

Biggest flag for Flag Day

DETROIT (UPI) — Its 50 stars are six feet high and its 13 stripes are eight feet wide. It takes 55 men to hoist it into the air.

It's the world's largest flag, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, and it makes its first public appearance in Detroit today — Flag Day, 1976.

Created in 1949 for the J. J. Hudson Co. by eight women who worked at sewing machines for more than 700 hours, the flag was unfurled each year on Flag Day until 1974, when it was retired because of age.

America's largest Old Glory measures 225 by 101 feet and is made of 2,038 yards of wool, 5,500 yards of thread, 57 yards of heavy canvas — enough to make 611 flags of conventional size. Its packing case alone weighs 350 pounds. It cost $72,000 to make in 1949.

Church joins bandwagon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, today withdrew from the Democratic presidential race and endorsed Jimmy Carter as "a candidate whose time has come."

Church told a news conference he believed Carter had "won entitlement to the nomination by taking his candidacy to the people in all parts of the country."

The Idaho lawmaker said he was releasing the 74 delegates he won in primary elections and urged them to support Carter's candidacy.

Prior to Church's announcement, Carter had 1,314 of the 1,565 delegates need for the nomination.

Church, who won primaries in Idaho, Montana, Nebraska and Oregon, said Carter "has proved himself a candidate behind whom all Democrats can and should unite, thus ending the divisions that have plagued our party in the past two national elections. "But beyond the mending of a splintered party, Jimmy Carter has brought an end to the regional prejudices that have marred our national politics for more than a century," Church said.

His victories in states far removed from his native Georgia have, at long last, healed the wound of the war between the states — thus making the new South "a full-fledged partner in the choosing of a president," he said.

"To Jimmy Carter, then, goes the credit not only of reuniting the Democratic Party, but of reuniting the country itself," Church added.

On his own campaign, Church said "Ours was a clear campaign which met with more success than we had any right to anticipate, and we shall always look back upon it with no regrets."

Church earlier said he would consider a Vice-Presidential slot on the Democratic ticket, providing the right candidate headed the slate.

The Idaho-Southerner also has been rumored to be interested in the office of Secretary of State in a Democratic administration.

Church's late-late strategy — in the 1976 presidential campaign got off to a rocket start only to falter in California, Ohio and Rhode Island.

Church and California Gov. Jerry Brown were the only two candidates who managed to beat Carter in any primaries during the months of May and June.

Tough explanation ahead

TWIN FALLS — A young Twin Falls woman may have some explaining to do when she appears in Twin Falls County traffic court to answer a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

The young woman's vehicle reportedly collided with a parked car in Lynwood Shopping Center. The woman told police she knew she hit another vehicle but could not see any damage so she drove away.

The parked vehicle damaged in the accident is owned by Mrs. Reed P. Maughan, wife of the traffic court magistrate.

Missile hijack attempt?

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Police Sunday searched for five persons suspected of trying to hijack a truck reportedly carrying a missile to the Long Beach Naval Supply Depot.

Truck driver William Abell of Birmingham, Ala., told officers he was transporting a defused Minuteman missile from Tennessee for repairs.

An Air Force spokesman, however, said no "operational Minuteman missile was being transported by a vehicle in Los Angeles" Sunday.

He didn't know what he was carrying — a Navy moonkin or an empty shell or a display for a parade or what, Col. Dave Cole said. "All of our missiles are transported in special vehicles and are escorted by armed military and civilian law enforcement officials."

Abell said a white van twice pulled in front of him and a man inside motioned to pull over. The second time pointing an M16 rifle at the truck driver. Instead, Abell said he changed lanes both times.

This drew the attention of a California Highway Patrol officer who pulled alongside Abell to see why Abell was changing lanes so much. The white van turned off onto the Ventura Freeway.

The patrolman called for help and police searched the freeway but could not find the van.

Abell, who was taking the missile from Tennessee to Long Beach, Calif., for repairs, said he saw two men in the front of the van, the gunman in back and two other persons, one who appeared to be a woman. He also claimed he saw three other rifles.

MAGIC VALLEY — Cold, wet, windy weather ruined fishing trips over the weekend but apparently did not seriously damage crops.

The Magic Valley area escaped light frost Sunday night mainly because of windy conditions which persisted most of the night, according to Maurice Paulson, National Weather Service meteorologist.

He said warmer air moving in behind the weekend storm system should warm tonight's lows five to 10 degrees from those of Sunday night.

Vice squad nabs Utah solon

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Accused of soliciting sex for $20, Rep. Allan Howe charges he was the victim of a "bait trap or set-up," and says he was lured to the red-light district by an invitation to a political gathering.

Howe, 46, a Mormon, a father of five and a candidate for election to a second term, was arrested late Saturday night by police vice squad officers, including two women posing as prostitutes.

"I am innocent of any wrongdoing and beg of my friends and all the good people of Utah to withhold their judgment... and accord me the constitutional presumption of innocence," Howe said in a statement issued Sunday.

The congressman last week had called on Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, to temporarily resign his committee chairmanships in the wake of the Ohio's sex scandal, on the grounds that, "an elected official's public and private standards should be equally high."

Howe said it would be inappropriate to discuss details of the incident at this time. "But I will say that I was obviously the target of some trap or set-up."

"I was lured to the scene of the incident under the false pretenses of an invitation to a political gathering following the Democratic dance... that concluded the Salt Lake County Democratic Convention yesterday (Saturday)."

According to the police report, Howe approached the women on a bar and pool hall-lined street on the city's west side, an area well known as a hangout for prostitutes.

"In a transcript released by police, Howe is listed as 'He' and one of the decoys as 'She.'
He: "Hi, honey, what are you up to?"
She: "Not much, what are you doing?"
He: "Just looking for some fun."
She: "Like what?"
He: "Oh, a — and a —"
She: "How much is it worth to you?"

He: "I usually go about $20."
She: "Is that how much you want to go?"
He: "Yes. You're not one of those cops are you?"

She: "No, are you?"
(Later Howe allegedly asked the decoy if she was acquainted with another girl named "Stephanie" and the officer said she was.)
He: "Is she black or white?"
She: "Why don't you know?"

He: "Yes, I've been with her a few times."
She: "Anygo else?"
He: "Yes, a few other girls. I haven't seen you two down here before."
She: "You must not have been down here lately 'cause we've been here."
(The report said Howe agreed to follow the woman to another meeting place. They drove a short distance and other officers placed him under arrest and impounded his rented car.)

Rockfest slated on Baldy

BY KEN HODGE

KETCHUM — "A Day on the Mountain," a rock music festival at the base of Lower River Run on Bald Mountain has the go ahead for July 3.

According to Dan Mooney, co-promoter of the affair under the auspices of North Fork Productions, the festival now has written permission from the Sun Valley Co. and has seraped up a $10,000 clean-up bond to be paid to the Blaine County Commissioners.

"As of right now," Mooney said, "I foresee no problems. As long as we can get the people in and sitting down and give them good entertainment, it should go pretty well."

Technically, the county commissioners have not given their permission, according to Mooney, "but it is just a matter of paper work now."

"The county commissioners have been very good to work with. They said unofficially that we could go ahead once we had permission from Sun Valley in writing and our $10,000 bond," Mooney said today.

Local law enforcement officials are expected to make special preparations once the official go-ahead has been given.

According to Dennis Haynes, Ketchum police chief, "I haven't been given the word yet that they have posted the bond. If they do, we'll make arrangements to have enough officers." Haynes said that his department would be very busy that weekend with bicentennial celebrations scheduled.

He said a rodeo is slated for the next day in Halley. Haynes expects a lot of people to be in the area for the rodeo.

North Fork Productions expects about 5,000 people for the concert. They have printed up 6,000 tickets which are now on sale.

He said that normal bond is $2 per person attending such a function.

"The problem we have is that we don't know how many people will show," Mooney said. "If 20,000 people show up, we'll have real trouble."

He said the concert would be held on the slope of Lower River Run with the stage facing uphill. The audience will be seated up the ski hill from the stage.

"Even if more people show up, we are only selling 6,000 tickets and no one else will be able to see anything from across the river," he said.

Iron rule clings to S. Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — Quiet efforts by the United States to ease the authoritarian human and civil rights policies of the government of President Park Chung Hee show no signs of having any effect, according to interviews with diplomatic, South Koreans and other observers here.

"In public statements and testimony before Congress in recent months, Washington officials, including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, have said they were working behind the scenes to persuade President Park to loosen the repressive policies that have drawn international criticism and threats of reduced American aid.

But such efforts—including regular expressions of "concern" by resident and visiting American officials here, have produced no visible results, according to informed sources.

This lack of civil rights impact is viewed by many here as part of a larger decline in American influence in general in the Republic of Korea as the 64-year-old President Park steadily gains greater military, economic, political and diplomatic independence.

Park and his spokesmen regularly ask their visitors to understand the special problems of South Korea, now it is threatened militarily by North Korea and now signs of dissidence or internal political opposition could be "misconstructed" by the Communists as weakness.

It is prohibited here, for example, to criticize the government, the constitution or the president. Last year, eight men were hanged on charges of belonging to an outlawed political party.

Kim Dae Jung, the defeated 1971 presidential candidate, was kidnapped in Japan and returned here for several trials. Arrests in the night and failings are common. So too are charges of torture, including denial of sleep during questioning that lasts several days. Bail is nonexistent.

Professors and other potential political opponents discover their employment terminated for unexplained or suspicious reasons. There have been deaths under questionable circumstances, with one "disident" victim "falling" from a bathroom window after interrogation.

Local news media are controlled by the authorities. Magazines and newspapers from abroad arrive with censored articles clipped from their pages. Mail is opened, telephones are tapped, many citizens are followed.

Theoretically, there is freedom of religion. But routine church services and prayer meetings are attended by bands of black-chested men in blue suits. They do not know the hymns, fail to kneel for prayers and refuse the collection plate. Frequently, they stroll the church aisles to snare photographs of worshippers.

United States involvement here has been heavy. It has included a three-year occupation after World War II, 33,000 United States dead during the Korean War and the maintenance of 40,000 troops here now.

Americans have made a very heavy investment in blood, tragedy and money to sustain South Korean democracy," says Yun Po Sun, the nation's only living ex-president. "Korea and the United States are so close that Americans should speak to the government here as if they were a member of the Korean people."

Doctors had amputated Bolles' right leg above the knee shortly after the incident. Trying to fight infections, Bolles' left leg and the right arm were also amputated later.

Reporter dies, man arrested

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Investigative reporter Don Bolles, maimed by a bomb planted in his car June 2, died Sunday. Two hours later a key figure in the case was arrested for murder.

The Arizona Republic Pulitzer prize in 1965, died at 11 a.m. at St. Joseph's Hospital. His wife, Rosalia, was at his side.

John H. Adamson, 32, a towtruck operator, was arrested and held without bail pending a hearing June 21.

The explosion occurred in the parking lot of the Clarum Hotel where Bolles had gone to meet Adamson. He had told fellow reporters that Adamson offered information on a land deal involving Herp Sam Steiger, R-Ariz.

Major bills face house this week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House faces an almost unprecedented work schedule this week as it tries to pass and send to the Senate five major appropriations bills, including one providing $106 billion for the military.

Spurred by a new law setting legislative deadlines, the House will call up bills for the Treasury Department and Postal Service, public works, Agriculture, State and Justice departments and defense.

The heavy schedule comes at a time when Congress also is embroiled in sex scandal allegations affecting two House members — Reps. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, and John Young, D-Tex.

Action also was planned on several controversial authorization bills affecting the State Department, U.S. Information Agency, economic development, land use and nuclear fuel safeguards.

Tattler resists answers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Colleen Gardner didn't want to talk about sex. She wanted to talk about women's rights, and education, and her future.

The day before, a Washington newspaper said she told of seeing Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, having sex with Elizabeth Ray during a houseboat party on the Potomac River.

Gravel denied it. He said he did not know either Mrs. Gardner or Miss Ray and had never been on the houseboat, owned by former Rep. Ken Gray, D-Ill.

Sunday, Mrs. Gardner would not talk about that.

Sitting on the edge of a sofa in her attorney's apartment, the 28-year-old former Capitol Hill secretary answered questions from television and newspaper reporters, all of whom had promised "exclusive" interviews by the attorney.

As an NBC-TV crew left, Mrs. Gardner's mother shouted: "She's not going to do any more interviews with anyone. This girl's exhausted."

There were more.

Reporters clustered around her on the floor at the foot of the sofa.

Did you, in fact, see Senator Gravel having sex with Elizabeth Ray?

"I just don't want to talk about this anymore," she said.

Her attorney, Sel Rosen, also refused. "I won't answer that for her," he said.

Mrs. Gardner ordered a large glass of orange juice and asked for another. She nibbled on a few pieces of cheese.

Another television reporter, fearful his interview might be cut off completely, talked soothingly to Colleen and her mother.

From a distance, she could be heard: "One thing I like to see is that my mother, after hearing all this, is still on my side."

Then another interview began — the final interview.

Mrs. Gardner, a divorcee, hinted at some homosexuality on Capitol Hill but did not give details. She appeared "embittered" that a girlfriend in the office of Rep. John Young, D-Tex., did not come forward as she did.

It was Young whom she said paid her nearly $26,000 a year, partly for sexual favors.

She said she might change her name and move away from the Washington area.

The television reporter pressed her to explain why she publicized her dealings with Young at a time when she was close to completing a college education.

She had said it was because she felt women were being misused, and she wanted to advance the cause of women's rights. She also wanted to complete her college education.

Suddenly tears began running down her cheek. She put her hands to her face. The small room went silent.

Democrats promise insurance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats are promising national health insurance and a minimum income for all Americans. They propose to pay for much of this by reducing unemployment and the costs that go with it.

Those are themes in a tentative Democratic policy platform approved during the weekend by a 15-member drafting subcommittee. The party's 193-member Platform Committee begins considering it today.

The draft platform proposes a "comprehensive national health insurance program" federally financed.

It calls for expanding existing welfare programs with an "income floor" for the working poor and those unable to work. Drafters explained this could be paid directly or as a tax rebate. Those able to work would be required to accept appropriate jobs or job training.

Subcommittee chairman Michael Dukakis, governor of Massachusetts, said these and other social programs in the proposed platform would cost $30 billion a year.

He said $10 billion of this could be raised by closing tax loopholes and cutting defense spending. The panel said that — barring a change in the world picture — $5 billion to $7 billion could be cut from the defense budget without harming national security.

The other $20 billion would be raised through the platform's proposal to reduce adult unemployment from its most recent 7.3 per cent to 3 per cent within four years, Dukakis said.

The platform says this reduction in unemployment would do away with the federal deficit and provide the extra revenue for social programs. But it says that since this will take several years, the social programs will have to come gradually.

The draft platform also —

FORT SMITH, Ark. (UPI) — Reg Murphy, editor of the Atlanta Constitution while Jimmy Carter was governor of Georgia, says Carter's reorganization of state government cost the taxpayers money.

Carter campaign literature says the reorganization cut the number of state agencies from several hundred to 22, reduced the number of state employees and saved millions of tax dollars.

New record

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (UPI) — Two employees of the Grand Strand Amusement Park now hold the world record for continuous rides on a roller coaster, but they want to make sure it will be a while before somebody breaks it.

Jim Bruce, 21, and Wayne Harkness, 32, hoped to end their ride at noon today after 72 straight hours. That would put them well ahead of the old record of 58 hours set last year at an amusement park in Ohio.

The two broke that record at 11:58 a.m. Sunday when they continued on through the night and, by 10 p.m., had made 1,234 straight circuits, representing 70 miles around the 27,096-foot-long, 79-foot-high Swamp Fox.

Watermelon town 'goes to seed'

WEATHERFORD, Tex. (UPI) — Amon Carter, the father of modern-day Fort Worth, used to ship 100-pound watermelons in wash tubs from the West Texas town to his friends.

Travelers took Old Highway 80 through Texas seldom failed to stop and buy a 100-pound specimen from one of the farmers' pickup trucks parked around the town square.

But that was another era. The Weatherford watermelon industry has gone to seed, say the old timers.

Most of the state's watermelons now come from the Rio Grande Valley. Only the seeds come from Weatherford.

Huge cantaloupes, harvest the once renowned melons, chew up their hulls and spew the red meat out onto the fields. Flies fight over the remains.

"Theseeds are saved for sale to home gardeners and for shipment south to steel production crops in the Rio Grande Valley."

The seat of Parker County made its name in the early 1900s as one of the weatherford watermelon was shipped out in wagons, trucks and railroad cars to points as far away as New York.

At the height of Weatherford's watermelon fame, more than 1,500 railroad earloads of melons went out of the county in one season. In 1904, Parker County watermelons took the prize for size and quality at the World's Fair in St. Louis.

No more.

"Beer did it," says Weatherford resident Carlos Hartnett. "Beer killed the watermelon industry in Weatherford. People used to stop at the state of the road and eat watermelon when they got thirsty. Now they drink beer."

But Lee Coffey, who runs a weatherford seed company, blames World War II.

"Most of the farmers went off to Fort Worth to work in the defense factories and they just never came back to farming," says Coffey. "In the meantime, people still wanted watermelon so they bought them from the Valley."

"Don't get me wrong, people still like to buy Weatherford watermelons to impress friends. We're still growing 100-pound watermelons around here."

'Poor' boy gets big runaround

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Medical tests on Wilson Diver of Boston showed the 12-year-old boy from one of the poorest families in Massachusetts was suffering from tuberculosis, malnutrition and possibly leukemia.

The tests were conducted after Diver was admitted to a hospital — 3½ months after waking up one winter morning coughing and vomiting.

The Children's Defense Fund, a private child advocacy organization, included Wilson's account of his quest for help in a new report on health care problems among poor children.

"The Case of Wilson Diver" (not his real name) "First we called the police ... and they said they couldn't send nobody around to our house unless we could prove it was an emergency. McKay (an older brother) said I should get on the phone and cough for 'em. He wasn't joking neither."

"So we went down to the corner and waited for the bus and man. It was so cold out that we might as well have frozen together. And I kept up this gagging and choking. So maybe after half an hour the bus comes and we get on. Then we had to transfer to another bus."

"We arrived at the hospital emergency room real early too — and this waiting room was crowded with people."

"Now here's the trouble: We must have got there by eight o'clock, and we didn't talk to no one, no one, until 11, or maybe one later. And then it was this woman who took our names and stuff like that, you know."

"So then, like at twelve, the woman calls our name and ... tells my mother that we don't have the right kind of insurance to get medical help. McKay has to go home and get something that proves she can come to the hospital."

"Now it's like 1, 1:30, and I ain't seen no one. Finally they get all the stuff straightened out on the paper."

"They thought it would be better for my mother to say she was on welfare, than to say she had a job. She didn't care. She just wanted me to see the doctor, 'cause I wasn't getting any better."

"Finally they call my name and I see this doctor. He tells me to take off my shirt and lie on a table ... And it's cold in this little hall, they got me in, too. Then the doctor goes out and he don't come back."

"And I'm lying there with my shirt off, freezing, so finally I get dressed."

"Now ... McKay goes home ... but he asked someone before he left how come no one's helping me, and the woman tells him it's his job to house which people who come into the room look the sickest. And since I didn't look that sick she kept me waiting ..."

"You ain't going to believe that nobody came until 6:30. So he gives me this great hard candy and he tells me where he buys it and puts my face. Nice guy."

"Then he leaves and I hear him tell another man: 'There's a boy in there who is very sick. We got to find him a bed.' And I started to cry."

"When nobody came back I went to get my mother, but she was gone."

"Then like at about 10 o'clock in the night, a nurse came ... to say a pallete man's outside waiting to take me home. She says I should be in the hospital and they've been waiting for a bed to open up, whatever, that means, but since they had no room they were sending me home."

Wet points finger at CIA

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — A Vietnam War veteran seeking to save himself from a firing squad accused the CIA today of financing and providing weapons for the American mercenaries who fought in Angola.

"They paid us in new $100 bills," said Gustavo Grillo, an Argentine-born naturalized American. "It was logical that it came from the CIA. We also had American military equipment."

Under lengthy cross examination by the tribunal, Grillo said he also recalled there were CIA agents inside northern Angola "to see how their money was spent and see what was happening."

The husky ex-Marine, who rose to become a platoon sergeant in Vietnam in 1968, said he joined the mercenaries solely for the money and adventure and blamed the American "rat race" for wealth for turning him into the situation.

He told the court he was a naturalized American, but now considers himself an Argentinian because he is opposed to the American political and social systems.

"American society, which I am a product of, is a monster," he said. "It consists of power seekers, money seekers and waste makers. The next get weaker and the strong get stronger."

Grillo, who spoke with a heavy Spanish accent and illustrated many of his points with parables, appeared in the court in a tan prison jump suit.

with his right leg in a cast from wounds.

He said he worked as the bodyguard and driver for a bookmaker in Jersey City, N.J., before coming to Angola last February. He was wounded and captured four days after he arrived.

Grillo, two other Argentines and 10 Britons being tried in the revolutionary tribunal all face a maximum sentence of death by firing squad.

One of the Britons, "Col. Tony Callan," who has been accused of ordering the execution of 14 British mercenaries before being captured, appeared in the dock handcuffed.

Mundane details temper Loch Ness monster search

BY Times Service
DRUMNADROCHT, Scotland — Any "storybook" illusions about the excitement of exploring the unknown must be tempered with the everyday experience — the irregular hours and lack of sleep, the disappointments, the mundane details, the tedious work of waiting and never really knowing whether the reward will justify the effort.

At least such is the case with the Academy Applied Science-Newark Times Loch Ness Expedition and its quest for the strange and elusive creatures that supposedly inhabit this Scottish lake.

The search goes on, but so far it has been "hard work and without results."

All day and through the night, someone monitors the flickering television screen at the shore station, waiting for the cameras to catch sight of some creature lurking in the multimeter color film process exposed by the underwater elapsed-time camera which has been automatically snapping a picture every 15 seconds. It just might have photographed something interesting before the television camera went into operation Sunday.

Wyckoff began examining developed film early Thursday morning, working in the kitchen of the cottage that serves as the shore station. The kit has become his photographic laboratory. For his work he devised a makeshift viewing apparatus consisting of two reels and an ordinary table lamp. He moved the film from one reel over the lamp to the other reel — quite a contrast with the sophisticated cameras, sonars and other equipment in the expedition.

A more conventional film-cutting machine is expected to arrive in a few days. This has been only one of several logistical details of concern in

Blood drives rescuers away

DENVER (UPI) — A former fireman says the sight of blood apparently kept some bystanders from helping him save a young woman trapped in a burning car.

Al Herman, 29, of Elizabeth, Colo., said he spotted the wreckage on his way from work and tried to help the victim.

"I saw the woman in the car, grabbed her around the back and pulled her out," said Herman, a former Shawnee, Kan., fireman. "She was bleeding, and all I could think about was to stop the bleeding."

"There were about to people standing around going 'oh, oh' and all that. I cleared her mouth and started giving her mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and closed heart massage. Herman said flames spread and someone finally helped move the woman father from the wreckage.

"I asked another man to help me with the resuscitation, and he said 'but she's bleeding.' This is where I got mad."

A teenage boy finally came over to help before police and rescue crews arrived. The woman, identified as Brenda L. Galasso, 28, died three hours later in a hospital.

Valley Forge bill passed by Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Over objections that Valley Forge tragedy is preserved, the Senate passed and sent to the White House Friday a bill that would make the Pennsylvania state park a national park.

Sen. George Washington's Continental Army encamped at Valley Forge during the winter of 1777 — making the name symbolic of suffering, sacrifice and ultimate triumph.

The 2,000-acre tract at Valley Forge is a Pennsylvania state park. Under the bill going to the White House, the Interior Department would be authorized to add 250 acres and make it a national park.

The bill passed by voice vote after the Senate defeated an amendment 73-10 to allow Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, which would have provided funds to acquire the nearby Chesterbrook tract as part of the national park.

Pennsylvania has maintained Valley Forge for 85 years. McClure charged the bill was as "fraud" which fails out Pennsylvania and ignores the historic Chesterbrook area where high-rise apartment buildings are being built.

By failing to include Chesterbrook, he was only relieving the state of Pennsylvania of a financial burden, Valley Forge is preserved," McClure said. "Chesterbrook is not, and time is running out."

Senate Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., said the bill would provide $6.6 million to take over Valley Forge and acquire 250 more acres, but it would cost another $23.3 million to acquire Chesterbrook.

Valley Forge, named for a small iron mill on Valley Creek, is in eastern Pennsylvania. Washington chose it for the historic encampment because of its defensive position and the ability to watch the roads to Philadelphia.

In Dec. 19, 1777, his ragging army of 11,000 hungry men went into camp along the Schuylkill River, raising 900 log cabins. Through whose cracks Washington and visiting foreign officers could hear muttering about "no clothes, no provisions, no rum."

The Continental Army endured the harshest of winters — some men literally were asked, only having blankets — but were trained by Baron von Steuben, a Prussian, in Washington's drillmaster, and emerged in the spring a disciplined army able to last, to meet the British on equal terms.

Valley Forge State Park's 2,000 acres — in Pennsylvania's Montgomery and Chester counties — includes remains of major forts, earthworks, the artillery park, Washington's headquarters and the grand parade ground.

Crucial items go to victims

TWIN FALLS — More than $100 in crucial items were sent to flood area victims in eastern Idaho from Twin Falls this weekend.

The Twin Falls Senior Citizens donated $60 at a luncheon this week for the purchase of blankets and other baby needs. Members of the 2-Blouses Ladies, Twin Falls, added another $100 and a number of Lynwood merchants added items to the collection.

In addition to diapers, baby food, baby oil and powder, toothpaste and tooth brushes, a large quantity of chlorine disinfectant was sent to the victims.

Li. Len Bliz of the Twin Falls Salvation Army said Salvation Army workers are in the area assisting with distribution of needed items to the victims of the flood. He said it is estimated 8,000 babies are among the displaced persons and supplies are critically needed.

Nearly all of the families left their homes without taking anything, Li. Bliz said, and baby needs are especially short in the area. While some parents have been able to locate their homes, most of the items inside were either water and mud soaked or washed away.

A number of blankets, other bedding and several cases of chlorine bleach to be used for disinfectant were donated by Lynwood merchants. Li. Bliz said the Salvation Army has set up a central supply area in Idaho Falls and is now establishing smaller supply depots in the towns of Rexburg, Roberts, Sugar City and others where damage was the most serious.

It's true that women in general talk more than men do. But it's among the men rather than the women that you're most likely to find the non-stop conversationalist who refuses to be interrupted. The woman who gossips a lot likewise tends to listen when you speak, because she doesn't want to miss anything. But the man who really listens is a superior conversationalist. He is inclined to close his ears during his occasional pauses, regardless of what he's saying, so he can concentrate on what he's going to say next.

Q. "The bartender says a camel can outrun a horse. He's nuts, right?"
A. If the race goes more than three miles, the camel generally wins.

Q. "What coin is accidentally swallowed most often, a penny, a nickel or a dime?"
A. All I know is that swallowed object most frequently requiring surgery is the bubble gum.

Q. "What is it in the toothpick gum that makes it bubble?"
A. A highly refined rubber, that's all.

TOOTHBRUSH

Sir, what color is your toothbrush? If you don't remember, that's typical; evidently, Surveytakers say they recently found out that the majority of men cannot identify their toothbrushes by color or shape, but only by where they hang in the holders.

Are there lots of rabbits in Spain? If not, how does it happen that nation's original name, Span Spania, meant, "land of the rabbits"?

LOVE AND WAR

When our Love and War man asked a local gentleman named Jim Trinkle how he had kept his long and happy marriage intact, Jim said: "Years ago we formed the habit of going out to dinner three nights a week. She goes on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and I go on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays."
