

Bill would require flood compensation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Idaho Sens. Frank Church and James A. McClure have introduced legislation to require direct, federal compensation of victims of the Teton Dam disaster.

Their bill would provide compensation for personal injuries, death and the loss or damage of property as the result of the failure of the giant earth-fill dam last Saturday.

The legislation would make the federal government responsible for restitution for the losses, including repair of irrigation facilities.

They said Gov. Cecil D. Andrus was consulted on drafting of the legislation and gave his approval to it. Both senators agreed the federal government is directly responsible for the damage incurred from the flooding.

"Our efforts are to see that residents of the Upper Snake River Valley are justly compensated for the tragic losses they incurred due to the failure of a government project," they said. "We are assured of quick action on this bill in the Senate and are hopeful of similar quick approval by the House."

Hearings on the bill have been scheduled for June 24 in the Senate Interior Committee in Washington, D.C.

Panel named to probe dam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe today announced formation of an independent six man panel of internationally known engineers to investigate the Teton Dam disaster in Idaho last Saturday.

Kleppe said he and Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus selected the panel from a list suggested by the National Academy of Engineering, the National Academy of Science and other organizations.

The six men have had extensive experience in the areas of dam design, dam safety, soil mechanics, foundation engineering and seismology.

Chairman of the panel is Wallace L. Chadwick of Los Angeles, a member of the Board of the California Department of Water Resources and a consultant to the California Division of Dam Safety.

Other members are: — Ralph B. Deek, of Albuquerque, N.M., a consulting engineer and Power Resources foundation engineering at the University of Illinois; — Herbert E. Hertzberg, the National Medal of Science from President Ford last year.

— Arthur Casagrande, a teacher at Harvard University and since 1932 a consultant to many organizations on foundations and dams in the United States, Canada, Latin America, Europe and Asia.

— Thomas M. Lets, an Atherton, Calif., consulting engineer. He was a member of a California state board named to review the 1963 failure of Baldwin Hills Dam in Southern California.

— J. Balton Seed, professor of civil engineering at the University of California at Davis a member of the California Seismic Safety Commission and a consultant on the design of embankment dams and nuclear power plants.

— R. Keith Higginson, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

School bus destroyed

SWEPT away in the rampaging Teton Dam flood, a Sugar City school bus crashed into a tree and was destroyed. Clean-up crews were sifting through the wreckage of the flood today and discovered the school bus had lodged against the foundation of a Sugar City home which was gone without a trace after the flood. Insurance sought

BURLEY — As floodwater from the Teton Dam collapse plunged toward the American Falls reservoir dozens of Mini-Cassia area residents telephoned their insurance agents wanting to purchase flood insurance.

Insurance firms in Rupert and Burley this week have received a flood of calls from homeowners in Minidoka and Cassia counties who wanted to know if they could purchase flood insurance for their belongings.

Agents said many residents expressed concern over the possibility that the American Falls Dam might not stand up under the pressure from nearly 200,000 acre feet of extra water which began emptying into the reservoir Tuesday.

American Falls Dam is located about 40 miles upstream and east from Rupert. The dam currently holds about 1.1 million acre feet of water.

The aging American Falls Dam will be replaced within five years and has been declared unsafe to hold its full capacity of 1.7 million acre feet.

Tom Pierce of State Farm Insurance in Rupert said many of his callers were merely curious about obtaining federally subsidized flood insurance.

Jimmy won't tell

PLAIN, Ga. (UPI) — With a firm grip on the Democratic nomination, Jimmy Carter will wait until he officially becomes the party's candidate before revealing his choice for a running mate.

Carter, who received endorsements Wednesday from Alabama Gov. George Wallace, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, said he is considering about two-dozen vice presidential possibilities.

"There is going to be a lot of speculation, obviously, about the vice presidency," Carter said in a news conference. "No one is authorized to speak for me—no one."

Carter said he will consult conference delegates in Madison Square Garden next month on a running mate and "that's my present inclination; to wait until after the nomination comes to me, before I make any public statements."

Wallace released his delegates to Carter at a Montgomery news conference and Daley said in Chicago he would vote for Carter.

Carter, dressed in denim workclothes, came from his peanut farm here to discuss the primary results. He said his "most conservative" Alabama showed him gaining 220 delegates in the final primaries Tuesday in California, Ohio and New Jersey.

6 more cadets guilty

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — Officer boards sitting at courts at the U.S. Military Academy have found six more cadets guilty in the current cheating scandal, officials said Wednesday.

In New York City, a federal judge rejected an accused cadet's motion to halt the proceedings.

Maj. F.W. Smullen, the academy spokesman, said a board of five Army officers returned the latest findings Tuesday night. He said hearings for two more cadets were postponed.

Witnesses called

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — An Ohio attorney defending two Americans accused of "war crimes" in the Angolan civil war said today he would call Defense Minister Henrique Dos Carreiros and psychiatrists as his chief defense witnesses.

"I am not denying the charges against my clients; but the circumstances surrounding them," said attorney Robert Cerner, Jr. of Columbus, Ohio.

Moynihan seeks post

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former U.N. Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat now held by James L. Buckley, R-N.Y.

Moynihan said he decided to seek the nomination because friends in the party and the labor movement have "asked me to run representing a kind of center position in the Democratic party with the first priority being that that's the position that can be cleared."

Heyburn to help pay for new nuclear power plant

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — The Heyburn City Council voted unanimously Wednesday night to sign a $5.9 million contract with the Washington Public Power Supply System (WPPSS) for new nuclear power plants.

WPPSS estimates that the proposed plants will produce 2,500 megawatts of electricity with 50 megawatts going to Heyburn.

Currently Heyburn is served by Bonneville Power Administration and can receive up to 29 megawatts, more than adequate for its present needs. However, the city's population has jumped 60 per cent in the past five years and is continuing to rise.

Although technically a partner with WPPSS, Heyburn and other participating communities anticipate paying their share of construction costs through their purchases of power. However, if environmental groups succeed in stopping construction on the plants, the communities would have to pay their share of the construction costs in that plant.

Although several Ann-Cassia area communities and electrical companies have option contracts and are considering the participation agreement, Heyburn is the first to sign. Both Rupert and Burley are expected to sign before the July deadline.

"I can see nothing wrong with our belonging to this," Heyburn Mayor Harold Hurst said Wednesday night. "If we don't, we're in trouble electrically."

"I have a lot of objections, but I don't think we dare not sign it," Councilman J.R. Brown commented.

Councilman Earl Rose said the city is in line for partial construction costs if the two plants are not completed, but added that he saw no alternative.

"You're involved in a certain amount of gamble," Hurst admitted. "But it's either that or not have power."

Brown said the city had lost one source of power when the Teton Dam broke last Saturday, adding, "It'll be hard to build any more like that."

Councilman Willard Wilcox stated that the nuclear electricity would add one-third to the cost of electricity.

"Mr. John Q. Citizen in Heyburn is going to be saddled with that amount," he said. But added, "I think we're obligated to look out for the city."

Hurst said the alternative would be to reject the contract and "let someone else take over electrical service; and we raise our taxes to 45 mills."

Brown moved to authorize signing the contract and Wilcox seconded.

Shirley protocol chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said today he is appointing former child film star Shirley Temple Black as the White House chief of protocol.

The 38-year-old Mrs. Black, ambassador to Ghana since September, 1974, will be the first woman to hold the post which directs the pomp and circumstance of the President's dealings with visiting foreign leaders and diplomats.

Ford—in a statement—said he also is nominating her for the rank of ambassador.

She will succeed Henry E. Catto Jr. whom Ford said he was nominating as U.S. ambassador to the Geneva European headquarters of the United Nations.

Mrs. Black, married and the mother of three, starred in more than 40 movies and 50 one-hour television shows. During the Nixon-and-Ford administrations she has held international posts, including being a U.S. delegate to the U.N. General Assembly and representing America at global conferences in Stockholm and Moscow.

From 1972 to 1974 she served as a presidential special assistant on environmental matters.

In his new post, Catto succeeds Francis L. Dale who is returning from Geneva to study America's role in the United Nations. Prior to joining the government in 1969, Catto served as a newspaper, insurance and real estate executive in San Antonio, Tex.

Many small businessmen complain about red tape

By DAVE HORSMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Plinched by the demands of government regulations, many small businessmen are yelling, "Uncle!"

"Some of the regulations you just can't live with," says Roscoe Rich, a Burley sheepman. The U.S. Department of Labor recently tried to apply one set of rules to all types of housing for workers, including the tiny wagons used by sheepherders throughout the West.

The result was both amusing and maddening for sheepmen like Rich.

One of the regulations required that a 24-inch square window be cut in the rear of the wagons as a fire escape.

"Ridiculous," charges Rich. "If the damn thing catches fire, they aren't going to get out that window any way. They'll go out the front door. It's only two steps and they are out."

The federal agency's interest in the little mountain-roving wagons didn't stop with fire safety. It also wanted:

— Installation of hot and cold running water, toilets and showers.

— Replacement of the traditional canvas tops with aluminum enclosures.

— Replacement of the wood-burning heating and cooking stoves with propane-fueled stoves.

— Installation of electric lights.

Two sheepherders often slept in individual sleeping bags on the same mattress, but the new federal rules required separate beds.

The herders "don't even know what's going on," Rich says. "They don't even care. They haven't complained. It's the (labor) department that's shoving it down our throats."

The sheepmen have gained exemptions from some of the rules, but fighting Washington was expensive and time-consuming.

The Western Range Association, comprised of sheepmen in 10 Western states, spent more than $50,000 "just meeting with those bureaucrats and trying to get them to see the light," says John Basse, Grand View, president of the group.

The association had two attorneys working full-time on the challenges and piled up some big bills for air transportation to Washington.

The federal rules "had it fixed so you'd have to have a big modern trailer house," Basse complains. "Such a contraption 'couldn't get over the mountains.'"

Basse doesn't even credit the Labor Department with well-intentioned, but misguided zeal in trying to help the sheepherders.

The agency pushed the rules "just to make people crazy," he charges.

"The bureaucrats back in Washington, D.C., are going to run this country. They don't know a thing about how we live here in the West. They threaten the whole (sheep) industry."

The Labor Department usually shares the spotlight with the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) when small businessmen are asked to name their governmental headaches.

US Marine system 'abusive'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two years ago, about 55 percent of U.S. Marine Corps recruits who were asked said they had received "serious, flagrant — physical — punishment."

Last year more than one in six recruits who started training at Parris Island, S.C., were discharged for mental problems.

These facts were presented by Dr. Jonathan Cohen, a former Navy doctor who was head psychiatrist at Parris Island from 1972 to 1974, and Navy Capt. Eugene Evans, who now heads the post.

Both testified Wednesday before the House military manpower-subcommittee, which is investigating training, deaths and injuries. Cohen said "such incidents are virtually guaranteed by the system of training followed at Parris Island."

Describing the system as "abusive," Cohen said it was based on "physical and psychological stress conditions which clearly exceed the tolerance limits of individuals and which — predictably — will cause physical or mental breakdown in a certain proportion of the recruits."

Cohen said he interviewed two groups of about 40 recruits each, one group trainees from general sick call and the other from psychiatric sick call. He said the recruits were assured anonymity.

About 55 percent of each group reported having received physical punishment.

Cohen said. He described the punishment as being punched, knocked to the ground, kicked, having ribs broken, choked, eyes gouged, being struck in the head with a rifle butt.

Cohen's charges differed from earlier testimony from a medical doctor who served at Parris Island — about the same time and who said he did not believe "abuse" was a significant problem.

Evans said about 3,000 recruits had been discharged for mental reasons in 1975, or a figure between 1 in 3 and 1 in 6 of all those entering training.

Marine officials disputed the figures on grounds many of those discharged did not represent real psychiatric cases and may have included many recruits who were simply seeking an easy way out of the corps.

Figures supplied by 2,118 Marines showed 5,218 recruits last year for five categories which Evans classified as mental. They were apathy, inaptitude, character and behavioral disorders, sexual perversion and drug abuse.

Figures through April of this year showed a drop of more than 50 percent of the rate of such discharges at Parris Island. But figures for the Marine training depot at San Diego, Calif., showed an increase of close to 40 percent in the same categories.

Mountain Home delegate new Girls State governor

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Yvonne Watson, 16, Mountain Home Air Force Base, the black girl ever to be a Wyoming Girls State delegate, will be sworn in tonight as its 30th governor, succeeding Vicki Graybill, Boise.

Miss Watson is a daughter of M. Sgt. and Mrs. Everett Watson. Her father is senior enlisted adviser to the wing commander in the base.

A member of the Federalist-Party-at-Girls State, a working commitment to study government, Miss Watson defeated Lori Mortenson, St. Anthony, of the Nationalist Party. Both girls earlier were chosen mayors of their mock cities — Miss Watson for "Betsey Ross" City and Miss Mortenson for "John Paul Jones" City.

Although she is the first and only black girl named a delegate in Girls State in 20 years, Miss Watson said that has been no problem for her.

"Is there any color line presiding?" she asked. "Not really. The girls here are all so bright. I like to think this delegation has come just the time of that."

Miss Watson campaigned for governor on

"abusing" as her principal issue.

"My definition of abusing and the Boston definition are two different things," she said. "In Boston, the issue is 'not busing, it's integration."

"The busing issue itself, I feel, is absolutely necessary for cultural enlightenment."

"In a nation founded on the ideals of equality for all and unity as one, we cannot achieve this goal without being aware of the life styles of those who live differently from ourselves," she said.

A student at Mountain Home High School, Miss Watson said her motto is, "It is more important to be human than to be important."

Born in River Head, Long Island, N. Y., Miss Watson lived in Germany, North Dakota and New York before moving to Mountain Home with her family five years ago.

She will receive the oath of office tonight from Chief Justice Joseph McFadden at the Idaho Supreme Court in inaugural ceremonies at the Chieftain Auditorium on the College of Idaho campus in Caldwell.

Viet vets removed from statue

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fifteen Vietnam veterans who "tacked" themselves onto the Statue of Liberty for 10 hours to protest cutbacks in GI benefits were removed Wednesday by National Park Service police.

The protesters, members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War, were taken to the Battery Park ferry terminal by boat. All of them were handcuffed, and some were handcuffed.

They were arraigned in U.S. District Court on charges of violating visiting hours and failure to comply with a court order to leave, then released without bail pending a hearing July 7.

Removal of the protesters opened the door for hundreds of sightseers, some of whom had been waiting for hours for a chance to visit the landmark statue.

The protesters and Ellis islands had been crowded all morning because of the demonstration and hundreds of school children and tourists were milling around Battery Park.

The veterans seized the Statue of Liberty about 6 p.m. Tuesday, bringing with tourists on the last boat to the island.

They chained and locked the doors leading into the statue and hung a banner from the statue's crown 22 stories above the ground, which read: "Extend and Expand the GI Bill."

They were protesting the Memorial Day cutoff of the GI Bill, which terminated GI benefits to veterans who have been out of the service for 10 years or more.

Sun evaporates Midwest moisture

By United Press International

It was hot day after the rains.

The sun beat down Wednesday on crops, baking the soil and taking back the little moisture the rain had left in the drought parched upper Midwest.

Some Minnesota farmers began selling their livestock because of a feed shortage. Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jon Wefald estimated the state's drought losses at $1 billion.

Wefald said some livestock farmers "resigned themselves to a total herd liquidation because they are out or nearly out of feed, hay, pasture and credit."

"If we don't get some good, healthy rainfall between now and July 1, our losses could double and the 1976 crop would be pretty well done," Wefald said. "It would be the worst economic disaster for agriculture the state has ever had."

Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson said he would ask President Ford today to designate a "hay emergency area" because of the drought.

A presidential emergency declaration would make available an immediate subsidy of $20 a ton for transporting hay from surrounding states.

The heaviest losses include hay, barley, spring wheat, flax and rye. Some 50 percent of the projected yields already have been lost, agriculture officials said.

"It's enough to make a man want to give up," said Orville Whitney, who runs a small farm outside Moorhead, Minn. "It was bad last year. It's getting worse this year."

"Some people — small farmers — are in lock up to their ears from last year. They could lose their farms if they don't bring in a decent crop this year. And they way things look now the chances are slim. Mighty slim."

Federal officials and congressional aides were touring Minnesota to assess crop damage.

Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey said "the next week to 10 days are critical" in northwest Wisconsin.

The South Dakota director of the Farmers' Home Administration told farmers and ranchers at an emergency meeting in Pierre, S.D., not to rush into seeking federal aid, since an emergency declaration would cover losses only up to the date the emergency was declared.

Rangelands in central and eastern South Dakota remained in the extreme fire danger category and local endangered livestock in central and eastern Kansas officials said.

Time needed to assess damage

BOISE (UPI) — State Highway Administrator Dean Tisdale said Wednesday it's going to take some time to get an actual assessment of road damage from the Teton Dam disaster. In the meantime, he said, "we are concentrating on getting the roads open."

Tisdale estimated it would be "at least three weeks" before there is an accurate accounting of damages to roads and bridges in the flood area.

The highway official said it has been impossible to make an assessment until now because of the mud and the clogged roads, but added six teams will be in the area Thursday to log the roads.

"It will require several hundred man hours," Tisdale said. "It probably will be three weeks before they complete their report."

"Right now we are concentrating on getting the roads open, with the help of the National Guard and contractors in that area," he said. "I hope in a week or so we will have a lot restored so motorists can at least drive on them."

Tisdale said once the roads were restored to travel, "we then can start on permanent repairs to bring them back to acceptable standards."

He said it was important that a complete accounting of damages be made and every detail included so the federal government would pay 100 percent for repairing the bridges and bringing the roads back to standards.

"I don't include everything we have trouble getting federal authorization to make permanent repairs," Tisdale said.

For that reason, he said, the survey has to be extensive.

Until the surveys finish their work, Tisdale said, the highway district in the flood area was working on preliminary estimates of damage to bridges and roads.

He said the civil defense estimates of 200 miles and 200 bridges probably were round numbers taking in the number of miles and bridges in the disaster area.

"I'm quite sure not all the bridges were severely damaged," Tisdale said. "There was some damage to most of them and I'm sure many probably can be put back into service rapidly."

He said he hoped to have some preliminary estimates ready Thursday when the Idaho Board of Transportation meets in Boise.

"If we do, it will be discussed at that time."

Tisdale said highway crews may complete a detour Thursday on U.S. 191 north of Sugar City — the main route between Idaho Falls and Yellowstone National Park.

"We lost a bridge there as well as the Sugar City bypass," Tisdale said, adding the detour would be a mile west of the highway on a county road.

The bridge that was lost was over the North Fork of the Teton River.

Skin cancer campaign slated

BOISE (UPI) — The Department of Health and Welfare has contracted with Healthwise, Inc., of Boise to develop a public information campaign about skin cancer.

The campaign will encourage Idahoans to prevent skin cancer and to recognize and seek early treatment for its symptoms.

The project is being developed for the Idaho Cancer Coordinating Committee in cooperation with the Idaho Division of the American Cancer Society.

Healthwise, a non-profit organization created to develop and promote consumer health education, will develop a series of television and radio public service announcements about prevention and early treatment of skin cancer.

Workers nearly drown at dam

BOISE (UPI) — Eight construction workers came within two or three minutes of being drowned at the base of Teton Dam when it collapsed Saturday, according to an eyewitness.

John Watson, a cement plant operations engineer for Morrison-Knudsen Co., said men were clearing debris from inside a tunnel so the gates could be opened to let the storage water escape. He had just reached the canyon floor, he said, when he looked up at the dam "and I could see there wasn't any chance of saving it."

He turned around and headed his car back up the road, then stopped it and ran to the tunnel. He found the workers at the entrance.

"We all knew she was going. We had about six vehicles so there were six vehicles going 60 miles an hour down the road."

"Two other men abandoned their rigs and climbed the canyon wall to safety," he said. "The road washed out below as the workers reached the last hill. The water wasn't 100 yards away from us."

"We had two or three minutes and that was all," Watson said.

Reception set

BOISE (UPI) — More than 60 published Idaho authors will be honored at an Idaho Author's Day reception at the Idaho State Library in Boise Sunday.

Among local authors to be honored will be Mike Hanley, Glenn Balch, Dr. Eugene Chaffee, and Grace Jordan.

Book collections will be on display and authors will autograph their works.

The reception will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. at 325 W. State St., Boise.

AFL-CIO sets fund

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — The Idaho AFL-CIO Wednesday established a fund to aid in the relief of victims of the Teton Dam disaster in the southeastern part of the state.

Before concluding its Tuesday convention in Coeur d'Alene, the union organization allocated $5,000 to establish the fund. Another $700 was raised from a collection made on the convention floor.

State AFL-CIO President Bob Macfarlane, Boise, said a nationwide appeal was also made for funds. He said George Henry, national AFL-CIO president, also pledged his support.

Macfarlane said the funds will be used to aid all victims,

Roberts narrowly avoids shootout

BOISE (UPI) — A flood-weary Roberts man, unwilling to surrender his property to floodwaters a second time, nearly turned the Teton Dam flood disaster into a shootout in this town of 300.

Roberts has been under six feet of water for four days and the residents of this eastern Idaho community had had all they could take without assistance from Civil Defense and National Guardsmen.

Tension was like smoke in a small town at an old-time political convention.

This town is located in a bowl of land south of the Teton Dam which was flooded when the rush of water that swept Rexburg was diverted to avoid flooding in more populated centers.

Trouble started Tuesday night when residents decided to release the high water trapped in Roberts by digging a hole into the old river channel. Permission was received to tear out a portion of railroad track which would have pulled the water through several mobile home lots that had been flooded Sunday morning and back into the abandoned channel.

"To do this would have meant reflooding the trailer home of Morris Morgan."

Normally, a quiet-mannered man, Morgan had had enough. Del Ray Holm, Morgan's LDS Church bishop, said Holm said Morgan came out of his trailer to defend his property, waving a gun and threatening to shoot the first man who picked up a shovel to start the trench.

Several deputized residents and "every man in town" showed up at the stand off. Holm said the men tried to approach Morgan to try to change his mind.

Joe Patter, Jefferson County Sheriff, appeared on the scene and a possible midnight was averted. Morgan was not available for comment.

Those who live in Roberts still are wondering why they received no assistance until Tuesday afternoon. As one resident put it, "The people of Roberts have been wonderful, the civil defense has been terrible and the press has been (worse)."

Chris Smith, Jefferson County civil defense director, may lose his job over the situation.

Smith said he met with Mayor James Brooks, Idaho adjutant general, and Charles Houtree, state civil defense director, Wednesday where he said "questions were raised and explanations were given" about the way he handled the flood in his jurisdiction.

He said there was no discussion of his removal at the meeting but Sheriff Joe Patter said he expected Smith to "get the axe" because he gave no direction to the relief efforts in the county.

Brice Glen, Gordon Shore said the National Guard must wait for requests from the civil defense director or an emergency situation in county Commissioner Glenn Scott, whose house was one of the hardest hit in Roberts, said "We tried to ask for help but... and then he shrugged." He said the meeting with Brooks and Houtree "was very informal."

Apparently the requests for help were slow in coming. Two small pumps were slowly siphoning water out of the room of water that "had damaged every house in town" as well as a $250,000 addition to the LDS Church and a $50,000 grocery store which was the only new construction in the town for several years.

"The Roberts' friends, working together to dry out the town they say is 'dissolving' under the stagnant water said they felt neglected by state and federal relief efforts and ignored by the media. But they say they have suffered in silence long enough."

Michael Donohue, a Jefferson County resident, was awakened in the middle of the night by a young man who asked if he could be arrested for taking his girlfriend back to her home to retrieve her milking clothes.

Gem center aids Canadian effort

BOISE (UPI) — A U.S. Air Force C-141 Starlifter jet freighter from California flew out of Boise Wednesday with 50,000 pounds of fire suppression gear to aid firefighters battling 137 separate fires in the Canadian province of Ontario.

The supplies are being shipped by the Boise Interagency Fire Center at the request of the Canadian government because of the critical fire situation in northern Ontario.

A second C-141 was dispatched by the Boise center to Missoula, Mont., to pick up an additional 22,000-30,000 pounds of firefighting equipment from the U.S. Forest Service's Region One fire warehouse for shipment to the Canadian Province.

Reagan's foot-in-mouth disease triggers blitz

LOS ANGELES - Ronald Reagan's latest attack of foot-in-mouth disease...

anti-Reagan wing of the party - a division not susceptible to pathological definitions...

In fact, this last-ditch effort was almost certainly too little, too late...

some, but very little, erosion and pegged Reagan almost as far ahead of Mr. Ford...

Third project needs help

Idahoans usually are quick to rally behind projects which help their friends and neighbors...

Response to the Teton Dam disaster has been remarkable with food, clothing, offers for housing...

Contributions from private individuals and Idaho corporations saved Silver Creek in Blaine County...

From development is another example of Idahoans recognizing where a helping hand is needed.

But Idaho people apparently have developed a blind spot on a third needed project.

The ambitious drive to get a privately-funded alcohol treatment center underway in Gooding has attracted little support from Idaho residents and corporations.

Organizers of the treatment center need $75,000 to get rolling. So far only $2,000 in Idaho funds have been raised for the project.

A single out-of-state contribution of $10,000 is the major pledge made to the alcohol treatment facility.

Only 100 hospital beds now are used to treat Idaho alcoholics. But an estimated 10,000 alcoholics live in the state and many of these would benefit if the Gooding treatment center were in operation.

Organizers of the center want to get the hospital started without using tax money. Once established they say fees from patients will sustain the operation.

In the preliminary stages, $75,000 seed money is needed to renovate the old Gooding tuberculosis hospital and to hire a hospital staff.

Founders of the treatment center have tried to drum up financial aid for their project in Idaho but haven't been too successful.

Idahoans should consider the merits of the Gooding alcohol treatment center. The project doesn't raise taxes, it helps many troubled souls deal with a disease which is ignored in the state, and utilizes an old building which has been vacant for years.

The Teton Dam disaster shows that Idahoans care about their neighbors. As the flood-water subsides, Idahoans should dig into their pockets to help out some other neighbors and help get the Gooding alcohol treatment center off the ground.

Apricot case ludicrous

WASHINGTON - The Feds cracked down again last week on the terrible Apricot Kernel Gang. In San Diego a grand jury brought in a thundering 45-page indictment - 19 defendants, 33 co-conspirators, 171 overt acts. The basic charge is conspiracy to smuggle. It convicted, members of this nefarious outfit could get up to 20 years in prison.

Oh, it is horrible, horrible, horrible! You would not believe what these desperate criminals have been up to. The mind boggles. The hand trembles. After two years of unrelenting investigation, marshalling the full resources of customs, justice, and the Postal Service, these unscrupulous and despicable felons stand accused of smuggling - an extract of apricot pits.

If it were not for its serious aspects, this ludicrous proceeding would be laughed out of existence. The thing is a travesty, it is the stuff of satire. It evokes the solemn stupidity of the insensible bureaucrat, insensitively acting. And the indictment is also, to put a fine point

Roseworth pollution problem of agency

Editor, Times-News: In answer to a letter of complaint published in the Times-News of May 30, 1976, concerning pollution at the Roseworth Recreation Site, the following explanation may serve to take the Idaho Department of Fish and Game off the hook.

This is not a problem for the Fish and Game Department, but comes as one of the many duties of the Twin Falls County Waterways Committee members, of which I am a member on a voluntary, non-paying basis for planning and caring for this work in the recreation areas of Twin Falls County.

These men should be complemented for their community service rather than criticized. Surely Mr. Lewis has not been around the Roseworth Reservoir or he would know that there are at least six usable toilets along the south and east shores. There is one toilet that was washed away during the highest water this spring and it has not been possible to reset this one as yet. We assure those who USE these facilities that every effort has been made to keep these toilets above the high-water line. They have been moved and reset as the situation demanded, and when the water levels receded, they have again been reset to serve the people more conveniently. The high water levels will increase to higher ground as soon as possible. Although we are not proud of the type, they have to be in such outlying areas.

This committee has many other recreation areas in the County, and it's just a bit difficult to keep all in top shape at all times. High rates of vandalism also make it nearly impossible to maintain these areas. One toilet was stolen from the Roseworth Lake area sometime early in 1975. Let us reduce our criticism of the Fish and Game Department and each of us do his or her part in keeping the grounds clean of garbage - especially of cans, bottles, and fish cleaning wastes.

Considerable money and time is spent by the Waterways Committee and the county and state Parks and recreation departments in making new facilities available for the use by the public, such as making new ramps, extending previously made ones, keeping boat and ski docks available and stable, and spending hundreds of dollars for clearing parking spaces.

Just this week, five new docks were received from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department for a second line at the Salmon Reservoir, where most such use is required. We have a big responsibility and try hard to please people. Please call or write your complaints to:

Clark Kleinkopf, executive secretary, Twin Falls County Waterways Committee, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301, Phone 731-4548.

A number of medical physicians, pharmacists or respected medical schools have a theory about laetrile. They believe that in certain cases, the substance may be useful in arresting some forms of cancer or in relieving the pain of terminal cancer. They are satisfied that whether the stuff is called a drug, a nutritive supplement or an act of faith, it seems to work on some patients. Several thousands of patients appear to be.

To the Food and Drug Administration, however, laetrile is an "illegal drug." It may be legal in Mexico, Germany and 20 other countries, but it is illegal here. Its safety and efficacy never have been established according to law. Therefore no druggist may lawfully sell it, and no doctor may lawfully prescribe it. Thus the San Diego indictment.

This is a marvelous case. The charge is "conspiracy." And the defendants are known as "conspirators." But conspiracies, by definition, are secret affairs; they are the work of plotters who "breathe together." Seldom if ever in the history of crime have conspirators been more open than the conspirators here accused. One defendant is Andrew H. L. McNaughton, whose McNaughton Foundation has been especially providing amygdalin for years. Another plottor is Dr. John Anton (Richardson) of Albany, Calif., a public advocate of laetrile therapy. Still another is Robert William Bradley of Menlo Park, Calif., president of the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy, who operates a clinic that his committee has 20,000 members, among them 600 doctors.

The charge in the U.S. District Court serving San Diego is that laetrile is unlawful. But in the U.S. District Court serving Oklahoma City, laetrile has twice been ruled lawful, harmless, and a wholly permissible alternative treatment for cancer. Indeed the Oklahoma judge has enjoined the government from preventing the prescription and sale of the identical substance regarded as smugglers' contraband in California.

Among the defendants are Donna Schuster and Don Hansen of Rochester, Minn. They are small fry. As partners in a health food store, they had been importing and selling amygdalin to their health food customers. She is a housewife, he a musician. They now have been twice indicted. The first indictment was directed at a ramp-up charge that cry out of entrapment. They have been arrested, fingerprinted and mugged, and put to thousands of dollars in legal expenses. This is the kind of thing big government does to little people.

For the record, I myself am highly skeptical of amygdalin, but I am not personally attached to laetrile. Its worth, never has been proved according to standards acceptable to the government and to the scientific community. In the absence of such proof, I suspect the stuff is worthless.

But the evidence is overwhelming that in grape cancers, amygdalin is no more dangerous than aspirin, paracetamol, salt, sugar, or Tennessee-sour-mash bourbon, and it strikes me as stupid and oppressive to cry "terminal quackery" at those who truly believe.

So - you think someone might buy my medicine? "Are you kidding? I know seven paperback houses that will give you $100,000 for them, without reading a chapter."

The little old lady said, "I'm not just doing it for the money. I'm doing it because I believe people should know what Abraham Lincoln really was."

So - you think someone might buy my medicine? "I wouldn't know."

She was mistress to Lincoln, or was it Grant?

WASHINGTON - The little old lady came into my office clutching a yellow manuscript. "I was wondering," she said in a tiny voice, "if these are worth anything?" "What are they?" "My memoirs. I was the mistress of Abraham Lincoln."

"Fantastic," said "Nobody knows Lincoln had a mistress." "It's been my secret for 101 years," she said. "Why are you revealing it now?" "Everybody else seems to be talking about their affairs with the President, and I figured I might as well get into the act. President Lincoln and I were more than good friends."

"How good?" "It's all in the book. We used to meet in the Lincoln Room any time Mary Todd was out of town."

"How did you meet him?" "Through Frank Sinatra. We were introduced at a party in Chicago."

"Frank Sinatra the singer?" "I asked, in amazement. "Not that Frank Sinatra, silly. Frank Sinatra was a colonel in the Illinois Regulars, I met him through Sam Giancana." "Giancana, the Mafia boss?" "No, stupid," she said. "Sam Giancana was in the War Department. I used to date him when I worked up on the Hill for congressman Hays."

"Wayne Hays?" "That's correct. He may have been in a wheelchair, but he was strong as an ox."

"Let's get back to Lincoln. You say you had an affair with him?" "That's correct. He may have been in a wheelchair, but he was strong as an ox."

"Then it must have been Andrew Johnson." "That's funny. I thought it was Lincoln. Do you think Frank Sinatra tried to meet me?" "I wouldn't know."

"Now wait a minute. Lincoln wasn't in a wheelchair. That was Franklin Delano Roosevelt." "Are you sure?" she asked. "Well, maybe it was Roosevelt then. He had a mustache and kept talking about San Juan Hill."

"That was Teddy Roosevelt, not Franklin Roosevelt. Lincoln was the one with the stopeppe hat and a beard." "It's been so long ago it's hard for me to remember. I know he never wore a stopeppe hat when we had our affair. He told me once that he wouldn't be able to see me for a while because he was going to be impeached."

"The only President who was going to be impeached were Andrew Johnson and Richard Nixon. It wasn't Richard Nixon, was it?" "I should say not. I would never have had an affair with that man. He lied to the American people."

"Then it must have been Andrew Johnson." "That's funny. I thought it was Lincoln. Do you think Frank Sinatra tried to meet me?" "I wouldn't know."

"Well, whoever it was used to take me for long walks by the Tidal Basin."

"The Tidal Basin? Are you sure you didn't make all this up?" "Yes, I was somebody's mistress and if it wasn't Lincoln, it was the fellow that came a few years later."

"General Grant? Did he drink a lot?" "Gee - it's all in my memoirs. We used to drink together and we'd go up to the Lincoln Room. Maybe that's why I thought it was Lincoln - because of the name on the room. I remember he said his greatest dream was to return to his ranch on the Pedernales."

"Wow, you do have a story to tell." "So - you think someone might buy my medicine?" "Are you kidding? I know seven paperback houses that will give you $100,000 for them, without reading a chapter."

The little old lady said, "I'm not just doing it for the money. I'm doing it because I believe people should know what Abraham Lincoln really was."

Gem disaster victims begin clearing needed irrigation canals

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Hundreds of men, using every available piece of heavy equipment, began clearing critically needed irrigation canals Wednesday of debris and silt from the Teton Dam disaster.

Even as the bulldozers scrape the silt muddy rubble from the canals, survivors of the flood that killed five, injured 1,769 and left 40 to 60 missing streamed into relief centers in search of housing, clothing and other aid.

National Guardsmen, work crews and law enforcement officers continued searching for missing persons. Red Cross, LDS Church officials and others checked with relatives to see whether some of the missing had turned up. Some may never be found in the wreckage left by the marauding floodwaters.

Car 'find' profitable situation

SCOTSDALE, Ariz. (UPI) — A Scottsdale man who is turning over old car enthusiasts green with envy—15 "new" 1946 to 1957 Dodge and Plymouth automobiles.

"It's as great a find as landing a man on the moon," Barrett said. "What was his discovery? They even have that old-fashioned car smell!" said Barrett, a Scottsdale real estate developer who also has dealt in antique and classic cars for the past 30 years.

Barrett recently obtained the autos from the estate of Ben Hooper, who retired as an auto dealer in Plainview, Tex., about 1958.

"They were models he was very fond of," Barrett said in explaining why Hooper kept the 12 Dodges and 3 Plymouths, most of them deluxe models. None of the cars was driven over 40 miles and several had only 2, 3, or 4 miles on the odometer.

Barrett described Hooper as a man who did not worry about money.

"In one of the cars, they found checks dating back to 1947 that he had never cashed," Barrett said. "Most of the townspeople knew about the cars in the warehouse, but had never seen them. They were just cars Mr. Hooper loved."

Barrett said he first looked at the cars with the aid of a flashlight at 4 o'clock in the morning and "couldn't believe what I was seeing. They had no rust, no marks, up-paint, fogs, the upholstery was perfect," Barrett said.

The cars were so well preserved, Barrett said, because the "warehouse was almost totally dark, and the cars'—all colors of the rainbow—were never exposed to the sun.

"The warehouse had a dirt floor which absorbed the moisture," he said. After hauling the cars to his home, Barrett took them to a local Dodge dealer for their first "new car check."

"There were very few things wrong with them," he said. "Even the tires are still good. Only three or four had flat tires and all the spares still had air in them."

Barrett already has sold two of the cars for $10,000 each. He plans to put several up for sale at an auction he will conduct June 18-20 at Las Vegas and will save five for a museum he plans to open soon in Scottsdale.

Specifically, Andrus requested a presidential declaration of liability for the $1 billion flood. He said it was caused by the failure of a federally sited, built, supervised and owned dam and was not a natural disaster.

Assistant Interior Secretary Jack Horton said the Reclamation Bureau has only 10 days to two weeks to open the canals and put water back onto a half-million acres of unflooded croplands.

"It's a massive mobilization of private and public work crews," he said. "Aside from the personal tragedy there is a vital necessity for getting water back on this year's crops."

He said federal agencies surveying the wreckage left by the floodwaters that swirled from the broken dam found there also is a "gray area" of croplands that—while flooded—can be rehabilitated for harvest this year.

Irrigation water also will be funneled to them, he said. "The mission assignment has given highest priority to getting water to land that can be harvested this year," he said.

"We figure we have 10 days to two weeks and we think we can get it done."

"All the people we can handle"—streamed into the newly-opened disaster relief centers at Rexburg, Idaho Falls and St. Anthony, Phil. Ornes, a spokesman for the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, said. Virtually every kind of help imaginable is available to the victims, he said.

"Long-term housing still was a serious problem but temporary housing problems have been handled by area residents."

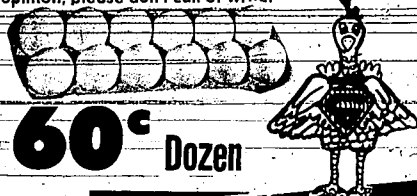

"People have taken friends, relatives and strangers into their homes—they've helped each other out. Irretrievably right now," he said.

Reserve aid urged

WASHINGTON, D. C. (UPI) — Two Idaho Congressmen urged the Secretary of the Army to send an Army reserve battalion into eastern Idaho to aid in disaster relief efforts, instead of sending the men to Yakima for training maneuvers.

In a letter Congressmen Steve Symms and George Hansen told the Secretary of the Army that the disaster area in eastern Idaho is a tailor-made training opportunity for the 321st Engineer Battalion of the Army Reserves.

The battalion consists of five companies stationed in Hayden Lake, Boise, Twin Falls and Ogden, Utah, and are strategically located near the disaster area within a day's drive from the flooded communities.

Army plans have called for sending the battalion to Yakima for training.

Rhubarb plant leaves 'harmful'

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — You can eat rhubarb stew and you can eat rhubarb pie, but don't eat the leaves of the rhubarb plant.

The warning came from St. Vincent's Hospital in Green Bay after a picture appeared in a local newspaper showing several children gathered around four foot stalks of rhubarb. A number of residents telephoned the hospital because it appeared that one of the children in the photo was eating the leaves of the plant.

Robert Heller, a hospital spokesman, said, "We had a number of calls from people who said they saw the picture and asked, 'Isn't it dangerous to eat the leaves of rhubarb plants?'"

"Yes, it is," Heller said. "The leaves of the plant are toxic and can make you seriously ill."

Heller said earlier, "We were concerned that children might imitate the photo, which was transmitted by UPI, and eat rhubarb plant leaves."

He said the leaves contain oxalic acid and "that has a corrosive effect on the gastrointestinal system." Eating rhubarb leaves can cause nausea, abdominal pain, diarrhea and "there have been cases in which it caused death."

Senator OK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., is home from the hospital after doctors found no reason for a stomach upset he complained of earlier in the week.

The doctors are not sure what caused the illness, but it appeared to be "just an upset stomach."

Nelson summoned

PORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Country singer Willie Nelson appeared before a federal grand jury Wednesday investigating alleged drug trafficking in the Southwest.

Nelson declined to say what the jury had asked him.

The grand jury investigation centered around a suspected multimillion-dollar international heroin and cocaine operation reportedly based in Dallas.

The panel began its investigation earlier this year, naming Nelson and 19 other persons in subpoenas issued in April. Besides Nelson, singer Ray Price and Price's son, Cliff, were called to testify.

Christine in jail

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The stepdaughter of actress Deborah Kerr, jailed on drug charges, was transferred Wednesday from a special interrogation cell to the Bogota women's jail.

Christine Viertel Schneiderman was arrested last week at Bogota's Eldorado International airport.

The 24-year-old Southern California teacher was among three persons taken into custody after authorities allegedly found half a pound of cocaine. Authorities would not identify which of the three allegedly had the drug.

Pike surprised

TEVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Rep. Otis Pike, D-N.Y., says he is surprised his office has received only two letters expressing public concern over the Wayne Hays affair.

"Neither (letter) was complimentary of the congressman," Pike said. "I just felt I was doing what I was supposed to do."

Hays, 65, an Ohio congressman, has admitted having a "personal relationship" with a secretary but denied phoning her for sexual purposes.

Connie sues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Singer Connie Francis testified Wednesday in federal court that the business Johnson metal chain is responsible for her recent marital problems because she was sexually attacked while staying in one of the company's lodges.

Miss Francis is seeking $5 million from the chain for alleged negligence in not preventing the attack.

The singer testified she was sexually attacked by a man who forced his way into her hotel room about 3 a.m. on Nov. 8, 1974.

MRS. Dennis Ruffin holds and feeds her baby, Kevin, Tuesday for the first time in the University of Illinois hospital. Kevin was born one month premature after his mother was shot and he was wounded in a robbery attempt on May 27. Kevin still in intensive care unit, was struck by a bullet which passed through his back and chest and lodged in his right arm. (UPI)

Karen transferred to home

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (UPI) — Karen Ann Quinlan today was under care of physicians at the Morris View nursing home, a public facility, for the poor, where the 22-year-old comatose woman will spend her last days.

Miss Quinlan, accompanied by her family's attorneys, was taken in a police escorted ambulance to the nursing home from St. Clare's Hospital in Denville, N.J., Wednesday night during a heavy thunderstorm.

Her parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan, arrived moments before at the nursing home and were met by Rev. Thomas Trapasso, the family's Roman Catholic priest.

They watched as the ambulance backed up to the entrance of the nursing home and attendants quickly lifted a sheet-covered stretcher into the building.

Police and attorneys Paul Armstrong and James Crowley stood at the rear of the ambulance to block the view. There was no evidence Miss Quinlan was connected to a respirator or any other life support system.

The Quinlans and their lawyers refused comment. Karen's transfer to the home was not expected until the weekend.

She suffered massive brain damage April 15, 1975, after taking a combination of tranquilizers and gin. She has remained in an "irreversible" coma since.

The family believes Karen will never return to a cognitive state and last year asked the state Supreme Court for permission to order an end to all medical treatment so she could die "with grace and dignity."

The court, in a March 31 ruling, granted the Quinlans' request provided attending physicians and a medical ethics committee was convinced. Karen would never regain consciousness.

The court said withholding treatment "would merely be returning the woman to a 'natural' state and her resulting death would not constitute homicide."

Karen was moved to the nursing home because doctors at St. Clare's refused to help the Quinlans carry out the court's mandate.

She will be cared for by doctors at the nursing home under a newly adopted guidelines of the Morris County Welfare Board, which preclude the use of extraordinary medical treatment to keep alive patients with little likelihood of recovery.

N.Y. boy top US speller

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tim Kneale, a 13-year-old reading buff from Nedrow, N.Y., today won the 49th National Spelling Bee when he correctly spelled the word "narcology."

Kneale, an 8th grader, defeated 86 other regional spelling champions to win the $1,000 first prize. He took the title on the 21st round of the contest sponsored annually by Scripps-Howard Newspapers.

Kneale, who said he believed there was "no way" he would win the championship, was sponsored by the Syracuse Herald-Journal American. He beat out Rachel Wachtel of Wooster, Ohio, for the title. Rachel was unable to spell the word "yarrborough" on the previous round.

Rachel, also 13 and an 8th grader, briefly broke into tears just before she was eliminated. She was awarded $500 as runner-up.

Tim's winning word, narcology, was described by the pronouncer, Dr. Richard R. Baker, as a bridge-hand with no card higher than a nine.

Kneale told reporters he was an avid reader and credited that with his success.

"He told reporters he had checked out a Latin dictionary from the library in Syracuse to prepare for the contest, but he actually studied very little," Robert Kneale, Tim's father, described himself as an "exceptionally loyal speller."

During the final rounds, both Tim and Rachel misspelled two words — "emimeltopia" and "choreography" — before Tim won by correctly spelling "yarrborough" after Rachel was unable to do so. He then correctly spelled narcology to win the title.

Eighty-seven youngsters, ranging in age from 10 to 14, were entered in the contest. Sixty were eliminated Wednesday. The remaining 27 were quickly pared down this morning to the final two.

Carter appears ballot winner

By LEWIS LORD
United Press International

Jimmy Carter, unknown to most Americans a few months ago, today looks like a first ballot winner of the Democratic presidential nomination, but President Ford still faces a tough battle with Ronald Reagan on the Republican side.

Several Democratic leaders, including Chicago Mayor Richard Daley and Alabama Gov. George Wallace, endorsed Carter Wednesday after a primary session that saw the former Georgia governor win 19 of 32 contests.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey's hopes of winning the nomination in a deadlocked convention faded and the 1968 nominee, saying Carter is "virtually certain to be our party's nominee," disavowed any effort to have himself nominated.

As a result of 28 GOP primaries — 16 won by the President and 12 by Reagan — the two Republicans remained nearly deadlocked in delegate strength.

It might be August before the nation knows whether Ford will be the first president to be denied a nomination since Republican Chester Alan Arthur fell short in 1884.

However, Ford expressed confidence he would have the required 1,130 delegates by the start of the Kansas City convention. He emerged from the primaries with 911 delegates to Reagan's 860.

Sen. Henry Jackson, knocked out after the April 27 Pennsylvania primary, urged fellow Democrats to "get behind Governor Carter, who now has enough votes to win the nomination," and indicated he will formally release his delegates next week.

Wallace and Jackson had 416 delegates and Daley commanded 86. Those plus the 1,122 Carter won in the primaries would push the Georgian's total to 1,624. The nomination requires 1,505.

"The ball game is over," said Daley, who suggested Illinois Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, who ran at the head of the Daley ticket, be chosen as Carter's running mate.

Carter, clad in denim work clothes on his Georgia peanut farm, said the nomination could be denied him only "through some catastrophe."

Big Jim dies at 88

Hays ready to quit position

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Wayne Hays was reported today ready to resign the chairmanship of his remaining House committee, after formally quitting a second, less important, post because of sex-related allegations.

The Ohio Democrat was expected to call his House Administration Committee together early next week and offer to give up the chairmanship of that panel on which Elizabeth Ray was employed. She claimed she was kept there by Hays not to work but to serve only as his mistress. Hays announced last week he would step aside as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. When the panel met Wednesday, he sent it a message that he was resigning altogether and would not seek the chairmanship again.

The 53-member panel, which passes out campaign funds to Democrats running for House seats, accepted his resignation and elected Rep. James Corman, D-Calif., to succeed him.

Ex-FDR aide dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — James A. Farley, who helped engineer Franklin D. Roosevelt's rise to the White House four decades ago and emerged as a party patriarch in later years, died Wednesday night in his Waldorf Towers apartment. He was 88. Farley, known as "Mr. Democrat" and "Gentle Jim," was found dead by a maid. A house physician called to the suite pronounced him dead of cardiac arrest.

Uncommitted delegates winned, dined, flattered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pity the poor uncommitted delegate whose phone won't stop ringing and whose twisted arm is getting sore. Or, envy the lucky uncommitted delegate who is being winned, dined and flattered by candidates' aides.

With a few states still to go in the Republican delegate selection process, there now are 203 uncommitted delegates who may hold in their hands the political fate of President Ford and Ronald Reagan.

A preliminary UPI survey showed today that some are still about their situation, some worried. Some may be like a delegate at the 1972 Democratic convention, who confided to a reporter:

"I'm a McGovern man, but I won't tell anyone for awhile. I haven't had to buy a meal for myself yet and I'm invited to every party in town. I figure I can milk it another day or two."

Actually, however, it is a serious business. The President is making a flying trip to Springfield, Mo., Friday to make a bid for the 19 delegates who remain to be chosen there during the weekend and who also will be pursued by Reagan.

Ford's principle talking point is that he is "electable" and that more Republican office seekers can ride his coattails to victory if he heads the ticket.

But times is being used by GOP candidates already in Missouri: in phone calls to some delegates who — up to now — are thought to be leaning to Reagan.

With the White House as his base, Ford also expects to begin telephoning delegates personally to win their support, and possibly inviting them to come see him in the Oval Office. Some of his cabinet members, such as Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson, already have begun doing so.

According to UPI's tally, Ford has 911 commitments and Reagan 860, a total of 1,771, are needed for admission at the August convention.

Most of New York's big delegation swung to Ford two weeks ago and only 16 remain uncommitted. Several told UPI Wednesday they have not been contacted by either candidate but expect to be, perhaps during the weekend.

GOP state chairman Richard Rosebaum says he had talked to most of them and estimated 10 to 12 — "perhaps more" — would go to Ford eventually.

State Rep. Joseph Sevek from Berwyn, Ill., is one of the state ones.

"I'm used to pressure," he told UPI. "I've gotten a few phone calls from Washington and California... but I'm staying uncommitted."

Mississippi GOP delegation leader Clark Reed says he has received phone calls from both groups but "nobody's been using any real pressure or offering any real carrots or sticks."

In West Virginia, Gov. Arch Moore, who is pledged to Ford, has called 30-year-old South Charleston Mayor Richard Roth about "having breakfast" with him and perhaps flying him to Washington for a personal meeting with Ford.

William Skaggs of St. Louis says there has been "the normal barrage of letters and such."

Uncommitted South Carolina delegate Sherry Shealy Martschink of Charleston said: "I've gotten several calls but I can't say I've really gotten any pressure... I was invited to the White House last week for the King of Spain dinner."

"Probably I was invited because I am an uncommitted delegate, but that's not really pressure, I guess."

Another South Carolinian, J. Drake Edens of Columbia, says he has had a number of calls from both sides, "and they express hope I will consider their candidate, but everything has been on a high plane, no arm-twisting."

Artists protest

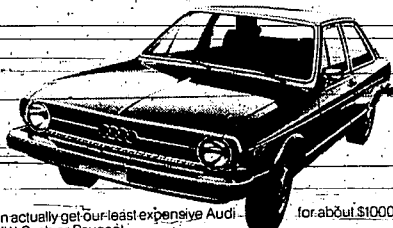

MOSCOW (UPI) — Six Russian-born artists and two women poets declared a week-long hunger strike today to protest what they called "unlawful actions" by police and cultural officials.

Spokesman Yuri Zharkikh said the action stemmed from a police ban on an unofficial outdoor art exhibition at the Peter and Paul Fortress May 30.

Minutes before the display was to open, police arrested some 20 artists, whom they later released, and warned others not to go to the exhibit site.

The artists protested the ban and declared they would try to hold the exhibition again June 12.

'76 Audis for $1000 less than Volvos and BMWs (even Saabs and Peugots, for that matter).

No tricks. No word games. You can actually get our least expensive Audi for about $1000 less than the least expensive Volvo, BMW, Saab or Peugeot.

And not only will you be spending less, but you'll be getting more. More miles per gallon than any of them. 36 on the highway and 24 in the city for our standard shift model, based on the latest EPA estimates. (Mileage can vary, of course, depending on the car's condition, optional equipment, as well as the way you drive.)

You'll also be getting advanced engineering features, like fuel injection, front-wheel drive, rack-and-pinion steering, dual diagonal brakes and torsion crank rear axle. Better hurry, though. When you offer so much car for so little money, they don't stay around so long.

Disaster affects everyday services

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

IDaho FALLS — Those everyday services such as mail, telephones, buses and groceries are severely affected by a disaster such as the Teton Dam incident in eastern Idaho.

Greyhound bus officials in Idaho Falls said the first buses to run since Sunday left the terminal at 6 p.m. Tuesday. There are still no buses into Rexburg, Ashton, St. Anthony or West Yellowstone and the small adjoining towns. Buses are running out of Idaho Falls to Hütte, Mont. Other points to the north and into Blackfoot, Pocatello and other points to the west.

All bus service stopped as of Sunday, however, with flooding in the Pribil and Blackfoot areas and those towns to the north. Officials said they expect early buses to be filled to capacity.

Postal officials from Pocatello, Idaho Falls and other areas were working Tuesday to restore service to as many areas as possible.

Grant Holland, director of support at the Pocatello Post Office, said his postmaster and the Idaho Falls postmaster were in Rexburg Tuesday afternoon preparing to open a new post office there. This will serve the Rexburg and Sugar

City residents. Since there are no people living in Sugar City, Holland said, mail destined for that area will be handled out of Rexburg and residents will have to call for their mail.

He said the Rexburg Post Office was just ready to move into a new building when the flood hit Saturday. The old building was flooded and the rear portion eaved in. The new building suffered only minor damage and is being cleaned and ready to open for service. Holland said people began to pick up mail Wednesday.

A special area will be set up in the new building to handle Sugar City mail, he said. A temporary service for the people of Roberts has been set up in Idaho Falls and mail will be held there for pick up. St. Anthony residents will have to call there for their mail and such areas as Blackfoot, Idaho Falls and other communities will have service as usual.

One exception in those areas will be rural routes which may be closed by flooded roads. These people will also pick up their mail.

Holland said transportation has been the major problem although there was some lost mail in the hardest hit communities.

Telephone officials in Idaho Falls said crews are working "around the clock" in an effort to restore service and some telephones were back in use Tuesday in Rexburg.

Ken Mann, district manager in Twin Falls, said he expects to be sending workers from Twin Falls to assist in Idaho Falls and areas to the north.

He said the Rexburg telephone office had five feet of water in the building but this has been drained and equipment washed. Heat from propane blowers will be used to dry out the equipment. One leg of a microwave unit is functioning with six lines direct to Idaho Falls switchboard. This went into service Monday.

Another leg pay telephones were placed outside the Rexburg telephone building for emergency messages and outgoing calls through Idaho Falls.

Emergency services such as fire, police, physicians and hospitals will have the first regular telephone connections made, Mann said.

Teton has a portable microwave unit being put in place Tuesday or early Wednesday. Roberts, still with three feet of water, has 250 telephones out of service. The west area of Idaho Falls was without service when cables were cut to clear debris under a Snake River bridge on Broadway Street.

Experts in disaster relief and emergency measures from Western Electric and the Bell system in the eastern states are assisting with advice and technical information. Equipment has been loaned and donated from Utah, Arizona, Nebraska and several areas of Idaho. About 20 miles of conductor cable has been sent in from Denver with more to be made available from Phoenix.

A portable PBX unit was set up at Ricks College headquarters for disaster relief in Rexburg. Emergency calls only were being handled through the unit to Pocatello's office.

Charles Hull, Mountain Bell general manager for Idaho, said about 250,000 calls were placed to Idaho Falls Sunday alone. About 15,000 telephones were out of service in the disaster area, including some in west Idaho Falls.

Transportation is the big problem for food suppliers.

Albertson's Grocery chain donated two truckloads of food Tuesday. It was unloaded at the Idaho Falls High School relief headquarters in that community, and is destined for the more severely hampered communities of Rexburg, St. Anthony and Roberts.

Albertson's and Safeway officials in Idaho Falls say there are no stores in Sugar City, two in St. Anthony and one in Rexburg are open with limited supplies. The problem is getting food into the area, they say. Many individuals, organizations and grocery wholesalers have donated supplies to help in the critical areas.

Stores in Idaho Falls say they are doing well above normal business with many persons from the stricken areas having come into Idaho Falls for housing and supplies.

Mars capsule troubled

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists trying to meet the July 4th target for putting a life-socking capsule on Mars were faced today with a troublesome speck-of-dust-in-deep space and a strike threat on Earth.

Trapped and preventing complete closure of a lock valve forced a 15-hour postponement of the final course correction, designed to nudge the Viking 1 spacecraft on a path that would swing it over the chosen landing site, called Chryse, on the plains of Mars' northern hemisphere.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory canceled Wednesday's attempt and planned to try again today.

The Viking 1 is supposed to send its capsule or lander, designed to seek out traces of past or present life on Mars, down to the planet's surface July 4th.

The delay in the course correction should not affect the final outcome of the mission, a JPL spokesman said.

Meanwhile, 200 technicians who help track the laboratory's many spacecrafts threatened to strike today in a wage dispute. Most of the technicians, members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, operate equipment at the Goldstone Tracking Station in the Mojave desert 50 miles north of Barstow, Calif.

A union spokesman, saying picket lines might be established there today.

Tennis tourney held

TWIN FALLS — A tennis tournament was held Saturday and Sunday in Twin Falls to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Each year the society holds a special money-raising project and this year the tennis tournament netted over $1000.

Entry fees of $5 were charged of every couple per event entered. A concession stand, a sale of T-shirts, private contributions and service club donations also added to the fund.

A special event was the celebrity team matching. Four Twin Falls service clubs, Kiwanis, Rotary, Kiwanis of Greater Twin Falls and the Exchange Club, each put up a celebrity team for competition. Bob Siebel and Leon Smith, Rotary, won the celebrity event.

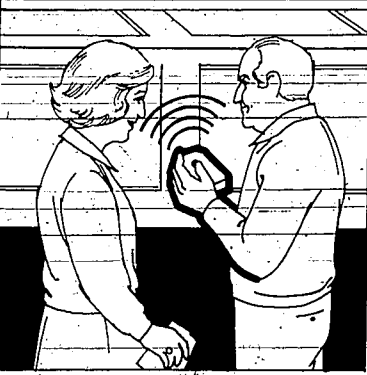

The winners of the other six events include Terry and Dennis Newland, men's doubles — A flight; Mike McKain and Darrell Mullinix, men's doubles — B flight; Jane Milliteler and Bev Henderson, women's doubles — A flight; Maura Seltin and Mary Hoag, women's doubles — B flight; Terry Newland and Carolyn Matsuoka, mixed doubles — A flight; Maurice Harttrutt and Maura Seltin, mixed doubles — B flight.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz Wednesday accused consumer groups of playing politics with a fuss about being excluded from a review of his department's food safety regulations.

Butz made it clear he personally will decide whether the review committee will include groups of consumers.

The committee's second day of open meetings produced a decision on Butz and one consumer representative. Butz slammed his office door in the face of a resident who chased Butz down the hall.

At issue is the makeup of an 11-member committee formed to decide whether rules governing the inspection of meat and poultry and the marketing of milk, fruit and vegetables should be changed.

Consumer content, the Agriculture Department's Advisory Committee on Regulatory Programs - made up of outside experts - is made up of farm and business interests with no one to speak for the consumer.

Dane Armstrong, vice president for consumer affairs of Jewel Food Stores in Chicago, asked Butz Wednesday to add a person. She made the proposal Tuesday. "I don't want that representative to be a politically motivated, publicly seeking organization," Butz replied. "From what I heard you had a political demonstration here yesterday."

Butz refused to representatives of the Consumer Federation of America and other groups carrying protest signs into Tuesday's meeting.

"We don't have the Republican National Committee representatives here and I don't intend to have the Democratic National Committee represented either."

James Graham, agriculture commissioner for the state of North Carolina and a member of the panel, asked Mrs. Armstrong if a member of a "home demonstration club" or the president of a women's club would attend.

Butz interjected: "It would be better than someone who writes me an inflammatory letter and releases it to the press before I get it."

As Butz was leaving, Dr. Michael Jacobson, co-director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, asked him to stay for the debate.

Butz walked briskly from the room. "I don't propose to sit here and let a politically motivated consumer representative on this committee."

Jacobson, in jeans and tennis shoes, chased Butz down the marble hall and Butz finally slammed his office door in Jacobson's face.

In his introductory remarks, Butz said government regulation raises prices: "I don't know why we have to look at every bird that comes down the line. If GM inspected every piston ring the way we inspect chickens a new Chevrolet would cost $20,000."

Club will prepare July float

TWIN-FALLS - Members of Soroptimist International of Twin Falls held its June business meeting Tuesday evening at George K's Restaurant.

President, Shirley Easton presided.

After the group repeated the pledge to the American flag, Beverly Whitehead pledged the Soroptimist pledge.

The president read a letter from the multi-county Farm Bureau outlining a new program to fund a drum and file Corps program at Bruln Stadium on June 26.

It was voted by the club to send money to help victims of the flood in eastern Idaho.

Whitehead presented suggestions for participation in the bicentennial celebration and the group decided to help distribute information at CSI on July 2nd. A float for the parade will be decorated on the afternoon of July 2nd.

After reports were given by all standing committees, Easton was given a vote of confidence for her leadership during the past year.

The president then read her farewell message to the club.

President-elect Teala Percin presented her idea for a money-making project for the coming year and plans were discussed to initiate work on it.

The table price was won by Fern Van Houten and each member received a small bagging of flowers from the outgoing president.

The next meeting will be installation of officers at the stand-up room June 22 and 7 p.m.

Library district vote pondered

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times News Writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commissioners will decide Monday whether a county election will be held on formation of a countywide library district.

In a public hearing Tuesday night in the county judicial building, those supporting the district explained their proposal and urged the county commissioners to call an election. Opponents of the district, objecting on the basis of increased taxes, presented petitions with 613 signatures urging the election not be called.

Earlier, a committee headed by Fred House, presented petitions asking for an election. The proposal, House said, is to form a district with taxing power up to three mills, which would include all areas of the county not presently served by municipal libraries.

"This would mean the cities of Twin Falls, Buhl, Filer and Hansen would be excluded and would not vote in the election. House said it would mean other areas would have an opportunity to vote for library service. Present plans, he said, call for a one mill levy which would raise about $40,000 to $50,000 annually for the district. He said the law permits up to a three mill levy for library districts but the committee does not believe this amount would be needed.

He said there would be no major outlay at this time for buildings, books or professional personnel as the proposal is to serve the rural areas from existing libraries. He said book depositories where rural area residents could pick up and return books from central libraries, and possibly a book mobile service, could handle rural areas. One of the most costly phases of the proposed service would be a mail service to the most remote rural areas.

House said libraries could prepare catalogues of available books which would be mailed rural areas. Residents would then order books they desired and they would be sent by mail.

Book depositories could be established in schools or other public buildings for areas such as Murrain, Castleford and Hollister, House said.

He said the Twin Falls city library now charges $17 for library services outside of the city of Twin Falls. The library district proponents propose walk-in rights for all county residents in all libraries of the county, he said.

A land owner in the county with a $50,000 cash value piece of real property would pay about $8.50 per year for the service or if he had a $100,000 farm, would be paying about what the city residents now pay for library service.

William D. Wiseman, spokesman for the district-opponents, said Tuesday night the law gives a library district the right to levy three mills and judging on other taxing units it would not take long to reach this maximum if a library district is created. He and Max Galley, Kimberly, said the present situation affords those who wish library service an opportunity to subscribe to it and pay for it without requiring all residents of the county to share the costs.

Wiseman said the people who are urging the county-wide district are residents of the city of Twin Falls and therefore cannot even vote in the election if it is called. They would be paying for library service in the city which is already available to them through city taxes and should not be concerned with rural services.

The opponents also pointed out county residents will be paying for an additional cost in 1977 of American Falls Dam, face a possible increase in school taxes if a bond issue is needed to replace O'Leary Junior High School, and may also face a hospital bill increase.

He and the opponents said, are increasing under the revaluation and increased assessment-ratio program and property owners are now at a breaking point.

State Librarian Helen Miller, Boise, and Arlan Call, Twin Falls city librarian also attended the meeting to discuss library district proposals.

Flood area travel mixed

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Maj. Gen. James Brooks, Idaho Adjutant General, asked sightseers not to travel into the flood areas of eastern Idaho.

Brooks said only residents of the impacted area and those on official business were being allowed through State Police and National Guard checkpoints.

In addition to the congestion, security and road problems in the area, officials said there still were no accommodations or dining facilities for outside persons in the Rexburg area and public telephone service has not been restored.

Brooks also discouraged persons who wish to do volunteer labor to travel into the area. He said those with specialized skills will be called for as needed.

Firms file liens

SUN VALLEY — The architectural and engineering firms which completed preliminary work on the scrapped Sun Valley Mall have filed liens against the property for over $500,000.

A lien is a claim against property which makes that property security for the performance of an act.

Burrledge Associates Inc., has filed the lien against Dwight-Fenton and Company for $61,158 for engineering services from July 1975 to April, 1976.

Burrledge Associates claim they performed landscape, architect and engineering services in preparation of plans and cost estimates for a massive project that was killed two months ago.

Skidmore, Owings and Merrill have filed a $25,975 lien against Dwight-Fenton for architectural and engineering services from May, 1975 to May of this year. The lien includes all contracts with the company, plus attorney fees and interest.

The firm of Dwight-Fenton Company—developers of Wildflower Condominium here, was the reputed owner of a leasehold interest in the core of the Sun Valley resort.

The development company had presented plans for a huge complex, which when completed, would encompass all of the present mall.

Riders injured

HEYBURN — A collision between a car and a motorcycle Tuesday afternoon left both riders in critical condition today.

A 9-year-old, Tony Phillips, Heyburn, is in the intensive care unit at St. Anthony's Hospital in Pocatello.

He was transferred there unconscious after suffering severe head injuries and fractures when his 40-speed motorcycle was hit by a motor cycle about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday just east of Heyburn.

Motorcycle rider Clifford Leo Bailey, 24, Heyburn, is in the intensive care unit at St. Anthony's Memorial Hospital. He suffered chest and internal injuries.

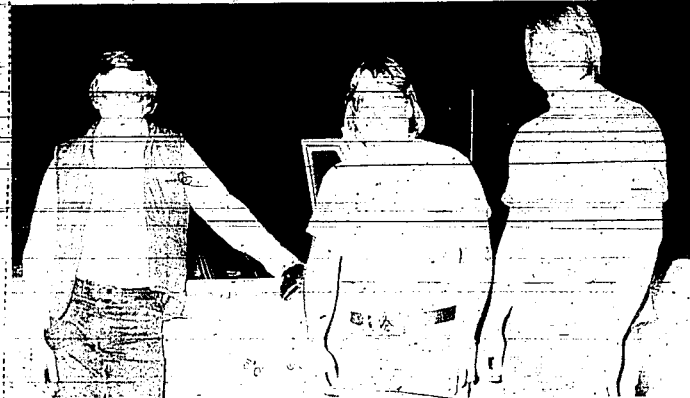

Minidoka County sheriff's deputies said Phillips rode his bicycle past a stop sign at the intersection of 300 West and 500 South roads and into the path of Bailey's motorcycle.

Boondockers elect

TWIN FALLS — Mike Hartruff was elected president of the Boondockers Club Tuesday evening at a meeting at his home.

Ron Mothershead was elected vice president. Jo Hartruff, secretary; Gary Aufderheide, treasurer; Margie Miracle, historian; and Bob Ulrich, membership chairman and secretary.

Dean Fischer, founder of the group and past president, conducted the business meeting and thanked the group for their cooperation the past two years. Members voted not to have a June outing and urged members to attend the motorcycle races at Jackpot in lieu of a meeting as one member is participating in them.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ulrich will host the July 13 meeting and the group will drive to Silver City during July.

Blaine begins disaster drives

HAILEY — Drives have started throughout Blaine County to help the flood victims in southeast Idaho after the Teton Dam disaster.

Trucks have been loaded at the Merc in Hailey, and the two fire stations in Bellevue and Kelchum to accept clothing, foodstuffs and household goods.

No more clothing is needed, but food and money are welcomed.

A trust account has been opened at the First Security Bank in Hailey.

Prairie dog kill probed

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (UPI) — A 70-acre area of the Colorado National Monument and adjoining Mesa County has been closed to the public until officials can determine what caused a massive kill of prairie dogs.

Bob Benton, superintendent of the monument, said the closure was ordered until officials can determine whether death was caused by the bubonic plague. The plague is carried by fleas on the prairie dogs and the disease can be transmitted to humans.

Benton said the closed area includes the Devil's Kitchen picnic area. Most of the 19,000-acre monument remains open.

Benton said there has been a population boom among prairie dogs during the past three years, but only a few of the 250,000 colony remains.

He said plague is present among prairie dogs in the Rocky Mountain area at all times, but epidemics are not common.

Donation site set

SHIOHONE — Assistant Civil Defense director for Lincoln County, Oregon, Fred Little will receive donations for flood victims at his office at the Lincoln County Courthouse.

Johnson said they recommend cash, non-perishable foodstuffs and items to be used for clean-up purposes.

375 GOP delegates remain uncommitted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the primary season over, the tight battle between President Ford and Ronald Reagan for the Republican presidential nomination focuses on the 375 GOP delegates yet to be picked in state conventions. Because of uncommitted delegates, it appears unlikely that either GOP candidate will finish the delegate selection process in mid-July with the 1,130 needed to win the nomination. While it's probably academic on the Democratic side, there are 135 delegates yet to be picked, and like everything else this election season, it looks good for Jimmy Carter. Ford's best shots in upcoming state conventions lie in Connecticut, Minnesota, Missouri, Delaware and Iowa. In addition he hopes to pick up uncommitted delegates in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Reagan, hoping to continue his successful Sunbelt strategy, is favored at state conventions in Colorado, Montana, New Mexico and Washington, and should win 30 uncommitted delegates in Mississippi.

Ford now has 911 delegates and Reagan 866, with 1,130 needed to nominate. Jimmy Carter, with 1,134, was closing in on the magic figure of 1,267.

Carter's should have little trouble getting most if not all of 12 delegates in Delaware this weekend and 17 in Missouri. June 19 he should pick up most of the remaining 32 Texas delegates.

In the last two weeks of June, Utah will pick 18, Colorado 35 and North Dakota 13. There are a handful of unselected Democratic delegates in other states.

The weekend of June 18-19 will be like a big primary day for the two GOP contenders. There are 51 delegates at stake. Ford is favored to get most of the 38 in Washington. That leaves Iowa's 33 delegates as the big weekend battleground.

Missouri picks another 19 delegates this weekend. To date Ford has won 15, Reagan 12 and 3 are uncommitted making this another tossup state.

The last weekend in June is another big one. Montana with 29 delegates and New Mexico with 21 are deep in Reagan territory. Minnesota picks its final 10 delegates, and there Ford is favored.

Colorado picks the last 28 of its 31 member delegation. July 9, 10, Reagan is favored, but this is one Sunbelt state where Ford could make a dent. North Dakota picks its 18 delegates the same weekend and is rated a tossup.

The caucus season ends July 16-17 with 55 GOP delegates up for grabs. Connecticut's 35 are safe for Ford and Utah's 20 seem safe for Reagan.

That put the burden on the undecided delegates. The biggest block — 30 in Mississippi — is viewed as pro-Reagan. Ford should get most, but not all, of the 13 in Illinois, 17 in New York and 10 in Pennsylvania. There are a handful in a few other states.

That leaves the second biggest prize — 28 in West Virginia. They are leaning toward Ford but will want to go with the winner when they decide who that's likely to be.

Some parking lost in county addition

TWIN FALLS — Work began Monday morning by Idaho Construction Co. crews on the extension of the Twin Falls County Judicial Building.

The county has called for extension of the judicial building to the west to provide additional space for magistrate court and the district court clerk's offices. Increased loads in court work since the judicial building was erected have made it necessary to transfer traffic matters to the old courthouse.

When the extension is complete, all of magistrate court will be back under one roof. The contract in the amount of $137,300 will also cover remodeling of several offices in the old courthouse building and installation of new heating and air conditioning systems in the old building.

The one-story judicial building will be extended 4,300 square feet to the west, eliminating part of the courthouse parking lot. Initial work Monday consisted of removing asphalt in the parking lot and moving in supplies and equipment for the start of the new addition.

Disaster victims return to homes

BLACKFOOT, Idaho (UPI) — Ed Barrus, Disaster Services director for Bingham County, said "life is returning to normal" in the county today as people began to fix the flood-wrecked homes from the Teton Dam break. Barrus said the break in the dike north of the golf course where water poured in from the Snake River and flooded the Riverside Plaza area at Blackfoot, had been plugged through the work of hundreds of volunteers.

"We can now start pumping water out of that area back into the river and a lot is also going through the cut in the Mackay railroad spurline, draining water back into the river channel," he said.

Barrus also said further flooding at the sewage treatment plant dike has been averted and water flooding in from the storm sewers is being pumped out.

He said chlorinators have been put on three city wells but added the health department was urging citizens to treat water as if contaminated until future notice. Those with private wells should take extra precautions, he added.

Interstate Highway 15 north of Blackfoot was still closed. Traffic was being routed from the south interchange through Blackfoot on highway 26. Highway 191 north of the city was open with rerouting through the Wolverine area to bypass Firih.

In Firih, Barrus said the situation was getting back to normal with cleanup work underway.

DENVER (UPI) — The Colorado Supreme Court Wednesday refused to lift a ban barring the press and public from a preliminary hearing for actress-singer Claudine Longet in the love nest slaying of former pro ski star Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

The hearing for the French-born entertainer, charged with negligent manslaughter, was set for Tuesday in Colorado ski resort of Aspen.

District Court Judge William Lohr issued the gag order last week after attorneys for Miss Longet, former wife of singer Andy Williams, said the excessive pretrial publicity would damage her chance for a fair trial.

Fourteen news organizations filed suit with the state Supreme Court Monday to have the ban lifted. The high court voted 4-2 against stepping into the case with Chief Justice Edward Pringle III Sabich.

Miss Longet, 35, has been charged with slaying Sabich, 31, her lover-of-two-years Sabich was fatally shot in the Aspen, Colo., luxury home he had built for Miss Longet and three children by her marriage to Williams.

In obtaining the gag order, attorneys for the former Las Vegas dancer stowed Lohr a film sequence from a national television comedy program depicting the petite Miss Longet accidentally shooting several others.

The lawyers, headed by Los Angeles attorney Charles Weedman, also said the amount of press coverage attracted by the case would prejudice Miss Longet's ability to obtain a fair trial. More than 60 reporters and photographers gathered in Aspen April 6 for her arraignment.

Lohr said he feared media coverage of the preliminary hearing risked the "contamination of jurors" in any location in the state where the trial could be held.

John Kane, the attorney representing the news agencies, said Lohr's gag order violated the constitutional rights of the news media and the public's right to know. In addition, he said an open hearing was necessary to prove "the criminal justice system shows no favoritism to the wealthy or the famous."

The coastal storm system is finally on the move, and a portion of it will be moving across Magic Valley late today and early tonight, accompanied by scattered showers and thunderstorms and gusty winds. Rainfall is again expected to be spotty and only a few fields of hay will get wet. Clearing and cooling conditions on Friday will be followed by a pleasant weekend. No additional shower activity is in sight. High temperatures will be in the 70s the night-time lows in the 40s through the weekend. Irrigation requirements will be one-quarter to one-half an inch per day. Haying conditions will be good after tonight.

One Jerome race seen for Aug. 3

JEROME — Of the five county offices up for election in the August 3 primary, in Jerome County, only one is being contested.
All candidates seeking election are running on the Republican ticket with an Democratic candidates have filed. There are no candidates running on the American Party ticket either. Write-in votes will be allowed for both tickets.
Allford Jones, county commission chairman from the first district, will be opposed in the primary election by Dan Shur. Shur, 35, will be seeking the two year county commission position. He is owner of the Canyonside Realty and a farmer.
According to Shur, he is seeking the position because he doesn't think the job is necessary for retired people. Claude Bernard, who has served as commissioner for the third district for three terms will not be seeking re-election.
Seeking Bernard's position is running unopposed, except for write in candidates will be Henry Schulte, an Eden farmer.

County prosecuting attorney Eugene Frederickson and Jerome county sheriff Elza Hall, will both be seeking re-election and are unopposed. A candidate has filed for the position of county coroner presently held by Dr. Tärn Neher. Dr. Neher has been elected to the position in the past by write-in votes only.
In legislative district 23 a two-way race has developed in one of the representative positions, and a senator position. Incumbent John Bergdale, Gooding, will be opposed by Ron Hall, Gooding. Incumbent Gordon Hofffield will be seeking re-election unopposed.
In the senate race, two candidates have filed for the position being vacated by James Yost who has moved. Seeking the position will be Ken Brandt, a retired Wendell businessman and Louis Koopman, Hagerman.

Symms asleep?

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho (UPI) — First District Idaho Congressional candidate Ken Pursley told an AFL-CIO convention Tuesday in Coeur d'Alene incumbent Steve Symms was "asleep" during his four years in Washington at a taxpayers' expense.
Pursley said Symms is a "political Snow White, who, like the fairytale character, took a bite out of an apple and then went to sleep."

Marathon slated for Mississippi

KEOKUK, Iowa (UPI) — The song "Proud Mary," which depicts life along a river, has taken on a new meaning for Marine Capt. Edna Jones in his marathon swim of the Mississippi River from St. Paul, Minn., to St. Louis, Mo.
"One line of the song goes like this: 'You've got to money, people on the river are happy to give.'"
Jones, 28, and swimming companion Wayne Thompson, 33, of Portland, Ore., left St. Paul May 24 and had expected to sleep under the stars along the shore at night.
"But residents along the route have opened their homes to the swimmers and civic organizations have arranged for motel rooms."
"The people along the way have been fantastic," Jones said as they rested south of Keokuk, some 510 miles downstream from St. Paul. "It's just like in the song. The people on the river are more than happy to help us."

Jones, a physical fitness instructor at Quantico, Va., said he and Thompson are on schedule for their planned June 14 arrival in St. Louis. When they passed Keokuk, Jones realized a "major ambition."
"One of my goals in life was to swim the length of Iowa and I finally made it," said Jones, a native of Le Mars, Iowa, who is making the swim to promote physical fitness.
"I also passed the 500-mile mark, which is the longest I've covered 500 miles last summer when I swam from Lewiston, Idaho, to the Pacific Ocean on the Snake and Columbia rivers."

your health

BY GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
A year and a half ago I weighed 250 pounds. I am a female, 25, and 5-foot-2. I now weigh 135 pounds. The problem is I've been on amphetamines for the entire time and still am.

This is the second time I've lost weight, both times on amphetamines. The doctor wants to take me off them and he has suggested hypnosis. I'm so tired of going up and down. Do you recommend hypnosis? — C.G.

Well, anything is better than those extended amphetamine (pep pills) trips you've been going on.

I don't intend to get into any scolding. You had a severe weight problem, no doubt of it, and the doctor probably thought it was serious enough to try amphetamines with you.

It worked. That's good. But it didn't last. That's bad.

The doctor, realizing this, has wisely decided to try other methods. This amphetamine thing could keep you on a seesaw the rest of your life.

I have no specific recommendation regarding hypnosis. I have heard reports of hypnosis in such matters as cigarette smoking and in overeating. It is probably worth a try.

Obviously, you have relied on amphetamines and have not learned how to eat — or rather how not to eat. With willpower you should be able to watch your calorie intake without pills or hypnosis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
Our four-year-old son has been wetting his bed. What we worry about is the strong ammonia smell of his urine in the mornings after he has wet.

Is there some condition that could cause it to smell in this way? Sometimes he complains that his penis hurts. — Mrs. R.

Normally there is very little ammonia in urine. It would increase and cause a strong odor if it were too concentrated. The usual cause is an infection in the urinary tract.

Pep pills poor plan

Does his urine smell this way the rest of the day? I ask this because often urine can smell strong after it has been around a while. Bacteria on the skin or pajamas and sheets can actually produce ammonia by acting on the urine. This could account for the strong odor in the morning.

This ammonia could irritate his genitals and account for his complaints. If so the doctor can recommend a soothing powder. It is important to keep the area as fresh and free of irritation as possible.

As to the bedwetting itself — it is not a serious problem in youngsters his age. However, the possibility of a structural defect in the penis or an allergy causing it should be investigated. You seem to be taking a good, non-panicky approach to matters. You might be interested in reading my booklet on bedwetting. For a copy, send 25 cents to me in care of this newspaper. Enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson:
I am writing about my husband. Everytime we have sex there is blood in his sperm. We have watched this for about two weeks now and it drains in his undershorts at night after we have sex.

Please answer soon, as I'm a worrier. He won't go to a doctor. What could cause this? — A.F.E.

The obvious thing to look for is an infection or an inflammation in the urinary tract, including his prostate gland.

You could be the source yourself. He should wash himself after intercourse and put on fresh shorts. If the blood still appears, then he should suspect himself as the source.

If you are the source you could likewise suspect an infection in your vaginal tract. No matter who the source the blood should be investigated. Although it can appear in either partner without signaling any serious problem, it should nevertheless be looked into.

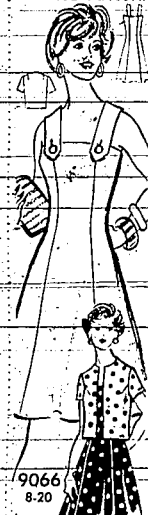

You can lose weight if you really want to. Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

DEAR ABBY: My very good friend and neighbor helped my husband care for our two small children last year while I was hospitalized for two weeks. I thought I would never be able to repay her for her kindness, until three weeks ago when my husband broke down and confessed that during that time, they had had an affair. He said it was all over now and he is terribly ashamed, and he begged my forgiveness. (Yes, I forgive him.)

"This friend" doesn't know that my husband has told me, and now I cannot stand the sight of this two-faced woman. What should I do when she appears at my door with her sweet smile and a chocolate pie, my husband's favorite? We own our home, and I don't want to move.

HURTING

Hubby confesses

DEAR HURTING: I presume that your husband knows this woman well enough to speak to her, so ask him to tell her that he has made a full confession. If you can't find it in your heart to forgive her, as you did him, your actions will reveal it and she'll know whether or not to present her sweet-face-and-chocolate-pie-at-your-door again.

DEAR ABBY: A girl I work with is uniform-crazy. When she sees a man in a uniform she just flips. She has lost her head over policemen, airline pilots, ushers, servicemen and even bellhops. I saw her tip a doorman a dollar once for opening a door for her just because she liked his looks. She's not a kid. She's a 28-year-old woman and should know better. How can I talk her out of it?

SANDY

DEAR SANDY: Talking "won't do it." She has a fixation—brass buttons. Introduce her to a Salvation Army man. Maybe he can save her soul.

DEAR ABBY: In the debate over people who wear dark glasses, GINCY READER wrote: "Fish who live in caves and donkeys who work in mines eventually become blind." As far as mine animals are concerned, this is an old wives' tale. We were taught in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., public schools that the mules used in the deep-anthracite mines became blind.

In the autumn of 1920, the Susquehanna coal subsidiary of the Shenandoah Railroad shut down operations temporarily for maintenance work in the mines and brought their 800 mules to the surface. As a young cub reporter on the Wilkes-Barre Record, I was assigned to do a feature story about it.

In my story I scolded the blind-mule tale when I disclosed that not one of the 800 mules was blind, although many were foaled underground and lived their entire lives there!

One personal-experience fact demolished a textbook fabrication.

ALEX H. WASHBURN, President and Editor, Hope (Arkansas) Star

DEAR ABBY: You may have "settled" the blind-mule tale in Wilkes-Barre over half a century ago, but I bought the blind donkey argument on the theory that, anatomically speaking, if you don't use it, you lose it.

JEROME—Kathy Lewis and Larry Stumpf were married May 27 at the Nazarene Church with Fred Hills officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lewis, Jerome.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stumpf, Twin Falls.

The bride wore a Spanish-style gown fashioned of white chantilly lace over white satin. Scallops of lace framed the square neckline.

The full-length sleeves ended in a point at the wrist. The waistline was accented with a satin bow, while the skirt featured four tiers of lace.

The veil, fashioned by the bride's aunt, was three-quarter length made from tulle edged with matrimony tulle.

Fanny Crawford was maid of honor. Bridal attendants were Sandy and Judy Lewis, Jerome.

Stephanie Gano was flower girl and Jeff Harris was ringbearer.

Best man was Rick Schormeyer, Murtaugh. John Lewis, Jerome, and Shayne Jackson, Twin Falls, were ushers.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony. Ren Gardner and Velma Maddox were reception hostesses.

The bride's table was covered with a blue, satin tablecloth underneath a lace crocheted tablecloth made by the late Edith Stumpf, the bridegroom's grandmother.

The cake, made by Diane Day, cousin of the bride, was centered on the table with candles on each side.

Jo Hartholmew and Marilyn Gano were in charge of the gift table. Diane Day and Ellen Jackson served the cake. Punch was served by Betty Huse and Opal Brigham.

After a wedding trip to Stanley Basin and the Yankee Park-Salmon River area, the couple will reside in Halley where the bridegroom is employed by Farm Bureau Insurance.

Officers installed

TWIN FALLS—The DAV Auxiliary met Monday at the DAV Hall for installation of new officers.

Mrs. Mae Gardoski conducted the business meeting and Mrs. Nellie Horvath installed the new officers.

MID seeks special vote

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

SUPPORT — The Mindoka Irrigation District (MID) continues to object to repayment contracts for the Ammerican Falls replacement dam.

The MID board has called a special election July 22 for a new election on its own unsigned repayment contract and spokesman for irrigators say the Mindoka water users still aren't happy with the terms for replacing the dam.

MID waterusers rejected the contract in a Jan. 12 election. Although a majority voted in favor of the project, the count was less than the two-thirds required to approve a bonding proposition.

County Councilman Larry Duffin has filed an objection to the replacement contracts for the new $13 million dam.

Duffin claims MID's water rights are jeopardized by the new dam.

A confirmation hearing is scheduled at 3:30 p.m. Friday in district court at Twin Falls. The contracts of irrigators who have agreed to help pay construction costs for the dam were placed before the court by American Falls Reservoir District No. 1, which is contracting agent in the dam construction project.

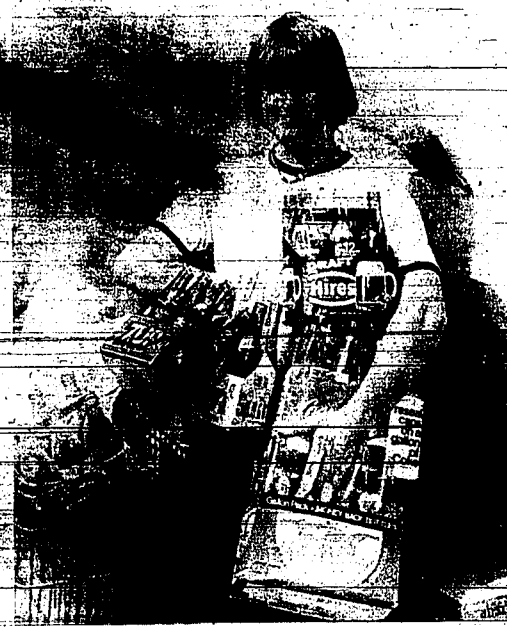

The MID board Tuesday voted to set the new election on whether Mindoka irrigators will authorize a contract to pay the district's share of construction of the new dam.

MID holds spacheholder rights to 83,563 acre feet of water at American Falls.

Two propositions will be on the ballot. One would authorize signing the contract. The other would authorize MID to incur debt in paying the district's share immediately, rather than over a 40-year period.

The contract for construction of the new dam has already been signed and both the general contractor and the engineers on the project have established offices at American Falls. Work has already begun.

The board will hold meetings to explain the propositions to waterusers.

Deposits double

More pop bottles returned since deposit costs hiked

By BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The time has come to check under the sink, to clean out the basement and to open up those storage closets in the garage.

"Instead of a nickel, you can get a dime when you return a bottle," says Egon Kroll, manager of the Twin Falls Coca Cola Bottling Co. says bottles that used to be returned to his plant six times before they were broken or lost, are being returned to the plant an average of 12 times.

He estimates that Coca Cola, Pepsi and Seven-Up bottling companies in Twin Falls handle roughly 80,000 bottles a month. The bottles cost from 15 to 25 cents each to make.

"People go out and look for them now," says Doug Cobby, manager of Albertson's Food Center in Twin Falls.

"The money is a little bit more incentive. Now a person can go out and find 10 bottles, and he's already got a buck."

Little children seem to be bringing a lot more bottles than they used to, according to store owners.

Cobby says, "Persons don't go out and shoot them with a .22 like they used to."

BOTTLE Starter Doug Pfeiffer, 16, a boxboy at Albertson's Food Center, holds up just a few of the bottles that have been returned to the store recently. Deposits on 8, 12 and 16-ounce bottles recently increased from a nickel to a dime.

Reservoir down

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Reservoir is down to 191,000 acre feet of water, compared to 191,500 acre feet a year ago.

Water users started on "storage" Sunday June 6. The reservoir has been dropping ever since. "We are not sure if it will refill with warmer weather from what patchy snow there is left."

"The dry weather has created a high demand for all the water our capacities will allow."

"The situation on American Falls is only a guess. It should be two thirds full. 1,165,000 acre feet of water. Flood water is entering the reservoir."

"So far there has been no deviation from the regular flow at Milner Dam."

HAW officials challenge move

By BART QUENNELL
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Health and Welfare Department officials in Blaine County met today with the region five head of mental health services to challenge a recommendation that the county's only clinical psychologist be moved to Twin Falls.

An audit of the Health and Welfare caseload in Blaine County led to the decision to move psychologist Frank Andrews from the Hailey office to the Twin Falls HAW office.

Dennis Murray, mental health director for region five, traveled to Blaine County today to meet with psychologist Andrews and Sam Giles, a social work specialist who says transferring the psychologist's job to Twin Falls would be a mistake.

The move was funded by a cut in the child development-federal financing this year. Region Five HAW director, Dennis McDermott, told an angry and bewildered audience Tuesday that child development would have to function on $56,214 for fiscal 1976-77 compared to last year's budget of $731,000.

McDermott said all federal child development funds have been dropped, causing the state legislature to increase its share of the program. The state's share was still over $200,000 short of the amount needed, McDermott said, causing cutbacks.

McDermott says the child development center in Twin Falls is a psychology generally for testing purposes, and the desk audit indicated the position could come from the Blaine Mental Health Division.

Mental Health director, Murray, justifies the move by comparing case loads in Twin Falls to Hailey.

He notes two staff members in Hailey are carrying about 36 active cases between them, while there is a ratio of 62.5 cases per therapist in Twin Falls.

But both Andrews and Giles contend the figures did not reflect the actual work done on the job. Murray did not contact either Andrews or Giles before compiling the audit, according to the two.

McDermott said he understood both men were contacted. He conceded the figures prepared by Murray were in dispute.

"If the figures are way out of line, we have to effect a change," McDermott said.

Andrews said after the meeting, the audit did not mention hospital consultation or emergency calls and said nothing about the community service the agency is engaged in.

In addition, the memorandum from Murray did not mention when the audit was taken.

"It could have been taken during stack for all we know," Andrews said.

Giles told McDermott here Tuesday he was amazed at the misrepresentation of the case load prepared by Murray.

"It's amazing to me Dennis Murray would do this without Frank's contribution," Giles said.

Giles said that services have been started in Carey and Fairfield after several tries.

"I know the people in Carey won't talk to the state if we drop services ago," he said.

Magistrate Judge Dan Alban told McDermott, "I consider Frank as the most valuable community resource the court has to turn to."

"I don't think we can get adequate help from Twin Falls," Alban said. "I am really disturbed. It seems we are being punished for having a successful program. I implore the powers that be to reconsider this decision."

Mac Reynolds, director of youth services for the Blaine County Sheriff's Office said Murray's report doesn't address itself to the crisis in the detention program or the immediate consultation needed in severe cases.

He said the pre-trial diversion program was successful here, "because of the immediate psychological testing Mr. Andrews does."

Demo chief won't seek re-election

KETCHUM — James B. Donart, Ketchum, will not seek re-election as Idaho's national Democratic committeeman.

Elected in 1972 as one of Idaho's two national committee representatives for the Democratic Party, Donart announced Wednesday the time had come to "get some new blood into the Democratic Party."

"Every organization if it is to continue to be effective needs frequent infusions of new blood," the Ketchum attorney said.

Carolyn Sealander, Boise, previously announced she will again seek election as a national Democratic committee representative.

Donart will attend the national Democratic Convention in New York City to July as Idaho's national committee representative.

A new national committeeman to replace Donart will be elected during the Idaho state Democratic Convention June 16-19 in Twin Falls.

Steelhead run ends

ELLIS — The steelhead run into the Pahsimero River apparently has ended for this season with only 585 fish returning to spawn.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which operates the Pahsimero hatchery for Idaho Power Co., has taken about 1.8 million steelhead eggs this season which is about a half million short of the number needed to produce 1.6 million smolts for release in the river.

The difference will be made up a half million eggs from the Snake River steelhead run.

Sierra NM license expires

TWIN FALLS — New Mexico Supt. of Insurance Ralph Apodaca has not yet renewed Sierra Life Insurance Company's license to sell new policies in the state, according to the New Mexico deputy superintendent of insurance.

Sierra's license expired March 1 and has not been renewed since. Deputy Superintendent Vincente Jasso told the Times-News Wednesday.

Apodaca, at a New Orleans meeting of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, could not be reached for comment.

"The company cannot write business because it does not have a license. March 1 is the renewal date of the license. The commissioner has still May 15 to renew the license or to cancel it," Jasso said. He added, however, that there is no definite deadline for deciding to renew a license of an insurance company under New Mexico law.

"I don't know the reason for withholding the license or not renewing," Jasso said.

Apodaca said on May 18 that he had not renewed Sierra's license to write new business in the state. He said at that time that he had until the end of the month to clear up the renewal of licenses.

The insurance superintendent would not predict what he would do regarding Sierra's license at that time. "We cannot tell in the future which is going to happen. The company has had problems. I don't know when one of those problems will create a new challenge," he said then.

Businesses feel over-regulated

Bill Kyle, owner of McDonald's Hamburgers in Twin Falls, says OSHA regulations — are "doggone tough." The same rules apply to me as to a factory with 1,000 employees.

"In many cases they've got a rule that has to cover all situations. I really don't think they are always applicable" to small businesses.

OSHA has laid down strict guidelines for the safety and health of employees and has authority to conduct unannounced inspections of firms and impose fines for violations on the spot.

Efforts are underway to limit OSHA action to the first violation to a warning and requirement that violations be corrected until a specific date, until that change is made.

Inspection to make sure the complex set of rules have been satisfied.

OSHA has never checked Kyle's business. "Hopefully, when they do visit everything will be on the up and up," he said.

But he admits that a health inspector probably would find something wrong at his place.

"I would depend on the inspector that comes in here," Kyle said. "If he's a guy or a girl or a woman, it could be me, my husband or my kids."

Most small businesses agree that employees must be protected and that some paperwork may be necessary. But they also want some flexibility in the system. One hard and fast rule can't be applied across the board, they charge.

They also point to the growing number of federal regulatory agencies and wonder how much it's going to cost them in time and money.

A dozen U.S. watchdog agencies, plus parallel state bureaucracies, have been added in the past few years.

"They just make life miserable for us," James John Basabe.

regulations are so technical that the average person just can't understand them.

"We have gone through our entire building and tried to put it in what we feel is a passable condition, but we don't know," Davis said. "If a fellow wants to come in and find something wrong, he sure can find you."

Davis, and his office manager, Garth Galloway, also are aggravated by the number of federal and state forms that must be filled out and filed.

One of the information is "none of their business," Davis charges, but compliance is insured by the threat of stiff fines or imprisonment.

Galloway has completed a quarterly report demanded by the Federal Trade Commission. He must list the company's financial status, sales figures and other data.

Galloway assumes the information is fed into a computer and becomes part of a statistical report, but he really doesn't know.

When an employee is injured, Galloway must file four reports — one with OSHA, one with the Labor Department, one with the Idaho Department of Insurance and one with the insurance company.

OSHA also requires the firm to keep all the reports on file for five years.

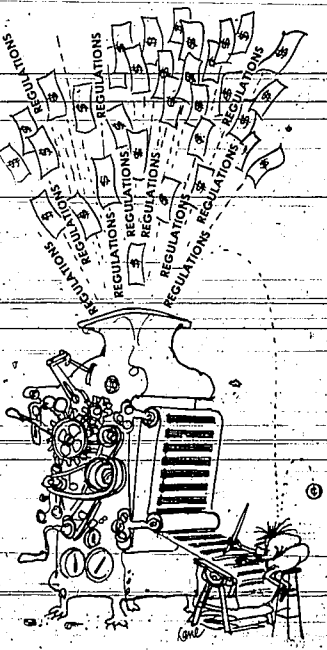

"It's hard to remember all of the forms that must be completed, but we are spending a lot of time on them," Galloway says. "If we get too far behind, we spend some time on the side doing them."

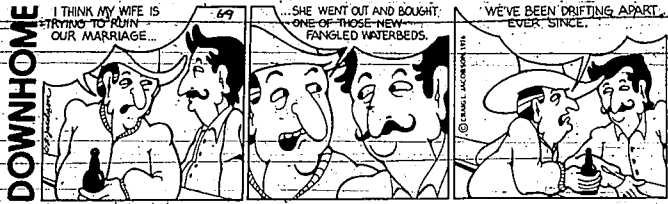

Most small businessmen agree that employees must be protected and that some paperwork may be necessary. But they also want some flexibility in the system. One hard and fast rule can't be applied across the board, they charge.

They also point to the growing number of federal regulatory agencies and wonder how much it's going to cost them in time and money.

All canals from Teton to AF damaged

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI)—While state and private work crews began ground surveys on what must be done to restore the canals, authorities continued their search for those still missing from the flood. As more and more persons showed up and officials revised their reports on those still missing downward to between 40 and 60.

Seven persons died in the flood, officials said, although a dispute arose over body counts and a casualty coordinator from Idaho Falls filed a man-to-man double check. Officials were optimistic they would find it but there were indications two bodies may have been counted twice, he said.

The number of injured continued to grow — many of the persons hurt themselves while cleaning up flood-damaged property to 75, only five were hospitalized and only one, Darryl Griggs, Teton, was considered serious. Federal and state agencies worked feverishly to set up "one spot" disaster relief centers for survivors of the flood, and expected to have them all in operation by noon Wednesday.

From Washington, D.C., Rep. George Hansen said two House committees have begun an "investigation" into the ruptured dam and the House Public Works and Transportation Committee wants to hold on-site inspection of the flood area.

He said John A. Knebel, undersecretary of agriculture, is scheduled to arrive in the Idaho Falls area Wednesday morning for inspections. "The wheels are in motion to establish responsibility and to make restitutions," he said. "I will leave no stone unturned to see that proper reimbursements are made to all the people who have suffered from this enormous tragedy."

Both state and private ground crews surveyed the canals to determine what could be saved from the siltation and debris from the flood. "If we can't restore the major canals in the flooded area within the next 10 days to two weeks, we could lose 400,000 to 500,000 acres," Keith Haggins, director of the State Department of Water Resources said.

"It is reasonable to think we can reach that goal. Some canals...there's no question they can be restored. But there are other areas, no matter how we restore the canal, the crops are lost."

Madison County put losses there at nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars. Forest Severe, state director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said total damage in that county is $710 million.

"It is by far the hardest hit, the flood practically cleaned that county," he said adding that includes roads, railroads, homes, businesses, crops and livestock.

He recalled an earlier estimate by the governor's office of total damage in the flood area of a half billion dollars.

"They say that's quite conservative. I have to agree. I am placing the agricultural losses alone at one-half billion dollars, counting all damage in all the counties. But our information is incomplete at this point."

In Jefferson county, Jim Baird of the ASCS, said there is $214,000,000 of farm damage and more than $18,000 in livestock damage. These estimates, he said, are restricted to known losses.

Other damage estimates reported earlier included Bonneville County at $50 million and Fremont County at $71.2 million.

The floodwaters that forced 2,000 to flee their homes in Bligham County Monday continued to flow slowly back into the Snake River as the level of water in the stream dropped Tuesday.

Cecil Fawcett, assistant director of the Blackfoot Civil Defense Center, said "the thick creed of the water is now going into the American Falls reservoir." Reclamation Bureau officials said the reservoir can hold it.

compatible with the proposed Pacific Northwest plant. The two firms subsequently consolidated their proposals and applied to construct a hydroelectric plant at one of three alternative locations on the Snake.

At one point an FCC administrative law judge recommended approval of such a project but the proceedings had to be started all over again to accommodate new requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act.

The project was vigorously opposed by environmentalists and conservationist groups, who turned to Congress successfully, as it turned out — to block hydroelectric development by having the area set aside as a national recreation area.

cluded in the proposed Pacific Northwest plant. The two firms subsequently consolidated their proposals and applied to construct a hydroelectric plant at one of three alternative locations on the Snake.

The project was vigorously opposed by environmentalists and conservationist groups, who turned to Congress successfully, as it turned out — to block hydroelectric development by having the area set aside as a national recreation area.

Burley auction president charged

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer
BURLEY — The head of the Burley Commission Yards, Inc., has one week left to decide whether or not he will close his livestock auction business in two weeks.

Jim Palen, president and manager of the firm, said Wednesday the U.S. Department of Agriculture last week gave him two weeks in which to decide whether to plead guilty to charges his firm violated the Packers and Stockyards Act of 1933.

Should Palen decide not to fight the charges and plead guilty, he will be forced to close his business for two weeks. After that he could open his business again and be warned he shouldn't break any more federal regulations. Palen was charged in June, 1975, with endangering prompt payment to consignors by having shortages in his market trust accounts and failing to maintain his account properly.

Food stamps available

REXBURG, Idaho (UPI) — Emergency food stamp assistance is available and easy to obtain in disaster areas in eastern Idaho, Bill Payne, deputy attorney general for the Health and Welfare Division said Tuesday.

"Food stamp assistance is available over there at disaster centers and very easy to receive, particularly in Rexburg," he said. "It is the Rexburg center they can use the short form to apply and only have to check a couple of boxes."

Payne said flood victims at other centers have to fill out the long form, but he said the processes have been simplified.

NFO ruling appealed

CORNING, Iowa (UPI) — A Wisconsin court ruling, which said the National Farmers Organization "used a variety of deceptive tactics" to President Oren Lee Staley said Tuesday.

Murphy also said false statements were made by the NFO about the financial condition of Associated Milk Producers and its importation of dairy products.

He issued a permanent injunction against the recruitment tactics of the NFO.

Help offered victims on many different problems

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — "All the people can handle" there are flocking into disaster centers at Rice College in Rexburg, St. Anthony and Idaho Falls seeking emergency relief and information about long-range help.

Phil Cogan, public information officer for the Federal Disaster Assistance Center, said "virtually every kind of help imaginable" is available for the victims through the centers.

Help with mortgage payments, disaster unemployment assistance, food stamps, tax assistance and small business loan interest loans is available through specially-trained disaster personnel from throughout the country, Cogan said.

Long-term housing is still a serious problem, Cogan said, but temporary housing problems have been handled by area residents. "People have taken friends, relatives and strangers into their homes — they've helped each other out tremendously right now."

Cogan said the FDAA is assessing long-term housing needs and arrangements will be announced soon.

"As soon as we determine exact needs we'll start moving in trailers or renting homes — whatever it takes," he said.

No mobile homes have been ordered yet, Cogan said. The NFO has mobile homes stationed in building lots around the country for disaster situations and if needed they can be moved into disaster areas immediately.

"The main problem faced by refugees is too many unauthorized people trying to come in the disaster areas," Cogan said. "Sightseers are causing a real problem."

Entrance into Rexburg is limited to residents and officials on government business. "Most of the people have good intentions and are trying to help out but we have to ask people to please stay out of the area," he said.

Alfalfa production decreases

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho's alfalfa seed production in 1975 dropped 13 per cent from the previous year, the State Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said today.

The 1975 production was 15,925,000 pounds with a decline in producing areas and yield per acre.

The service said the 1975 crop was produced on 35,000 acres, down 3,000 acres from a year earlier. Yield per acre was placed at 455 pounds, down 25 pounds from the 1974 crop.

Idaho red clover seed production totaled 860,000 pounds last year, 20 per cent below a year earlier. Acres harvested at 2,100 acres was 22 per cent down from yield at 410 pounds was 10 pounds above 1974.

FCC dismisses plant proposals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Power Commission has dismissed pending proposals to build hydroelectric power plants on the Snake River between Oregon and Idaho because part of the region has now been designated a national recreation area.

The dismissal order, approved by the FCC June 2 and made public this week, noted that the act establishing the Hells Canyon Recreation Area specifically prohibited the FCC from licensing "the construction of any dam, water conduit, reservoir, powerhouse, transmission line, or other project work under the Federal Power Act...within the recreation area."

A joint power plant proposal was pending from the Pacific Northwest Power Company, Portland, Ore., and Washington Public Power Supply System, Kennewick, Wash.

Pacific Northwest had applied separately in 1968 to build the Nez Piree project, which would have been in-

Martin, umpire trade volleys

NEW YORK (UPI) — Umpire Larry McCoy accused Billy Martin of kicking him in the shins during the third inning of Wednesday night's game with the California Angels and the volatile Yankees' manager retorted by calling McCoy a "liar" who was guilty of incompetency.

Martin was ejected from a game for the first time this season after a heated argument with McCoy over a close play at first base. McCoy ruled that Mickey Rivers was out to retire the side, thereby depriving the Yankees of a run.

"He kicked me twice," said Martin, who had a previous altercation with McCoy in Boston's Fenway Park last week.

"It's my word against his and he's been known to be a liar," said Martin. "I thought he missed the play entirely. We've had a confrontation before, not because I like to talk to him, but because he's incompetent."

"He threw me out of the game because I threw my hat. I don't think I kicked him. I will admit to kicking dirt on him. If I were going to kick him, it wouldn't be in the front, it would be from behind."

Martin said that last week in Boston McCoy had gotten in the way of a throw between Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles

Superstars lose but earnings for others enhanced by draft—Rozelle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle testified in federal court Wednesday that the pro football draft depresses salaries for only a few college stars but enhances the potential earnings of hundreds of less talented rookies.

Any major change in the system would completely reverse the situation, he predicted as a defense witness in the damage suit brought by former Washington Redskins' rookie Jim "Yazoo" Smith, who is challenging the draft as a violation of the antitrust laws.

"Modifications could be made in the draft if minor," he testified, "but there could be no major changes without greatly disrupting our game."

Rozelle said that without the draft, competitive balance in the NFL would be destroyed, fan interest would fall off because of one-sided games and franchisees would fall because of dwindling gate receipts and television revenues.

Asked if the draft "depresses" rookie salaries at present, the commissioner replied: "I believe the draft depresses to some extent salaries for super stars, the glamour boy-blue-chip players from college football. As for the other players, it helps them eventually average $48,000-a-year in salary plus fringe benefits and post-season pay."

Without the draft to insure a distribution of talent throughout the league, Rozelle said a top echelon of six to eight teams would buy up the best players to create superstars while the weaker teams would be left with what was left.

He predicted there would be reduced season ticket sales and because of lack of competition, "television wouldn't let us tell them what teams to show nationally... There is no way they'd let us dictate the pattern nor pay us as much for the rights."

Rozelle estimated that in each annual draft there are six "superstars" and perhaps 72 more rookies who can make an immediate contribution to the team choosing them, another 200 in the next seven rounds who have a strong possibility of making the team but need more development and a third echelon of those in the final seven rounds who have a probability of becoming pros.

He recalled the warfare for rookies before the National and American Football Leagues merged in 1966 and gave this version of what would happen without a draft: "There aren't going to be just two teams competing for a Joe Namath. There would be 28."

Rozelle took the stand after Gerald Phillips, owner of the Denver Broncos, testified that elimination of the draft would increase his scouting costs by a half million dollars annually.

more than twice the present expense and the money would have to come from player salaries.

Smith, who suffered a career-ending broken neck in his rookie 1968 season, is seeking triple damages on grounds the draft practice of buying up free agents in contracts that would have adequately compensated him in the event of injury.

Under questioning by U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant, who is holding the trial without a jury, Phillips said if the draft was declared illegal, it would open up a bidding war for college stars and individual teams would have to go back to the "buying-siding" phase of the "free agent" market.

"This would increase scouting costs by $500,000 annually and that would have to come out of player salaries," he testified.

"The players' salary budget is the only place you can cut."

He estimated that the Broncos spend about $500,000 annually as a member of a scouting combine.

Phillips also commented: "If you have to overpay a high draft choice to bring him to the 'free agent' market, you're paying the almost quadrupled price 1966 when the AFL and NFL merged."

Phillips recalled that during the bidding war at the premier draft Denver was never able to sign a first round draft choice

PARK CITY, Utah (UPI) — With a handful of the top racers in the world back, including the United States' only Alpine medal winner from the 1976 Winter Olympics, the U.S. ski team looks ahead to next winter for its first chance to dominate World Cup ski standings.

Bonavena nemesis to face murder charge

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A justice of the peace ruled Wednesday there is enough evidence to hold Willard Hess Bryner for trial on a murder charge in the shooting of heavyweight boxer Oscar Bonavena.

Justice Edward Collett made his decision after a day and a half of testimony at a preliminary hearing for Bryner, 31, a security guard at the house of prostitution where Bonavena was shot to death.

Bryner will be arraigned on the open murder charge in district court within 15 days, he said.

Bryner's attorney, Jerome Polaha of Reno, said he would review the preliminary hearing transcript before deciding whether to seek a writ of habeas corpus on grounds there is not enough evidence to hold Bryner for trial.

He said there was a palm print on the .38-caliber-pistol found in Bonavena's boot holster, but so far there has been no match-up. Nuckolls said there were no identifiable prints on the .38-06 rifle believed to be the murder weapon.

Polaha sought unsuccessfully to draw testimony from Nuckolls that, from the angle where Bryner was standing, it would have been impossible to fire a bullet through the steel fence and hit Bonavena-Nuckolls, however, would say only that he found no ricochet marks on the fence.

Earlier, Storey County undersheriff Jim Miller testified there were two guns found on Bonavena and that they belonged to Sally Conforte.

Miller said he arrived at the Mustang Ranch brothel about an hour after the shooting May 22 and found Bonavena's body, partially covered by a blanket, lying in the parking lot. He said he found a .38-caliber-pistol beneath the body, another in a clip-type holster in Bonavena's left boot and $6,100, mostly in $100 bills, in his hip pocket.

He said Lloyd McNulty, former security chief at the brothel, told a deputy he thought the gun

US skiers hope to dominate world cup

beneath the body was his and that it had fallen from his waistband when he bent over to check Bonavena's pulse. Miller said McNulty explained he didn't want to be seen taking anything from the scene so he placed it between Bonavena's sweater and the ground. However, Miller testified both pistols belonged to Mrs. Conforte.

Miller said two .38-caliber bullets were found on Bonavena's body and more bullets were found in Bonavena's car in an envelope with the word "Sally" written in the ink.

Miller said Bonavena was killed by a .38-06 caliber rifle bullet which entered his chest, struck his heart and exited through the back. He said the rifle was found in a room in the brothel and turned over in the brothel to Bill Miller, Identification Division of the Department of Investigation, who processed it. Bryner also was found in the brothel.

Tuesday, two witnesses testified Bryner told them he shot Bonavena, who reportedly had been injured from the barbed 15 miles east of Reno in the ninth inning to Rick Monday. He struck out six and walked only one in getting his fourth win in his last five decisions.

He had no concern about the hits because, he said, "I always think a no-hitter until they get a hit and when they get one, well, they've got a hit."

The Cubs came up with a surprise pitching performance, too, from newly acquired Joe Coleman, who joined the team Wednesday and started immediately.

The former Detroit Tiger pitched six innings and gave up only two hits, but still took the loss.

"I was exhausted when I came out," he said. "Emotionally drained. A combination of pitching with two days rest and my emotion about joining a new club."

John Collett, a security guard, who is not related to the justice, said he told Bonavena that Conforte had given orders the boxer was not to be admitted. He said they talked for several minutes, then Bonavena went upstairs. Collett said "I heard the word 'freeze' and then I heard, 'hold the weapon.'"

Conforte, who brought Bonavena to the area several months ago for a ring comeback, has said Bonavena came to the brothel to Bill Miller, Conforte and his wife reportedly had a marital split recently and he removed her name from the license of the legal brothel. She had been listed as the manager and was also Bonavena's manager of record.

A federal grand jury will convene at Reno later this month to determine whether there was a violation of firearms laws at the brothel. Both Conforte and Bryner are ex-felons, forbidden by law from possessing firearms.

Messersmith begins erasing bad start

CHICAGO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith signed up late with the Atlanta Braves for this baseball season and he got off to an 0-1 start.

"I'm a better pitcher than that," he said.

Wednesday he looked it, throwing a three-hitter at the Chicago Cubs to pitch the Braves to their sixth straight victory with a 2-0 triumph.

It was the second straight super game for Messersmith, who pitched a one-hit shutout against Montreal last Friday. He said he had "everything together now."

"I've got my confidence now, and the rest of the team has got confidence in me, too," he said.

"I was getting ahead of the hitters and if you're getting ahead you're taking their big swings away."

"I got nothing out of spring training and all the spring training in the world wouldn't have helped me."

Braves' Manager Dave Bristol declared Messersmith was a "super athlete," and he had to keep telling his pitcher that "trying to get in shape in the Championship season is a hell of a thing. I believe he is as fine a working athlete as I ever been associated with."

Messersmith gave up two singles to Steve Swisher and a bunt single in the ninth inning to Rick Monday. He struck out six and walked only one in getting his fourth win in his last five decisions.

He had no concern about the hits because, he said, "I always think a no-hitter until they get a hit and when they get one, well, they've got a hit."

Hole-in-one

TWIN FALLS — Dr. Miles Humphrey scored the first hole-in-one of his golf career Wednesday afternoon at Blue Lakes Country Club. Dr. Humphrey used a seven-iron on the 152-yard par-three 15th hole while Dr. Mike Phillips and Dr. C. R. McWilliams looked on.

Messersmith begins erasing bad start

CHICAGO (UPI) — Andy Messersmith signed up late with the Atlanta Braves for this baseball season and he got off to a 9-4 start.

"I'm a better pitcher than that," he said.

Wednesday he looked it, throwing a three-hitter at the Chicago Cubs to pitch the Braves to their sixth straight victory with a 2-0 triumph.

It was the second straight super game for Messersmith, who pitched a one-hit shutout against Montreal last Friday. He said he had "everything together now."

"I've got my confidence now, and the rest of the team has got confidence in me, too," he said.

"I was getting ahead of the hitters and if you're getting ahead you're taking their big swing away."

"I got nothing out of spring training and all the spring training in the world wouldn't have helped me."

Braves Manager Dave Bristol declared Messersmith was a "super athlete," and he had to keep telling his pitcher that "trying to get in shape in the championship season is a hell of a thing. I believe he is as fine a working athlete as I ever been associated with."

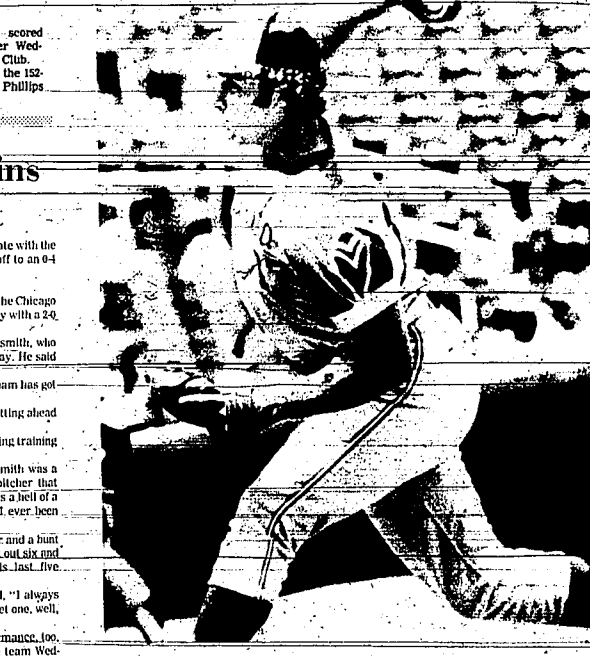

Messersmith gave up two singles to Steve Swisher and a hit single in the sixth inning to Rick Monday. He struck out six and walked only one in getting his fourth win in his last five decisions.

He had no concern about the hits because, he said, "I always think a no-hitter until they get a hit and when they get one, well, they've got a hit."

The Cubs came up with a surprise pitching performance, too, from newly acquired Joe Coleman, who joined the team Wednesday and started immediately.

The former Detroit Tiger pitched six innings and gave up only two hits, but still took the loss.

"I was exhausted when I came out," he said. "Emotionally drained. A combination of pitching with two days rest and my emotion about joining a new club."

BRAVE PITCHER Andy Messersmith lets fly as he hurls his way to a three-hit, 2-0 shutout over the Chicago Cubs Wednesday. Messersmith pitched a one-hitter in his last outing and with Wednesday's win ran his record to 4-5. (UPI telephoto)

Bonavena nemeses to face murder charge

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A Justice of the peace ruled Wednesday there is enough evidence to hold Willard Ross Brymer for trial on a murder charge in the shooting of heavyweight boxer Oscar Bonavena.

Justice Edward Colletti made his decision after a day and a half of testimony at a preliminary hearing for Brymer, 31, a security guard at the house of prostitution where Bonavena was shot to death.

Brymer will be arraigned on the open murder charge in district court within 15 days. He said after Colletti's decision that he was innocent.

Brymer's attorney, Jerome Polaha of Reno, said he would review the preliminary hearing transcript before deciding whether to seek a writ of habeas corpus on grounds there is not enough evidence to hold Brymer for trial.

He said he would also ask the district court to reduce the $250,000 bail which has kept Brymer in custody since the May 22 shooting.

The state's final two witnesses were fingerprint experts who confirmed the identity of Bonavena, matching prints from the body with a set made by New York City Police when Bonavena entered the country.

Dan Nuckolls, fingerprint technician for the state Department of Investigation, also told the court there were prints on the guns found at the scene, but that they were not identifiable.

He said there was a palm print on the .38-caliber pistol found in Bonavena's boot holster, but so far there has been no match-up. Nuckolls said there were no identifiable prints on the .306 rifle believed to be the murder weapon.

Polaha sought unsuccessfully to draw testimony from Nuckolls that, from the angle impossible to fire a bullet through the steel fence and hit Bonavena. Nuckolls, however, would say only that he found no ricochet marks on the fence.

Earlier, Storey County undersheriff Jim Miller testified there were two guns found on Bonavena and that they belonged to Sally Conforte.

Miller said he arrived at the Mustang Ranch brothel about an hour after the slaying May 22. He said he found Bonavena's body, partially covered by a blanket, lying in the parking lot. He said he found a .38-caliber pistol between the body, another in a clip-type holster in Bonavena's left boot and $6,100, mostly in $100 bills, in his hip pocket.

He said Lloyd McNulty, former security chief at the brothel, told a deputy he thought the gun beneath the body was his and that it had fallen from his waistband when he bent over to check Bonavena's pulse. Miller said McNulty explained he didn't want to be seen taking anything from the scene so he placed it between Bonavena's sweater and the ground. However, Miller testified both pistols belonged to Mrs. Conforte.

Miller said two .38-caliber bullets were found on Bonavena's body and more bullets were found in Bonavena's car in an envelope with the word "bullet" written in blue ink.

Miller said Bonavena was killed by a .306-caliber rifle bullet when it entered his chest, struck his heart and exited through the back. He said the rifle was found in a room in the brothel and turned over to Dan Nuckolls of the State Identification Division of the Department of Investigation, who processed it. Brymer also was found in the brothel.

Tuesday, two witnesses testified Brymer told them he shot Bonavena, who reportedly had been harassed from the bartender, 15 miles east of Reno. Justice Ben Jr. an circuit judge at the place, said he got the rifle out of a guard tower for Brymer when Bonavena sought to get through the gate. He quoted Brymer as saying, "I told him to freeze, I was guard for his boot. I shot him."

John Colletti, a security guard who is not related to the justice, said he told Bonavena that Conforte had given orders the boxer was not to be admitted. He said they talked for several minutes, then Bonavena went to his car. Colletti said "I heard the word 'freeze' and then I heard a shot. I looked over and saw Brymer standing there holding the weapon."

Conforte, who brought Bonavena to the area several months ago for a ring comeback, has said Bonavena came to the brothel to kill him. Miller recently and he removed her name from the license of the legal brothel. She had been listed as the manager and was also Bonavena's manager of record.

A federal grand jury will convene at Reno later this month to determine if there was a violation of federal laws at the brothel. Both Conforte and Brymer are ex-felonies, forbidden by law from possessing firearms.

Swine vaccine to fight flu

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Public Health Service has announced its first tentative recommendations for use of swine influenza vaccine in the upcoming mass immunization and identified the high risk groups.

Final recommendations will be published early next month. The National Immunization Program, the most massive public health effort ever planned in the United States, involves late summer and early fall vaccinations to protect most Americans against a potential outbreak of a virulent form of flu.

Identified as high risk groups who should receive a "bivalent vaccine" against two strains of influenza and persons with heart disease, chronic bronchopulmonary diseases such as asthma, bronchitis, cystic fibrosis, tuberculosis and emphysema; chronic kidney failure; and diabetes.

The bivalent vaccine, one of two formulations provided by the program, also is recommended for persons over 65. Persons with egg allergies should not be given vaccine except under close supervision of a physician, it said.

The new vaccines were published in a weekly report by the government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The bivalent vaccine is intended to protect against both swine flu and the A-Victoria strain which was epidemic in most of the United States last winter and "may persist to some extent in 1976-1977."

A monovalent vaccine will contain only the swine flu virus and will be recommended for the rest of the population.

In addition to these vaccines against so-called influenza A viruses, a monovalent type B vaccine will be available commercially for high-risk groups for whom flu vaccination is recommended annually.

Senate to rule on legal fees

CHICAGO (UPI) — According to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's projections, Jimmy Carter will be the Democratic nominee for president.

"If he wins in Ohio, he'll walk in under his own power. He'll be the candidate," Daley said Tuesday before the returns were in.

Carter won handily in Ohio. Daley said he talked on the telephone with Carter early Tuesday. When asked what was said, the mayor quipped, "I said, 'Hello Jim, how are you doing?'"

Daley, who never before expressed his preference for any of the Democratic presidential candidates, said Carter "has got something we need some of — a religiousness in what he says."

"Maybe we should have more religion in the community, with the violence and the filthy movies and with newspapers with mistresses on the front page stripped to the waist — what are the kids going to do in a society that sees all that?" Daley said in a news conference.

Daley said he and Carter understand one another. "We know each other for a long time."

"I have great respect for any man with the courage he's got," Daley said. "He started months ago and entered contests in any state. He's won some and he's lost some and, by God, you have to admire him."

Most of Illinois' Democratic candidates are pledged to Stevenson III. Carter has said Stevenson is one of a few men he would consider as a vice presidential running mate.

Daley also took a poke at Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who said he would accept a draft at the convention.

"Who says he is a man now who should be a man on a white horse and welcomed into the convention?" Daley asked. "Anyone who doesn't stand the test (in primaries) shouldn't be in the running."

"Our party isn't in bad enough shape to have to go to someone and demand him and draft him."

Nuclear plant ban fails in California

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The defeat in California Tuesday of the first atomic safeguards law ever submitted to American voters was a major blow to the forces of nuclear power, but it far from ended their nationwide war against the atom.

Supporters and opponents of nuclear power both said their next battles will be in Colorado and Oregon, where similar state initiatives are on the November ballot.

California voters voted to one against a state initiative that would have banned nuclear power plant construction after one year and forced utility companies to phase out existing plants unless the state assumed full financial liability for damages in the event of an accident.

The measure, called Proposition 13, also would have made existing nuclear plants pay for utilities to order additional nuclear power plants, reversing a trend toward cancellations and deferrals that appeared last year.

But Daniel Ford of the Union of Concerned Scientists told UPI: "I don't think the defeat will scuttle the anti-nuclear movement. It's just the first big political news event of the campaign."

Opponents of the measure argued passage of the proposition would impose a de facto nuclear moratorium in California, causing an energy shortage. They also expressed concern that the belated state might trigger a wave of similar actions elsewhere, crippling U.S. plans for heavy reliance on atomic power.

Most supporters denied they wanted to end reliance on nuclear power. They said all they wanted was to make it safe.

It was a bitter battle, with the nuclear and utility industries on one side and a coalition of environmental and other groups on the other.

Each sided up Robert Haverty, an environmental scientist and public figure to support the cause.

Then, with both sides predicting 50-50 chances that Proposition 13 would pass, the nuclear and utility industries went up. Expensive campaigns and gained the support of such labor groups as the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Division.

More than $1 million is reported to have been spent by the two sides, with an estimated $2.3 million of that amount coming from the utility and nuclear industry war chests.

Ban on females kept by Greeks

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — For 900 years the monastic peninsula of Mount Athos has barred women and even female animals from its environs. And so it shall remain.

Supporters of women's liberation failed Tuesday to get their way in a bill that Parliament turned down by a show of hands a bill that called for "equality of men and women" in Mount Athos, in accordance with the constitution.

"It will not kill them—women if they are not allowed to go to Mount Athos," Center Union deputy Christian Grammatidis said. "After all, we are not allowed into women's saunas and beauty parlors."

Deputy Dimitris Zakythinos, speaking for the government, urged rejection of the bill because it would violate long tradition and rules of agreement between Greece and the "monastic state," situated on one of the fingers of a three-pronged peninsula in the north of the country.

"There was a scandal in the 10th century when some nomadic shepherds took their women along with their flocks into Athos. As a result, not only women but even animals of the female sex were banned from the peninsula in 1070," Zakythinos said.

Today the 20-mile long state is still autonomous, run by a board of representatives from each of its monasteries, and its population has dropped to about 1,000 elderly monks because of a lack of interest in manliness.

The bill was presented to Parliament by Socialist Movement deputy Ioannis Koutsoheras.

"Women's Year passed and Greek women are still deprived of their equality on that point, despite the dictates of our constitution and internationally accepted norms," he said.

But Grammatidis replied that "those who went to Mount Athos did so to get away from society — from everything and to get close to God.

"Let us leave them as they want to be."

Panama treaty formula sought

SANTIAGO, CHILE (UPI) — The United States and Panama pledged jointly today to carry out serious efforts to achieve a new treaty covering the Panama Canal, but differences remain on important issues.

The joint statement, submitted to the Sixth General Assembly of the Inter-American body of foreign ministers and was expected to produce a resolution of the assembly encouraging both parties to continue their efforts.

"We are working on the basis that every negotiation concerning an old problem is a transaction toward new formulas of justice," the U.S. and Panamanian government said in the statement.

"Differences remain between the two parties on important issues — the period of duration of the new treaty, and the arrangements for the land and water areas comprising the present Panama Canal Zone," the statement said.

"The Republic of Panama and the United States are anxious to complete these negotiations as soon as possible and recognize that the other nations represented in this assembly share that desire."

The statement said the talks were proceeding "in accord with the eight principles agreed on by both parties in February, 1974, and we are pleased to report that during the past year the parties have made further significant progress in the highly complex issues before them."

Twelve member nations of the Organization of American States at the same time presented a draft resolution expressing their hope for the rapid conclusion of a new treaty "which will definitely eliminate the cause of conflict between Panama and the United States." The resolution was expected to be approved by the conference.

Alejandro Orfila, OAS secretary general, said the matter will be referred to a first committee of the assembly, where it will have no further effect on the negotiations that have been going on for 12 years.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Tuesday that U.S. relations with Chile will remain strained as long as Chile continues to persecute political prisoners.
