentalists, who argued that the devices would kill so many coyotes as to put the animal on the endangered species list.

Sheepmen have argued, however, that the pellet guns, which discharge a deadly pellet into the coyote's mouth as it lugs at a specially-prepared bait, could not begin to kill off the coyote population. The devices, they said, would at best prevent spread of the coyote predation which claims sizable numbers of their band.

That view was repeated Saturday by area wool growers when they were told the ban had been lifted.

"We're going to use it (the M44) if at all possible, whenever we can and whenever we can," said Dennis Burks, foreman for the Flat Top Sheep Co., Muldoon, which runs about 18,000 lambs, ewes and yearlings in the Little Wood River Valley North of Carey.

Minico girl rodeo queen

FILER — Linda Schenk, Minico High School, was crowned queen of the Sixth District high school rodeo here Saturday night.

First runner-up was Julianne Miller, Declo, and second runner-up was Kelly Jolley, Twin Falls.

The district rodeo wound up a three night run at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds before about 2,300 fans. About 30 contestants qualified for the state high school rodeo, scheduled at Burley June 16-19, from the various events, with several of the competitors qualifying in more than one event.

Top all around cowboy was Merv May, Burley. He received a saddle.

Top all around cowgirl was Cindy Anderson, Declo. She also won a saddle.

First place winners in the various events included:

- Barreback bronc riding, Kenneth Hutchison, Raft River.
- Team roping, May and Ron Bailey, Declo.
- Saddle bronc riding, Steve Christ, Minico.
- Pole bending, Miss Anderson.
- Barrel racing, Chris Munce, Twin Falls.
- Boys' calf roping, May.
- Breakaway roping, Miss Jolley.
- Goat tying, Terri Koch, Buhl.
- Sleeve wrestling, Robin Jucker, Buhl.
- Bull riding, Robb Schutte, Filer.

Class A team trophy was awarded to Filer, with Declo receiving the Class B team trophy.

The finals in the queen competition were conducted in the afternoon.

Improving

BOISE — Joe McCollum, Twin Falls businessman who sustained a stroke earlier this week, is reported in good condition in a Boise hospital.

McCollum has been taken from intensive care at the Boise hospital and is expected to return to Twin Falls later this week. Friends of the family said there seems to have been no permanent damage.

TF grads prefer college

BY GEORGE WILEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College continues to outrank all other alternatives as a favored post-graduate pursuit of high school seniors here.

In a recent poll of 330 seniors graduating this year from Twin Falls High School, almost two-thirds (66 per cent) indicated they will go on to college.

Of those students, the College of Southern Idaho was listed as the favorite pick.

But 40 per cent of the students said they will not go to college at all.

About one-fourth (24.5 per cent) said they will immediately enter the job market. Another 7.8 per cent indicated an intent to go on to technical or vocational school.

Those who saw marriage as an immediate post-graduate alternative were fairly few. Only about 4.2 per cent of the students (13 girls and 1 boy) indicated marriage as a prime intent.

Less popular even than marriage were the armed services. Entering the military appealed to only about 2.7 per cent of the students (one girl and eight boys).

The preference for college this year showed little change from preferences indicated by high school seniors in the past.

According to school principal Frank Charlton, college has been the favored pursuit of graduating seniors since the polling was started in the mid 1950s.

In 1965, about 67 per cent of polled seniors indicated they would follow a college career. The percentage remained unchanged in 1968, fell to 59 per cent in 1974 and climbed back to 66 per cent last year.

The other percentages have also remained relatively stable, although going to work seems to be gaining favor in recent years.

According to Charlton, in 1965 about 17 per cent of the students indicated they would enter the job market. By 1968 that percentage had fallen to 16, but it rose to 28 per cent in 1974 before dropping to 21 per cent last year.

A preference for vocational school has been continuously indicated by about 10 per cent of Twin Falls grads polled, although that figure may be declining if this year's percentage is an indication of a future trend.

In 1965, about 11 per cent of the students indicated they would enter trade school, a percentage which remained unchanged in 1968. By 1974, the percentage had fallen to 8, but last year rose again to 10. This year's 7.8 per cent again shows a decline, which may indicate a general lowering trend.

Compromise in Nairobi meeting

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A small select committee representing both rich and poor nations early Sunday reached compromise language on a common fund to finance stockpiling of basic Third World commodities, officials said.

The issue has deadlocked the month-long U.N. Conference on Trade and Development. The conference, due to have ended Friday, was extended through the weekend in hopes of hammering out a compromise.

Saudi predicts frozen oil price

KUTA BEACH, Bah, Indonesia (UPI) — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani Saturday predicted the price of oil would remain frozen at its current $11.51 per barrel until the end of 1976.

Yamani, who led the battle against price increases at the two-day conference of OPEC ministers, told an airport news conference that Saudi Arabia had the support of three other OPEC nations in its fight against any price rise this year and added: "No one can increase without Saudi Arabia."

Trade limit on spuds set

NEW YORK (UPI) — Starting Tuesday, the New York Mercantile Exchange will limit trading in the May 1977 contract for Maine white potatoes to orders designed to liquidate existing contracts.

The exchange said it had obtained formal permission from the Federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission to do this. Indeed, Commission Chairman Charles W. Bagley had suggested the need for such action, saying the May contract traditionally has caused problems because of the inability of traders to ascertain the deliverable supply at that time of year.

The exchange also revealed that there were 1,557 contracts on May 1977 Maine white futures "open" at the close of business Thursday.

The exchange still has to reveal details of the system of penalties to be levied against brokerage houses and their customers who were caught short on 997 contracts totalling 50 million pounds of Maine white potatoes worth $4.25 million at the deadline May 25.

FK death report path clear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee went out of business for all practical purposes Friday, leaving the way clear for publication of its Kennedy assassination report.

No members objected by Friday's deadline.

Members of the panel, whose mandate officially expires Monday at midnight, had until 5:30 p.m. Friday to raise a majority objection to publishing the report on whether the CIA and the FBI told the Warren Commission all they knew about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Committee spokesmen said the panel members left for the Memorial Day holiday weekend with no such objection raised. When they return Tuesday, the committee's mandate will have expired.

Panel members said Wednesday they expect the report to be published in a week or two after the intelligence agencies have had a chance to delete identities of confidential sources.

It also will be given to the new permanent Senate Intelligence Oversight Committee, a 15-man panel headed by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii.

Inouye said Thursday the new panel would be involved in organizational work and reform of intelligence agency charters for some time, and it might be six months before it makes any recommendation on whether to reopen some aspects of the Warren Commission investigation.

The commission, headed by then Chief Justice Earl Warren, found in 1964 that Lee Harvey Oswald was solely responsible for killing Kennedy. It made no finding, however, on what motivated him.

Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., who worked on the Intelligence Committee's Kennedy report, has said he believes it shows the CIA and FBI did not tell the Warren Commission everything they knew about Oswald's connections with Soviet and Cuban intelligence, or about CIA plots to kill Fidel Castro.

Schweiker says he believes the report will make "a very persuasive case" for reopening those aspects of the assassination investigation.

Meantime, no official comment was available from any committee member on a story by Brad Szulc in the New Republic that the FBI and CIA are still "covering up" and withholding files on the circumstances surrounding Kennedy's death.

The intelligence committee disclosed during its 15 months of investigations that the CIA was plotting to kill Castro at the time of the Dallas assassination, and had attempted to do so earlier as well.

There have been suggestions Kennedy's murder may have represented Cuban retaliation for those plots.

The Marines are looking for a few good men to keep 'em rolling.

Moynihan charges UN votes sell for $600

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Daniel Patrick Moynihan says some votes in the world body can be bought for less money than it took to secure a seat on the stock exchange during the Great Depression.

Last fall a vote changed hands at the U.N. for $600 and that was thought very bad for the reputation of the institution," Moynihan said Friday. "It's like when seats in the stock exchange got down to $2,100 in 1932. I mean, votes are supposed to be worth more than that."

Moynihan made the comment in a taped interview with CBS newsmen Eric Sevareid that will be shown on the network's Sunday night.

Overall, Moynihan said, there were blocks of votes "for which money changed hands." He said they generally were available for payments in the $2,000 range.

CBS said U.N. diplomats "from both western and third world nations are skeptical" about Moynihan's comments.

The network said one U.S. official called the bribery story "fiction" and another said it was "a lot of baloney."

"I have never seen money change hands, but I know that money does change hands," Moynihan said.

Moynihan said he was "not very shocked" that votes were being "bought and sold." "Governments maximize their interests — I don't know that charging cash or charging what fees is such a different thing."

"I wished I thought the money went into the exchequer of the nations involved," Moynihan said. "I sometimes wish it did."

Moynihan declined to identify who was involved in the selling of votes, but he said, "I certainly haven't received any envelopes and most assuredly haven't passed any."

CBS said its followup investigation showed that on at least two occasions last fall North Korean representatives "offered money to U.N. delegates from other nations — $1,000 to an Argentine diplomat, an envelope full of cash to an Arab ambassador."

The offers were made "in advance of a critical U.N. vote on a proposal to change the Korea armistice agreement," the network said. "In both cases, CBS News has established, the money offers were refused. A spokesman for the North Korea observer mission at the United Nations calls this information completely false."

Twin quakes hit Burma mountains

By United Press International

Twin earthquakes, both stronger than Italy's May 6 quake, jolted the steep mountains of northeast Burma Saturday near the Chinese border, scientists in the United States and Sweden reported.

Prof. Markus Baath, director of the Uppsala Geoseismological Institute in Uppsala, Sweden, said the quakes were an extension of the disastrous Italian and Soviet tremors which together claimed more than 1,000 lives.

Saturday's quakes struck Burma near the border with China within two hours of each other and Baath said damage and casualties could be high if they hit near a town or city.

In Golden, Colo., however, a spokesman for the National Earthquake Information Service said its seismographs indicated the epicenter of the quake was 350 miles northwest of Mandalay, a highly mountainous and sparsely populated area.

"It doesn't appear to be a very populous area and I doubt if we will receive any reports of damage," said John Herr, coordinator for the Colorado facility.

The Swedish institute said the first shock, at 6:23 a.m. MPT, measured 7.0 on the open-ended Richter scale, and the second quake, jolting the same area two hours later, measured 6.7.

Tax return info use hit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee, in its rush to complete a tax revision bill last week, finally opened the door which could make it a felony for a reporter to receive tax return information.

The amendment, part of a package of strengthening the confidentiality of tax returns, apparently was formulated with little thought as to whether it would be constitutional.

"There was no intent to attack the First Amendment," said a staff member who worked on the bill.

Other staff members said they did not realize how far-reaching the amendment was and suggested it might be changed when the committee meets Friday to report the bill.

The amendment apparently would subject reporters who receive tax information such as publication of information from former President Richard Nixon's tax returns — to a fine up to $5,000 and five years in jail. In addition, the reporter would be liable to civil suit from the taxpayer whose information was revealed.

Under present law, it is a misdemeanor to publish tax information, but not a crime to receive it.

The amendment was a small part of the package, intended to safeguard the confidentiality of tax returns. The major sections of the bill restrict the access to tax returns by the White House, the Justice Department, local governments and other agencies.

Woman survives ordeal

MILPITAS, Calif. (UPI) — Outside her mobile home, Mrs. Leora Reas heard the sounds of voices and vehicles.

But, as she lay paralyzed from a stroke on the floor inside, her wail cries for help could not be heard.

It was like that for seven days and six nights.

But she survived.

Her ordeal started when she stepped from a shower a week ago Friday and walked into her living room.

Suddenly, the stroke paralyzed the left side of her body, partially crippling her from head to toe.

She fell to the floor and lapsed in and out of consciousness as she began her lonely battle for survival.

The kitchen was 15 feet away.

"It took a day and a half to crawl there," said Mrs. Reas, 58, who lives alone.

After half a dozen tries at lifting her 150-pound frame, she finally opened the refrigerator door and reached a pan of ice water on the lower shelf.

"It spilled all over me, but even that felt good," she said.

Saturday from her bed in Washington Hospital in nearby Fremont.

The only food she could reach were a box of overripe strawberries, an orange and an open can of peas.

"I never tasted anything as good as that peach juice," she said.

Her legs and elbows were rubbed raw from crawling inch by inch, and her mobile home was just across the lane from the clubhouse and manager's office of the residential development.

But not a neighbor came, and she felt as abandoned as if she were in the wilderness.

The phone, however, "rang and rang. It rang off the wall," she said. The callers were her son, a Los Angeles radiologist, and a friend, Mrs. Patricia Koehler.

The phone was tantalizingly close—four feet from the floor—and she repeatedly tried to reach it in vain.

"But I never gave up hope. I have a lot of faith in the man upstairs," she said.

The hot days were hard but the cold nights worse. Mrs. Reas said. She sang a throw rug to keep out the night chill.

On the seventh night, she heard a knock at the door. Her worried son and friend had asked authorities to investigate, and firemen pried open the door — aided by her instructions.

"What day is it?" Mrs. Reas whispered faintly.

"She didn't cry. She was calm. I couldn't believe her attitude," said fire department Capt. Tim Jones. "It was as if we stopped by for a planned visit."

Mrs. Reas was reported in good condition Saturday, restless to go home.

"It could happen to anybody," she said. "But I can't understand why my neighbors didn't come to help."

Mao appears again

© N.Y. Times Service

HONG KONG — Despite persistent reports that he is seriously ill and may be near death, China's 82-year-old leader, Chairman Mao Tse-tung, made another appearance Thursday night when he received the visiting Prime Minister of Pakistan, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The Pakistani leader was accompanied by his wife and Aziz Ahmed, minister of state for defense and foreign affairs.

Hsinan, the Chinese press agency, reported that when the Pakistani guests entered the meeting hall, "Mao happily clasped their hands and extended a warm welcome" to them. Mao then had a "cordial and friendly conversation" with Prime Minister Bhutto and Aziz Ahmed.

The agency did not disclose how long the meeting lasted.

Cover about Mao's health grew last month after he met with Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand. That meeting lasted only 15 minutes, in contrast with meetings with foreign statesmen last year that often went on for an hour or more.

Then, on May 12, Mao received Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore, and again the meeting lasted only 15 minutes. Moreover, the official photograph of the meeting, published on the front page of the Peking newspaper, Jenmin Jih Pao, showed a "frail-looking Mao slumped down" with his head resting weakly on the back of his chair.

No photograph of the meeting with Bhutto is available yet, but analysts of Chinese affairs will carefully scrutinize all photographs for clues as to the state of the chairman's health.

Canvass set on Gem vote

BOISE (UPI) — The State Board of Canvassers will convene June 9 to certify results of Idaho's first Presidential Primary Election, Secretary of State Peter Cenarrusa said Friday.

Cenarrusa said the law requires the state board to meet 15 days after the election to certify the results sent in from each of the state's 44 counties.

County canvassing boards will have until Tuesday to certify their election returns.

In addition to Cenarrusa, the state board is composed of State Auditor Joe R. Williams and State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon.

No single man can control spuds

Jack Simplot may be the wealthiest man in Idaho.

The giant potato grower and processor's fortune is estimated at between $300 million and $600 million. That's not small potatoes.

Last Tuesday Simplot defaulted on about 30 million pounds of potato contracts. The default certainly wasn't because Simplot didn't have the money to buy up the 600 or so contracts which he said he could fill.

Instead, the default which rocked the New York Mercantile Exchange apparently was prompted by a business decision that money could be saved by defaulting on 30 million pounds of potatoes instead of purchasing the potatoes at a price which Maine potato growers and speculators were asking.

The default, the largest in the history of the American commodities market, suggests that Simplot may be more powerful even than the markets which supposedly serve as the arena for his product.

The Chairman of the federal Commodities Futures Trading Commission clearly is irritated by the actions of Jack Simplot.

Commission chairman William Bagley has accused Simplot of "playing chicken" with the national potato market.

Bagley and others claim the default is part of an elaborate scheme to manipulate the price of potatoes on a national scale.

Perhaps no one should be criticized for wanting to improve his own financial position. But the ripples sent through the nation's commodity market by the Simplot default involves more than just the Idahoan's bankroll.

The small buyers and sellers of commodity futures depend upon the New York Mercantile Exchange and other commodity markets to be steady, safe institutions for investment.

When one buyer becomes so large that smaller buyers suffer from the way big boys play the futures game, reform is needed on the commodity markets.

William Bagley should be incensed with the antics of Simplot on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Bagley is right in starting an investigation into the multi-million default which has threatened the stability of the commodity futures market.

Not even Jack Simplot can be allowed to turn the national potato market to his personal advantage.

Annals of America

In June 1788, George Mason addressed the Virginia Convention and called for rejection of the new Constitution. The document was finally approved in Virginia by two votes, but only after such biting words as these by Mason:

"The very idea of converting what was formerly a confederation to a consolidated government is totally subversive of every principle which has hitherto governed us."

"This power is calculated to annihilate totally the state governments. Will the people of this great community submit to be individually taxed by two different and distinct powers? Will they suffer themselves to be doubly harassed?"

"These two concurrent powers cannot exist long together; the one will destroy the other; the general government being paramount to and in every respect more powerful than the state governments, the latter must give way to the former. Is it to be supposed that one national government will suit so extensive a country, embracing so many climates and containing inhabitants so very different in manners, habits and customs?"

HHH hides birthday, keeps dreaming

WASHINGTON — This week past saw Hubert Humphrey's 65th birthday.

He's not celebrating it, he's hiding it. It's a reminder of the might-have-beens of a long and useful political life, but even at this late date he keeps hoping people will forget it.

You merely have to read his book, about to be published ("The Education of a Public Man") to understand why. He has obviously been living with the nightmare of his narrow defeat for the Presidency in 1968, meditating on his blunders in that election, almost blaming himself for the tragedies of the Nixon administration, but ironically still thinking that, if Nixon could recover from losing to Kennedy in 1960, who knows that the spectacular accidents of life and politics may not give him another chance?

After midnight, while the votes were still being counted in the election of 1968, he wrote in his diary: "I've climbed that damned ladder of politics, and every step has been rough. I've slipped so many times and almost fallen back. . . That top rung is never going to be mine. My fingernails are scraping it, but I don't have a grip. Yet maybe, maybe we can make it. It's so damn close. I'm afraid."

As he agonizes over that campaign and wonders what would have happened if he had defied President Johnson on the Vietnam war, if his old liberal friends had only stuck with him, if only he had had more money and more time. It is clear why he was not been able to get into this year's race get out of it.

The one-thing he couldn't deny was the calendar. His mind told him it was too late, but his heart won't let him quit. So he refused to get into the late primary elections a few weeks ago, but yet he keeps fighting with the stop-Carter movement, starting in and out of the earliest primary states, remembering the surprises of Truman in 1948; Kennedy in '60; McGovern in 1972, and even the upstart Carter in the primaries of '76. The "only-if's" still seem to haunt him in the night.

"I wanted to be loyal to the President (Johnson)," he writes in his book, parts of which now appear in the Saturday Review. "My guts, my heart wouldn't let me do it any other way. I just couldn't yield to his critics. . . The President was impossible on the war. What a fury when I showed him my task-force report on Vietnam. . . I had a choice: 'My own man' and denounced by the President as irresponsible. Or muddle through. Really no choice if I wanted to be president," he says in what seems to be a diary after the event, "and I do, how badly I do. . . I have got to get some rest."

"This is only the latest evidence that all the great personal struggles for political power in Washington — the stories of Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, and even of the lesser characters of Jim Forrestal, the two McCarthys, John Foster Dulles, and Henry Kissinger, are beyond journalism and are really the stuff of psychological novels.

Yet, win or lose, Humphrey will have had a happy birthday. In his middle sixties, he probably shouldn't even be in the race — and looking to the future, this probably goes for Ford and Reagan as well — but Humphrey is luckier than all of them. If Ford and Reagan lose, their public lives are finished, but if Hubert loses, he will still be the senator from Minnesota, and maybe even majority leader of the Senate, which, next to the presidency, may be the most powerful office in the Republic.

The feeling here is that Humphrey should get out of the way and let the new generation take over, even if we don't know them, risks and all, but the Democratic Party leaders are not quite willing to go with Carter. Something holds them back. He has licked them in the primaries, but he has not convinced them, and the more they doubt Carter, the more they tend to fall back on Humphrey.

This is not just a preference for the Old Guard versus the New Boys. Humphrey has been around here for a long time. His age is a disadvantage but also an advantage. Maybe the main problem in this town is to get the White House and Capitol Hill together, and if you ask Barry Goldwater or Henry Kissinger, or even President Ford who could achieve this miracle, they would probably agree that Humphrey could do better than anybody else.

Humphrey is clearly not everybody's first choice for the presidency, but even at 65, he is almost everybody's second choice. For he has been in politics for over 30 years, and through all the battles of this long generation, has won the respect, if not the support, of most of the leaders of both parties, regardless of their ideology.

He knows this, and says he would be happy if somebody else gets to the top, but he worries about Carter — and his wife Muriel worries about Carter more than he does — so he keeps trying to redeem his defeat of 1968, and keeps dreaming that he might just make it with the support of the Democratic leaders, who still believe in a Humphrey-Carter ticket more than anything else.

Memorial Day

If we lose it will be by the rule

Without going into the detail of the proposed new law governing the activities of our intelligence agencies, it is reasonable to say that it is designed to bring under representative scrutiny at what our intelligence agencies are doing; and b) how much money they are spending.

It is critical to ask whether that scrutiny is to be exercised by a committee of legislators who can be counted upon to prefer the public safety to the satisfaction of their own political vanity, but that gets you into problems.

How do you say in constitutional language: We are going to set up an oversight committee which will exclude Michael Harrington of Massachusetts? The dear old Constitution prohibits bills of attainder, so you have to come up with legal ways of describing Michael Harrington, and that is a tough one.

Then, as a practical matter, you need to ask whether that oversight committee is going to stop, automatically, drastic covert actions of the kind that tend to win popular favor and professional criticism.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, JR.

The distinction is best drawn from the work of John Ehrlichman, given attention before us in "The Day of the Jackal." Here the protagonist is a hired killer, and his assignment is to execute Charles de Gaulle. The suspense is great, and the huge best-seller owes that success to the narrowness of de Gaulle's escape. But do you know how the French intelligence people managed to save his life? Well, to begin with they kidnapped somebody from Rome. Getting him to Marseilles, they tortured him, and got from him a couple of words — a clue. Oh yes, he died from the torture.

Then the chief of police of police, mind you, without any authority from anybody, undertook to tap the telephones not of Joe Kraft, but of every member of the French cabinet. And lo, one of these telephones yielded a yummy conversation between the minister of something and his mistress, who, when the minister was snoring, got up and telephoned her contact within the resistance group that had hired the assassin.

All it took, in other words, to protect the life of the President of France was one (1) kidnapping, (1) torture, (1) death, and eleven (1) tapped telephones of the French cabinet. The reading public loved it, and Sen. Frank Church or Teddy Kennedy have never held up the book as a reason to deny aid to France.

John Ehrlichman, former aide to Richard Nixon, has written a novel in which President Kennedy is assassinated by a priest traveling with the invading army to the Bay of Pigs. The idea is that Kennedy discovered that the Russians would counter our invasion of Cuba and come back at us with nuclear weapons. On the other hand, the invasion was already launched, and could not be aborted.

The President hid on the idea of destroying the spiritual force behind the military mission: the equivalent of slipping Joan of Arc a minkie fanny just before she took on the British. It is not projected that the admirers of President Kennedy will cavil at the action he (allegedly) took, under such circumstances.

The new oversight committee is on the one hand desirable — we do need protection against capricious use of intelligence capabilities; on the other hand it is a schismatic exemplar of efforts by lawyers and jig-saw makers to pin down with exactitude the rules by which we govern ourselves in a spontaneous world substantially dominated by tyrants.

If we go down, they are saying, it will be with panache.

By United Press International
NEW YORK, May 29 — The radical activist Mechanics Committee adopted a resolution asking the provincial congress to support separation from Great Britain and to instruct the delegation at Philadelphia to work for independence. The legislators hedged by saying it could not instruct the delegates until a resolution of independence was actually brought before Congress.

Memoirs material balks police investigation

WASHINGTON — Spiro Agnew, the fiction writer, is now flacking his book around the country.

Agnew refuses to talk about his criminal activities as vice president because, he says, "I'm saving those for my memoirs."

It is a clever play, but law enforcement officials all over the country are very concerned that, because of Agnew's policy, it is going to be harder than ever to get confessions out of people arrested for committing crimes.

They are predicting that many suspects will follow the Agnew line.

Louie the Lug has just been brought in for questioning after six members of the Cincinnati mob were mowed down in a garage on Mother's Day. Louie was arrested as he was trying to pay his parking ticket in the garage with a smoking machine gun.

"Okay, Louie," the detective says. "You might as well make it easy on yourself and tell us what happened."

"I'm sorry, but I'm saving all that for my memoirs."

"Look, Louie, we have an open-and-shut case. You better talk or we're going to throw the book at you."

"Speaking of books, I've just completed a novel that I think you might be interested in. It's about a hit man for a mob who gets caught up in a Zionist conspiracy and falls in love with his secretary."

"We're not interested in your novel, Louie. We want to know about the Mother's Day massacre in the Deep Throat Garage."

Louie continues, "The hit man hates the liberal press that is always writing nasty stories about him so he decides to steal an atomic bomb and blow up the Washington Post. The novel has a lot of sex in it. Listen to this: 'Beldon unbuttoned Fiora's blouse as she stood there quivering in the pizza parlor. Several children stared as she took off her shirt.'"

"Louie, we're not interested in your blankety-blank novel. We want to know who gave you the contract on the Cincinnati mob."

"I'm sorry, but my editor at Playboy Press said I should save that for my book. I assure you, gentlemen, when it is printed it will be an entirely different story than the one that has been printed in the yellow press."

"Louie, the ballistics experts' report says that every bullet found in the bodies of the Cincinnati mob came from the machine gun you were holding in your hand."

"Gentlemen, I didn't come here to talk about that. My understanding, when you arrested me, was that we would discuss my novel. I have a scene in it where Beldon has been kidnapped by the United Jewish Appeal and they won't let him go unless he buys $1 million in Israeli War Bonds. Listen to this: 'Beldon managed to untie the ropes behind his back. Then he untied the ropes around his feet. He found Fiora tied up, lying on the floor, and unspun her bra. Fiora looked into his eyes and said, "Be gentle with me, Beldon.'"

"Look, you creep," the detective says, "we couldn't care less about your novel. Are you going to tell us what happened in the garage or do you want us to beat the living daylight out of you?"

"I have no intention of telling you anything. If you'd like to bid on the true story of the massacre, I suggest you contact my literary agent."

"Louie, this is your last chance. You tell us or

"I'll treat you to my novhner, gentlemen. I wouldn't tell Barbara Walters on the Today show what happened, so why should I tell you?"

League backs bikeways

Editor, Times-News:
 Since the Local Planning Act of 1975 requires comprehensive city planning including those areas which extend beyond present city boundaries, and Since the proposed Twin Falls City area of impact extends to two recreational areas — the Snake River Canyon and Shoshone Falls on the North, and on the West and South Creek and beyond, and Since the proposed Twin Falls Vicinity Major Street Plan urges sound and flexible land use planning including alternative modes of transportation, and Since bicycle travel has become increasingly popular as a means of travel for all age groups.

The League of Women Voters would like to take this opportunity to express continued interest in and support of the installation of bikeways and transportation by bicycles within the city limits and in immediately adjacent county areas.

The League of Women Voters supports the following points in implementing a community plan utilizing bicycle travel:

- 1) That a regular system of bikeways be developed to offer connecting routes to schools, city parks, downtown and outlying shopping areas, various residential sections of the city, and local recreational areas via well-marked, well-posted routes which will include sufficient bike racks for the convenience of cyclists.
- 2) That the bikeway system be well-maintained, low hazard routes, clearly identified by frequent signs, and designed for completion within a predetermined number of years.
- 3) That a city publicly campaign be conducted recognizing bicycle transportation as a safe, economical and popular form of pollution-free transportation, and that from interested community groups be solicited to alleviate all possible costs and to insure adequate citizen participation.
- 4) That a public safety education program be organized for use in the regular school program through the elementary and secondary levels.
- 5) That provision be made in the city impact area plan for bicycle travel which will provide for future road construction and road improvement with minimal traffic hazards including the construction of barriers or other features separating cyclists and pedestrians from vehicle traffic.
- 6) That emphasis during planning and development of the bicycle transportation system be placed on standards of safety rather than cost of implementation.

We thank the members of the Joint Planning Council for this opportunity to express our views and will welcome future opportunities to aid in the establishment of a sound and flexible plan for the City of Twin Falls and its surrounding area.

Editorial salary statements questioned

Editor, Times-News:
 I read with interest your editorial on April 18, 1976 titled, "Cutting Down Federal Salaries." I am sure it was written with only the best intentions. However, I feel that some of the statements were misleading and not truly representative of the federal worker. Thus, I would like to offer some opposing comments for consideration. I offer them not from a casual viewpoint but from my viewpoint as chief of personnel, administering over 14,000 government civilians.

Attempting to relate government to non-government salaries in Washington D. C. is not a realistic comparison. It is like saying that an apple should taste like an orange. Most of the top levels of management in the federal government are located in the nation's capital. It is natural for the salaries of these officials to be higher than pay received by the average non-government employee engaged in retail sales and services in Washington D. C.

In looking at pay on a national spectrum, the Federal white collar workers received a five per cent increase last October. However, the Bureau of Labor Statistics (the same source you quoted) revealed that the increase would have to have been 8.66 per cent just to keep pace with comparable job salaries in private industry. This indicates that overall government salaries are lagging behind rather than leading industry as your editorial implied; in fact, the public law ties government (civil service and military) salaries to those in industry, not the other way around as you implied.

Your comment that a government worker can receive a full pension at age 55 is true. However, it sheds a different light to point out that such a person would have to work 30 years and pay seven per cent of his salary into a retirement fund.

You stated that government workers get 50 per cent more time off, shorter hours and longer vacations. A recent study made by a large company employing persons from both Utah and Idaho is of interest. Of 27 companies surveyed, it was found that 22 of them had more holidays than government employees and only one had less. In some instances the government authorized more vacation time, but when considering the fewer holidays (no unique state holidays), there was little difference in the total. In the category of working hours, the normal standard throughout industry and government is a 40 hour work week. I know that isn't the case on the farm or with a small business, but it is true with large factories, offices and other unionized industry.

To state that government workers aren't putting out a product which earns them a wage is rather shallow concept. The aircraft mechanic, warehouseman, heavy equipment operator, missile repairer or machinist in government works as hard as his counterpart in private industry. The difference is that one may be working in defense of the country, the other is producing goods and services for a profit. They are dependent upon each other. You see, the government worker also pays taxes, utility bills and rent. He too buys the food, goods and services produced by the non-government worker. Together they form a part of our society.

How well a person performs his job often depends upon the individual. This is true with the government employee as well as the grocery store clerk, TV repairman, plumber, potato grower or auto mechanic. Usually, the ones who do best rise to the top while others have to settle for less success and less pay.

I admit there are some cases of high salaries and waste in government. The same applies to industry. Both situations affect the cost of living. This represents a challenge for all of us to produce and work more effectively. However, the conclusions in your editorial are based on spurious comparisons. Your readers deserve a better break than that since they don't have a large federal installation in their area so they can make their own comparisons based on personal knowledge and contact with federal workers.

Gifted child ruling backed

Editor, Times-News:
 Your editorial of May 24 is based on two assumptions which seem to me to deserve some examination. First, you dismiss as inadequate the reasons given by the school board for their decision. So long as school financing in the state of Idaho ranks as low as it does in national rankings, I think the board must be hesitant to enter new programs. While much of the money would come from outside District 41, most taxpayers know where tax money comes from.

Second, your editorial assumes that there is no real question as to the desirability of the proposed program for gifted elementary students. I have taught for many years and have children of my own whom some would consider gifted. If my children were young enough to be considered for such a program, I do not believe that I would want them to participate. You point out that special programs exist for slow learners. A current trend is away from the practice of segregating these students and toward placing them in as much as possible in the regular school environment.

Methodist conference decision mistaken

Editor, Times-News:
 In my opinion, the general conference of the Methodist Church is mistaken in their support for gun control. I am a Methodist but an active citizen to oppose gun control. My reasons are following:

(1) I don't believe gun control will stop criminals. New York City that has the strictest gun control program has the highest crime rate than almost any other city in the United States. This fact proves that gun control increases crime because honest citizens without arms make criminals easier to work. Crime original source stems from ill-characters. The anti crime fight is moral education and not gun control. Guns don't kill people, sick-minded people kill people.

(2) The policy of Methodist Church states, "We do not believe there is any Constitutional personal right to bear arms." I believe my personal constitutional right to keep and bear arms. The reasons of this right given by the Constitution is to protect us against criminal elements, to protect us against the extremes of our government, to protect our freedom against Communist subversion. I can not allow any radical politicians and any Methodist leaders to destroy our constitutional rights.

(3) The most strong reason of my serious objection is that gun control is the most wanted main target of Communists in the United States. If we don't resist them, we will lose our freedom, religion and every thing and we will be enslaved Communist nation.

I am an immigrant and a naturalized U. S. Citizen since 1966. I have observed other country and I know about communists' subversive thrust that you may not know well.

At Debora Circle meeting, a women's group of Rupert United Methodist Church, held on May 20, 10 members who are against gun control signed a petition asking Bishop Jack M. Tuell for reversing Methodist endorsement representing 10 million Methodist members for gun control, and asking for endorsing only the number of U. S. Methodist delegates who support gun control. Those 10 members were greatly disturbed by Methodist leaders' support for gun control.

Primary purpose queried

Editor, Times-News:
 I am writing this as a matter of inquiry. Our legislature, just past, enacted a presidential primary law, which the voters cast their vote May 25, 1976. I am reasonably sure that this election could cost approximately $1 million payable only through the pockets of we Idaho taxpayers.

What is the purpose of a presidential primary election in Idaho? Who does an election of this kind nominate or elect?
 It proves absolutely nothing, in my estimation. The delegates for national convention are picked at the state convention, etc. This is where each party picks both the president and vice-president of their respective party.

After mulling over more of our legislators' activities during the last session, I am beginning to believe the most intelligent move instigated was to move and pass unanimously to adjourn.

Nevada burial possible

What's the alternative to the location of burial of nuclear waste above the Snake River aquifer?

Certainly it's not the popular or geologically sound location. Private individuals and organized groups like the Food Producers of Idaho have opposed it strongly. Yet hundreds of cans of waste are imported monthly from four locations across the U.S. to be stored above the aquifer. Only 5,000 of the 250,000 waste barrels buried underground since 1954 have been excavated. Eleven 300,000 gallon tanks, many of them filled with hot, high-level waste like boiling away 40 feet below the ground.

Bombings are heavy from surrounding farms and occasional earthquakes.

Who in the world would want this long-lived toxic waste and why?
 Nevada would. They mean jobs and money. The following story is from Carson City, Nev.:

"Nevada lawmakers figure a hot desert area of the state is perfect for solar energy and nuclear waste storage.
 "A legislative resolution signed by Gov. Mike O'Callaghan urges the federal Energy Research and Development Administration to consider the Nevada Test site for such projects.
 "The federal agency now uses the test site 80 miles north of Las Vegas for detonating nuclear devices."

"The resolution adopted by lawmakers notes a high unemployment rate in Southern Nevada and predicts more jobs would open if the projects were started."

"Residents of other states being considered by the federal agency as potential nuclear storage sites have 'serious anxieties' about the plan, but Southern Nevadans are confident no hazards will result, the resolution adds.
 "Jobs and money too are involved at Arco: 6,000 and $100 million per annum.
 Recently, David Miller, information officer for ERDA Las Vegas testing site (Energy Resource Development) enumerated the reasons why the Nevada Test Site is a good permanent location:

"1. To my way of thinking it is a perfect location because it is very isolated — 65 miles from the nearest town.
 "2. It's already committed to things nuclear; we already test weapons underground.
 "3. The federal government already owns the land so no other land other than this 1,350 square mile complex needs to be condemned.
 "4. There is very little underground water. There are no rivers and streams on the test site. It is not above an aquifer like Arco."
 "In other words the geology and hydrology are suitable."

"Another point, the shale on the Nevada test site has the plasticity of salt. This is an important feature because under high pressure become solid rock. These are malleable substances and would entomb foreign substances permanently."
 Miller continued, "This site would be good for permanent storage because it has already been contaminated with radioactivity. Every time one of these nuclear weapons explodes, it produces millions of curies of radioactivity and it is trapped right here in the soil. The water table is from 700-1,500 feet below. Usually we shoot for well above or below this table but we tend to be placed on what happened if we contaminated the water.

"The shock waves drove all the water out of the area then the flow came back. The radionuclides if they move at all, move back to the shock locations. When detonation occurs, the rock is vaporized and melted. The solids and puddles in the bottom of the cavity like condensed water running down a winduppane and collecting at the ledge. It then turns to stone as it cools, trapping 90 per cent of the fission products. Most of the solids are trapped in this radioactive milk that solidifies into water-insoluble rock," he said.

ROSEMARY HALEY

Recalling that Idaho would like to monitor the federal on site wells at Arco and had not yet been able to, I asked Miller "If the federal government at Las Vegas would allow the state of Nevada to test water and soil samples.
 "Sure, why not? We would if they wanted to. They don't have any interest in doing it."

One can conclude the lack of interest might come from the scarcity of water in the area. In fact it is so scarce air-cooling of waste rather than water-cooling would be necessary.

The mid-80's is the targeted date for removing waste from above the aquifer. The problem is finding a site for permanent storage. It is encouraging for Magic Valley citizens to know the state of Nevada has the country has learned to stop worrying and to love the bomb.

Waste trouble at Roseworth

Editor, Times-News:
 I would like to comment on a statement made in your paper May 31, by Stu Murrell of the Idaho Fish and Game Department speaking as a private individual and a father. "Environmental quality should be given as much importance as agriculture, and more attention should be given the problem of waste getting into the aquifers which threatens the life of all Idahoans."

I couldn't agree with him more. However, in his position he could bring more pressure on the Idaho Fish and Game Department, to remove their submerged toilet from Roseworth Reservoir. In 1975 there were several submerged, this year only one — because it's the only one there.

The $5.8 million question nobody asks

HEYBURN — Downtown Heyburn can't be considered the financial heart of the Northwest.

Only the Bank of Idaho operates a branch in the town of 2400.

Statewalks aren't busy with executive in three-piece suits but farmers in overalls.
 Yet residents of this small community have been asked to help finance construction of the two biggest nuclear power plants in the United States.

Quite a request from a town where the total electric bill is only $513,300.

Heyburn, it seems, is one of nearly 100 small towns and electric companies being hit up by the Washington Public Power Supply System (WPPSS) for money to build a pair of $1 billion power plants.

A contract obligating Heyburn to pay $5.8 million of high-priced nuclear energy arrived at Mayor Harold Hurst's office a few days ago.

If Hurst signs on the dotted line, residential electrical users in Heyburn each will assume about $8,000 in payments for the two Washington power plants.

Nobody in Heyburn apparently sees anything wrong with signing up for the nuclear power.

But in Washington, a group called the Coalition for Safe Energy (CASE) says signing up for the nuclear power would be a dumb idea.

Opponents of the Hanford and Skagil nuclear plants currently are trying to mount a petition drive to block further nuclear plant construction in Washington.

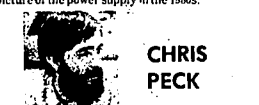

In addition, CASE is questioning the need for the nuclear power and trying to pinpoint who will pay for the 2 million kilowatts of new energy.

CASE claims small towns like Heyburn won't ever need the power from the WPPSS (pronounced Whoops) nuclear plants.

Instead, the Heyburns of the Northwest are financing construction of the huge plants, so big cities and industry can have power. Or so say the opponents of the plants.

The supplier of electricity to Heyburn, Burley, Deco and Rupert tells a different story.

Only last week a representative of the Bonneville Power Administration painted a gloomy picture of the power supply in the 1980s.

CHRIS PECK

BPA says after 1983 Heyburn will receive only 20,000 kilowatts of power which means the town might not be able to grow as large as it would like.

This worries Mayor Hurst.

He remembers Heyburn's town census in 1950 when only 300 people lived in the community.

By 1970, 6300 folks called Heyburn home and today 24,000 residents live in the town.

So, Hurst thinks the city should sign up for the nuclear power to be safe in future years.

Being safe certainly is going to cost the consumer a pretty penny.

If Heyburn signs the $5.8 million contract for nuclear power, it will tie into a series of electrical rate hikes which the Bonneville Power Administration says will at least double the residential power bill in the next 10 years.

The Northwest office of the Sierra Club claims the nuclear plants actually will triple power bills in Heyburn.

Nobody in Heyburn or anywhere else would be happy to see their power bill triple.

Still, a 300 per cent increase in utility costs might be better than having the lights go out which is what the BPA says could happen if the town doesn't buy a cushion of nuclear power from WPPSS.

Unfortunately, nobody can predict how much juice the town will actually will need in the next 20 years.

Right now, the Bonneville Power Administration provides plenty of power for Heyburn and BPA will pump 20,000 kilowatts of juice into the city's municipal power plant indefinitely.

That means Heyburn can grow by nearly a third in the next 20 years and have enough power — without buying the high-priced nuclear stuff, stuff.

And who knows? Perhaps by 1995 or 1996 a widespread conservation program in the United States could allow the town to continue growing and still only use 20,000 kilowatts of electricity.

In Washington, opponents to the WPPSS plants are asking why small towns like Heyburn should buy millions of dollars worth of power which they won't need for 20 years or more?

When you think about it, that's a pretty good question.

It's too bad nobody in Heyburn is asking that question before the city signs the contract for $5.8 million of nuclear power which may never be needed.

Prayer for today

We like to get things on approval, God.
 The things we don't like, we want to get rid of. We don't like to take time with people who don't appeal to us. We'd even like to have you on approval, God. If you don't appoint us, we're ready to leave you out of our lives.
 Aren't we ridiculous? You don't need us, but, oh, how much we need you! You don't have to prove anything to us. The burden of proof is ours.
 Help us to be most concerned that you'll accept us on approval. — Uletta Martin.

Intimacy tales stir Tempest

STRIPPER Tempest Storm, 46, who claims to have had sex with the late President John F. Kennedy, called it "no big deal" and scolded other women who publicized their intimate relationships with prominent politicians. She said several such recent disclosures offended her. (UPI)

Meter digits match

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The attorney for the man named executor of a purported Hughes' will confirmed Friday that at least two digits, and perhaps three, contained in a postage meter mark correspond in sequence to numbers on a meter machine registered to the hotel where Hughes lived. "There is at least a relevant probability that the number on the envelope is the same as the number on the Pitney-Bowes machine," Harold Rhoden said. "If it is the same number, then whoever wrote the will had access to that machine. Hughes certainly had access. He was there. Dummer did not."

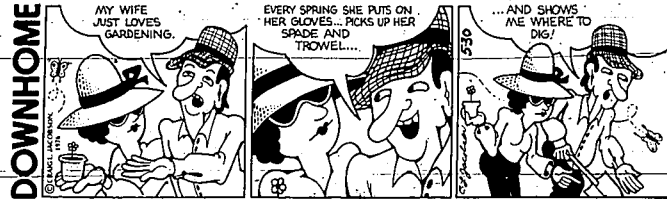

Dummer is Melvin Dummer, a Utah service station operator who claimed he once befriended a man who identified himself as Hughes. The so-called "Marmion will" which was found in the Salt Lake City headquarters of the Mormon church April 27 named Dummer as a beneficiary.

The similarity of the postage meter mark number on an envelope containing the will and the number of the meter machine was disclosed earlier by Carol Moore, San Diego office manager of Pitney-Bowes, who said, "This is quite a coincidence, at the very least."

She said postage meter No. 841862 was registered to the Desert Inn at Las Vegas in June, 1967, and was still there in 1968 when the purported will was dated.

Rhoden said the first digit of the meter mark cannot be deciphered without the aid of chemicals or a microscope. The second digit is a 4, he said. The third is unrecognizable, the fourth is an 8, the fifth either a 6 or 8 and the last is undecipherable.

"Thus, two and probably three of the digits they've been able to decipher are in the same sequence as the machine's number," Rhoden said. "It's too early to be certain of anything, but it looks like we may be on the way to showing this document was at least handled by someone within the Hughes' organization," the attorney said.

Tony, 6, wants to see mom again

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Six-year-old Tony Harris wants to see his mother just one more time before he goes blind from the cancer that will eventually take her life. Tony's mother, Chung Sun Harris, who also uses the name Julie, deserted her family last February. Her husband, James Harris, said Saturday he believes a combination of misfortune triggered the desertion.

The 31-year-old Harris said his Korean wife loved their two children "more than anything in the world." But then Tony fell ill and his case was diagnosed as terminal cancer. As the medical bills mounted, Harris said, he lost his job and his wife apparently was unable to deal with the pressure. "She couldn't cope with it," he said. Tony undergoes painful, daily treatment for a tumor that is growing behind his eyes. It is at times like this, his father said, that Tony calls out for his mother and asks to see her. Doctors said Tony is aware that his sight is dimming and his hearing is being weakened by the tumor, which doctors say may force Tony's eyeballs out of their sockets. They decline to speculate on how long the youngster will be able to see.

Harris, who has had to give Tony and his daughter, Melinda, 4, to foster parents, said he believes his wife would respond if she were aware of the boy's problem. He said she had friends in Richmond, Va., and Greenville, N. C., and she may have gone there. Even if she does respond, Harris said, the time is limited. Doctors said Tony may live only "a few months" if the tumor growth is not checked. And even if the tumor growth is checked, doctor's said the boy's case is terminal, and he can expect to live only two more years, at most.

Scouts, Klan clash

DAVIE, Fla. (UPI) — Ku Klux Klansmen and the Boy Scouts traded charges of prejudice and bigotry Saturday in a feud over the Klan's announced intention to march and enter a rest home and blue float in a Memorial Day parade sponsored by the scouts.

The New River Council of the Boy Scouts of America threatened to boycott their own event if the Klan shows up Monday.

"Scouting promotes as one of its major goals harmony and understanding among all young people from every nation, every ethnic group and among all races and classes," said scout of the Klan's Renek in announcing the parent South Florida Boy Scout Council was "disassociating itself" from the parade.

This brought an accusation of "prejudice and bigotry" from Florida Grand Dragon John Paul Rogers. "If they're trying to promote understanding, they've certainly got off on the wrong foot with us."

Pauling for ban

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Double Nobel Laureate Linus Pauling of Stanford University has called for a ban on all underground nuclear tests except those approved internationally for peaceful purposes.

Pauling, holder of the Nobel prize both for peace and for chemistry, said Friday the United States now has 30,000 nuclear weapons around the world — enough to kill everyone in the Soviet Union.

'Good will' period here

ASHORA, N.Y. (UPI) — Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward told Wells College graduates Saturday the country has entered a period of "national good will" without issues "to send people into the streets."

Speaking at the all-woman school's 78th annual commencement, Woodward said the latest Washington scandal involving Ohio Rep. Wayne Hays' love life is "clearly improper, but not anything to send anyone to the barricades."

Woodward also said the country has still not answered questions Washington posed as to whether former President Nixon represented the country's values or, if he did not, why the democratic process failed.

Falks divorce

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Peter Falk and his wife of 16 years says they are getting a friendly divorce.

Alyce Falk, 45, filed suit in Superior Court Friday for a divorce from Falk, 48, citing "irreconcilable differences."

An attorney said the Falks reached "an amicable decision to end their marriage ... in a friendly manner." They have two children, Jacqueline, 10, and Catherine, 5.

Marker in wrong spot

OTHELLO, Wash. (UPI) — Someone apparently spent a considerable amount of time constructing and erecting a postcard-historical marker near this eastern Washington community.

The sign points out Deadman's Bluff and tells the story of 15-year-old Edward O'Rourke, who was killed nearly a century ago when pushed off the bluff by cattle while night herding. The sign was carefully erected in a concrete base near a long bluff just northwest of Othello, but local historian Gladys Para says there's just one thing wrong: The sign is not in the right place.

Mrs. Para says she has no idea who erected the sign, and says the real site of the O'Rourke mishap is a half-mile to the west. She says the local Historical Society will gladly move the sign if it can ever find out who it belongs to.

Lebanon on brink of new war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian and Moslem artillery duels pushed Lebanon to the brink of renewed full-scale war Saturday. One Christian leader accused the United States of "falling Lebanon in its need."

Security in the capital collapsed during a day of fierce fighting in Beirut and to the North, claiming nearly 100 dead and 155 wounded over the past 24 hours, according to casualty figures released by both sides.

Parliamentary deputies who met President-elect Elias Sarkis Saturday described him as pessimistic and fearful that the new military escalation may wreck his efforts to arrange peace talks.

"It is now definite that the peace conference will be delayed and not held within a week or two as hoped," deputy Hus Eln Mansour said.

Palestinian sources said Christian mortars pounded a crowded outdoor market in the Palestinian refugee camp of Sabra on Beirut's southeastern outskirts, killing at least 25 persons shopping for the daily food and wounding at least 35 more.

The heaviest fighting was at the northern Akkar region near the Syrian border where rightists said two Christian towns came under a "genocidal" artillery attack. The rightists said leftist forces had completely surrounded the two towns, cut off all roads and prevented Christian wounded from being taken to hospitals.

The Christians counterattacked by shelling the Sabra camp and the Moslem suburbs of southeast Beirut. Rightist forces defending the towns of Kobayat and Andket, northeast of Tripoli, appealed to Syrian President Hafez Assad for "urgent and decisive action to save us from being massacred."

Christian Phalangist party leader Pierre Gemayel accused the United States of "falling Lebanon in its need" by restraining Syria from invading the country last January to impose peace by force.

Gemayel was commenting on a recent statement by former American envoy Lt. Dean Brown that the United States tried to persuade Syria not to intervene in Lebanon because of possible Israeli reaction.

"He (Brown) told me that America had agreed with Syria to solve the Lebanese crisis diplomatically," Gemayel said. "But we had expected the U.S. to do more or at least not to obstruct the Syrian role."

"It pains us to see the U.S. fail to help a friendly country. It is not fair to let Lebanon collapse," Gemayel said.

Syria still maintains a blockade of weapons to the leftist- and Palestinian sides and has between 6,000 and 10,000 troops inside Lebanon. The new fighting and Christian appeal for help raised speculation what Syria would do.

Speculation that the Syrians might reactivate their military involvement was renewed after Syria informed U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim on Friday that it would extend the U.N. peacekeeping mandate on the Golan Heights for another six months.

"If nothing else, the renewal removes one problem the Syrians would have to contend with and leaves them free to deal with Lebanon," a Lebanese political commentator noted.

Moslem leftists have opposed Syrian mediation in Lebanon and leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt refused to take part in the presidential election in parliament three weeks ago because of the continued presence of Syrian troops on Lebanese soil.

Pellet gun ban lifting good news for sheepmen

(Continued from p. 1). "It'll help," Burks added. "It's not the complete answer, but everything we can get to help will improve the situation."

Burks estimated that from five to 10 per cent of Flat Top's sheep were being lost to coyotes. He said the ranch had suffered severe losses after tamping when the sheep had been turned out to graze on the lower deserts around Rupert.

The use of helicopters for daytime spot control by the US Fish and Wildlife Service had been some help, Burks added, but he said he hoped the M4 would further lessen predator loss.

The poison, he said, he said, would not be administered privately but only through Wildlife Service trappers, as had been done in the past.

Roscoe Rich, Barley, also favored the use of M4 by federal trappers "on our behalf."

Rich, who owns about 7,000 sheep now grazing above Soda Springs, said coyotes had been taking a "heavy toll" on some of his hands. He said the use of helicopters and traps had not been effective in rough terrain.

The use of M4, he said, "isn't the answer, it'll help in some cases."

Joe Wio, Bellevue, a trapper for the Wildlife Service who has used M4 in the past, also favored its return, if used under government supervision.

"I don't think it would be a good thing for everybody to use," he said, "but it's the best thing for taking coyotes in my estimation."

Daughter's release sought by mother

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The mother of the kidnapped daughter of the Belgian ambassador Saturday issued a fearful appeal to the Communist abductors, begging her daughter's release.

The appeal was issued shortly after the hour a family spokesman had earlier predicted would resolve the abduction with a "happy ending" and indicated the kidnapers had agreed to accept less than their original ransom demand.

Mrs. Mireille Chaval, wife of Belgian ambassador Andre Chaval and mother of their 16-year-old daughter Nadine, told the leftist extremists who abducted the girl last Tuesday:

"I have now complied (with your terms) and I have faith you also will comply. I beg that you call me so as to know the moment when I can expect my daughter. My anxiety is now unbearable."

Earlier, family spokesman Ferdinand De lay told newsmen the kidnaped would be "resolved" and "there will be a happy ending" by noon (2 p.m. EDT) Saturday.

are said if the poison were used would be in posted areas only, and the baits would be removed during hunting seasons.

"We've got to come back with something to help us out," Wio said, "because it's quite a problem trying to take care of these predators."

He pooh-poohed fears that the baits would endanger the coyote population.

"Environmentalists don't know what they're talking about," he said. "They'll have to be wised up. There isn't going to be any such thing as a wipe out of the population of coyotes. We're having an awful time trying to even control it."

Church, Brown exchange barbs on qualifications

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Democrats Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Frank Church traded barbs Saturday on who is more qualified to be president.

Both were campaigning in the nation's smallest state for the primary Tuesday in which front-runner Jimmy Carter is favored.

Church said 18 months as California governor didn't qualify Brown for president. Brown said reading the Congressional Directory for 20 years didn't qualify Church for the job either.

The two late-starters campaigned for Rhode Island's 22 national convention delegates by shaking hands, walking, holding rallies and meeting with state political leaders.

Church said a victory in Rhode Island would prove he is not a regional candidate. Brown conceded it will be difficult for him to upset Carter because he is not on the ballot. He is seeking support under the uncommitted column.

"But we have a significant number of people here in the state and will try to get the message out as best we can," Brown said.

There are eight Democrats on Tuesday's ballot, but only three had large campaigns here. Neither President Ford nor Ronald Reagan came to the state. Ford was expected to complete his sweep of New England, but Reagan supporters were seeking crossover support from conservative Democrats.

Fascists under ban

ROME (UPI) — The government banned neo-Fascist political rallies in three cities Saturday in an attempt to prevent revenge violence for the slaying of a young Communist by neo-Fascists Friday night.

Government prefects in Milan, Genoa and Venice banned election campaign rallies called by the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement over the weekend on grounds they might endanger public order.

Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga in Rome said he had instructed prefects throughout Italy to take similar action if necessary.

The Communist party in a statement demanded quick action against the killers of Luigi Di Rosa, a 23-year-old leftist who died in a shooting following a right-wing shooting spree in the town of Sezze.

Communist youths, angered at the shooting death of one of their comrades, ransacked the neo-Fascist office in Sezze, smashing furniture and burning files and MSI banners.

President Giovanni Leone said in a message of condolences to the victim's family, "this new, grave episode of violence threatens to disturb the climate of civilized competition that should mark the electoral campaign."

Hearst plea by judge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The signs are growing that Patricia Hearst, already convicted of bank robbery in San Francisco, may never go on trial a second time.

The 22-year-old heiress appeared briefly in a county court Friday and attempted to put off entering a plea to kidnap-robbery-assault charges stemming from a 1974 shooting escapade at a Los Angeles sporting goods store.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brander refused to permit her to "stand mute" and instead entered a not guilty plea on her behalf.

But the judge noted that it could well be September before her case is called to trial because of court-ordered psychiatric tests she is now undergoing in a federal institution in San Diego and the necessary time needed by her lawyers after that to prepare a defense.

Attorney Albert Johnson, at a news conference after Friday's session, said in answer to a question that he did not believe Miss Hearst would ever go on trial because of the massive "prejudicial" publicity during the San Francisco trial.

Toll at 949

UDINE, Italy (UPI) — Ottavia Serafini, shielded and breast-fed her baby under the ruins of her earthquake-ravaged home while her husband lay dead a few feet from her.

Mrs. Serafini, 22, died in the Udine hospital Saturday. Her baby, Simone, survived.

Her death and that of another injured woman, 55-year-old Elisa Gol, raised the toll from the May earthquake in the northern Friuli region to 949, with many more missing and believed dead.

N-plant guard tightens

He confirmed all the nuclear plants were put on the latest alert Thursday.

Checks at various nuclear power stations around the nation indicated some stations were beefing up security in response to the alert, but others were not.

Many declined comment because, as a spokesman for Pacific Gas and Electric in San Francisco said, "the security wouldn't be secure anymore" if it were explained.

In Zion, Ill., the site of one of the Commonwealth Edison's nuclear plants, Sgt. Ralph Fisel of the town police said his squad car patrols were taking "a little closer look" at the plant and were "connected by phone and radio" with beefed-up private security forces.

But Fisel said he doubted extremists could pose much of a threat even if they did seize a power station.

"There's virtually no chance of a nuclear explosion," he said. "If they took over the place, they could scare a lot of people who really don't understand, but that's all."

"What could they do? Shut off our electricity."

In Cleveland, a spokesman for the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. said he had not heard of any alert. The company's nuclear plants are still under construction and there is no nuclear fuel at any of them.

In Sacramento, Calif., a spokesman for the Sacramento Municipal Utility District said "we were told we ought to have all security systems operating at full efficiency and to beef up certain areas" at the Rancho Seco nuclear plant.

But San Diego, a Southern California Edison spokesman said, "they didn't order any extra security, just following the normal program" at the San Onofre nuclear plant north of town.

College still top pick for most TF grads again

The fluctuations in marriage and military pursuits has also been mixed, with neither category being favored by more than 5 per cent since the categories were first included in 1974.

The preferences for the various categories show little difference between females and males.

Taking this year's figures, the only one far which the sex breakdown is available, college is favored by about 62 per cent of the girls and 59 per cent of the boys.

Surprisingly, more girls than boys intend to go straight into the job market, although the difference may be so slight as to be negligible.

About 25 per cent of the girls polled this year said they would go to work, while the same indication was given by about 24 per cent of the boys.

As might be expected, more boys (11.6 per cent) indicated they would go to work than did girls (5.7 per cent).

The biggest differential was in preference for marriage, where that category was indicated by about 8 per cent of the girls but less than half of one per cent of the boys.

Indicating marriage, however, did not rule out some other category being picked too, so its impact in the survey may not mean much. A girl could have indicated an intent to marry and also to go on to college or follow some other vocational pursuit.

Among the colleges picked by the students who chose that alternative, CSI was easily the most favored.

Those indicating an intent to enroll at the local college comprised 29 per cent of all those who said they would go on to college.

Next favored were out-of-state schools as a whole, exclusive of Brigham Young University.

About 15 per cent of the students said they would attend unspecified out-of-state schools, while another 6 per cent said they would attend BYU.

The Provo, Utah, school was singled out for inclusion in the listing because a large number of students normally attend the LDS institution.

A second Mormon school, Ricks College, Rexburg, was picked by 11.5 per cent of the students. Ricks was matched in popularity only by the University of Idaho at Moscow as the most popular out-of-town school in the state. That university was also picked by 11.5 per cent of the students.

Another 10 per cent chose Boise State University which was closely followed by Idaho State University. About 8.5 per cent of the students listed the Pocatello school.

Less popular was the College of Idaho at Caldwell, which was chosen by about 5.5 per cent of the college-bound students.

One student selected Lewis and Clark College at Lewiston.

Poe returned to his cell after the ceremony, one of five conducted that day. He is serving a sentence of five years to life for burglary. (UPI)

Rhodesia bias end sought

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — A white opposition leader Saturday urged an immediate overhaul in Rhodesia's race laws, which he said are "rooted in racial discrimination," to prevent black Africans joining the guerrilla insurgency.

In recent skirmishes, white troops killed 14 black guerrillas in the past 24 hours, a security forces announcement said Saturday.

Tim Gibbs, leader of the opposition Rhodesia party, told his party's annual Congress ways of improving race relations would include the abolition of the controversial Land Tenure Act, which gives half the land area to the country's 6.1 million blacks and the other half to 275,000 whites.

"A dramatic start must be made immediately on changing our system which, because it is rooted in racial discrimination, is driving our people into the arms of the Communists," Gibbs said. "It is our system that is multiplying the numbers of terrorists daily."

Financial scandal puts public spotlight on potatoes

By H. J. MAIDENBERG
© N. V. Times Service
NEW YORK — Few vegetables that pass across the checkout counters of supermarkets are as mundane as the potato.

Yet potatoes are big business in the commodity markets, and this week they found their way into the public spotlight in one of the biggest financial scandals to hit the markets in years.

A group of speculators refused or were unable to honor roughly $4 million in contracts to deliver the commodity potato to a default that has shaken the entire commodities industry and raised serious questions about the structure of the markets and how they are traded.

Regulators and market participants alike are wondering whether the default may have been deliberately planned to destroy a commodity market — the New York Mercantile Exchange — as a first step toward the creation of a potato cartel.

Last Tuesday at 3 p.m. these magnified news tickers reported the strangest item anyone has ever seen in this extraordinary marketplace. It said persons unnamed had defaulted on contracts to deliver 49.85 million pounds of Maine potatoes.

By the end of the week, the exchange had decided not to try to buy Maine potatoes to satisfy delivery contracts but to settle the matter with cash.

Three as yet unnamed brokers who in turn have to compensate the exchange for failing to deliver the commodity to 15 houses or individuals — also unnamed — supposedly left in the lurch by the default.

And the Federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission, created just 13 months ago to police the industry, ordered sweeping reforms in potato trading. It is also pursuing an investigation of what happened — including the possibility that there had been a plot to destroy or cripple the exchange.

Because the potato scandal did not affect the overall supply or price of the product in supermarkets, the commodity industry will quietly strengthen its defenses without much direct impact on the general public.

If the public impact is minimal, then what was the fuss all about and how does commodity trading affect the average person? The answers are explained in the reasons that commodity exchanges exist.

Basically, raw materials are being traded for future delivery. Hence the term futures contracts.

contracts to buy a certain quantity of a commodity at a specific price and time. The "short" is the other side of the transaction — someone who doesn't necessarily have the commodity in hand but who nevertheless agrees to provide it under the terms of his contract with the "long."

Typically, "longs" are commercial users of potatoes — such as potato-chip or frozen french-fry manufacturers — as well as speculators.

"Shorts" often are farmers trying to insure their profits by hedging against a possible price decline — as well as speculators.

Just as those actually involved in handling, say, potatoes as a commercial product may be "long" or "short" the market, so are the speculators, who may have no interest in even looking at a potato, but who risk their capital by gambling on anticipated price trends.

Thus a typical transaction in the Maine potato market operated by the New York Mercantile may go as follows: A potato-chip maker wants to assure himself of supplies of potatoes for next November (or March, April and May, the other delivery months) as well as try to guarantee the price of the commodity. He does this by buying "long" contracts, amounting to 50,000 pounds each, to assure deliveries at these times.

The manufacturer can now plan his production and have a good idea of what his costs will be that far in the future. This allows his salesmen, for example, to book business up to a year ahead.

The farmer in Maine does not expect to have potatoes until this fall; his concern is what price they will fetch then. So he sells contracts "short," or in other words, sells potatoes he does not yet have.

For the manufacturer of potato products, who is "long" the market, a raise in the price of Maine spuds between now and the expiration of the contract is of little concern. He has locked in his cost for his chief raw material.

The farmer is protected from a drop in the value of his crop because he is "short" the market. If the market drops, the loss that he suffers on his actual crop should be covered by the profits he gains as a short seller on paper. If prices rise, he loses on the short sale but gains from the rise in the value of his crop.

In a word, both the manufacturer and farmer are hedged. But their buying and selling do not usually serve as the only two aspects of the market. For one thing, only 60 per cent of the nation's potato crop is processed; the rest is bought for table use.

Here is where the speculator comes in. He or she takes the other side of any deal, long or short, and thus provides much of the market's liquidity. The speculator who buys a "long" contract expects the price of potatoes to rise, and every rise of a cent means $5 a contract, which is acquired for as little as a $200 cash down payment, or margin. The balance comes due when the contract is liquidated.

If the speculator thinks the price will go down, he sells short. In the hope that he can buy the commodity he doesn't own later at a lower price than the longs agreed to pay before the contract expires and delivery must be made.

What sparked the debacle in the potato market last Tuesday was that when the 3 p.m. deadline came for offering and receiving the physical commodity covered by the May, 1976, contract, three speculators holding 997 contracts were either unable or unwilling to make the delivery and thus defaulted.

analysis

Mass production in more recent times was facilitated by the orderly flow of raw material in large quantities. To keep a reliable supply of raw materials moving smoothly is one thing. But what about their cost? How can a potato-chip manufacturer or a supermarket chain protect itself against violent price fluctuations in potatoes? And how can a farmer minimize the risk of having a year's hard work and expense, wiped out by an adverse turn in the market at harvest time?

They can do it by hedging in the commodity futures market as either "longs" or "shorts."

A "long" is someone who

Improved game herds stressed

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Ron Pursley, Democratic candidate for Congress in the first district said if elected in November, he would "find that the federal agencies managing our wildlife habitat develop a plan in conjunction with the state to improve our game herds."

He said he supports the Chamberlain Basin part of the River of No Return Wilderness.

"Chamberlain Basin is preferred calving area for the largest elk herd south of the Salmon River."

Wharton said one of the best threats to the state. Speaking in Lewiston, Pursley said, "Not long ago, the steelhead and salmon fishing was closed. Now, we find severe restrictions on elk and mule deer hunting."

He said, "While we in Idaho are trying to build up our game herds, our congressman introduces legislation to sell off our remaining habitats for private development."

Who's he representing? California developers? He certainly doesn't represent the people of Idaho I have grown up with," Pursley told the group that "if Symms has his way, we would all be limited to frozen fish sticks and soybean hamburgers."

He said, "While we in Idaho

2 Malad sophomores charged in bombing

MALAD, Idaho (UPI) — Two Malad High School sophomore boys face juvenile charges in connection with a bomb blast at the school earlier this week, Obedia County Kenneth Wharton said today.

An investigation by the sheriff led to the arrest of the two juveniles. The bomb exploded in the locker of a student Tuesday night or Wednesday morning. The building was unoccupied at the time. Principal Jerry Eplin said damage to the locker and the immediate area was estimated at $200.

Wharton said one of the boys admitted making the black-powder bomb. He said the two then allegedly placed the explosive in the locker of another student.

The sheriff said the two boys told him they had had a disagreement with the owner of the locker and some of his friends earlier in the day.

Brother seeks same post

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — The brother of an Idaho state senator giving up his post intends to run for the same position, but from the opposite side of the political fence.

Democrat Orval Snow,

Moscow, announced earlier he would not seek re-election to his fifth district senate seat.

Wharton said one of the best threats to the state. Speaking in Lewiston, Pursley said, "Not long ago, the steelhead and salmon fishing was closed. Now, we find severe restrictions on elk and mule deer hunting."

Woman seeks re-election

BOISE (UPI) — Democratic National Committeewoman, Carolyn Selander of Boise, has announced that she will seek re-election to the position at the state Democratic convention in June.

Selander was elected to the post in 1972. She has represented Idaho on the Democratic National Committee and as a member of the Rules Committee at the 1972 national convention.

TF women hurt in crash

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls women were listed in good condition Friday at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital after suffering face and head cuts in a traffic accident at the south-west entrance of Buhl Thursday evening.

Patty Little, 22, Twin Falls, and her passenger, Nancy Neal, 22, were treated for lacerations suffered when they were thrown into the windshield of Miss Little's vehicle. It collided with a vehicle and a horse trailer being towed by Suzanne Graesch, 18, Buhl.

Miss Graesch, a high school rodeo queen candidate, was traveling toward Castletford and the Little vehicle traveling east toward Twin Falls when the two collided in the intersection. The horses in the Graesch trailer escaped injury. Miss Graesch was treated for bruises and lacerations and released.

4 vehicles in accident

BURLEY — A car, pickups and boat accident caused nearly $2,500 damage Wednesday evening in South Burley.

Burley police charged Marvin McKintosh, 57, Burley, with driving while intoxicated. Police said McKintosh drove his pickup into a car parked east of the intersection of 27th Street and Albion Avenue about 7:50 p.m. The impact shoved the parked car, with driver Mary Farnes, Burley, in it, against a parked pickup, which, in turn, was driven against a boat parked at the curb.

Girl charged

BURLEY — An apparently hungry teenage girl was charged with petty larceny after she allegedly shoplifted some items from Albertson's Supermarket.

Burley police arrested the 13-year-old girl about 6:45 p.m. Wednesday. Police, said the girl had taken tortillas and stuffed them in her purse.

Receiving the coveted Davis Trophy was Melody Barlow. Miss Barlow was presented the trophy by Roy Parton, high school counselor. The trophy is presented to an outstanding senior-class member selected by members of the graduating class.

The American Legion Auxiliary Americanism award was presented by Lois Jepson to Jill Meacham and the American Legion Award, presented by Ralph Dunn, went to Nick Frings.

Ceremonies included the invocation by Don Baier, student body chaplain, and an address by Wesley Gates, high school government teacher who spoke on "Truiter's Law."

Dan Mink narrated during the school band's performance of "Thirteen Stars-Overture to Independence."

Ramona Aspiasu, co-saltatorian, gave a speech entitled, "A Step Into a New World," followed by co-saltatorian Jane Las's address, "Build a Better You."

Valdettorian Rick Hansen addressed the graduates with a speech on "Bicentennial Salute."

Jerry Diehl, principal, presented the class while Lyle Van Orman, school trustee, presented the diplomas.

The class of 1976 will be the last class to graduate from the Jerome High School gymnasium. The class of 1977 will graduate at the new high school now nearing completion east of town.

New faction speaks out on plan

RUPERT — A new faction voiced concern about the Minidoka city-county comprehensive plan Thursday.

The new committee is urging swift completion of the plan and objects to some of the limitations the latest proposals would place on zoning regulations.

John Cameron, spokesman for the group, told the Rupert Chamber of Commerce Thursday that the committee wants to "get" the comprehensive plan off center and finalized. He said a delegation will appear at a public hearing next Wednesday to urge changes that would drastically alter the intent of some of the present plan's elements.

The hearing is at 8 p.m. Wednesday before the Minidoka County Planning Commission in the Fifth District courtroom at the judicial building in Rupert.

Petitions now being circulated "object to the long delay and confusion in preparing the Minidoka County Comprehensive Plan." The petitions call for return to the original comprehensive plan which "was accepted at the first public hearing."

The petition seeks elimination from that plan of a 20-acre minimum for housing in agricultural zoning and a provision that would allow agriculturally-oriented small businesses in that zoning.

But Cameron Thursday said his personal opinion is that it would be more feasible to make changes in the new plan to combine these points with the basic concepts in the original draft.

Cameron said he and others were approached by a county commissioner and asked to become involved.

Wednesday's hearing will be the third held on the plan. During controversy over the 20-acre provision, county commissioners revamped the planning commission, enlarging it from 8 to 12 members.

Some of those new members were vocal critics of the original draft. They drastically rewrote the agriculture, housing, industry and commerce sections of the plan, placing severe limitations on zoning regulation.

The extent of those restrictions has wavered as the commission made new revisions, then changed those revisions in two meetings subsequent to the second public hearing.

The petition being circulated calls for agricultural property owners to plot their property for subdivision before a third house is built, other than for the immediate family of hired hands.

That approach is similar to the one developed in the second plan draft, although it calls for subdivision after five parcels and also places that requirement on any density over one dwelling per five acres.

Cameron indicated the group supports that concept in restricting growth of housing in agricultural areas, but said the petitions may not be placed before the commission Wednesday.

He said the petition was drafted "in view of the fact there were only two objections to the first plan."

But he added, "I actually feel the wording in Plan No. 2 is better than Plan No. 1," and said the committee has "thought seriously about altering the second plan."

The major point, he said, is to get a workable plan adopted.

"We've Mickey Moused around with it for four years," he said, "and about two-thirds of the people involved in the program are about ready to get up and walk off and quit."

Classes benefit handicapped

BY BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Swimming instructors at the YWCA pool say there is nothing more satisfying than seeing a new swimmer learning to master control in the water.

However, the instructors are unusually enthusiastic about a special group of 25 adults who show up for swimming classes every Tuesday and Thursday morning.

The 25 are adults who have never before had an opportunity to enjoy a pool and swimming exercise. They are handicapped and retarded adults. Special procedures must be used with the group and almost every student must have an instructor or adult volunteer as they progress through the six weeks program.

Members of the Twin Falls Jaycees have helped finance the program and Donna Sauer, director of volunteer services for the Department of Health and Welfare, provides volunteers.

The first sessions at the pool consist of "water adjustment." Some of the swimmers are so frightened of the water they will not go near the pool unless forcibly carried.

"This may sound cruel," says Mrs. Sauer, "but once we get them into the water they truly enjoy it."

Pointing to one of the adult swimmers, Mrs. Sauer said, "I had never seen that young woman smile until we began working with her in the water and she found out she could float."

One swimmer comes to the pool in a wheel chair and must be lifted into the water. Another, an adult cerebral palsy victim, is unable to walk alone and frequently cannot open his hands from a fixed position. In the water, with more buoyance, he is able to float on his back and stomach and is beginning to use his legs and arms. He can also walk through the water which his volunteer assistant says may help him walk better on a hard flat surface. He is also learning to roll over on his back and float if he gets into difficulty and has lost his fear of the water.

Until they enrolled in the special class, most of the handicapped adults had never attempted to swim. After the first four weeks, most can float with a kick board and some can float alone. Many wear wide styrofoam belts to help keep them afloat while they learn to paddle around the pool.

Sherrie Campbell, a young swimming instructor who directs the handicapped swimmers program for the "Y" is enthusiastic about the group's progress.

"It's fun. This is one of the most exciting groups I have been able to work with," she says.

A retarded and handicapped children's swimming program is also being conducted at the pool under the direction of Miss Campbell.

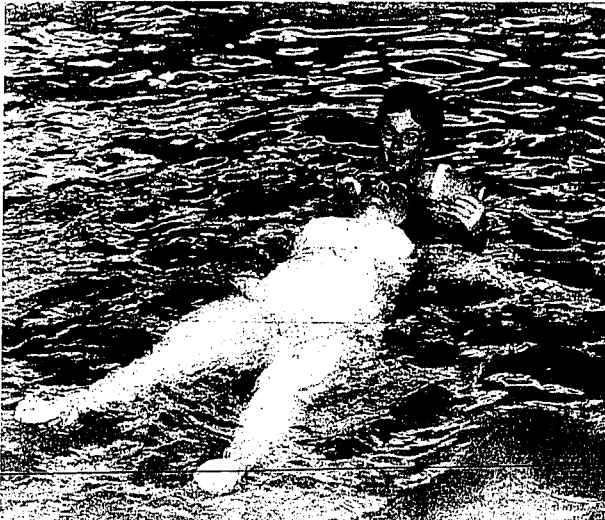

The children learn a little faster because they are younger and their muscles more pliable, she says.

"Many of these adults have had no opportunity for athletic activities but nearly all of them are finding they can handle themselves in the water."

She said many of those in the class have already reached a level of control which would enable them to save themselves were they thrown into a pool or stream in a traffic accident or through some other incident.

Volunteers assist swimmers into shallow water.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Around this time last year I wrote to you telling you that I was a very unhappy 12-year-old adopted, diabetic girl whose parents and teachers were always on my back. You wrote back with lots of suggestions, and told me to try to do things their way.

I didn't believe a word you wrote, and I got into big trouble at school. It got harder and harder for me to live with myself anymore, so I went to talk to my best friend's mother, and she helped me see that everything you wrote to me was 100 per cent true. Then I read your letter over and over, again, and after a while it sunk in.

I changed myself just in time to save my reputation and get back with all my friends, and Abby, your letter was the cause of it all. Thank you! I couldn't have done it without you. Now I'm a better person and can talk to my parents, which I couldn't do last year.

Letter appreciated

Abby, please put this in your column because I'm sure a lot of teenagers don't realize that you write personal answers to those who send stamped, addressed envelopes.

All my love,
M.L. IN BARSTOW, CALIF.

DEAR M.: I am pleased to know that my letter helped you to get it all together, but you deserve more credit than I. I only offered suggestions. YOU followed through. God bless you, honey.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved into a furnished apartment. We have no children, but we have two "big" dogs that we love very much.

First when we went out, we left the dogs alone in the apartment, and they ripped up everything they could get their little paws on. They simply ruined the furniture and rug.

After we saw the damage our dogs had done, we took to locking them up in the bathroom, but, Abby, this upsets them so much, it just breaks my heart. I can't blame them, I know I wouldn't want to be locked in a tiny bathroom for five hours, would you?

Is there any other solution? We don't have anyone who can watch the dogs when we go out. Please suggest something.

LOVES MY DOGS

DEAR LOVES: If you can't train your dogs to refrain from tearing up their surroundings when left alone, please submit them to a cruel and unusual confinement, take them with you to find them another home. Dogs have rights, too.

DEAR ABBY: I am not keen on your approving traditional white weddings for non-virgin brides just because it "probably was their heart's desire."

I have recently arranged a church wedding for my 30-year-old daughter who had confessed that she was three-months pregnant, I told her that if she insisted on wearing a wedding veil, I would not attend her wedding. She wore the white wedding gown, carried a bridal bouquet and had her hair done up with flowers and ribbons instead of a veil.

I am not sure how many knew that she was pregnant at her wedding but when the baby arrived six-months later no remarks were made.

RICHMOND MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Under the circumstances, I imagine you would have disapproved of her wearing the white gown. For my part, she could have worn the veil as well.

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary to a very fine family man. About once a week, my boss invites me to have lunch with him downtown. I find it very enjoyable, but I understand there has been some talk about it around the office. In fact, I hear that his wife has been asking questions about me.

I wish you'd tell me just what two people could do between 12 and 1 in a crowded restaurant.

MS UNDERSTOOD

DEAR MS: They could make plans to meet after 5, where it's all arranged.

I hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Water possible cancer source

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - A biologist from the University of New Orleans said Mississippi River water may be only one source of cancer-causing chemicals found in the blood of newborn infants.

Dr. John Lassiter, who has studied newborns at Charity Hospital for two years, said "high concentrations of ben(a)pyrene and chloroform in babies' blood probably comes from the water their mothers drink."

"Some of the compounds may be entering through the diet or the atmosphere or other sources of contamination, but we've identified (compounds in the city drinking water) and this is the one we suspect," said Lassiter.

He said there is no reason for alarm, but Lassiter said more study is needed to find how the chemicals affect the babies.

UNO researchers and Charity Hospital doctors released a study Thursday that said the same organic chemicals such as benzene and chloroform found in New Orleans water was showing up in the blood of newborns.

Although the study does not prove where the chemicals come from, it does show the compounds will cross the placental barrier, doctors said.

MR. AND MRS. J. LAVIER MORGAN

TF pair to observe 50th anniversary

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. J. Lavier Morgan, Twin Falls, will observe their golden wedding anniversary with an open house, June 6.

The open house will be held from 2:30 to 5 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Millford Marsh, 64 Martin St., Twin Falls.

The Morgans were married June 1, 1926, in Idaho Falls. They have lived in Twin Falls for 35 years.

Their daughters, Mrs. Madison (Lathel) Hayes, Mrs. Allen (Carol) Tulley and Mrs. Millford (Marva) Marsh, all Twin Falls, will be hostesses for the event.

The couple has nine grandchildren and nine-great-grandchildren.

All friends and relatives are invited. The couple receives no gifts.

Conference reports heard by Altrusans

TWIN FALLS — A conference report was heard by members of the Twin Falls Altrusa Club during the Thursday evening meeting at the home of Virginia Baneroff.

Dorothy Rowe, president-elect and delegate to the district conference held in Seattle, Wash., reviewed conference activities and special awards won. The club placed second in the TV and radio publicity award; first in the special projects and first in overall publicity.

Norma Herzinger and Ardith Kiddwell were hostesses. Guests were Kathryn Scott, Judy Turner, Barbara Ekelhart and Goldie Severi. Special "conference" prizes were presented by Mrs. Rowe.

The June 3 board meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Rowe, with the dinner meeting set June 8. The June 21 evening meeting will be held at the home of Margaret Watts. This is the group's annual report meeting and officers will be installed.

Aviator will file charges

NUERNBERG, West Germany (UPI) — The first woman graduate of the U.S. Army's helicopter flight school said today she is filing charges against her commanding officer in her campaign to get transferred to a combat outfit patrolling the East-West border.

"I am not a female aviator," Jennie A. Vallance Jr. said. "I am an army aviator."

Because of her sex, the 21-year-old pilot has been confined to flying helicopter ambulances for a medical detachment. "Boring" flights from point A to point B," she said.

"I want to get transferred to a cavalry unit where I can use the low-level and map-of-the-earth flying I was taught," she said.

She said she has taken the rare step of filing charges of dereliction of duty against her commander, Capt. Donald D. Conkright. The charges are of a technical nature concerning an entry in her flight record and rule governing flights. They have nothing to do with the army's ban on granting combat status to women.

But the charge was designed to once again bring her demand to the attention of the army.

"I think the army is discriminating against me," she said. "I was told when I signed up I could fly any helicopter in any field assignment for the army."

But Gen. George S. Blanchard, the commander of the U.S. Army in Europe turned down her request for a transfer. His aide wrote her that female pilots may not fly in combat-type operations.

She would like to get in the same outfit as her husband, Warrant Officer James Vallance Jr. of Montgomery, Ala. He flies for a cavalry unit that patrols West Germany's borders with East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

"My husband approves my request," she said. "He wants me to do whatever I want to."

"This is not equal opportunity," she said. "It is discrimination."

Her commanding officer denied the technical charge of dereliction of duty.

MR. AND MRS. J. BRAD FILLMORE

Couple recites vows in temple ceremony

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. J. Brad Fillmore were honored at a wedding reception May 14 at the Twin Falls Ninth Ward LDS Chapel.

April Ann Arrington and J. Brad Fillmore were married at the Salt Lake City LDS Temple with Zeph Y. Erekson, temple officiator, conducting the ceremony.

Accompanying the couple to the temple were Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Arrington, Twin Falls, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Fillmore, Tremonton, Utah, parents of the bridegroom; and Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ragsten, Heyburn, maternal grandparents of the bride.

The parents of the bridegroom were hosts for a wedding supper at Amy's Smorgasbord in Salt Lake City.

The bride wore a Jean Muir original design gown fashioned in saltiness by the bride and her mother. It was styled with a jewel neckline, long raglan sleeves, tucked at the shaped yoke and at the wide lace-trimmed cuffs. The bodice and skirt were gathered to a fitted midriff and all seams were topstitched. A caplet of embroidered lace with a standup collar and an edging of fluted lace was worn over the yoke.

Her fitted half cap headpiece was covered with embroidered lace. She carried an oval bouquet of red rosebuds, white pompano chrysanthemums, ming fern, and mimosa.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn S. Arrington greeted guests at the reception. Malanie Hamilton was in charge of the guest book, Tamara and LaWynn Arrington received gifts.

The wedding party greeted guests before a backdrop of shirred Austrian drapery with a pale blue background and indirect lighting. Large tiers of red roses, white chrysanthemums and white gladioli flanked the couple.

Colleen Arrington, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Kim Fillmore, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Kanoo Yamashita and Richard Fillmore were groomsmen. Also greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ragsten and Mrs. Bert Fillmore, grandparents of the couple.

A red, white and blue color scheme was carried out in the reception hall with colonial motifs of white lace, red carnations and royal blue streamers on the quartet tables.

The bride's table was decorated with an arrangement of candy stripe carnations and royal blue ribbon.

Mrs. Trena Vandenberg, Mrs. Paul Burnett, and Mrs. Jerry Holman assisted at the serving table. Chilled apple juice, fresh fruits and nut breads were served.

Also assisting with the serving were Mrs. Charles Merrill, Mrs. Don Conn, Jana Vandenberg, Lisa and Shannon Arrington and Christina Garrison.

The couple was also honored at an open house May 15 at the Bowcut reception center, Tremonton, with the bridegroom's parents as hosts.

The couple resides in Orem, Utah, where the bridegroom attends Brigham Young University, Provo.

Open family living stressed

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls Public Library official has reviewed several new books at the library.

"Open Family Living," by Thomas C. McGinnis. The concept of open family living is supported with a historian's attention to the facts of the trial.

"Adlai - Stevenson of Illinois," by John Martin. This superb biography is a richly detailed, intimate, surprising plus 10 years' of extensive research and access to Stevenson's private papers has given the author a rare insight into his subject. His findings shed a new light on a number of crucial episodes in Stevenson's life — including his much publicized and little understood divorce; his concealed, early political ambitions, and his relations with the men and women who played important roles in his private and professional life.

EVEN IF YOU HAVEN'T LOST ANYTHING it's fun to read the "Lost & Found." Turn there now!

to encourage and help each person develop his individual potential while, at the same time, contributing to the development of a more open and healthy relationship among family members. The result is a timely, important book for anyone who is, has been, or will be involved in a marriage or a family.

"The Herzog Legacy," by Gertrude Schweitzer, when Sigmund Herzog, a German Jewish immigrant, (named "The Paper" in 1975, it was the realization of an almost impossible dream. His hopes for a male successor to direct his dynasty were not realized. As the story opens, and you meet his daughter, Hester, you realize that she will be a shaper of the destiny of the great publishing empire. This is a story of three generations of Sigmund's family, and how three particular women broke into a male-dominated world and mastered it and altered it forever.

"The Court-Martial of Daniel Boone," by Allen W. Eckert. Based on a true, little-known episode in Daniel Boone's life, the author recreates the legendary frontiersman's severest trial for his life at Boonesborough in 1778. A captain during the Revolutionary War, Boone faces—court-martial and hanging for such high crimes as betraying his command to the Indians, conspiring to surrender Boonesborough, and accepting favors from the enemy. Boone pleads guilty to the charges against him, but also pleads not guilty to the charge of treason. This is a rousing suspenseful story of the famous frontier hero portrait of Adlai E. Stevenson — the public figure and the private man. A long personal relationship with Stevenson,

Ask the Jacobys

A Kansas reader wants to know just how good a bridge player President Eisenhower was.

We will repeat the answer Oswald Jacoby gave to that question after playing with the President at the White House.

Jacoby said he was a very good player, but if he hadn't had the responsibility of such things as commanding the Allied forces in Europe and running the United States, he would have been as good as anyone.

Voters increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Census Bureau estimates 191 million Americans will be old enough to vote in the November election — 10 million more than in 1972.

The bureau also reported Thursday that the West and the South are the regions with the fastest-growth rates in eligible voters since the last election.

Eligible voters increased 11 per cent in western states and 10.2 per cent in southern states since 1972, it said. This compared with 4.7 per cent for north central states and 3.2 per cent for northeastern states.

The South was the only region in which these of voting age accounted for less than half of the population. This indicates greater voting strength for southern states in the future.

Eligible voters declined slightly in Rhode Island and the District of Columbia. All other states will have increases, led by Florida with 20.7 per cent more voters and Arizona, 20.1 per cent.

Blaine Demo to leave office

HALLEY — Blaine County's prosecuting attorney Tom Campton is leaving his job in the job figured in his decision. He will return to private practice. Assistant prosecuting attorney Mike Dougherty will seek Campton's position on the Democratic slate. Campton praised Dougherty for his knowledge of the law and work with the county since coming here in January.

TF housing project announced

BY BONNIE BAIRD JONES Times-News writer TWIN FALLS — A $1 million land sale Friday has set the stage for a major home-building project in northeast Twin Falls. In what may have been the largest exchange of undeveloped property in the city, Sierra Life Insurance Co. sold most of Sierra Estates Subdivision No. 1, all of Sierra Estates Subdivision No. 2, and another 53 acres of adjacent property to a Las Vegas, Nev., firm. Chism Homes, Inc., headquartered in Las Vegas with division offices in Boise and Cheyenne, Wyo., paid more than $1 million for the 74-acre tract. Twin Falls real estate agent Mike Gray, who handled the transaction, announced the sale Friday. All of the property is north of Falls Avenue and east of Locust and Madonna streets. Hank Chism, president of Chism Homes, and Darrell Tschacher, vice president of the Idaho division, said they plan to begin construction immediately on 28 single family homes in Sierra Subdivision 1. The entire area is zoned residential low density. Homes will range in the $40,000 to $50,000 value level or for a "moderate" income home owner, Chism said.

The 53 acres east of Madonna is presently unplatted and is being farmed, he said. The other areas are already platted. Some builders have already completed homes in the Sierra Estates Subdivision No. 1. Chism said his firm plans a continuing development program that may take as much as 10 years to complete. He said at the present time the firm plans only residential use of the entire parcel. There is no current consideration for commercial development, he said. He also announced plans to open an office in Twin Falls for Chism Homes Inc. and said Tschacher will be in charge of establishing and stating the new office. He will announce personnel and location at a later date. "We feel there is a good market in this area and the location of the Sierra land is ideal," Chism said. He said the firm will also be bringing new financing in this area, not previously available to Twin Falls residents. Interest and permanent financing for the Friday transaction is provided by Sherwood and Roberts Inc., a Boise concern. Letroy C. Marten, vice president of Sherwood and Roberts, announced the recording of the $1.04 million trust deed Friday. Mike Gray Realty will have exclusive marketing of the new homes, Chism said.

Teachers cast votes in Minidoka

BY SHANE O'NEILL Times-News writer RUPERT — Teachers are marking ballots this weekend to elect officers for next year in the Minidoka County Education Association.

Current President Milon McDaniel said today he will probably turn over the teaching contracts based on a salary schedule of about 6 per cent increase. The extension was granted to allow for a ruling on an MCEA legal action against the district. Fifth District Judge Sherman Bellwood Thursday handed down that ruling. He refused to issue an order to slow cause why the district should not be required to proceed with mediation or fact-finding.

Bellwood also rejected pleas that the contracts not be issued (they already had been delivered to teachers before the hearing) or that they be amended by subsequent negotiation procedures.

McDaniel said Friday that he could not comment until he has seen the ruling, which had not been relayed to him yet from attorney Robert Huntley Jr. in Pocatello.

The MCEA president said he is still holding the teacher contracts turned over to him with a power of attorney for the purpose of signing them. He said the negotiation is still adhering to its plan to return them signed to the district on Tuesday, if necessary.

The MCEA met Thursday evening for its annual election, but failed to muster a quorum. McDaniel said ballots were distributed to teachers Friday, the last day of school, for them to vote over the weekend.

Roger Ling, attorney for the district, was in California on another case Friday. Superintendent of Schools Darrell Hatfield praised the decision, but carefully avoided any discussion of the controversy that arose after MCEA negotiators declared an impasse on May 3.

"I think now we have an understanding of what the procedural agreement means," Hatfield said. "I think we needed that." Hatfield said the agreement is one negotiated in 1974 and figured prominently in the "order to show cause" hearing. The crucial point in it was the provision that negotiations must be concluded by May 1.

Judge Bellwood, in his ruling, commented that the May 1 deadline practically sets a March 6 deadline for declaring an impasse if the subsequent mediation and fact-finding procedures are to be completed.

But he said, "The court is powerless in this case to make a new agreement for the parties, or to alter the legislative enactments."

He said negotiations must start earlier in the fall or meetings must be held more frequently if that timetable is to be met. Evidence at the hearing showed that the MCEA was that mediation and fact-finding were not contemplated as part of the negotiations that must be completed by May 1. It contended that a deadline on these would leave open the possibility of the district deliberately delaying to thwart statutory intent on requiring negotiations.

Bellwood ruled, "Mediation is necessarily a matter of negotiating through a third party. Fact-finding procedures contemplate further negotiations to resolve remaining disputes."

The district contends that the May 1 deadline is necessary to meet statutory budget requirements.

The MCEA replied that the district negotiated past the May 1 deadline in the other two years the procedural agreement has been in effect. Bellwood pointed out that the contract was only 15 days old in 1974 and both parties mutually agreed to the extension in 1975, whereas no mutual agreement was reached this year.

"Although this conduct for the past two years causes one to question the urgency of budgetary and individual contract considerations, nevertheless, the court does not believe it is authorized to tamper with statutory mandates," Bellwood wrote.

Another MCEA argument was that other school districts in the state, and particularly in Southeastern Idaho, have issued contracts later because of lengthy negotiations and even have amended budgets after the statutory deadline.

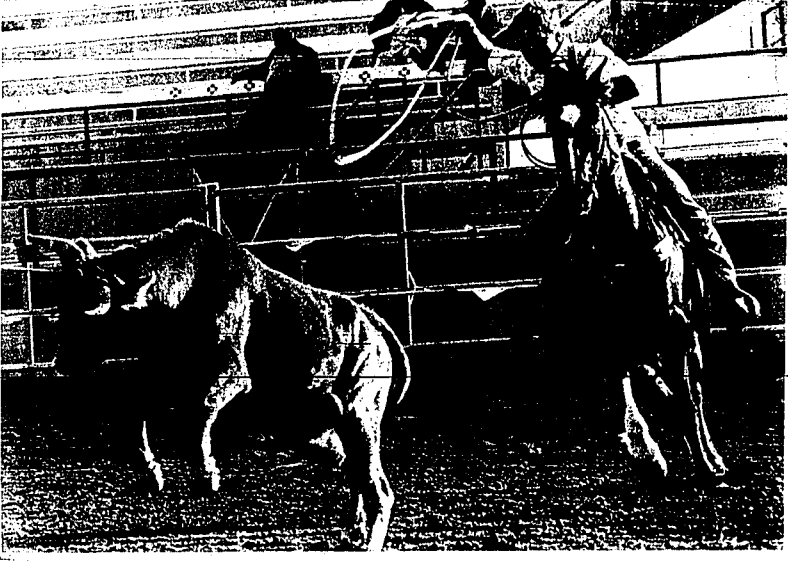

"This conduct cannot have the effect of amending or repealing statutory mandates," Bellwood ruled. "Reliance on this past or other conduct must be at one's peril."

Bellwood's decision listed the steps taken during negotiations this year, starting with the MCEA listing on Nov. 26 of 30 items it intended to negotiate. Two days later the district listed 16 items, many of which were dropped during negotiations.

The teacher items included a preamble, recognition, association and teacher rights, rights of the board, grievance procedure, staff evaluation, administrative evaluation, the procedural agreement, employment status of probationary teachers, professional growth, procedure for determining curriculum and instruction, work load and preparation periods, promotions and vacancies and transfers, duty-free lunch period, specialized elementary teachers, teacher aides and non-instructional duties and student teaching program.

Teachers also wanted to negotiate various types of leave, including sick leave, bereavement leave, family illness, professional, public office, personal, sabbatical, extended leave of absence, child-bearing or child-rearing and civic duties. Fringe benefit elements cited were health insurance, long-term disability, life insurance, dental care, optical care, property and retirement.

Under compensation, they listed the salary schedule, recognition for additional summer employment, recognition for additional preparation, method of payment, extra-duty pay (both long and short term), summer school and increment for being head of the household. Calendar elements including record-keeping days, Friday relief, faculty meetings and holidays.

TEAM ROPING competition in the Sixth District high school rodeo Friday evening finds Monty Albert of Minico high school about to drop his loop over a steer in the arena at the Filer fairgrounds. Albert's teammate was Rick Walker, also of Minico. The rodeo ended Saturday evening after qualifying contestants for the state high school rodeo June 16-19 at Burley.

SV film conference set

SUN VALLEY — Buster Crabbe, Tim McCoy, Clint Eastwood and many other western film actors will appear at a five-day western film conference here in July.

The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities has put together one of the largest gatherings of artists, writers and lecturers on westerns and western culture for a discussion of past and present film making.

Tim Belsom, center director, said response from writers and critics has been good. "We got all the heavyweight writers and academics that we wanted," Belsom said.

There will also be world premiers at the conference. Clint Eastwood's new western, "The Outlaw Josey Wales," will be shown. Belsom said the center, also is trying to arrange premieres of just released films "The Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday" and "The Return of a Man Call Horse."

Marlon Brando, said he would be unable to attend but praised the conference for taking an active role to dispel some of the myths of the Old West.

"It extends my hair on ends that the entire history of our country especially in relation to minorities has been criminally distorted," Brando wrote. "The Hollywood version has served to perpetuate the most gross, revolting stereotypes of non-white. We have been spoon-fed through literature the myth of motion pictures and now through television with the preposterous, image of ourselves culminating in the schizoid, bifurcated Bicentennial."

Brando is not alone, Belsom said, in his concern for minorities. Several panelists and lecturers will touch on wrongful portrayals of minorities in the movies, he added.

The conference will run from June 29 through July 4. It is sponsored by Levi Strauss and Co. and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Old and modern western films will be shown throughout the conference. The major topic schedules will examine the real west and the Hollywood version.

Other topics include women, Indians, social responsibilities, western heroes and their words and art of the western movie. A few of the participants include Dee Brown, author of "Bury My Heart in Wounded Knee," Vin Dolora Jr. author of "Custer Died for Your Sins," and David Dortort producer of the "Bonanza" series on television.

Clint Eastwood, actor in the "Rawhide" television series, Chief Dan George, actor in "Little Big Man" and Alvin Joseph Jr., editor of "American Heritage Magazine," and many others will be on hand. Several directors and movie critics will also attend.

Belsom said this is the conference the Center has attempted. "This will not be a conference to solely critique western movies," Belsom said. "An entire Western culture will be examined both its good and bad parts."

The western has made a resurgence in the last year, Belsom said. At least 15 major westerns will be released this summer, he noted.

European movie companies have been making considerably more movies during the last five years than American companies, he added. Registration forms are available at the Sun Valley Center. The five-day conference will cost $25 or $2 for each session. Students wishing two units of academic credit will be charged an additional $10.

Albion project nearly complete

ALBION — Those now using the new Albion sewer system will receive their first bill about July 1.

Other Albion residents will begin paying the $8.50 per month sewer charge with the August billing. Charges will be included on the same bill with electricity, water and cable TV.

The city's sewer system project is about 85 per cent complete. The drive for individual connections to the line will await completion of the systems and city acceptance of the project.

However, city officials said property owners with sewage problems can obtain a permit now from the city office for look-up to the system.

The ordinance passed early this month provided 24 months for properties to be connected to the city sewer line. If they are within 100 feet of it and have buildings occupied by people. Engineers have estimated the daily flow will be about 20,110 and total monthly billings will be about $1,050 per month.

That includes 105 residential users at 157 gallons each and 13 special users. The heaviest users are expected to be the Annie Laurie Inn and the Chuckwagon Cafe at 500 gallons each. If they are within 100 feet of it and have buildings occupied by people. Engineers have estimated the daily flow will be about 20,110 and total monthly billings will be about $1,050 per month.

to serve a population of 375. The Environmental Protection Agency and the State Department of Health and Welfare provided grants of $145,980. The cost to the city is $166,700.

Albion voters authorized a $185,000 bond issue in March, 1974, to construct the lagoon system. The additional money was a cushion against inflationary costs.

The bond election followed the city receiving a waste water discharge permit that allowed discharge of sewage into tributaries of the Snake River on 16th Feb. 1, 1975. The city was told it would lose its permit if it no secondary standard effluent facility was under construction by that time.

The city's outdated sewer, which served only 26 homes, was not meeting federal standards for sewage strength reduction. The city also has discharged sewage from its lagoon tank and directly from several homes into Marsh Creek.

The health department checked Marsh Creek and one of its tributaries, Hook Creek, for sewage strength and disease-causing bacteria over a 10-year period.

The new lagoons are on 18 acres of land southeast of the city. The system is being constructed by PMF, Inc., Twin Falls. The lagoons were designed by J-U-B Engineers, Twin Falls, to provide sufficient water surface to evaporate all inflowing waste water and have complete storage or containment of all inflows (including precipitation). Wastes are to be decomposed by bacterial action.

Steen to run

GLENN'S FERRY — Sen. J. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, has announced he will seek reelection as state senator from Legislative District 22 on the Republican ticket.

Steen has served four terms in the Idaho Senate beginning with a term in 1953 and followed by three consecutive terms beginning in 1971.

Steen, 59, has been a resident of Elmore county since 1930. He has spent most of his life ranching and has also been a locomotive fireman and engineer for Union Pacific Railroad for 35 years.

Idaho is "a place where many people want to come and live because of the environment and the great potential for additional development," Steen said. "This combination has created many new issues and problems for the people and government of Idaho."

Steen says he will address these issues as the campaign for re-election progresses.

Rupert contest entries sparse

RUPERT — Only one local entry has come forward in the newest feature of the Rupert Fourth of July celebration. Ray Ulrich, Rupert, has signed up a team for the horse pulling contest.

The contest is scheduled at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds at 8 p.m. July 2, followed by the Rupert Kiwanis fireworks display. This will be the first year horse pulling has been part of the week-long Fourth of July events here.

Ulrich's team is a small one, compared to the draft horses in the Intermountain Horse Pulling Association and will not be in competition with them.

Several local men have inquired about the competition, but none have entered larger teams yet. Rupert Chamber of Commerce officials hope that local teams will be entered. Anyone interested can sign up at the chamber office in Rupert.

About 12-16 teams are expected to enter from Utah, Montana, Nevada and other parts of Idaho have Intermountain Association members. The horse pulling contest and the parmutual horse races at 1 p.m. the same day will kick off the major activities of the celebration.

The riding competition for rodeo queen candidates will be at 2:30 p.m. the previous Sunday at the fairgrounds. The carnival opens in downtown Rupert on June 30 with family night and will be on hand through July 5. Three street dances will be held at 9 p.m. Thursday, July 1, downtown.

The horse races will be at 7 p.m. each day Friday through Monday.

Good weather increases fishing pressure

Magie Valley fishing pressure increased 13 per cent Saturday from the 1975 opener, which probably is a greater testimonial to the weather than anything.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department annual aerial survey showed 153 cars, 249 boats and 15 float tubes operating against this year's trout crop. That compared with 1441 cars, 91 boats and few tubes a year ago.

The major difference apparently was the weather as the number of boats was down about the same number as cars due to the terrific wind conditions of 1975. Using their 3.7 occupants per car figure, the department figured 4,899 anglers participated in the fishing opener from Salmon Falls Reservoir to the Gage summit and from Sublett reservoir to the Hagerman Refuge and Mormon reservoir.

Clear lakes was the major attraction, hardly a wonder since it's been the best opening day fishing in Magie Valley for many years. The Bull County Club sold trespass rights to 886 anglers and estimated another 80 club members jumped on the hatchery-enclosed stream and lake.

The lake produced several fish in the six to seven-pound class and a large number around five pounds. There was a persistent rumor, unverified by creel checking, that a 17-pounder was taken.

Magie Reservoir was not particularly hot but was producing good fish. The rainbows taken averaged 14 1/2 inches in length

Forest products aid fish in new irony

Another of the ironies of the Idaho great outdoors came to pass this week.

"Although Idahoans like to boast that they buy more than 300,000 fishing licenses each year, it took a $100,000 donation from Boise Cascade to seat a mile and one-half stretch of Silver Creek to public use.

"The irony is that Boise Cascade often is verbally assailed by the same sportsmen who claim the private firm wants to chop down every tree in Idaho.

"It has seemed rather unusual here that raising $300,000 could be such a problem from such an unusually large number of fishermen. One dollar donation by each would have ensured the success of the project within a week of the project's announcement.

"So we did a little checking and at random asked some people in the past few days whether they had contributed to the thing. The reply heard most was:

"I don't fish Silver Creek so it wasn't worth anything to me to save it."

"That was the main thrust."

"Second most often heard was the complaint that one and one-half miles for a half-million bucks was plenty."

"I decided to like to fish Silver Creek, but there always was a little (about trespassing) that I stopped going there. I wasn't about to give money to provide a private fishery for the people who own the creek along below it."

"There were two guys who said they'd never heard about the project to begin with.

The little tale proves nothing except to again illustrate that no one or nothing is ever going to please the outdoor public because it has very limited interest in things beyond personal, favorite hunting or fishing spot.

Unfortunately, the rest of the time they want the government to stop all intrusion.

It would have been nice had the Idaho fishing public adopted this project with a little more enthusiasm. Some folks kinda went out on a limb for them. Fortunately, because Boise Cascade came through at the last minute, a lot of public apathy didn't saw that limb off.

There's little doubt that the Idaho Fish and Game Department, badly battered in the past 18 months, is holding its collective breath concerning next spring steelhead fishing on the main Salmon River.

Of course, the department and Idaho anglers escaped a yawning blank in that resource this year when 583 Dworshak (the big steelhead strain) came back to the Pahsimeroi wet a year early and provided 1.8 million eggs to continue the fishery.

The original Pahsimeroi crop was wiped out by pancreatic necrosis, a disease that is fatal to the fish.

IF YOU PLANT IT OR FEED IT... GLOBE SEED WILL HAVE IT! GLOBE SEED CO. 222 S. 12th St. Twin Falls, Idaho and about one and one-quarter pounds. A four-pound plus was taken, too.

Bob Bell, regional biologist, said Saturday the increase of size (the Magie take had been at 12 1/2 inches for the past three years) probably was due to an inexplicably high mortality rate on last year's fingerling plant. That meant the two-year-olds were providing the bulk of the take and the loss of the 1975 summer planting caused the reduction in fish-caught per hour.

The Hagerman refuge was good with one eight and one-half pounder coming out of Riley Creek. Bass and Blue Gill fishing, both species showing good size, also was good there.

They gave the following comparisons from this season to last. The 1975 totals are listed first.

Magie Reservoir, 683 cars and 550 cars; 50 boats and 152 boats; total of 399 anglers checked with 374 rainbow and four kokanee in 1624 hours for 23 fish per hour.

Westside land boat fishermen, 218 anglers with 272 rainbow and four kokanee, 607 hours for 4 trout per hour. Hot springs take was 4 fish per hour and eastside, 3 fish per hour with no apparent reason since all boat fishermen claimed to cover the entire reservoir.

Magie bank fish, 181 anglers checked with 102 trout and 937 hours for .1 fish per hour, the poorest recorded by bank fishermen.

Hagerman refuge, 302 anglers checked with 608 rainbow in 860 hours for 7 fish per hour. Many fish in the one to one and one-half pound area. Four bass anglers checked with 19 bass, largest 5 1/2 pound, 100 blue gill check, averaging three-quarters per pound with some reaching a pound.

Silver Creek, public access areas averaging about a trout per hour. Good fishing and nice catches on fly-fishing only portion early Saturday morning.

Little Wood Reservoir, average just under one fish per hour but fish small.

Warm Spring Creek, 17 anglers, 19 fish in 25 hours. Trail Creek, 15 anglers with 33 fish and 1.06 fish per hour.

Permy Lake, 45 anglers with 180 trout in 80 hours for 2.2 rate. Sublett, 29 anglers with 39 rainbow, nine cutthroat, two brown and one coho for total of 49 fish in 102 hours, just under 5 fish per hour.

Creeks south of Burley reported good as were the Camas prairie creeks.

The aerial census showed a move away from Magie Reservoir with most of the surplus being picked up by Big Wood River. Salmon Falls reservoir, 51 cars and 23 boats down to 39 cars and one boat (early check).

Tiara Creek, 100 cars up to 14 cars.

Box Canyon, one car up to three cars.

Hagerman refuge, 200 cars and 45 boats up to 210 cars and down to 31 boats.

Billingley Creek, 30 cars up to 36 cars and two boats. Malad River, 10 cars down to eight cars.

Dog Creek, no cars up to seven cars and one boat.

Tiara Creek, 100 cars up to 14 cars.

Mormon Reservoir, 56 cars and seven boats down to 35 cars and 12 boats.

Camas Creek, eight cars up to 10 cars.

Magie Reservoir, 683 cars and 50 boats down to 550 cars but up to 152 boats.

Silver Creek, 125 cars up to 187 cars.

Little Wood Reservoir, 20 cars up to 30 cars and 14 boats.

Wendell miss hits instant success

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Instant success, that's the only way to describe the recent victories of Wendell high school tennis star Lonna Smith.

Lonna last weekend won the girls' class B state tennis tournament championship in Sun-Valley. The tournament was the second she's ever played in.

Two weeks ago, she won her first tournament, a district tournament, which gave her the right to participate in the state championship. The Class B tournament includes all state high schools with 900 or less students.

"I just started playing five years ago," says Lonna, who was "really surprised" she won. The high school women's team has only been playing together for about two months; while some of the other high school teams in the tournament had been organized for six to ten years, she says.

On the strength of her victories in her first tournament, Miss Smith was seeded first in the two-day Sun Valley tournament. This meant she did not have to play anyone in the first round.

In the second round, she had no trouble knocking off a girl from Welser High School, 6-3, 6-0. In the third round, however, the ball did not bounce so well.

Lonna lost the first set 1-6, to a girl from Parma High School.

"I only had 20 minutes to rest from the first match," says Lonna. "I was tired from the altitude."

Still, she managed to pull herself together to take the next two sets, 6-4, 6-2.

In the finals last Sunday, Lonna played Letty Arts from Bishop Kelly High, Boise. Lonna lost the first set, 2-6.

"I knew I wasn't playing as well as I could," she says, "but you just talk to yourself and say you can do better."

Lonna must be a good talker, because she breezed through the second set, 6-0. "The girl from Boise" was the one making the mistakes" in the second set, Lonna says.

In the third set, both girls settled down to a long grueling game, but Lonna eventually won, 6-3.

"There's a lot of difference between girls' and boys' tennis," Lonna says. "Not as many spectacular shots, but a lot of long rallies. It's who can outlast the other."

Mrs. Sara Smith, her mother, agrees, adding, "It was her stamina that made her able to win." The final match took 3½ hours to play, she says.

Winning is nothing new for Lonna. As a graduating senior, at Wendell high, she won two most outstanding player awards for her roles on the high school volleyball and tennis teams, the American Legion Award for being the most outstanding girl in the senior class, and the John Phillip Sousa Band Award for being an outstanding musician in the school band. She plays the saxophone, organ, guitar and sousaphone.

Lonna gives her coach Mrs. Pat Mathers and her instructor Mrs. Lucille Campbell partial credit for her recent success on the tennis court.

"They taught me how to hit jobs and high floaters that a lot of hard-hitters don't like to hit," she says.

Oakland posts second straight shutout of Sox behind Blue

OAKLAND (UPI) — Vida Blue stopped Chicago on five hits Saturday, as the Oakland A's defeated the White Sox 2-0 for their second consecutive shutout.

Chicago, which has not scored a run in its last 21 innings after winning 10 straight, managed three doubles off Blue, 5-5, but was unable to get a baserunner as far as third.

The A's had only six hits off loser Terry Foster, 1-2, who hasn't beaten Oakland in nearly three years. The only run Oakland needed came in the second inning when Foster walked Sal Bando and then gave up a two-out RBI double to Phil Garner.

The A's added another run in the sixth when Bill North singled, stole his major league leading 24th base of the season, and came home on a single by Don Baylor.

Palmer, Orioles beat Red Sox

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Palmer, regaining his pinpoint control, held Boston to seven hits Saturday night in pitching the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-2 victory over the Red Sox.

Ken Singleton drove in two runs, while Mark Belanger and Reggie Jackson had three hits apiece in the Orioles' 14-hit attack. The win was also Baltimore's second straight over Boston. Palmer, entering the game with 39 walks in 1-3 innings pitched, gave up just one on balls and struck out six in bringing his record to 6-5. Luis Tiant suffered his third loss against six victories.

Trailing 1-0, Baltimore took command with two runs in each of the fourth, fifth and seventh innings.

Indians thump Brewers in 10

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Rick Manning belted a grand slam homer and Duane Kulper drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single Saturday as the Cleveland Indians scored all their runs in tenth inning to post a 6-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers behind the five-hit pitching of Jackie Brown.

Jim Colborn allowed just six hits when he walked Bob Powell and Alan Ashby and gave up a single to pinch hitter John Lowenstein to load the bases in the 10th.

Tigers' Roberts stop Yankees

DETROIT (UPI) — Jason Thompson hit a two-run homer and Dave Roberts pitched a three-hitter Saturday to give the Detroit Tigers a victory over the New York Yankees.

Roberts raised his record to 4-3 and carried a two-hitter into the ninth inning. But Mickey Rivers, who singled earlier, grounded a double down the leftfield line and advanced to the plate on a fly to right and a ground ball to short.

Roberts walked two and struck out four in besting Dock Ellis, who once pitched a no-hitter against him when both were in the National League in 1970. Ellis gave up only seven hits himself in slipping to a 4-3 record.

Hughes, Twins beat Rangers

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Right-hander Jim Hughes hurled a three-hitter Saturday in pitching the Minnesota Twins to a 5-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Hughes, 1-5, had a no-hitter for 6 2/3 innings before Tom Grieve broke it up with a double to the right field fence. The victory for the 24-year-old

Prompt response saves building

FILER — A fire Thursday evening at the Quality Wood Products, Inc., building caused little damage because of early discovery and prompt response by the Filer Fire Department. Mrs. Paul Sheller, wife of the owner of the building, said their son, Peter, was driving down Main Street at about 10:30 p.m. and noticed smoke rising from the building nearby. He broke a window to get into the building, noticed fire in a waste barrel and called the fire department. The fire department arrived shortly and extinguished the flames. Mrs. Sheller said she believed rags in the barrel were ignited by spontaneous combustion.

Measles and polio vaccinations needed

ATLANTA (UPI) — Measles epidemics could get worse and massive outbreaks of crippling polio are possible unless about 5 million young children are vaccinated against both diseases, according to a national Center for Disease Control official. Dr. John Witte, director of the Immunization Division of the CDC, Thursday warned 65 to 70 per cent of pre-school age children — or about 5 million — lack proper immunization against polio and measles.

"The thing that really concerns us is that there are safe, effective vaccines against the childhood diseases of polio, measles, diphtheria, rubella and mumps and parents are not getting their children immunized," Witte said. He said measles epidemics already are occurring in many areas and the number of reported cases of polio is well above last year.

"We're keeping an eye on the polio situation," Witte said. "The possibility of outbreaks is there. There are many susceptible children."

He said both middle class and ghetto children are among those not properly immunized.

"If polio gets into a central city ghetto, it is very likely to spread," he said. Witte noted an effective oral polio vaccine is now available, but its use has decreased because of high levels of immunity. Loss of their covering of ice and snow in the summer. Temperatures can rise to as high as 90 degrees F. in some places.

Test pond underway

RUPERT — Heavy equipment began clearing land Thursday for a half-acre pond to test-seal for the Rupert sewage lagoon.

The test pond is being conducted by Mid-State Distributing, Inc., of Pocatello. The company submitted the low bid for the test to control seepage of waste water from the planned lagoon system. Mid-State plans to have the pond completed Saturday. Rupert City Engineer Don Courtwright said the city will begin pumping 814,000 gallons of water into it about Tuesday or Wednesday from a Midaloka Irrigation District lateral south of the site.

Hamilton & Voeller, consulting engineers for the city on the sewer system, will conduct the test on SS-13, a sealant manufactured by Seepage Control, Inc., of Phoenix, Ariz. Engineering consultant Danny Sandupour said he has visited several lagoons in the Phoenix area that have used the sealant. He said this and other tests conducted by Hamilton & Voeller have convinced him that the product is the best one available for the job.

TF theft reported

TWIN FALLS — Theft of a television set from a display window of the Hirsch Value Center, was reported to Twin Falls police Thursday.

Jack Grimes, Jerome, store official, told police the nine-inch black and white unit was removed from the display sometime Wednesday.

Hoss Linden, Twin Falls, reported someone broke a window in his late model sedan while it was parked at the J. B.'s Big Boy restaurant Wednesday. He estimated damage at $75.

Burley store hearing set

TWIN FALLS — A hearing has been set for 2 p.m. July 13, in Twin Falls to hear bankruptcy filing on behalf of Thriftway Drug Co., Burley.

Donald J. Chisholm, attorney for Thriftway, said the firm has filed a petition for bankruptcy under Chapter 11 of the Idaho Bankruptcy laws. The petition has been approved in the U.S. District Court and the firm given permission to operate business pending further court determinations.

The hearing will be conducted in the judicial building in Twin Falls.

Tree removal suit filed

TWIN FALLS — Valley Tree Service of Twin Falls has brought suit against two other local firms in connection with tree removal for two highway projects.

Close Moore, doing business as Valley Tree Service, charges Beymer Paving Inc., and Idaho Construction Co., failed to pay him the full amount under an agreement for removing trees and stumps on U.S. 30 in the Hagerman Valley area and along Second Avenue West in Twin Falls.

Moore charges Idaho Construction under an agreement as contractor on the project in the vicinity of Gridley Bridge and Beymer Paving a sub-contractor. Moore said he was hired by Beymer to remove 174 trees along a 20.14 mile portion of U.S. 30 at a rate of $50 per tree. In addition, 60 stumps were to be removed at $15 per stump, using Beymer equipment. Moore said the work involving 1.57 miles, Moore alleges he removed 70 trees at $50 per tree. He said he was paid $3,145 but $754 is still due from Beymer. Moore asked the court to award him the two amounts due, plus eight per cent interest and attorney fees.

Army seeks Idaho service

TWIN FALLS — Sgt. Jim Hughes says the Army has increased its priority service enlistment authorization recently.

The U.S. Army Recruiting Station Commander for the Twin Falls area says most such people need only brief refresher training or can be quickly retrained in a new specialty. He says the program benefits both the Army and the individuals involved.

Most of the Arctie's lands lose their covering of ice and snow in the summer. Temperatures can rise to as high as 90 degrees F. in some places.

Who makes our American Economic System work?

Business? Labor? Government? Investors? Consumers? Most people don't know.

The shocking fact is that less than 3% of people quizzed in a recent study could define the roles of all these groups in our American Economic System.

Even most businessmen, educators and thought leaders lacked basic understanding.

Why the concern? In the months and years ahead, we're all going to be called upon to make great decisions as our system adjusts to new conditions everywhere, both home and abroad.

And, if we don't understand the basic functions of our system, how can we decide what to keep, what to change?

That's why we're offering a new booklet that explains the American Economic System. It's easy to read, interesting — and free.

Every American ought to know what it says.

The American Economic System.

It's one of your basic freedoms.

Valley comment

QUESTION: What kind of industry, if any, would you like to see come to the Magic Valley?

Dick Dey, Twin Falls:
Anything non-polluting.

John Yasaltis, Twin Falls:
Well I know one thing that's wrong. They should have more coffee shops on Main Street. That's the only thing I can think of.

Mrs. Cari' Briggs, Twin Falls:
I don't know. We've got most everything here haven't we? I don't know what we need now.

Dale Kerner, Shoshone:
Some kind of factory, like a car factory where prices wouldn't be so high and freight charges would be less.

Spock Leazer, Twin Falls:
There are lots of opportunities around here. You've got to control the pollution or you are going to have the problem other states have. I'd like to see a clean-type industry.

Chris Murphy, Murtaugh:
I don't think we need any more industry.

W.F. Potter, Twin Falls:
That's kind of hard to answer. I think we have enough. I'd like to keep it like this. I don't think there is a chance of that though, but I think we're in pretty good shape.

Barbara Nelson, Twin Falls:
I don't think I want anymore. It's good farm country, that's enough.

A unique concept

The spectacular Deer Creek valley of Blaine County is the setting for a novel land development proposal which, if all goes as planned, will utilize alternative energy to heat and cool homes. Times-News writer Bart Quenell has the story on pages 11 through 13 of this week's Idaho magazine.

Sally's plans

Sally Quinn hasn't pinned down Washington Post Editor Ben Bradlee yet, but she's doing her best to sell him on the idea of matrimony. See p. 23.

Car squashed by red tape

A woman's Volkswagen is sandwiched between two police cars in a freak accident and though they admit their blame in the accident the City of Chicago loses the woman's bill in endless red tape. Her only recourse is to sue the city which men's lawyer bills for her and, still, no money until the far distant day in the future when the case actually goes to court. Bureaucratic red tape seems to win, again. See complete story by Mike Royko on page 10.

On the cover:

The stunning beauty of Clarendon hot springs is caught in Blaine County. Times-News writer Bart Quenell took the cover photograph as part of his story on the unique land development scheme planned for the area.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The hot water flowed and the sun fountain squeaked and the windmill turned in the breezy sunlight.

That scene is from an exhibit federal officials set up on the Mall, the grassy expanse between the Capitol and the Washington Monument, to show uses of solar energy and its potential for the future.

Concern, not an environmental group, put up the display with money from the Federal Energy Administration, Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Reporters got a preview of the exhibit Monday, in advance of today's official opening.

Use of the sun is not new, the displays tell with the viewer: Archimedes is said to have roasted a Roman fleet once by using mirrors to focus the sun's rays on the sails to burn them.

But study of the sun as an energy source grew in recent years when the United States found other fuels in occasional shortage.

"The total solar energy falling upon the earth is very much greater than current or projected demands by mankind," an ERDA booklet said. "The challenge is how to use even a small fraction of this vast energy resource effectively and economically."

If only 1 per cent of the buildings in the United States were equipped with solar heating and cooling systems, about 30 million barrels of oil would be saved annually.

The exhibit shows a cutaway house with hints on how to make homes more energy-efficient, including insulation, storm windows and caulking, as well as solar collectors on the roof to heat water and air-condition the home.

Another area holds a "sun fountain," a sculpture of metal discs on which solar cells convert sunlight directly to electricity to power for the motor turning the whole thing.

A windmill, cast not a windmill but a "vertically mounted wind turbine," uses a solar byproduct — wind — to generate electricity. On the display, no change was taken that Washington would be become: a motor turns the windmill, just for demonstration purposes.

One display showed how solar panels can heat water for a home or store heat for warmth in winter or for powering air-conditioners in summer.

Artists fund emigration

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Twelve rebel Soviet artists have a big stake in an exhibit of their work in a small Berkeley museum.

The proceeds will be placed in trust for them for the day they are able to emigrate from the Soviet Union.

The exhibit itself is the result of two women's own dealings with the underground movement in Russia. They are Selma Light, chairwoman of the Bay Area Council on Soviet Jewry, and her executive director, Regina Biblil.

They traveled to Russia in October, 1975, and met several of the artists. The 10 painters, a graphic artist and a sculptor then staged a secret exhibit in Leningrad in November. More than 4,000 persons, the two women said, attended the exhibit.

Mrs. Light, a widow, said the artists feared Russian authorities might destroy their works so they recorded them on film slides. They then smuggled the slides out of the Soviet Union and had them delivered in a plain brown paper bag to the council.

The two women then conducted numerous drives for funds to finance the reproduction of the slides suitable for the exhibition.

One of the artists was Evgeny Abegzon, 36, who had been expelled from the official Union of Soviet Artists. Mrs. Light said he was found guilty of "wanting to paint in a freedom of his own choice."

Mrs. Light said "His paintings make you smile even as you feel sad. Despite all his hardships, he retains an incredible sense of humor and a charm and creativity that is enchanting."

"Like Chagall, he paints in a Jewish-Russian idiom. I wanted to buy something of his, but the Soviet system . . ."

Mrs. Biblil said in an interview, "We used to be able to help them (the artists) financially, but the Soviets are tightening the screws."

Since January, she explained, new tax laws confiscate 65 per cent of overseas money as "tax." The remainder is exchanged only for regular rubles which have just one-fifth the value of certificate rubles.

The exhibit will remain in Berkeley until June 9.

Wear raincoats in rain

MOSCOW (UPI)—When do you wear a Soviet raincoat?

The newspaper Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya found the answer to this question not as simple as it might seem.

The newspaper reported it required three technological institutes to come up with an acceptable booklet of instructions for the coat.

"For the good of this rubber coat, wear it on wet or rainy days," the booklet said. "Hang it in a dark place and do not dry this garment in an open fire."

The newspaper cited these instructions as just one example of a booming Soviet industry — creation of maddening or simply stupid directions that seem obligatory with every Soviet consumer item.

The directions not only insult or befuddle the mind, the newspaper said, but the state is wasting massive quantities of paper to satisfy the appetite for "instructions."

The newspaper found a popular fountain pen for sale that carried this warning:

"Wash the inside of the pen with soap and hot water every time you cook something in it."

The newspaper thanked the person responsible "for this warning because otherwise we might cook our borscht without washing out the fruit cobble first."

His wife, the newspaper said, urged him to throw away the old knife they used to open cans and buy new one.

The knife came with detailed instructions, to wit: "Hold the knife in the right hand. Now move it to the left over the can with the left hand."

Summer squash, pumpkin will cross

BY GEORGE ABRAHAM

If you saved seed from your squashes or pumpkins, better think twice before you plant it.

Summer squash and most pumpkins will cross and the seed will produce a mixture. Pumpkins and squashes cannot be crossed with cucumbers, muskmelons or watermelons so you don't have to worry about blaming poor taste on cross-pollination with these.

As soon as the vines start growing, don't be alarmed if you see blossoms drooping or drooping up. Squash and pumpkins produce 5 to 10 male blossoms to 1 female, and only a small percent of the female blossoms naturally develop into normal fruits. The males and excess or unused female blossoms dry up and fall.

Where garden space is at a premium, try growing your summer squash on bushes. We've mentioned Patty Pan as a good bush squash that is entirely different in size, shape and color. Another good bush squash is Butterbar, a hybrid which matures in 49 days, has the same characteristics as Zucchini. It can grow to a large size is not picked regularly, but the skin remains very tender, regardless of size, and this is something you can't say of the vine types. Flesh of Butterbar is butter-yellow and delicious.

green thumb

You can freeze Butterbar, Patty Pan and other summer squash by simply blanching for 3 to 4 minutes in boiling water, draining quickly, packing with salt and oil, liquid, and fast freezing. After defrosting, all you need is thorough heating, leaving it tender crisp and not mushy.

EASTER LILY IN SUMMER: The common Easter lily (Lilium longiflorum extimum) will give you extra mileage for years to come with a little care. Now that the plant has finished blooming, take it out of the pot and plant it in a permanent spot in the garden. The leaves and stalks will turn yellow and die down, but soon new leaves will appear and by August you'll be pleasantly surprised to find it will put on another show. Don't try to force the Easter lily again indoors. It's perfectly hardy and will come through the winter in good shape, without any type of mulch whatever.

Don't try to carry pocketbook plant (Calceolaria) or the cineraria plant over again. Start new plants from seed.

SWISS CHARD: We're glad to see more gardeners growing Swiss chard. The one that's bound to catch your eye is the "Rhubarb" chard, resembling rhubarb. It's stalks are reddish, and leaves are somewhat greenish-purple. Secret: Sow seed thinly in rows about 18 inches apart. Chard stands last winter, and is one of the best of all vegetables to freeze. You should thin each plant to 4 inches apart.

When plants are about a foot high, you can pull every other one for use. In August, cut off all old leaves, apply a balanced plant food and you'll have fresh greens right up to freezing weather.

DATE PALMS FROM SEED: Can you grow a palm tree from fruit you buy at the store? Yes, if it's possible. Processing of dates does not destroy the seeds, so with a little luck you can actually start your own dates or palm. Don't expect every seed to grow, because they won't. Plant a dozen or more seeds in a mixture of sand and peat moss or one of the instant mixes.

Date seeds are hard and bony, so take a file and make a notch on the side of the seed to allow water to enter faster and speed up germination. The seed will take one to eight months before germination starts. Keep seed in warm spot (80 to 85 degrees) day and night, and keep them moist at all times.

Incidentally, it's a great idea getting your kids to grow plants from seeds of tropical fruits purchased in the store. Chances are they'll never produce fruit indoors, since most need to develop into trees or have suitable pollination condition. We've grown coffee berries indoors, and have avocado plants produce flowers (but no fruit).

Citrus seeds such as tangerine, oranges, grapefruit, and the like make a fine growing plant. Surprisingly, citrus seeds do not need any dormant period before planting, and will germinate within a few days after planting. In fact, these may be injured if allowed to dry, so plant them promptly after removal from the ripe fruit. Sow the seed in a sand-peat mixture, cover lightly and keep moistened at room temperature (72 degs) for best germination.

PLANTS AS REMEDIES: In the Middle Ages people believed that nature provided clues as to the use of plants and herbs as remedies for ailments. For example, the hepatica, which has liver-shaped leaves, was used as a liver remedy. The walnut, with its crinkled shell, was a brain medicine. Also, bloodroot, with its red juice, was considered a good blood tonic.

QUESTION BOX

D. E. of Twin Falls: "We have never grown hollies and wish you'd pass along a few tips. Are they hard to grow?"

Hollies are easy to grow if you understand their requirements. The choice for the home garden is bewildering. Remember this before selection: Hollies are monoecious — female and male flowers are borne on separate plants. Only female plants bear fruits. To insure pollination, PLANT TWO REMEDIES: In the Middle Ages people believed that nature provided clues as to the use of plants and herbs as remedies for ailments. For example, the hepatica, which has liver-shaped leaves, was used as a liver remedy. The walnut, with its crinkled shell, was a brain medicine. Also, bloodroot, with its red juice, was considered a good blood tonic.

Hollies like well-rotted cow manure, pulverized cow manure or a 10-6-4 commercial fertilizer. Apply to surface, and water it in. The only pruning hollies need is removal of damaged, dead or diseased branches. Trim to keep them shapely. We don't like to see them trimmed into a formal shape — they look a lot better with a natural appearance. Leaf miner is most troublesome pest of holly. Control by spraying with Sevin now and repeat the spray in 10 to 14 days.

G. L. of Latah: "We have a shady spot and want some colorful plants to grow in it. Can you name a few?"

Shrubs to try for a shady spot include Japanese barberry, buckthorn, common witchhazel, grey dogwood and nannyberry (Viburnum lentago). If you want some annuals try Impatiens, coleus and begonias.

Evergreen covers such as common periwinkle (Vincax) and the Japanese spurge (Pachysandra) are fine. The spurge is best for heavy shade, while the periwinkle develops its most dense growth in partial shade. English ivy and wintercreeper euonymus will serve as good ground covers. Oregon holly grape and yew are used frequently in shady spots.

Non-evergreen shrubs which tolerate shade include California privet, oakleaf hydrangea, snowberry, flowering quince, tatarian honeysuckle, nuck orange and European cranberry bush.

In acid soils and those with ample organic matter, try rhododendrons, azaleas, Japanese andromeda (Pieris) and Mountain Laurel.

For shady spots and wet soils, try inkberry, sweetbay magnolia, Red cedar dogwood, silky dogwood, arrowwood, spice bush, Arbutus and Canadian hemlock.

Bovine nobility slates Dallas meet

DALLAS (UPI) — Bovine nobility will gather at a black-tie affair June 30 on the red carpet of the Grand Ballroom of the Adolphus Hotel.

Which means the guests might arrive in a limousine or a pickup truck, or they might substitute cowboy boots for patent leather shoes. The four-legged stars will arrive in a cattle truck, wearing polished hooves.

It is the "Santa Gertrudis Biennial Celebration," a gala to be attended by wealthy ranchers from four continents who will bid on 40 tons of best — 15 bulls and heifers — and 100 pieces of original Western art.

"It takes some of the humdrum out of buying your cattle," said one of the sponsors.

The red cattle, bred by such notables as John Connally, Winthrop Paul Rockefeller and Bobby Shelton of the King Ranch, will be worth an estimated $500,000 to ranchers from Central and South America, South Africa and the United States.

Pollitain-rancher Connally will be the auctioneer. Joe Marchman of Marchman Associates, a public-relations firm in suburban Plano, said the auction will divide "the most dazzling selections of Santa Gertrudis cattle and Western art ever offered at one event."

"The biggest problem on this thing is it's done by invitation," Marchman said. "We have 600 seats with more than 1,800 people wanting seats."

Marchman, a Santa Gertrudis breeder and collector of Western art, said there was one other problem, involving basic logistics: how to transport more than 40 tons of live beef to the second floor ballroom without injuring the cattle or leveling the hotel.

"We bought rolls of felt with a gravel surface on one side and we're going to walk them up the ramp to the second floor of the parking lot and into the Regency Room," Marchman said. "We had discussed the elevator. However, that entails other problems."

BY LINDA MERRY DVM

Question: Could you please give some information on Legg-Perthes disease? Is it detectable on very young puppies by X-ray or any other means; or is it, as I was told, usually not detectable until after 8 months of age?

I bought a 7 1/2-month-old male toy show poodle after being assured he was sound and finishable. I paid a good potential show dog price. At between 8 to 10 months of age I noticed him limping on a right hind leg so I immediately took him to my veterinarian.

After X-rays, he was diagnosed as having a right hip dysplasia but Legg-Perthes disease. What I'm wondering is: Is Legg-Perthes a genetic defect that is hereditary or from some other cause? If this is hereditary I feel this dog should not be used for stud. I also would very much like to see this letter and answer in print as information on Legg-Perthes disease is still quite limited and I'm sure other serious dog breeders would be interested in reading about it.

A: Answer: Legg-Perthes disease happens to be a condition of the hindlegs. It got its name, however, because a man named Legg first described the condition in man in 1909.

Perthes described the same syndrome in 1910 and they shared the credit.

This disease occurs in small breeds of dogs, weighing 20 pounds or less. It's especially common in wire-haired terriers, Manchester terriers, miniature schnauzers, corgis, pekingses and small cross-bred dogs.

Cocker spaniels and sheltand sheep dogs are the largest in which the disease has been reported. Males and females are equally susceptible, and either the right, left or both legs can be involved. The age in which it is from 4 to 11 months, with an average of about 7 months.

To understand the disease we must first understand the hip. The head of the femur becomes most important when you realize it's what makes the hip go round.

How no head, yours, rine or the femur's does well unless it gets plenty of blood. The femoral head of the adult dog does fine since it gets blood from vessels in the head of the ligament (attached to the hip), joint capsule and vessels within the body of the femur.

It's the immature femoral head that goes off half-cooked. The growing head is vulnerable because the growth area of the bone (epiphysis) keeps blood from reaching the head anyway except through the round ligament.

Without sufficient blood, a growing femoral head stops growing, dies back in some places and overgrows in others until it becomes deformed.

Deficient blood supply to the femoral head is the basic cause for Legg-Perthes disease. Among the possible causes for the lack of blood supply, trauma has long been considered an important factor—since over-active puppies seem to have more of a problem than most.

A lot of jumping and standing on the hindlegs may damage the growth line or cause a clot in the blood vessels of the round ligament.

Hormones have been blamed because this condition plagues only the small breeds that mature early. Excessive sex hormones do cause an early sealing of the growth area and a deficiency of circulation to the femoral head.

Finally, hereditary transmission is a definite possibility. Some dog families show a high incidence of the disease with two or more pups in the same bloodlines affected. Although no one has proved the theory, the use of such animals for breeding should be discouraged.

Diagnosis is made with X-rays and, as you were told, can't be confirmed until the condition is far enough along to hurt the bone. Conservative treatment includes rest, drugs to relieve pain and inflammation, muscle relaxants, vitamins and minerals.

The treatment in human patients consists of prolonged immobilization of the hip to prevent deformity of the femoral head. This would be a good idea for dogs, too, except that no one has found a way of doing it.

So, we're left with trying to treat conservatively and resorting to surgery for those cases that don't respond. The surgery may be a total hip prosthesis or more commonly, removal of the femoral head to permit formation of a new "false joint."

Happily, in most cases the surgery eliminates all evidence of pain and muscle spasm and the leg is used almost normally again.

Electric shock controversy stays

panel discussion of ECT before about 300 psychiatrists. He said his study of research shows that ECT always results in severe brain damage, memory loss and the inability to store any new material in memory.

Even though a voluntary patient, able to comprehend the risks, requests ECT, Friedberg declared, "We might ask ourselves whether we, as doctors sworn to be the Hippocratic oath, should be offering it."

The APA had its expert ready for rebuttal. Dr. Freddy Frankel of Boston, who headed a "Massachusetts Task Force" which studied the use of ECT and whether laws are needed to control it.

Frankel dismantled Friedberg's report piece by piece, then said the neurologist's conclusions were "extravagant, careless, indiscriminate and inaccurate."

As for control laws, Frankel said "legislation has no place in the practice of medicine." He said the use of ECT must remain in the hands of clinical experts.

Friedberg urged discontinuance of ECT on human beings until further research is conducted on animals. He said 100,000 patients a year suffer irreparable brain damage as a result of ECT.

Papers presented at the panel concluded:

— ECT is a "relatively safe" treatment, particularly useful after drug treatments fail in severe cases of depression.

Business now major field for US college students

NEW YORK (UPI)—As recently as five years ago, business majors all over the country were lamenting the fact that enough college students were contemplating a business career.

Times have changed dramatically. "Business now is the major field of study chosen by the largest number of both male and female undergraduates and there is no close second," a recent nationwide study by the American Council on Education found.

Almost 19 percent of all freshmen this year chose business as their major and the percentage majoring in business is higher among upperclassmen.

At the graduate schools of business, says Dean William Flewellyn of the University of Georgia Business School, admission demand is going up faster than rising tuition fees.

The reasons for this were clear during a recent convention of deans of the nation's business schools. The deans reported, despite the continuing drag of the recession, industry's demand for business school graduates never has been brighter nor the pay offers so good. Some new MBA's have job offers with pay as high as $40,000 a year.

The average is around $18,500—a 10 percent increase from $17,000 a year ago. Dr. John Hennessey, dean of Dartmouth's Tuck school of business, said.

Northwestern University's Frank Endicott surveyed 255 companies and found they are offering business majors graduating at the baccalaureate level an average of $10,200 to start. Both the Endicott survey and that of the more widelyknown College Placement Council said demand is high for undergraduate seniors who are business majors. "There is no shortage of jobs for them," said Endicott.

Firm bets $50 million on cornfield

GURNEE, Ill. (UPI)—The Marriott Corporation is betting $50 million it can turn a northeastern Illinois cornfield into a "fun" place that will make money operating only 110 days a year.

The place is 600 acres of prime farmland adjacent to Gurnee, population 2,900, midway between Chicago and Milwaukee. Half the acreage has been developed by Marriott's into a Great America amusement park, now annexed to Gurnee.

Richard M. "Sandy" Quinn, director of marketing and assistant general manager, interviewed in advance of the May 29 opening, said the park, patterned after the successful Disney operations, will combine quality entertainment and hospitality. "Everybody who comes here will be treated as a guest."

The park's fun and hospitality will have to attract slightly more than 20,000 visitors daily at $1.95 per adult and $6.25 for children under 12 for a fair return on the investment.

Admission prices are scaled down to $6.25 for adults and $5.25 for children in group-rate pricing.

Admission includes free access to all rides and 14 theaters which feature live entertainment throughout the 12-hour operating day.

Quinn is enthusiastic, his optimism based on the more than 700,000 advance ticket sales, which he sees as a good sign that his goal of 2.7 million visitors for the 110-day initial season will be reached.

Quinn estimates each visitor will spend a minimum of $10 in admission and gifts or food and refreshment purchases. The park payroll for 2,000 employees, mostly 17-24 year olds, will run about $10 million a year, Quinn said.

Promotional work has taken thumbtacks as far away as Pittsburgh to tell the world of a new reason to visit the Chicago area—a fun: "I think we have an eager market," Quinn said. It is expected 65 percent of the visitors will come from a population of about 8.5 million within 50 miles of the park.

Another 9.2 percent of visitors is expected to come from the secondary market consisting of about 2.7 million people living between 50 and 75 miles from the park. The tertiary regions, points beyond 100 miles, figure to contribute 6 percent of the gate. Tourists are expected to make up the rest.

The Gurnee park is similar to one in Santa Clara, Calif., which Marriott opened two months ago and has been operating weekends only. Attendance there has averaged better than 20,000 in a park with a slightly lower breakeven point than the one here.

Quinn feels his best growth potential lies in establishing the park as a "destination" attraction—the kind of place families will focus on for their vacations."

He looks on Chicago's convention center popularity as a starting point to work from.

Youths believe grades important

By Scholastic Magazines

An overwhelming 93 per cent of the high school students surveyed by Scholastic Magazines consider school grades important to their future. A vast majority also feels there is no link between grades and student popularity.

"Grades are important," said Catherine Hyndman, 15, of Ohio. "In order to get into a good college, you have to get good grades."

...More than two-thirds (69 per cent) of the 28,000 students polled said grades were "very important" to their future, while about 24 per cent said grades were "Somewhat important." Five per cent said grades were "not particularly important," and only 2 per cent responded "not important at all."

Though Susan Belliveau, 17, of New Jersey believes grades are "somewhat important," she feels they aren't the only indicator of success. "They don't compare with the work you do in the future," she told Scholastic. "Some people just don't do well in school, but they still can be a success in a career. And some people just don't do well on tests. Still, employers and colleges look at grades to see how well you applied yourself."

Scholastic asked:

"How important do you think your school grades are to your future?"

	Boys	Girls	Total
	Per cent	Per cent	Per cent
Very important	66	71	69
Somewhat important	25	24	24
Not particularly important	6	4	5
Not at all important	3	1	2

Are good grades a yardstick for popularity? Seventy per cent said marks don't make any difference in popularity, while 25 per cent said "good marks make a student more popular." Only 5 per cent said "good marks make a student less popular."

One Oklahoma student spoke for the majority when she said, "Grades don't make any difference; it's the person himself that makes the popularity."

Bob Johnstone, 15, of Ohio said good grades "can help in popularity," but that depends on who well the rest of the class is doing academically. If the rest of the class is also doing well, he said, a good student might be more popular than if the rest of the class were doing poorly.

Scholastic also asked:

"How important do you think students' grades are to their popularity?"

	Boys	Girls	Total
	Per cent	Per cent	Per cent
Good marks make a student more popular	27	24	25
Marks don't make any difference in popularity	74	75	75
Good marks make a student less popular	6	4	5

Terry Groux, director of the Office of Student Activities for the National Association of Secondary School Principals in Reston, Va., said, "There's now a greater emphasis on grades, as students, in the past few years, have become more concerned with school-related issues than social issues, like the Vietnam War."

Groux added that the "renewed importance in high academic achievement," does not affect student popularity, which still depends on the student's "personality."

Art posters now of age commercially

NEW YORK — Art posters — once viewed as decorations for college dorms or Park Avenue nurseries — have come of age commercially. Now they dramatize the walls of corporate headquarters, banks, hospitals and federal agencies.

That evolution during the art boom of the 1960s was brought about in part by Poster Originals Ltd., which first conceived of art posters as one big business package. Poster Originals not only pioneered by publishing posters designed by young American artists but also framed and sold them at a profit.

Founded by Leo Farland in 1965, it began as an investment banker's hobby. Farland, who lives in a duplex in which he sold posters from his East Side apartment. Today Farland heads a staff of 22 in an enterprise that, he said, has sales "now in seven figures annually" and operates three galleries, including one of Manhattan's newest at 924 Madison Avenue, near 74th Street.

Pair of unlikely TV actors capture hearts of nation's fickle teenagers

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A pair of unlikely television stars captured yearlings' fickle hearts of the nation's teenagers with an impact almost as startling as the early Sinatra and Elvis Presley.

Henry Winkler, who plays Fonzie in "Happy Days," and John Travolta, "Vinnie Barbarino in 'Welcome Back, Kotter,'" are the somewhat dizzy idols of tidal waves of adoration on all sides.

Both actors — Winkler, 30, and Travolta, 22 — play antieestablishment, over-the-top macho types who are successful with the girls and throw comic terror into the hearts of rivals.

Fonzie is a high school dropout. Barbarino is a "sweet but" and in imminent danger of flunking out of high school. They may be losers in the eyes of society, but to kids they represent winners of the highest order because they appear to be beating the system.

White Fonzie is a product of the 1950s. Barbarino is pure 1970s.

Travolta, a native of New Jersey, is 6 feet tall and resembles Joe Namath. He exemplifies today's cool character, taking things in stride, including a mind boggling year which has seen him zoom from unknown to blooming star.

On a record promotion tour this month he drew more than 100,000 fans at personal appearances, including 30,000 at one Chicago shopping center alone.

"I never saw anything like it," he said in a slow, sleepy voice. "I had to appear on the roof of a building to keep from getting mobbed. They canceled my New York appearance because the police decided they couldn't handle the crowds."

"They almost overturned the limousine I was riding in on one plane. And now ABC won't allow any girls under 18 in the audience when we're taping 'Welcome Back, Kotter.' They scream so much it raises the tape."

"Personally, I love it. This is the kind of popularity that makes stars. Right now I get more fan mail than anyone on the network."

Travolta's maf' at ABC surpasses that of Winkler, and Lee Majors, who stars in the title role of "Six Million Dollar Man." He is quick to say, "The man I'm addressed to is Travolta, not to Barbarino, and that's important."

He capitalized on his runaway popularity by recording an album simply titled "John Travolta." It hit the charts in two weeks. He now is an item on bubble gum cards for the pre-teen set. He's talking about a nightclub act.

Son of an Italian father and an Irish mother, Travolta has blue eyes and a good many gray edges.

Unlike Winkler who earned a master's degree in drama from Yale, Travolta dropped out of school at age 16 to become an actor. He has done scores of television, commercials and worked in a dozen plays.

He appeared on Broadway in "Grease," displaying his singing and dancing talents, and in "Over Here" with the Andrews Sisters. He gained further experience in Hollywood in episodic television.

"When 'Kotter' came along my manager and I knew that Vinnie Barbarino would be a star-making part," the traveler said. "He's the leader of the gang, a winner-loser. We thought the series would be a hit and that Vinnie would be outstanding."

Travolta was right on all counts. A Midland-Reedco executive saw him imitate Presley on a "Kotter" segment and signed him to a recording contract.

During the show's hiatus earlier this year, Travolta costarred with Piper Laurie and Sissy Spacek in "Carrie."

"It's really a good role," he said, "something altogether different from Barbarino. There's been a lot of interest from pictures lately and I'm not sure it's all because of 'Kotter.'"

Travolta was chewing on a plastic straw in the ABC commentary. His hair is almost shoulder length. He is laconic, poised and confident that superstardom awaits him — he is Joe in his in-common with Barbarino.

He has no steady girl friend — which is all to the good so far as his screaming adolescent followers are concerned. But Travolta said he sees almost as many women in their 20s in the crowds of fans as he does teeny boppers.

Fewer graduates attending college

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

More high school students are graduating these days but fewer of them are going to college.

The American Association of State Colleges and Universities says rates of college-going and full-time attendance are falling precipitously among youngsters from families with incomes under $15,000.

The association represents 324 schools enrolling one-fourth of all college students.

"The most important single reason for this decline in higher education opportunity since about 1968 is student charges," the association said in a new report — "Low Tuition Fact Books."

"Hard-pressed governors and state legislators have raised tuition and other charges as a way of balancing state budgets — sometimes with the mistaken belief that there is enough student aid or that fewer people want to go, anyway."

"This is a break with a 150-year principle that tuition should be kept as low as possible at public colleges — giving the poor access to a degree that opens doors and lifts them the bootstrap way."

The U.S. Census Bureau reports that between 1969 and 1974 there has been an about a 10 per cent drop in the percentage of 18-to-24 year old dependents from families earning less than $15,000 going to college fulltime.

There has been an eight per cent drop in the percentage of students from families over $15,000 in the same period.

Median American family income is about $13,000 a year. Half of all families make less. Half, more.

A Bureau of Labor Statistics study shows "median" families have only a few hundred dollars a year left over after meeting living costs.

The cost of a residential public college may be $2,500 to $3,000 a year. If a student lives at home, a public college can cost $2,100.

What about all the student aid programs? The association says the programs are at best below the middle class.

Allan W. Ostar, association executive director, said "The Low Tuition Fact Book" gives legislators and state officials information on which to make decisions relating to tuition and state appropriations for higher education.

Highlights of the report:

— In the last year for which nationwide data are available about 76 per cent of graduates in California and 70 per cent of all New York high school graduates went to college. Only about 35 per cent of high school graduates in Maine and Vermont — states with high tuition at the public colleges — went on to any college.

— The percentage of Vietnam veterans going to any college generally is low in states with high tuition.

Joint custody of children: good or bad in divorces?

© N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — Six-year-old Tommy Mastin, the central figure in a controversial child-rearing arrangement known as joint custody, leads something of a double life in Gainesville, Fla.

On Mondays, Wednesdays and Sundays, Tommy lives with his father at Oak Forest, a luxury apartment complex on the city's south side. There are tennis courts there, swimming pools and bicycle paths.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the boy lives with his mother in the older northside neighborhood of 28th Street. Here Tommy's home is a Cape Cod, surrounded by hills for sliding, tall trees for climbing and a duck pond.

Fridays vary depending on his plans and those of his divorced parents. One of the constants in Tommy's life, however, is his first-grade class at Williams Elementary School.

The Mastin case is a striking example of joint custody, also called split, shared or divided custody. In more typical situations, children do not move about as often as Tommy, although some spend half their time with each parent. Others live mostly with one parent and visit the other parent, like children in traditional arrangements.

But what distinguishes joint custody from traditional arrangements, and what concerns some professionals involved in family law, is that both parents theoretically have equal authority and responsibility when it comes to raising the child.

"It's asking a lot to expect two people who could not get along in marriage to suddenly share decision-making for a child's educational, religious and everyday activities," said Harry M. Fain, a Beverly Hills, Calif., lawyer.

Fain was among a group of lawyers, judges, child-care specialists and parents, who weighed the advantages and disadvantages of joint custody in recent talks

In general, they agreed that the concept, while much discussed in legal circles, was not a customary one and thus had no clear meaning in court. Lawyers spoke of spelling out joint-custody terms in excruciating detail and still finding judges reluctant to consider the arrangement.

This reluctance stems from the notion, supported by psychiatric evidence, that a child needs the security and stability of, first, one primary residence — "his teddy bear, not any old bear," as one child psychiatrist put it — and, second, one custodial parent to make the major decision on his upbringing.

No one took issue with the trend toward giving the non-custodial parent a broader role by liberalizing visitation rights, say, or by requiring consultation on such matters as religious training and choice of schools. But to award each parent equal custody is, in the minds of many professionals interviewed, to mock Solomon by cutting the child down the middle.

"From the standpoint of the child, the situation is one of divided authority or what's called the double bind — it's a dangerous situation for a child," said Henry Foster, a professor of law at New York University and chairman-elect of the American Bar Association's family law section.

Citing a recent series of joint-custody awards in New York, Foster characterized them as "something of a copout" to avoid thorny placement problems and charges of alleged sex discrimination.

"Mind you, I'm not saying never think in terms of joint custody," he stressed. "There may be situations where it's justified. But it does tend itself to an abuse and the equality of authority may be more of a token than a reality. Somebody's got to get in the driver's seat."

No crowds

Scout rule challenged

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Mrs. Daris Bookstaff says her fight to stay on as cub master of Pack 385 of the Cub Scouts of America is not a battle involving women's lib.

"It's just a matter of plain honesty and getting credit for a job well done, she said Thursday.

The problem started two months ago when the pack's charter was revoked because bylaws of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America forbid women from holding certain leadership positions.

Mrs. Bookstaff, 42, mother of four, said she wasn't surprised when district scout leaders here received a letter from the national office telling them that a man must sign the charter of Pack 385 or it would be revoked.

But she said she was upset when area Scout leaders told her to let a man sign the charter but she could continue doing the work.

"I told them I couldn't do it," she said.

"I think Boy Scouting is supposed to teach honesty and I think you are deceiving yourself and the boys by doing something like that.

"I feel if I'm doing the job I should get the credit for it and the charter shouldn't be signed by a man and have him get the credit," she said.

She said she is hopeful the situation will be resolved by the National Council of the Boy Scouts, which is meeting this week in New York. One of the items to be considered is a recommendation women be allowed to hold scout leadership positions.

"I hope to hear sooner whether I'll be able to continue," she said.

Conductor's dream

Gift recipient 'serious'

HOUSTON (UPI) — When a department store offered in its Christmas catalog "The Ultimate Gift" of being guest conductor of the Houston Symphony for one night, no one really expected a serious response.

Sure, some Texas oilman with more cash than class might ante up the $14,500 fee and fly a bunch of his cronies in for an evening of hilarity — but lo, someone serious came along.

Richard Watson was incredulous when his sister, Margery Royer, told him the money was being raised to give him the apprentice conductor's Monday.

"My first reaction was that it was ridiculous," said Watson. "No one I knew could afford it."

"I was sort of skeptical because a purchased concert didn't set right. When it was pointed out to me it was being bought by a whole lot of people — some I don't even know — that made it much more palatable."

Watson, 32, strode briskly onto the concert stage Monday night, offered a curt bow to the audience, then turned to lead the orchestra in the "Siege of Corinth" overture by Rossini.

"His conducting is top-notch," said music critic Charles F. Ward of the Houston Chronicle in intermission. "He's timid. I don't think he's fully taken charge of the music."

But it was the American debut of Russian violinist Albert Markov performing Paganini Concerto No. 2 that highlighted the concert.

"I think he's destined to become one of the top soloists in this country," Ward said. "His technical facility is extraordinary."

The symphony, which received $12,500 of the fee, and Sakowitz Department Store, also were pleased.

"It just couldn't have turned out better," said Robert Sakowitz, whose store offered the concert gift. "We didn't want one to take it unenthusiably."

Watson, currently assistant director of the Norwalk, Conn., Symphony, also works as a freelance violinist in New York City.

The native Californian eventually hopes to have his own orchestra.

"It's a profession which one only learns by doing in a 30- to 40-year apprenticeship conducting," he said.

Holiday trip offers caves

LONDON (UPI) — A British agency Monday offered ultracheap package holiday trips with "hotel" accommodations in caves.

"This is perfectly legitimate," said John Hill Travel Ltd. in a statement.

"The caves do exist, and we do have an arrangement with the owners."

Hill said it was offering a week in the Spanish island of Ibiza, complete with wall to wall rocks, for $20.75 — plus air fare here and back included — "point up the absurdity of international rules which keep air fares high."

Stripper 'finds the Lord'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — She was a stripper and former Miss Nude Universe.

"Nothing else seemed exciting at the time," she confessed. "I couldn't imagine anything else."

Then Susanne Register found the Lord and her life was transformed.

She was Susanne Haines in those days when "I thought I was free, but I wasn't. I really didn't know God."

"I became an atheist when I was attending Sacramento State College. Before that I was a Mormon," she said in an interview.

The next phase of her life, she recalled, just happened.

"When she was a college senior and married she decided she wanted to get away from her husband.

"So when I saw an ad in the paper for a 68-year waitress I quit college and began making $72.50 a week in a beer bar. Then I learned to strip-tease."

In time she was making a salary of $420 a week as a stripper and this figure jumped to $1,000 a week when she danced as Miss Nude Universe after being named to the title in 1971 at a pageant in San Bernardino, Calif.

Susanne was arrested some 25 times for indecent exposure. "but I didn't think I was doing anything wrong."

Then in Oklahoma City she was arrested for grand larceny — a charge she haunted her afterwards: "To this day she refuses to discuss it."

"Although I never went to court, I knew that greed would follow me through life," she said.

"Everything seemed to fall in on me. I found out that that kind of life had a hold on me. I wasn't the master of my life."

During a trip to Texas in 1974, she told a friend, "I was going in a direction I didn't want to go but I didn't know how not to."

She also told the friend that at night when she was in bed she felt that something was in the room.

"I told him that I felt like there were demons around me. Although I didn't believe in God then, I did believe in spirits. I felt there was a presence but not a good presence."

Her friend gave her a book, "Satan is Alive and Well on Planet Earth," which she read on the way back to Jacksonville.

"That book was my life so perfectly," she said. "It compares the things of the world with God's word. When I could see the deception of the world's thinking, I could understand the word of God."

When she reached Jacksonville, Susanne decided she was going to quit dancing and follow the Lord.

"I didn't know I was evil in the world, I didn't think I was evil until the grand larceny thing."

"But then I realized that everything I did was sin in God's eyes and I said, this is the way I'm going to go, and all that burden went away. I knew I had found God. I didn't know He was there before."

Today Susanne and her husband, Tommy Register, are regular church-goers.

Town 'saving up' $1.6 million

SHELBY, Ohio (UPI) — Local factory workers are giving up a 40-cent bottle of beer a day, children are donating 50 cents a week from their pocket money and visiting salesmen are being sweet-talked into opening their wallets.

Inspired residents of this little northern Ohio city, population 10,000, are aiming at a target many persons would consider impossible for a town this size — raising $1.6 million for a community center.

They have decided to "go it alone" to get the money — no government funding, no tax levies — just digging into their pockets.

"Towns are playing this government-funding game to death," says Shelby school counselor Bob Reimsnyder. "America used to be a story of independence and meeting a challenge. It's a story that's been forgotten by too many people."

But a fresh chapter to that old story is being written here as the first six weeks of a fund raising drive has produced more than $500,000 in pledges.

But before asking for a single penny, community leaders set up a "grassroots" support and spent several months asking townspeople to consider the implications of raising $1 million.

"We started out with a few small meetings in people's homes," said Shelby funeral home director Mick Hall. "I thought along my YMCA swimming certificate I got in 1948 over in Mansfield, I told them that if their children wanted to get a similar certificate they still had to go to Mansfield."

Recently Hall was entertaining a salesman in a local cocktail lounge and started telling him about the fund raising drive and explaining why Shelby needed a community center. Hall convinced the salesman to sign a $120 pledge on a cocktail napkin.

Factory workers also needed convincing they could afford pledges of several hundred dollars apiece.

"They were convinced when it was explained in terms of giving a bottle of beer a day or giving up a pack of cigarettes a day," said Hall.

Area companies are kicking in with contributions of several thousand dollars but 60 percent of the first $500,000 have been pledged by individuals.

"We've arranged so 3,000 factory workers can have their contributions deducted directly from their payroll checks," said local union president Dave Yotzer. "I'm not a Y member now, but this is the only ballgame in town and I came to play."

Kids are not only contributing their allowances, they're organizing carnivals, car washes and even writing songs.

Smashed car strangled by red tape

Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — You don't have to be a traffic engineer to figure out that Diane Gapsevic was completely in the right.

She was in her little car, left turn signal glowing, waiting for the red light to change on State St. at Congress.

Suddenly, all kinds of exciting things happened.

First, she saw a police squad coming fast with its light flashing, right at her. For a moment she thought it was going to hit her head-on. Then its tires screeched and it stopped only a foot or so away from her front bumper.

She just had time to take a deep breath when she heard a siren getting loud awfully fast.

Before she could look around to see where the sound was coming from — Bam! — A police car hit her from behind.

It drove her car forward into the squad car. The result, Ms. Gapsevic says, was: "A Volkswagen sandwich. The whole hood was crushed in, as well as the right fender and bumper. The rest of the car was just as bad. And the frame was bent."

Nobody was hurt. The policemen, in their report, said the squad was trying to set up a roadblock. Their report absolved Ms. Gapsevic of any blame. They took the blame themselves.

The matter would seem pretty clear-cut. A city vehicle squashes the car of a private citizen. Therefore, the city should pay to repair that car.

And what better city in which to ask for a fair deal — the city that works!

So Ms. Gapsevic got claim forms from the police department and took a day off work to get repair estimates. The high was $1,100, the low $900, so she submitted the low. The papers went to City Hall.

A week later she received a letter from John Marcin, the city clerk, saying her claim would be turned over to the City Council, and that it would be investigated by the Council's Finance Committee.

"You will be notified by the committee of their recommendation after the completion of the necessary investigation," Marcin said.

The letter said the investigation would take at least 60 days and cautioned: "Do not contact the Committee on Finance during this investigative period."

At the end of the 60 days, she called the Finance Committee. But they told her they were still waiting for police reports, so they hadn't got her claim yet.

She called the police and asked why the reports were being delayed. They didn't know anything about it.

Several more weeks passed, more phone calls were made, but nothing was done. Then the mailman brought a letter from the Finance Committee. Diane tore it open, expecting to find a check for $900.

Instead, it was a terse letter that said:

"The documents, as submitted with your claim against the City of Chicago have been fully investigated and evaluated by the Committee on Finance staff, and the facts do not clearly establish that the City of Chicago is responsible for your loss.

"You are hereby advised that your claim has been recommended to be disallowed by the Subcommittee on Small Claims of the Committee of Finance to the City Council."

It was signed by William Zoc, who is chief administrative officer of the Finance Committee.

We asked Mr. Zoc how he could say the city wasn't at fault when the police reports clearly admit that the squad car whacked Ms. Gapsevic's car, and any knucklehead can see it wasn't her fault.

He said that wasn't the reason she was turned down. "You see, $200 is our limit on claims. Any amount more than that, and the city's law department has responsibility."

Then why wasn't she told that in the first place? Why, when she submitted her claim, did it have to go through the entire process for weeks instead of being returned immediately?

"I can't explain that at all," said the chief administrative officer. "You have to understand the operation of the city."

But he tried to explain anyway, saying that a claim first has to go to the city clerk, then to the City Council, then to the Finance Committee, then to the department it was filed against in this case, the police department), then back again to the Finance Committee, then to the Subcommittee on Small Claims, then to the City Council.

"Delays can take place at any step," said Zoc.

"I am sometimes very frustrated myself with the length of time these things take. But I can't do much about it."

He's no more frustrated than Ms. Gapsevic. After this turnaround, she has no other recourse than to sue the city. This, of course, means hiring a lawyer, possibly waiting years for her trial. It also means city lawyers will have to defend the city to the suit. In the long run, it will cost the city many times more in paper-shuffling and legal costs than $900.

Not long ago an independent study group said that Chicago's City Hall ranks well down the list of cities that give prompt attentive service to its citizens.

This prompted an indignant Ald. Michael Bilandic to storm that the people who made that study "should be fired."

Bilandic is chairman of the Finance Committee. He's got the right idea. But the wrong people.

'Carol's sister' receives Emmy

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Vicki Lawrence, who won an Emmy this year as best supporting actress in a musical-variety series, has been a mainstay on "The Carol Burnett" show for eight years.

After winning the Emmy, Vicki told the audience, "I can't think of anyone I'd rather look like than Carol." The women do bear a family resemblance and off screen they are as close as sisters.

celebrated her first birthday this year.

They live in Benedict Canyon in a brand new three-bedroom home, complete with servants' quarters. A nurse for Courtney is a must with both her parents working.

Vicki has strong tastes of her own and that, fact, coupled with unhappy experiences with decorators in the past, led her to furnish and select the decor of her new home.

The dwelling has a Spanish exterior. Inside, one feels the warmth of an English country house.

A large and beautiful floral carpet of rusts and greens adorns the living room beneath a snoring boomed ceiling. Picture windows provide a spectacular view of the hills.

Lovely needlepoint cushions, wall hangings and pillows are Vicki's handwork.

There is a generous fireplace in the game room, along with a billiard table, juke box and an antique traffic signal.

Both Vicki and Al are collectors of off-beat antique conversation pieces — boxes, canisters, gumball machines, scents and quilts. The house is softened and enriched by numerous indoor plants.

A day bed of all things, can be found in a kitchen alcove where normally one would find a breakfast table. The bed is for Courtney who keeps her mother company when Vicki does the cooking.

There's a swimming pool and patio outside the kitchen door. The barbecue gets frequent action from Al who broils lobster, steaks and chops.

The Schultz family includes a pair of mutts, Sam and Duffy, and Blossom, a golden retriever. But the lion's share of attention for the time being goes to two bird families.

Parents 'grow up', ask for own home

We knew the kids would take it the wrong way, but we had to do it anyway. "Children, your father and I want to get our own apartment."

"One looked up from his homework and the other two even turned the volume down on the TV set. "What are you saying?"

"We are saying we'd like to move out and be on our own for awhile."

"But why?" asked our daughter. "Aren't you happy here? You have your own room and the run of the house."

"I know, but a lot of parents' our age are striking out on their own."

"It'll be expensive," said our son. "Have you thought about utilities and phone bills and newspapers and a hundred little things you take for granted around here?"

"We've thought it all through."

"Split it out," said our daughter. "What's bothering you about living with us? Did we ask too much? What did we ask you to do? Only cook, make beds, do laundry, take care of the yard, keep the cars in running order and hand out the money. Was that so hard?"

"It's not that," I said gently. "It's just that we want to fix up our apartment and come and go as we please."

"If it's your car you wanted, why didn't you say so? We could make arrangements."

"It's not just the car. We want to be able to play our phonographs when we want to and come in late without someone saying, 'Where have you been?' and invite people over without other people hanging around."

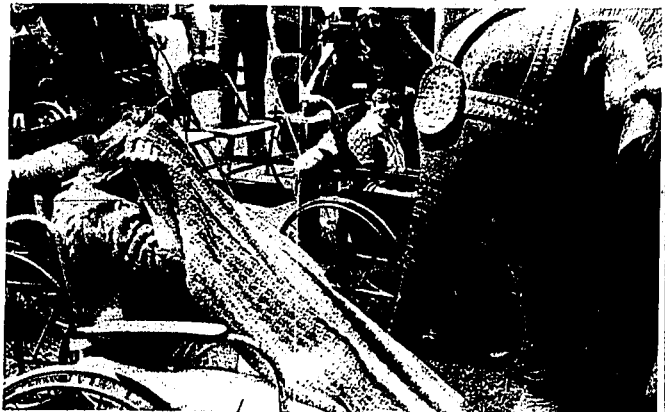

"What will you do for furniture?"

"We don't need all that much. We'll just take a few small appliances, some linens, our bedroom suite, the typewriter, the luggage, the card table and chairs, the old TV you never use, some pots and pans and a few tables and chairs."

"You'll call every day?" We nodded.

"Mom, do me a favor. Don't wear those white socks when you meet your new neighbors. And Dad! Let your hair grow."

As we headed for the car I heard one son whisper sadly, "Our parents have grown up." His brother said, "They'll be back in a week."

Clarendon project may utilize alternate energy sources in homes

By BART QUESNELL
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A free-wheeling land developer and a Ketchum environmentalist have teamed together in Blaine County to promote what may prove to be a unique development project at Clarendon Hot Springs.

Two miles north of Hailey and four miles west of highway 93 lies the spectacularly beautiful Deer Creek Valley.

Aspen and pine trees cover the steep valley walls. Scattered hot springs pools and buildings stand along Deer Creek in what has become the popular small resort known as Clarendon.

In this majestic spot an ex-boxer named Pat Ryan and staunch environmentalist Richard Meyer plan to build a 45 lot residential community unlike anything ever tried in Idaho.

About 100 condominiums and 45 residential dwellings are planned at Clarendon, plus a large horseman center near the small lake in the valley.

The developers, Ryan and Meyer, are an unlikely combination for a land development scheme.

Ryan, who was featured in Life magazine a few years ago for inventing the Jolly Jumper child exerciser, owns Clarendon and also the Hiawatha Hotel in Hailey.

Meyer, a Ketchum architect, for years has blasted what he sees as shoddy development schemes in the Wood River Valley.

But Meyer believes that Ryan's vision of the Clarendon development is different.

Environmental considerations are motivating factors in the organization of the Clarendon development.

Geothermal heat, plus solar and wind power, are all being considered for Clarendon houses.

If all goes as planned, Clarendon may become Idaho's first geothermally powered, or solar powered, or wind powered development.

The 240 acres on the south side of the lake have been approved for development. The village core north of the Clarendon lake is facing construction of nearly 100 units, mostly condominiums.

A small restaurant and hotel have been proposed along with a totally new set of hot pools.

Ryan's six foot three inch frame, nearly always covered by an elk hide shirt, deer skin pants and ten gallon Stetson, spells "promotion".

"I've only got one style," Ryan says. "People can take me as I am."

He speaks much like all developers, saying Clarendon will be the best development west of the Mississippi.

But he may be right.

"It is our intent not to harm the environment unnecessarily and to see if we could do something that is really worth doing. Many areas around here have been turned into zoos.

"We're going to make sure this one doesn't. It'll be a very human place to live and a year around community. What my interest is in the development is that I'd just like to make it an example for the nation and show how to do something well without bugging it up," Ryan says.

Meyer, who has fought the rapid growth and constant development in Blaine county also says this project will be different.

"The very first thing I would prefer is not to do anything," he says. "But next to that I am trying to have the least impact as possible."

Meyer says he despises "rural subdivisions."

"This will be a new village and town, not another rural development," he says.

"This will be a community with its own spirit and feeling. The village site is very high density and hopefully an unpretentious thing with its own spirit and feeling."

Before a house is built in Clarendon, the contractors will have to submit plans which detail the insulation and heating arrangements.

What's more, the developers of Clarendon encourage contractors to design solar-heated, or geothermal-heated, or even wind-powered heating systems.

The owners of Clarendon lots will be required to build homes that employ the smallest amount of heat loss possible.

Meyer and Ryan will ask the federal Energy Research and Development Administration for money, and lots of it, to provide technical assistance and monitoring devices to be installed on each house to determine the amount of energy used and lost in the development.

Already scientists from ERDA, Aero-Jet Nuclear, University of Idaho and others have begun researching alternative energy sources which could be utilized at Clarendon.

"This is a place to demonstrate a variety of systems," Meyer said. "We will be setting up combinations of systems to lessen the drain on our energy resource all in a real life situation."

Clarendon's developers are banking on substantial federal aid in getting their alternative energy source resort going.

The developers aren't completely alone in their quest to get federal aid for the resort however, since Aerojet Nuclear Co., Idaho Falls, has shown an interest in the Clarendon project.

Ferrol Simpson, director of applied science for Aerojet Nuclear at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, believes Clarendon has "great possibilities" for new energy systems.

Simpson says preliminary studies at Clarendon suggest wind-powered electrical generation "looks reasonable".

Geothermal power also looks good, according to Simpson.

Aerojet Nuclear will provide technical assistance in the development of alternative energy systems if the federal government Energy Research and Development Administration agrees to help fund the research into new energy systems.

A proposal prepared by Ketchum's Environment West Research and Planning Inc., which Meyer heads, seeks nearly $500,000 from four divisions of ERDA, to develop solar, geothermal and wind powered systems for Clarendon.

Clarendon promoters declare that "The project will have national impact as the first private housing project involving people with non-technical backgrounds to develop an advanced energy community inhabited by people under real life conditions."

The lessons learned from Clarendon could be used by private industry to develop other alternate energy projects, according to Simpson and Meyer.

The developers hope Clarendon can be an experimental station for expanding the market ability of alternative energy sources — if the federal government goes along.

Ketchum's Environment West Research and Planning Inc. also has asked to be the site for one of four experimental wind power generators, costing millions of dollars, which ERDA will set up across the United States.

The electrical power from the generator would tie into Idaho

Power's grid system for use in Idaho.

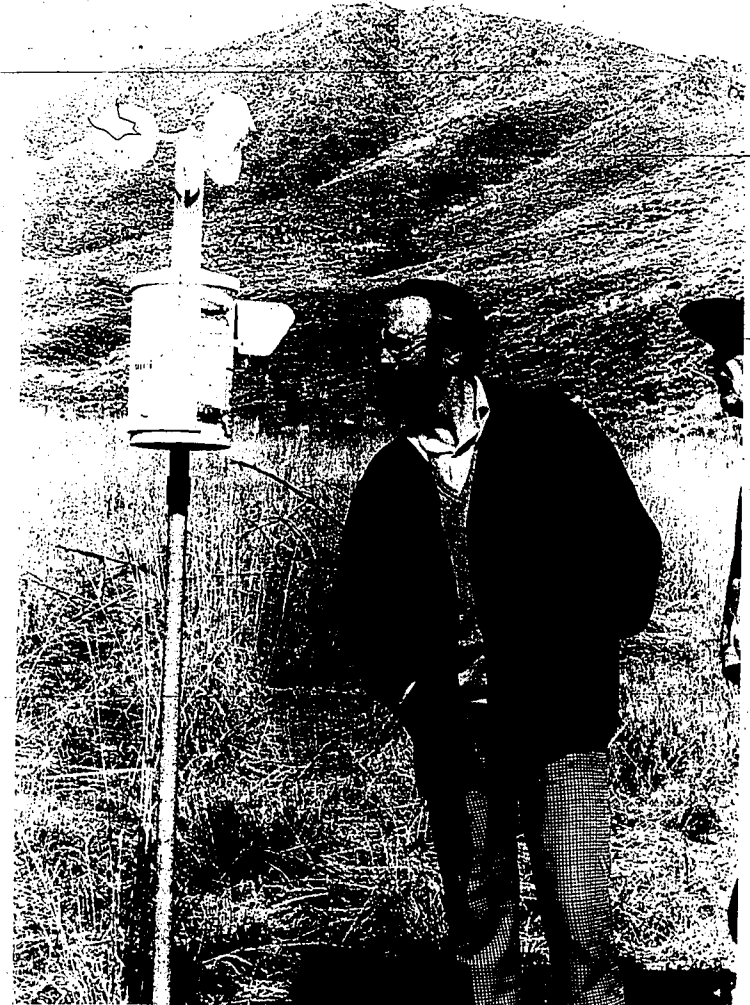

The Idaho Nuclear Energy Commission has already granted Clarendon $7000 to set up wind and solar gathering information, which is now on the property.

If the ERDA grants don't materialize Ryan promises Clarendon will go on as planned using alternate systems to supplement the development.

"Herb" is Herb Bernstein, Julie's manager, piano player, and arranger. He has also written several of the songs on Julie's newest album, including "One Fine Day," which is progressing steadily up the disco charts.

10-year veteran 22-years-old now

NEW YORK (UPI) — The lighting was all wrong. The pink and orange pastels were harsh, and the sharply contrasting black background looked like an endless canyon. Then 22-year-old Julie Budd, already a 10-year show business veteran, stepped out and sang about "The Man I Love" with the most moving and powerful voice currently going into a microphone. And the lights and background didn't matter. Miss Budd, who spent her adolescence in rehearsal hall and on the set of the Merv Griffin Show, put on a professional and thoroughly enjoyable act when she opened last week at the Grand Pinnacle. Weaving traditional ballads with her own brand of "disco" music, she kept her audience guessing about what was coming next. The answer was seldom a disappointment. "I'm a ballad singer, at least that's what I did first," Miss Budd said as she rested between shows. "The disco is something new and I'm not here if I

Hug for 'greatest'

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Keith Ericksen has a special message for fathers, especially divorced fathers. Don't quit. Teach your children what you know. Take what precious time you both have and make it a learning experience. You'll never regret the effort. Keith's only boy, Eric, is a good example of this philosophy. The father and son are together four times a month. Twelve year old Eric is your average smart alec kid. He's cocky, self-assured and laid back. Cool. But ask the chunky moppet to explain if certain lights hurt your eyes or Einstein's noble prize winning experiment defining lights and he'll straighten right up and explain it so...well...a 12 year old could understand it. The reason is simple: his father taught him the fundamentals. Eric and Keith have a loving and respectable father-mentor-student relationship dating back when Ericksen and his wife divorced. Eric has been 'visiting and learning science with his father since he was six years old. Keith, a former science instructor, has a mission: to pass on to Eric all his knowledge of the fundamental of science. He warns other divorced father that they owe it to their children to pass their skills, whatever they are, onto their children as well. "I wanted the boy to "want" to come and visit me. I didn't want it to be a boring, meaningless experience, so I started teaching him what I know," said Keith, who repairs pinball machines.

Using tin cans, scraps and throw-away world war two equipment, Keith and Eric have constructed crystal radio sets, a submarine (a study in buoyancy), a wind tunnel (aerodynamics), an electrical generator, a tin can rocket (a study in propulsion), and more recently, a light tunnel that demonstrates Einstein's awardwinning theory that light is made up of little energy bundles known as photons.

Each year since the first grade, Eric and Keith have put on a science show at Eric's school, St. Francis of Assisi.

This year the scientific duo put together a series of shows that explained and demonstrated the complete light spectrum, not only Einstein's theories, but those of Isaac Newton, Hans Christian Orsted and Michael Faraday.

Students learned that red and yellow-green in red glasses are bad for your eyes.

Barbs

By PHIL PASTORET

Testing the winds of a political year is about as easy as reading a compass on a merry-go-round.

Of course you didn't wake us — we had to get up to answer the phone anyway, stupid.

Our cloak and giggle chum wonders, if he carried a Boy Scout knife rather than a dagger, would his no-no's be considered good deeds?

Mac and friends

MAC DAVIS is surrounded by loveabes when "Phyllis" co-star Liz Torres (right) and country-western singer Donna Fargo guest on NBC-TV's "The Mac Davis Show," Thursday.

gossip column

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q. Will Sally Golan marry her live-in boy friend Ben Bradlee, the Washington Post executive? — H.R., Joliet, Ill.

A. She'd sure like to. In the meantime she's being the perfect mate, a veritable goddess, catering to Ben's every household whim.

Q. For instance, he doesn't like late hours so they're tucked in every night by 10. Bet you didn't know Sally was an old-fashioned girl.

Q. Did Omar Sharif say he didn't like American girls and would no longer make movies with them? — I. W., Cheyenne, Wyo.

OMAR SHARIF
... snubs U.S. women!

A. Not quite. Omar's latest film, "Ace Up My Sleeve," co-stars Karen Black but that doesn't stop the dashing Egyptian from criticizing our women.

His latest diatribe claims U. S. females are so demoralizing they have castrated their men. This leaves the women frustrated, of course, which explains why their fantasies are running more and more to dreams of violent encounters with older, tougher types like Telly Savalas and Charles Bronson.

Better stick to your bridge playing, Omar. Q. Are all porno film stars now subject to arrest because of that federal court case in Tennessee? — L. C., Dallas, Tex.

A. It could be, if the verdict holds up on appeal. The jury in the U. S. Court in Memphis found that not only the producers and distributors of "Deep Throat" were guilty of interstate commerce in obscenity but the cast members as well. All could get five years and $5,000 fines.

The film's star, Linda Lovelace, who did not appear, is said to be on the lam somewhere in South America. Just like another "Deep Throat."

Q. How many women have been mentioned in replacement for Barbara Walters on the "Today" show? — K. L., Buffalo, N. Y.

CARROLL BAKER
... poses inspiration

A. Plenty. But the list is too long to mention here. There is one interesting sidelight, however. TV host David Susskind was reportedly trying to get all the candidates together for his talk show.

Some jokers point out that Susskind's studio isn't big enough to handle the crowd. We'll see.

Q. What happened to that handsome actor named Gardner McKay? — E. K., Bronxville, N. Y.

A. McKay had one of those huge celebrity too-much-too-son publicity buildups. When he didn't make it he simply dropped out of show business.

McKay took up writing and has created a brand new career for himself. He sold two stories which will appear in Cosmopolitan magazine.

In addition he's got a collection of short stories coming out in paperback.

NO NAMES: A well-known health faddist who wrote a book on how to stay healthy is now taking her own advice. She's a member of one of the Los Angeles branches of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Q. What does Doris Day's new husband do for a living? — R. R., Detroit, Mich.

A. Barry Comden is a restaurant and catering man. Along the same lines, he and Doris are thinking about going into a joint-venture. And guess what it is?

Doris loves dogs and Barry loves Doris. You're right: a pet food company. What could be more appropriate?

Q. Who is this woman the musicians call Lady Rock? — P. B., Bakerfield, Calif.

A. That's Lady Patricia Pelham, daughter of the Duke of Newcastle who lives in Hollywood because she loves it and makes a living managing and promoting rock bands.

Patricia, 27, is a smashing looker as her neighbors in the Hollywood hills may have noticed when she fled her house in the nude during the latest California earthquake. Was she frightened?

Not a bit. Lady Rock loves earthquakes. "It's just like the whole world has turned into a cradle," she says.

Q. I feel sorry for Louise Lasser's drug bust but what really interests me is her relationship with Bruce Solomon. Am I crazy, or is she getting high on Sgt. Foley's kisses? — D. R., Boston, Mass.

A. You win the sharp-eyed viewer award.

We hear there is a real-life romance going on between Louise and Bruce. Solomon is said to be quite something with the ladies off screen as well as on.

Q. In the movie "All the President's Men" Bernstein seems to come off the smartest but I like Woodward better. Has anyone ever voted on favorites? — J. J., St. Paul, Minn.

A: The pair seems inextricably linked to the point of being named as one "Woodward" but in any real popularity contest Woodward would win hands down. He's the one with all the charm.

Q. Aren't those old-time Hollywood sex queens who were supposed to be so naughty pretty lame stuff compared to the current bunch who publicly admit sleeping around? — T. N., Atlanta, Ga.

LOUISE LASSER
... high on romance

A: According to a newly published biography of "It" girl, Clara Bow, she would have been a stellar nymphomaniac in any era of Hollywood history. Scores of names are mentioned including such upright types as Gary Cooper and Freddie March.

The book says, however, that when Clara finally found bit player Rex Bell, a man who cared for her as a woman and not just a body, she settled down happily until her death in 1965 at 60.

Q. Has anybody ever figured out what rock star David Bowie is really like? — S. C., Reno, Nev.

A: He's an odd one. A recent interviewer, trying to get at the essential-Bowie, could only report that he was deathly pale, thoroughly weird and totally nice.

One thing David definitely won't talk about is his mother, who is reported to be living in near poverty on a $23 a week pension.

And even though the singer almost never sees his wife, Angie, he says he would "never let go of such a divine being."

The reality of David Bowie seems to be that he is unreal.

Q. You said that Ava Gardner dated actor Martin Sheen in Rome. Were you suggesting romance? — D. A., San Diego, Calif.

A: You weren't listening. We wrote it was just a night on the town where Martin was filming "The Cassandra Crossing." Now "Badlands" Sheen is half a world away from Ava in the Philippine jungles where Francis Coppola is struggling to complete his Vietnam war picture. Sheen replaces Terrence Harvey Kettel, who was fired.

Coppola says he greatly admires Sheen's talent and hopes for a long association. That, of course, is exactly what he said about Kettel.

Q. Will the death of Howard Hughes have any effect on the acting career of Jean Peters? — Y. G., Akron, Ohio.

A. When Ms. Peters divorced Hughes in 1971 after 14 years of marriage, it was rumored that the actress pledged not to discuss her relationship with Hughes and also promised to keep out of the public eye. That effectively dampened her acting career but now, at 48, Jean is said to be considering a return to films.

Best remembered for her appearances in "Viva Zapata!" and "Three Coins in the Fountain," Jean is married now to 20th Century-Fox executive Stanley Hugh, who was her first boy friend when she came to Hollywood at age 20.

Q. Where is Carroll Baker, who was once going to be the new Jean Harlow? — T. C., Tampa, Fla.

A. Carroll, 44, is in New York to do a movie for Andy Warhol called "Bad" and she got something of a morale boost when a long-time fan finally caught up with her. Millionaire-pool-composer Rod McKuen has been writing mash notes to Carroll ever since he saw her in "Baby Doll" 15 years ago, but they never met.

Rod asked her around to Carnegie Hall where he was giving a concert and they got acquainted backstage. Confirmed bachelor McKuen was so delighted with his pet that he agreed to contribute the music for "Bad" as a gift.

Q. I lost track of that wonderful actor John Kerr who played the school boy in "Tea and Sympathy." — C. McD., N. Y., N. Y.

A: John went back to school and became a lawyer. He practices in Los Angeles and is currently living with Pat Cox, widow of the late comedian, Wally Cox.

JANICE Watson of Virginia Beach, Va., is all smiles despite the wait in line from 3 a.m. to 10 a.m., along with thousands of others, to buy tickets for a June 29 performance by Elvis Presley in Richmond at the Richmond Coliseum.

Long wait

20-year Elvis fan undaunted

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — When Kitty Allen first saw Elvis Presley perform 20 years ago at the old WRVA theater, tickets cost $2.50, there was no line and the rising star drew only 50 people.

Mrs. Allen, now a middle-aged mother, spend four hours in line Wednesday and spent $12.50 for a ticket to a Presley concert at the Richmond Coliseum which will draw a sellout crowd of more than 11,000.

"I've seen him perform 14 times during the past 20 years," Mrs. Allen said as she and her 14-year-old daughter Kim stood deep in the line of thousands of Presley fans.

"The only way he has changed is that he has gotten even sexier," she said.

Fans of the superstar began lining up to get tickets for his June 29 concert at about 6 p.m. Tuesday. By the time ticket booths opened at 10 a.m. Wednesday there were well over two thousand people, ranging from teen-agers to grandmothers.

Alice Butts and her friends spent 15 hours huddled on the steps of the Richmond Coliseum to get tickets to see the living legend do "his thing" — wiggle and sing.

"We are here to see 'The King,'" said the 34-year-old mother. "I've loved Elvis since I was a kid. Sure, he's put on a little weight and has gotten older (41), but he hasn't lost a bit of his appeal."

A majority of the fans in line were in their late 20s and early 30s. Many were teen-agers when Presley quit his job as a Memphis truck driver in the mid 1950s to become rock music sensation.

"I've been an Elvis Presley fan since I saw his first movie," said Grace Groome, 30, of Mechanicsville, Va., who was also among those who spent the night in line, wrapped in a blanket, seated on a lawn chair and sipping hot coffee.

"I waited 13 hours, but I would have been willing to wait 15 more," she said.

Some of today's younger generation also were represented, including Almee Reiter, 18, a high school senior from Washington, D.C.

"Why do we like him," she said, pausing and rolling her eyes. "Because he's got everything."

Presley first gyrated onto the rock scene in 1956, dressed in light pants and strumming an electric guitar. Since then, he has starred in more than 30 movies and sold more than 400 million records.

—Delegate's jail term 'short'

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Jerry Shafer's problem is that he won't spend enough time in jail to qualify as a delegate to Utah's State Democratic convention. At least that's what his neighbors claim.

Shafer, 26, was elected a convention delegate when he and 23 other inmates from a Salt Lake County jail halfway house packed a neighborhood political mass meeting.

"But the defeated local Democrats are challenging his election, claiming the convicted car thief is not a permanent resident of the area. He is serving one year in the correctional facility, which will be shut down when federal funding runs out Aug. 31 — two months before the election.

"The issue will be settled by the rules committee at the Salt Lake County Democratic Convention June 2.

"I don't think Shafer will keep his position because he's not a permanent resident in the district," said Phyllis Frankel, county Democratic chairwoman.

"Personally though, I think what he did was kind of neat. He's trying to participate in the system," she said.

"We don't want to discourage anyone who wants to be a Democrat," local party Treasurer Art Monson said. "After all, we are the party of the people."

But Monson said the inmates at the halfway house usually have other homes and "It's only reasonable that a person can't have two permanent residences."

Schafer, a part-time political science student at the University of Utah, says he has researched the law and found nothing to prevent him from serving as delegate.

"We blew some minds when we got to the meeting," he said. "When the others at the meeting found out we were from the facility, they were shocked."

Schafer, who lives at the center and holds down an outside job as a salesman, said one participant at the mass meeting told him he was too young to be a delegate and another asked if he was a Communist.

The woman in whose home the mass meeting was held said she was "embarrassed" by the episode and was sure the inmates were not eligible to vote.

Killer allowed to wed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — George Fultz, a state penitentiary inmate serving a total of 47 years for murder and sex related crimes committed in the Memphis area during the late 1960s, has been given permission to get married.

Correction Department officials said over the weekend they had relaxed the ban on inmate marriages and had granted the 30-year-old convicted murderer permission to marry a 46-year-old divorcee, Mrs. Arlene Hunter.
