Church not commenting on Vice Presidency

BY BONNIE BIARD JONES
Times-News writer.

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Sen. Frank Church said in Twin Falls Saturday the possibility of his being a vice presidential running mate with Jimmy Carter "is in the hands of Carter."

Sen. Church, being mentioned as one of the three leading contenders for the vice-presidential slot on the Carter Democratic ticket said he is making no comments on the matter at this time.

He told a cheering state Democratic Convention assembly Saturday, "I have no way of knowing what the future holds. I am a happy relaxed man. I am not looking for another position and I am not campaigning any office at this time."

Church, whose own bid for the Presidential nomination fell short, told Idaho Democrats Carter stands an excellent chance of being elected President.

Sen. Church said he endorsed Jimmy Carter because Carter has demonstrated he can work in a full-fledged partnership with all the Democratic party.

Church said Carter has successfully overcome the national resistance to selecting a southerner as a Presidential nominee.

"He is worthy of our support and I hope you will seize the opportunity to win with Carter in November," Sen. Church said.

Accompanied by his wife, Bethline, and son, Chase, Church flew to Twin Falls to address the convention here Saturday and attend a rally and barbecue Saturday night.

He came to Twin Falls from the Tetoh Dam flood disaster area where he made the first inspection since flying over the eastern part of the state hours after the dam broke June 5.

The senator praised the spirit of the people, communities and church officials in eastern Idaho saying the area will be rebuilt by these "brave and determined" victims.

Church also said 500 dams in western states which the Bureau of Reclamation has built, 250 are earth dams and the Tetoh dam is the first ever to have failed. He explained the independent study to determine the cause is not an "in-house" investigation but is being made by independent engineers. Church told the Idaho Democrats they contributed more per capita to his recent campaign than any other state in the nation gave any other candidate.

He said Idahoans contributed $100,000 to his campaign in addition to many hours of hard work in number of ways.

Today Church is in Lewiston for dedication of the Hell's Canyon National Recreation Area.

Monday is the Church's wedding anniversary, and the family will spend the day in Boise.

Reagan narrows delegate gap with Ford

Helicopters may enter Lebanon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is considering a helicopter evacuation of Americans from Lebanon if fighting continues to block the overland escape route to Syria, administration sources said Saturday.

Sources indicated President Ford was reluctant to order a rescue airlift because it poses the risk of U.S. military involvement in war-torn Lebanon. The Beirut airport has been closed and Marine helicopters would have to be used.

The White House has said repeatedly in recent days no U.S. troops will be used in Lebanon and, up to now, has said no use of U.S. air cover was anticipated.

But heavy shelling on the road to Damascus kept an evacuation caravan of hundreds of Americans and Britons from leaving Beirut Saturday, and Ford met with his White House crisis team to review the situation anew.

Air Force Academy goes coed

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — The Air Force Academy becomes the nation's first service school to go coed next week with the arrival of 156 female cadets.

The class of 1980 — with 156 women and 1,469 men — will be the second largest in the 21-year history of the academy. Cadets are scheduled to arrive June 28.

West Point and the Naval Academy also will become coed this year, but it will be next month before those service schools greet their "doilies" — as freshmen are called.

"I think we have done everything possible we can do to minimize any problems," said Col. James P. McCarthy, vice commandant of cadets at the Air Force Academy.

"We have a very positive attitude about the arrival of the female cadets," he said.

Air Force officials have trained 15 women officers to handle the female cadets, who will go through virtually the same basic training as the men.

Viking I zooms to Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking I saw Mars as a pinkish planet from 348,000 miles out with wispy white cirrus clouds, reddish-brown volcanoes and white fog and frosts.

The color photograph, taken Thursday and released Saturday, was described by Jet Propulsion Laboratory officials as the best color shot yet taken of the planet by an approaching spacecraft. It was made from three images taken through violet, green and red color filters.

Four towering volcanoes, ranging from 12 to 15 miles above the surrounding plain, stand out in the shot as dark rings. To the west of the southernmost volcano is an irregular white area that has been interpreted as ground fog or frost.

Ronald Reagan narrowed President Ford's lead Saturday in their bid for delegate votes to the Republican National Convention, but the President got within 80 delegates of the nomination.

Caucuses and state conventions in Iowa, Washington State, Delaware, Colorado and Texas Friday night and Saturday produced 55 delegates for Reagan, 39 for Ford and four uncommitted.

That raised Ford's delegate total to 1,052 — 78 short of the 1,130 needed for the nomination — and Reagan's to 950. There are 96 uncommitted and 161 delegates yet to be selected.

The Washington GOP state convention at Spokane gave Reagan 31 delegates — one fewer than his forces had expected — and Ford seven.

The Iowa convention at Des Moines produced 19 delegates for Ford — one fewer than his supporters had counted on — and 17 for Reagan.

Ford won 13 of 17 delegates in Delaware with the other four uncommitted. Reagan picked up four additional delegates at the Texas GOP convention and three in a district caucus in Colorado.

Ford also appeared to be making inroads among West Virginia's 28 officially uncommitted delegates. He met with Gov. Arch Moore at the White House and was told 20 delegates were supporting him — one more than previously had been credited to the President.

Jimmy Carter lightened his claim to the Democratic nomination by picking up 20 more delegates from Texas and six more from Arkansas. That raised Carter's total to 1,565 delegates — 60 more than needed for the nomination.

Carter addressed two religious groups during the day. He told a Disciples of Christ meeting in West Lafayette, Ind., that God wants each individual to "demonstrate the life of Christ."

He told a session of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Atlanta that the nation hungers for leadership that can restore hope to the people and concern for the suffering.

Racial clash charrs Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police roadblocks penned rioters in Johannesburg's sprawling black suburbs Saturday.

Food shortages threatened the black population in the fourth day of the worst racial clashes in the republic's history.

The wave of violence, concentrated in the industrial areas of Ringing Johannesburg, spread throughout the country's black enclaves, but police said a measure of calm had been restored to most areas.

There were reports that crowds in the black communities turned to mob just to stop the looting and arson, which has wrecked most of the commercial areas of Soweto and Alexandra, the country's two largest black townships.

A mob stormed a bank university Saturday at Natal, near Durban, about 400 miles to the southeast on the Indian Ocean. Police said the rioters tried to burn down a building on the campus, the third college that has been besieged. Another march by students on Durban's city center also was turned back.

At least 97 persons have been killed, and more than 1,000 others injured in the rioting. The casualty toll was unofficial, and many authorities said they believed the true count was much higher.

At the United Nations, the Security Council met to debate a resolution condemning South Africa for the "the callous shooting of African people, including school children and students."

Western diplomats said the resolution, introduced by black African nations, was more moderate than had been expected, and they expected the Council would adopt it.

Wild looting of shops and arson attacks that gutted scores of government buildings have caused millions of dollars in damages. The pillage from wrecked liquor stores fueled the mobs, police said, and they carried off furniture, photographs and clothing.

Prime Minister John Vorster said the outbreak was an organized uprising against whites, although police spokesmen said most of the injured and damage were due to mobs that roamed without any apparent direction.

Vorster left for West Germany for meetings with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on Wednesday and Thursday. He repeated his order to police to "use all means at their disposal" to contain the riots. Police reservists also have been called up to banter the regular force.

Police reported a backlash against the rioters Saturday in the country's black communities. One report said a crowd beat to death two blacks caught looting a shop.

A screen of security forces cordoned off the riot areas in eight black townships surrounding Johannesburg. Police carrying automatic rifles, and some in armored cars, checked blacks leaving their wreckage littered townships.

Aliens may testify at inquest

BY SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPEIT — Five illegal aliens arrested by the U.S. Border Patrol Thursday night will be held in Minidoka County as possible witnesses to a fatal shooting which occurred during a riot.

Minidoka County Deputy Sheriff Ray Jarvis said Saturday the county planned to hold five of the 12 illegal aliens arrested at the J.R. Simplot Livestock Co. feedlot northwest of Jordan.

Ten of the aliens were arrested by the U.S. Border Patrol in a surprise raid on a Simplot bunkhouse which resulted in the death of Jorge Lenius, 18, Thursday night. The other two were arrested elsewhere on the ranch.

A shot from a .38 caliber pistol in the hand of Border Patrol agent D.L. Hendrickson struck Lenius in the back of the head Thursday night.

Jarvis said an inquest will be called by Minidoka County Coroner Kim Christensen. About five aliens will be held as possible witnesses. No date has been set for the inquest.

The deputy said the Mexican consulate and U.S. government officials have been in communication to make arrangements for the body of the deceased to be returned to his home in Mexico.

The body was being held at Walkington Mortuary, Rupert.

James Stenger, patrol agent in charge at the U.S. Border Patrol office in Twin Falls, had no comment Friday on the shooting.

"I have been informed anything connected with this should be referred to Mrs. (Vern) Jarvis," Stenger said. Jarvis is a public relations officer in Washington, D. C., for the Border Patrol.

Stenger "who did not participate in the four agent raid at the Simplot bunkhouse, said illegal aliens usually are transported back to the border within six to seven days of their apprehension, unless they are to be criminally prosecuted for illegal entry.

He said he did not know if any of the dozen held in the Minidoka County jail would be prosecuted, because he had not yet interviewed them.

The Border Patrol normally keeps illegal aliens in the local jails until they have collected a bond and then transports them to the Mexican border.

Deputy Jarvis said the Border Patrol arrests numerous illegal aliens in Minidoka County.

"They bring them in groups of 6 to 15 or more," he said. "At one time this spring we had nearly 20 in our jail, awaiting filling of the border patrol bus."

Lenius was shot as he attempted to dive through a small window when Border Patrol agents burst into the building through two doors.

The four Border Patrol agents arrested 10 aliens during the raid. Sheriff's deputies arrested two others at the ranch during the subsequent investigation.

Among those arrested was Lenius' older brother, Gerardo, who was at the bunkhouse when the shooting occurred.

President Ford got within 100 delegate votes of the Republican nomination Saturday, taking a slim majority of Iowa's 36 GOP convention delegates but expecting to lose badly in Washington state.

With 98 delegates at stake in five states, Ford figured to come out of the weekend contests at a slight disadvantage to Ronald Reagan, but still well ahead in the race to get the 1,130 delegates needed for nomination.

Iowa's 19-17 split in favor of Ford gave him 1,032 delegates to Reagan's 912.

The California, however, was expected to get as many as 32 of Washington's 38 delegates, along with four from Texas, while Ford counted on all 17 from Delaware and 3 from Colorado — a prospective weekend margin of 53-45 for Reagan that would leave Ford 72 short of the nomination and 110 ahead of his challenger with 161 yet to be chosen and 92 uncommitted.

Ford also appeared to be making inroads among West Virginia's 28 officially uncommitted delegates. He met with Gov. Arch Moore at the White House and was told 20 delegates are supporting him and three are uncommitted, with the other five for Reagan.

Jimmy Carter, the prospective Democratic nominee, addressed two church groups Saturday and picked up 21 more delegates from Texas, giving him 1,556 delegates, 51 more than the 1,505 needed for the nomination.

Mercenaries' fate in hands of judges

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — The fate of 13 white soldiers of fortune was given to five African judges Saturday, with American defendants quoting the Bible and apologizing to the Angolan people. Confessed killer Col. Tony Callan said in a rambling, incoherent statement he was "prepared to die."

Judge Ernesto Tezaira da Silva allowed each of the 13 British and American mercenaries, who face possible execution, to make a statement. Da Silva said the five-man revolutionary tribunal would announce its decision in the middle of next week. There is no appeal.

"I want to pay for my crimes," said Callan, who was the last to speak. "I am afraid of prison but I am prepared to go to prison. I don't want to die but I am prepared to die."

But Gary Acker, 21, of Sacramento, Calif., and Daniel Gearhart, a 34-year-old father of four, from Kensington, Md., apologized for enlisting to fight as mercenaries in Angola and asked for clemency.

"Never again for any reason — monetary or cause — will I become a mercenary again," Gearhart said. "It was a bad and grievous thing I did in coming to Angola and I would like to apologize to the Angolan people."

Acker, 21, also apologized.

Gustavo Grillo, 25, an Argentine-born U.S. citizen from Jersey City, N.J., who denounced American society in earlier testimony went further in his statements.

Grillo, a former bodyguard for a New Jersey gambler, said it was wrong "to enter somebody else's backyard to fight and attack for money" and that he was grateful for the treatment he received.

"But words are not enough. I am prepared to fight, work and do anything possible for the Angolan people," he said. "I am also prepared to accept the sentence of this court."

Council to hold hearing

TWIN FALLS — City Council members will conduct a public hearing Monday night on four items, including a request for zoning to permit a moving and storage warehouse on Eastland Drive near Madrona Street.

The application is from L.S.S.T. Leasing, associated with Halley's Warberg-Maxium firm. It calls for a zone change from residential medium density to industrial.

Other hearing items include a request for zoning variance by Carl Snow on property at 783 El Monte St., and an application from the College of Southern Idaho for an ordinance amendment to permit an illuminated marquee about 80 feet square in size on college property facing Falls Avenue.

Another application to be brought before the public hearing is from Bob L. Hopkins of the Shale Inn for zoning adjustment. He proposes the city allow parking credit on non-adjacent space to the property for building space occupancy on his property in the commercial-generel zone land.

Other items to come before the city council Monday night include a proposed annexation in the Orchelara Subdivision, a parking lot requirement on county property, parking requirements for the Bowladrome and a request from the city Tennis Association on court surfacing.

Church, state to examine order of Catholic priest

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Church and state Saturday were ready to crack down on the Pallottine Fathers, an order of Roman Catholic priests dedicated to helping the poor abroad but accused of using millions in charitable funds for loan ventures and loans to local politicians.

"To audit the financial records of Archbishop William D. Borders revealed that Pallottines Inc. collected $20.4 million between July, 1974, and December, 1975, but only $1.1 million reached the missions for which the funds were intended.

"The rest of the money was invested in securities and investments, loaned to politically influential businessmen or spent to raise more money."

Attorney General Francis Burch said he was "shocked and dismayed" by the results of the audit and announced his office would make another investigation to determine if the Pallottines broke any state laws.

The Pallottines had cooperated in an informal inquiry following first reports of the fundraising operations last year.

The Internal Revenue Service is investigating tax returns to determine if the corporation should retain tax-exempt status, according to Pallottines attorney Joseph Moore.

"However, Moore said there was no indication that at this time any federal or state charges would be brought against Pallottines Inc.

Archbishop Borders told the Pallottines if they do not change their fund-raising operations they will have to halt them in the Archdiocese of Baltimore.

"I fully expect that from this day forward, Pallottines Inc. will bring their practices directly into line with the guidelines published recently by a committee that I commissioned," Borders said.

America's Viking journeys to orbit

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — America's Viking 1 space probe sped toward orbit around Mars Saturday for a two-week mission.

The two-section probe was on its own for the crucial orbital insertion maneuver because it takes 17.5 minutes for a radio signal to travel the 195 million miles between Earth and Mars.

The Viking 1 and a twin 6.7 million miles behind, represent a billion dollar effort to establish a nuclear-powered science station on the red planet for the first time. They will look at, feel, smell and even taste the Martian surroundings.

"Viking 1" approached Mars from its wintry Southern Hemisphere on a source that was as accurate as hitting a laser plate on a flight from Los Angeles to New York. This was the most accurate planetary flight yet achieved by the United States.

The target for Viking's three-legged landing unit was hidden in the darkness of the Martian night as the spacecraft swept toward the planet. But the initial looping orbit was so planned that the landing site will be underearth in late afternoon daylight on Monday.

A brief engine firing then will switch Viking into an orbit so that the spacecraft will pass over the landing area every day at the same time. This will give the craft's twin cameras an opportunity to take the stereoscopic pictures scientists need to make sure the site is free of large obstacles.

Car, cycle mishap injures 3 persons

TWIN FALLS — Three persons suffered injuries in a car and motorcycle accident at Shoshone Street and 11th Avenue North Friday afternoon.

City police reported a car driven by Chester Harold Moore, 58, Twin Falls, was crossing Shoshone Street from 11th Avenue North through traffic which was backed up at the North Five Points intersection. His car collided with a southbound motorcycle operated by Theresa Slatyer, 23, Twin Falls. Mrs. Slatyer's two small children, Barbara, 3, and Alicia, 5, were riding with her. The children and Moore were treated for cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred shortly after 4 p.m.

Utahn Howe renominated

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Congressman Allan Howe, D-Utah, accused of trying to buy sex from deputy police prostitutes, Saturday won a vote of confidence from the Utah Democratic Convention.

After an emotional speech by the congressman, the 1,200 delegates attending the convention defeated by a 3-2 margin a resolution asking Howe not to seek re-election in November. The vote followed a loud and heated debate that sent boos and cheers echoing through the Salt Palace Convention Center. Howe, with his arm around his wife Marlene, spoke briefly to the delegates, asking them not to prejudice him.

"I would beg your restraint and for the extension of the right under the Constitution to be judged by a fair and impartial jury," he said, "I ask that you withhold your judgement," he said.

"This resolution breaches justice," declared one delegate during debate. "Every man is entitled to a fair trial."

"We are being asked to stretch the presumption of innocence to a ridiculous degree here," countered a Howe opponent. "I say Allan Howe should put his party before his personal ambition."

"To me the question of his guilt or innocence has nothing to do with it," said another delegate. "The question is, 'Can he win?'"

Howe, 48, Friday entered an innocent plea to the misdemeanor vice charge in Salt Lake City Court and demanded a jury trial, which was scheduled July 12.

LSD-laced Army coffee doesn't bring sentence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An American soldier put LSD in the coffee of 30 colleagues while on NATO maneuvers in Germany last year, but has gone free because the law can't touch him, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Saturday.

Aspin released a letter from Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffman confirming the incident on Feb. 26, 1973, at Massweiler, West Germany. Aspin suggested legislation was needed to "close these obvious loopholes."

Before an Internal Army investigation could determine who the culprit was in July, 1975, the soldier had been unjustly fired from the Army and could not be touched by the military. "Since the crime was committed in Germany, the justice Department won't be able to prosecute either," Aspin said.

"This young man may have thought spiking coffee with LSD was cute, but it was potentially just as dangerous as CIA and Army drug experiments," Aspin said. "I just hope that none of the affected G.I.'s suffer any long-term affects or any kind of relapse."

Hoffman told Aspin he was offering the 24 soldiers who fell victim to the LSD-laced coffee follow-up care similar to that offered by the Army recently to participants in its drug experiments.

LSD is a hallucinogenic drug which can cause hallucinations and distortions in how reality is perceived.

Congress dismayed over scandals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The wank-wink, elbow-in-the-rib locker-room ribaldry that arose in the House when Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, was first caught up in a sex scandal has vanished.

Instead, scandal has turned into a roguish monster that frightens some members of the House and dismays others. Republicans are the likely beneficiaries, but they share in the gloom, that the Congress already low in public esteem, has been dragged down.

"This culprit-a-day business for the last seven or eight days," says House Republican leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona, slaying his head.

"The public must be enlightened as to the nature of the House and dismays others. Republicans are the likely

Some Democrats expect punishment at the polls. One Democratic strategist calculates the scandal will cost 110 to 20 seats over what he otherwise might lose.

Unmarrieds healthiest of all Americans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Married folks usually are healthier than the formerly married, but healthiest of all are those who never wed, according to the government's first statistical study on the relationship of marriage to illness.

"These over-all measures of health status indicate that married persons had fewer health problems than formerly married persons," said the National Center for Health Statistics.

Healthiest of all are persons who never married, usually younger than those in the other two groups. But married persons were least likely to be institutionalized for care in nursing homes or mental hospitals, the report said.

Formerly married persons—widowed, separated, divorced—were most likely to be admitted to places providing care for the mentally ill, it said, and the never-married were most likely to stand up in nursing homes—probably because there is nobody with whom to share that infirmities of age.

This was the government's first such study. Little documentation has been available on the relationship of marital status to health. The report covers persons aged 17 and older and is based on a continuing national health interview survey by the Census Bureau.

New trial for Patty?

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Attorney F. Lee Bailey plans to file a motion for a new trial for newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

After meeting with his client in the federal jail here, Bailey said Friday the request would be based upon a defense contention the government withheld exculpatory evidence—evidence tending to show innocence—that would have aided Miss Hearst, 22.

She was placed in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in San Diego for a 90-day psychiatric test after U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, who died Monday, provisionally sentenced her to 35 years in prison for her part in the robbery of a San Francisco bank in 1974.

Carter had said he would modify the sentence after the test.

Top government posts hard to fill

BY THOMAS P. SOUTHWICK

Congressional Quarterly WASHINGTON — Whoever takes the oath as President next January will have plenty of important jobs to offer at salaries ranging up to $63,000.

But chances are there won't be any stampede for the jobs. Finding qualified takers for top government posts has become increasingly difficult because of a widening gap between federal salaries and wages in the private sector and state government.

High-level federal executives have had only one pay raise in the last six years, and that — a 5 per cent boost in October 1975 — did not offset even that year's inflation of 6.5 per cent.

The wage gap has grown to the point where, according to a study by the Senate Select Committee on Governmental Organization, it is inadequate to persuade businessmen, academics and state officials to take the pay cuts at a Washington job, in many cases, require.

Rep. David N. Henderson (D-N.C.), chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, says that the pay gap has become "a very serious problem and will get increasingly tough until some action is taken."

But several political factors have combined to make such action difficult. One is the near impossibility of an election-year year. Widespread anti-Washington feeling among the voters has made it hard for members of Congress to convince their constituents that the nation's highest paid bureaucrats deserve a raise.

But various studies show that healthy increases would be justified. The Congressional General Accounting Office (GAO) said last year that the $60,000 salary of a cabinet officer in 1969 will have been eroded to a purchasing power of only $37,000 by 1977.

At the same time, pay in the private sector escalated rapidly. Between 1969 and 1977, GAO estimates, pay for top-level managers in private industry will have increased by 60 per cent; salaries in state government have skyrocketed as well.

Daniel T. Kingsley, who headed the White House personnel office from 1971 to 1974, says that "the impact of the pay differential gets more dramatic everyday" and that it has become a "major factor" in preventing people from coming to Washington.

Kingsley's observation has been echoed by a variety of commissions that have studied the pay gap in recent years. The President's Panel on Federal Compensation, headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, reported in December that "increases in the executive level salaries are necessary to ensure that grossly inadequate pay will not be a bar to the government's ability to recruit top quality talent."

Last year President Ford told the Congress that "several dozen of the government's top posts are unfilled at this time simply because many of the executives we want cannot in fairness to their families accept the huge out-of-compensation that would be required."

The same complaint, executive recently turned down a Cabinet-level position because his alimony payments alone exceeded the salary he would have earned with the federal government. He estimated that pay for Cabinet officers, now $63,000 a year, should be raised to $150,000 and that compensation for other top-level executives should be increased accordingly.

Pay for high government officials can be increased by two methods: 1) the annual cost-of-living increase and 2) through the so-called Quadrennial Commission, which meets every four years to review and recommend changes in federal salaries.

But both these routes have several possible detours. In 1974 the Senate overwhelmingly rejected a pay increase recommendation issued by the Quadrennial Commission's report. And, during five out of the last six years, the President has asked for and received from Congress permission to reduce or defer the annual cost-of-living pay hikes.

The difficultly Congress and the President have in increasing pay for federal executives is compounded by the fact that these salaries are tied to pay for members of Congress, and the lawmakers are reluctant to vote themselves raises in times of economic difficulty for their constituents.

But the overriding reason for the failure to increase pay substantially during the last few years is the nearly universal lack of public sympathy for the plight of federal bureaucrats who make between $37,000 and $63,000 a year. Rep. Gerry E. Studds, a second-term Democrat from Massachusetts who voted against the 5 per cent pay raise last year, says he has encountered "downright bitterness" among his constituents about the raise.

"It's tough for the average guy to understand that you can't back it on $40,000 a year," Studds said. "It positions in private industry pay more than that, then most people think that's wrong, too."

Has Andrus walked into propeller?

Idahoans aren't accustomed to seeing Cecil Andrus on the defensive. The popular Democratic governor doesn't make many political mistakes. At the close of the Democratic State Convention however, Gov. Andrus appears to be on the run over the controversial purchase of a private airplane for the state.

Republicans have attacked the plane with a vengeance. They say the $169,000 spent on the plane could be better used to aid flood victims of the Teton Dam disaster.

They say Andrus doesn't have the authority to unilaterally buy an airplane.

The governor usually is adept at deflecting partisan attacks. But this time he's absorbing the punches like Joe Frazier against George Foreman. About the best Andrus has done is say the plane will facilitate shuffling of papers back and forth between flood-ravaged Eastern Idaho and Boise.

Idaho spent $169,000 for a flying paper shuffler? Taxpayers need more justification than that for a plane.

Criticism of the new plane has mounted almost daily. Most recently, the chairman of the transportation committee in the Idaho legislature requested Attorney General Wayne Kidwell inquire into the legality of the purchase of the plane.

Meanwhile, the governor and his aides have been awfully slow putting together a good defense of the purchase.

Andrus claims the plane will be a money saver. He cites the $400 per hour operating cost of National Guard planes versus the $75 per-hour cost of flying the new state plane.

But that's hardly a justification. Does the $75 per hour figure for the state airplane include maintenance costs of the new craft? Does the $75 per hour figure include hangar costs?

National Guard planes carry more passengers than the tiny Navajo. What happens when a dozen state officials want to fly somewhere? Does the state then use both its new plane and the National Guard plane?

Perhaps most unsettling, Andrus and the executives of other state agencies who supposedly will use the new plane still haven't come up with specific figures on how much flying time will be logged on the Navajo Chieftan.

Will the plane make 10 trips a year or 100? If the new state toy sits on the ground all but one day a week, those few trips a year will cost quite a bit more than $75 an hour.

A budget analyst from the governor's own staff has added one more embarrassing note to the airplane affair.

One Andrus aide has defended purchase of the plane on grounds that the state legislature authorized the governor to buy a plane if a general fund surplus developed this year.

Not so, says an Andrus budget advisor. The bill authorizing the governor to spend surplus funds died in committee this spring.

So, the governor continues to take chops in the neck over purchase of a plane.

The abuse doesn't have to continue. All Andrus must do to blunt the Republican swirls is respond to some specific questions about his recent purchase.

Show Idaho how the plane will save money. Point out what agencies will use the plane and document how much the plane will be flown.

Show the taxpayer and the voter how a small state airplane can aid disaster victims in eastern Idaho.

Cite the legal grounds justifying purchase of the plane.

Of course the Republicans are flapping their wings over the purchase of the plane. They think they have caught the usually careful Gov. Andrus with his neck out.

Did they?

"There certainly aren't skeletons in your closet!"

Immunization questioned

GENEVA — A number of European public health specialists are seriously questioning the American plan to immunize almost the entire United States population with a new influenza vaccine.

They argue that any such program inevitably produces some adverse reactions, particularly in those under 16. While the percentage is small, when 200 million people are involved the number of such adversely affected becomes substantial.

The program, which is to cost $145 million, can therefore be justified, they say, only if the risk of a serious outbreak is substantial. No European government has considered it sufficiently so to undertake mass vaccination, although Britain has done so in the past.

The critics concede that initially the outbreak in January and February at Fort Dix, N.J., Army Base looked alarming. When throat-swab specimens from seven flu victims at the base were examined by the Center for Disease Control of the U.S. Public Health Service in Atlanta, four were found to carry a swine-type virus much like that thought to have caused the global epidemic, or pandemic, of 1968.

When throat-swab specimens from seven flu victims at the base were examined by the Center for Disease Control of the U.S. Public Health Service in Atlanta, four were found to carry a swine-type virus much like that thought to have caused the global epidemic, or pandemic, of 1968.

One of the four bearers of the virus at Fort Dix died. It is pointed out by the critics here, however, that despite a worldwide alert not one of the 96 influenza monitoring centers has reported a further appearance of this swine-type virus.

Furthermore, there appears to have been no spread in the United States. Throat-swab tests showed immune reactions indicative of past infection with the virus or something like it. They had not necessarily become ill.

According to Dr. W. Charles Cockburn, director of the Communicable Disease Division of the World Health Organization here, some virus strains are "spreaders" leading to an epidemic or even pandemic. Others are not.

"At the time," he said in a recent interview, "the Fort Dix strain looked like a spreader. In his view, it no longer does so."

Cockburn, a noted British virologist, took pains not to criticize the American plan. "I pointed out, however, that winter is approaching in the Southern Hemisphere and the flu season has already begun there."

Yet, he added that the flu centers in Australia, New Zealand and Singapore have not seen it. Instead, people are still suffering from the Victoria strain — so called because it was first detected in the Victoria region of Australia. It continues to be the prevalent form of flu throughout the world.

Reagan, Ford need each other to win in autumn

WASHINGTON — President Ford and Ronald Reagan have got themselves and the Republican Party "into such a pickle in the presidential election that maybe their best hope now is to have each other," a Democratic lobbyist might say.

This is not a happy thought for either side. They are engaged for the moment in a scramble for delegates and are cutting each other up, but if this goes on and if the polls mean anything, the Republican party will be the loser.

The New York Times-CBS-News polls, of Republican voters in California, Ohio, and New Jersey dramatize the GOP's problem. These polls indicate that about 35 per cent of Ford supporters will vote for Carter if the President is rejected at Kansas City, and that about the same percentage of Reagan supporters will desert their party if Reagan is nominated.

This may be a little misleading. In the end, party loyalty would probably do the defection rate, but even so, the Republicans, with less than 20 per cent of the registered voters of the country, obviously need all the Ford and Reagan supporters they can get.

In fact, the vice-presidency, if it weren't for the possibility of leading to the Presidency, is almost perfect for Reagan — decorative, theatrical, and not too much work. Besides, he would have more power to argue his conservative philosophy in Washington as vice president.

It is interesting that Ford has not ruled out a struggle for the presidential nomination, he has allowed his aides to put out TV propaganda suggesting that Reagan as president might get the country into a war over Panama or Rhodesia in Africa, while Reagan has attacked Ford and Kissinger "back" the other day, with the Republican Union, and has even suggested that the economic recovery is a temporary political fraud.

Separately, Ford and Reagan are in trouble against a Democratic Party that has been captured by Carter. The political and labor union leaders have their doubts about the former governor of Georgia, but they have been out of power for eight years, and will back him rather than Ford or Reagan.

But together, Ford and Reagan might have a chance. At least they would avoid a split in their minority party. They have the presidency, and they have the experience, age, and maybe Reagan could get the electoral votes of California, and maybe even of Texas, while Ford might hold Michigan and other parts of the Middle West.

For the moment it seems an unlikely combination, but no worse than that one. Ford, if he wins, could go to John Donnelly of Texas as his vice presidential choice. Reagan if he wins, could go to Elliot Richardson, who is always available, or somebody else, but unless Ford and Reagan supporters combine against the Democrats, the Republicans will be in serious trouble.

Would Reagan accept second place? The chances are that, if he lost the scramble for the uncommitted Republican delegates, that he would. He has done very well in the primaries, better than he expected against a President of his own party. He has clung obstinately to everything that's out of date, but he has a dedicated following, and in the vice presidency, he would have a better role in Washington than he ever had in Hollywood.

At the beginning of this election, the Republicans had the option of finding their young men and looking to the future, but they have an inflexible instinct for doing the worst thing, and they chose to go with men in their 60's.

The Democratic leaders, if they had had their own way, would probably have done the same thing, but Carter, the new boy, knocked them over, and is now putting together the party organization, the labor union leaders and the Democratic governors and mayors in a unified effort to recapture the White House.

This would be a problem even for a unified minority Republican party, but a divided GOP is a formidable force. Accordingly, a Ford-Reagan ticket may not be as unlikely or silly as it now seems.

Contingency plans drawn

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon and the State Department have drawn up "scavenging" contingency plans about what the United States may have to do if the Communists come to power in today's national elections in Italy.

Most government specialists and private U.S. investors doubt that the plans — at least the most contentious — will have to be put into effect.

Scenario One — A clear-cut Communist Party victory with more than 50 per cent of the vote. President Ford would give an immediate order to evacuate all U.S. atomic weapons, about 450 tons, that all U.S. atomic weapons, and all aircraft weapons, nuclear mines and anti-aircraft weapons — be removed from Italy within 90 days.

Scenario Two — A coalition government, headed by the Christian Democrats, but with tight control by the Communists and the Socialists. The United States would make no overt changes in policy or personnel but would keep a wary eye out for possible Communist infiltration of the armed forces.

California health system too cozy with politics?

O.N.Y. Times News Service
LOS ANGELES—While Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has been away running for President, a new controversy over California's troubled $100-million-a-year prepaid health program for the poor is emerging as his administration's thorniest management problem and a potential source of political embarrassment as well.

California's system of prepaid health care for the poor was created during Gov. Ronald Reagan's administration as an alternative to rising Medicaid costs. From its inception, it has been plagued with charges of misuse, abuse and corruption. The system has been labeled a scandal of major proportions by both state and federal investigators, and though there were several efforts to improve the situation in the late Reagan years, it is clear that the program was scandal-ridden when Brown took office in January 1975.

Now, 16 months later, critics of Brown, many of whom were his supporters in the gubernatorial race, not only charge that his administration has done little to correct the abuses in the program, but also suggest that he has succumbed to political pressure from the prepaid health care industry.

At the center of the current controversy is the dismissal last April of Thomas H. Moore, a 42-year-old acting deputy director of the Department of Health who many in the field said was the only man making headway in regulating the private health programs.

Moore was dismissed shortly after he requested help from the Federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare in investigating charges of irregularities in the operations of Omni-Rx Health Care, Inc., a nonprofit organization in Hawthorne, Calif.—and its profit making management group, Omni-Rx Health Systems, Inc.

In addition to Moore's dismissal, the State's Department of Health disbanded and transferred the members of the investigative unit that had received and were investigating the allegations about Omni-Rx.

The Omni-Rx organization is one of 25 private contractors who supply prepaid health care for nearly a quarter of a million of California's poorest citizens.

Omni-Rx's program, what has made the Omni-Rx case most significant, however, is that it had been the company most deeply embroiled in a controversy with Moore and his staff.

Moore had significant connections in California's Democratic politics.

The profit-making arm of Omni-Rx, for instance, has retained on two occasions the legal services of Charles T. Mann, the Democratic state chairman in California State Assembly, as well as Attorney and Mervyn Dymally, lieutenant governor.

Omni-Rx employs as its chief of marketing William Burke, from the Los Angeles area. Burke is a friend and former business associate of Dymally in another private health care operation.

Moore said in an interview that he believed he had been dismissed because of the political influence brought to bear on Brown and health department officials.

In the five months he served as acting deputy director, Moore points out, he enforced regulations that resulted in some 23 of the 50 state contractors being dropped from the list of the prepaid health care business or to have their contracts renewed because they could not meet state standards.

Others familiar with the prepaid health field share Moore's opinion.

David F. Chavkin, a San Francisco-based lawyer with the neighborhood legal assistance foundation, said Moore was a member of the panel that studied the prepaid health plan at the beginning of the Brown administration, said in an interview that he believed Moore had been dismissed because Brown had entered "political deals" with opponents of Moore's investigation.

Dr. Paul O'Rourke, a medical doctor in charge of research for the California Senate and a member of a panel that studied California's Health Department, said in an interview: "My diagnosis is that (Moore) was removed by political pressure exerted by legislators and themselves were under pressure from the prepaid health plans (private contractors). The director of health responded to pressure."

Brown, on the other hand, asked about the case of a national television panel program, said that Moore had been dismissed for being "incompetent."

Dr. Jerome Lackner, the director of the Department of Health, a Brown appointee and the man who ordered Moore's dismissal, gave another reason for the dismissal. He said in an interview that Moore "rubbed people the wrong way," particularly members of the state legislature and members of the prepaid health plan industry, and that he had received many complaints about Moore.

But Lackner added, he also regarded Moore as "brilliant" and had offered him an advisory position on his own staff at the same salary Moore had been receiving as acting deputy director of health, $24,000 a year.

The California prepaid health program, the Omni-Rx organization and the Moore case are under different investigations and even though Moore was dismissed—the Federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare did open a criminal investigation of the allegations he had raised about Omni-Rx.

According to federal and state officials this investigation will delve into whether there had been improper political pressure.

Moore's dismissal, however, was not the result of an investigation and to cause his removal from state government.

Meanwhile, HEW has stepped up the opening of a complete audit of California's management of the prepaid health system full of whose costs are paid by the federal government. The United States Senate's permanent investigation subcommittee and its Finance Committee also are investigating the dismissal and the health program.

The top management of Omni-Rx, Dr. Edward J. Moore, the president, Mervyn Newell, the vice president, and Burke denied in an interview with The New York Times that they had brought improper pressure to get Moore dismissed. They did acknowledge that they complained on numerous occasions to several state and federal officials about Moore's activities.

Omni-Rx officials said that Moore had opened an investigation of their company to punish them because they opposed his plan to obtain a $5.5 million federal grant for a site-making study that would use a Sacramento health plan as its model.

They charged in the interview that Moore showed "favoritism" in selecting the Sacramento organization to receive the federal pilot money and that they believed his father was associated with a subcontractor of the plan and would profit from the federal grant. Moore said in an interview that his father would not profit, and in fact was employed by a competitor of the company that got the grant.

The Omni-Rx officials said that they had proved to the state's satisfaction that the bulk of Moore's charges about the organization were baseless and that they expected soon a complete exoneration from the state health department.

Moore's dismissal is the latest episode in California's unhappy five-year experience with prepaid health plans for the poor. Under a 1971 law, California began to phase out the state's prepaid health plans (the federal government calls them "health maintenance organizations") as an alternative to the skyrocketing cost of C-4-Service medical care for the poor under the state's Medicaid program.

Prepaid health care means that a private contractor is paid a fee each month to provide total health care for a member of his plan. The fee is based on the number of members healthy because the fee is paid whether health services are provided or not and does not increase if the patient becomes ill.

In order to keep costs down and profits up, many of the health plans under state contract selected their segment of the welfare population, thus leaving those most in need of medical care still under the old C-4-Service plan.

Unscrupulous plan managers, moreover, devised ways to "disenroll," that is, force out plan members who became ill and appeared about to be costly to the medical facilities. These methods include keeping sick people waiting for care until they were too ill to be hospitalized and administering tranquilizers to make patients "feel better" without treating their real problems.

When welfare members of these plans decided to disenroll and return to fee-for-service medical care, the plan managers often held up the disenrollment papers for as much as six months while continuing to collect the monthly fee from the state. The welfare recipients, therefore, were unable to get medical care either under fee-for-service or the prepaid plan, and were left in a medical limbo.

In March, 1975, a Senate investigation of the permanent health care program in investigations gave this assessment of the California program at a public hearing in Washington: "By the end of 1974, there were 10 million of 54 plans with 252,000 enrollees. The state health department paid these plans $81.6 million, half of which came from federal government.

"Instead of enrolling half the state's welfare population, the P.H.P.'s enrolled only 10 percent. Instead of improving the health care services for the poor, the poor may have actually suffered from the program."

When he took office, Brown as an immediate action, the scandal in the prepaid health program.

KABC, the National Broadcasting Co. affiliate here, produced a documentary on the crisis in January, 1975, and a special investigative force of lawyers headed by Robert G. Gritz, a former acting director of the health department, gave him a half-inch thick report on abuses and corruption.

Some of the incidents unearthed by the lawyers were immediately turned over to the state attorney general, a Republican elected separately from the Brown administration, but there have been no prosecutions to date.

G. Gritz, hired Steven Passin, an official of the American Medical Association in Chicago, to come to California and reform the P.H.P. program. Passin, 29, was not an expert on prepaid health care but was regarded as knowledgeable in the general medical field.

Passin was brought to the health department as a consultant to Passin.

Gritz said Brown had refused to "take the easy way out" and away with the prepaid plans and instead had showed "great courage" in ordering the department to create workable reforms.

In June, 1975, the Brown administration offered a reform package designed to give consumers control over most of the plans, to penalize doctors who worked in both prepaid and fee-for-service systems, impose a stringent controls over record-keeping and financial disclosure and to remove some small contractors altogether.

Almost all the private contractors opposed the reforms and through court challenges and protests, stalled off their adoption.

Passin was removed from his job in November, and another assignment in the health department. Moore took over the assignment in November and promised to have the reforms revised.

Moore said he believed two of his efforts had brought him under the most heavy political attack. One, he said, was enforcing regulations on contract renewals that needed out marketing private contractors. The other was trying to get a federal grant to provide information for a rate basis for prepaid care.

Writer claims 'shoe pinches'

Editor, Times-News:
 I have been asked to write you one more letter concerning the American Falls Dam.

It appears I am finally getting under the skin of my "well-to-do" opponents, who now make wisecracks over my articles at their board meetings.

However I realize that for a lot of them, their bread and butter lies in the rebuilding of the American Falls Dam regardless of the predicament it puts their patrons, the farmers, in.

I really feel that I now have accomplished my purpose in exposing them for what they really are and the shoe is beginning to pinch where it should.

It has never been my goal in life to win friends and influence people, however, the name calling will help to wake up the farmers to their economic dangers in the building of the dam, it has been a game well played.

It has been disappointing to find how uncaring the farmers are whose increase in water rates are to be nominal and whose land has such high production, to the plight of their cousins, the farmers with marginal land and a much higher increase in the cost of their water.

But that has always been the farmers' downfall, "untilted we stand, divided we fall," and until they do unite and care for each other's problems they will never gain their place in the sun, as we the farmers are definitely in the great minority.

Our city cousins, for the most part, regard us only as a means to swell their own incomes with the increased prices they receive on all the elements required by us in the production of food at the cheapest possible way, by downgrading our products in every conceivable manner.

We are considered a class of people who should be content only with our lifestyle and not need the luxuries they consider their necessities. They have their unions and cost of living raises to help them out.

Until the farmers unite, they will always be on the bottom of the heap.

Naming church termed unfair

Editor, Times-News:
 No church approves of wrongdoing by its members, but it always interests me as to why, when a member of the Mormon Church does something wrong, the press is always so quick to point out that he or she is a Mormon.

Have you ever printed that Cong. Wayne Hays belongs to a particular church, or what church—Cong. Brown of Texas belongs to Sen. Gravel of Alaska?

During the Watergate scandal no one ever pointed out what church any of the participants belonged to except in two instances when members of the Mormon church were accused. Isn't this discrimination in the greatest sense?

Idaho: A Mouse That Roared?

Church or Andrus could join Carter

TWIN FALLS — When it comes to national politics, two Idaho traditionally packs about as much weight as the Ducty of Grand Fenwick.

But 1976 may be different. Idaho could be on the verge of becoming the new Mouse That Roared in the Democratic Party.

A once-in-a-lifetime combination of political chemistry has popped Sen. Frank Church and Gov. Cecil Andrus into the fast waters of presidential politics.

Idaho's two golden boy Democrats appear near the top of the list of most wanted advisors in a Jimmy Carter administration.

Church's stock as a possible Vice Presidential partner on the 1976 Democratic ticket is well known.

Also coming in fast in the Carter camp is Gov. Andrus, not as a Vice Presidential candidate but as a possible Secretary of the Interior.

At the State Democratic Convention this week Carter's Idaho campaign chairman admitted Andrus "probably will be on the final list for consideration as Secretary of the Interior."

Of course, Layton Water quickly denied anybody very high in the Carter campaign has talked to Andrus about the cabinet post.

"But in his next breath Walker conceded Andrus knows Carter better than anybody in Idaho."

"And," Walker smiled, "it's very likely somebody from the West will be the new Secretary of Interior if Carter is elected."

Add it up.

Andrus, although a supporter of Church's late presidential bid, remains a close personal friend of Carter.

Idaho's governor is a staunch environmentalist, as politicians go, and shares a campaign style similar to the Georgian.

Secretaries of Interior usually are westerners. Kleppe, from South Dakota, Hathaway from Wyoming, Hodel from Alaska.

Why not Andrus from Idaho? He's a solid gold favorite.

There's a catch in this scenario, spelled P-R-B. Church's stock as a possible Secretary of Interior is well known.

When you add up Frank Church and Cecil Andrus you get one too many Idahoans in Carter's corner.

Whatever political portions finally are parceled out Idaho's slate won't include both a Vice President and a Secretary of the Interior.

Maybe Georgia will land two or three advisors in the White House but not Idaho.

Aides to Church, Andrus, and Carter sound like a men's trio when asked the likelihood of both Church and Andrus slipping into the top drawer of the Carter Administration.

"No, no, no," they chime in three part harmony.

At the moment, only Church is doing much serious talking about teaming up with Carter.

This very weekend Church aides met with Carter organizers to informally discuss the vice presidency.

National columnist Jack Anderson and Newsweek magazine report Church now is one of three top candidates for active consideration as a running mate with Carter.

And Don Watkins, Church's Washington Press Secretary characterizes Church's attitude on the Vice Presidential slot saying, "He sure as hell ain't fighting it."

Church looks as tallmored for the VP slot as Andrus does for Secretary of Interior.

Idaho's Senator whipped Carter in the western primaries.

Church is strong in foreign policy, an area where Carter is weak.

The Bolsen has friends in organized labor and the industrial northeast.

Frank Church is Mr. Clean. And hasn't called Carter any bad names.

Which Idaho by actually does get a shot at the top Administration job may well be decided by the Republicans.

To hear Carter's Idaho chairman Walker explain it, if Ronald Reagan gets the GOP nomination, Church's value as a Vice Presidential candidate shoots up.

Reagan would put Carter in a hole out West. Church, with proven strength in the West, could hold Carter out of that hole.

Then the President Ford looks like he is the nominee, then the Vice Presidential chores may go to Walter Mondale or John Glenn.

Carter must choose his Vice President before the Republican convention which muddies the water even more.

If Church isn't VP, he could be tagged for Henry Kissinger's job at State. Or he could go back to the Senate, clearing the way for Andrus' appointment.

But Andrus might turn down the offer because his wife reportedly hates the thought of living in Washington D. C.

In other words it's all just fun and games right now.

But the governor's press secretary Chris Carlson made sure no patch was nailed shut on the door to the Secretary of Interior's office.

"If a President makes an offer you've got to give in a great deal of haste," Carlson said on the lawn of the College of Southern Idaho campus.

If either Andrus or Church does join the chosen few in a Carter Administration, the queen of Grand Fenwick would be proud.

Accept energy sources we have, writer urges

Editor, Times-News:
 In reply to a letter from a reader published in the Times-News of June 13, I would like to make a few points to clarify my position.

In his letter the gentleman advocated "wind power" and solar energy in favor of nuclear power plants to generate power. The city of New York requires an absolute minimum of 20,000 megawatts per day. How do you windmills alone never mind the rest of the United States? Where do you put that many windmills? How much would they cost? What happens when the wind stops blowing?

True, New York City used more power than the whole state of Idaho—but without the manufactured goods of the industrial areas the rural areas would be back to the horse and plow. No offense to horse lovers, I like them, too. But since we now have 220 million people in the United States a lot of us would need to eat.

As far as solar energy goes, does the gentleman have solar power in his home? I'll bet he doesn't. Should we tear down every building in America and reconstruct with solar energy systems? Bah, humbug!

Perhaps the gentleman should build solar energy screens instead of nuclear and fossil fueled generating stations? Fine, only where do we find the tens of thousands of square miles of empty space to build these screens? How do we store the energy for times when there are extended periods of cloud cover? How do we windmills work? Do you know? Who's backyard are we going to build all these windmills and solar screens in? Not mine I hope. I'd rather have an nice old fashioned power line.

Does the gentleman know how much energy it takes to build a car? He would a long time to build the car he would drive. He would a long time to build the car he would drive. He would a long time to build the car he would drive. He would a long time to build the car he would drive.

Some day solar energy will be in wide spread use in the world but only after researchers such as the "Bürcaraerts" in the government, and the various utilities, inventors, perfect the system. In the meantime, we'll have to muddle along with what we've got.

It should be obvious to everyone that there is only a limited amount of fossil fuel in the ground—some day it will be gone. What then? Red sands on the sun? They do exist. If we could harness the sun, when people called the steam engine an infernal machine, cars would never replace the horse, and the Wright brothers were wrong. Then as now, people were afraid of what they didn't understand.

The US Navy has been using nuclear generators for more than 20 years without mishap to ship or crew. Nuclear plants are in existence in almost every industrialized country in the world. They are a fact of life, they work.

There will always be some people who fear the future, but the future is now. We need cars, cars, radios, TV's, electric ranges and heaters and everything made with electric power, we have to accept the energy sources we have, not ones we wish we had.

Teton recalls other boners

Editor, Times-News:
 Mudville! There is no Joy in Mudville. Well, thanks to the Bureau of Reclamation, there are plenty of Mudvilles in eastern Idaho, and definitely no Joy. In making a quick recheck of the past and ensuing disasters, it is obvious that the BofR and the Army Corps of Engineers have struck out big and often lately.

Especially lately.

Happy City, S. D., 1929—failure to reinforce Canyon Dam caused over 20 fatalities. Mar. 27, 1947. Allowed a slag heap to fall into a dam on Buffalo Creek — total fatalities unknown, buried under the mud. Lower San Fernando Dam, February 1971 — earthquake, Baldwin Hills Reservoir, 1963 — Short-sightedness in preventing depletion of water table, causing excessive pressure — great loss of property and fatalities.

Are there any precedents for building a dam on an improper foundation, or is the Teton Dam unique? No, not at all, in 1928 the St. Francis Dam in California, a Hoover-like concrete structure, disintegrated and massed any and all possible eyewitnesses. Later investigation found that it was too rigid a dam for the porous strata it was built upon. Stupidity!

The granddaddy of all dam-caused floods, the destruction of which killed over 100 people in 1889, was caused by rich men indifferent to those who lived below their worn-out old dam. Federal regulations were enacted on dam construction and maintenance which for many years seemed to prevent other such atrocities, but in this modern, gone-to-the-moon-day and age, the dam again has failed.

Now it's time to take a hard look at the American Falls Dam, which could do South-Central Idaho what the Teton Dam did to Eastern Idaho.

If it needs replacing, it should be replaced, but not with good dam. An expensive dam, an extravagant dam. The $200,000,000 that the federal government is spending for disaster relief would have built two outstanding dams. I think the citizens of South Central Idaho would rather the funds would be used in the construction of "pay me later" And is Twin Falls flood proof? Don't bet on it.

Prayer for today

You did create Adam first, God. The Bible tells us so. Of course that doesn't mean you think men are more important, but it was nice to have someone here to take care of Eve when she arrived.

It has been nice ever since to have men to protect, the homes and families.

Father's Day is a good time to honor all the men who work at that job.

Please bless the fathers who are working with you today. Help them not to be discouraged by their efforts to guide their children. And help them to look to you for help. — Uelita Martin.

SWEDEN'S King Carl Gustaf wed German commoner Christian Dior in a Cinderella ceremony Saturday. The couple met in the 1972 Olympics where the bride was Gustaf's personal hostess. (UPI)

Newlyweds

Royal wedding unites King and commoner

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — King Carl XVI Gustaf made Silvia Sommerlath of West Germany his queen Saturday in a Cinderella wedding with the commoner who stole his heart at the 1972 Olympics. It was a dream-come-true romance for the couple which met when Silvia was assigned as Carl Gustaf's personal hostess at the Munich Olympics. As the King said later, "It just went click... It was love at first sight. Carl Gustaf and Queen Silvia were leaving for a two-week safari honeymoon in Kenya shortly after the wedding luncheon. The glittering royal ceremony was the first wedding of a Swedish monarch since 1797 and took place before 1,400 mostly dignitary guests. "Yes," said the proud King and then his queen, when asked by Swedish Lutheran Archbishop Olof Sundby if they would take each other in holy wedlock, "for better or worse..."

"I pronounce you wed," said Sundby, and the blushing bride turned to her husband and smiled brightly. They did not kiss and there were no tears. Then the new queen and Carl Gustaf walked up the aisle of the 700-year-old Great Church hand-in-hand. Preceding the royal couple were two flower children who walked so slowly that the King had to keep prodding them to walk faster. The bride wore a simple but elegant white satin wedding gown from Dior of Paris and trailed a 10-foot long train made from velvet and floral heirloom lace. On her head she wore a tiara in red gold with emeralds and pearls which belonged to the late Princess Sibylla, the King's mother, and carried a bouquet of jasmines and orchids. The King was dressed in his admiral's uniform with one decoration around his neck and two grand stars.

Alcoholics blast Rand report

United Press International. It's a risky thought, the suggestion that some recovered alcoholics may be able to drink "socially," but alcoholics and treatment experts say it doesn't work — and leads to disastrous drinking, even death. Recovered alcoholics, treatment leaders and doctors interviewed across the country by United Press International lambasted a Rand Corporation "Think Tank" study which said, "We must entertain the possibility of normal drinking for some alcoholics." Alcoholics Anonymous has a tradition of avoiding controversy but a spokesman in New York said, "Some people will now have an excuse not to seek treatment and a few may die."

Television personality Garry Moore said it's great to make tests but the results are indefinite and "it will damn near be certain death for a lot of people who read the report and went back to drinking." A long list of critics said alcoholism is a disease, an alcoholic must stop drinking entirely or arrest it and he must live a new life of sobriety. "One Day at a Time" the rest of his life — aware that even one drink will tumble him back where he started. The Rand report from Santa Monica, Calif., June 9, said there is no "well-which" alcoholics might safely drink and in "no way" does it recommend recovered alcoholics resume drinking, especially anyone with "irreversible physical complications due to alcohol."

But it said a study of 1,340 treated alcoholics who returned to "normal drinking" had no higher rate of relapse return to uncontrolled drinking than those who abstained. Dr. William Madsen, Santa Barbara anthropologist, said, "They've been trying to teach alcoholics to drink for 300 years. It won't work." The National Council on Alcoholism and the American Medical Association's Committee on Alcoholism said simply in a joint statement: "Abstinence from alcohol is necessary for recovery from the disease of alcoholism." Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., a recovered alcoholic, said perhaps the study "confused alcoholics with heavy drinkers without recognizing the difference: a heavy drinker's drinking can be controlled but the only way alcoholism can be cured is through abstinence."

Dr. Nicholas Pace, assistant professor at the New York school of Medicine, said two of his patients, a corporate executive and a professional woman, have resumed drinking since the Rand report came out and "it upsets me like hell." "This is the worst thing that can happen to an alcoholic. Now it's only a little wine or beer. Later it will be more and harder stuff. I've never seen an alcoholic be able to drink socially."

Pace said the executive's liver is "markedly sensitive to alcohol." "You can't teach a sick liver to drink again," he said. Dr. Daniel J. Anderson, head of Hazelden, a pioneer treatment center near Center City, Minn., said it would be "almost criminal to look upon this unreplicated study as representative of typical alcoholic behavior following treatment."

Dr. Frank Herzlin, medical director of Freeport Hospital on Long Island, said there is an "unbelievable increase in relapses when such stories come out" and those who try it "inevitably fall on their faces." Dr. Barbara Mc Crady, psychologist at Butler Hospital in Providence, R.I., said she's had a few young patients who appeared to be alcoholics who resumed "social drinking" but called them "rare." Actress Jan Clayton said the Rand report could cause a "terrible setback" for alcoholics "but there may be a good side to it." "At least it's caused people to talk more about alcoholism," she said, "and that's a plus."

Unhappy divorce

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Cecil Schnautz and his wife have been married for 23 years but Mrs. Schnautz needs nursing home care, and the only way she can get it is through divorce. "Of course I'm opposed to it, but what else am I going to do?" said Schnautz, 57, a printer. "If that's what it takes to get her good care, then that's what I'm going to do." "But I'll tell you this; it's a sorry situation."

Schnautz is too poor to pay his wife's nursing home expenses, but by welfare eligibility standards, he makes too much money to qualify for any state assistance. "What's so strange is that this is what the welfare department told us to do. This is the only way they said they could help us," Schnautz said. But the couple has run into a legal tangle. Friday, State District Judge Tom Blackwell refused to grant the uncontested divorce for the reasons listed in the divorce petition.

Rent-a-kid, anyone?

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — In the first warm days of summer, a young person's fancy turns to thoughts of extra spending money. The Twin Cities' RENT-A-Kid program is the answer. The program, which originated in Atlanta in 1972 and has been undertaken in Chicago and Aurora, Ill., is reportedly funded in Minneapolis and St. Paul by a bank but run by the YMCA. "They give us completely free rein to run the YMCA way," said Mary Jackson, program director. In its fourth year in the Twin Cities, 750 have signed up for the Rent-A-Kid program this summer. So far, jobs have been found for 300. "Actually, there are 520 jobs available," Miss Jackson said, "but I haven't been able to match them all up." The sponsor, First Bank System, pointed out that every summer 35,000 teenagers get out of school in the metropolitan area, and many of them want work and can't find it. "Every summer thousands of home owners and businessmen need part-time help, and don't know where to find it. All of which results in an unfortunate waste of energy." The kids are willing to take on almost anything.

Deckie Rice elected top Demo

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Delegates to the 1976 state Democratic Convention here re-elected Deckie Rice, Idaho Falls, as state chairman over her opponent Pat Carr, Boise.

Mrs. Rice who has served the past year and one-half as state chairperson won over her challenger by a three to one margin in Friday voting.

Delegates also elected T. Lester Purce, Pocatello mayor as vice chairman, and Paul Buser, Ada County, as treasurer. The national committee posts, usually hotly contested were filled when unanimous ballots were cast for the two unopposed candidates.

Carolyn Selander, Idaho Falls, was re-elected national committeewoman and John Chapman, Boise, was elected national committeeman. He succeeds Jim Donat, Kelchum, who did not seek reelection.

An executive committee, which will carry on party business between the biennial conventions, is comprised of four directors from each of the two Idaho Congressional Districts. Members in the Second District include Di Bowler, Bliss; Don Evans, Pocatello; Angle Metzger, Pocatello and Carol Reicher, Idaho Falls.

From the First District, directors are Bob Brown, Coeur d'Alene; Cleason English, Wallace; Al Renyer, Moscow, and Lynda Dameron, Caldwell.

The four names which will appear on the November presidential ballot as Idaho's electoral college include Stephen Carter, Twin Falls; Gary Gould, Pocatello; Glen McFarland, Clark Fork, and Sue Reentz, Boise. Delegates denounced in a debate over an amnesty resolution Friday and returned "after lunch" to table the resolution indefinitely. The resolution called for pardon of persons either accused of or convicted of selective service violations because of opposition to the Vietnam War.

In presenting the resolution Cy Young, resolution committee chairman, said in the Bicentennial year the basic concepts of mercy, justice and charity should be observed.

Those opposing the resolution called it "a slap in the face" for those servicemen who did serve and respectivity to those who lost their lives or suffered injury.

Another resolution which drew fire from some of the delegates called for support of U.S. Sen. Church in his action to obtain a commitment of full responsibility for the Teton Dam disaster from the Federal Government.

Sue Reentz, Boise, told the convention many of the delegates in attendance Thursday fought through the courts and in public campaigns, to stop construction of the dam. She charged no state administrative officials came to the aid of the opponents to tell the government the dam should not be built in Idaho.

It was later pointed out by one delegate that then attorney general Tony Horn had assisted the opposition effort. Mrs. Reentz said the resolution was not appropriate saying the state, too, must share the blame. The resolution was returned to committee for rewording and reconsideration.

Earlier a resolution pledging support to Gov. Andrus in fixing the responsibility and calling for full restitution to flood victims, passed by a majority vote.

In other resolutions, Democratic convention called for revision of the party handbook to assist precinct committee members and other officials in operating party business; called for legislative action reappropriation the precincts of the state's counties on a population basis, and the principal of a one-man-one-vote basis.

Other resolutions included one which failed. It called for precinct caucuses as the initial step in delegate selection. Delegates adopted another urging the Idaho Legislature to memorialize the U.S. Congress to increase social security benefits on a cost of living basis twice a year rather than yearly to keep income more current, and others expressing appreciation to convention committees, Twin Falls county Democrats and the community.

The delegates commended U.S. Sen. Frank Church for his efforts in "bringing before the American Electorate a new and noteworthy level of Presidential dialogue."

Delegates urged beef imports be held strictly within their quotas as required by law and voiced objection to "economic embargoes forced upon the American farmer". Democrats returned to committee a resolution declaring if Idaho potatoes cannot remain "Idaho" potatoes they be withdrawn from the commodity exchange. Delegates urged the Potato Growers of Idaho to pool their resources to determine their preference as to the advisability of remaining on the futures board.

Delegates called on the U.S. Congress to extend Medicare to include dental care, hearing aids, prescriptions, and payment for a greater portion of medical and hospital costs.

ADDRESSING AN ESTIMATE 450 Idaho Democrats Gov. Cecil Andrus pledged support for "Sunset laws" in the next session of the Idaho legislature. The governor also urged Idahoans to elect Democratic Congressional candidates to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Talking to Demos

American Party nominates a millionaire

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Tennessee millionaire Thomas Jefferson Anderson beat out five other candidates on the first ballot to win the American Party's 1976 presidential nomination Friday night.

The party planned to choose a vice presidential nominee today.

Anderson, a syndicated newspaper columnist and the current chairman of the third party, captured 160 of the 259 delegate votes.

"I will give you my all and do everything I know how to get my party in the White House," the 65-year-old candidate told the 300 delegates and visitors attending the convention in the Salt Palace.

Anderson, who operates the "American Way Features" newspaper syndicate and a 4,300-acre ranch in Pigeon Forge, Tenn., was the party's vice presidential candidate in 1972, running on a ticket headed by California Congressman John Schmitz.

He easily defeated five other hopefuls, including Arizona tax protestor Marvin Cooley, who could not attend the convention because he is serving a federal prison term for income tax evasion.

William "Bill" B. Tolson, former attorney from Arizona, finished second with 100 votes.

Peter G. K. Economist from New York, had 29 and two-thirds votes. Cecil Moore, a minister and former barber from Macon, Ga., captured 11 and two-thirds ballots. Cooley had 10 votes and Larry Topham, a private detective from Salt Lake City, finished with five.

David Stollard, Kansas state party chairman, withdrew from the race prior to the balloting.

The convention drew delegates from 32 states and some chose to break their allotted votes into fractions so more people could attend.

Anderson accepted the nomination in a speech filled with one liners which summarized the ultra-conservative politics of the group and drew hoots of laughter.

"I don't believe in abortion and think its murder," he said. "But Henry Kissinger makes me believe birth control should be made retroactive."

"He's much worse than Benedict Arnold. Arnold was in favor of the mother country. Kissinger is in favor of our enemies," the candidate said.

Anderson also declared: "George Washington was the only president who didn't try to blame his troubles on the previous administration."

Looting plagues Rexburg

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — Looting has become such a threat in the Teton Dam disaster area that a nightly curfew has been imposed in Madison County to curb the problem.

A 10:30 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. nightly curfew is being enforced by law enforcement officials in the county hardest hit by the flood, County Commission Leo Smith said.

Smith said several persons have been arrested for looting in the Madison County area. Some of those arrested have been local residents but the majority have been persons from outside the disaster area.

The curfew applies to all residents and visitors in Madison County except those with special passes.

Passholders include construction personnel, supervisory groups, and other authorized by officials at the Army Reserve Army in Rexburg.

The curfew is in effect until further notice.

Gunman goes berserk

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (UPI) — A man with a history of mental disturbance was killed Friday night after he burst into the Bonneville County Sheriff's office and opened gunfire on employees inside.

Bonneville County Sheriff Blaine Skinner said Dennis Kay Labrum, 27, Ammon, fired on three sheriff's deputies with a 12-gauge shotgun about 10 p.m. Friday. Deputies returned fire and Labrum was shot.

Ambassadors return

THE BODIES of two American diplomats assassinated in Lebanon arrive at Andrews AFB, Md., Saturday. President Ford was on hand to receive the remains of Ambassador to Lebanon Francis Meloy and Economic Counselor Robert Waring. (UPI)

Two slain diplomats return to homeland

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Air Force jet returned the bodies of two murdered U.S. diplomats from Lebanon Saturday amid reports President Ford was considering an airlift to rescue hundreds of other Americans from western Beirut.

Ford, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and other senior State Department officials joined in the mournful arrival ceremonies at Andrews Air Force Base. Ford said the slain men had been "ruthlessly murdered in the service of America... searching for peace."

An honor guard fired a 19-gun salute as the flag-draped coffins of U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy and Economic Counselor Robert O. Waring were removed from the plane by Army, Navy and Air Force pallbearers. The Navy band played a hymn. Meloy, Waring and their Lebanese chauffeur were kidnapped and shot by terrorists Wednesday in Beirut.

Waring's widow, Irene, boarded the blue-and-white C135 jet transport at Athens to fly home with her husband's body. Two of her children, Michele and Richard, and her husband's brother, the Rev. Olat Waring, were with her.

The body of Meloy, a bachelor, was accompanied by his brother David and two friends — L. Dean Brown, recently the special envoy to Lebanon, and Frank Valco,

Secretary of the U.S. Senate. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, whose wife was dressed in somber black, said, "We have lost a valued friend and colleague."

South Africa bristles at U.N. resolution

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — South Africa told the Security Council Saturday it would not tolerate outside advice on how to maintain law and order and suggested racial rioting in which nearly 100 persons have been killed may have been planned.

"The United States warned South Africa to abandon its apartheid race supremacist policies."

The council met to vote on a resolution backed by black Africa which "strongly condemns" South Africa for its "massive violence against and killings of the African people including schoolchildren and students and others opposing racial discrimination."

U.S. Ambassador Albert W. Sherer Jr. joined in the condemnation of the racial separation policy.

"We call on the government of the Republic of South Africa to take these events as a warning and to learn from them," Sherer said.

"They must abandon a system which is clearly not acceptable under any standard of human rights. There can be no dream of a future for a nation held hostage to a policy that does not include both white and black working together in harmony and equality," Sherer said.

Botha denied that blacks were discriminated against in South Africa's educational system and forced to pursue their studies in the Afrikaans language. Afrikaans charged that student resentment to Afrikaans—which they consider a white-race language—touched off the riots.

"Many languages are spoken in South Africa: English, Afrikaans, Xhosa, Zulu, Ndebele, Sesuto, Seswana, Pedi, Venda, Tsonga and others," Botha said.

Botha said English and Afrikaans are the country's official languages but added "the principle followed is that the medium of instruction throughout the primary school is the 'mother tongue of the pupil' in secondary schools. Studies are set up on a 50-50 ratio of English to Afrikaans."

"In the circumstances, one is forced to wonder whether this alleged provocation was in fact primarily responsible for the demonstrations which seem to have been so carefully organized, or whether this was merely the pretext," Botha said.

"It is clear that a body of young students were incited and provoked to spark off a chain reaction of incidents which have led to an ugly situation and unnecessary bloodshed."

"These tactics and techniques are not unknown to the world. There have been student uprisings in many forms across the globe in the last decade... It is not unusual for the grievances of students, and the resulting student demonstrations, to be exploited by political forces for their own ends."

"This is a moment of sad-

"Together with other members of the council, we want to assure that the dream will not become a nightmare such as that we have witnessed in recent days."

In the debate that started Friday night and ran into Saturday's early hours before being resumed Saturday afternoon, the Soviet Union and several African powers suggested that the Council impose a trade embargo on South Africa until it ended apartheid.

But South African Ambassador Riebel F. Botha said, "South Africa is not prepared to be held hostage to the Council—in this way nor to accept externally imposed restrictions on its freedom of domestic administration — least of all on its inherent duty to maintain law and order within its borders."

'Junk' sometimes treasure at popular MV yard sales

BY JULIE DODDS

Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS—One person's junk is another person's treasure, or so it seems from the increasing popularity of yard sales.

The newest trend in getting rid of an accumulation of no longer wanted articles is to have a yard sale and invite community residents to make their choice of the items offered.

Yard sales or garage sales are named for the places in which they are held. A backyard or a garage becomes a bargain basement store by setting up tables and piling them high with sale items. Everything from old clothes to sports equipment, white elephants to Christmas decorations and kitchen appliances to beautiful china can be found at the sales. This so-called "junk" usually consists of items that are no longer wanted by the owner or have been replaced by newer models. Most of these items are still in good working condition and may be quite useful to someone.

Not only junk is found at yard sales, but sometimes antiques may be acquired. These include old furniture, glassware and even shotguns. Outgrown ski equipment or golf clubs are a choice item of purchase with the rising cost of sporting goods.

There are many reasons that people hold yard sales. Some families put on the sales up to three times a year just to clean out closets and drawers and as an alternative to the Salvation Army deposit. Other families just wait until the house begins to overflow with too many things. Some people say yard sales are the best way to eliminate packing when moving from one home to another.

Professionals may come in and help price the merchandise but usually the owner does the job. Prices usually depend on how much the item has been used and the sentiment the seller attaches to the item. Some people really work at pricing sale items correctly and begin three to four months ahead of time to insure adequate sales. Others price "on the spot" according to the item and the person who is buying it. There is often haggling at the tables, with customers trying to buy things more cheaply.

All types of people buy goods at yard sales. Yard sales are not necessarily visited only by those who cannot afford to buy things new. College students often furnish apartments with used items and others furnish cabins or trailers in resort areas.

A large majority of buyers are collectors who are looking for specific items. Many of the yard sale visitors are just "lookers" as going to yard sales is a pastime for them. Still, there are people who just like to collect junk and buy anything that looks cheap. Children, especially, love to have a treasure found among junk.

Yard sales may put relief organizations out of business as up to $400 may be collected in one day in a good yard sale. As many as 300 people a day may visit just one sale. This figure is comparable to the number expected at a "big" shopping sale in a store.

Summer is the best season to have a yard sale, because of good weather. When driving around Magic Valley this summer, residents are sure to see a great many signs directing them to yard sales.

Checks items

A GARAGE sale shopper inspects a line of clothing at June Potthast's sale on Filer Avenue West. The dog enjoys yard sales because it receives a good deal of attention from the bargain hunters.

Concerned mother

SMORY'S attention is divided between the garage sale shoppers and her kitten which lies sleeping in the foreground. The kitten was not for sale and Smory seems to fear some shopper may feel otherwise.

Just like 'uptown'

VERN Mitchell, Twin Falls, held his first garage sale last week and was surprised at its success. The cash register in the foreground seemed a nice touch to a temporary commercial enterprise.

Joint venture

COLLECTORS bottles, sweaters and plates are piled in display of a three-family garage sale held recently in the Kingsgate subdivision. Jackie Webb, one-third of the enterprise, sits behind the table ready to help customers find bargains.

Festival concerts slated

TWIN FALLS — Collective talents of members of the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley and Little Theatre will be combined in concerts during the Magic Valley Bicentennial Fine Arts Festival July 2-4 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Besides contributing to the performing side of the celebration, the Dilettantes have funded the fair with a $4,000 grant. Theater-goers from throughout Magic Valley who have been enjoying the Dilettantes' musical-comedy offerings the past 19 years and Magic Valley Little Theatre's varied presentations the past several seasons, are apt to find the favorite songs and scenes included in the groups' combined concerts on the afternoon and evening of July 3.

Craig Morris, Twin Falls chairman of the three-day event, said the concerts will feature song and dance numbers the Dilettantes have selected from past shows. They will be interspersed with vignettes, including scenes from "Thurber's Carnival," by Little Theatre members. Both groups are now in rehearsal for the show.

The Dilettantes and Little Theatre will be just two of the several performing groups planning to entertain at the celebration. Others include the Twin Falls City Band, Magichords, Northwest Opera Association, Antique Festival Theatre, Magic Valley Symphonette, Magic Valley Chorale, country musicians and square dancers.

The public will have much to see in the visual arts segment of the celebration. Painters, sculptors and potters will be among the many artists having displays set up around the CSI campus. Morris said there still is room for more displays or artwork, hobbies or historical collections. Anyone interested in participating in the festival can call him at 734-2144 or write to Box 787, Twin Falls.

The sponsors of the festival will make no charge to anyone attending the bicentennial celebration. Morris said. Artists and craftsmen will, however, be allowed to sell their works during the event. There also will be an old-fashioned refreshment stand set up on campus and a small charge will be made for items purchased there.

Other activities scheduled during the three-day celebration include a parade July 2, a huge fireworks display sponsored by the city of Twin Falls the night of July 4, and street dancing on the night of the fourth.

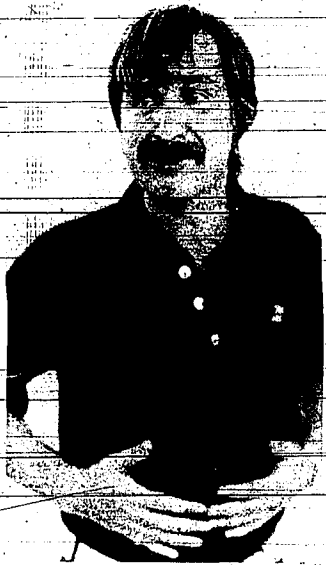

The Twin Falls Jaycees are making arrangements for the parade. Gary Muekel is chairman and anyone interested in joining the parade can call him at 733-8399.

Hunter
name date

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Bob Inman, Twin Falls, announce the engagement of their daughter, Rose, to Keith Hunter.
Hunter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Hunter, Benton, Ark.
Miss Inman is a 1976 graduate of Twin Falls High School and Hunter is a 1976 graduate of Benton High School.
The couple plans a July 13 wedding at the Faith Assembly of God Church.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 14, and she loves animals. She is not just your ordinary animal lover, Abby, she is fanatic about it.
She thinks it is wrong to kill an insect, a mouse or any kind of bug or rodent.
When she sees one of us kill a fly or a cockroach, she carries on like a crazy person.
If we try to set traps to catch mice, she goes into hysterics. How can I convince her that flies and mice carry germs, and it is better to get rid of them?
Please help me. Sometimes I wonder if this child is normal.
WORRIED

hurt fly

DEAR WORRIED: Your daughter's concern for the "sanctity of life" is admirable. But you can explain to her that unless humans exterminate creatures that carry disease and destruction, there will be no life for HUMANS!

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married two months ago. It was the second marriage for both of us.
Yesterday one of my husband's so-called friends called and told me things about my husband's past that upset me. He said that he had had psychiatric treatment for suicidal tendencies about a year ago, and I had had psychiatric treatment for the same reason, but I told him about it before we were married. I wonder why he didn't tell me?
What, if anything, should I do? My primary concern is that my husband should know that this woman is not worthy of his trust. Also, do you think that his secrecy about his past is a sign that our marriage is in trouble? We have gotten along so well, I can't believe it.
There is a possibility, of course, that this woman's stories are untrue. It's hard for me to understand why some people will go out of their way to cause others pain.
PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Rather than live with doubts, you should tell your husband what this "friend" told you and give him a chance to respond. True or false, it will clear the air. And you'd do well to avoid this woman. She's bad news.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, energetic, fun-loving divorcee who likes a good time, which sometimes gets me into trouble.
While my neighbor was in the hospital having a baby, I sort of lived it up with her husband.
She found out about it, and my life hasn't been the same since. She has called me every name in the book and has even threatened to "get even" with me if it's the last thing she does.
She insists that I talked her husband into it, which is not true. He was as willing as I was. Now her husband is blaming me because his wife is carrying on like a maniac.
I am twice-divorced and know what it's like to have a woman steal her husband. I am no home-wrecker, but what's another slice off a loaf that's already been cut?
How can I get this woman to realize I don't want her husband, I was only having a little fun?
ALL IN FUN

DEAR ALL: Lying it up with another woman's husband is hard to live down. Don't try to explain your harmless intentions. And stay out of her way.
Want to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a Jng, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Jobs meet

TWIN FALLS — Audrey Fuller, newly installed honored queen of Bethel No. 43 International Order of Job's Daughters, conducted a Bethel meeting Wednesday.
Delores Routh was installed as outer guard. Plans were made for the Grand Bethel Session June 27-29 in Boise. Summer activities were also discussed.

Briefs

PULLMAN, Wash. — Two Magic Valley area students have been awarded degrees by Washington State University. They are Steven E. Ashcraft, Burley, M. S. in computer science, and Gregory T. Hackett, Twin Falls, B. S. in veterinary science and doctor of veterinary medicine.

Although we have spent this whole week fighting against notrump bidders, we don't want our readers to think that we shy away from notrump bidding. Quite the contrary. We believe in bidding notrump whenever your hand calls for it, just as we believe in apple pie and other good things.
We have also found that notrumpists try to keep their partners out of notrump contracts.
Thus, we would never do anything with the North hand except to raise our partner from one to three notrump. Playing in three notrump, you will make three notrump against perfect defense and four notrump if the defense doesn't take its little heart tricks.
With aces on playing grounds, he will either go down at a game contract or make some small part score.

Couple exchanges promises

TWIN FALLS — Sheila Dawn Burton and Alan Dean Larson were married in an 8 p.m. "candlelight" ceremony June 4 at Our Savior Lutheran Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Burton, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson, Hansen.

CowBelles honor 'oldest' fathers

TWIN FALLS — Gerrit L. Peters, 99, and Martin Knudson, 98, friends and neighbors in the Amsterdam area since the early 1900s, have been determined to be the oldest fathers in the Twin Falls area.

The Desert Gold CowBelles initiated a special Father's Day contest this year to find the oldest living father in the Twin Falls area. Contest official had decided Knudson was the winner and the day after making an announcement declaring him winner, learned of Peters. They decided to give identical awards to the men and both were given certificates which may be used at any supermarket for the purchase of beef.

Peters was born March 31, 1877, in Apoldern, Holland, and came to Wisconsin, with his parents, at the age of 17. He was married in Wisconsin and worked as a house painter with his brother Guy. He moved to Idaho when it was found he was suffering from lead poisoning and doctors said he wouldn't live more than a year without a change in altitude and profession.

He moved to Idaho in September of 1910 and purchased and operated a grocery store in Twin Falls. In 1912 he moved to Hollister where he operated a grocery store.

He traded the grocery store for a farm bordering the Amsterdam townsite and farmed until his retirement when he and his wife moved to Twin Falls. His wife died in 1964, but he still lives in the home with the assistance of a housekeeper.

Peters says he enjoys his yard and flowers.

Peters has one son, Leonard Peters, Hollister, and two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Strickling, Buhl, and Mrs. Janet Carter, Twin Falls; nine grandchildren, 17 great-grandchildren, and 1 great-great-grandchild.

Knudson was born in Norway on April 21, 1878, and came to the United States with his parents when he was 7 years old.

He grew up in North Dakota and Iowa where he attended business college and operated a grocery store. He came to

Brief platform closes convention

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Democrats closed their three-day convention Saturday evening after adopting what some said was their starkest platform ever, and naming delegates and alternates to the national convention.

A visit from U.S. Sen. Frank Church highlighted the afternoon sessions Saturday. He was also honored, with his wife, Bethline, and son, Chase, during a barbecue Saturday evening on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Convention delegates, some 450 strong, picked 16 national delegates and 10 alternates including 11 committed to Sen. Church; two committed to Jimmy Carter and three uncommitted who are pledged to Church.

The delegates must vote in the Democratic national convention on a basis of results of the Idaho Presidential Primary.

On the first ballot, at least 11 Idaho delegates would vote for Church even though he has swung his support to Jimmy Carter.

The Carter delegates named include Ed Elliott, Burley, second Congressional District, and Mrs. Ed Knowlton, Peck, first district.

Alternates are Max Burton, Burley, and Scott Meacham, Coeur d'Alene.

Twin Falls attorney, Lloyd Walker, who headed the Carter campaign in Idaho, had hoped to obtain either the district delegate or alternate post but was not elected by convention delegates.

State party chairman, Deekle Rice, said Walker will go to the convention, but not as an official convention delegate.

Named as uncommitted delegates are Gov. Cecil Andrus, State Auditor, Joe Williams, and State Treasurer, Margjorie Mason.

Church delegates from the Second District are Less Puce, Pocatello; Mrs. Rice, Idaho Falls; Bob MacFarlane, Boise; Mercedes McCarter, Corral and Betty LaVerdy, Kelowna.

District alternates are Don Evans, Malad; Alex Pickett, Gooding; Marie Talamantes, Twin Falls; Beverly R. Bistline, Pocatello, and Marygrace Cox, Pocatello.

First District Church delegates include Dorothy Reynolds, Lillian Insole, John Clappman, Carl Burke, Vera White and Dave Peters. Alternates are Barbara Plumb, Elsieño Sanchez, Doris Hansen, Peter Richardson and Keith Kaufman.

State officials including Roy Truby, superintendent of public instruction, Mrs. Moon, and Williams addressed Saturday morning sessions briefly.

Truby declined nomination as a national convention delegate in view of teacher contract negotiations and other state business.

Delegates ran into lengthy debate over racial items in the 1976 Democratic platform for Idaho. The convention officials said the platform was generally non-controversial.

State Sen. Alke Mitchell, Lewiston, chairman of the platform committee, pointed out the platform was designed to give Democratic candidates some of the thrust of their campaigns for the November election.

In the agricultural plank, delegates voted to remove a statement in support of legislation placing administration of the Occupational Safety and Health Act under state control.

The platform calls for a consumer advocate position in the office of the governor. Under Forestry and Mining the platform calls for continued multiple-use policies full restoration of the environment.

The platform calls for improved levels of funding for health and mental health programs, adequate funding for enforcement of environmental quality standards, juvenile detention centers rather than jails for children, counseling programs and parent training programs, and a commodity distributing program as an alternative to food stamps, all under the health and welfare plank.

Under agriculture, the Democrats called for protection of irrigation rights and continued use of inexpensive hydropower, especially senior citizens, alternatives to nursing homes, and institutional care and higher standards with strict enforcement for nursing homes.

Land use planning at the local level is included as are a state water plan protecting existing rights and providing for additional beneficial uses.

The platform includes a strong local government plank, endorsing home rule measures and seeks adequate funding for public employees.

Democrats call for legislation to compensate legislators so all persons may serve in the law making body, regardless of economic status. The platform stands for rejecting policies which compel private or public workers to submit to compulsory arbitration. It also seeks better rehabilitation and training for women prisoners in the state prison, and opposes mandatory retirement based on age only.

The platform asks for circuit breaker tax relief laws for renters, especially senior citizens, alternatives to nursing homes, and institutional care and higher standards with strict enforcement for nursing homes.

Adequate irrigation water required in plat approval

RUPERT — Approval of subdivisions in the Rupert-infer-zone will require provisions for adequate irrigation water, Mayor Wendell Johnson said Friday.

The mayor said the city has agreed that the Minidoka-Irrigation District should approve the subdivision plat before it receives city council approval.

Johnson said a sign-off system will be established for the MID signature before final city approval within the one-mile unincorporated area around Rupert city limits. MID is to write up specifications to establish the level of irrigation water service that is necessary.

The MID board and city council met earlier in the week to discuss the problem of inadequate irrigation water for subdivisions.

On Monday and MID delegation had met with the Minidoka County commissioners on county territory. The MID request received the same response that the district draft specifications to be used in a sign-off system.

The sign-off would be similar to that established four years ago with the Minidoka County Highway District. The highway district must sign a plan to indicate its approval of road arrangements before the commissioners will sign it.

Mayor Johnson said the subdivider can use domestic water for irrigation or rely on pumps or gravity flood water from the district.

William Nichols, chairman of the MID board of directors, voiced the district's concern for assurances that adequately sized underground piping or a low pressure irrigation system be established in each subdivision to handle its residential requirements.

He said MID is responsible for water delivery only to the original point of delivery along the boundary of the undivided property. The district frequently receives complaints from subdivision residents about the lack of adequate irrigation water.

Mayor Johnson said those at the top of subdivision irrigation systems usually have plenty of water, but those further along the system do not.

Another problem is the delivery of water to farmers below any subdivision. Their water frequently is cut down as residents in subdivisions irrigate heavily and, when the gate at a subdivision is closed without notice, the farmland below facing a flooding hazard.

... but going down's the fun!

Land meet poorly attended

TWIN FALLS — Only a few persons showed up to see proposals on land use planning for Twin Falls County Saturday.

County Commissioner Ann Cover, Twin Falls County Joint Planning Commission chairman, blamed the low attendance at Sawtooth Elementary School on lack of coverage by some local news media. He said the media should be advertising such events as a "public service."

She said public apathy was not a reason for the low attendance.

At the informal meeting, where coffee and cookies were served, maps detailing probable areas of growth were displayed.

A map for the City of Twin Falls showed two areas, one north of current city limits and one south, of city limits as possible areas for urban development.

The land south of the city stretches from the city limit almost to the airport and covers about one square mile. The land north of the city extends to the Snake River and covers a little more than a quarter of a square mile.

Maps were also on hand showing possible growth areas for six other cities: Castledorf, Kimberly, Hansen, Filer, Murtaugh and Hollister. The maps are very general guidelines for growth, and are based on the current rate of growth for industry and residences," Peter Marshall, commission consultant.

Mrs. Cover said she could not estimate how much the presentation cost the city, but said about 15 persons had worked on the plans for a couple hours every Wednesday night since Jan. 1.

She said the planning commission would not hold another informal public meeting until fall because many persons are taking summer vacations and because farmers in the area have a lot of work to do during summer months.

"We want to obtain as much public comment as possible," Mrs. Cover said, adding all the maps and other planning information will be displayed in a booth at the Twin Falls County Fair in Filer beginning September 8.

She said the planning commission was also investigating the possibility of putting the maps on display at local banks during the summer.

Under state guidelines, the county officials are attempting to develop a county-wide comprehensive plan.

Nevada suspension upheld

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — State Commerce Director Mike Melner has upheld the suspension of the Nevada license of Sierra Life Insurance Co., of Twin Falls, Idaho on grounds it failed to meet the financial standards here.

Sierra Life's license to operate in Nevada was taken away last year by State Insurance Commissioner Dick Rottman who called the company insolvent.

Sierra Life appealed Rottman's decision. Melner, in a ruling made public Friday, said the investment portfolio was inadequate to comply with the financial requirements of Nevada law. He said the company's Nevada license will not be restored until it corrects the deficiencies.

Sierra Life had 365 customers in Nevada before it lost its license. It operates in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and Oklahoma and has about 16,000 to 20,000 policy holders, according to a company official.

The firm has filed a $1 million libel suit against Rottman and his Chief Deputy Vernon Leverty in federal court in Boise, Ida., in connection with the incident.

Benedictine monks take land option in Melon Valley at Buhl for retreat

BUHL — A 40-acre Melon Valley tract northeast of Buhl may soon become a monastic retreat for Benedictine monks.

Mount Angel Abbey, Mt. Angel, Oregon, has taken an option on the land and a decision by the Abbey's chapter members is expected within the next few weeks.

The construction of the monastery would mean the transfer of the Twin Falls Priory to the Melon Valley site and the abandonment of the Priory as a Neuman Center for Catholic students at the College of Southern Idaho.

Mt. Angel Abbey is the sponsoring body of the Twin Falls Priory. The Priory is staffed by three Benedictine monks dispatched by the Abbey.

According to Abbot Anselm Galvin, ranking prelate at Mt. Angel, the move to Melon Valley is "simply under consideration." "It depends upon a decision of the community," the Abbot said, "and they vote not to accept this property then it's out."

The vote of the Abbey chapter members should come soon. The Order's option on the land runs out July 15.

The Abbot said if the monastery is established it would function as a "retreat center" where Catholic Church officials could come for instruction, meetings and retreats.

"The whole thing is tentative," the Abbot emphasized. "There's absolutely nothing that's been established."

Abbot Anselm said the monastery would be staffed the year-round by Twin Falls Priory monks with augmentation from Mt. Angel

"It would depend on how many we have at home," he said.

According to Father Edmund, Prior at Mt. Angel, the move from Twin Falls to Melon Valley is being considered because the present Priory is in town.

"One reason would be to find more seclusion," Father Edmund said. "That would be the reason to have some land with it and away from the back yards of everyone else."

Father Edmund said the priory now in Twin Falls could be used for various purposes "if the monastery is built. According to Abbot Anselm, the land at the priory belongs to the Bishop of Boise, and the building, which belongs to Mt. Angel, would probably be turned over to the Bishop's use if the monastery is moved.

Father Edmund said the use of the building at Falls Avenue as a joint priory and Neuman Center "hasn't worked out as envisioned" because of the small Catholic population at CSI, the fact that most students are non-residents at the college, and the difficulties of working with a two-year school.

According to Twin Falls real estate agent Roy Sabala, who brought the Melon Valley property to the attention of the Abbey, the proposed monastery would consist of a large priory, a house for prayer, and meetings and living quarters for monks and visitors at the site.

Sabala said the property is located about one mile west of Dead Man's Corner northwest of Buhl. He said the land is zoned agricultural-residential and is now in pasture with surface water.

The site, he said, is in "rolling type terrain with a view of Melon Valley and the Snake River."

According to Abbot Anselm, the monks at Mt. Angel have also discussed a monastery on farm property owned by the Order near Jerome if the Melon Valley site doesn't pan out.

Sabala said Abbey officials had indicated they would "definitely like to stay in the Magic Valley."

Abbot Anselm, an anonymous arm of the Benedictine Order, has two priories under its sponsorship — one in Twin Falls and a second in Mexico.

A priory is the first stage of a monastery.

Auto layoffs to decline

DETROIT (UPI) — As the U.S. auto industry begins the changeover to 1977 model production next week, longer term layoffs will drop below the 30,000 mark for the first time in more than two years.

American Motors, General Motors and Chrysler each will have one plant turning out 1978 model cars next Friday. Chrysler next week also plans to resume a second shift at its Boliviere, Ill., big-car plant and call back 1,200 workers from the second shift.

The generally bright picture was clouded, however, by the Ford Motor Co.'s announcement Thursday that two small car assembly plants will close for one week beginning Monday. The shutdowns at the San Jose, Calif., and Metuchen, N.J., plants as well as layoffs at a trim plant will idle 35,000 workers.

The 29,500 workers listed on indefinite layoff next Monday compares to the peak of 212,000 workers — 40 per cent of the industry's blue collar labor force — at the job during the winter of 1972.

The two plants build the Ford Pinto, Mustang II and the Mercury Bobcat — three small models whose sales haven't matched earlier expectations.

General Motors Corp. spokesmen said a week-old wildcat strike by nearly 600 Teamsters haulaway drivers has piled up more than $60 million worth of trucks at the Bishop Airport in Flint, Mich.

Chrysler's Division now has stored more than 10,000 trucks at the airport and is beginning to look for other storage areas in efforts to avoid a total shutdown. The drivers normally haul the trucks from the Chevrolet plant to dealers in the Midwest and South.

What now plans now-to shut-down one plant, a Chevrolet spokesman said. "In fact, we intend to continue building the hot-selling Chevrolet pickups, Blazers and Suburbans at the normal rate of 1,728 a day and will work the plant on over time Saturday."

Plants scheduled for shutdowns after next Friday's shift include AMC's Kenosha, Wis., facilities until Aug. 2; GM's St. Louis, Mo., plant until Aug. 9 for the switch to building the firm's new, smaller "big" cars; and Chrysler's St. Louis facility until Sept. 14 for conversion from the compact Valiant and Dart models to the more popular Volare and Aspen cars.

GM still lists 21,000 workers on layoff; Ford, 4,375, down 200 from this week; Chrysler 1,840, a drop of 1,600; and AMC unchanged at 2,417 workers idled.

Braniff grown to 15th largest world airline

DALLAS (UPI) — Braniff International, 48 years old this month, has successfully grown from one five-seater to a fleet of 81 jetliners — the 15th largest airline in the world.

Unlike many, it still is making money.

Braniff was founded June 20, 1929, by Thomas E. Braniff who pioneered the airline from his humble, single engine, private aircraft service between Tulsa and Oklahoma City.

Before he died in a private plane crash in Louisiana in 1954, Braniff had successfully pointed his corporation in the right direction.

Today, the line, with 10,700 employees, flies 20,000 miles to 45 U.S. mainland cities, to Hawaii, Mexico and South America, carrying 8,500,000 passengers annually and operating 500 daily departures.

Last year, Braniff had a total operating revenue of $600 million, net income of $16 million. Its earnings per-share growth ranks first among all airlines.

Passenger traffic growth rate is four times higher than the domestic industry average.

The airline has a splashy, modern image, has contributed extensively to the arts and is associated in the minds of many Americans with the Flying Colours jet, painted by modernist artist Alexander Calder.

Construction begins this summer on a $25 million complex at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport. Covering 340,000 square feet, the building will house the airline's administrative offices, a training center, computer complex and recreation facility.

Observers credit sound planning, proper equipment choice and a bright management for Braniff's success and a rosy economic outlook. Its bureaucracy is relatively lean. When a decision is to be made, it usually is made by the manager whose area it is affected.

Braniff's attention to the details of image extend especially to its flight attendants, the public's principal on-board contact with the company.

William F. Smith, vice president of Customer Services, is in charge of flight attendant training, including mandatory yearly refresher courses for each of the 1,800 attendants.

Where, years ago, the field had an extremely high turnover, Smith said, today "they realize it's a good, highly skilled career. It's a highly sought-after job."

Smith says the flight attendants are "bright, outgoing, interested individuals." Most are college graduates. Out of 300 applicants, one is accepted. "Many more men are entering the field."

"Flight attendants have changed," says Smith. "They have gone from just a pretty girl... They're career oriented."

Braniff spends $1,200 to train each flight attendant. After graduation, they must pay the airline $300. An intensive, five-week initial training course teaches everything from how to serve food and liquor to how to cope with a skyjacking or bomb threat to making a blind person more comfortable. A full two weeks concerns emergency procedures and first aid. Realistic mockups are used.

Personal service is Braniff's top asset, Smith says.

"It tells all flight attendants, 'You are hosts and hostesses. This aircraft is a home for the passengers. They are to be treated as house guests. You are the primary customer contact and it's how you speak, look and act that influences them.'"

EPA, US Steel locked in battle over air pollution

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — U.S. Steel Corp. and the federal Environmental Protection Agency are locked in a battle over air pollution which could affect the steel industry nationwide.

EPA wants to set federal air pollution controls on a national basis. U.S. Steel shies from being used as a means of forcing other companies to meet certain standards because it has to accept them.

Each side has charged the other with being inflexible, stubborn and arbitrary. But talks to reach a settlement go on.

Pittsburgh and its surrounding mill towns are caught in the middle. To some of their residents the issue appears to be smoke and continued employment. To others it is the clean air and fewer jobs.

In the days of Andrew Carnegie people were more interested in jobs and the smoke leeching from the mills and coke oven plants was largely ignored. But with the advent of the environmental movement in the 1960s, they began looking another way at these smokestacks.

In 1972, U.S. Steel signed a consent decree with local and state officials saying it would, in effect, stop polluting at its nearby Clairton Coke Works, largest in the world.

Coke is a necessary ingredient in steelmaking and it also pollutes the air.

The pollution continued. Allegheny County Pittsburgh is the county seat and state-environmental officials filed a $3 million suit charging U.S. Steel with 49 violations of the agreement.

The suit went to trial last year but was recessed and closed talks began in an attempt to reach an out-of-court settlement. The talks, before continuing, please Judge Henry Elkens, though, were to resume today.

Although Pittsburgh is the site of the legal battle, agreement concluded with U.S. Steel must have state and federal approval.

The controversy also is being played out in the city's newspapers.

U.S. Steel last week concluded a four-week campaign of full-page ads contending that the technology is not available to bring the Clairton works in compliance with legal pollution laws.

The company sought to highlight its "economic significance as a corporate citizen of southwestern Pennsylvania" and emphasize the "need for jobs" in the area.

The government's position is that the Clairton government business and the general public.

U.S. Steel headlined the first ad May 18. "Did we make a mistake by locating our new headquarters building in Pittsburgh."

The company also hinted it might be discouraged from expanding its operations in the area because of local laws. The company cited "recent history" of U.S. Steel operator shut-downs in six cities as the result of "environmental regulations, market shifts — or both."

The company said: "We want our long partnership to continue. That's our desire. What's yours?"

A company spokesman said: "For six years we've been compromising and in court, so now we've wanted to put the issues before the people."

The public has responded. The daily letters to the Clairton area are full of opinions on both sides of the argument.

A recent letter in the Pittsburgh Press addressed itself to the ads, which quoted U.S. Steel Board Chairman Edgar Spear.

"I don't know who he thinks he's kidding, but the only time a new facility is put in the Pittsburgh area is done to replace the capacity of outdated and inefficient operations and not to increase total capacity."

"It would appear that U.S. Steel is presently using state-facilities and keeping certain Pittsburgh facilities operating until newer facilities are started up elsewhere."

"Let's face it. The main factor that influences any U.S. Steel decision is economics. It's the move the most economical and financially rewarding for U.S. Steel."

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader, here to make a speech, charged U.S. Steel's ad campaign constituted "environmental blackmail."

Food stamp cut banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge Friday blocked new rules that would cut food stamp benefits to save $1 billion annually but eliminate more than 4 million people from the program.

District Judge J. Lee Smith Jr. said opponents of the new regulations had shown "a substantial likelihood" that the Agriculture Department exceeded its powers. He enjoined the regulations pending a full-scale trial, which could be delayed for months.

The Times-News Advertising Department recently invited the children in Magic Valley to participate in a contest by writing a letter telling why they thought their dad should be President in this bicentennial year.

Many of those letters were printed in the June 15 issue of the Times-News along with names of the winners. The next four pages will feature more of the letters received.

My Dad should be president because we are not rich and he knows what to do to help the poor that are starving to death. All the presidents these day only do things for the rich and other countries. And he could make good laws to let the younger people have more freedom & privileges. There are alot of people starving and nobody ever helps, but we will try!

"WHY MY DAD SHOULD BE PRESIDENT IN 1976!"

The Times-News Advertising Department recently invited the children in Magic Valley to participate in a contest by writing a letter telling why they thought their dad should be President in this bicentennial year.

Many of those letters were printed in the June 15 issue of the Times-News along with names of the winners. The next four pages will feature more of the letters received.

"Why My Dad Should Be President in 1976!"

Rupert queen candidates attend chamber meeting

RUPERT — Candidates for queen of the Rupert Fourth of July Rodeo were guests of the Rupert Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The six candidates and reigning rodeo queen Linda Schenk, Rupert, modeled western riding clothes and told chamber members about themselves and the events scheduled for the Fourth of July festivities.

— Rex Rasmussen, perennial chairman for the queen contest, introduced the girls. Candidates are Shelly Moore, Heyburn; Stacy Howard; Rupert; Judy Tucker, Rupert; Cindy Cranney, Heyburn; Penny Welmer, Rupert, and Terri Shockey, Rupert.

Rasmussen also cited the help of his wife, Edna, and introduced Carl Roberts as the man handling the preparations for the contest.

The candidates practice on Monday and Thursday nights at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds.

They will be judged on riding ability and general horsemanship, poise, personality and appearance. The judging will be during a banquet next Friday at the Ramada Inn and at the riding contest at 2:30 p.m. two days later in the fairgrounds arena.

Miss Schenk, chosen last year, will reign over this year's celebration and the Rupert Chamber of Commerce and its rodeo committee will sponsor her in the Miss Rodeo Idaho competition at Twin Falls in early September.

The new queen will be crowned during the rodeo on July 5 and will reign over the 1977 celebration and rodeo.

Miss Moore is the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Moore and graduated from Minico High School last month.

She will ride Poco Polly, a 12-year-old Quarter Horse. Her rodeo specialties are barrel racing and pole bending.

Miss Howard is also 17 and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bus Howard. She came here four years ago from Salt Lake City and graduated from Minico High last month.

She will ride a 5-year-old Quarter Horse mare, Lady Savage Locita, in the competition.

Miss Tucker is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tucker, 18 years old and a new graduate of Minico High.

She was a queen contestant last year and will ride "Mounty Man," a 5-year-old Quarter Horse.

Miss Cranney is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dell Cranney. She is 18 years old and graduated from Minico High a year ago.

Tick mailed to director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley has received a threatening letter containing a tick, similar to extortion demands mailed to businessmen around the nation this week, the FBI said today.

But the FBI also said tests run on the insects show that, contrary to warnings in the letters, there is an "extremely remote" chance the ticks could transmit infectious diseases to humans.

Consumers hold 'big stick' over lending institutions

BY BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Consumers have been handed a "big stick" to wield against institutions that finance automobiles and other major purchases, but financial institutions and merchants here say the weapon has had no effect in Twin Falls.

The club is a new Federal Trade Commission regulation aimed at relieving the public of paying for shoddy goods and services.

The rule, which went into effect last month, hits all sellers who arrange financing through lending institutions such as banks, and savings and loan associations. The rule requires all sellers to write loan contracts which say the lending institution involved is subject to all of a buyer's defenses.

The regulation can best be explained by an example. When a consumer buys a car, the seller may take care of the financing through a bank. The bank, in turn, pays the seller for the car and collects payments from the buyer regularly. All goes well unless the buyer finds that the car he bought is not what the seller said it was.

Under an old law, the so-called holder-in-due-course doctrine, the buyer was still obligated to pay the bank, even if the buyer determined that something was drastically wrong with the car and the seller refused to do anything about the problem.

If the buyer refused to pay, the bank could take legal action, such as repossessing the car or garnishing wages.

Under the new rule, the bank becomes as responsible for merchandise as the seller, and the buyer is not legally liable to make payments on faulty merchandise. The rule also provides that a consumer sold a faulty product is entitled to recover from the holder of his credit papers all money paid toward a purchase.

Rich McKernan, manager of the Twin Falls branch of the Bank of Idaho, says the new rule "hasn't changed anything so far." But he adds he hasn't "had any problems with faulty merchandise" since the regulation took effect.

Ken Newman, who says the new regulation hasn't really affected business so far, says he "would seriously doubt whether it will mean we will be making less loans."

The manager of First Security Bank of Idaho, Twin Falls, says the merchants he deals with are responsible enough so that no problems should occur. "It puts us a little bit in their business, and them a little bit in ours," Newman says.

Jerry McGrath, manager of the Twin Falls branch of Idaho Bank and Trust, says, "I think everything will remain normal. All we're doing now is making extra sure arrangements on loans are accurate."

Merchants who deal in products covered by the act say they have experienced no extra problems arranging financing.

through local lenders. Thaison Motors manager Emmett Harrison says his contracts "were just changed to read correctly, and that's it. Other than that, he says, the new regulation "hasn't affected us."

Nick A. Hansen, used car manager for Aco-Hansen Chevrolet, agreed, saying, "All that was changed was the bank form, and that's basically it." He says he has experienced no extra problems arranging financing through local lenders.

Gary Halverson, manager of Bill Workman Ford, says the new rule "hasn't affected our business."

Bud Allen of Gateway Trailer Center, Inc., says he hasn't experienced any problems with financial institutions arranging credit either. The new regulation "just means a little more red tape," he says.

Lenders and merchants disagree on the worth of the new federal regulation. McKernan says, "I think it protects the consumer, and as far as the consumer is concerned, it's a good idea. I'm not against it."

Garrison says, "I can't really see where it's going to change anything in the Magic Valley. I think in certain instances — say in larger cities where there are a lot of margin lenders — the regulations will have some effect though."

Both Harrison and Halverson agree the new regulation is a good one, though they say it shouldn't affect Twin Falls car sales.

However, McGrath says, "I don't think the regulation is necessary." He says he hasn't experienced any of the consumer difficulties the rule is designed to curtail in 15 years.

If a problem exists, "the control should be placed further on the dealer," McGrath says. "Banks shouldn't be involved... I think the American tax dollar could be spent in a better area. Financial institutions are honest."

Hansen and Allen agreed with McGrath. "I don't feel it (holder-in-due-course doctrine) has been abused that much," Hansen says. "I don't think the regulation was necessary here."

Allen adds the new regulation could mean extra cost to consumers in the future. "If a bank gets stuck with some bad loans, they may start adding a new charge somewhere," he says.

On the new regulation, Newman says, "I'm not sure whether it's good or bad, but it's certainly here, and we're going to live with it."

The ultimate limits of a lending institution's exposure is unclear. For example, James A. Sneliker, manager of First Federal Savings and Loan Association, says the new regulations won't apply to standard home loans, but may apply to home improvement loans.

"We wish we knew" exactly what the regulations covered, says Jack Ramsey, manager of Idaho First National Bank. "We're not sure where we are and don't want to comment."

Bakers 4-H Club holds meeting, makes plans

FILER — The 6th meeting of the Betsy Ross Bakers 4-H Club was held Monday at the home of Carmen Bannan.

Six new members were admitted and the club planned a cooked-food sale for Saturday in Twin Falls.

Three members were assigned to make posters for the sale.

Any Conrad told a story about the Boston Tea Party and the history of "Yankee Doodle Pandey".

The leader discussed the proper use of measuring cups and stressed the importance of accuracy in baking.

The club's next meeting will be held Saturday in the Twin Falls city park following the cooked food sale.

Septic tank permit granted by agency

TWIN FALLS — Directors of the South Central Health District board reversed a previous decision Wednesday and granted a septic tank permit on a re-divided lot in the Carter Mini-Ranch subdivision.

The action was taken after attorneys for the district and Charles Brumbach, representing the property owner, Tom Edmundson, agreed a precedent had been set in the subdivision and denial of a permit could not be defended in court.

Edmundson purchased a part of a lot in the subdivision prior to the district's adopting a policy which precluded the permit. Although he had purchased the property several years ago, he only recently asked for a building permit to build a home. When told by the county zoning administrator a building permit would be issued only after a sub-surface sewage disposal permit was obtained from the health district, he applied for and was promptly denied a septic tank permit.

The health board took the position that septic tanks could be installed only in accord with the original subdivision plat with one granted for each lot in the plat filed at the time of initial subdivision. Two septic tanks were approved on lots in Carter Mini-Ranch subdivision because the health district was not aware they were for portions of the original lots.

Brumbach advised the board to take immediate action to put future property buyers on notice that septic tank permits will not be available if the original lots are divided further, but said his client did not receive such notice before purchasing the property.

Bikers schedule benefit auction

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Trail Machine Association will have a benefit auction and dance for the American Red Cross building fund Monday.

The dance will be at 8 p.m. at the Tom Parks Pavilion on the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

Home baked foods will be included in the Auction, along with many other items.

The Magic Valley Country Music Association will provide music for dancing.

Tickets are on sale at Sav-Mor Drug, Buhl; Jordan's Music, Good Film's Inn, in Filer, and the Music Center, Sullivan-Bille-Lakes-Sporting Goods, Peterson's Western Apparel and the Red Cross office, all in Twin Falls.

Tickets may also be purchased from Trail Machine Association and Country Music Association members.

William Chancey, chairman of the board, asked Twin Falls County attorney William Hollifield, and Evan Robertson to work with zoning administrator, Ed Woods, and the health department in working out a method of enforcing septic tank regulations and providing notice to persons buying property in areas not served by sewer systems that they may not be able to obtain septic tank permits. These people would not be able to build on the property unless the subdivisions provide their own in-ground systems.

Bicentennial panel makes Filer plans

By MARJORIE LIERMAN
Times-News writer

FILER — Filer's bicentennial pageant committee reports plans are proceeding well for the Aug. 15 event which will be Filer's way of observing the bicentennial.

This year also marks the 70th year of Filer's existence as a community, according to Juneau Shinn, Twin Falls, former resident and early planner.

The celebration will be held at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds and will begin with a potluck dinner at 2 p.m., to be followed by a program. Shinn will be guest speaker and will relate special events of the town's early beginnings and will introduce some of the former pioneers still living in the areas.

Howard Moon is compiling an outline of school activities through the years since the town's beginnings. Churches and organizations in the town and surrounding areas are being contacted to furnish histories and pictures for display. The Filer Kiwanis Club is compiling a book of the early days of Filer and this will be on sale the day of the celebration.

People having pictures of early events in Filer and adjacent areas are asked to loan them to Moon for use at the celebration. Moon said the pictures will be given the best of care and will be returned to their owners. Specially needed are early pictures of the town of Filer, sites of the Poplar Hill, Berger and Filerwood schools.

Lawrence Knigge is chairman of the coordinating committee, assisted by Clinton Dougherty, Edwin Marshall, Moon and Bob Fort. Georgia Blastoek will be in charge of special music. The Filer Senior Citizens group will assist in gathering pictures and materials for the event.

Disaster funding needed

TWIN FALLS — Irene Basom, local director of the American Red Cross, stated at a special meeting with the United Way Executive Committee this week, that the local chapter must raise an additional $2,021 to meet their assigned quota for the 1976 disaster fund campaign.

The United Way Board went on record supporting the local unit in its search for additional funds because of the magnitude of expenditures spent by the agency for disaster relief this year. The board hopes the local community will meet the challenge to raise these funds. Individual or business contributions should be mailed to the United Way office, 164 Main Ave. N. or to the American Red Cross, 718 Shoshone St. E. Proceeds from the Dinners at Antoine's are earmarked to meet this financial obligation.

The current fiscal year is shaping up as the most expensive in the Red Cross history in providing relief to disaster victims. The National headquarters reported that typhoon—Pamila, which devastated Guam in May, Floods in Tulsa, Okla., and the Teton Dam catastrophe in Idaho have escalated its disaster relief cost for the year to an unprecedented $33 million—in commitments of expenditures.

The Red Cross Organization has recently launched a special $10 million nationwide fund appeal to help meet the skyrocketing relief costs.

Governor Andrus has named the Red Cross as the official voluntary disaster relief agency and urged contributions be made to the Red Cross Chapters. At the Teton Dam disaster site, the Red Cross continues to provide meals to 6,000 people daily. Early estimates indicated the Red Cross relief might reach $2,625,000. More than 40 Red Cross disaster specialists are on the scene working with area chapters and their volunteers. More than 1,500 families stricken by the floodwaters have now applied for Red Cross assistance. This aid includes shelter, food, clothing, temporary housing, transportation, medical care and occupational supplies. The Red Cross volunteers are working closely with those from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with Menonites, and with Federal Disaster officials.

Miss Sorensen wins Richfield queen title

RICHFIELD — Deann Sorensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Sorensen, Shoshone, was named queen of the Richfield Outlaw Days, winning over five other candidates.

As winner, she will not only wear the crown of queen for the year, but received several prizes, including a leather jacket from the riding club, a pair of boots, a gold bracelet and a turquoise ecker.

Miss Sorensen was sponsored by the Shoshone Sale Yards. Other candidates were Brenda Braumrager, Connie Hudsmith, Chris Furtado, Shelly Kuhn and Janet Lau. # Kidnap charge lodged

TWIN FALLS — James Lyle Osborne, 37, Twin Falls, was in the Twin Falls County Jail Thursday charged with kidnaping as the result of an incident Wednesday night.

Sheriff Paul Corder said the man is charged with abducting Julie Ann Standley, 30, from her mobile home in the Skyline park south of Twin Falls. She told officers the man forced her into his car and drove several miles southwest, threatening her with a hand gun.

She told officers she was able to get behind the wheel of the car and drive away when the suspect got out of the car. The victim said she drove back to her home where she asked friends to call authorities.

During the ride and after he stopped the vehicle, she told police, the suspect struck her several times with his fists and continued to threaten her with the gun.

Osborne was arrested by county officers later Wednesday night.

Gavel passed

MRS. Sherry Call, outgoing president of Junior Club, hands the president's gavel to incoming president Mrs. Rose McKinney.

Last year the Junior Club donated funds raised in club projects to construction fund of the Herrett's Museum of the College of Southern Idaho.

Police arrest

TWIN FALLS — A 17-year-old Twin Falls youth was arrested by city police Tuesday night when he was called to investigate a burglary.

Charles Garey, 421 Jefferson St., called police during the night to report she and her family had been awakened when someone entered their home. She said she woke up and found a young man standing in her bedroom. He left and went into an upstairs room where her daughter was asleep.

In checking the home and yard, officers found the juvenile hiding beside a fence at the side of the Garey residence under some shrubbery.

Mrs. Garey said about $20 in cash and a package of cigarettes were taken from the home.

Officers said the money and cigarettes were recovered and the suspect charged with burglary and possession of a controlled substance—marijuana.

Special days herald nightmare, bonanza

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Once there was just Mother's Day. Now the rapid growth of special days in Mexico is turning into a consumer's nightmare and a merchant's bonanza.

A casual count adds up to at least 20 different groups whose members have gifts showered on them at different times of the year.

Many days are heralded loudly by department stores, whose advertisements on television, radio, and in newspapers urge shoppers to buy in ever greater volumes.

"This all strikes the family's budget unmercifully," said a senior spokesman for the government's Consumer Protection Office said.

Apart from Mother's Day, the days of the father, child and teacher are the most widely publicized by stores.

Less lucrative, but profitable just the same, are the day of the newspaper seller, postman, auxiliary, policeman, building site worker, taxi driver, soldier, sailor, nurse, doctor, engineer, fireman, railwayman, telegrapher, journalist, printer—to name but 15.

Lates to join the list was the Day of the Godfather, which was publicized widely by department stores in March.

Junior Club installs McKinney president

TWIN FALLS — Rose McKinney has been installed president of the Twin Falls Junior Club. Other newly installed officers include Danni Alexander, vice president; Judy Brinson, Secretary; Mary Roberts, treasurer; Lettie Poppleton, projects; Colleen Latham, publicity, and Lois Cowan, board member at large.

Barb Allen, Rosalee Dingwall, Elaine Phillips, Shirley Straubhar and Isabel Sidweeks have completed five years service in Junior Club and have become associate members.

Mahaffey leads Open with sub-par round

DULUTH, Ga. (UPI)—John Mahaffey wanted a runaway in the U.S. Open, and he got it—-but not for long—Saturday when he shot a one-under par 69 to take the third round lead by two strokes.

Mahaffey, who lost this championship in a playoff to Lou Graham last year, had perhaps the shortest lived six-stroke lead in Open history.

That was margin at the ninth hole, turn of Saturday's rain-delayed round, and reporters went searching through record books to find the biggest lead ever.

They did not have to bother.

Within a space of a minute or two, it was down to two.

Mahaffey made a doublebogey six at the 11th hole, a treacherous downhill, dogleg, 480-yard monster—the longest par four ever played in the U.S. Open—that the players have been gripping about all week.

Tom Weiskopf, playing just ahead of Mahaffey, shot a 71 and moved into the lead.

At the end of the day, gathering darkness, Mahaffey had a three-under-par total of 207 for three trips around the 7,015-yard Atlanta Athletic Club Highlands course that runs along the Chattahoochee River.

Jerry Pate, a 22-year-old rookie pro who won the U.S. Amateur championship in 1974, made a remarkable comeback after playing the first four holes in four over, shot a 69 of his own, and took over second place at 207.

At Gelber bogeyed the last two holes for a 71 and was third at 210, even par.

Friday when he led the second round by one shot, Mahaffey expressed disappointment that shoddy putting down the stretch prevented him from running away from the field. He got his wish Saturday—if only briefly—but even at the end virtually all of the game's big guns had backed away from the 20-year-old Texan.

Mahaffey, the No. 26 money winner this year with $51,794 but a tournament winner only once in five years on the tour, got into position to make the tournament a runaway by making the turn in three-under-par 21.

He holed birdie putts of 15 feet at the 450-yard second hole, 8 feet at the 305-yard fourth and 20 feet at the 725-yard seventh. He also saved pars with putts of 1, 6 and 10 feet after hitting his approach shots into bunkers at the first, sixth and eighth holes. The last two saves were seen by the national television audience, but when the cameras broke away on schedule at 6:30 p.m. EDT—the rain had set play back two hours—Mahaffey still had the back nine to play.

At 11, Mahaffey drove it into a fairway bunker, needed three more to get it down the hill to the green and then missed a six-foot bogey putt.

He came right back with birdies at the 12th, a 25-footer, and the 14th, a 40er, then gave those two shots away by making bogeys at 16, where he drove it into the rough, and the par-three 17th, where he missed the green.

"I didn't realize I was six shots ahead after nine holes," Mahaffey said. "When I hit my second shot on 10, I wanted to win by 15 strokes. But after 11, I really had to struggle to salvage the round."

He did not have to struggle any more than Pate did, however. Pate (three-putted the first two holes for bogeys, making it 10) got straight three-putt greens since he had done the same thing on 17

Finley benches Fingers, Rudi, Blue and sues Kuhn

NEW YORK (UPI)—Charley Finley, once more caught up in the swirl of controversy that forever storms about him, confirmed Saturday that he is personally benching $1.5 million worth of talent while suing Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and baseball for $10 million.

"My lawyers are working on the lawsuit right now, and I'm very confident of winning," Finley said from his Chicago office, barely hours after learning of Kuhn's landmark decision to void the sales of Joe Rudi and Rolfe Fingers to the Boston Red Sox and Vito Blue to the New York Yankees.

"I think this man has got to be an idiot. If he had a brain in his head, he'd still be an idiot. He hasn't even had the decency to tell me of his decision personally. He had his attorney, Sandy Hadden, call me up and read it to me."

BLASTING out of a sand-trap during the third round of the U.S. Open Golf Championship at Duluth, Ga., John Mahaffey salvages a par on the ninth hole, Mahaffey, also the second round leader, carded a one under par 69 to lead the tournament by two shots over Jerry Pate, who also shot a 69 Saturday. (UPI)

As could be expected, many club owners were relieved at Kuhn's decision and Buzzy Bavasi, vice president and general manager of the San Diego Padres, called the action a "conscience move." Bavasi, in the baseball business for five years, said he owns the club, but he thinks baseball has a duty to the fans.

There have been reports that Walter O'Malley, owner of the Los Angeles Dodgers and one of the most influential men in baseball, helped Kuhn in reaching his decision.

"I don't know why he would want to feel that way," Finley said of O'Malley. "Maybe he's still a little put out for us beating the devil out of him in 1974 when we beat him four out of five in the World Series."

O'Malley left little doubt about how he stands.

"The rich teams would have all the players, and the poor teams would have none," O'Malley said. "These things escalate and you end up charging 15 or 20 bucks to go to a ballgame. Nobody would be able to live with it, the economies these things produce."

Finley, owner of the Oakland A's, has instructed his manager, Chuck Tanner, that he does not even want his three players on the clubhouse. This despite the fact that Kuhn ruled that Rudi, Fingers and Blue could return to the A's for Friday night's game against Milwaukee.

As a result, three of the key men instrumental in bringing five consecutive divisional championships to Oakland are players without a team, and it is open to speculation whether they will be paid, and if so it will be a full salary.

"If I get my paycheck and there's 20 per cent missing from it, I'll have something to say," Rudi said in Oakland. "Maybe Bowie Kuhn will pay it."

Rudi added, "I don't know what I'd like to see happen. I just want to play ball and I don't care where, I'm ready to play. All I can do now is work out here for two days and see what happens in court Monday."

Fingers agreed that he'd like to see the issue resolved so that he could go back to playing baseball, while Blue would say only, "I have no comment to make."

Finley, generally a lone maverick in his fights against the establishment, has been picking up some support from the media, fans and ballplayers since Kuhn announced he was voiding the sales "in the best interests of baseball." However perturbed some outsiders may have been at rich teams strengthening themselves in such a way, the bartering of Rudi and Fingers to Boston for $1 million each and of Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million was conducted according to the time-honored traditions of baseball, and there was no precedent for Kuhn's intervention.

It is interesting that while a number of owners criticized Finley for his actions of last Tuesday, only hours before the June 15 trading deadline Detroit tried to buy Blue for $1 million, Calvin Griffith of the Minnesota Twins offered $700,000, Bill Veeck and Roland Hemmond of the Chicago White Sox wanted to buy Sam Bando and Brad Corbett of the Texas Rangers offered $1 million to Finley for Don Taylor.

Finley, in his suit against Kuhn and baseball, will have precedent on his side. He cites, for example, the fact that Boston once sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees, that the St. Louis Cardinals sold Dizzy Dean to the Chicago Cubs and the Washington Senators sold Joe Cronin to Boston.

In the meantime, there is a degree of chaos invading the playing field, with baseball certain to face a long series of lawsuits, and million-dollar-innings Joe Rudi, Vito Blue and Rolfe Fingers are players without a team.

Weiskopf praises Nicklaus efforts

DULUTH, Ga. (UPI)—Tom Weiskopf, bleeding at the heart for his buddy, Jack Nicklaus, struggling through one of his worst U.S. Opens ever, says old Golden Bear could still pull this one out but whether he does or not, there's nobody else in the game quite like him.

"You can't possibly believe how the guy keeps trying," said Weiskopf about Nicklaus, whom he played together with in Saturday's third round.

"I think he tries as hard as anyone who ever played the game, and I mean as every shot."

Weiskopf, never a star in the Open, still is in contention in this one. He had a splendid two-over on Saturday and his 211 total for three rounds has him four shots in back of pacesetter John Mahaffey, also looking for his first Open title.

With Nicklaus, though, it's different. He has won the U.S. Open three times, in 1962, 1967 and 1972, but looks like anything but a winner in this one. 12 strokes back at 219 after Saturday's 75. Moreover, he had gone 48 straight holes here without a birdie until he finally got his first one on the 13th Saturday.

Weiskopf, who has known Nicklaus 16 years, said he could see his tremendous frustration.

"Walking off the 12th, he said to me 'I just can't believe it. The longer I go, the more frustrated I get and you simply can't play a U.S. Open that way.'"

Weiskopf was talking about Nicklaus off to the side of the interview area, trying to convey to reporters the inordinate degree of determination Nicklaus puts into every single shot whether he's in contention or not.

"He probably still thinks he's on top, and it certainly isn't impossible because a player that good can shoot a 64 or 65," said Weiskopf. "He'll play good tomorrow, I guarantee you he will. Look, I've seen a lot of things happen in my 12 years on the tour. I've seen players come from way back. I remember one Open where 78 strokes were made up in 9 holes and I remember guys coming from far back to win in other tournaments as well. I've seen a lotta things happen, so I know they can again."

Weiskopf made it clear he feels he can win as well.

"I think I'm in a very good position," he said. "I said earlier this week that if I didn't win, it wouldn't be the end of the world. But I hope some day to win a U.S. Open."

Weiskopf took the opportunity to clear up some misunderstanding over why he did not come to the press tent after the first round when he finished double bogey-bogey for a 73.

"It had to be explained what happened," said the tall, 33-year-old former British Open title-holder.

"I walked off the golf course to the locker room that day and never said anything. There were four people there, around my locker, before I even took my shoes off. I said 'can you give me 10 minutes?' They said sure. I was ready to talk to them, all I asked for was 10 minutes. But they never even gave me 10. So I just put my sandwich down and said, 'excuse me, gentlemen,' and walked out the door."

"If they were angry about it, it's too bad. I don't care if my wife walked in, I wasn't ready to talk to her. You know how it is, there are some times when you just want to be left alone for 10 minutes or so and you don't wish to talk to anybody."

"Look," concluded Weiskopf, "I've said and done things that were not professional. I've regretted saying some things. I know I'm not an exceptional person. When I'm winning, everything's fine, every one's with me. You know, Tom Terrific. But when I'm losing, Weiskopf didn't finish."

"When you're losing, you're 'Terrible Tom,' someone prompted him.

"Yeah, that's right," Weiskopf laughed. "Terrible Tom."

Weiskopf missed a birdie on the fourth hole (falls to drop into the cup). Tom Weiskopf later made four birdies in five holes to pull within three shots of leading John Mahaffey. (UPI)

Urdhjem wins her 10th Times-News golf crown

GOODING—Virginia Urdhjem built up a big lead and outlasted a late challenge by Sergene Sorenson of Friday Friday afternoon to win the Times-News Magic Valley women's amateur championship.

Mrs. Urdhjem, picking up her 10th championship in this event, entered the day with a seven-stroke lead over Mrs. Sorenson, the defending champion with three Magic Valley championships—titles sitting in her trophy case.

Mrs. Urdhjem stretched that lead to 11 strokes over the first nine of Friday's play, clinging in for an eagle three on the par five fourth hole to account for much of it.

Put once the second nine began, Mrs. Sorenson started coming back. She carded a 21 to slice six strokes off the deficit.

Following the tournament the contenders took a shot at the continued play preliminaries that women's golf tournament fields face.

"It's not just here," said Mrs. Urdhjem, "it was the same in the Gate City (in Pocatello, Highland) last week. For some reason they'll give women a fair level of play that the preliminaries make it impossible to get a shot into the green."

Mrs. Sorenson conceded that, noting "I asked the boys who placed them here why they'd done it. I told him he certainly wouldn't do it to a bunch of men. He finally admitted he thought it would be funny."

"I'm like Virginia. I'm not picking on Gooding because they've run a good tournament for us. But it just seems like if you're a woman playing in a tournament who gets these terrible placements."

The total field was complimentary to the Gooding country club's women's association for the handling of the tournament. Following completion of play Friday the contestants were treated to a full-course dinner.

Mrs. Urdhjem took the championship with a 73-82-161 total while Mrs. Sorenson was second for the title at 86-89-186. However, Mrs. Sorenson won an first place in the medal division at 144 while Ardi Morgan, Jerome, took second at 140. Shirley Blake, Twin Falls, and Barbara Anderson, tied for second in championship flight net at 147.

at 179 against 184 for runner-up Lenora Kinsworth, Rupert, Judi Howland, Jerome, was third at 185. The net championship went to Dolores Barr, Hail, 124, followed by Freda Richmond, Buhl, 139, and Peg LeBoeuf, Gooding, and Marya Duncan, Twin Falls, 144.

Kathy Borchard, Buhl, took the second flight at 190 while Linda Stebbins, Jerome, and Kathleen Fish, Buhl, tied for second gross at 199. Milder Lynch, Burley, was the net winner with 141, followed by Marty Janson, Twin Falls, at 146 and Emma Barry, Jerome, at 147.

Third flight honors went to Shirley Cobble, Jerome, who wound up with a 199. Runner-up was Ruth Camozzi, Jerome, at 202 and Ruse Burke—Buhl, and Florence Thomson, Twin Falls, shared third—at 206.

Charlotte—Van Engelen, Twin Falls, was the net champion with a 135 while Roberta Parrish, Buhl, had 141 and Judy Taylor, Twin Falls, 144.

In the fourth flight, LuDene Hopkins, Buhl, had a 20-stroke bulge in the gross division, besting Shannon Sackman 294-224. Shirley Hill, Twin Falls, had a 144-74 for the net top while Dawn Massener, Twin Falls, was second with 151.

1976 TIMES-NEWS Magic Valley women's amateur golf champion Virginia Urdhjem, right and runner-up Sergene Sorenson bally up after another chapter of their rivalry in the tournament. Sergene won the tournament last year. This year's title was the 10th Times-News win for Virginia.

Scully wins 20 Kilometer walk, Williams fails in 100 meter run

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—Todd Scully won an Olympic berth in a disputed end to the 20-kilometer walk at the U.S. Olympic Trials and National Championships, Saturday when Steve Williams—probably the world's top sprinter—pulled up lame twice in the 100-meter run and virtually eliminated himself from the Montreal Games next month.

"Williams grabbed his right thigh 15 meters from the end in a trial heat during the morning, but won a qualifying start in the quarterfinals just the same while finishing sixth. Bravely, he said he would be able to nurse his way through the quarterfinals later in the day and the semis and final on Sunday, but the 22-year-old native of New York proved a poor prophet."

There were two false starts in his heat of the quarterfinals, which didn't help any, and when the race finally got underway, Williams went only about 20 meters and then pulled up. Walking sadly in front of the main grandstand at Hayward Field, Williams, who has held the world 100-meter record of 9.9 five times, was given a warm ovation by a crowd of around 15,000.

The 200-meter dash, for which Williams also has qualified, will be run on Monday and Tuesday and it seemed doubtful, from the way Williams grabbed his leg, that he could be in shape for an all-arounder's resume.

Among those who advanced to the semifinals in the 100 was Auburn freshman Harvey

Glance, who has run the 100 in 9.9 twice. However, Glance lost to Williams in their only head-to-head meet a month ago at the King Games in Atlanta when Williams went 9.9 for the fifth time in his career.

Brooks Johnson, Williams' coach, said he would require a gross effort to get his runner's leg in shape in 36 hours in order to compete in the 200. Williams, though, was optimistic.

"I'll be back," he said.

Fingers doesn't know where to go

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—Rolfie Fingers says some of his belongings are in Anaheim, some of them in Henderson, Boston, and one in Mexico City. Fingers' shorts, Salt Bando's shirt and Glenn Abbott's glove.

Fingers' situation Saturday was representative of the soul-of-the-Oakland-A's in particular, after Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's landmark decision canceling the $15 million sale of Joe Rauld and Fingers to the Boston Red Sox and Vida Blue to the New York Yankees.

The three-time world champion A's, and probably all baseball franchises, figured to make their biggest news in court this year as the result of Kuhn's ruling Friday.

fighting back the frustration. Williams said his leg pained him in the hamstring muscle from his attacks to his ankle, indicating the injury may be far more serious than he thinks.

Scully, a 27-year-old school teacher from Neshanic Station, N.J., won the walk and officials desired the first two positions legal and ordered walk-out for the last Olympic test.

Scully's winning time was 1 hour, 25 minutes and 28.6 seconds. Ron Laird was clocked 1:25:43.6 and Larry Walker 1:25:56.3, which was 43 seconds faster than Young.

Officials said that there will be a walk-off of the race June 27 among Walker, Young, James Hering, Goetz Koepfer and Dan O'Connor to determine the third Olympic spot.

The dream of winning a place on a record sixth Olympic team came to an end for 36-year-old Willie Berry when she placed fifth in the women's long jump final.

Teen-agers Kathy McMillan and Sherron Walker finished one-two in 23.3 and 21.7, respectively, while 30-year-old Martha Watson grabbed the third spot with a leap of 21.6. Former world record holder Rick Woblutner was the top qualifier in heats of the men's 800 with a fast 1:46.0. Twelve runners advanced to the semifinals on Sunday and there were no surprises among those who failed.

Pete Schmock was the top qualifier in the shot put as world record holder Terry Abtrition, Al Feuerbach and George Woods all advanced as expected, along with world discus record holder Mac Wilkins, who entered as the said for the fun of it.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Bill Forrester and John Naber set American records in the preliminaries of the fourth day of the U.S. Olympic Swimming Trials at Belmont Plaza, with Forrester shattering the Mark Spitz' 200-meter butterfly mark of 2:00.70 mark set in the 1972 Munich Olympics.

Forrester of Birmingham, Ala., swam 1:59.70 in the 200-meter butterfly qualifying. Spitz' mark is also the listed world record, but Roger Pyle of East Germany has a pending mark of 1:59.63 set earlier this year.

Mike Bruner of Stockton, Calif., also was under the record in finishing second to Forrester with a time of 1:59.72.

Naber of Menlo Park, Calif., lowered his own record in the 200-meter backstroke with a time of 2:02.46. His old mark was 2:02.59 set last year in the AAU long course championships. It was the second American record for the junior from the University of Southern California at the trials.

He topped his own record in the 100-meter backstroke two days ago.

There have now been seven American records set in 14 events in the trials—five of them in the men's division.

In the women's events, two defending Olympic champions bettered their own trials' records.

American records set in swimming

Karen Moe Thornton of Los Angeles, one of the oldest competitors at age 23, set a trials mark of 2:15.45 in the 200-meter butterfly.

American record holder Valerie Lee of Missoula, Va., failed to qualify in the 200-meter butterfly, finishing last in her heat.

Lee had major surgery for an ovarian cyst just 15 days ago and secondary surgery only two days ago.

Qualifying in the men's 200-meter backstroke for Saturday night's finals were Naber, Peter Roppa, Dan Harrison, Tim McKee, Cross, Tempton, Robert Jackson, Scott Gordin and Bruce Hardeste.

Men's 200-meter butterfly qualifiers were Thornton, Bruner, Tony Bartle, Steve Gregg, Greg Jagenburg, Richard Thornton, Scott Lautman and Bill Glasspeter. Qualifying in the women's 100-meter backstroke were Belfie, Marjane Graham, Miriam Smith, Renee Magee, Linda Jezek, Susan Boyd, Ellen Wallace and Sara Jamer.

Women's 200-meter butterfly qualifiers were Thornton, Don, Alex Wennerstrom, Wendy Weinberg, Camille Wright, Alice Browne, Huddle Walsh, April Swanson and Peggy Pogdal.

West wins 35-17 in All-star game

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Lanky Henry Marshall of the University of Missouri made two spectacular catches to set up a pair of touchdowns and then caught two scoring touchdowns himself Saturday night in rallying the West in a 35-17 win over the East in the 16th Coaches All-American Football Game.

Although the East produced an impressive passing game featuring the throwing of Mike Krueck and the catching of Larry Dorsey and Dwight Scotts, it was Marshall who continually made the big plays.

He caught a 25-yard toss from New Mexico's Steve Myer in the first period to set up a two-yard touchdown by Skip Walker of Texas A&M and then hauled down a 30-yarder from Bowling Green in Washington in the second period to create a one-yard plunge for another score by Rowland.

In the second half, with the West trailing 17-14, Marshall caught a seven-yard touchdown throw from Myer and then put the contest out of reach with a nine-yard scoring reception from Rowland in the final quarter. Myer threw another touchdown pass to Arizona's Theo Bell midway through the final period to end the scoring.

Rick Jennings of Maryland scored on runs of three and two yards in the opening quarter to give the East a temporary lead, but the East's only other points came on a 32-yard field goal by Tom Stellhorn of Boston College.

National hunting license coming closer to reality

The supreme court has spoken and the United States is just a little closer to the national hunting license.

Thursday the supreme court, hearing a case out of New Mexico, held that the federal government owned all the wild animals on federally owned land.

Now that ruling in itself will tell you a lot about what the bureaucrats are going to think next.

Some livestockmen in New Mexico are worried up some wild burros on federally-owned land that were coupling with their animals for the rented pasture. The burros were sold and the livestock arrested.

In ruling that the livestock interests were illegal in that enterprise, the court said the wild animals on government owned land belong to all wild animals on state land belong to the state and all wild animals on private land belong to the landowner? The catchless seems to point to the fact that if an elk is in the yard of your summer home, you can kill it with complete impunity because it is owned by you.

It has always seemed here that wherever a state was admitted to the union, if reserved—or was returned—some things as the wildlife, stream beds, etc.

Some livestockmen have spent a lot of time and money on its wildlife resources with the funds of course, derived from that resource. But now to be suddenly told it doesn't have those animals, smacks of the old question of just widows running this country, the judges or the bureaucrats?

Ironically, this point comes up at a time when the Idaho Fish and Game Department is getting 20 kinds of hook over its shoulder by the state. The bare fact now is that the title is much closer to the time that federally-owned lands will be open to shooting and hunting, only to those with federally-owned licenses.

Furthermore, just when we see secretary of the interior responsible for all federally-owned lands — come to Magic Valley and hear the gripes of area sportsmen about whether seasons are too short or too long, too much or too little kill?

It is hoped that the supreme court's ruling had a safety-valve clause that continues to re-write the hunting and fishing on public lands to individual states. It is doubted. And the Bureaucrats will be the first to let us know about it.

Not only that, but they will tell you exactly which campground you can stay in for $1 per night and exactly which canyon you can hunt.

Complain and all you'll run into is a mountain of paper work 2100 miles away!

Last week was a very pleasant week here as we watched Charles O'Finley prove to his fellow-man league baseball owners they are every bit as greedy as he is told they were. In his auction topser of all time, Finley got rid of his negotiating headaches and earned three and one-half million bucks in the process — not to mention his object lesson.

Fortunately all the owners' tusser over the matter — particularly those that didn't have a spare million laying around for such opportunities.

Conversely, it also should be a lesson to the players that seem to think a God-given athletic talent is a free ticket to Utopia for life that perhaps a few people are getting tired of these sport poses filled with litigation and negotiation all the time.

The point should not be missed by those of the new generation who believe that the individual is more important than the whole.

The entire history of mankind has been a binding together of strength, pooling strengths and knowledge to the betterment of the whole. If that isn't a correct statement, then how came each of us as a family unit isn't out fighting dinosaurs off from in front of the cave?

Aussies win Davis Cup after long tie

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — Australia was the longest Davis cup tie in history Saturday, when John Newcombe and three times Wimbledon champion, overcame Brian Fairlie of New Zealand 8-6, 7-11, 6-3.

The win gave Australia an unbeatable 3-1 edge in the 1976 Davis Cup final, which began four months ago on the other side of the world in Brisbane. A tropical storm forced postponement of the tie with Australia leading 2-1, and it was rescheduled here two days before Wimbledon when all the players involved would be in the same place.

Newcombe took another three hours and 25 minutes to beat the 25-year-old Fairlie and showed obvious signs of his arm-injury which has kept him out of the game for the past two weeks.

The 11th Australian produced error after error and his service return was weakened

Reds edge by Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Dave Concepcion banged out three hits, scored a run and drove in another Saturday to help the Cincinnati Reds and right-hander Gary Nolan score a 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a nationally televised game between the National League division leaders.

Nolan, 7-5, picked up his fourth straight victory with relief help from Rawley Eastwick who pitched the last two innings, striking out three for his eighth save.

After the Phillies tied the game, 3-3, on Mike Schmidt's 15th homer of the season in the sixth, Cincinnati used a triple by George Foster and a sacrifice fly by Tony Perez to score the game-winning run in the seventh which tagged Ron Reed with the loss. Reed is now 6-4.

Mets drive by Giants 5-0

NEW YORK (UPI) — Lighthizing Marty Perez struck three hits and drove in three runs while Jim Barr limited New York to seven hits Saturday to pace a 5-0 victory by the San Francisco Giants over the Mets.

Barr evaded his record at 5-5 while recording his first shutout of the season. The complete game performance was only the seventh by the Giant since 1966 games.

MONTREAL (UPI) — Pete Mackanin singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday to give the Montreal Expos a 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers behind the late going pitching of Don Stanhouse.

Arizona collects baseball crown

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Left-hander Bob Chauk allowed just six hits Saturday night in hurling Arizona past Eastern Michigan 7-1 for the 1976 College World Series championship and the first intercollegiate title in the school's history.

Chauk, upping his series record to 3-0, struck out five batters in recording his 12th victory of the season against two losses.

Arizona led the contest in the fourth, parlaying five hits including a homer, double and three singles for four runs to take a commanding 5-0 lead.

Arizona's Pete Van Horn finished with three hits, boosting his series total to 13, breaking the series record of 12 set by Stan Brando of Arizona State in 1965.

Wildcat designated hitter Steve Powers, the series' most valuable player, blasted a 375-foot rightfield homer in the fourth to give Arizona a 3-0 advantage. Dave Siegman slammed his fourth double of the series to score Don Zimmerman and Glenn Wendt, winning a winner.

Eastern Michigan's Great Gulliver spoiled Chauk's shutout with a solo homer in the top of the ninth. The 350-foot, rightfielder shot was Gulliver's 10th of the year.

The second-ranked Wildcats finished the season at 56-17, while the third-rated Eastern Michigan ended at 46-16. Arizona earned the right to meet the Husons by defeating top-ranked Arizona State 5-1, Friday night.

F & G fish sorter puts less stress on salmon

BY ROYCE WILLIAMS
 Idaho Department of Fish and Game

Rube Goldberg would be proud of the Department of Fish and Game.

Although the new fish sorter at Rapid River Hatchery near Riggins sprawls in an unwieldy looking arch, the chinook salmon in the trap don't hesitate to use it.

The trap door leading to the sorter was opened for the first time this week and 50 salmon averaging about 10 pounds each were sorted, vaccinated and loaded on a tanker truck in one-fourth the time it used to take.

Evans Parrish, hatchery superintendent, said the new sorting device puts less stress on the migrating salmon, since his staff doesn't have to touch the fish other than the few seconds it takes to vaccinate them.

After a few minutes in the anesthetics, the adult salmon are inoculated for kidney disease, the only time they are touched by hatchery workers in the transfer from Rapid River to hatchery holding ponds.

Parrish said about 1,100 fish have moved through the sorter so far this year. He said about 250 salmon a day have been moving into the trap and through the sorter.

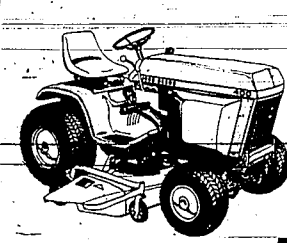

These fish are deflected into a third tank.

If it is an adult salmon, the gate operator closes two gates and lets the fish slide into a tank filled with a water-anesthetic mixture.

Should the fish appearing in the wall of water at the top of the slide turn out to be a jack, steelhead or a Dolly Varden, the gates to the anesthetic tank and the holding tank are closed.

The first two hours of operation this week, 21 adult chinook, 15 jacks (salmon that have spent only one year in the ocean), 18 Dolly Varden and three steelhead were checked through the sorter.

Parrish said that without the sorter his staff would have to spend nearly an hour wrestling the large fish in the trap. Now, he said, the same work can be done in about 15 minutes, with much less stress on the salmon.

Basketball merger won't end big money

PORTLAND (UPI) — The executive vice-president of the Portland Trail Blazers said Friday that absorption of four American Basketball Association teams by the National Basketball Association doesn't mean the end of multimillion dollar player contracts.

Harry Glickman, the Blazer official, said "The franchise will still get his just wait until Kerenski (AABA's president) is in position to declare."

He added, "We reduced the signing price and long guarantee for rookies but we are going to operate under some revolutionary rules."

One compromise by the NBA was an agreement to guarantee players' freedom of movement."

He foresees the time when "a man can buy a championship unless some restraints are imposed."

Glickman said, "There was some temptation to let the ABA sink and then pick up the pieces."

He said no one came out of the NBA meeting this week completely satisfied with the plan for absorbing the four ABA teams.

He added, however, "What they accomplished is good for basketball. It takes us out of the legal courts and puts us on the basketball courts where we belong."

Conners, Nastase final rained out

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI)—On a court turned into a skating rink by constant drizzle, Jimmy Conners and Ilie Nastase slipped and slid through two sets of their John Player tournament final Saturday before calling it a day with the score balanced delicately between them.

Conners took the opening set 6-3 with Nastase winning the second 6-4. At 1-1 in the final set there was so much water on the court that spray was flying off the serve balls and the pair decided to stop and avoid possible injury just two days before Wimbledon. They agreed to share the $28,300 prize money.

The grass court and the gloaming antics of both players—doubles partners and the best of friends off court—meant the match had little bearing on their true form for Wimbledon, where Conners, 19, is the No. 2 seed but Nastase, the third seed but man most likely to upset the American.

Their match here was delayed by the final of the Asian Zone of the Davis Cup, which had been postponed by torrential rain in Brisbane.

Australia, in February with Australia leading New Zealand 2-1. John Newcombe assured Australia of a winning 2-1 edge in the best of five match by beating Brian Fairlie, 65, 57, 11-9, 6-3.

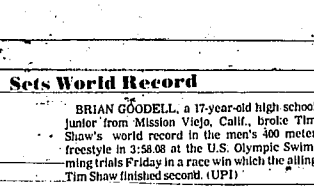

When Conners and Nastase came to court, the court was already thoroughly wet but to the delight of the 3,800 crowd, they decided to risk injury and play.

Conners had fewer problems adapting to the slick surface which had balls shooting through very low and took the first set easily.

But Nastase broke through in the first game of the second set and the match suddenly came to life. Nastase's clowning over began to get on Conners' nerves and at one point he shouted at the Romanian: "Can you just play two points quiet?"

The opening service break was enough to give Nastase the edge as the remaining games went with sorcery.

Nastase quickly broke through Conners' opening service game in the final set but with the rain beginning to come down heavily, the end of the match was just one game away. Conners broke back to make it 1-1 with some fine forehand volleys and then both players agreed to call it off.

Trinity locks up trophy

By RALPH WAKLEY
UPI Sports Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—Trinity University locked up its second straight Women's National Intercollegiate Tennis team championship in the quarterfinal matches, but Saturday blew back-to-back singles and doubles titles.

No. 4-seeded Barbara Hallquist of Southern California captured the singles crown in straight sets from Mary Hamm, eliminating Trinity's final hope for an individual title.

Hallquist took the women's title 6-4, 6-4. Stanford's Stacie Hagey and Diane Morrison, winners over Trinity's Stephanie Tolson and Sandy Stap in Friday semifinals, won the doubles crown in straight sets from 1975's Paul Smith and Cindy Thomas, 6-3, 6-4.

Hallquist was never behind in her drive for the singles title. After the tiny Hamm had evened the first set at 4-4, the USC player held her service and then broke Hamm's in the tenth game.

"My serving was consistent throughout the game," said Hallquist. "And her backhand wasn't as strong today as it was yesterday in her win over Stephanie. I was able to keep the ball moving fast and limit her hits."

Trinity finished just one point ahead of Stanford in the team race, 22-31, for the win in the 19th annual tournament and the Penn School's fifth team title.

USC was third with 23 points, followed by UCLA 19, Miami and Texas both with 14, Southern Methodist 12, Texas-Panhandle Basin 11, Cal-Santa Barbara's 10.3, Long Beach State 10.2 and Brigham Young 9.6.

Lele Forood and Barbara Jordan of Stanford beat Trinity's Tolson-Stap, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4, for third place in the doubles. And Tolson defaulted to Stap for third in the singles.

Nerissa Riley of Odessa (Texas) took the consolation singles crown with a 6-1, 6-3, win over BYU's Karen Kennington; and Linda Mitchell-Kern Meares of Texas-Panhandle Basin the consolation doubles, 6-3, 6-3, from Cal-Santa Barbara's Kandy Bremker-Serena Rittmayer.

Olympic basketball coach cuts players

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI)—U.S. Olympic basketball Coach Dean Smith began the process of cutting his 15-member team to 12 Saturday by dropping Scott Lloyd of Arizona State and Otis Birdsong of Houston from the team.

"This was one of the most difficult decisions I've ever had to make," Smith said. "However, it is necessary to begin the cutting process."

"Both Otis and Scott are outstanding players or they would not have gotten this far. They have worked very hard and made valuable contributions to the Olympic team."

The cutting of Lloyd, a 6-7 center, and Birdsong, a 6-4 guard, left Smith with 13 players in the Olympic camp. He said the final cut would probably be made late next week.

Smith added that Birdsong and Lloyd could be called back to the team if any injuries developed.

The Olympic team is heavy with players from Smith's own Atlantic Coast Conference teams, including four from his own North Carolina team.

Still remaining are Phil Ford, Mitch Kupchak, Tommy Langarde and Walter Davis, all of North Carolina; Tate Armstrong of Duke; Kenny Carr of North Carolina State; and Steve Sheppard of Maryland; Mark Landsberger of Arizona State; Ernie Grunfeld of Tennessee; Phil Hubbard of Michigan; Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame; and Scott May and Quinn Buckner of Indiana.

The Olympic team has won two of its three exhibition games, defeating the Spanish Olympic team and splitting a two-game series with the Denver Nuggets. The Olympics were scheduled to meet the Israeli Olympic team at College Park, Md., Sunday.

DENVER (UPI) — The attorney for a group backing diversion of Western Colorado water across the Rockies to the Denver area said today he doubts any compromise on two ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Annapolitan Sugar Company announced today the establishing of an office in downtown Boise for its factory operations. John R. Coraberg, vice president of operations, has been transferred from the general office in Ogden to head the activities of the new Boise office.

House-Senate conferees Thursday eliminated nine of 12 differences between proposals sponsored by Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., and Rep. James Johnson, R-Colo. The Denver Water Board opposed both measures.

Johnson's bill would create a wilderness of nearly 131,000 acres and Haskell's bill would create a 127,000-acre wilderness. The water board favored a wilderness region of 97,775 acres.

A board spokesman said both Haskell and Johnson versions of the Eagles-Nest Wilderness Bill would force the water board to abandon its acquisition of water through gravity-flow diversions and Flynn said the conference committee would meet again Monday to decide whether to exclude a 3,590-acre tract from the wilderness. The exclusion would enable the water board to collect 28,000-acre feet of water annually in the Eagle-Piney collection system.

Bidders sought to round up horses

SALMON, Idaho (UPI) — The Bureau of Land Management is seeking qualified bidders to roundup between 120 and 200 wild horses and transport them to a central holding facility in Salmon. The wild horses are located south of Challis in an area of approximately 150,000 acres of open, rolling to steep terrain. Harry R. Finlayson, BLM

Salmon district manager, said today the wild horse herd in the Challis Planning Unit has grown to some 450 animals and the bureau is attempting to reduce the number because of range land competition. "It is expected that most of the horses can be gathered into a permanent corral located within the area but portable corrals will be installed by the bureau in three locations to facilitate gathering in certain isolated portions of the wild horse area," Finlayson said. He indicated the method of capture will be limit-ed to using saddle horses to drive the wild horses into the permanent corral or one of the temporary portable corrals. The successful bidder will need to furnish manpower, saddle horses and tack necessary for the gathering. Transportation for the

Wasps to battle Mexican beetles

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Department of Agriculture said today it has enlisted the aid of parasitic wasps from 19,000 to battle the Mexican bean beetle.

The department said the imported wasps will not sting people, but will depopulate backyard gardens of the bean beetle, which poses a serious threat to Idaho's commercial bean industry.

Top wasps, the department has sought to control the spread of the beetles to prevent infestations of commercial bean fields, but new infestations were found each year — and each year found the infestations closer to the big bean fields west of Boise.

The department learned last year of the successful suppression of bean beetles in Maryland through the use of the imported wasps and it was decided to include the biological weapon in the agency's arsenal for the 1976 campaign.

"The wasps are currently being incubated at the University of Idaho's branch experiment station and will be ready for use by the time the Mexican bean beetle larvae are emerging."

The wasps lay their eggs on the beetle larvae, preventing larval development and eventually destroying the pest.

Fred Bode, Boise, chief of the department's bureau of plant services, said the plan for 1976 is to establish a buffer zone in the western suburbs of Boise.

"This area is of primary concern since it borders the commercial bean growing areas in this part of the state," Bode said, adding this buffer zone will be extended eastward in subsequent years.

"The program this year is designed for eradication instead of just control," he said. "It will probably be three or four years before the beetle will be eradicated."

Idaho's cherry crop increases

TWIN FALLS — This year's Idaho cherry crop is about 20 per cent bigger than last year's.

According to Stanley Robison, owner of Robinson Fruit Ranch near Caldwell, Idaho, has about 15 to 20 per cent more cherries than last year.

"Idaho growers have between 1600 and 1800 tons this year or 160,000 20-pound tugs," Robison said.

That figure compares to about 140,000 tugs or 1400 tons harvested by Idaho growers last year, Robison said.

Robison said that the market is on the soft side this year, though.

"California is just finishing a big crop," Robison said. "Too big."

He said that California cherries were a little on the small side this year, Idaho cherries will be bigger and better.

Robison said that cherries will be in good supply from the first of July until the 15th.

"The size looks good and the quality will be pretty good. It looks like to me," Robison said. "Of course the main cherries are blings, but we have some lambers."

L. E. Bolt, of Emmett Valley Fruit, Inc., also predicts a good crop of cherries all over southern Idaho. He predicts that they will be ready for picking on the 28th of June.

"The price," Bolt said, "is governed by what the price is in the Northwest."

And Robison said he thinks the price will be about the same as last year.

Richard Kelley, owner of Courley Orchard, northwest of Filer, will be selling his planting cherries for the same price as last year, 25 cents a pound.

Kelley said he thinks his cherries will be ready in about ten days.

"Different fields ripen at different times," Kelley said. "You have to start picking somewhere. We try to pace it, so that we have fresh cherries all the time."

Kelley said that early cherries are better for eating, because they do not split when cooked. He also said that early cherries have a little bit lower sugar content than the later cherries.

Firms fined for water discharge

CHEYENNE (UPI) — Two companies illegally discharging water into Wyoming streams have agreed to pay $9,500 in fines and comply with state environmental standards in the settlement of a district court lawsuit filed by the Department of Environmental Quality.

The Energy Development Co. and Herb Koch Production Corporation Thursday filed the settlement consent decree, usually approved by judges, in Laramie County District Court.

The DEQ said the Koch firm was discharging pollutants from oil treater facilities into streams in Big Horn and Washakie counties.

The company will pay a $5,000 fine and apply for waste water discharge permits.

Energy Development was charged with three counts of discharging pollutants into Wyoming water in connection with its coal mines near Hanna, Wyo. The DEQ said waste water being discharged from two mines and a water treatment plant was built without a permit.

"The corporation said it will stop all illegal discharges and bring its treatment plant into compliance with state law."

BLM asked to aid horses

SALMON, Idaho (UPI) — Proponents of wild horse protection and humane treatment have been asked by a Bureau of Land Management board to fund the maintenance and distribution of the horses.

The Salmon District Bureau of Land Management's Multiple Use Advisory Board requested that the wild horses and burros on the Challis Planning Unit be maintained at the number which were on the range at the time the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act was passed.

Wild Horse Chairman Lawrence Bradbury of Challis said he feels livestock is being discriminated against in connection with wild horses and wildlife use.

The board asked that no money from range improvement funds be used for the distribution or maintenance of captured wild horses.

'City slickers' praise farm colleagues

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It may be only temporary, but some big city members of the House are heaping praise on their farm colleagues and vice versa.

The occasion for this era of good feeling was a House vote this week approving the annual Agriculture Department appropriations bill, which includes a $1.5 million fund to pay for a pilot project in promoting food gardening in big cities.

The House is accustomed to hearing its urban members denounce big farm subsidies as Rep. Peter A. Beyer, R-N.Y., did Wednesday in an unsuccessful bid to knock funds for peanut supports out of the appropriations bill.

"It is nice to see hearing members like Fred Richmond, a freshman Democrat from a totally urban Brooklyn district in New York City, announce that:

"...the chairman is an important change he has taken place in this year's agriculture appropriations bill which heralds, I believe, the beginning of a new era of understanding and cooperation between rural and urban America."

"We have a bill before us which recognizes for the first time 'the unique interrelationship between American agriculture and the urban consumer,'" Richmond declared. Much of the credit should go to Chairman Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., of the agricultural appropriations subcommittee and the panel's GOP leader, Rep. Mark Andrews, N.D., he said.

The New Yorker praised sections of the bill which rejected an administration attempt to cut $10-million in funds for nutrition education, provided new funds for old farm labor housing, and approved $2 million for a national food consumption study.

Richmond saved his most enthusiastic praise, however, for the $13-million experimental city gardening program, which, he said, will operate on a test basis in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The funds will be used to hire extension workers who will help city residents learn how to grow vegetables in backyards and vacant lots.

"This is a wonderful program," Richmond said. "We want to interest more urban people in growing food, understanding the value of food, and finally bringing a source of fresh vegetables to our urban population."

Rep. William Natcher, D-Ky., a veteran member of the agricultural appropriations subcommittee which approved the gardening fund, declared the praise for his subcommittee's bill required some compliments in return.

"On many occasions we have had members from New York City and other large cities who have questioned the contents of our farm appropriations bills, from time to time we have believed that maybe we do not at all times receive the assistance that we should from our large cities and the members from large cities," Natcher said.

But now, a New Yorker was standing up to praise the farm bloc legislators and talking of a new era of cooperation.

"I want to commend the gentleman (Richmond). He is an outstanding member of Congress," Natcher added.

Amid this wave of good feeling, however, conservative Rep. John Roussetol, R-Cal., raised a dissenting note.

"What will the $1.5 million be spent for, he asked Richmond.

"Mostly to pay people from land grant colleges 'who come down into the cities to teach people how to grow gardens in urban areas,'" Richmond replied.

"Incredible," Roussetol said. "We used to subsidize opops. We have stopped that. Now we are going to subsidize people to grow gardens in their backyards."

Richmond protested that no subsidies would be involved. But Roussetol warned the freshman New Yorker:

"The gentleman has not been around here for long. He will soon learn that any small program like this grows into bigger and better things."

UN confab OK's restrictions on land

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The United Nations Conference on Human Settlements, dominated by third-world representatives, has endorsed a call for sharp restrictions on the private ownership of land.

After two weeks of deliberations here, the 4,500 delegates approved more than 100 recommendations aimed at improving community life around the world.

The delegates asked that land be managed as a public resource rather than a profit-generating commodity and called for redistribution of land in poor countries and for a more equitable distribution of wealth.

"Land, because of its unique nature and the crucial role it plays in human settlement, cannot be treated as an ordinary asset, controlled by individuals and subject to the pressures and inefficiencies of the market," the conference declared.

"Private land ownership also is a principal instrument of accumulation and concentration of wealth and therefore contributes to social injustice, if unchecked. It may become a major obstacle in the planning and implementation of development schemes."

The closing hours of the conference were punctuated by a parliamentary maneuvering by the Arab bloc to inject declarations critical of Israel into the record, and by an unsuccessful attempt by Panama to engage the United States in debate over the Panama Canal.

The Arab bloc, supported by Communist and third-world nations, persuaded the conference to endorse a statement, proposed by Israel, saying: "In occupied territories the uprooting of the native population and the establishment of new settlements for intruders is inadmissible." The vote was 8 with 26 abstentions.

A second Arab resolution in effect endorsing last November's United Nations vote equating Zionism with racism, was the subject of debate in the conference's final hours.

The United States frustrated Panama's effort to engage it in debate by declining to argue about the Panamanian amendment.

To general surprise the deputy chairman of the U.S. delegation, Dr. Russell W. Peterson, chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality, said: "The United States moves that the Panama Amendment be adopted by consensus." It was.

The amendment, which did not mention the Canal Zone but was generally understood to refer to its eastern part, Land must not be the subject of restrictions imposed by foreign nations which enjoy the benefits while preventing its rational use.

The conference outlined dozens of recommended policies, from consideration for handicapped people in community design to ways of enlarging citizen participation in the planning for communities.

The most specific recommendation was that to improve the lot of underprivileged people, nations should make "insure all their citizens of regular supplies of potable water by 1990."

The U.S. delegation, headed by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Carlo Hills, concurred in virtually all of the recommendations.

L.M. Boyd

Somebody or other sponsored a beauty contest during the Louisiana Purchase Exhibition in St. Louis, Mo., in 1904. When Rev. Thomas B. Gregory heard about it, he said, "No truly refined girl would submit to such a thing. The bare thought of it would drive her mad!" Not everybody agreed. I guess. There are about 5,000 beauty contests every year in this country now.

"Where on earth is the highest inhabited spot?" inquires a client. That's in Chile. Some people there live at an altitude of 20,000 feet. Highest inhabited spot in the United States is the Mt. Evans laboratory in Colorado at 14,156 feet.

LINCOLN'S SUB

O. "How much did Abraham Lincoln pay for a substitute that took his place as a soldier with the Union Army during the Civil War?"

A. Just $750. John Sumner filed Staples was the fellow. Of Sumner's P. Lincoln was president, that's of course; the payment for the stand-in was a patriotic gesture like the buying of defense bonds in a later day.

Those young ladies who model high-fashion clothing are expected to supply their own shoes, reasonably enough. If they're going to cavort on their feet all day long, their shoes need to be well fitted, a permanent part of their wardrobe. And 20 pairs of shoes are not too many per model. So that's another place a model's money goes.

WHITE GOWN

First English-speaking bride to wear a white wedding gown was Mary, Queen of Scots, according to the historical footnotes. Before her, the brides wore red.

If you're a Pisces, says our Zodiac man, you're inclined to be somewhat imaginative and pretty romantic, although some times a little tickle.

North and South Carolina were named three times. From the Latin carolus meaning Charles. In the 16th century, for Charles IV of France. In 1629, for Charles I of England. Finally, in 1663, for Charles II.

The bees that sit in a circle around the queen bee always face her. Sixteen of the 50 states have names that begin with M or N. Figure 100 m.p.h. is just about the speed of a sneeze. Individual pumpkins have been known to grow as many as 15 miles of roots. Female dogs bite people half again as frequently as do male dogs.

No householder in New York legally can hose down a sidewalk without a permit.

Chairman post offered to Andrus

TWIN FALLS — Montana's Gov. Thomas L. Judge told Idaho Democrats in convention here, Thursday, Gov. Cecil Andrus of Idaho is being honored with the opportunity of serving as chairman of the National Governor's Conference.

This is the year for a Democratic chairmanship of the convention and Gov. Andrus of Idaho has been mentioned as a probable selection.

Gov. Andrus said in Twin Falls Thursday afternoon, it is not a foregone conclusion as delegates of the national conference would have the final vote. His assistant Chris Carlson said the governor has not yet decided if he will accept the chairmanship in view of the Teton flood and other pressing matters in Idaho.

The National Governor's Conference will be held July 4, 5 and 6 in Hersey, Pa. The chairmanship alternates between a Republican and a Democratic governor each year.

Black smoke billows over Johannesburg township

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The black woman wearing a colored "lock" (scarf) around her head and a pink smock—the dress of a servant of a white home—ran across the road, tears streaming down her cheeks from the smoke.

"I don't know, master," she said. "The clinic has been burned and the schools. I just don't know what's going on. There's lots of shooting and I saw people bleeding."

Not only were the clinic and the schools burned—so were the movie theater and Mahlanga's shop in the black township of Alexandra, one of the black enclaves swept by flooding.

A burly black policeman carrying a four-foot club patrolled the edge of the township. Black and white motorists kept stopping on the road, which leads out to eastern Johannesburg, to watch the fires and listen to the sound of glass-shatters over the cracking goods in Mahlanga's shop.

"Please don't stand around here—the policeman said. "There's shooting going on there. Soon people will be coming out of there," he indicated the rows of drab, dusty houses, and we have to keep the area clear. If we have to shoot."

Denver bicentennial commission would like to forget missing pair

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Chuck and Kathy Payne, rode off into the sunset last September with 10 horses and a mongrel dog named Sam in what they called a patriotic Bicentennial trip.

Anna Best Joder is seeking if something else she missed the horses to the couple and still is trying to get the animals back. And in Virginia, a couple who found the Paynes their care was left back here.

Boulder County authorities said they would like to discuss the situation with the Paynes, but have not been able to locate them. Officials of the Denver Bicentennial Commission said they would like to just forget the whole thing.

It started last September when the Paynes set out for Washington with seven other persons. They planned to celebrate the state's 100th birthday by delivering petitions for statehood on horseback.

Expressed by the Denver bicentennial committee which helped the couple with a $20 check, Payne leased 10 horses from Mrs. Joder for $2,400.

"Several weeks after they left, a friend of mine told me someone in Elizabeth, Colo., had bought one of my horses from the Paynes for $125," Mrs. Joder said.

By the time the Paynes reached Washington in February, they were the only members of the party left and they had only three horses. Investigators for the sheriff's department said they have reports the couple sold the horses on at least three occasions.

The bicentennial sold and abandoned everywhere from Kit Carson County in Colorado to Virginia, officials said.

The Paynes were welcomed by Vice President Nelson Rockefeller when they arrived in Washington.

"What you've done is the most exciting thing that has happened so far in the Bicentennial," Rockefeller officials said.

The last three horses were boarded in Virginia where the Paynes stayed with Tony and Jo Ellen Guilfrie. The Guilfries boarded the horses with friends—the Paynes stay with them and led them back to Denver.

"We expected them back in early March at the latest," Mrs. Guilfrie said. "We haven't heard from them, except for one letter from Mrs. Payne, who said they were enjoying our country very much."

Gas price increase seen for summer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There should be plenty of gasoline at America's service stations this summer, but motorists may have to pay record high prices for it.

The Federal Energy Administration says there are no signs of a gasoline shortage during the Bicentennial summer despite an unexpectedly heavy spring surge in demand. Supplies are good, the agency says, and refinery capacity is more than adequate.

But crude oil prices are climbing — adding impetus to the normal price hike pressure of increased summer driving — and signs point toward a record high national average gasoline price of 10 cents or more a gallon.

"Demand for the first quarter of this year and for the month of April was higher than we expected," FEA chief Frank Zarb said Thursday in a statement.

"And, of course, driving will be heavier during this Bicentennial summer. Although we are not forecasting any gasoline demand that cannot be met, we do urge drivers to obey the speed limit and to be frugal in their driving habits."

Gasoline demand — and prices — traditionally go up during the summer.

The national average retail gasoline price hit an unprecedented 59.3 cents a gallon last September, then fell slightly in a normal winter decline.

Asked whether the price might climb even higher this summer, FEA policy chief Eric Zausner told UPI: "It wouldn't be surprising. It certainly could happen."

Zausner said there is new pressure for higher prices this year because crude oil prices are climbing under the late-1975 energy policy revision. Refiners, wholesalers and retailers are allowed to boost their prices to a 5¢ higher crude oil price.

The trend toward a possible new record high average of 60 cents a gallon or more already had begun to appear this spring.

QUESTION: What do you think of the recent sex scandals in Washington, D. C.?

Sue Myers, Bellevue:

I think they're ridiculous, because that's what goes on everywhere in the U.S., and I really don't think that's where our money is going despite what's been reported.

Mrs. Linda Kimball, Twin Falls:

I think people should know what the people they elected are doing. I think it's terrible.

Mrs. Laurie Lindsey, Bellevue:

I think everyone is entitled in their own privacy, and the news media shouldn't make a big deal out of it.

Nola Quinn, Twin Falls:

I don't see where there's any sense in it.

Mrs. Sandi Falconburg, Jerome:

I think they ought to just let it lie. I don't see why they're even bringing it up.

Ms. Pat Butler, Twin Falls:

I think it's horrible, and those involved should be removed from office.

Peter V. Link, Spokane, Wash.:

I don't agree with what they're doing, and it shouldn't be on the government payroll. However, what they do in their private lives is their business.

C.F. Rossman, Detroit, Mich.:

I'd only say that it's been going on for a long time, and it's about time someone caught them at it.

Spratlys: Orphan islands that many want to adopt

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Mariners' charts lump them all together under the singular heading "dangerous ground." China claims them.

North and South Vietnam claim them. Taiwan has staked its own claim.

The Philippines says they may belong to her. And don't forget the Republic of Morac-Songhratt-Meads.

For much of recorded history, no nation wanted the Spratly Islands — a collection of lowlying reefs, mudbanks, shoals and an occasional island big enough for a flock of seabirds to rest their wings on.

They are scattered across the typhoon belt of the South China Sea between Vietnam and the Philippines between eight and 14 degrees north latitude.

The Spratlys lie off the established sea lanes and, indeed, it would be a rare, mad mariner who would risk his ship sailing among them.

For most of the last century the islands were nothing more than a pet hobby of British Captain James George Meads of the ship "Modeste" — who sailed through in the 1870s and formally claimed them as his own personal property — and Meads' American descendants.

None of it mattered very much until the former government of South Vietnam leased out chunks of the adjacent area to American oil companies and seismic exploration vessels began charting the possibility of black gold beneath the South China Sea.

This week China sounded a bellicose warning against the Philippines, charging that Filipino-sponsored drilling operations had begun "in the area of Lileian of China's Nansha Islands (Spratlys)."

The statement said any invasion, occupation, exploration or exploitation of oil in the Spratlys constituted encroachments on Chinese territory and sovereignty.

Rubbish, say spokesmen of the Republic of Morac-Songhratt-Meads, which claims the Spratlys through its links to the descendants of Captain Meads and also claims the Spanish Sahara for unexplained reasons.

"Neither Vietnam, the two Chinas nor the Philippines have any legitimate right or basis for claiming the islands which are all part of our sacred territory and which make aggressors of the said countries all trying to steal our islands," said Gaswad Muahmed Badranadny, assistant foreign secretary of the republic, in a recent letter.

According to Badranadny, whose letter was postmarked Manila and bore a Republic of Morac-Songhratt-Meads stamp, no one but Meads and his descendants and the Indonesian Sultan of Songhratt-ever-Jald claim to the islands until the possibility of oil was raised.

He said that in 1933 France briefly established a military post on one of the Spratlys but removed it within a matter of months without formally claiming sovereignty.

In 1940 Japan established a submarine base on one of the islands. The base was dismantled at the end of World War II.

In 1955, having bought up the rights of the Sultan of Songhratt, Morion Meads declared the existence of the Kingdom of Humanity which in 1963 was merged into the Republic of Morac-Songhratt-Meads.

The republic spokesman charges the islands were not shown as Chinese territory on early Chinese Communist maps nor claimed as Chinese territory as recently as 1955.

Their location over 1,100 miles from Taiwan and nearly 1,500 miles from the nearest mainland Chinese territory "makes such claims absurd and ludicrous," the spokesman said.

Employee-employer relationships studied

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — An authoritarian boss makes his workers fall while a permissive boss makes himself fall — and plays happy, according to a study funded by the Air Force.

The six-year study, conducted by the Wichita State University Center for Human Appraisal with a $100,000 per year Air Force grant, found permissive bosses produce rebellious workers and authoritarian bosses produce ingratiating, "yes, sir" workers.

The authoritarian assigns obligations but doesn't give his workers the power to do the job right; He programs the subordinate for failure, which allows him to take more power from him. This justifies him in being more abusive," said Art Swency, director and founder of the center.

"The permissive boss gives power away then doesn't have control of his job anymore. The permissive leader programs himself for failure. The permissive thinks he can buy love by giving power. He's usually wrong; because the rebel is not a loving person."

Swency's team of researchers set out to answer the question: How does the relationship between employer and employees affect employees' job satisfaction? They used several tests, including one comparing how an employee wants to behave with how he thinks he's supposed to behave.

The researchers studied both military and private industry and found the military was no more authoritarian than business.

They found that for men the most important factor in liking a job was the job itself—and whether it gave them a feeling of challenge and accomplishment. The second most important factor was how they related to the boss.

"But we found that women in industry viewed how they got along with the boss as more important than the job itself," Swency said.

The ideal relationship between employers and employees, Swency said, is one in which the boss is egalitarian — listening to workers' complaints and acting on them without being permissive — and a subordinate who is both cooperative and critical.

Bill Svancara delivers a body kick to a punching bag

CHERYL ISAAK, 19, Twin Falls, who is just beginning to study Kung-Fu, demonstrates a particularly painful (for the attacker) self defense hold. The breaking of the attacker's wrist is followed immediately by a kick to the knee which is guaranteed to cause the attacker to lose interest in the attack.

THE degree of self control and concentration that can be attained in Kung-Fu is evident in these two photographs. In the top photo, Starr sizes up the stroke. In the bottom photo the Samurai blade stops just short of breaking the skin of the man on whose stomach the muskmelon rests. The strain of concentration is evident in Starr's body.

Are you a 95 lb. weakling?

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Are you a 97-pound weakling? Are you tired of bigger fellows kicking sand in your face?

So was Gene Starr, Tai Kung Fu teacher in Twin Falls.

"I found that because of my small size—I would get pushed around," Starr says. "I got into it (Karate) because it was fun. I found that knowledge and training created strength."

And Starr says anyone who has troubles with his size or strength can learn to defend himself in case of an attack by even a much larger man.

"I weight 105 pounds and stand 5-4," he says. "If it works for me, it'll work for anybody."

And to illustrate, Starr gives free introductory lessons to any interested student. His regular lessons are $30 per month and include three lessons per week. Two of the lessons are private and one is a group class.

His lessons are flexible enough to fit anyone's schedule since he keeps his studio open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

More important than self defense though, Tai Kung Fu Karate is a great form of exercise and physical therapy, according to Starr.

"It is different from the physical therapy at a hospital," he says, "because the patient does it himself."

Starr does not emphasize a lot of philosophical study with his course.

His philosophy is simple.

"We emphasize techniques that will stop a person such as eye shots, groin shots, kicks to the knees and shins-for-leg breaks, things that cannot be used in a tournament," Starr explains.

"All the philosophy in the world is not going to stop a punch or a kick or somebody attacking you in the street," he says.

"We don't believe in breaking boards or bricks, either," he jokes. "How many people have ever been attacked by trees or brick walls?"

The philosophy Starr teaches is simply that of self defense.

"We emphasize overkill," he says. "It is better to have an excess of knowledge and never have to use it than not enough knowledge and get beat up."

One of the underlying principles of Starr's teaching is the redirecting of the opponent's motion. Instead of resisting, he teaches his students to utilize the attacker's strength to their own advantage.

For instance, the white crane stance is a technique in which the student uses hooking and circling motions which hook a man's punch and redirect it then in a circling motion, the defender strikes with his own quick blow.

"You have to maintain control," Starr stresses. "The philosophy here is knowing self-restraint through your confidence."

"We try not to stylize a person," Starr explains. "We teach what is going to fit the individual best."

And there are many varieties of stances, attacks and punches.

There is the white crane, the tiger, the mantis, the monkey, the leopard, the dragon, the white eyebrow and Kempo to name a few. All are styles of fighting developed by ancient orientals which employ techniques of attack used by animals when they fight in the wilds.

Starr has a chart on his wall depicting different fist positions for punching an opponent. They include the knife hand, when the fighter holds his fingers out straight in a knife-like position, the dragon fist, the spear hand, the leopard claw, the Phoenix, the ram's fist and the Old Man Pointing Away.

And Starr, when performing a demonstration for an audience may employ any combination of the various kicks, punches, eye rakes or face rips to fend off his "attacker" who is usually one of his trained students.

Originally from Twin Falls, Starr traveled for about 10 years, first started learning Kung Fu in 1966, and eventually became a teacher.

He taught in Las Vegas for two years and decided that he liked Idaho's hunting and fishing more than he did the big city life. He moved back to Twin Falls, he says because he thought the city needed a good school of Karate.

His teaching differs from other styles in the area. He says there are about 75 different styles of Karate and about 400 styles of Kung Fu. Tai Kung Fu means grand or ultimate discipline and is one of the original martial arts for self defense.

But finally Starr cautions that there is no self defense in the world that can take the place of good sound logic.

"Kung Fu is old," he says. "But running from your opponent is older."

Ouch!

This brand new siding from Johns-Manville doesn't do what other sidings do. (And that's why it's so much better.)

Doesn't show scratches.
Driftgrain's color goes all the way through, so scratches don't show.

Doesn't rust or corrode.
Unlike metal siding, vinyl siding is resistant to weather.

Doesn't dent.
Hail and baseballs make their marks on metal siding but not on vinyl.

Doesn't peel, blister, chip or crack.
The color in Driftgrain is 40 times as thick as the color on painted siding.

Doesn't ever need repainting.
Maintenance-free vinyl is the only siding that never needs repainting.

Doesn't rot.
Vinyl is totally resistant to water.

Doesn't show its age.
All siding looks good when it's new. Driftgrain stays that way.

Doesn't sound like a drum when it falls.
Vinyl siding is much quieter than metal siding in a hailstorm.

Doesn't interfere with your TV.
Metal siding can adversely affect your TV reception. Not vinyl.

Doesn't conduct electricity.
Vinyl siding is safe during electrical storms.

Protecting your family and belongings always important.

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: Are Karen Black and her sister arch-rivals? I heard they don't speak. — H.McB., Alexandria, Va.

A: Soap opera star Gail Brown, Karen's younger sister, admits there is an element of competition between the two. Gail claims

JACQUELINE BISSET
... the Greek's wife

she's thrilled that Karen is so successful. But she also admits: "Some actresses are driven. I'm definitely not."

Q: I always remember how charming Jackie Onassis was on that show when she led TV audiences on a tour of the White House. Why isn't she asked to do more television? — V.B., Albany, N.Y.

A: Mally has asked and few have succeeded. But now producer Greg Garrison reports that Jackie is definitely interested in appearing on NBC's giant four-hour spectacular for the network's 50th anniversary, Nov. 21.

Jackie would host the segment dealing with the NBC symphony and opera. In addition Princess Grace might introduce the section on NBC dramas, which she was a part-of-back-when she was actress Grace Kelly.

Q: How can athletes who take so busy traveling, training and playing, take time to do all those TV commercials, or are those ads really a snap? — E.M., Wheeling, W. Va.

A: They're not so easy. N.Y. Yankee pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter recently spent several hours doing a commercial and then pitched a big game which his team lost.

Some Yankee execs were furious. They figured the four hours he spent doing the commercial couldn't have helped Hunter's pitching. New Yankee rule: no TV commercial chores permitted on days when the team has a game scheduled.

Q: I'm one of the many Nick ("Rich Man, Poor Man") Nolle fans. What will we see him in next? — E.K., Fort Lee, N.J.

A: Nick has an important role in the movie version of Peter "Jaws" Benchley's new book "The Deep." Right now the actor is devoting every waking moment to figuring how to scuba dive for the film.

What worries Nolle is that he lost out on the lead in a hockey movie because he couldn't skate well enough. He's taking no chances this time.

Q: I hear a lot about English actors going into tax exile. How does that work? — O.R., Portland, Ore.

A: British taxes on high salaries are staggering. On a $200,000 a year income an English entertainer would have to pay the government about $165,000.

You can avoid this enormous bite by staying away from Britain for a year and then returning for no more than 90 days in any succeeding year. Some go abroad and others move to the British island of Jersey in the English Channel where the income tax is only 20 percent.

Q: Has anybody figured out a way to beat the IRS if you win big on one of the state or local lotteries? — T.A., Richmond, Va.

A: Anybody with an answer to that problem, certainly wouldn't tell a gossip columnist. But it would be nice if we adopted a plan used in some foreign countries.

A board of top financial experts meet with big winners to give them the best advice available, free of charge and in complete confidence, before the windfall is lost to wine, women, bad investments and the tax man.

Q: Is there any way to tell if someone has been driving while under the influence of marijuana? — T.P., Columbus, Ohio.

A: A test has just been developed at Surrey University in England which can measure the level of marijuana in the blood.

It was used in the case of a young driver who was found guilty of causing a fatal accident while under the influence of grass. The court ruled that smoking — like alcohol — impaired judgement.

A: How come the United States is having such an outbreak of measles? Didn't those mass inoculations in the late 60s and early 70s work? — G.B., Boulder, Colo.

A: The Public Health Service says that the current wave hits children between 10 and 14 who did not get shots during those big campaigns. The PHS warns that this year will see the worst measles epidemic since 1974 with more than 40,000 cases.

... she's not driven

Q: All the speculation about who will replace Barbara Walters on the "Today" show is admittedly trivial but fascinating. Who else is being considered? — F.L., Los Angeles, Calif.

A: Would you believe Shirley MacLaine? That's another name we hear. Certainly Shirley, with her writing and speaking out for liberal causes, has shown an eagerness

Q: I'm interested in that pair of superstar dancers with a German ballet company — everyone says will be the next Fonteyn and Nureyev. — O.C., Jersey City, N.J.

A: You mean Marcella Haydee and Richard Cragan, now dancing with the Stuttgart Ballet troupe. Haydee, 31, a Brazilian, and Cragan, a Californian, have been lovers on stage and off for the past seven years.

They met when he joined the company at 17 and she was the 22-year-old prima ballerina.

Q: What happened to that father of a Wellesley (Mass.) College student who complained that his daughter was learning sexual immorality at the school? — E.W., Akron, O.

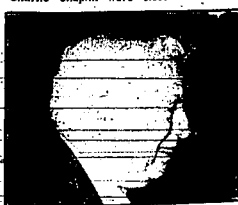

A: Apparently the father did not expect the outcry his protest created and hasn't been heard from lately. The daughter graduates from Wellesley this month and a younger daughter, a freshman, left college right after the infamous letter.

What would this father have said about some San Jose State University students in California who? It turns out, he was regularly earning extra money by acting in porno flicks? Now that's a real problem.

Q: Any spectacular revelations in billionaire Jean-Paul Getty's new autobiography? — G.D., Memphis, Tenn.

A: The oft-married Getty is quite candid in his book and it's clear women have always given him trouble.

Thirty-four years ago when he and Charlie Chaplin were close friends the

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

was involved in a paternity suit brought by actress Jean Harlow. Since Getty had an affair with Miss Harlow's mother, Chaplin, he was called as a witness for the defense.

The oil man wasn't much help and the actress won her case. Charlie always felt Getty was partly to blame for this and the woman didn't speak for years.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE

to break out of the actress category. Her journalist boy friend, Pete Hamill, could help her with the homework and make sure she got up on time to make the early morning show.

Q: I know Tuesday Weld and her new husband Dudley Moore were expecting a baby. Did they have it? Boy or girl? — O.McD., Santa Barbara, Calif.

A: As you mean Tuesday and her newly estranged husband. Their stormy, eight-month marriage seems to be at an end. The Moores had a son, Patrick, in March. Tuesday also has a 3-year-old daughter from her first marriage.

Q: Won't Henry Kissinger miss all the high life of private planes and fancy dinners with world leaders if he quite as secretary of state? — H.V., Albany, N.Y.

A: There are signs that Kissinger is tiring of the diplomatic social whirl. At the recent NATO conference in Norway he slipped away in the middle of an official dinner to visit old friend actress Liv Ullmann at her home.

Rumors were circulating at Oslo, by the way, that Henry is hoping to become a regular columnist on foreign affairs after he leaves the State Department — possibly for The New York Times.

Harvard, officials battle

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The scientists want to build a laboratory for advanced genetic research. The city officials fear the result may be the answer to Dr. Frankenstein's dream.

That's the gist of the argument between Harvard University scientists and Cambridge city officials — a battle between the hunger for scientific knowledge and the fear of the unknown.

What Harvard wants is to build a containment laboratory for unprecedented "recombinant DNA" research — the construction of new life by combining the genes of two existing organisms.

But Cambridge Mayor Alfred Velucci and the nine-member city council fear such research accidentally could contaminate the community's 100,000 residents with microorganisms which could produce new and perhaps undetectable diseases.

"We want to be damned sure the people of Cambridge won't be affected by anything that would crawl out of that laboratory," Velucci said Tuesday in announcing a public hearing June 23 on the planned research unit.

"It is my responsibility to investigate the danger of infections to humans," Velucci said. "They may come up with a disease that can't be cured — even a monster. Is this the answer to Dr. Frankenstein's dream?"

"It seems science fiction has arrived unannounced to Cambridge — the vision of the future has been dumped on our city," he said.

Dr. Henry Resdosky, dean of the Arts and Sciences Faculty, Tuesday recommended to the Harvard Corporation construction within the school's biology building of the five-unit lab.

He conceded there were some dangers.

"The committee on research policy ... agrees without dissent that experiments with recombinant DNA should be permitted," he said. "But both committees agree there are potential hazards."

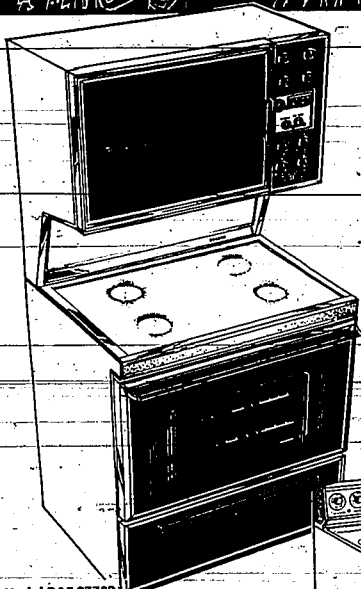

When Velucci learned the project had been granted National Institutes of Health funding he summoned the council. It voted 9-0 Monday to invite any scientists — including those at Harvard — to testify pro or con.

Velucci said that if the council isn't convinced the research can be conducted safely, it has power to withhold a building permit.
